MEMORANDUM FOR THE FILES

Linda Bartlett, Peter Teeley's step-mother called in to the WH Switchboard asking to talk to Mrs. Bush the evening of October 1. Mrs. Bush's office took the call because of the late hour. They told her Mrs. Bush had retired.

Mrs. Bartlett was concerned about Peter's condition. That he wasn't getting proper care at Alexandria hospital -- that maybe he should be moved. Not sure there were enough consultants etc etc etc

October 2 - the President called Dr. Larry Mohr and asked him to look into the matter.

Dr. Mohr said Pete is getting excellent care. Should definitely not be moved.

Dr. Mohr consulted with all of Pete's medical staff and with Valerie and Mrs. Bartlett.

No action necessary.

Patty Presock

October 2, 1991
4:30 p.m.

Mr. President,

Patty asked me to pass along to you that she spoke with Larry Mohr this afternoon after he visited with Pete Teeley. Larry was very encouraged by what he saw.

He said that Peter is much better than he was yesterday. Larry said he spoke with the doctors and consultants and was very pleased with what he saw. He also indicated that Valerie is handling this all well and is watching out for Peter's best interests.

Peter is relatively heavily sedated and will be in ICU another 5-10 days. Apparently, Peter will heal faster while he's under sedation. According to Larry, you should make no effort to be in touch during this time period. Larry will see Peter again on Monday.

Larry also told Patty that Valerie was very touched by your gesture of asking Larry to come out. It really means a lot. She's holding up.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: Linda Casey LC

RE: Recommended Phone Call from Fred McClure

Patty reported to Governor Sununu and Fred McClure that she took a call for you today from Senator Trent Lott. Fred has spoken to the Senator, and now recommends that you call him back. The Senator asked to speak to you TODAY.

The Senator is calling about the softwood lumber issue with Canada.

As you probably know, the US signed an MOU with Canada with regard to bringing softwood lumber into the US. The MOU stated that either country could abrogate with 30 days notice. Canada announced its intent to abrogate 28 days ago. Sensitive high-level negotiations are underway, and Carla Hills has the lead.

Senator Lott was a co-signor with 67 other Senators in a letter to you on this issue.

Fred recommends that you call Senator Lott.

TALKING POINTS

 Appreciate very much your calling about this and appreciate the letter from you and the 67 other Senators about this issue.

 We are acutely aware of the situation, and Carla Hills is working hard to come up with a solution.

 Just want to take this opportunity, too, to thank you for the tough votes you've been making.

Operators on aircraft have phone number.

TV TECHNIQUE 101 WITH GEORGE BUSH Private Firm Broadcasts President's D.C. School Visit

The White House turned a Northwest Washington junior high classroom into a television studio and its students into props Tuesday as President Bush delivered a live television address to America's schoolchildren, the latest Administration effort to demonstrate the President's interest in domestic issues....

Some students said they thought Bush was thinking more about his own reelection than their education. "I'm sure we'll never see these pictures on a campaign ad," Eleanor Davis, 13, volunteered sarcastically....

Student Rhonda Henderson said Bush's message sounded as if it had been written by someone else, as it was. "I want him to write it himself so we can hear what the truth is, how he really feels," she said.

Some students suggested that Bush's message would have been better delivered at a school other than Deal, where students have scored considerably above the national norm on standardized tests for the last several years and have won a number of academic awards. (John Yang & Lynda Richardson, Washington Post, A1)

Commander-In-Chief Orders Kids To Do Their Homework

Via TV, President Bush challenged schoolchildren Tuesday to "give yourselves a decent shot at your dreams. Stay in school. Get that diploma."...

Bush read from a tele prompter to exhort children to "take control" of their future by working hard.

He admonished, "Block out the kids who think it's not cool to be smart. I can't understand for the life of me what's so great about being stupid. If someone goofs off today, are they still cool years from now when they're stuck in some dead-end job?"

(Ann McFeatters, Scripps Howard)

Bush To Students: 'Work Harder, Learn More'

With reports showing American students lagging behind, President Bush challenged them in a televised address to take responsibility for their own fate and hit the books.

"Education means the difference between a good future and a lousy one," Bush said Tuesday at Deal Junior High....

Bush's address was beamed nationwide and the White House expressed hope that it was shown at virtually all of the country's 110,000 schools. (Thomas Ferraro, UPI)

Bush Urges Higher Education For City Teens

President Bush used highly rated Alice Deal Junior High School as his stage Tuesday for a nationally televised address against quitting school.

"Education means the difference between a good future and a lousy one," Bush told the eighth-grade class -- "the college class of the year 2000."...

His talk got high marks from some students. "Down to earth. I understood it," said student Sarah Klein.

"I think the kids were mesmerized," said an approving teacher Cynthia Mostoller. "I think he put education to the front of the news instead of as a footnote," she said.

But some students balked at Bush's emphasis on attending college and their impression that he equated a lack of education with dependence on drugs.

Bush asked each child to "fast forward five years from now" and posed for them the question: "Will I be on a college campus or out running the streets?"

Student Sharise Brown called that unrealistic. "What if your parents don't have the money to put you in college?... I have one brother in college and another in ninth grade. Where is the money coming from?" she asked. (Frank Murray, Washington Times, B1)

PARENTS, STUDENTS NOT CONVINCED BY DISMAL REPORTS

Getting Americans to believe the flurry of reports berating the nation's education system may be the biggest challenge facing educators, governors and other leaders, a private research group says.

Jean Johnson, vice president of the Public Agenda Foundation, says most Americans have been reluctant to embrace the economic and educational reforms preached by President Bush and other leaders because they don't have a clear sense of what is needed to compete in the world economy....

A new Louis Harris poll underscores this point. It found that on 15 common objectives of elementary and secondary education, only 30 percent of employers were able to rank as positive the overall preparedness of recent students to hold down jobs in their businesses. Sixty-six percent gave them negative marks.

By contrast, among recent students asked the same questions, 70% were positive about their education, as were 65% of their parents. (Tamara Henry, AP)

GETTING TO THE POINT
President's Program Called Ploy

George Bush's "thousand points of light" -- a speech-maker's phrase that began as an applause line at a political convention -- has turned into a cottage industry.... Sure, critics say: doing good is swell, but "Points" is nothing more than a public relations ploy that could help the incumbent win re-election....

"This is not political," says C. Gregg Petersmeyer, director of the White House Office of National Service. "There are few Americans who today believe that the government alone can solve any of the most serious problems facing our country."

JOBLESS PAY EXTENSION VOTED, BUT MARGIN IN SENATE SLIPS

Congress Tuesday approved a $6.4 billion bill to extend unemployment benefits for up to 20 additional weeks, but Democrats suffered a serious setback when the Senate failed to muster the two-thirds majority necessary to override a certain presidential veto.

The House gave overwhelming approval, 300-118, to a bill worked out late last week by House and Senate conferees. But the Senate voted 65-35 to approve the bill....

"A president can put on so much pressure, so much muscle, that when you have a close one, he can pick up a few votes," said Sen. Bentsen....

"Republicans believe there is need for additional benefits, but you don't need to spend $6 billion unaccounted for to do it," said Sen. Domenici.

Sen. Lott said a compromise package could be worked out and signed by the President within two weeks "if the Democrats...figure out a way to pay for it." (Eric Pianin, Washington Post, A1)

Congress Approves Unemployment Package, Bush Veto Looms

Congress on Tuesday overwhelmingly approved legislation providing up to 20 extra weeks of benefits for the long-term unemployed, pushing the lawmakers toward a new veto showdown with President Bush....

"Feel their pain, see their suffering, put aside the question of partisanship," Rep. Downey said in remarks aimed at the President. "Recognize one plain and simple fact: that the people who elected you President of the U.S. need your help."...

Tuesday, the Democrats continued their strategy of contrasting President Bush's opposition to the bill with his interest in foreign affairs and his patrician roots.

"The only dependable jobs in this country are the President's travel agent and the boat-waxer at Kennebunkport," said Rep. Lawrence Smith. (Alan Fram, AP)

House, Senate Agree To Extend Jobless Pay; Veto Fight Seen With Bush

The House and Senate voted decisively Tuesday to extend jobless pay for up to 20 weeks to workers whose basic benefits have expired, setting up a veto fight with President Bush....

"When it comes to helping people out of work," said Rep. Bonior, "this Administration stalls more than a junkyard Hyundai."

"It's a political scam to stand up and pound your chest and say people are in an emergency and then, when asked to come up with the money to pay for it, you say, 'Well, it's not that much of an emergency,'" said Sen. Gramm. (David Hess, Knight-Ridder)

Bush Gets Jobless Bill For Expected Veto

Congress sent its jobless benefits bill to President Bush for an expected veto, but some expressed hope new unemployment figures Friday might improve the possibility of an override....

"If we continue to see a deterioration of the economy...I think as Everett Dirksen once said: When they begin to feel the heat, they'll see the light," Sen. Bentsen said....

For their part, Democrats have become increasingly frustrated at the refusal of Republicans to see things as they do and their debate reflected that.

"Not everybody gets paid to play golf like the Vice President," Rep. Lawrence Smith declared. "Nine million unemployed Americans still haven't got the President's attention."

(David Lawsky, Reuter)

Congress Passes Extension Of Unemployment Benefits

Setting up another veto confrontation with President Bush, both houses of Congress passed a measure Tuesday to extend unemployment benefits by up to 20 weeks....

Tuesday, Secretary Martin said it was "time to forget politics" and move ahead with a bill the President would sign. "The President will sign a bill if it doesn't threaten existing jobs and abandon the budget agreement," she said.

INDICATORS FLAT FOR AUGUST; ADMINISTRATION LOOKING TO JUMP-START ECONOMY

The Bush Administration and the Fed are struggling to find new ways to boost weak consumer spending and persuade banks to abandon their stingy lending practices in the wake of continuing economic sluggishness.

Their concern was reflected once again Tuesday in a spate of economic statistics. The government's index of leading economic indicators was flat in August after rising since February.

Construction spending rose a hair, chiefly because of a 5.9% jump in spending on singly-family homes. Purchasing managers said their index of the manufacturing economy rose for the eighth straight month, but there were disturbing signs that one of the bulwarks of the economy, exports, was declining.

The reports indicate an economy in trouble, if not still in recession. The Bush Administration has shown its increasing anxiety over the economy's poor performance with an election year approaching....

Jerry Jasinowski, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, said the latest economic data "suggest that an ease in bank regulatory review and further monetary stimulation would be desirable."...

Looking at the economic indicators, Lawrence Hunter, economist for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, said the report "dims hope that we have entered a lasting recovery."

Economy Making Bush Edgy

Many political analysts suggest that only a major blunder by President Bush or a sour economy could cloud his re-election chances. That may be why the White House is getting nervous.

Not really nervous -- just edgy.

After months of insisting that the recession ended last spring, Bush and his top aides are beginning to suggest that the outlook isn't so rosy after all.

