PARTICIPANTS GATHER FOR MIDEAST PEACE TALKS

MADRID -- Israeli and Arab delegations to the Middle East peace conference arrived here Monday night and immediately plunged into backstage procedural disputes with the U.S., a signal of the difficulties that some diplomats fear may hamstring the negotiations....

The Palestinians, seeking to establish themselves as a quasi-independent entity at the talks despite their official status as part of a joint delegation with Jordan, received permission from U.S. and Soviet sponsors to deliver one of the 45-minute speeches allocated to each delegation. Israelis protested that since the address will be in addition to a Jordanian speech, it will undermine the conference ground rule, demanded by Israel, that the Palestinians appear only under Jordan's umbrella.

Official sources said Israel's complaint was rejected....

Secretary Cheney, in a speech in Washington to the Jewish Institute for National Security Affairs, pledged Monday that the U.S. "will continue to support Israel's qualitative military edge over all possible enemies, and we remain committed to ensuring Israel's security in the years ahead," Reuter reported.

(Jackson Diehl & David Hoffman, Washington Post, A16)

BUSH: 'LONG, LONG WAY TO GO' TO ACHIEVE PEACE PACT

President Bush warned Monday against hopes of a quick fix at the Middle East peace conference, saying Arabs and Israelis have a "long, long way to go" before they can turn their 43-year-old conflict into peace....

White House officials emphasized Bush's main focus will be on the Madrid meeting. They gave short shift to President Gorbachev, saying the superpower issues, including cutbacks in their nuclear arsenals, will be reviewed....

Bush was expected to name a special mediator to be on hand if needed to prod the talks along, or to help smooth over the glitches that are bound to arise.

Richard Murphy, former assistant secretary of state for Near Eastern and South Asian affairs, is critical of the "hands off" approach, declaring, "We have to be engaged from the beginning."

(Helen Thomas, UPI)

SUPERPOWER LEADERS MAP STRATEGY FOR HISTORIC PEACE CONFERENCE

Presidents Bush and Gorbachev are charting strategy for a historic Middle East peace conference, determined to bring harmony to a region torn by five full-scale wars.... By personally opening the meeting, Bush and Gorbachev hope to send a powerful message that the international community is looking to Israel and its Arab nations to finally reconcile their bitter disputes, U.S. officials said.... The White House on Monday condemned as a "senseless act of violence" the terrorist attack on a busload of Jewish settlers on the West Bank that left two dead and six wounded. It urged "all parties to condemn this act and reject violence, especially at this critical time."

Five Others Wounded In Shooting; Iranian
Radical Calls For Suicide Attacks On Israel

JERUSALEM -- Two Jewish settlers were killed and five others were wounded Monday night in a machine-gun attack on a civilian bus heading from the Israeli-occupied West Bank to a rally in Tel Aviv to protest any disbanding of Israeli settlements....

Police had no immediate suspects....

Earlier in the day, Yossi Ben-Aharon, prime minister Shamir's chief political adviser, declared that Israel will be the "defendant" at the Madrid conference and therefore should have special status.

"Perhaps a number of Arab states will come and each with its claims and criticisms," he said, as the Israelis prepared to depart Tuesday. "Therefore, Israel should be allowed more time and more possibility to present its position."...

An Iranian radical, meanwhile, called in an interview for suicide attacks on the Jewish state, AP reported. The Beirut newspaper Ad-Diyar quoted Ali Akbar Mohtashemi, Iran's former interior minister, as describing the Madrid conference as "high treason" and a crime against the Palestinian people."...

In Ankara, Turkey, two separate explosions killed an American serviceman and seriously wounded an Egyptian diplomat, AP reported. An extremist group opposed to the peace conference claimed responsibility.

An anonymous caller made the claim in the name of Islamic Jihad, but it appeared unlikely he was referring to the Lebanese group of that name that is holding Western hostages.

CHRISTIAN-JEW COALITION BACKS ISRAEL ON LAND

A coalition of Christians and Jews warned the Bush Administration Monday that forcing Israel to make land concessions at the peace conference would threaten its security -- and betray evangelical voters.

"There seems to be a serious decrease in (Bush Administration) support for Israel," said the Reverend Ben Armstrong, former director of National Religious Broadcasters....

Along with about 20 Jewish and conservative Christian leaders at a press conference Monday, Armstrong reminded Bush of his campaign promise to the nation's estimated 60 million evangelicals in 1988.

"He said no land for peace," Armstrong recalled. "No Palestinian state on Israel's border."

ISRAEL: WITHDRAWAL FROM LEBANON CAN BE NEGOTIATED

NEW YORK -- Israel is willing to negotiate the withdrawal of its soldiers from southern Lebanon, the Israeli official in charge of Lebanese policy said Monday in a discussion on the Middle East peace conference.

"I think this (a withdrawal) is part of what will have to be the subject of negotiations now between us and the Lebanese," Uri Lubrani said. Lubrani, at a meeting with AP editors, said Israel has "preconditions for such a thing happening," among them the requirement that "the security needs of Israel are fully and irrevocably taken care of." He declined to list any other conditions, saying that to do so would be premature. But he reiterated Israeli policy -- that the Jewish state does not lay claim to even "an inch" of Lebanon. BUSH EXPECTED TO DISCUSS FOOD AID FOR SOVIETS WITH GORBACHEV

Secretary Madigan said Monday that President Bush may want to talk to President Gorbachev before deciding on a possible food aid package to help the Soviets through the winter.

"It's up to the President to decide what he wants to do. There's a very good possibility he may want to talk to President Gorbachev before he makes a final decision," Madigan told reporters on his way to an afternoon meeting with Bush.

KGB DEFECTOR PREDICTS AN INCREASE IN MOSCOW'S INDUSTRIAL ESPIONAGE

Soviet KGB defector Stanislav Levchenko predicted Monday that Moscow will step up its industrial espionage in the years ahead because of its deteriorating economic situation.

Speaking at a conference on American international business security, Levchenko, a KGB major before defecting in 1979, predicted that the new Soviet intelligence service would exploit the increasing number of U.S.-Soviet business contacts to steal Western technology.... Some U.S. experts disagreed. One U.S. official said an aggressive Soviet program of economic espionage would jeopardize the help from other countries that it so badly needs. (George Lardner, Washington Post, A1)

YELTSIN ANNOUNCES ECONOMIC REFORM

MOSCOW -- President Yeltsin Monday staked his political career and the future of this vast republic on a program of drastic economic reforms designed to overcome the legacy of seven decades of Communist rule and steer Russia toward a Western-style market economy. The plan would free prices and remove subsidies by the end of the year, privatize large sections of state-owned industry and agriculture and create a more viable currency.

Addressing the Russian parliament and nation at what he called "one of the most critical moments of Russian history," Yeltsin also nominated himself to the vacant post of Russian prime minister and said he was ready, in addition to being president, to head a new government of national unity to tackle a painful period of reforms.

U.S. OPENING DOOR TO CHEAP PISTOLS FROM EAST EUROPE

The Bush Administration opened the door to import thousands of cheap semiautomatic pistols from former communist countries.

Since last March, the State Department has authorized commercial import permits to be issued to Czechoslovakia and Hungary for more than 280,000 weapons.

Poland and Eastern Germany are also expected to request permission to sell handguns in the U.S., opening the door to more sales from former communist countries.

Officials with the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms fear the new weapons will reach street criminals because of their high quality, low price and the lack of ready markets with law enforcement agencies. (John Bennett, Washington Times, A4)

BUSH PLANS ANTI-DRUG SUMMIT NEXT YEARU.S. Invitations Issued To Leaders Of 6 Latin American Countries

President Bush has invited the presidents of six Latin American nations to the U.S. early next year for another "anti-drug summit" that will seek to reinvigorate efforts to disrupt the international cocaine trade, the White House said Monday....

Administration officials said the summit would attempt to initiate greater "regional coordination," including sharing of intelligence and joint operations, against traffickers. Officials acknowledged that the summit is aimed, at least in part, at showing the Administration's continued dedication to an issue that during the past year has appeared to slip off the President's agenda....

Administration officials said domestic politics played no part in the proposed summit, noting that the initial idea came from an Andean summit of Latin American leaders earlier this year. But the announcement comes less than a week after a series of internal audits sharply criticized U.S. anti-drug efforts in Latin America as largely ineffective. Monday, the White House used the announcement to tout what it described as "tremendous strides in the drug fight." Since the Cartagena summit, it said, "cocaine consumption in the U.S. is down" and "drug mafias have been attacked." (Michael Isikoff, Washington Post, A5)

Bush Agrees To Drug Summit

...The announcement of a second drug summit drew praise from Rep. Rangel. He called it "welcome news in the face of a continued torrent of drug trafficking and drug abuse in our hemisphere."

QUAYLE SIGNS AGREEMENT TO SPUR PRIVATE INVESTMENT IN BALTICS

INDIANAPOLIS -- Vice President Quayle signed an aide agreement Monday with the prime ministers of the Baltic nations and decreed that the "republics are now open for business."

The agreement calls for direct loans and loan guarantees from the federal Overseas Private Investment Corp. to American businesses seeking to invest in those countries....

"The republics are now open for business, and I hope there is a lot of business that goes there," Quayle said in the signing ceremony at an Indianapolis convention center. (Ken Kusmer, AP)

BUSH BANS AMERICANS FROM DEALS WITH HAITI, TIGHTENS EMBARGO

The U.S. has banned Americans from dealing with Haiti and advised U.S. oil companies Monday not to ship fuel to the Caribbean country as part of efforts to restore ousted President Aristide to power. "The President has signed an executive order prohibiting U.S. citizens from engaging in any financial transactions with the government of Haiti," Luigi Einaudi, the U.S. ambassador to the OAS, told reporters.... Einaudi said "this week there will be specific further formal embargo measures taken by the U.S." He did not elaborate, but a White House spokesman said the next step in sanctions would be a trade cutoff.... Also, OAS Secretary-General Joao Clemente Baena Soares said Haitian authorities had agreed to the dispatch of a civilian mission to the country.

HAITI LOSES JOBS AS GAS LINES GROW

PORT-AU-PRINCE -- Four weeks after a military coup toppled Haiti's democratically elected government, international sanctions and the threat of a U.S. embargo have cost thousands of jobs and touched off panic-buying of fuel.

U.S. DEPENDENCE ON FOREIGN OIL CONTINUES, REPORT SAYS

Despite conservation and other strategies, the U.S. has grown increasingly dependent on foreign oil and should take steps to protect itself against future supply disruptions, a report to Congress said Tuesday. Many of the easier ways of achieving oil savings already have been taken, such as switching to other fuels for utilities, industry and the residential and commercial sectors. As a result, future efforts may be more difficult and costly, said the report by the congressional Office of Technology Assessment.

The report was an update of a 1984 OTA analysis and the new study found the situation has worsened.... The U.S. "is more dependent on oil imports and less prepared to respond to a severe oil supply disruption than it was just seven years ago."...

The OTA suggested several goals to ease dependence on oil imports and increase energy efficiency, including limiting net oil imports to not more than 50% of annual consumption, and promoting efforts to diversify oil sources outside the Middle East.

AID IS URGED FOR A NEW SOUTH AFRICA

A bipartisan group of members of Congress asked President Bush Monday to initiate an international aid program to help South Africa after establishment of a democratic government there.