"I worry about the economy. These are tough times," Bush told business leaders in Miami on Monday in his gloomiest state-of-the-economy assessment yet.

The President's downbeat comments contrasted with his earlier statements suggesting that the economy was steadily rebounding despite isolated pockets of distress. (Tom Raum, AP)

SPY VS. SPY: 4 CIA VETERANS CRITICIZE, DEFEND GATES

Four veteran CIA intelligence analysts stepped into the limelight of a Senate hearing room Tuesday to quarrel fiercely over whether Robert Gates has the integrity and objectivity to oversee the nation's intelligence community, revealing in the process a normally secret bureaucratic world of sometimes bitter division and frequent infighting.

The session was damaging not only for Gates but also for the CIA, providing an unprecedented public airing of the political maneuvering that lay behind a series of highly classified intelligence reports in the 1980s....

Sen. Boren, noting that Gates will be called back at a final session to respond to the allegations of distorting intelligence and stifling dissent that have cropped up since the hearings began, said the nomination "may all come down to his answers to the questions...in terms of what he answers -- the substance of it -- and how he answers...how he handles himself," Boren said. "The question is whether or not he is mature enough."

(George Lardner & Benjamin Weiser, Washington Post, A1)

Former Gates Colleagues Say He Slanted Intelligence

Senior intelligence analysts told senators in scathing testimony Tuesday that Robert Gates systematically distorted data and stifled dissent while at the agency....

Sen. Murkowski noted Gates's denials that he had distorted analyses and said that "those who assert to the contrary have a very heavy burden of proof." Democrats seemed disturbed by accusations of a "politicization" of intelligence.

"I think some Democratic members have been badly shaken," Sen. Cranston told reporters. (Ruth Sinai, AP)

Gates Is Put On Defensive In Bid To Head CIA

Former CIA colleagues have thrown Robert Gates on the defensive as he seeks U.S. Senate approval to head the CIA....

"I think he's lost some ground as we've gone along because for every question that's been answered there have been additional questions raised," Sen. Glenn said in an interview.

(Jim Wolf, Reuter)

CIA Analysts Differ On 'Slanting' Of Reports

Current and former CIA analysts traded charges Tuesday about whether the agency slanted intelligence reports to fit U.S. policies while Robert Gates was the top analyst.

The controversy has raised new doubts among some Democrats on the Senate Intelligence Committee about whether Gates should be confirmed.... Sen. DeConcini said the allegations raised new questions in his mind about Gates's qualifications.

Sen. Nunn called the charges "very serious" and said they go beyond the nominee to the integrity of the CIA intelligence analysis apparatus. Sen. Chafee said, "I think when we finish the questioning of witnesses, Bob Gates will be confirmed."

TWO MORE DEMOCRATS VOICE SUPPORT FOR THOMAS
Senate Confirmation Seen As Being Assured

Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas moved a step closer to confirmation Tuesday as two more Democratic senators announced their support and the Senate considered delaying the start of its Columbus Day recess to act on the nomination next week.

Thomas appeared assured of at least 51 votes when Sens. Shelby and Dixon endorsed him, bringing to 11 the number of Democrats who have said they will vote for him.... Meanwhile Tuesday, Thurgood Marshall formally retired and ended speculation about whether he would sit at the start of the Supreme Court term next Monday.

TSONGAS HEALTH PLAN AIMS TO MANAGE COMPETITION

Democratic presidential hopeful Paul Tsongas offered his prescriptions for national health insurance Tuesday, saying Americans already spend plenty of money but need to spend it better. While stressing his faith in the private sector and free markets, Tsongas also faulted the Bush Administration for its laissez-faire attitude, which he said has left 35 million Americans unprotected by insurance while allowing health care costs to soar.

Tsongas urged adoption of what he called "managed competition," in which government would not provide care but would set national standards, force employers to provide health insurance for workers, and cut costs. ("Politics," Washington Post, A18)

AIDS PREVENTION SPENDING IS FAULTED

The $247.7 million AIDS prevention budget of the federal government's Centers for Disease Control is spent on unproven techniques and targeted at the wrong groups, according to a report issued Tuesday by a nonprofit coalition of local AIDS health-care and activist organizations.

The report by the AIDS Action Council said that while a large chunk of the CDC's money is spent on testing, counseling and notification of sexual partners of those carrying the virus, the program has not been shown to be effective in changing behavior and has largely fallen out of favor with AIDS education professionals.

RE-ELECTION TEAM HAS GEORGETTE ON ITS MIND

Georgette Mosbacher, known for her plunging neck lines, may have inadvertently plunged her husband, Robert Mosbacher, into the first political ruffle of the new season.

According to the Oct. 7 issue of Newsweek, President Bush wants to appoint Mr. Mosbacher as his 1992 re-election campaign chairman and chief fund-raiser, but is concerned about the "Georgette Factor." The magazine says the President is worried that the "flashy, couture-clad" Georgette would "lend his campaign an image of '80s excess."...

Asked to reply to on the "Georgette Factor," White House Deputy Press Secretary Gary Foster said, "The President would never consider something like that."

"The story came from our reporters and we stand behind it," says Newsweek's George Hackett, who edits the Periscope page, where the item appeared. (Anne Gowen, Washington Times, E1)

SENATE APPROVES CABINET STATUS FOR EPADemocrats Agree To Let President Appoint Most Top Officials

The Senate voted Tuesday to raise the EPA to a Cabinet-level department after Democrats bowed to a veto threat and agreed to let President Bush fill virtually all of its top posts with political appointees....

The measure still has to be approved by the House, where it has been held in the Government Operations Committee awaiting Senate action.

Similar legislation was approved by the House on a 371 to 55 vote in March 1990.

Aides to Rep. Conyers said he is now ready to move the legislation again, but added that he has not yet decided in what form or whether to do it this year or next.

QUAYLE REQUESTS LOOK AT BREEDEN TESTIMONYStance On Shareholder-Suit Bill Spurs Review

Vice President Quayle, responding to a plea for help from a business group, Tuesday night asked to review the testimony that the chairman of the SEC plans to give Wednesday endorsing a bill to extend the time in which stockholders can sue corporations for fraud and misrepresentation.

SEC chairman Richard Breeden agreed to send Quayle a copy of the testimony in which he will reaffirm his support for the legislation, sources said. The sources also said Quayle did not ask Breeden to change his views....

Marne Obernauer, chief executive of the Devon Group, a Connecticut graphic arts company, asked whether Breeden's support for legislation giving victims of fraud more time to file lawsuits flew in the face of Quayle's effort to reduce corporate litigation expenses.

Quayle said the Bush Administration did not have a position on the issue. (David Broder & Stan Hinden, Washington Post, C1)

BUSH-QUAYLE OVERCHARGED MEDIA

The Bush-Quayle campaign overcharged the news media nearly $360,000 for travel costs during the 1988 general election, according to a Federal Election Commission audit released Tuesday.

The auditors recommended that the Bush campaign reimburse the press and provide the checks to prove it.

ENVIRONMENTALISTS BLAST DECISION ON SPOTTED OWL

GRANTS PASS, Ore. -- Environmentalists blasted a Bush Administration decision to convene a little-used panel to decide whether to allow some logging to resume in the Northwest despite the threat to the northern spotted owl.

"George Bush has cynically decided to play God and dictate which wildlife species live and which die," Greenpeace spokesman Mike Roselle said.

Secretary Lujan announced Tuesday he is calling together the Cabinet-level Endangered Species Committee, known as the God Squad for its power to let species become extinct rather than pay the price to save them.

Lujan acted at the request of the U.S. Bureau of Land Management, which wants to log some Oregon forests that have been declared off-limits by the Fish and Wildlife Service in order to protect the spotted owl, a threatened species.

Lujan said he was reluctantly convening the panel to consider exemptions to the Endangered Species Act. (Jeff Barnard, AP)

Lujan To Assemble Panel To Study Spotted Owl-Timber Industry Issue

Secretary Lujan Tuesday agreed to convene a special committee that will have the power to override the Endangered Species Act and permit logging in old growth forests in southwest Oregon despite federal efforts to protect the northern spotted owl, which lives in the forest....

Sen. Packwood endorsed Lujan's decision, saying that the panel, unlike the Endangered Species Act, "will take into account all species, whether they are owls or people."

Rep. AuCoin said, "A frantic yank on the emergency rip cord of the Endangered Species Act cannot and should not be a substitute for a sound, long-range forest policy."

Brock Evans, a vice president of the National Audubon Society, called Lujan's decision "a purely political move to help Senator Packwood's campaign to gut the Endangered Species Act, an attempt to show that the act can't work."

KEMP'S HOUSE NOT IN ORDER, AUDIT SAYS

Three years after the "Robin HUD" scandal, the Federal Housing Administration remains vulnerable to fraud, and officials said Tuesday it could take five more years to clear up the problems.

A new internal audit by Price Waterhouse has documented [several] deficiencies in FHA's accounting systems.

Secretary Kemp Tuesday told the House Banking subcommittee on housing and community development that he would like to keep details of the report secret because it would "give unscrupulous speculators and investors a chance to take advantage" of the agency's problems....

Rep. Oaker said the report is "very upsetting" but not surprising. "Price Waterhouse is telling us all the same things we've heard before. I don't see any improvement."

REVISED CENSUS DATA WON'T BE RELEASED

Secretary Mosbacher, in a letter released Tuesday, told Congress the Bush Administration won't turn over computer tapes containing revised 1990 Census figures.

Mosbacher said the projections may be no more accurate than the actual count.

"Release of the rejected adjusted figures would serve no useful purpose and would only confuse the public and disrupt and distort the redistricting process," Mosbacher wrote.

U.S. CALLS FOR HAITIAN'S RETURN TO POWER

Exiled President Warns Of Blood Bath; Death Toll Put Above 100

Exiled Haitian President Aristide vowed Tuesday to reverse the bloody army coup that ousted him Monday, and the U.S. government called for his restoration to power. Reports from the scene indicated more than 100 people were dead in the street violence.

The Bush Administration prepared to welcome Aristide to Washington to address an emergency meeting of foreign ministers of the Organization of American States, scheduled for Tuesday. The session is expected to press for political and economic sanctions against the military junta, Administration officials said....

President Bush, using Haiti as an example of U.S. commitment to democracy in Latin America, refused to recognize the military junta. In a gesture fraught with symbolism, he also summoned Aristide's ambassador-designate, Jean Casimir, to the White House to accept his credentials as Haiti's legitimate representative.

Bush Condemns Haiti's Coup, Cuts Off U.S. Aid

Condemning the military coup in Haiti as an "outrageous action," the Bush Administration on Tuesday cut off all U.S. aid to the island, following the lead of European nations, and pledged to try to restore ousted President Aristide to office....

Some Democrats in Congress complained that the Bush Administration was slow to react, especially since the President himself did not speak out against the violence in Haiti when he visited Miami on Monday.

"He was in Disney World and then he was in Miami, as close as he could get to Haiti, and he never said a word, not a word," Rep. Larry Smith said.

But other members of Congress and human rights groups like Freedom House said there was no use in second-guessing Bush.

"I certainly support the action in cutting off aid," said Rep. Fascell. "We need to let these folks who have taken over in Haiti know that this is not any kind of action that's going to be tolerated."

Haitian President Comes Here Today For OAS Meeting

Deposed President Aristide will attend an urgent meeting of the O.A.S. in Washington Tuesday to discuss the coup that forced him into exile....

From Venezuela, Aristide pleaded for an armed U.N. force to restore democracy in his homeland, saying Haitians "cannot resist the military alone."

"They have a very long list of people they plan to kill still," he said in a statement dictated to the Haitian Embassy in Washington. "They will kill them like flies. Do everything possible to stop people from dying."

SOVIETS SET CUTS IN SIZE OF ARMY, MISSILE READINESS

MOSCOW -- Soviet deputy defense minister Pavel Grachev said Tuesday that the number of Soviet troops will be cut in half within three years, and a government spokesman said some strategic nuclear missiles will soon be taken off alert in response to President Bush's arms reduction plan....

In Washington, State Department spokeswoman Tutwiler said Tuesday that the Administration is offering to send experts to Moscow to explain Bush's initiative and respond to questions sent recently by the Soviet foreign ministry....

Soviet foreign minister Pankin said at the U.N. Tuesday that Viktor Komplektov, the Soviet ambassador to the U.S., had met with Brent Scowcroft and the two had drawn up a schedule of future consultations on a broad range of disarmament matters.

Soviets Expect To Match U.S. Nuclear Cut, Gorbachev Spokesman Says

MOSCOW -- The Soviet Union will try to match U.S. plans for cuts in short-range nuclear weapons because "it would be a sin" to miss a historic opportunity, President Gorbachev's spokesman said Tuesday.

Meanwhile, the 12 remaining Soviet republics said they had agreed to joint control of the nation's nuclear weapons, a move that would prevent either Gorbachev or President Yeltsin from having complete control of the vast arsenal.

The vague, brief announcement by the republic leaders was part of a broad, tentative accord that would form the basis for future economic union....

Also Tuesday, a Soviet military official was quoted as saying that the Kremlin will slash its army by roughly half in the next three years and may oppose efforts by the republics to create their own armies.

Soviet Defense Minister Says U.S.S.R. Will Match U.S. Arms Cuts

MOSCOW -- In the latest reaction to last week's sweeping arms-reduction announcement by President Bush, defense minister Shaposhnikov indicated Tuesday that the Soviet Union would probably match U.S. moves on strategic and tactical nuclear weapons.

A spokesman for President Gorbachev, meanwhile, said the Soviet Union has decided to begin removing from alert status the intercontinental missiles covered by the treaty signed at a summit meeting last July in Moscow.

But like other Soviet officials in recent days, neither spelled out the government's official response to Bush's plan, an indication of the disorganized state of decision-making in the Soviet Union and the secondary status that arms control has fallen to in the face of enormous economic and political problems.

BUSH PROPOSAL SIGNALS SHIFTING POLITICAL GROUND ON PEACE ISSUE

Just when it was becoming politically correct to advocate defense cuts, President Bush announced a sweeping disarmament initiative that took away for the moment -- and perhaps forever -- the Democratic Party's claim to the peace issue.

The staying power of Bush's proposal as a political issue at home is dependent on whether President Gorbachev is willing to cooperate.

But for Democrats finally gearing up to challenge Bush in 1992, the President's initiative was an ironic shift of political ground....

Robert Beckel, manager of Walter Mondale's 1984 presidential campaign, predicted Democrats would try to shift the debate to the peace dividend.

But he conceded that Bush "owns the foreign policy issue, he owns the disarmament issue right now."

And Mike McCurry, a Democratic adviser, said that "politically, there's no way to parse this development as anything but a plus for Bush." (News Analysis, Donald Rothberg, AP)

CALLS TO REVIEW BUDGET PACT RISEBush's Move To Reduce Arms Opens Door To Democrats

Tuesday, Rep. Foley joined a growing chorus of leading Democrats seeking to reopen last year's budget agreement after President Bush's announcement that he would destroy thousands of nuclear weapons....

"The budget agreement was undertaken last year in good faith by all of the parties," Foley told reporters. "The President's initiative last week is a dramatic example of how conditions have changed within the last year, how spectacularly and beyond anyone's possibility of prediction these events have changed to affect the relationship between the U.S. and the Soviet Union, and thus the fundamental predicate of U.S. defense and nuclear strategy for the last 40 years."...

"Under those circumstances, it is difficult for me to believe the budget shouldn't be open to some review."

TIMING OF BUSH INITIATIVE IRKS GOP SENATORS

Republican senators complained directly to President Bush Tuesday about the timing of his historic speech on nuclear weapons, amid GOP fears the new policy "left conservatives out to dry" in defending the Administration's defense budget.

Senate sources familiar with Tuesdays's briefing by Bush and Secretary Cheney said the criticism was muted. They said Republican lawmakers universally praised the President's initiative to recall all tactical nuclear warheads and take some strategic weapons off alert status....

Sen. Wallop complained he had been made to look "damn foolish" by his vigorous support of a weapon the President already had decided to cancel. (Rowan Scarborough, Washington Times, A1)

PLEA TO SAVE B-2 RUNS INTO FOES IN CONGRESS
Ex-Pilot Strongly Supportive As Bomber Comes Under Fire

The general in charge of the B-2 said Tuesday Congress would be making a mistake to limit the Air Force to one-fifth of the 75 bombers it wants.

"It doesn't do you any good to buy 15 (now) and 40 years later to expect to have 15 airplanes left," said Air Force Major General Croker.

"It just isn't going to work," he said. "A very small number of aircraft, like 10 or 15, doesn't provide enduring combat power of any meaningful size."

Also, he said, "the cost of ownership for a small number of aircraft is prohibitive."...

Many congressional leaders don't buy Croker's cost-effectiveness arguments. (Juan Walte, USA Today, 6A)

NUCLEAR TESTING MAY BE CURBED

The Bush Administration may re-consider its long-standing opposition to tighter limits on nuclear testing, U.S. officials said Tuesday....

U.S. officials still hope the subject may be avoided....

"As we reduce our stockpile, it will become increasingly important for our weapons to be safe, reliable, survivable and secure. This will require continued nuclear testing," an Energy Department spokeswoman said Tuesday.

But U.S. officials acknowledged this week that the Administration will come under tremendous pressure from the Soviets, Third World nations, arms-control advocates and some in Congress to accept new limits on nuclear tests conducted in the Nevada desert....

Margaret Tutwiler, asked about the Soviet stance on nuclear testing, said: "The amount of nuclear testing we have conducted has been going down. The President's initiative will, as he said, reduce our nuclear deterrent to make it smaller, safer and more stable. And this could perhaps have some impact on nuclear testing." (Warren Strobel, Washington Times, A1)

BUSH TO SEEK SOVIET APPROVAL ON MUTUAL SPACE WARNINGS

The Bush Administration is ready to pursue new forms of cooperation with the Soviet Union on the use of space to provide early warning against limited missile attacks, a senior Administration official said.

The U.S. plan is an extension of the historic disarmament initiative President Bush announced Friday....

Henry Cooper, director of the SDIO, declined in interviews Monday and Tuesday to spell out any new official U.S. proposals, but he said the Administration was ready to respond to a recent suggestion by President Gorbachev of a joint early warning system designed to detect terrorist or unauthorized launches of ballistic missiles. BUSH SPEEDS UP $585 MILLION IN CREDIT GUARANTEES FOR MOSCOW

President Bush accelerated $585 million in agricultural credit guarantees to the Soviet Union Tuesday as the Administration worked on a larger package of humanitarian aid that may include donations from government stockpiled food, officials said....

The U.S. aid package is to be coordinated with help from other industrialized nations. Foreign minister Pankin announced at the U.N. Tuesday that a conference would be held Oct. 14 in Moscow to discuss economic cooperation and assistance for his country....

A senior U.S. official said Tuesday that there is no consensus at the State Department yet on the U.S. role and no recommendations have been sent to Bush.

GORBACHEV AIDE EYES U.S. INVESTORS, LENDERS

An economic adviser to President Gorbachev Tuesday proposed a crash investment program by U.S. companies in the Soviet Union, as well as massive loans that would be guaranteed by Washington.

Under such a program, "no money would be taken out of the pockets of American taxpayers," said Leonid Abalkin, director of the Institute of Economics at the Soviet Academy of Sciences and special adviser to Gorbachev.

"I am sure that 80% of Americans would favor such a form of aid," Abalkin told a forum held by the World & I magazine.

'85 FILE: SOVIETS MAY HAVE TARGETED POPE

Once-secret CIA documents released by the Senate Intelligence Committee Tuesday reveal that the Soviet Union had "strong incentives" for killing Pope John Paul II and may have been involved in the 1981 assassination attempt against him.

A 1985 CIA report also documented more than 40 cases of political assassinations or kidnappings the Soviets carried out between 1926 and 1960.

Political killing decreased after 1960, the report said.

ISRAEL DELAYS HOSTAGE-SWAP PRISONER RELEASE

BEIRUT -- Israel has suspended further Arab prisoner releases, a step towards ending the Middle East hostage crisis, until it receives more information on missing Israelis and their militia allies, according to an Israeli-backed militia chief.

Lahd said no confirmed information had been forthcoming. "Therefore, we decided to suspend exchanging captives until we receive confirmed information on the missing," he said. (Nadim Ladki, Reuter)

EDUCATION/PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

NBC's Tom Brokaw: The sad state of American education is sure to be one of the major issues of the '92 presidential campaign. And today, President Bush tried to give his campaign a jump-start on the issue, one day after a non-partisan panel concluded that American schools still have a long way to go.

NBC's John Cochran: Last month, the President tried to be the education President by fussing at parents and blaming television for rotting the minds of students. Today, Bush himself skillfully used TV in a carefully staged talk to students, which was shown in many schools around the country.

(TV coverage: President Bush speaking at school.)

The President tried to sound upbeat, but it wasn't easy after that national report card yesterday with the gloomy news that 80 percent of all eighth-graders don't know enough math to advance to the ninth grade.

(President Bush: "In spite of troubling statistics like this one, I don't see this report, however, as just bad news. And I'll tell you why: This report tells us a lot about what you know and what you don't know. It gives us something to build on.")

And we now know it may take a miracle to reach one of the key goals set by the President and the nation's governors: that by the year 2000, the U.S. students will rank first in the world in science and mathematics. Secretary Alexander says it may be hard to show any improvement unless Congress approves Bush's education program.