The lawmakers, led by Rep. Solarz said in a letter to Bush that the establishment of such an aid program would be a "positive incentive" to encourage South Africa's leaders to move rapidly toward creation of a non-racial democracy.... A State Department official said the Administration has no official position on the congressional plan, but in principle favors economic help to a future democratic South Africa.

GREENSPAN NOTES WEAK RECOVERY

The nation's recovery from recession has "turned demonstrably sluggish" in recent weeks, Alan Greenspan said Monday, raising the prospect that the central bank could cut interest rates again soon in an effort to give the economy a boost.

Using unusually blunt language, Greenspan told a University of Rhode Island business conference: "The economy is moving forward, but in the face of 50-mile-an-hour head winds.... From all the data that we have, it is evident that the economy is rising, but at a pace a good deal slower than one typically sees during the recovery out of a recession."... Meanwhile, President Bush appeared to rule out any new tax or spending proposals to stimulate the economy. "I know there's a lot to be done. I'm not relaxed about the economy," the President told an American Gas Association convention in San Diego via a television hookup.

But Bush turned thumbs down on some congressional proposals to cut taxes. "I'm not going to jump in and take steps out of some congressional panic that might make the situation worse. It might burden future generations more," he said.

(John Berry, Washington Post, D1)

ECONOMISTS QUESTION HOW LONG RECOVERY WILL LAST

The U.S. economy appears to be growing again after being gripped by recession since mid-1990, but how long that will last is a question mark.... Private economists are divided on the issue. Many agree with the Administration but the most pessimistic see a return to negative GNP numbers in the present quarter.

Robert Brusca, senior economist at Nikko Securities in New York, said he believed the GNP would be down a sharp 2% in the October-December quarter. "There are just too many things that are troubling in the economy to believe that growth will endure," he said.... "If you look at the early stages of most recoveries, they tend to be dominated by two factors. One is a rebound in consumer spending, especially for big-ticket items, and the second is a rebound in construction. That isn't happening this time," said David Wyss, chief financial economist at DRI-McGraw Hill.

ECONOMY SHAPING UP AS BUSH'S BIGGEST FOE

President Bush may have good reason to worry about the sputtering economy's effect on his re-election chances....

With Democrats piling on Bush, Clayton Yeutter said it's "much too early" to start panicking. He said media attention on the economy is "out of proportion" to the seriousness of the problem. And he notes that unemployment, inflation and interest rates were much higher during the 1982-1983 recession in the Reagan Administration.... "However," he cautioned, "the President has to demonstrate that he's on top of the (economic) situation and doing everything he can within the constraints he has."

BUSH SAYS NO NEW TAX CUT PACKAGE FOR NOW

President Bush pledged on Monday to fight "tooth and nail" to revive the nation's sluggish economy but indicated he won't propose a new tax-cut package at this time. Bush accused the Democratic-controlled Congress of panicking with a welter of tax-cut measures and suggested he wasn't about to follow suit with hasty steps that he said could do more harm than good. After meeting with the President, Rep. Gingrich told reporters: "There's no indication of being able to produce a package in the next couple weeks," with Congress scheduled to adjourn for the year on Nov. 22. "If, on the other hand, Congress stays in during Thanksgiving, I think the President's pressure to get something passed would increase substantially," Gingrich said. (Tom Raum, AP)

REGULATOR WARNS OF NEW S&L WOES

The current mortgage refinancing boom could lead to a second savings and loan debacle if lenders aren't careful, chief regulator Timothy Ryan warned Monday. Ryan said Office of Thrift Supervision examiners will be closely watching S&Ls to make sure they do not load up too heavily on fixed-rate mortgages with low interest rates, setting themselves up for a replay of the disastrous 1980s when the market rebounds and rates increase.

SENATE NEARS FINAL VOTE ON RIGHTS BILL

Women and business groups simmered with anger over the bipartisan agreement on civil rights Monday as the Senate grappled with how to cover its own workers under the bill's job protections.... Women's groups fiercely opposed those limits [fixed dollar limitation on damages that could be awarded in cases of sexual discrimination], which Democrats said President Bush insisted on as a condition of agreeing to the compromise.

Rights Bill Will Apply To Branches

Senate leaders Monday night tentatively agreed to apply the pending civil rights bill to the Senate and White House officials.... The proposal would create a Senate office to field complaints of employee harassment and discrimination, according to senators and staffers familiar with the agreement. All Senate employees would be covered. For the first time all Senate employees could take their grievances to court.... White House employees -- including political employees -- and workers for state and local governments across the country also would be protected, but details of their appeals process were not released.

PRESIDENT'S POPULARITY IN U.S.
DROPS AS WORLDWIDE STATUS RISES

As he arrives in Madrid Tuesday to meet with President Gorbachev and to open the Mideast peace talks, President Bush is caught in a conflict of perceptions.

To the world, he is pre-eminent as the head of the lone superpower. But at home, he faces mounting doubts about his leadership.

A stagnant economy and declining approval ratings have broken Bush's aura of invincibility and given new hope to Democrats searching for a way to capture the White House after 12 years of uninterrupted Republican rule....

Paul Tully, political director of the DNC, said Bush is providing ammunition for Democrats trying to change the topic [from foreign affairs]. "The characteristics that people thought they saw in him during the Persian Gulf War -- get it done, effectiveness -- that President seems to have departed. He seems detached from the problems of people's lives," Tully said....

Significantly, Bush does worse in the polls when matched against a theoretical Democrat than when he is compared to a named opponent. Pitted against Governor Cuomo, for instance, Bush is favored by a wide 63-29 percent margin in the latest Gallup poll.

POLLS WON'T DRIVE BUSH OFF THE ROAD

MADRID -- ...Despite a cascade of polls indicating that Americans think he should buckle his Oval Office seat belt and pilot the nation's economic recovery, he has no plans to pocket his passport, according to senior Bush Administration officials.

"This is not a president who reacts to polls. This is not a president who panics," said a key Administration aide charged with watching the polls and suggesting changes to meet political demands.

BUSH SIGNS BILL FUNDING SPACE STATION

President Bush Monday signed legislation enabling NASA to move ahead with building the Space Station Freedom, which he called "an essential step in meeting our future space objectives." About $2 billion for the station was included in an $81 billion appropriations measure.

"Although it does not fully fund the Administration's request for civil space activities, the act provides the funds necessary to maintain a balanced and forward-looking space program," Bush said in a statement.

BUSH'S 'NEW' SCIENCE AWARDS MEAN FEWER GRANTS OVERALL
Other Program For Young Researchers Cut

At a Rose Garden ceremony last month to honor recipients of the National Medals of Science and Technology for their lifetime achievements, President Bush announced the creation of a program to support brilliant young researchers at the beginning of their careers.

Called the Presidential Faculty Fellows, the program would provide awards of $500,000 each to 30 youthful researchers....

According to Rep. Wolpe, the President and White House science adviser D. Allen Bromley are being "cavalier and deceptive." The White House is taking money from an existing program for young scientists to create its "new" and similar program. In the end, fewer young scientists will get money, though some will get larger cash awards.... Wolpe called the White House initiative "a shell game." "I do not consider this a shell game," Bromley said in an interview last week. "It's not the quantity we're after, but quality." The Bush initiative, however, does take its money from a similar awards program begun in 1983 by Ronald Reagan and called Presidential Young Investigators.... "There's no new money," said Terence Porter, division director for research career development at the National Science Foundation. Moreover, because there now will be two award programs for youthful scientists, Porter said, there will be more bureaucracy.

NEW POLICY COULD JEOPARDIZE PRAIRIE WETLANDS, BIOLOGISTS SAY

A poorly written policy could allow many of the wetlands in which the nation's wild ducks are hatched to lose their federal protection, environmentalists and government wildlife experts say.

The National Wildlife Federation predicts that 2 million acres of "prairie potholes" -- 36% of the glacier-scraped depressions that dot the plains from Minnesota to Montana -- could be opened to farming and development. "Prairie potholes are absolutely critical for ducks, and ducks are in catastrophic decline," said Clark Williams of the National Audubon Society.

He called the new wetlands policy "a complete abandonment...of valid scientific principles," a view shared by some scientists and government experts.

DEMOCRATS ASK BUSH TO BACK DUKE'S RIVAL

Declaring that Republicans hold the key to the Louisiana gubernatorial runoff, Democrats called on President Bush Monday to urge GOP voters to support David Duke's Democratic opponent.

At an unusual news conference held at DNC headquarters, Louisiana party Chairman James Brady urged Bush to instruct his state's Republican voters that a vote for the GOP state representative was "morally unacceptable.

But DNC political director Paul Tully went even further than that after the news conference, telling The Washington Times that the President's moral opposition to Duke's candidacy was not enough. He said Bush must urge his party to support Duke's opponent, former Governor Edwards.

NO SUPPORT FOR LONGER SCHOOL YEAR

Judging from past experiments, a longer school year is not popular with the public nor with state legislatures.

Parents do not want school to interfere with summer vacation plans, and adding even one extra day to the school year is expensive, said Chris Pipho, spokesman for the Education Commission of the States. (Carol Innerst, Washington Times, A9)

BUSH DERIDES DOONESBURY

President Bush, a regular target of ridicule by the Doonesbury comic strip, struck back Monday with a defense of his embattled domestic agenda.

Doonesbury has poked fun at the President's "points of light" volunteer program, describing it as a sham that seeks to coverup domestic failures....

Bush Monday, in a teleconference with the American Gas Association, blew off some steam at Doonesbury and praised Greg Petersmeyer, director of White House Office of Volunteerism, which heads up the "points of light" program.

The President said Petersmeyer has "been made famous by Doonesbury, if any of you inflict that upon yourself -- reading the cartoon." He added, "Greg has done a great job." (UPI)

PEACE CONFERENCE

ABC's Peter Jennings: Here in the Middle East tonight on the eve of the first peace conference to bring Israelis and Palestinians together, there has been almost predictable violence. In the Israeli occupied territories, a busload of Jewish settlers has been attacked. Two settlers were killed and five children were wounded. Israeli officials immediately blamed Palestinian extremists who are opposed to the peace conference. The settlers' bus was attacked after dark as it was on its way to a rally calling on the Israeli government not to give up any of the occupied territories during any negotiations. The bus was just passing a Jewish settlement on the West Bank, to which the Palestinians so object. The settlers came from two of the more militant settlements, where anti-Palestinian feelings will now run even higher. Previous attacks on Jews who live in the occupied territories have usually brought swift retaliation against Palestinians. As of tonight, the gunmen have not been found. The rally to which the settlers were headed this evening was another manifestation of pressure on the Israeli prime minister, who will lead the Israeli delegation to the peace conference in Madrid. There are many different Israeli voices wishing to be heard.

ABC's Dean Reynolds reports a big, emotional and outspoken crowd was at the rally.

(Israeli settler: "The territories that we have now are the borders, the secure borders of Israel. Maybe they should even be bigger, but certainly, there's nothing to give back, nothing really to discuss.")

The rally took place in the same site where 48 hours earlier, some Israelis called for a compromise.

(Israeli settler: "We cannot shut our eyes and keep on believing there's more chance of peace without us giving up also something.")

The polls say most Israelis believe Israel is right to go to Madrid. But beyond that, the polls show that almost everyone is worried about the price that may have to be paid for peace.

(ABC-Lead)

Jennings reports someone today set fire to the American cultural center in Jerusalem, in the name of an extreme Israeli group. The Palestinians who have gone to Madrid have been threatened by other Palestinians. And in Amman, Jordanians opposed to the conference held a rally that ended in a brief riot.