(Secretary Alexander: "Congress is a problem, in the sense that Congress is reluctant to change as rapidly as we need to change.") But Democrats are no longer as enchanted with the education President as they were in the early honeymoon days.

(TV coverage: President Bush addressing Congress on Feb. 10.)

(Sen. Kennedy: "We've gone from an anti-education President to a pro-education President, and that's good news.")

That was then. Today, Kennedy was accusing Bush of diverting money from public schools to private schools, a charge echoed elsewhere.

(Patrick Welsh, teacher: "I think that Bush and many of the people that are advising him are elitist, private-school types. They went to private schools. They don't understand how public schools work.")

But Bush has launched a TV campaign to plug his education program. Today, he couldn't even answer those foreign policy questions he loves, because he had a TV date.

(President Bush: "I really have no time for questions. We have this education speech going live.")

The new White House strategy is to use its own cameras to make it easier for TV cable companies to show the education President in action.

(TV coverage: President Bush speaking at school.)

Cochran continues:

If Bush is successful -- a big if -- then he will do the country a lot of good by focusing the nation's attention on education. And he will do himself a lot of good by defusing Democratic rockets that he himself is incapable of sustained attention to domestic problems. (NBC-Lead)

NBC's Jim Cummins reports the walkout of students in Dallas last month didn't change one thing: There still isn't enough money to run big schools that have many students with special problems. That problem was overlooked by President Bush today.

(President Bush: "Give yourself a decent shot at your dreams. Stay in school, get that diploma.")

(Domingo Regalado, principal: "It's very hard for us to go ahead and say hey, stay in school. But then scholarships dry up. Stay in school. But you end up having bigger classes. Stay in school. But we can't get hired the right kind of math and science teachers.") (NBC-2)

GATES HEARINGS

Brokaw: Robert Gates -- was President Bush's choice to head the CIA an objective intelligence analyst when he was with the agency, or a yes man, telling the Administration what it wanted to hear?

NBC's Andrea Mitchell reports former colleagues accused Gates of deliberately slanting intelligence reports for political purposes. They say he distorted intelligence on Iran, Nicaragua and Afghanistan to justify the Reagan Administration's anti-Soviet policy.

(Melvin Goodman, former CIA analyst: "Gates' role in this activity was to corrupt the process and the ethics of intelligence.")

He cited examples declassified today: reports showing Gates insisted on blaming the Soviets for the plot to kill the pope; ignored analysis doubting the Soviets were shipping fighter jets to Nicaragua; and endorsed false intelligence about the existence of Iranian moderates to justify the arms-for-hostages deal.

(Goodman: "When President Reagan said he thought he was dealing with a moderate Iranian faction with interest in dealing with the United States, he was acting on the basis of false CIA analyses.") A friend of Gates criticized him for missing the decline of the Soviet Union.

(Hal Ford, former CIA official: "Robert Gates should not be confirmed as director of Central Intelligence. It is painful to be negative about someone who has been my colleague, a relationship that was cooperative throughout.")

(Sen. DeConcini: "Certainly, it casts a real question mark on Mr. Gates now.")

(Sen. Nunn: "The allegations are very serious allegations and they go far beyond Bob Gates and even this confirmation. It goes to the real question of whether the CIA is giving independent analysis.")

(Sen. Moynihan: "The charge is the politicization of intelligence. That is a sin against the holy ghost. And if they can't disprove it, I don't see how we can vote for Mr. Gates.")

Republicans will try to discredit the negative witnesses tomorrow. And Gates will be given a chance to defend himself. His explanations will be crucial. (NBC-3)

CBS's Dan Rather: Possible new trouble brews for President Bush's nominee to head the CIA. Witnesses told the Senate today that while No. 2 at the CIA, Robert Gates slanted intelligence to suit himself and higher-ups -- that politics and ideological agendas may have been involved. They say this led to misreading of how strong the Soviet Union was and even the weapons-for-the-ayatollah deal.

CBS's Bob Schieffer reports former colleagues said Gates and William Casey never hesitated to slant intelligence reports.

(Goodman: "But what I think is most important and most offensive is that Casey and Gates abrogated to themselves the power to make intelligence judgments, that they had contempt for a process designed to allow independent analysis.")

(Ford: "He has been dead wrong on the central analytic target of the past few years: the outlook for change or not in the fortunes of the USSR and the Soviet-European bloc.")

(Goodman: "There was pressure throughout to produce an assessment implicating the Soviets -- pressure on me to do so, but the evidence wasn't there.")

Goodman said slanting intelligence to President Reagan about Iran raised the most disturbing question.

(Goodman: "Was the President himself a victim of CIA misinformation or even disinformation?")

Others defended Gates, saying it was officials like Secretary Schultz who wanted Casey and Gates to slant intelligence.

(Graham Fuller, former CIA official: "Casey at that time replied to Schultz that it was not the CIA's business to support American policy in its estimates. Now that is one reason why Schultz hated Casey and distrusted agency estimates.")

Several senators Gates was counting on say they're concerned about what they heard today, so his confirmation now may well rest on how he answers these new charges. (CBS-Lead)

ECONOMY/UNEMPLOYMENT BENEFITS

ABC's Peter Jennings: The economy is on the front burner again today: another set of numbers from the government which indicate the economy is very weak. Take a look at the index of leading economic indicators: down last fall, then up for six months in a row until August, when it suddenly went flat. The index is supposed to predict where the economy will be next year. And if it really is flat, or worse, heading back down, the political argument over whose fault it is could take place right in the middle of a presidential election campaign, which helps explain why Congress spent today arguing about unemployment benefits.

ABC's Jim Wooten reports the Democrats passed a bill the President will not sign. Then the Republicans offered one the Democrats will not pass. By the end of the day, it was reasonably clear that America's long-term unemployed will not get much help from Washington.

(TV coverage: President Bush in West Wing.)

Sen. Dole accused the Democrats of mere political grandstanding and introduced a White House compromise.

(Sen. Dole: "This bill takes aim at the so-called pockets of unemployment.")

(TV coverage: President Bush visiting school.)

Wooten continues:

(Dole: "There's no need for the President to declare an emergency, because this legislation is deficit-neutral.")

(Rep. Solomon: "The Democrats have intentionally charted a collision course with the Administration, instead of wisely crafting an acceptable bill that could, and would be, signed into law today.")

Solomon's target was Rep. Hoyer.

(Solomon: "Why don't you agree to the compromise, Steny? They get their benefits if you agree to the compromise.")

Rep. Hoyer: "If the President signs this bill, will the unemployed get benefits, that have now run out of benefits? That's all I ask. I understand your hypothesis."

Solomon: "You know the President cannot sign the bill."

Hoyer: "If he signed it, would they get relief?"

Members of Congress make about $2,500 a week, the President about $4,000 a week, and unemployed workers no more than $423 a week until their benefits expire and they get nothing -- caught between a recession that will not go away and a presidential campaign that's only just begun. (NBC-5, ABC-Lead)

Rather: President Bush is heading for a veto showdown with Congress over help for the unemployed.

CBS's Susan Spencer: This bill is still not acceptable to the White House. It would provide additional unemployment benefits for up to 20 weeks, and it passed both houses today by wide margins. The issue of extending jobless benefits to those whose checks have run out erupted into emotional debate on Capitol Hill today, as Democrats zeroed in on what they see as the President's biggest weakness -- the economy.

(Rep. Obey: "There are 300,000 fewer jobs in this economy today than there were the day that George Bush walked into the White House.")

(Rep. Lewis: "Instead of putting the needs of foreign nations ahead of the United States, he should begin to deal with the pain and agony of our own people.")

Appearing with the Emir of Kuwait, Mr. Bush was taking no questions.

(TV coverage: President Bush with Emir.)

But he appears to have the votes to sustain his expected veto of this $6 billion bill, a bill Republicans call just another Democratic budget buster.

(Solomon: "Here we go again. Damn the torpedoes, damn the budget agreement, damn the taxpayers. Full speed ahead.")

But even winning this fight is unlikely to generate White House joy. Rejecting help for the unemployed may make the President look heartless, and surveys already put his ratings on handling the economy in the basement.

(TV coverage: President Bush visiting school.)

With new claims for unemployment benefits still rising, it's becoming harder and harder to convince the public that the White House is right when it says recovery is underway.

(Geoff Garin, Democratic pollster: "When people aren't happy with the economy and when they think the President isn't doing the job economically, they don't generally reward incumbents with big victories. And that's something that George Bush really has to reckon with as he looks ahead to '92.")

-more-

Spencer continues:

Meanwhile, Democrats are going to play this economic card for all its worth. Their plan is to have the unemployment benefits bill on the President's desk on Friday, which by no accident just happens to be the day that the newest unemployment statistics will come out. (CBS-9)

JOB TRAINING

ABC's Sheilah Kast reports a bipartisan group of senators and representatives introduced a bill today that would pressure companies to spend more on training.

(Sen. Kennedy): "Businesses must invest in their workers and improve the way they produce schools and services. Our major international competitors have long recognized this challenge and they are ahead of us in meeting it." (ABC-2)

JUSTICE MARSHALL

Brokaw: Retiring Justice Marshall abruptly announced that he will step down, effective today, even before the Senate votes on Clarence Thomas. Liberals had been hoping that Marshall would continue to influence the court until a successor was sworn in. (NBC-11)

SPOTTED OWL/LOGGERS

Jennings reports the Bush Administration says it may allow loggers to resume cutting in some Northwestern forests, despite an earlier government decision to protect the spotted owl. (ABC-5)

FBI/WASHINGTON

CBS's Rita Braver reports the FBI will assign three dozen agents to work with local police in Washington. This new effort symbolizes a recognition in the FBI that violent neighborhood crime may be a federal problem after all. (CBS-4)

CALIFORNIA/PROTESTS

CBS's Richard Roth reports Gov. Wilson's veto of a homosexual-discrimination bill touched off a storm of protest in several cities. (ABC-7, NBC-10, CBS-5)

HAITI

Brokaw reports the U.S. and France today suspended millions of dollars in aid to Haiti. The Bush Administration strongly condemned the coup.

(Spokeswoman Tutwiler): "We call for the immediate restoration of Haiti's legitimate, democratically elected government.")

Former President Aristide promised to return to power and warned of a bloodbath at the hands of the coup leaders. Haitian-Americans took to the streets in Miami and West Palm Beach to protest Aristide's ouster, while Haitians in New York called for UN intervention. (CBS-3, ABC-13, NBC-8)

SOVIET UNION/U.S. AID/MILITARY

Jennings reports representatives from 12 republics have initialed an accord that will allow goods to go back and forth among the territories tax-free. There also was a warning on the Soviet economy from a Soviet banking official. He said that in trying to pay its debts, the central government is printing far too much money. (ABC-10)

Jennings reports President Gorbachev has reduced his request for Western aid from nearly $15 billion to about $10 billion. President Bush has decided to speed up some of the aid he has promised. Nearly $600 million in U.S. credits will be available right away. (CBS-8, ABC-11)

Rather reports the Soviet Union today announced plans for more military cutbacks in both nuclear and conventional forces. A top military official said the Red Army will be cut by nearly half over the next three years. He also said the Soviets are removing some of their strategic nuclear weapons from alert status. (CBS-7)

CHINA

NBC's Brad Willis reports China celebrated National Day today, determined to show communism is alive and well. (Zhu Muzhi, spokesman: "Some foreigners believe the Chinese people are looking forward to the end of communism and beginning capitalism. But the Chinese people are afraid of change and want to keep marching forward in the socialist path.") Yet there are signs that China's communists are worried. (Premier Li: "The road is torturous, but the future is bright. Let us rally even more closely around the communist party.") Chinese leaders know they must put economic reform ahead of political reform if they are to stay in power. (NBC-12)

NORIEGA TRIAL

Rather reports prosecution witness Floyd Carlton admitted he was not only running drugs to the U.S., but also running guns to the Contras under Noriega's direction in the 1980s. (CBS-2)

NUCLEAR POWER PLANT

Jennings reports Yankee Rowe, the oldest nuclear power plant in the U.S., was shut down today because government inspectors are no longer confident it's safe. (ABC-4)

AIDS PROTEST/TEENAGERS

Jennings reports several hundred members of the AIDS activist group ACT UP demonstrated in and around the Capitol, demanding more federal funding. (ABC-6)

NBC's Robert Bazell reports the latest findings show the heterosexual spread of AIDS is becoming much more common among teenagers, especially those in inner-city areas. (NBC-4)

EDITORIALS/COLUMNISTS

NUCLEAR DISARMAMENT

Bush's New Nuclear Policies -- "President Bush's bold unilateral move...is further evidence that he is at his best in shrewd management of U.S. security interests.... The President was wise to pair his cancellation of land-based tactical weapons with a strong reiteration that the U.S. would preserve 'an effective air-delivered nuclear capability in Europe.'... What is most impressive in Bush's performance was his boldness.... More than any president since Harry Truman, he is sensitive to the concerns of allies; even more than President Truman, he is also sensitive to the imperatives driving policy in less friendly nations."

(Baltimore Sun, 9/30)

Bush's Bombshell: Now For The Hard Part -- "President Bush is taking not a military but a political gamble.... The outlook now...is that the President may enjoy greater success in Moscow than on Capitol Hill.... Care must be taken. The imprudent and wasteful expansion of defense budgets in the 1980s must not give way to imprudent and dangerous defense budget cuts in the 1990. The decisive considerations, as always, must be the nature of the military threats facing the U.S. and its allies around the globe. Realistically defining those threats is the key to future defense spending."

(Los Angeles Times, 10/1)

An Arms Control Leap -- "President Bush's announcement...was a radical and welcome response to the quick transformation of super-power relationships.... A sweeping reduction of short-range tactical...weapons would be a logical beginning.... Arms control will have to move beyond big-power nuclear disarmament to constraints on the transfer of conventional high-tech weaponry. The President did himself no harm politically with his arms reduction announcement either. It showed good sense and flexibility."

(Christian Science Monitor, 10/1)

Goodbye, Arms Race -- "President Bush's plans to scale back America's nuclear arsenal signaled a clear end to the post-war atomic arms race.... Perils remain. The Soviets still possess some 27,000 warheads. Continued Soviet buildups or other threatening gestures, though unlikely, are possible. But the prospects of greater security, international cooperation and inevitable peace dividends define a unique moment in world history. World leaders must not let that moment slip by."

(New York Daily News, 10/1)

Bush's Nuclear Initiative -- "Any mutual reductions in land-based ICBMs that can be negotiated certainly won't hurt. But modern technology has made such weapons increasingly vulnerable to first-strike damage; they are not of great value as a deterrent. On balance, it appears that America's interests are served by what the President proposes. This isn't to say we didn't experience a bit of early trepidation at the sheer scope of this policy transformation.... But, as things stand, we're with the President on this one."

News From the Hill

JOBLESS BENEFITS bill cleared; Bush veto expected.

The House and Senate put their stamps of approval on a new version of a bill (S 1722) that would provide up to 20 additional weeks of compensation to the unemployed, setting up a confrontation with President Bush.

The 300-118 vote in the House would be enough to overturn a veto, but the 65-35 Senate vote would fall just shy.

In the Senate, eight Republicans voted with all 57 Democrats for the bill.

The Senate initially passed S 1722 on Sept. 24 by a 69-30 vote. At that time, 13 Republicans voted with 56 Democrats to approve the bill.

Switches from "aye" to "no" yesterday were Christopher S. Bond, R-Mo., Conrad Burns, R-Mont., John C. Danforth, R-Mo., Dave Durenberger, R-Minn., and John Seymour, R-Calif.

Under the bill, workers in states with more than over 8 percent unemployment would receive the maximum 20 additional weeks. In states where the jobless rate was between 7 percent and 8 percent, 13 weeks would be granted. At least seven weeks would be guaranteed in states with less than a 7 percent unemployment rate.

The $6.4 billion in costs for the benefits would be deemed emergency spending, exempting it from spending limits imposed by last year's budget deal. The changes in unemployment compensation would be temporary, until July 4, 1992.

The cost of the package has been the driving force behind Bush's opposition. He has indicated his willingness to sign a more modest measure proposed by Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan.

SENATE FLOOR: Bill to elevate status of EPA passes.

The Senate passed, by voice vote, legislation (S 533) to give the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) Cabinet-level status, thus creating the Department of the Environment.

The agency, created under President Nixon in 1970, would become the 15th department in the Cabinet if the bill becomes law, as now seems likely.

Jesse Helms, R-N.C., was the only senator to vocally oppose making EPA a new department.

"It will inevitably lead to more bureaucrats and more bureaucracy," he said.

Besides elevating the agency's status, the bill would create a Bureau of Environmental Statistics to compile, analyze and publish data on the nature, source and amounts of pollutants effecting the environment.

President Bush has indicated he would nominate EPA Administrator William K. Reilly to be the first secretary of the Environment if the bill becomes law.

Family Leave. Members last evening were trying to work out an agreement on a way to proceed to legislation (S 5) that would require employers to grant up to 12 weeks of unpaid leave to employees who seek to spend more time with a newborn, a newly adopted baby or a seriously sick family member.

Majority Leader George J. Mitchell, D-Maine, was prepared to call for a vote to invoke cloture and cut off debate. Republicans argue the bill would place too many restrictions on corporations and slow economic expansion.

MOSCOW EMBASSY to be rebuilt, conferees decide.

House and Senate negotiators reached an agreement yesterday on a fiscal 1992 spending bill (HR 2608) for the Departments of Commerce, Justice and State after lawmakers resolved a dispute over what to do with the bug-riddled U.S. Embassy in Moscow.

Lawmakers agreed to provide $100 million to build a new embassy. The existing structure, which had been unoccupied

Today

House Floor: Members plan to take up a House-Senate agreement on a fiscal 1992 appropriations bill (HR 2519) for the Departments of Veterans Affairs (VA) and Housing and Urban Development (HUD) and various independent agencies, including the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA).

The $80.95 billion measure would provide $32.5 billion for the VA, $23.8 billion for HUD, $6.7 billion for EPA and about $14.3 billion for NASA.

Included in the space agency budget is $2 billion for the space station Freedom.

Also slated for action is a conference report on a bill (HR 2508) that would reauthorize the foreign aid programs for fiscal 1992-93.

Several provisions, including one on abortion, could prompt a veto, according to administration officials.

The abortion language involves $20 million in U.S. aid to the U.N. Population Fund. President Bush opposes giving any money to the fund, arguing that it provides money to China, which some have said has a policy of forced abortions.

Members may also take up a bill (HR 3039) that would reauthorize a 1950 law that gives the federal government the authority to ensure defense production in times of crisis.

The Defense Production Act, which expired yesterday, would be authorized until Sept. 30, 1994. The measure would authorize about $200 million for loans and purchase guarantees for U.S. businesses that agree to supply the government with militarily significant goods and services.

Senate Floor: Members are expected to continue initial work on legislation (S 5) that would require employers to grant unpaid leave to workers who want to spend time with a newborn baby, a newly adopted baby or a seriously ill family member.

Members may also turn to legislation (S 596) that would order federal agencies to comply with federal and state environmental laws.

S 596 would allow the Environmental Protection Agency and state attorneys general to levy fines against federal agencies that have failed to clean up hazardous waste at federal facilities.

Transportation Spending: House and Senate conferees will meet to iron out differences over the fiscal 1992 transportation appropriations measure (HR 2942).

The Senate version of the bill would appropriate $14.4 billion, almost $200 million more than the House measure.

See NEWS on p. 2

See TODAY on p. 2

TODAY from p. 1

The Senate bill would allow $17.1 billion to be released from the federal Highway Trust Fund, about $900 million more than the House bill. (None of the highway fund monies can be released until the enactment of a highway reauthorization bill.)

Other differences to be settled in conference include:

- A $193.8 million Senate appropriation to electrify the Amtrak rail line between New Haven, Conn., and Boston, shortening travel time by more than an hour and a half. The House provided no funding for the New Haven-Boston rail upgrade.

- A $30 million Senate appropriation for a program to develop a prototype magnetic levitation train system. The House provided just $3 million for "maglev safety" research.

S&L Bailout: A House Banking subcommittee will begin the politically painful process of approving additional money to close down failing savings and loans.

The Financial Institutions Supervision Subcommittee will mark up a draft proposal to provide $80 billion more for the cleanup as requested by the administration. That would double the amount Congress has approved for S&L closings since 1989.

President Bush has also proposed separating the Resolution Trust Corporation (RTC), which manages the bailout, from the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC). The two have been combined since the S&L bailout law was enacted in 1989.

An S&L funding bill has never made it out of the House Banking Committee without a variety of consumer and low-income housing amendments being added, and today's markup is expected to be no different. According to a panel staffer, about 60 amendments are expected to be offered.

One, to be proposed by Barney Frank, D-Mass., would require that the FDIC offer some of the apartment buildings it takes over as a result of bank failures to low-income housing groups.

Low-Level Waste: Legislation to put the brakes on a Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) rule that would allow certain low-level nuclear wastes to be disposed of along with ordinary waste will be marked up by the House Interior Committee today.

The bill (HR 645) would give states regulatory authority over the disposal of some low-level waste in the event the NRC stops regulating that waste, which includes parts from decommissioned nuclear plants, contaminated clothing from workers and medical wastes.

Currently, such waste must be disposed of in special landfills licensed and regulated by the NRC. The commission wants to ease restrictions in order to focus its resources on better regulation of more dangerous waste.