ABC's Sheila MacVicar reports members of Jordan's security force infiltrated the hall before the rally and began showing their support for King Hussein. As one side tried to shout down the other and as rally organizers tried to calm their supporters, someone started to throw chairs and a riot ensued. Diplomats in Amman say King Hussein is counting on his personal popularity to sell any deal that might come from Madrid. But many say they will never accept any bargain.

Jennings reports Yasser Arafat today said the conference could be, in his words, the first stone in building a just and durable peace.

ABC's John McWethy reports the Jordanian-Palestinian delegation was the first to arrive in Madrid. They were in a buoyant mood. They carried olive branches and told their chanting supporters that they were optimistic.

(Faisal Hussein, Palestinian delegate: "We will start with open hearts, open minds and make everything on peace.")

Each delegation will have 45 minutes for opening remarks, but the U.S. is giving the Jordanian-Palestinian delegation twice that much. The Israelis don't like it.

(Minister Olmert: "There is one delegation. One delegation means one speech.")

The U.S. and Soviet Union are dictating terms to avoid haggling over such details. Security in Madrid is getting tighter: 12,000 police and soldiers patrol nearly every intersection. In Turkey today, terrorists killed an American serviceman and wounded an Egyptian diplomat. (ABC-3)

Jennings reports the leaders of 20 Israeli settlements below the Golan Heights petitioned the government not to return an inch. (ABC-10)

NBC's Tom Brokaw: Is this the week that we'll look back and say: It was the beginning of peace in the Middle East? That would be a welcome change, but tonight we have bloody reminders of the difficulties ahead. As Arabs and Israelis prepared for their unprecedented meeting in Madrid, more terrorist attacks.

NBC's Martin Fletcher reports Prime Minister Shamir tonight took great care to portray himself as ready to negotiate about anything. Shamir said that to absorb the immigration of Soviet Jews, Israel needs peace. The Arabs also are tired of war, he said.

(Prime Minister Shamir: "I think that the Arab mass, and especially Palestinians, have enough of it. They are fed up with it, and it's time to make a change -- a revolutionary change -- to make peace.")

(Reporter: "Will you trade land for peace?"

Shamir: "We believe and are convinced it belongs to us since thousands of years, and maybe the Palestinians believe the same. Then let us negotiate how to settle it, how to find a way to avoid war."

Reporter: "Will you freeze settlements?"

Shamir: "We will not accept any preconditions. They can raise whatever they wish on that agenda of the talks, of the negotiations. But we will not accept any preconditions."

Reporter: "You're indicating in a way, unless I misunderstand you, that everything is negotiable -- land, settlements. Does that suggest that you would give up land, bring the settlers back?"

Shamir: "Everything could be brought on the table of negotiations. It doesn't mean that you will give up these [inaudible]. We have to find out that the Arabs are no more interested in our destruction, that they recognize our independence and right to exist. This is the subject No. 1.")

Shamir didn't say yes, but for once he didn't say no, either, leaving open the possibility of compromise in the peace talks.

(NBC-Lead)

NBC's Tom Cochran: This may be Europe, but the conference is all about the Mideast, which has a habit of inflicting its problems on the rest of the world. Spanish authorities have responded with the biggest security net ever seen here -- 14,000 security personnel, many at the conference site, the Royal Palace, where they reportedly suspect terrorists may try to bomb the sewer directly under the talks. In Ankara, Turkey, extremists opposed to the peace conference claimed responsibility for two bombs killing an American serviceman and seriously wounding an Egyptian diplomat. In Madrid, amid much nervousness, the first of the principle players arrived -- the joint delegation of Jordanians and Palestinians. They brought olive branches, a symbol of peace, which gives the Palestinians an early lead in what skeptics predict will be a battle of photo opportunities. Already, squabbling has begun, Israel complaining that these Palestinians are demanding too much time for their opening speech on Thursday. And Jewish settlers from the West Bank are here, condemning the conference before it starts.

(Yisrael Medad, settler: "This conference is not about peace. This conference is about forcing Israel to give up territories, which are part of its historical land and very necessary for its own security.")

Israel's ambassador to the U.S. blamed a Palestinian adviser for calling for more violence last weekend.

(Amb. Shoval: "And maybe what we saw in Israel today -- the murder of two civilians and the wounding of several others -- is the result of that appeal.")

But Palestinian delegates blamed Jewish settlers for creating a violent atmosphere.

(Hanaan Ashrawi, Palestinian leader: "I think violence begets violence. That violence has created a sense of insecurity and fear, and the actions to extreme statements and extreme positions will be extreme.")

One thing this peace conference has going for it is low expectations. No one expects quick results. It's like that old line about the talking dog: What he says may not be remarkable. What's remarkable is that he's talking at all. (NBC-2)

CBS's Dan Rather: The Spanish Royal Palace -- site of the historic Middle East conference opening this Wednesday. As delegates began arriving here today, there was a deadly burst of gunfire in the land at the very heart of the conflict. In the Israeli-occupied West Bank of the Jordan River, attackers opened fire with machine guns on a bus carrying Jewish settlers. At least two people were killed, six wounded.

CBS's Bert Quint reports on the attack.

(Ehud Gol, Israeli spokesman: "It's an indication to the will of some Arab terrorists to sabotage the peace process.") (CBS-Lead)

CBS's Bob Simon reports every survey shows a majority of Israelis would be willing to give up land in exchange for a real peace.

(Rabbi Matis Weinberg: "If we could get someone to actually stand up and say, I enact this conference because I believe wholeheartedly in peace, then I think that you would have the response here in the population that would be exactly the same as what happened with Sadat. I don't see that happening yet.")

Reynolds continues:

Many Israelis fear they are losing their greatest ally in the U.S. (Harry Wall, Anti-Defamation League: "The Americans haven't said lately what the Israelis got used to hearing: We love you, you're a strategic ally. Lately, there's been quite a different sound coming out of Washington.") (CBS-2)

PEACE CONFERENCE/ARAFAT

CBS's Doug Tunnell reports the PLO is planning to dispatch three senior officials to Madrid for the opening of the conference. The men will act as the steering committee for the Palestinian advisory group. The idea is one more way the PLO hopes to exert its influence during the Madrid conference. All three men are said to be extremely close to Yasser Arafat.

(Arafat: "[Inaudible] over the history that one party cannot have the right to maim the other side's delegation. Schwarzkopf didn't dictate the Iraqi delegation and McArthur didn't dictate the Japanese delegation. It is only the Israelis who are putting condition and trying to defeat the Palestinian delegation.")

Reporter: "If the Israelis agree to freeze settlements in the occupied territories, there would be a reduction of strife of the Intifada, do you agree? Is this possible?"

Arafat: "In my opinion, the end of the occupation [inaudible] to end any kind of violence from the two sides."

Reporter: "A freeze isn't enough?"

Arafat: "No, because the settlements -- they are illegal, I think.")

In Tunis, the PLO's message is: The true face behind the Palestinian veil in Madrid is really Arafat's. (CBS-3)

PEACE CONFERENCE/SOVIET UNION

Brokaw: When President Bush leaves for Madrid tonight, he'll have more than the Middle East on his mind. He's also meeting with Mikhail Gorbachev and sizing up the Soviet president's power and agenda in this time after the coup in Moscow.

NBC's Bob Abernethy reports a spokesman thinks Gorbachev can be a peacemaker among the Soviet republics.

(Spokesman Malashenko: "In this respect, I do believe his role is indispensable. Yes, I would refer to this role as a role of a great coordinator.")

(TV coverage: President Bush and Gorbachev at summit.)

When the two men talk tomorrow, Gorbachev will report on his country's disintegration. He'll try to reassure Bush that Soviet nuclear weapons remain under careful control. And with winter arrived and the Soviet economy in chaos, Gorbachev is expected to ask for specific economic aid. In spite of their disarray, the Soviets intend to work hard in Madrid.

(Malashenko: "I tend to believe that this conference may be just a prelude to a new and quite active role of the Soviet Union in the Middle East.")

Especially on an occasion such as this, Gorbachev now seems a tragic figure, a man who changed the world but lost his country.

(NBC-3)

Rather: President Bush will sit down with Gorbachev in Madrid tomorrow. But this time, the image makers are deliberately not calling it a summit.

CBS's Susan Spencer: A schmooze was how one Administration official jokingly described tomorrow's two-hour lunch with Gorbachev, whom the President hasn't seen since the failed August coup.

(TV coverage: President Bush and Gorbachev at 1990 summit.)

(Michael Mandelbaum, Council on Foreign Relations: "Mr. Gorbachev arrives in Madrid a much-diminished figure. In fact, President Bush is doing him a favor by inviting him and by consorting with him as if he were still the head of a superpower.")

Mr. Bush has made it clear that the agenda is wide open.

(President Bush: "And I'll be prepared to discuss nuclear weapons, to discuss their economy and ours. I'll be prepared to discuss anything that he's interested in.")

What Gorbachev may be most interested in is more support for the devastated Soviet economy. The U.S. has helped the Soviets to buy food to the tune of $2.5 billion this year. But with winter approaching, they have asked for a $3.5 billion more. And Gorbachev may try to nudge Mr. Bush further on nuclear arms. The Soviets want a total test ban. Finally, there's the problem of weapons in the feuding republics.

(Madeline Albright, analyst: "Mr. Bush and Mr. Gorbachev have something in common, which is that they want to control the spread of what was previously the Soviet nuclear weapons.")

(Mandelbaum: "President Bush is going to make it clear that on nuclear weapons, he will deal with Mr. Gorbachev and Mr. Gorbachev alone. This is intended to send a signal to the leaders of the other republics, who might be interested in going into the nuclear business for themselves.")

President Bush is not interested in going into any of this to make deals. He's rather trying to renew a friendship and to thank the Soviets for what American officials say really was a crucial role in getting this rickety peace conference off the ground.

Rather discusses the issue with Spencer:

Rather: How can that be? Gorbachev is in disarray at home.

Spencer: Despite that, the American side says that the Soviets still have enormous influence with the Syrians and the Palestinians, and that they were very instrumental in preventing them from viewing this as a strictly American-Israeli show.

(CBS-7)

SOVIET UNION/YELTSIN

ABC's Walter Rogers reports President Yeltsin today presented the Russian parliament with a proposal that would move the country to an open market economy within a year. He said the switch would be extremely painful.

(Yeltsin: "At first, our standard of living will drop, but we will get out of this by the autumn of 1992.")

Soviet economists worry a switch will be too tough for many Russians to swallow.

(Viktor Kremenuk, economist: "What's going to happen in this country is revolution -- another revolution.")

(ABC-9)

CBS's Anthony Mason reports that prices are expected to soar as much as 10 times on some items.

(Borger, Stankevich, adviser: "We already tried all other possibilities. This way out is the only step left, and I hope that the people will believe in Yeltsin.")

To save money, Yeltsin said Russia would stop funding the Soviet Union's central ministry. The foreign ministry would be reduced to a coordinating body for the 12 republics. Its spokesman seemed stunned.

(Vitaly Churkin, foreign ministry: "I, for one, cannot see one country with 12 foreign policies. I don't think it's simply, I don't think it can exist.")

(Stephen Cohen: "With or without a union, Russia has been and will be a very great power in world affairs. Any attempt to exclude Russia from fundamental international decisions would be impossible and it would be a mistake.")

(CBS-5)

ECONOMY/GREENSPAN

ABC's Diane Sawyer reports Chairman Greenspan today said the economy has turned demonstrably sluggish. That raised some hopes on Wall Street that the Fed might lower interest rates again.

(ABC-7)

ECONOMY/JOB

NBC's Mike Jensen reports that among the hottest jobs are in physical therapy, recycling and small specialty businesses. And the nation's securities firms have hired 6,000 new employees in recent months. So even though most of the nation still is in the doldrums, there are jobs to be had, many of them requiring special training.

(NBC-11)

DRUG WAR

CBS's Harold Dow reports on the war against drugs.

(President Bush, at inaugural: "Drugs. It may as well have been a deadly bacteria so much as it hurts the body, the soul of our country. Take my word for it, this scourge will stop.")

Despite President Bush's promise to wage and win the war on drugs, 5 million Americans are addicted to hard-core drugs. In recent months, the President and Gov. Martinez have been sending out a positive message, a message that America is --

(President Bush: "Waging a drug war that is making dramatic headway.")

Statistics coming out of Washington suggest that drug use may be declining. But crack cocaine has come to Chicago with a vengeance, and its arrival there has coincided with the highest murder rate in city history.

(Robert Bryden, DEA: "We see and we're very concerned about an increase in the use of heroine in New York City.")

Reporter: "Who are the players in this game and where are the drugs coming from?"

Bryden: "At the upper level, it's the Southeast Asian people that are the connection for the Southeast Asian heroin in New York today."

(President Bush: "I think America is making progress against drugs and will continue to do so.")

(CBS-7)

TRANSPORTATION/FUEL ECONOMY

Sawyer reports the U.S. government today was accused of deliberately misleading the public on behalf of the American auto industry. According to its accusers, the Transportation Department is helping the carmakers avoid improving the mileage on their cars.

ABC's Ned Potter reports the controversy surrounds a crash test used to persuade people that smaller, more fuel efficient cars are less safe. Auto safety groups charge that other tests show the small cars protecting passengers better than the big ones. Consumer groups today accused Jerry Curry, head of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, of changing the cars and procedures of the tests until they proved the auto industry's point.

(Clarence Ditlow, Center for Auto Safety: "These crashes were not selected by NHTSA staff for scientific purposes, but were selected by Administrator Curry for political purposes.")

Curry said the tests were absolutely honest.

(Curry: "There is no way in the world that small cars are going to do better than large cars, and there's no way in the world the American public can watch this film -- or Congress -- and conclude anything other than that.")

The auto industry and the White House oppose a bill by Sen. Bryan, who wants carmakers to improve fuel efficiency 40 percent.

(Sen. Bryan: "These tests are being rigged and manipulated to be given to the auto industry to help them in their argument against this legislation.")

Fuel economy will be a bruising battle in the Senate, with both sides saying the arguments are based more on politics than on facts.

(NBC-4, ABC-4)

THOMAS HEARINGS/SEN. SIMPSON

NBC's Andrea Mitchell reports Sen. Simpson has told a Wyoming audience he is sorry for his recent behavior.

(Sen. Simpson: "For it has been personally uncomfortable to see your good name equated with McCarthy, sleaze. But then you realize you've been a bit cocky, sure, arrogance, sure, that can happen, and too smart by half sometimes, and you can get riding pretty high around this town.")

He'd been hearing from friends and family that he might have gone too far in his efforts to discredit Anita Hill. Possibly, he had even offended the First Lady at his wife's birthday party.

(Simpson: "I said that I never dreamed when I was 22 I'd be sleeping with a 60-year-old woman and enjoying it just as much, to which the First Lady said: Oh, come on, Alan, you old silly.") Finally, Simpson's wife told him it was time to deal with the critics.

(Simpson: "I guess I need some sensitivity training or whatever, and I'll be listening. I'll sure shape up.")

Volume 27, Number 167

Today in Congress

Senate Floor: Members plan to continue work on the civil rights bill (S 1745) today following nearly a full day yesterday of negotiations between leaders on how to proceed with a number of amendments to the bill.

Motor Voter. Members may also vote to limit debate on a motion to proceed to the so-called motor voter bill (S 250), which aims to make it easier for citizens to register to vote.

The bill would require states to allow voters to register at the same time they apply for a driver's license, a marriage license or other public certificate.

Supporters of S 250 in July were unable, on two attempts, to invoke cloture and proceed to the bill.

House Floor: The House today is scheduled to take up a bill (HR 3543) that would provide supplemental fiscal 1992 funding for the costs of the Persian Gulf War and emergency assistance for farmers and domestic disasters.

The $5.8 billion measure would provide $3.3 billion for Operation Desert Shield/Desert Storm and $1.75 billion for aid to farmers and ranchers. The long-delayed measure was pulled off the schedule last week over renewed veto threats and the likelihood that several costly amendments would be offered.

Appropriations Committee Chairman Jamie L. Whitten, D-Miss., may offer an amendment to add between $250 million and $400 million to the $693 million already in the bill for disaster relief. The recent fire in Oakland, Calif., has raised the costs of disaster cleanup and relief efforts.

Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., is expected to offer an amendment that would add $1.39 billion to the bill for several nutrition and education initiatives, including the Women, Infants and Children supplemental feeding program.

Foreign Aid. The House is also expected to take up the conference report on a $25 billion authorization bill (HR 2508) for foreign aid. The agreement has been languishing for a month while Democratic leaders try to round up the votes to pass it.

In light of the U.S. recession, lawmakers have been reluctant to pass a measure that authorizes billions of dollars to be spent on overseas programs. The measure also faces a veto threat by President Bush over, among other things, abortion language.

Export Controls. Legislation (HR 3489) that would ease restrictions on the export of sensitive U.S. technology to the Soviet Union will also be debated today.

The 1979 Export Administration Act would be reauthorized through March 1, 1993, and would be revised to reflect the changes sweeping the formerly communist Eastern bloc.

Labor-HHS Spending. Conferees on the fiscal 1992 spending bill (HR 2707) for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services (HHS), and Education will meet today in their third week of negotiations on the $204 billion bill.

The conference is in a quandary over how to make cuts of about $350 million. The negotiators initially exceeded their budget allocation because they couldn't decide whether to cut back on health or education programs — and so did neither.

Last week, House conferees proposed reducing funding, for a total of $325 million, for three programs: child-care grants to states; the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program; and the Alcohol, Drug Abuse, and Mental Health Block Grant.

But Senate negotiators opposed cutting the specific programs and proposed instead to cut all discretionary programs by 1.4 percent.

Conferees are also faced with a dilemma over women's health programs. Last week they agreed to add language to

Hill News

HOUSE FLOOR: Disability prevention bill wins passage.

Legislation (HR 3401) that would reauthorize a federal program aimed at preventing disabilities won voice vote approval in the House yesterday.

Under the five-year measure, states would get grants to develop disability-prevention programs.

Named after the late Silvio O. Conte, R-Mass., who pushed a similar bill last year, the measure would authorize $15 million for the program for fiscal 1992 and $20 million in 1993. The program received $10 million in fiscal 1991.

• Members also passed, by voice vote, a measure (HR 2896) that would expand the Minute Man Historical Park in Massachusetts by about 200 acres.

Generic Drugs. Generic drug companies that have been convicted of fraud could face $1 million fines under a bill (HR 2454) debated by the House yesterday.

Lawmakers will vote today on the measure, which was introduced after an Energy and Commerce Committee investigation uncovered evidence that companies were offering bribes and making false statements on applications to make generic drugs, which are copies of brand-name drugs whose patents have expired.

SENATE FLOOR: Lawmakers parley on plan for civil rights bill.

Senate leaders spent almost the entire day yesterday trying to work out a plan for floor consideration of a civil rights measure (S 1745) that would overturn a number of Supreme Court rulings to make it easier for women and minorities to win employee discrimination lawsuits.

Consideration of the bill follows a major compromise reached late last week between the administration and Senate leaders from both parties.

Members planned to take up the compromise language yesterday that would, among other things, prohibit an employer from making employment decisions based in any way on race, color, religion, sex or national origin. It also would bar the adjustment, or "norming," of test scores by racial or other classifications.

The compromise language also includes protections against sexual and racial harassment on the job and would place caps on compensatory and punitive damages being sought by women and minorities in discrimination cases.

At press time, leaders were negotiating on how to proceed with a number of amendments, including one that would remove the caps on damages and one that would make harassment laws applicable to congressional offices.

Status of Major Legislation

102nd Congress

(as of Oct. 28, 1991)

Bill and Background	House	Senate	Final
Banking Overhaul. (HR 6, S 543) The bills aim to restructure the banking industry and overhaul the federal bank deposit insurance system. The bills would allow the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation to borrow additional funds to cover bank failures and would impose new requirements on the way failures are handled. Both bills would grant banks new investment and interstate branching powers, although the Senate measure and the House Energy version of the measure are both more restrictive than the House Banking bill.	Banking approved HR 6 6/28/91 Energy and Commerce, Ways and Means, Agriculture approved HR 6 9/25/91 Judiciary approved HR 6 10/3/91	Banking approved S 543 8/2/91
Campaign Finance. (S 3) The bill would set voluntary limits, on a state-by-state basis, on how much a candidate could spend on Senate elections and provide public funding and other benefits to those who comply.		S 3 passed 5/23/91
Civil Rights. (HR 1, S 1745) The bills would refine and strengthen key job anti-discrimination laws for women and religious minorities as well as blacks, mainly by reversing six recent Supreme Court decisions and by expanding Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act. The Senate bill is a compromise negotiated by key senators and the White House. President Bush has threatened to veto the House version of the bill.	HR 1 passed 6/5/91	Floor action began 10/22/91
Crime Bill. (S 1241, HR 3371) The omnibus crime package would broaden the federal death penalty to an estimated 50 crimes, restrict death row inmate appeals and allow prosecutors to use evidence obtained in violation of defendants' rights. The Senate measure also includes provisions requiring a five-day waiting period before a handgun could be purchased.	HR 3371 passed 10/22/91	S 1241 passed 7/11/91
Defense Authorization. (HR 2100, S 1507) The bills would authorize a $291 billion defense budget for fiscal 1992, the same as the president requested. The House bill would block production of more B-2 bombers and end research on Brilliant Pebbles space-based weapons. The Senate bill would authorize $3.2 billion for four additional B-2 bombers, as sought by the president. The Senate measure would authorize the deployment of a ground-based anti-missile system by 1996, while providing funds for the development of space-based interceptors in the long run.	HR 2100 passed 5/22/91	S 1507 passed as HR 2100 8/2/91	Conference began 9/17/91
Family and Medical Leave. (HR 2, S 5) The bills would require businesses and the federal government to give workers unpaid leave to care for newborns or ill relatives. President Bush vetoed similar legislation in 1990.	Post Office, Civil Service approved HR 2 3/13/91 Education and Labor approved HR 2 3/20/91	S 5 passed 10/2/91
Gun Control. (HR 7) The Brady bill would require a seven-day waiting period for handgun purchases. The measure is named after former White House press secretary James S. Brady, who was critically wounded in 1981 during the assassination attempt on President Ronald Reagan. Different waiting period provisions are included in the Senate crime bill (S 1241).	HR 7 passed 5/8/91	Variation of HR 7 incorporated in S 1241
Highway Bill. (HR 3566, S 1204) Both measures, which reauthorize highway and mass transit programs, create a national highway system and allow states more flexibility in using federal transportation funds. The five-year Senate bill would authorize $123 billion. The six-year House bill would authorize $151 billion, including funds for 489 special "demonstration" projects. The House bill would extend a 2.5 cent-per-gallon federal gas tax that is due to expire after fiscal 1995.	HR 3566 passed 10/23/91	S 1204 passed 6/19/91
National Energy Policy. (S 1220) The bill seeks to define a comprehensive energy strategy in the aftermath of the Persian Gulf War. Major points covered include fuel-efficiency standards for automobiles, drilling in Alaska's Arctic National Wildlife Refuge, regulation of electricity and nuclear power, and alternative fuel mandates.	Energy subcommittee began markup of draft legislation 7/17/91	Energy approved S 1220 5/23/91
Striker Replacement. (HR 5, S 55) The bills would prohibit hiring permanent replacements for striking workers — if the strike was by union-represented employees. This is a top priority for organized labor, but the bill faces a veto threat by the Bush administration.	HR 5 passed 7/17/91	Labor approved S 55 6/19/91

the conference report stating that the National Institutes of Health's National Cancer Institute should make "breast, cervical, ovarian and prostate cancer their top priorities and treat these diseases with the utmost urgency."