Jim Jontz, D-Ind., plans to offer an amendment to allow states to close their borders to incoming radioactive waste. Interior Committee Chairman George Miller, D-Calif., says the proposed new NRC policy would encourage illegal dumping of more dangerous waste in local garbage dumps.

Drug Prices: A measure Congress passed last year to force pharmaceutical companies to charge Medicaid programs the "best price" for drug purchases has had unintended consequences for other federal drug purchasing programs — especially those for the Department of Veterans Affairs (VA).

Legislation (HR 2890) before the House Veterans' Affairs Subcommittee on Hospitals and Health Care today aims to fix this problem.

Congress mandated that Medicaid programs be given the same discounts for bulk drug purchases as other federal agencies. The pharmaceutical companies responded by increasing the price for all the agencies.

G. V. "Sonny" Montgomery, D-Miss., sponsor of the bill and chairman of the Veterans Affairs' Committee, said the VA's drug costs are up more than 40 percent since the law was passed.

The legislation would take the VA out of the "best price" equation, which would allow the department to negotiate its own rates.

Health Programs: A reauthorization of a 1988 law aimed at helping abandoned children tops an agenda of mostly routine health program reauthorizations slated for markup by the House Energy Subcommittee on Health.

The bill (HR 2722) would authorize $30 million in fiscal 1992 and "such sums as may be necessary" through 1995 for grants to provide care for abandoned babies.

The 1988 law was aimed at so-called boarder babies, AIDS-infected children abandoned by their parents. The bill would expand the programs to apply to "medically fragile" babies, such as infants affected by their mother's drug or alcohol abuse.

The measure would authorize demonstration projects to help prevent abandonment by providing assistance and training to families.

The subcommittee will also mark up a measure (HR 3401) to authorize through fiscal 1996 a federal program to prevent disabilities.

The measure calls for $15 million in fiscal 1992. Funding for fiscal 1991 was $10 million. ■ since the listening devices were uncovered, will be retained for alternative uses, to be decided by the State Department.

The versions passed by the House and Senate took different tacks toward the embassy. Both provided $130 million, but the House left it up to the Bush administration to decide whether to tear down the bug-ridden embassy or partially rebuild it. Conferees ultimately went along with the Senate position in voting to build a new embassy.

At slightly more than $9 billion, the Justice Department budget comprises the largest portion of the $21 billion bill.

Neal Smith, D-Iowa, chairman of House Appropriations Commerce, Justice, State Subcommittee said the conference report could be considered by the House as early as Friday.

HIGHER EDUCATION bill moves slowly through House panel.

A House Education subcommittee yesterday began work on draft legislation that would reauthorize programs under the Higher Education Act, but most of the big issues were put off until today.

The panel gave tentative approval to non-controversial portions of the massive bill that would renew programs for adult and continuing education, literacy initiatives and support for college libraries. In addition, panel members approved a provision that would give financial support for historically black colleges.

Left for today was a partisan debate over the direction of the federal financial aid program for college students.

A Democratic-backed provision would end a program under which banks offer student loans, which the federal government guarantees and subsidizes. In its place, the Education Department would make loans directly to students through their schools.

But Republicans are expected to balk at the plan, which does not have the support of the Bush administration.

Republicans are also likely to oppose a provision in the bill that would make the Pell Grant program an entitlement, guaranteeing that funds would be available every year. Pell Grants are given to students from families whose annual incomes do not exceed $37,000.

Chairman William D. Ford, D-Mich., said yesterday that he will not be bound by limits on education spending imposed by the budget deal. He said the panel would decide what was appropriate to spend on education and let others decide how to pay for it.

INDIAN AUTHORITY bills gain in Senate panel.

The Senate Indian Affairs Committee yesterday approved, by voice vote, legislation (S 1720) that would reauthorize the Navajo-Hopi Relocation Housing Program through fiscal 1995.

The program is designed to help relocate Indian families affected by the 1974 negotiated settlement of land disputes between the Navajo and Hopi tribes.

Under that settlement, a number of Navajo families were left inside Hopi territory.

The program provides grants to help the Navajo tribe relocate families and build new homes in Navajo territory.

The bill would authorize $30 million to be spent for the relocation program for each of the next four fiscal years.

The panel also gave voice-vote approval to legislation (S 962) that would reinstate the authority of Indian tribes to exercise limited criminal jurisdiction over all Indians within a tribe's territorial limits.

Jurisdiction would be limited to criminal misdemeanors.

Members also approved a bill (S 1287) to expand the authorization under the Self Determination and Education Assistance Act of 1988, which set up a demonstration program under which 20 Indian tribes were given the authority to carry out certain tribal services, such as medical and health programs, that otherwise would have been handled by the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

The bill would authorize $700,000 over the next three fiscal years for the inclusion of 10 more tribes in the project.

'FARMER MAC' oversight approved by House Banking panel.

A House Banking subcommittee added its voice to a bill (HR 3300) to give federal regulators greater authority to ensure the financial soundness of the Federal Agricultural Mortgage Corporation, or "Farmer Mac," a government-sponsored corporation that is a secondary market for farm loans.

The Policy Research and Insurance Subcommittee added more teeth to the measure, which the Agriculture Committee approved Sept. 11. The banking subcommittee added language that would require Farmer Mac to maintain higher capital reserves to preclude the possibility of the agency's going under.

In recent years, there has been growing concern that the government might have to bail out government-sponsored enterprises (GSEs), such as Farmer Mac, that engage in risky deals.

The bill would create an Office of Secondary Market Supervision within the Farm Credit Administration (FCA), which oversees the farm credit system, to give that agency greater authority to regulate Farmer Mac.

The subcommittee approved the bill on a 6-1 vote, with ranking Republican Doug Bereuter, Neb., the lone opponent. Bereuter said that giving the FCA oversight of Farmer Mac would be a "drastic mistake" because the FCA is "hopelessly biased" in favor of farm banks.

Farmer Mac was established in 1987 with the aim of attracting commercial banks into the farm lending market.

EXPORT CONTROLS bill would ease restrictions on sales to Soviets.

Draft legislation approved yesterday by the House Foreign Affairs Subcommittee on International Economic Policy and Trade would loosen restrictions on the sale of sensitive technology, such as telecommunications equipment, to the Soviet Union.

The 1979 Export Administration Act was enacted to restrict exports to the U.S.S.R. and other communist countries. But the changes in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union have led Congress to reconsider some of the export controls.

Instead, lawmakers moved to refocus efforts on restricting the sale of nuclear weapons technology and components. By voice vote, the panel approved an amendment that would require the Bush administration to negotiate treaties with other countries to prohibit the sale of bomb-grade uranium.

The panel's bill is likely to face opposition from the Bush administration,

Parties in Spat Over Hostage Release Probe

If the degree of cooperation between congressional Democrats and Republicans in setting up a panel to look into maneuverings over the timing of the release of U.S. hostages in Iran more than 10 years ago is a harbinger of things to come, the investigation seems certain to be a very partisan affair.

House leaders yesterday named members to a panel to probe allegations that the presidential campaign of Ronald Reagan brokered a deal with Iranian officials in 1980 to delay the release of U.S. hostages until after the election.

Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., and Minority Leader Robert H. Michel, R-Ill., yesterday named 13 lawmakers to sit on the panel, but they did this separately and with a great degree of rancor.

Democrats called for the probe after a former National Security Council staff member and a former Iranian president charged that, in a bid to prevent an "October surprise" release of the hostages just before the election, Reagan campaign officials tried to delay their release until after the election.

Reagan beat President Jimmy Carter that year, and the hostages were released in 1981, on the day Reagan was sworn in.

GOP leaders have called the probe a waste of money and have demanded that it also look into claims that Carter tried to engineer the release of the hostages in October 1980 by offering to provide arms to Iran.

A simple thing like announcing the panel membership became a partisan issue yesterday. Democrats were never informed by Michel that he would announce the GOP membership. In what became a race against time, Foley tried to get the Democratic membership released first, but the Republicans beat him to the punch.

Michel announced that Henry J. Hyde, Ill., would serve as ranking member and Jim Leach, Iowa; Porter J. Goss, Fla.; Doug Bereuter, Neb.; and Olympia J. Snowe, Maine; would fill out the membership.

Foley had already indicated that Lee H. Hamilton, D-Ind., would serve as chairman. Yesterday he disclosed that Stephen J. Solarz, N.Y.; Sam Gejdenson, Conn.; Robert G. Torricelli, N.J.; Mervyn M. Dymally, Calif.; Howard L. Berman, Calif.; Edward F. Feighan, Ohio; and Ted Weiss, N.Y., would serve as the other Democratic members.

Each side has complained that the other has held up naming the panel. Yesterday, Michel said he hoped that coordination on the probe would improve, but he did not seem optimistic. "I had to keep asking [Democrats]. You know, I'm hearing you want to do this, you want to do this. When? Where? What? How many people do I get?"

The length of the investigation is still up in the air. Foley yesterday hinted that it could last the entire 102nd Congress. But Republicans want it wrapped up quickly, with a six-month limit.

Even though GOP members are not wild about the probe, Hyde pledged cooperation. "We do not go into this with a view towards frustrating it or putting road blocks in the way. If there is any substance to these charges which are outrageous and which describe a despicable act, we want to know about it."

The length of the inquiry and whether its hearings will be open to the public are expected to be resolved by the end of the week. Foley said the House would probably take up a resolution later this week establishing the task force and approving its membership.

which is taking a go-slow approach to easing restrictions on exports to the Soviet Union.

A provision that would require the administration to designate Syria, Iran, Libya and Iraq as terrorist countries is also opposed by the White House, which says it could endanger Middle East peace talks.

TOUGHER BEACH water standards sought by N.J. members.

The House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Subcommittee on Oceanography yesterday approved, by voice vote, legislation (HR 12) that aims to give Americans better information on the quality of water at U.S. beaches.

The bill would require the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to develop criteria for beach water quality and require states to perform tests on beach water and post signs in areas where beach water does not meet the standards.

The bill would authorize $3 million in federal matching grants for states to carry out the new requirements.

The measure also directs the EPA to study better ways to detect the presence of harmful bacteria and viruses in bathing waters.

"The time for uniform testing standards is long overdue," said William J. Hughes, D-N.J., sponsor of the bill.

The measure is being pushed primarily by New Jersey lawmakers, who fear that their state, which has strict beach water quality standards, may be losing tourists to other states with less stringent laws.

COPYRIGHT BILL would extend length of protection.

Legislation that would streamline the process for protecting copyrights won the voice-vote approval yesterday of the House Judiciary Subcommittee on Intellectual Property.

The bill (HR 2372) would automatically renew a copyright for 47 years once the initial 28-year protection expired.

Under current law, copyrights registered since 1978 are in effect for the life of the applicant, plus 50 years. Those before 1978 are valid for 28 years and can be renewed by the applicant once more for the same period. If they are not renewed, then the copyright would be terminated and the work would become part of the public domain.