But the language does not include specific funding figures, which angers a group of women House members. They have been making visits to the conference arguing for $50 million for breast cancer research and $30 million for ovarian cancer studies.

Honoraria Ban: Legislation that would lift the honoraria ban for most rank-and-file federal workers will be marked up by the House Judiciary Committee.

Part of the Ethics Reform Act of 1989, the ban prevents all federal workers from collecting writing or speaking fees, even for work in subjects that are unrelated to their official duties.

The bill (HR 3341) would allow all career employees as well as those non-career workers who earn $101,000 or less to accept a fee of up to $2,000 for a speech or article.

The measure would also relax the rules prohibiting former senior government officials from lobbying their colleagues for one year after leaving office. Such lobbying would be permitted if the former official was working on behalf of a political candidate or party.

Lead Exposure: A bill aimed at reducing human exposure to hazardous lead will be marked up by the House Energy and Commerce Subcommittee on Health and the Environment.

The bill (HR 2840) would tighten regulations governing the amount of lead that can be contained in drinking water. It also would require lead inspections for homes and apartments before they are sold and the testing of schools and day-care centers for lead paint and lead-contaminated drinking water.

Lead can be poisonous even at very low levels and can cause developmental disabilities in children. The most common sources of lead are chips of lead-based paint and lead in drinking water (from pipes and solder).

Municipal water suppliers and real estate agents object to certain provisions in the bill and amendments are likely either today or at the full committee markup. Officials of municipal water utilities particularly object to provisions that would require stricter contamination standards, requiring timely replacement of lead pipe.

Real estate salesmen object to language requiring homes and apartments to be tested for lead before they are sold or rented. Bill Richardson, D-N.M., might offer an amendment that would instead require owners to disclose whether they know if a dwelling has lead hazards.

'October Surprise' The Senate Foreign Relations Committee will try once again to reach agreement on how to pursue its investigation of the so-called "October surprise."

The panel will take up a resolution (S Res 198) that would give additional funds and investigative authority to the subcommittee, which is conducting an investigation into allegations that officials of the 1980 Reagan presidential campaign tried to delay the release of U.S. hostages held in Iran until after the November election.

Partisan bickering over the length of the probe and the amount of funds needed by the Near Eastern and South Asian Affairs Subcommittee for its work, prevented the panel from approving the resolution at its markup last week.

Terry Sanford, D-N.C., chairman of the Near Eastern Subcommittee, and James M. Jeffords, Vt., the ranking Republican, have drawn up a two-page document setting forth the ground rules for the probe. The two agreed that the hearings will not be open to the public and that all decisions regarding the inquiry will be made in a bipartisan fashion by both Sanford and Jeffords. ■

Committee Meetings Today

Senate Committees

■ SOYBEAN STANDARDS

Know When To Say "YES!"

Be decisive. Take charge.

Push aside the phone messages and the paperwork. Spend one day this year to prepare for 1992 and beyond.

Register to attend Congressional Quarterly's Election '92 conference where an impressive line-up of speakers will share in-depth information and challenge you to focus on the '92 presidential and congressional elections.

CQ's Election '92 conference is where you need to be if you're thinking about supporting a candidate, helping to raise campaign money, polling the electorate or pushing an issue agenda.

You'll hear from political commentator Mark Shields...surprise 1990 winners

Reps. Joan Kelly Horn and Scott Klug... political consultants Linda DiVall, Peter Fenn, Harrison Hickman and Don Sipple...Jeb Hensarling of the NRSC and Leslie Francis of the DCCC...political analysts Charles Cook and Michael Barone...executive editor of Governing Alan Ehrenhalt...CQ deputy political editor Ron Elving...CQ's political reporting staff...and more.

CQ's Election '92 conference will be held from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Tuesday, November 12 at the Holiday Inn Crowne Plaza, corner of 12th and H Streets, NW, at Metro Center.

Don't delay! A simple "yes" will put you a step ahead of your clients and colleagues.

*1 CUOMO: PUTTING PRESSURE ON RON BROWN

DNC chair Ron Brown "urged Mario Cuomo to decide within 10 days whether he wants to enter the presidential fray" (Bennett Roth, HOUSTON CHRONICLE). Brown said the party "needs to know by the first week of November" whether Cuomo plans to run: "Whatever decision he makes he needs to reach it soon. I expect him to come to some conclusion in the next week or so" (10/29). "Brown is under intense pressure from other camps to get Cuomo to make up his mind. As much as the recession is souring public opinion on the Bush administration, it is also making fund-raising for [Dem] presidential candidates even harder" (Douglas Turner, BUFFALO NEWS, 10/29). "Cuomo's recent statement suggesting that if ... Ron Brown told him he 'could best serve' the party by running he would 'have no choice,' is read by some as a call for Brown to anoint him. That, however, is not going to happen, now that there are six other major [Dems] in the race" (Germond/Witcover, Balto. EVENING SUN, 10/28). N.Y. NEWSDAY cites sources that say the "Dem inner circle has already decided" Cuomo will "easily whip Jerry Brown, Tom Harkin and the other primary candidates ... And they've come up with a strategy involving" Kerrey as "Cuomo's running mate." The strategy involves Cuomo's standing in the south. The "source": "Cuomo's afraid he won't do well in non-urban areas. So when Ron Brown meets with Cuomo soon, he'll help the governor make up his mind by suggesting Cuomo campaign only in urban areas while Kerrey campaigns in the Deep South, where he'll be more acceptable." DNC officials deny the report (10/27).

IN HIS HEART, HE KNOWS HE MIGHT: He told a Long Island cable TV station 10/28 "his heart is telling him to go for it" (Lombardi/Benenson, N.Y. DAILY NEWS). Cuomo: "What does my heart tell me? Go out and tell them, Mario. Take your best shot, whether you win, lose, or draw. But don't finish this game until you've taken your best shot." But he said "his head is telling him: 'How do you do that and do the right thing as governor. I'm working on my head at the moment'" (10/29). N.Y. TIMES' Sam Hoew Verhovek: "Cuomo spared comment about any other parts of his anatomy, including whether he had the requisite fire in the belly" (10/29).

ABANDONMENT FACTOR: "While the state's financial problems are serious, they can't be used against a Cuomo presidential effort without drawing attention to the way the White House has butchered the economy over the last decade. Bush is living in a glass house on that one" (Turner, BUFFALO NEWS, 10/29). Germond & Witcover write Cuomo "is overstating his problem" concerning governing NY and running at the same time. "First, his popularity in the party and name [ID] would make him, if he ran, the immediate front-runner ... With his proven fund-raising ability in a big money state, he wouldn't have to beg for campaign nickels and dimes. Nor would he have to slog through the early primary states getting known, although he couldn't be so scarce as to seem to be snubbing the locals." The 2/18 NH primary and 2/23 ME caucuses "are only a hop, skip and jump from Albany. ... If Cuomo really wants to seek the presidency, there are plenty of rationales for him to do so without having to abandon [NY]" (10/28). N.Y. NEWSDAY subhead: "The state's budget mess and the city's image problems could derail a bid for White House." Cuomo adviser Meyer Frucher: "What the governor would have to do is convince the country that [NY] is like [CA], like [MA], like the Southwest and the Southeast: a victim of national trends and federal abandonment" (10/27).

TWO VIEWS: DAILY NEWS' Lombardi & Benenson: "Nearly all Cuomo's closest advisers speculate that he won't run" (10/29). CHICAGO TRIBUNE's Steve Daley cites "growing speculation that the enigmatic governor of New York will soon declare for the presidency" (10/28).

*2 KERREY: FUNDS FROM BIG FOUR TO FINANCE NH EFFORT

He campaigned in FL and CA last week and will be in TX and NY this week, "but his efforts are aimed straight at [NH]" (David Kotok, OMAHA WORLD-HERALD). According to Kerrey chair Bill Hoppner, the four large states are "critical to Kerrey's effort" to win NH and beyond: "We must be prepared for success." The campaign "is trying to preserve its financial resources to finance a complete [NH] campaign and have money left over for subsequent primaries. That strategy took Kerrey to [NY] for a fund-raising effort in the financial community Monday." Kerrey's plans "were not changed" by speculation Cuomo will run. "One Kerrey adviser said [NY] remains a strong fund-raising area for Kerrey. Kerrey has long-standing personal contacts in [NY], he said, and there is a significant pool of anti-Cuomo money." Hoppner said TX, where Kerrey will be today through 10/31, is "key in two ways. It is an important source of money and it is the big prize" of the 3/10 Super Tuesday primaries. TX Dem chair Bob Slagle called Kerrey "a major topic of conversation" at weekend Dem meetings. Slagle did say Clinton "has the most contacts" in TX, both from being governor of a neighboring state and Clinton's position as TX manager for McGovern in '72, but added, "It's not an overwhelming advantage." He hopes to meet with Kerrey 10/30. Kerrey is also tentatively scheduled to meet with Gov. Richards (10/29). NE supporters are sending personal letters to 800 delegates to NH's 11/2 state convention in an "adopt-a-delegate" program, "similar to what [GA] supporters" did for Carter in '76 (AP/LINCOLN JOURNAL, 10/27).

HANDLE WITH CARE: Kerrey "says he is determined to resist the pressures of being 'handled' by tacticians or pollsters who might want him to give voice to a carefully crafted message that is not his own" (Don Walton, LINCOLN JOURNAL-STAR). On criticism he needs to be "more specific on issues," Kerrey "says it's 'a taunt (that) does not hold up under examination'": "I'm on record in every area that matters, although I may have to pull those things together better now." He added "the importance of specifics ought to be viewed in perspective": "Today's specifics will be gone four, three and two years from now. I believe people really need to get some sense of who you are -- what your values are." On facing Cuomo: "If I can't beat Cuomo, I can't beat George Bush" (10/27).

*3 WILDER: STAKES OUT GROUND ON RIGHTS, SMOG, SCHOOL YEAR

He said the civil rights bill "should be changed to remove a cap on damages for victims of sexual discrimination" (Jean McNair, AP/Fairfax JOURNAL). In a letter to Dem senators and DNC chair Ron Brown, he said Bush's agreement to sign the bill "is only a temporary strategic retreat" from GOP "phony, racial quota politics ... [Bush] wants Democrats to accept a version of that famous Orwellian dictum: all victims of discrimination are equal, but in the eyes of the law, some ... are less equal than others." He is the first of the 6 declared candidates "to make an issue of the cap" (10/29).