To encourage registration of copyrights, the measure would also limit legal remedies for originators of works who did not protect them but later sued when the work was copied.

Patent Office. The subcommittee also approved draft legislation that would reauthorize the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office for fiscal 1992.

The measure would authorize $119 million for the agency in fiscal 1992, about $10 million more than fiscal 1991 and $25 million more than requested by the Bush administration.

CALIFORNIA LANDS bill gains subcommittee's approval.

The House Interior panel's General Oversight and California Desert Lands Subcommittee yesterday gave voice-vote approval to legislation (HR 2929) that would increase the environmental protections afforded about 10 million acres of the California desert, including Death Valley.

The subcommittee, whose name illustrates the importance of California wilderness legislation to subcommittee Chairman Richard H. Lehman, D-Calif., and full Interior panel Chairman George Miller, D-Calif., chose not to act on alternative legislation (HR 3066) favored by the administration that would have improved the protection for a much smaller area — about 2.4 million acres.

Three of the seven subcommittee members are from California.

HR 2929 would classify 4.4 million acres of Bureau of Land Management (BLM) land as a protected national wilderness; turn 1.5 million acres of the East Mojave Desert into a national monument; and expand and upgrade to national park status the Death Valley National Monument and the Joshua Tree National Monument.

The increased federal protection provided by the legislation would, sponsors hope, help preserve several endangered species and thousands of archeological sites.

The BLM opposes the legislation, arguing that it is better equipped to deal with the competing claims on the land, including mineral developers and off-road vehicle enthusiasts.

CIA NOMINEE accused of twisting information at agency.

A former senior CIA official yesterday accused CIA director-designate Robert M. Gates of twisting intelligence on Soviet power to support a hard-line presidential policy that sought to portray the Soviet Union as more powerful and menacing than it may have been.

Melvin Goodman, a one-time CIA Soviet policy expert, told the Senate Intelligence Committee that Gates, who was once deputy director of the spy agency, had helped "corrupt" the agency into supporting right-wing political agendas of ex-CIA Director William J. Casey.

"Gates' role in this activity was to corrupt the process and the ethics of intelligence," Goodman told the panel.

Other present and former CIA officials were on hand to defend Gates yesterday, but Goodman hit hardest at the nominee in a scathing public version of testimony he had earlier given in closed session before the committee.

"Gates'... contribution was to ignore and suppress signs of the Soviet strategic retreat, including the collapse of the Soviet empire, even the Soviet Union itself," Goodman said.

Goodman's assertions were challenged by Graham Fuller, a former CIA intelligence analyst, who denied that either Casey or Gates ever told him to slant any of his analysis reports.

"Not only was I never told what to say, but I would have regarded it as an outrage and I would have rejected it," said Fuller.

EXPERTS DISCOUNT ICBM threat, need for missile defense.

The majority of a panel of experts told the House Government Operations Committee yesterday that the threat to the United States from a nuclear ballistic missile attack is too small to justify the development of an extensive space- or land-based anti-missile defense system.

Committee Chairman John Conyers, Jr., D-Mich., echoed much of that testimony, questioning the need for the Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI). Discounting the likelihood of a large-scale nuclear exchange, Conyers said that "the real threat to the country is not from Tom Clancy's Red October, but Ian Fleming's Thunderball," in which criminals steal nuclear bombs for purposes of blackmail.

Sven Kraemer of the American Security Council Foundation disagreed, predicting instead that the Soviet Union still poses a danger and that some developing nations were close to the development of long-range missiles. But Peter Zimmerman, a fellow at the Center for Strategic and International Studies, agreed with Conyers, predicting that in the next five years the status quo would be maintained, with the United States, Soviet Union, China, Britain and France remaining the only nations with Intercontinental Ballistic Missiles (ICBMs). Zimmerman said while he believed friendlier nations, such as India, Japan and Israel, might develop ICBMs within a decade or so, more dangerous countries, such as Iraq and Libya, were many years away from having such capability.

N.Y. PHONE outage reflects larger problems, Markey says.

The Sept. 17 telecommunications outage in New York that disrupted air traffic nationwide and long-distance calls to and from New York for several hours "is indicative of a much larger problem in the way the industry sets standards and measures performance," Rep. Edward J. Markey, D-Mass., said yesterday.

Markey, chairman of the House Energy panel's Telecommunications and Finance Subcommittee, laid most of the blame for that incident and others in recent months squarely on the shoulders of the Federal Communications Commission (FCC).

Because the FCC has chosen to focus on economic regulation of the telecommunications industry, Markey said, quality has suffered and consumers are faced with telephone network failures that "are becoming as frequent as the change in the seasons."

The subcommittee released a memo listing 107 AT&T facilities that are as susceptible to the type of technical and human failures that crippled communications in much of the Northeast region Sept. 17.

Richard M. Firestone, chief of the FCC's common carrier bureau, called the incident "an unacceptable disruption in service" but disputed Markey's claim that the FCC is lagging behind in its oversight responsibilities.

The House Government Operations Subcommittee on Government Information, Justice and Agriculture will hold a hearing of its own today on the reliability of public telephone networks.

CENSUS DATA not forthcoming, Mosbacher tells Hill.

Commerce Secretary Robert A. Mosbacher has declined to release adjusted census figures to Congress, as requested by House Post Office Census Subcommittee Chairman Tom Sawyer, D-Ohio.

Sawyer, who was notified of the decision in a letter from Mosbacher on Monday, yesterday expressed his displeasure.

"I have to ask why he does not want us to see those numbers," said Sawyer, who had asked Mosbacher to provide the figures by Sept. 30. "What is he afraid they might show?"

Sawyer had first asked for the figures, adjusted from the official head count with the help of a post-census survey, on July 23.

He said the figures were needed so that Congress could consider legislation that would force a correction.

Instead of data, Mosbacher's letter asked Sawyer why the subcommittee needed the numbers at all.

Mosbacher said the numbers, while more accurate for large population aggregates, were less reliable than the original census head count when applied block by block. He also said considerable error had been found in the post-census survey on which the adjusted figures were based.

The survey indicated that the official head count missed more than 5 million people, a great number of them minorities.

PROBE SOUGHT of national education assessment report.

The chairman of the House Education Committee yesterday asked the General Accounting Office (GAO) to look into the procedures used by the blue-ribbon National Education Goals Panel to assess U.S. schoolchildren's knowledge of mathematics.

Chairman William D. Ford, D-Mich., and Elementary, Secondary and Vocational Education Subcommittee Chairman Dale E. Kildee, D-Mich., asked for the GAO review after a researcher who worked on the study charged that political pressure skewed the math-achievement assessment.

Richard M. Jaeger, who was part of the education goals panel's research team and who was fired during work on the report, said the nationwide math assessment was too negative.

"The administration wants to convince the public that public schools are failing" to win more support for President Bush's proposals to direct federal funds to children who want to attend private schools, contended Jaeger, who is director of the Center for Educational Research and Evaluation at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

The assessment, known as the Nation's Report Card, was issued on Monday and indicated that American schoolchildren can do little more than simple calculations. But other leading educators defended the report.

According to an Education Committee aide, Ford and Kildee asked for the investigation because they "felt it was important to get an objective point of view."

KENNEDY, HATFIELD introduce job skills measure.

Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., introduced legislation yesterday that is designed to increase the number of American workers in highly skilled positions. At a press conference, Kennedy said that the "American economy is at a turning point and the future standard of living for all Americans is at risk."

The problem, according to bill sponsors, is insufficient education and training of American workers. "We are not doing a sufficient job of training... and we will pay for it in our living standard," warned Ira Magaziner, chairman of the Commission on the Skills of the American Workforce.

Eight of the world's industrialized nations spend more on training than the United States, and seven of those countries have wages that are increasing more rapidly than those in the United States, said bill sponsors.

The Magaziner-led commission last year issued a report — called America's Choice — recommending sweeping changes in the way Americans are prepared for the workforce. The legislation introduced yesterday would set federal performance standards for education and training and support research in both fields.

The measure also would force businesses to spend at least 1 percent of their payroll on worker training or pay an equivalent amount into a federal kitty for training programs. The measure would authorize $580 million in fiscal 1993 for the programs.

STOPGAP FUNDING bill signed by President Bush.

President Bush late Monday night signed legislation (H J Res 332 — PL 102-109) to fund most operations of the federal government through Oct. 29.

Because only two of the 13 fiscal 1992 appropriations bills have been enacted, most federal agencies would have been forced to close down yesterday if Bush had not signed the measure. Oct. 1 was the start of fiscal 1992.

In a statement, the president said he signed the legislation because it was necessary to keep the government functioning. "Providing for the normal operation of the government through continuing resolutions is an undesirable practice," he added.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE
WASHINGTON

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

From: James A. Baker, III

JAB III

CP

1. Zaire: Transition Government In Doubt. Mobutu and his political opposition continue jostling over the formation of a transition government in Zaire. The opposition (fearful of a popular backlash if Mobutu is seen as maintaining the upper hand) is divided over the extent to which it should share power with him and over the composition of the new government. If Prime Minister-designate Tshisekedi's and Mobutu's stubbornness prevent the formation of an effective, stabilizing government, further violence could ensue. The Belgians have proposed a trilateral meeting with us and the French to consider next steps. (C)
2. Romania: New Prime Minister Named. President Iliescu has designated Theodor Stolojan as Romania's new Prime Minister. A former finance minister in the Roman government, and now State Secretary for Privatization, Stolojan is a cautious economic reformer. Since he is not a member of the ruling National Salvation Front, he may qualify as the political "neutral" some opposition parties have sought for the prime minister position. Stolojan, however, still faces an uphill struggle in forming a coalition government, a task that may take several weeks. The opposition National Liberal Party is a likely participant; others will be harder to draw in. While early national elections would be a logical way to sort out the current political disarray in Romania, they are probably at least several months off. (C)
3. Angola: Savimbi on Peace Process. On Monday, Savimbi underscored to US officials in Luanda UNITA's commitment to the peace process. He is concerned about the threat to the process posed by food shortages in troop assembly areas. We are responding on two fronts: we will be providing excess MREs to the assembled troops (the first shipment is scheduled to arrive Friday in Luanda), and we have also persuaded the UN to help feed the assembled troops and their families. I will be meeting with Savimbi when he visits Washington next week. (C)

POINTS TO BE MADE FOR MEETING WITH
PRESIDENT JORGE SERRANO OF GUATEMALA

Courtesy Points

- I am very pleased to have you at the White House, after our exchange of correspondence and our telephone call a few months back.
- We are greatly encouraged that Guatemala is continuing to strengthen its democracy under your leadership.
- I know that you stopped off in Houston to see your mother in the hospital. I hope that she is doing well.

Belize/Talks with Guerrillas

- Let me begin by congratulating you in two areas where you have shown outstanding leadership, relations with Belize and the peace negotiations with the guerrillas in Guatemala.
- I hope you received my letter of congratulations on your efforts to settle the long-standing dispute with Belize. Your statesmanship will benefit the peace and stability of all of Central America.
- How long will it take for a final settlement with Belize?
- The accord at Queretaro with the guerrillas was a great achievement. We are all very hopeful for the talks. Was there much progress in the round of talks in September?

Economic Assistance

- I am impressed with the economic measures you have taken to bring economic growth to Guatemala.
- I am pleased that we reached agreement last week on the use of ESF to help you clear arrears with the international financial institutions. This will lead to new flows of capital for Guatemala.

-- I know about the drought affecting Guatemala and appreciate your sense of urgency to solve the energy crisis.

-- Our experts have assessed the situation and believe that vigorous energy conservation is the only viable alternative in the short-term.

Human Rights

-- I know that you inherited a difficult human rights situation and we recognize that you have taken some steps to improve Guatemala's record.

-- Congress and the American people still perceive Guatemala as a place where human rights violations occur too frequently and go unpunished.

-- We are concerned by the rising levels of violence, such as the killings of 11 smugglers in August in which the military is accused.

-- In particular, we hope that the investigations of the murder of Michael Devine and the abduction of Sister Diana Ortiz are speedily concluded.

Military Relations

-- As I wrote you in August, we certainly look forward to the day when we can resume a more normal military-to-military relationship, as well as sales of equipment.

-- We will not be in a position to consider this, however, until those responsible for the murder of an American citizen, Michael Devine, are brought to trial.

Narcotics

- I appreciate the cooperation of your government in programs for eradication of opium and marijuana, as well as the pilot project to interdict drug smugglers transitting Guatemala.
- I understand that new, strengthened narcotics legislation has been introduced in your congress. We hope you will help push for prompt approval of a tough law.
- Extradition is a powerful weapon against traffickers. We hope that your Attorney General is successful in persuading the Constitutional Court not to limit this procedure.

INFORMATION

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: BRENT SCOWCROFT BS
SUBJECT: Additional Points to be Made for Your Meeting with President Jorge Serrano of Guatemala

The State Department has learned that President Serrano may ask at your meeting on October 2 your opinion of his leading a delegation of Central American Presidents to Havana to press Fidel Castro to move Cuba towards democracy. This idea has its origins both in Serrano's aspiration for leadership among the Central Americans and in his contact with Castro at the Guadalajara summit in July. At that time, Serrano asked Castro to permit him to ship several thousand Bibles to Cuba, a request that Castro reportedly has agreed to.

We believe that this is not a well thought out idea and that you should discourage it.

We also have new information that both the Guatemalan Army captain and a colonel who are accused of having ordered the murder of American citizen Michael Devine have been released from custody by a military court and restored to their respective commands. All USG interlocutors will be telling President Serrano that this is a step backward for the rule of law, as well as an impediment for resumption of U.S. military aid.

Attached at Tab A are revised points to be made covering these topics.

POINTS TO BE MADE FOR MEETING WITH PRESIDENT SERRANO OF GUATEMALA

Possible Serrano Trip to Cuba

- Castro's reaction to the global trend toward democracy has been to crack down on all dissent. We have not seen any willingness to even discuss steps toward a democratic opening.
- Wouldn't Castro use a visit by a group of leaders to claim falsely that your trip was proof that international pressure and isolation was ending?
- I would hope that democratic leaders would insist that Castro accept specific steps leading to democracy, such as elections under international supervision, before proceeding with any high-level visits.

Human Rights

- I know that you inherited a difficult human rights situation, and we recognize that you have taken some steps to improve Guatemala's record.
- Congress and the American people still perceive Guatemala as a place where human rights violations occur too frequently and go unpunished.
- We are concerned by the rising levels of political violence, such as the killings of 11 smugglers in August in which the military is accused.
- I understand that the Army captain and the colonel accused of ordering the murder of U.S. citizen Michael Devine have been released and restored to their commands. This is a step backward for the rule of law which is deeply troubling.

October 2, 1991

STATEMENT BY THE PRESS SECRETARY

The President met today with President Jorge Serrano of Guatemala to discuss regional and bilateral issues of mutual interest. The President praised the courageous leadership of President Serrano in establishing diplomatic relations with Belize and in working actively for a solution to the protracted conflict in Guatemala. The President noted that these steps will benefit not only Guatemala but the peace and stability of all of Central America. The two Presidents discussed mutual efforts to support democracy throughout the hemisphere, and focused on the need to restore the democratically elected government of President Aristide of Haiti. The President was encouraged by President Serrano's commitment to improve the human rights situation in Guatemala, and he underscored that continued progress in this area is of central importance to the United States. The two leaders also discussed U.S. assistance to Guatemala and narcotics cooperation.

REMARKS BY THE PRESIDENT
UPON DEPARTURE

The South Lawn

10:38 A.M. EDT

Q Are you going to control the jobless --

THE PRESIDENT: Yes. What I want is a bill that doesn't bust this budget; I've made that very clear from day one. We're prepared to extend unemployment benefits. In fact, I'd like to see it done, but I'm not going to go and put the burden on all the rest of the people in this country. So we've got a good package, and once again, the Senate is testing us in this administration, and I'm trying to protect the taxpayers as well as those who are unemployed.

And that's our position, and I'll send it back, and I hope that they'll then send us a bill that we can sign. And we've got one before the Congress right now, but you just cannot -- we're getting some partisan politics here, and I am determined to stand for principle. And that's what I'm doing.

Q Mr. President, what are you doing with that $10 billion that belongs to these unemployed people? What are you doing with it? Are you using it to run the government?

THE PRESIDENT: What are you talking about?

Q That $10 billion that's there for these unemployed people -- the trust fund.

Q The trust fund. The trust fund for unemployment.

Q What are you doing with it?

THE PRESIDENT: The whole budget explains that. The debate explained it. It's just too complicated to go into --

Q Well, why don't you use it for these poor people who are hungry?

THE PRESIDENT: Because we are using tons of money for -- to pay unemployment benefits.

Q It'll run out.

THE PRESIDENT: And what I want to do is to see one that does not break the budget and further burden a burdened economy. And we're very clear on it, and I'm just a little annoyed at the constant political pressure. They know very well I can't sign it, and if they want to help the unemployed and those who have no benefits, they ought to work cooperatively with this administration.

I was elected to try to protect the taxpayer as well as those who are unemployed, and that's exactly what I'm doing.

MORE

Q But don't you think the unemployed --

Q How about the coup in Haiti, Mr. President? What can you do about Haiti?

THE PRESIDENT: I'm worried about Haiti. I'm very worried about it. Here's a whole hemisphere that's moving in a democratic way, and comes along Haiti now, overthrowing an elected government. We care very much about it.

I was just talking to the Secretary of State, who will be representing the United States at the OAS meeting. This is one where the OAS, a newly revitalized OAS with Canada now as a member, has a special role, and we will be supportive of OAS action to try to reverse this coup out. But it is very difficult.

Q (Inaudible.)

THE PRESIDENT: Well, we'll see what happens over there. But that would be my inclination --

Q Troops, or --

Q -- that the problem with that one is, you start hurting the Haiti people. No, I am disinclined to use American force. We've got a big history of American force in this hemisphere, and so we've got to be very careful about that. But we'll see how others feel at the OAS. There's some talk over there now about a multinational force -- so we'll have to wait and see.

Q Are you worried about Gates, Mr. President, after yesterday --

THE PRESIDENT: No, I'm not worried about him. I'm strongly for him and --

Q Are you and Mr. Sununu going to permit offshore oil drilling in Vietnam?

Q How do you feel about what was said about him here yesterday, that he's -- intelligence to meet policy --

THE PRESIDENT: Well, I think he'll have his chance to clear the record up. And, frankly, I don't know where these people have been all these years with all their anxiety they've felt about these estimates. It seems funny that all surfaces right now. But I know Bob Gates, and I know he wouldn't slant an estimate for some political purpose. And I also know, having been out there, that you have a wide array of views amongst analysts, and somebody has to be responsible for the final product.

I was at the agency. I know how it works. And my confidence in Bob Gates has not been diminished one single bit. He's a good man, he deserves confirmation and I'm confident that he will be confirmed, just as I'm confident that Clarence Thomas will be -- now the Senate will vote affirmatively on that one.

So I see no reason to waver on any of this, and I simply am not going to do that.

Thank you. I had better get going to Pennsylvania.
Thanks.

MORE

I don't know anything about offshore drilling in Venice -- where was it?

Q Vietnam. Offshore drilling on Vietnam. Are you going to arrange to let that start? Mr. Sununu, I think, has been working on it.

THE PRESIDENT: Offshore drilling --

Q Offshore drilling off Vietnam.

Q With Elvis. (Laughter.)

Q Will you look into it and let me have an answer later?

THE PRESIDENT: If Sununu knows the answer, ask him. He's standing right there.

Are you for it, or against it? I want to be with the people on this one.

Q Sir, I'm no expert on it either way, but -- (laughter) --

Q Are you campaigning for reelection?

THE PRESIDENT: No. You'll know it when I start doing that. But I'm going to be up there working for Dick Thornburgh today.

Q When are you going to announce?

THE PRESIDENT: And for Larry Hopkins in Kentucky.

Q When are you going to fill Thornburgh's job?

Q November, or January?

THE PRESIDENT: Good question. It's moving. It's moving a little bit there.

Q Are you going to have Thornburgh explain the Inslaw case, Mr. President? The Inslaw case -- are you going to have Thornburgh explain that?

THE PRESIDENT: I know his views on that. He doesn't have to explain it.

What was the last -- this is the last question, Helen.

Q When are you going to announce for reelection, which is very obvious?

THE PRESIDENT: Well, what's obvious?

Q That you're running.

THE PRESIDENT: That the date has approached? Listen, you try to go out and express yourself on the need for good education in this country and put forward a sound program. I put forward a sound program on unemployment benefits. We want to help the unemployed; put forward a sound crime package, and all of a sudden, everybody says it's purely political.

MORE

Now, I assume that's just because we're getting close to 1992. But I'm going to continue to put forward what I think are the domestic priorities for this country, and work to see them fulfilled. I realize that it's that time of year. And as each Democrat gets out there and starts announcing, why, its going to increase the propensity for people in the media to say, hey, everything I do is political. But I remember a little -- it's better. Things are better now because I remember when they said I wasn't doing anything domestically, which happened to be untrue, also.

But things are moving in the right direction, and I think people understand we've got a very sound education program, and I'm going to continue to pursue it. And, yes, I expect people to say it's political, but that's just the time of year. That's just the season. So I'm not going to worry about it, nor am I going to be deterred by that, nor am I going to let a handful of Democratic candidates announce -- and I'm not announced -- set the agenda for this country. They weren't elected to do something -- I was, and I'm going to keep on trying to do it.

Q Who do you want to run against?

THE PRESIDENT: No more questions of any kind.

(Laughter.)