CHECK YOUR EMISSIONS, GOVERNOR? He proposed "requiring that all new cars registred in Northern Virginia meet California's tougher tailpipe pollution standards." Cleaner cars "would cost an extra $70 to $500, burn more fuel, and have worse performance compared with vehicles now sold." But officials said the cars "would make a significant dent in the area's serious problem with smog ... drivers displayed mixed reaction to [his] proposal yesterday, some calling it a cynical political ploy in his presidential campaign, but others saying they are willing to do their part to reduce smog" (Cohn, WASH. POST, 10/29).

BACK TO SCHOOL: Wilder also will propose to the VA Bd of Education 10/30 that VA children "go to school on a year-round schedule" -- 200 days instead of the current 180 -- as "part of what he has dubbed a 'world-class education plan' that includes a 'common core of learning' for all students, 'not just the elite, but every child.'" The idea "drew mixed reaction from educators and politicians, many of whom said it might be a good idea, but too costly" (Baker, WASH. POST, 10/29). WASH. TIMES lead: Wilder "wants to extend the school year by four weeks, a proposal that could cost $450 million annually at a time when [VA's] public education system is already strapped for cash" (10/29).

*4 JACKSON: THE OTHER SILENT PARTNER

His supporters "offer this reminder: [Cuomo] is not the only figure who could transform the Democratic contest overnight" (Adam Pertman, BOSTON GLOBE). While speculation has focused recently on Cuomo, "Jackson has been weighing his own decision -- and may announce it as early as this weekend. There have been early indications that he will not run, although he has told some allies that he believes he could win the party's nomination." But "the risks could be so high that even the lure of victory may not be sufficient." Dem analyst Bob Beckel "said Jackson would retain the most clout by not running, because three straight losses -- no matter how many votes he got -- would hurt him within the party, among his core supporters and in his ability to raise money." Ex-Jackson aide Donna Brazile said she counseled him "not to run because the odds of anyone beating Bush are too high." But she "strongly disagreed with the notion that Jackson would lose many previous backers if he entered": "It's insulting to say that if Jesse enters the race, the party's divided. Jesse's on the sidelines now and the party's just as divided as ever" (10/29). Jackson on David Duke: "Duke represents to Bush embarrassment but not shame. Bush couldn't be ashamed because he does the same thing ... The difference between Bush and Duke is this: Bush is more frightening because he has more power and he is more deceptive ... If I were elected president, I would decide that the very first thing we need is a domestic summit on racial injustice" (GLOBE, 10/28).

*5 BROWN: TAKING ON THE MODERATES

He traveled to Denver "vowing to return government to the people and ruffle some feathers along the way" (Steve Lipsher, DENVER POST). In an interview previewing his three 10/28 Denver appearances, Brown "reiterated his campaign themes of establishing a strong domestic policy and promising not to bow to big money interests by limiting all supporters to $100 contributions" (10/28). He spoke before the Business and Economics Council downtown and at the Auraria student union of the evils of the campaign "money chase" (DENVER POST, 10/29). He vigorously attacked fellow [Dems] who think they can win by becoming 'aggressive moderates': "It offends my Jesuit-educated mind to talk about an 'aggressive moderate' candidacy. It borders on oxymoron. . . . ["More or less paraphrasing Revelations 3:16"] You are neither hot nor cold so I vomited you out of my mouth. That's what I say about moderates. There's no greater vice in the spiritual life than tepidity" (ROCKY MOUNTAIN NEWS, 10/29). At his first S.F. appearance since officially entering the race, Brown turned "pitchman . . . exhorting the audience to call his 800 number to help him get elected" (Susan Yoachim, S.F. CHRONICLE). "The audience was a mix of students, former Brown aides, the elderly and the curious" (10/28). Brown "has bent with the political winds so often over the years that it is impossible to separate sincerity from opportunism" (Wm Endicott, SACRAMENTO BEE). "Even the centerpiece of Brown's campaign -- his promise to ignore special-interest money and limit contributions to $100 -- is not quite what it seems. . . . What he failed to add . . . is that federal election law encourages presidential candidates to raise money from small donors by providing dollar-for-dollar matching funds once $5,000 in increments of $250 or less has been raised in each of 20 states" (10/26). Brown: "I've done everything I'm criticizing. Maybe that's why they think I'm eccentric" (ROCKY MTN NEWS, 10/29).

*6 NH: HEALTH CARE ISSUE PUSHED IN SPECIAL CAMPAIGN 180 organizations have joined to sponsor a press and radio ad campaign called "New Hampshire Asks" -- focusing on two questions to be asked repeatedly to all presidential candidates: "How is a family earning $35,000 a year supposed to pay $30,000 a year for grandma's long-term care? . . . With health care costs tripling since 1980, how will my family afford high quality health care in the next few years?" The sponsoring groups include NH Nurses Assn, NH Health Care Coalition, AARP, Alzheimer's Assn and Families USA. Chairs of both NH parties were present at the Concord kick-off. NH Dem chair Chris Sprou: "We in [NH] can influence the agenda of the next President." NH GOP chair Rhona Charbonneau said health care and long-term care "is not just a Republican or Democratic issue but it's a people's issue -- it's a major issue and we must do something." From the radio ads that ran on 26 NH stations starting 10/28: "Before any of us vote, let's hear their answers." (Manchester Union Leader, 10/29; New Hampshire Asks release, 10/28).
NH DEM MIDTERM CONVENTION: Harkin, Clinton, Tsongas and Wilder will meet in a televised issue forum 11/1. ABC's Hal Bruno will moderate. NH Dem chair Sprou said Kerrey "has a previous commitment but we're still hoping he might take part." Each candidate will give 20-minute addresses to the convention at the state armory beginning at 3:00p on 11/2. Estimated attendance: 2,500 (UNION LEADER, 10/29).

*7 DEM ROUND-UP

AGRAN: He "discussed his 'new American security' concept in an informal meeting with 20 [Cedar Rapids] students" (John Kirsch, CEDAR RAPIDS GAZETTE). Agran on IA: "Most Iowans want this unique caucus process to remain open and they want to have a contest of ideas taking place. As I talk with people, I'm inclined to believe that's still possible, even with Sen. Harkin's favorite-son status" (10/29). He will be in Denver, CO 10/30.
FLYNN: "Flynn aides are doing their best to keep alive his dream of a presidential or [VP] bid, hinting he will start traveling to places like [NH, MI, and MD] soon after Boston voters go through the motions in the city election" (Joe Sciacca, BOSTON HERALD). One Flynn employee: "You can't laugh at him. Why is Tom Harkin a serious candidate and Ray Flynn is not? Because he's from Iowa?" But one Dem "operative" said Flynn would only be viable in the MA primary as a favorite-son: "Somebody is smoking something funny in City Hall if they think differently" (10/28).

MAINE CAUCUSES: Harkin's effect to diminish the importance of the IA caucuses "increases the stakes in [NH], and it makes Maine the first caucus state in which all the [Dems] will be competitive." ME Dems hold their caucuses 2/23. Kerrey manager Sue Casey: "There's an early period we all have to come out of very well. I think different campaigns are planning it differently, but Maine gives you a backstop if you really mess up in [NH]." BOSTON GLOBE's Adam Pertman notes ME offers those without a lot of money "the possibility of displaying their grass-roots organizational strength ... Local officials say that the state's [Dem] caucus electorate is perhaps the most liberal in the country. So unless Cuomo enters the race, they agree that Harkin and Kerrey stand the best chance" (10/28).

*8 FREE ADVICE TO BUSH ON MR. ROGERS' HIGH-PRICED NEIGHBORHOOD

A first rule of politics: Beware your friends.

EXAMPLE ONE: As first reported in Newhouse's Newark STAR-LEDGER, Ed Rogers, WH CoS John Sununu's deputy, signed a $600K/year contract as a lawyer for Saudi Sheik Kamal Adham, within three weeks after leaving the WH last August. Adham, a major figure with BCCI, is under investigation by federal authorities (multiple). Rogers' partner, GOP consultant Haley Barbour, told the N.Y. TIMES, "Ed never met, heard of or knew that this man existed while he was at the White House" (10/26). Pres. Bush was critical of the arrangement at a 10/25 press conference; "officials" said Bush ordered Rogers fired in August because of a leak; and the president is said to have "ordered an official inquiry" into the $600K deal (WASH. POST 10/26, FINANCIAL TIMES, 10/28).

EXAMPLE TWO: GOP friend, columnist Bill Safire savaged the administration yesterday, calling Rogers' "Sununu's toady": "Here is a 33-year-old Bush political hatchetman, a 1985 graduate of the Alabama Law School who never practiced law a day in his life, retained by an accused criminal mastermind at the rate of $25,000 per month for two years." Safire called the Bush-fired-Rogers story "Tooth Fairy Stuff" and the WH inquiry a "ploy" that will continue the "whitewash" -- repeating that "something is fishy behind this Government's reluctance to prosecute aggressively the well-connected predators of BCCI." He called on the Senate to create a Special Prosecutor -- to (1) subpoena Sununu's phone logs and schedules, (2) do the same with ex-AG Thornburgh and associates, (3) "grill Ed Rogers and his intermediaries" (N.Y. TIMES, 10/28). Not surprisingly, Sen. Harris Wofford (D-PA) raised the Safire column and Rogers yesterday in next week's tightening US Senate race against Thornburgh (PHILA. INQUIRER, 10/29, see #12).

EXAMPLE THREE: The conservative W.S. JOURNAL editorial page says Bush "badly needs to know whether this, or any other connections of his own associates, will somehow feed into the unfolding BCCI scandal ... His Justice Department is not the answer, but one of the questions. But the President can cut this Gordian Knot with one phone call, to [US Atty for NY] Robert Morgenthau ... Bush could invite him for a private dinner, sans White House aides, to talk about BCCI. He could ask if Mr. Morgenthau is getting complete cooperation from everyone in the Bush Administration, and pledge any resources he might need to finish the job" (10/29).

*10 TERM LIMITS: STATE AND PERK ROUND-UP

CA: Ex-L.A. Co. supervisor Pete Schabarum, who "engineered" the passage of Prop. 140, is trying to put a limit on CA Members of Congress on the 11/92 ballot. He will submit an initiative to the CA AG for "title and summary" by 11/1/91, but "whether he actually follows through on a petitioning drive depends on financial support": "I've got some pretty good implied commitments but nobody walks up with $100,000 and says 'go.'" He estimated it would take $500,000 to get the petition signatures. He spent $650,000 on Prop. 140, "but ... fundraising is more difficult now," since he isn't a supervisor anymore (Bud Lembke, POLITICAL PULSE, 10/25 issue). The "most dangerous fallout" from 140 may be that, "instead of loosening the stranglehold of special interests on policy makers, term limits will allow these interests to play a far more direct role in shaping public action." If 140 "fails to deliver as promised, that could turn up the intensity of public rage or alienation. In an era of political mean-spiritedness and frustration, the cheap fix of Prop. 140 will not save us from the social chaos that seems more likely with every ideological fight and governmental failure" (Sherry Bebitch Jeffe, L.A. TIMES, 10/27).

NE: Nebraskan's are "expected to launch a constitutional amendment" in early '92 for term limits (editorial, WESTERN NEBRASKA OBSERVER, 10/24).

OH: Gov. George Voinovich (R), "who is advocating limits on terms for state legislators, said [10/28] he wants a second term as governor. ... Voinovich said a petition drive will be launched next year to put term limits on the ballot as a constitutional issue. His term limit advocacy, plus remarks about the size of the General Assembly staff and office space, touched a nerve with legislators on both sides of the aisle," including House Speaker Vern Riffe (D). Voinovich on the need to limit gov. terms: "Ridiculous. Eight years is fine." Voinovich "said he does not know what role he will have in the term limits movement": "I may be in the back. I may be on the side. I may be leading the charge" (Alan Johnson, COLUMBUS DISPATCH, 10/25).

TX: The TX Dem Exec. Cmte adopted 10/26 a new rule on petitions that critics charge could block the petition drive by Texans for Term Limitations to put term limits on the 3/92 ballot. TTL is headed by '90 LG candidate Bob Mosbacher and Dem $-raiser Jim Calaway. The new rule, adopted 54-0, "requires those signing the petitions to swear" they're Dems in the current calendar year and "intend to support" Dem candidates. TTL spokesperson Mark Sanders complained the rule "requires that each person collecting signatures have written approval" from the party chair or other officials. Sanders said the drive for 90,000 Dem and 60,000 GOP signatures to place the referendum on each ballot 3/92 "will go on regardless" (Austin AMERICAN-STATESMAN, 10/27). DALLAS MORNING NEWS editorial: "If citizens throughout [TX] will raise their voices in support of term limitations and demand that all candidates do the same, this long needed change ... will take place" (10/28).

WA: LEGAL ANALYSIS -- "While odds favor passage of" Initiative 553, "the odds also appear against it withstanding a court challenge." Proponents of 553 say term limits are permissible under a constitutional provision that "allows states to regulate the time, place and manner of elections. Under that provision, ... courts have upheld the right of states to require federal candidates to post filing fees or to bar them" from the general if they lost in the primary. U of Puget Sound law prof./553 adviser Wallace Rudolph says if term limits ever reaches the Supreme Court, limit proponents "might benefit from the court's growing suspicion of congressional power and sensitivity to state's rights." Clarence Thomas' "past writings suggest he will ad to this tilt" (W.S. JOURNAL, 10/25).

WV: According to a "recent" poll by Luntz & Assoc. of 803 likely voters; margin of error +/- 3.5%, term limits are supported 79-15% among all voters. Among Dems, 74% support limits. "If it has not already started, there will soon be a campaign under way" in Mercer Co. to "have all supporters of the issue put their names on a petition to send to the [Leg.] asking for passage" (BLUEFIELD DAILY TELEGRAPH, 10/25)

RUBBERGATE/PERK UPDATE: The House Ethics Cmte has asked the GAO to "assemble an anonymous list of all House Bank checking accounts that were overdrawn" from 7/88-6/90 (Timothy Burger, ROLL CALL). Acting Chair Rep. Matt McHugh (D-NY) said "ethics had asked the GAO to identify accounts in some sort of code to keep Members' names -- and 'personalities' -- out of the initial stage of the investigation. Only toward the end of the probe when (and if) the panel decides to pursue specific actions against Members who may have systematically abused the bank, would the [cmte.] divulge the names of those who have been targeted for a 'preliminary inquiry,' the first stage of a formal cmte. investigation. Still, the fact that the accounts of over 100 Reps. will probably be turned over "is sure to stir consternation throughout the House" (10/28). Addenda: The cost of a haircut at the House Barber Shop, "for decades ... known as one of the biggest bargains in town, will increase sharply this week from its current cost of $5" (ROLL CALL, 10/28). 12 GOPers sent a letter to Reps. Charlie Rose (D-NC) and Bill Thomas (R-CA), chair and ranking member of the House Admin. Cmte, to "request an explanation of the panel's decision to make-available a high-tech system" allowing Reps. to "target registered voters with their mail." The decision concerns an agreement by Rose with Aristotle Industries to sell Reps. voter registration info for their districts in CD-ROM format. The info can then be used to develop mailing lists. House Admin. provided Aristotle with a $250,000 loan to "jump start" the project. The letter, drafted by Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) states, "Besides the ethical questions surrounding the use of such lists, we are also concerned with the use of taxpayer money to develop such lists ... when it is obvious the lists could be used for campaign purposes." Rose: "We're going to have to educate them a bit about what this CD[-ROM] business is all about. My response to you now is: Balderdash" (ROLL CALL, 10/28).

*11 RACES TO WATCH ON NOVEMBER 5

NOTE: The LA Gov. runoff is 11/16.

PENNSYLVANIA SENATE: From a 40-point yawner to the hottest race of 1991. Appointed Sen. Harris WOFFORD (D) has suddenly pulled even with ex-AG/ex-Gov. Dick THORNBURGH (R) in the latest poll. Some see the race as a "window" to presidential and congressional issues in '92 (e.g. health care, Mexico free trade, "taking care of our own").

KENTUCKY GOVERNOR: LG Brereton JONES (D) is favored over Rep. Larry HOPKINS (R-06) by a solid margin in a race that has failed to capture the imagination of the voters. Hopkins hopes 11th hour information about Jones' finances will finally "melt his teflon" but it may be too little too late.

MISSISSIPPI GOVERNOR: Gov. Ray MABUS (D) is favored for re-election over businessman Kirk FORDICE (R), who had to prevail in a late 10/8 GOP runoff in order to face Mabus.

WA INITIATIVE 553 (TERM LIMITS): Strong support over the summer months for this sweeping ballot prop. -- one which would limit congressional as well as state elective terms -- faces the full force of a previously timid Congressional delegation this week. Rep. Al Swift's (D-02) decision to retire in '94 was intended to light a fire behind his colleagues to fight back and Speaker Tom Foley (D-05) will weigh in as a personal embodiment of what the state has to lose in seniority. Support could be falling off, but the LIMIT forces are still seen having an edge.

PA 02: Although ex-Rep. Bill Gray (D) attempted to torpedo the chances of ex-Councilmember Lu BLACKWELL (D) by delaying his resignation to force a Spring '92 primary, the courts moved the election to 11/5 only three weeks ago. Blackwell (D) will run on the Dem line and Dem state Sen. Chaka FATTAH is running on the Consumer Party line. Dem ex-Welfare Sec. John White is running as an independent. The GOP candidate is Rev. Nadine Bulford. Of the three leading candidates, Blackwell won the party nod by virtue of support among ward leaders. Fattah's senate district covers 3/4 of the CD, and he has received the most organizational endorsements. White is seen coming on with a late rush of money. Fattah won the endorsement of the PHILA. INQUIRER (10/29). Expect a close decision.

VA 07: Rep. French Slaughter (R) is retiring early from a seat representing this heavily GOP CD. Although Charlottesville councilmember Kay SLAUGHTER (D), shares the family name (she's French's cousin) and has run a spirited campaign -- benefiting from her pro-choice stance, expect pro-life Del. George ALLEN (R), son of the ex-Washington Redskins coach, to prevail. Allen enjoys a 2-1 cash advantage in the campaign's final week.

NJ LEGISLATURE: All members of the Assembly (44D-36R) and state Senate (23D-17R) are up. Many view the elections as a referendum on the tax policies and personal popularity of Gov. Jim Florio (D). The Dems won control of the Assembly in '89.

VA LEGISLATURE: All 100 delegates (54D-40R-1I) and 40 state Senators (30D-10R) are up. No chamber of the VA leg. has been controlled by the GOP majority in this century. Although the GOP has been making steady gains in the House of Delegates over the years, any large-scale gains may be viewed as a measure of Gov. Doug Wilder (D) and Sen. Chuck Robb (D).

SAN FRANCISCO MAYOR: Due to a divided field, polls show vulnerable Mayor Art AGNOS likely to make the 12/10 runoff against either ex-Police Chief Frank JORDAN or City Supervisor Angela ALIOTO, daughter of an ex-mayor. Agnos would be slightly favored over Jordan but would face a tough battle against Alioto.

INDIANAPOLIS MAYOR: Ex-Marion Co. prosecutor Steven GOLDSMITH (R), who enjoyed as much as a 30+ point lead a year ago, is still favored to win but state Sen. Louis MAHERN (D), according to late polling, has brought Goldsmith under 50% and is within single digits.

PHILADELPHIA MAYOR: Ex-D.A. Ed RENDELL (D) is heavily favored to succeed Wilson Goode (D). He faces Joe EGAN, appointed the nominee by the city party upon the death of ex-mayor Frank Rizzo. Community activist Dennis Wesley, who is black, is running as an independent. Pamela Lawler is running on the Consumer Party line.

DALLAS MAYOR: Conservative ex-U.S. Rep. Steve BARTLETT (R) is the front-runner against Forrest SMITH and Kathryn CAIN, who trail Bartlett by a wide margin according to the latest polls. There are 3 other minor candidates. If Bartlett fails to get 50%, he will face Smith or Cain in a 11/19 runoff.

HOUSTON MAYOR: Mayor Kathy WHITMIRE has relied on the black vote in her five past campaigns but this time that vote will be splintered by the candidacy of state Rep. Sylvester TURNER, who is black. Turner's success as a candidate also makes real estate developer Bob LANIER, an ex-Metro Transportation Bd chair who has raised the most money, a viable candidate. A runoff between any two of the three is likely; the runoff date will be 20-30 days after 11/5.

SALT LAKE CITY MAYOR: Businesswoman DeeDee CORRADINI (D) is favored to become the first city's first woman mayor over state Commerce dir. Dave BUHLER (R).

BALTIMORE: Mayor Kurt SCHMOKE (D) won the 9/91 Dem primary, tantamount to election. He faces Sam CULOTTA (R).

BOSTON: Mayor Ray FLYNN (D) is certain to win a third term over Teachers' Union head Ed DOHERTY (D).

MO PROPOSITION B (EDUCATION): This $385 million tax package for education is backed by the state's political leadership of both parties. The vote is expected to be close.

TX PROPOSITION 11 (LOTTERY): This initiative is expected to pass easily.

12 PENNSYLVANIA SENATE: NECK-AND-NECK DOWN THE HOME-STRETCH

The Pennsylvania Poll, conducted 10/24-27 by WTAE-TV and the PITTSBURGH POST-GAZETTE, surveyed 738 adults; no margin of error provided. HOTLINE estimate +/- 3.7%. Subsample: 383 "most likely voters" (MLVs); HOTLINE estimates ME +/- 5.4% (POST-GAZETTE, 10/29). Tested: Sen. Harris Wofford (D), ex-Gov. Dick Thornburgh (R).

	ALL	MLVs	WOM	MEN	46-60	ALLEGHENY	SW PA
THORNBURGH	45%	43%	38%	53%	56%	48%	27%
WOFFORD	44	47	50	38	35	42	57

Exceptions to the "trends favoring Wofford" were among black voters and in Philadelphia, where Thornburgh polled 44%. Should the trend continue, the race "will be remembered as one of the most startling upsets" in PA politics. Thornburgh spokesperson Rich Myers: "We don't believe the poll." POST-GAZETTE's David Micheltore notes, "The wisdom of Wofford's decision to emphasize health care -- without spinning out the working details of how a national insurance system would operate -- appeared to be borne out by the poll" as 94% agreed that "making sure that everyone is able to receive adequate health care" was an important/very important factor in choosing between the two (10/29).

Thornburgh's "huge lead of a month ago has evaporated faster than spit in a blast furnace" (Mark McDonald, PHILA. DAILY NEWS).

Penn State's Mike Young: "The erosion of Thornburgh support is mind boggling. A relative political neophyte has overcome the king of the hill. It's unprecedented" (10/29). PHILA. INQUIRER header: "Wofford picks up speed in U.S. Senate Race": "The question strategists are asking: Does Wofford have enough momentum to overtake the front-running Thornburgh in these final days." Thornburgh adviser Murray Dickman: "I won't sit here and tell you we're sitting here with large, double-digit leads like we were in September, because we're not. We always said the election would be close, it has closed, and it's not unexpected" (Seelye, 10/29).

GO WEST YOUNG MAN: "[W]esterners have a habit of sticking together. Call it the homeboy factor. Thornburgh is a major league 'homey.'" He can also "count on the rock-ribbed Reagan-Bush vote in the southwestern counties" (McDonald, PHILA. DAILY NEWS, 10/29). PHILA. INQUIRER header: "Senate race exposes fissures across Western Pa.": "With its natural [Dem] inclinations but its strong loyalty to its native sons, Allegheny is a county in conflict" (Seelye, 10/27). Thornburgh aide: "If we win Allegheny County we win." Wofford manager Paul Begala: "Western [PA] is a critical battleground. I don't think either of us can win without it" (PATRIOT-NEWS,

BIG BANG THEORY: Wofford and Thornburgh have been "firing negative ads and charges at each other. Wait until next weekend to watch for the nuclear explosions." A Thornburgh staffer said they have been "saving a story about Wofford that may, but may not, surface in an ad before the campaign is over. Expect the same from the Wofford camp" (Serwach, PATRIOT-NEWS, 10/27).

STUMPIN': Wofford will discuss "Thornburgh's role in the INSLAW cover-up" today in front of the DoJ (Wofford release, 10/28). One day after Wofford was praised by black church leaders as a "champion" of civil rights, Thornburgh "said Wofford's votes against Clarence Thomas was 'insensitive' and demeaning to black people": "My opponent ... voted against Clarence Thomas' nomination because he was 'not qualified.' ... It was that kind of thinking that gave rise to the civil rights laws that we all worked for in the 1960's" (Matza/Zausner/Enda, PHILA. INQUIRER). Thornburgh "said he did not mean to imply that Wofford ... was bigoted," just "insensitive by using that kind of phraseology." Wofford manager Paul Begala: "He began this campaign by calling a civil rights hero a racist. God knows where he's going to end it. But I can tell you he will end it in second place." Wofford, in Phila., held a press conference and passed out copies of columnist Wm. Safire's 10/28 N.Y. TIMES column that called for an independent investigation of BCCI:

"The list of questions about Mr. Thornburgh's role in this affair continues to grow. And now senior White House aides [ex-WH CoS John Sununu deputy Ed Rogers] are joining the BCCI team. For what purpose?" Thornburgh spokesperson Rich Myers: "Frankly, I'm not going to respond to some idea from some columnist in the New York Times" (10/29).

13 LOUISIANA GOVERNOR: POLL HAS RACE TOO CLOSE TO CALL

"The true undecided voter holds the key ... Among those still undecided, 84% are white. They are exclusively comprised of Roemer & Holloway supporters (Mason-Dixon release, 10/29).

RISKY BUSINESS: The infusion into LA's economy "could be all but choked off" if Duke wins and becomes LA's "most visible" rep. The problem isn't so much Mr. Duke's plan for economic development, about which is little known. It's Mr. Duke himself" (TIMES-PICAYUNE, 10/28). Business leaders say a Duke win "would crunch the New Orleans tourism and convention industry and make it harder to attract new business" to LA. But Duke: "There's no empirical evidence that my election would hurt tourism. There's a lot of evidence that the election of a colorful governor would attract people from all over the world" (Blaine, TIMES-PICAYUNE, 10/26). "Louisianans for the Future," a "high level" group of business leaders who support Roemer, "will simultaneously announce their endorsement" of Edwards (NEWS-STAR, 10/26).

THE STING: Edwards has "cleared a major hurdle in his bid to woo" Gov. Buddy Roemer's (R) voters, "winning a face-to-face meeting next week with Roemer" (Peter Nicholas, TIMES-PICAYUNE, 10/26). Roemer CoS P.J. Mills: "It's [Roemer's] role to meet with Edwards and extract specific concessions. ... The sense around here is there is a tremendous groundswell for Duke" (John Hill, NEWS-STAR, 10/27). Edwards, "in these hectic post-primary days, is in a mood to promise voters anything." But what Edwards knows "and what we know is that if he is elected, he will do what he pleases" (Kelso, TIMES-PICAYUNE, 10/27). Duke told GOPers that voting for Edwards "would betray the GOP because Edwards supported Jesse Jackson for president" (AP/NEWS-STAR, 10/27).

DUKE'S 'A HAZARD: TIMES-PICAYUNE header: "What role will Legislature play after the election?": "If David Duke becomes governor, the Legislature will find itself upon uncharted seas" (Wardlaw, 10/27). TIMES-PICAYUNE header: "Duke's rise rips open old wounds for some." Subheads: "Jews fear rise of anti-semitism"; "Blacks have seen it before" (10/27). One source: "Contrary to the impression that Dukemia is a wildfire loose on the bayous of [LA], Duke's base did not grow at all. ... In fact, Duke drew only 489,766 -- about 120,000 votes less than he did 12 months earlier against Sen [Bennett] Johnston [D]." Sen. John Breaux (D) "confirmed" that Duke "has personally given him a 'friendly' advance warning he might be a Breaux rival" if he loses to Edwards (Edgar Poe, TIMES-PICAYUNE, 10/26).

TERMS OF ENDORSEMENT: TIMES-PICAYUNE header: "The Choice of Our Lives." The paper will publish "a series of editorials examining how Duke might measure up" in key areas "of leadership, and how he compares with Edwards" (10/27). NEWS-STAR endorses Edwards: "Edwin Edwards. Without question" (10/27). Pres. Bush said he "won't get involved in Louisiana's gubernatorial runoff, 'except to say that we can never in any way support David Duke.'" Duke: "Why in the world could President Bush support Clarence Thomas for the Supreme Court, who was once involved in the Black Panthers, but not support David Duke because I was once involved in the KKK" (Bruce Alpert, TIMES-PICAYUNE, 10/26).

*14 ARIZONA: KEATING TAKES A BEATING IN MCCAIN TESTIMONY

Sen. John McCain (R), testifying in Phoenix financier Charles Keating's securities-fraud trial 10/25, said Keating "became red in the face" and "clenched his teeth" when in 1987, McCain "refused to negotiate with federal regulators on behalf" of his S&L (Jerry Kammer, ARIZONA REPUBLIC, 10/27). Keating had shared a "longtime friendship" with McCain and had raised $112,000 for 3 of McCain's campaigns. "Though Keating didn't ask him directly to negotiate a resolution, McCain said that was the impression he got from the meeting" (James Granelli, L.A. TIMES, 10/26). "My response was that it was improper for me to act as a negotiator," said McCain, adding "that he was willing to talk with regulators only to ensure fair treatment of the thrift." McCain told a L.A. Co. Superior Ct. jury, "the information available to him on the [S&L] at the time 'raised serious concerns' about the actions of regulators and indicated that Keating was justified in asking elected officials for help" (TIMES, 10/26). "He said that was why he agreed to join other senators in meeting first with top regulator Edwin Gray and then with a regulatory team from" S.F. "Prosecutors used McCain's testimony in an attempt to portray Keating as desperate for political muscle to shore up his sagging business empire so that he could continue selling the bonds" (REPUBLIC, 10/27).

*15 IOWA: GRASSLEY APPROVAL THROUGH THE ROOF

*16 MARYLAND: MIKULSKI DIVES IN

Sen. Barbara Mikulski (D) announced her bid for re-election 10/27 "before about 1,200 people who paid $25 a piece to hear her" speak. Calling the middle class "my favorite endangered species," Mikulski pledged "more government benefits and tax breaks aimed at the middle class." The issue of abortion drew the "biggest applause line" when she shouted, "We have to stand up for a woman's right to choose" (Jay Merwin, Balto. EVENING SUN, 10/28). Mikulski begins "as a clear favorite," with $900,000 in her war chest and with MD Dems outnumbering GOPers 2-1. But MD GOP chair Joyce Terhes said "she believes Mikulski's early announcement signals concern that a difficult race lies ahead": "I truly believe that our chances of taking this seat are great. Barbara Mikulski is out of tune and out of touch with the majority of people in Maryland." Terhes "criticized Mikulski for opposing" the Gulf War and "for accusing the Senate of condoning sexual harassment by confirming" Clarence Thomas to the Supreme Ct.: "Mikulski did not address either issue in her speech, but did tell reporters afterward that she believes her vote against Operation Desert Storm will have no effect on the race next year" (Kent Jenkins Jr., W. POST, 10/28). EVENING SUN's Merwin notes voters didn't appear to be "disappointed" with her Gulf War vote. Announced GOPers: Harford Co. State's Atty Joseph Cassilly and Caroline Co. consultant Stuart Hopkins (10/28). '88 Sen. loser Alan Keyes is "expected to announce his candidacy soon." Rep. Helen Bentley (R-02) is said to be "undecided": "The doors aren't closed , and I'm looking at every angle. I'm very happy with the way my [House] district came out. [But] I'm one who loves challenge" (POST, 10/28).

*17 OREGON: AUCOIN WINS LABOR ENDORSEMENT

Rep. Les AuCoin (D-01) "won an unprecedented early endorsement" 10/25 from OR's AFL-CIO "that could quickly pump thousands of dollars into his campaign" (Jeff Mapes, OREGONIAN). AuCoin "won the backing despite a determined effort to block the endorsement" by Sen. Bob Packwood (R), "who had met with several labor groups to warn he might not provide as much help to unions if he received this 'kick in the teeth.'" Packwood and AuCoin both made "last-minute pitches." AuCoin said the endorsement "would help him" in both the primary against businessman Harry Lonsdale (D) and in the general against Packwood. The backing enables AuCoin to "ask individual union PACs for the full $10,000 they are allowed to give to congressional candidates." Meanwhile, Packwood "said that he would consider once again taking money from [PACs] to help offset the money AuCoin would get from labor unions." He has not taken PAC money since '86, but "some political observers say Packwood has had a harder time this year tapping the business community for non-PAC contributions." Lonsdale manager Rich McIntyre "said he did not think [AuCoin's] early endorsement would help AuCoin in the primary": "The leadership of labor is not in the rank and file. The Lonsdale campaign has a lot of labor supporters." A motion to also endorse Packwood in the GOP primary "was defeated on a voice vote. ... Several labor officials said they had been put off by what they regarded as threats from Packwood to retaliate if they gave the early endorsement to AuCoin." OR AFL-CIO V.P. Sam Retledge said that during a recent labor meeting in Klamath Falls, Packwood "warned" if the endorsement went to AuCoin, "When you come to me in the future, I may not be very receptive" (10/26). OREGONIAN's Steve Duin writes, "When Packwood is forced to cut across the full grain of his conscience, you know we're in the midst of tremulous economic and social upheaval" (10/29). Packwood manager Elaine Franklin on the PAC decision: "There's no point in losing a campaign because you've said you won't do what your opponent can do. There may be a perception problem with it, but I'm not going to run this campaign with one arm tied behind my back" (EUGENE REGISTER-GUARD, 10/26).

*18 MARYLAND: SOME DEMS READY TO GIVE NATE THE GATE

"Several ranking [Dems], with the tacit approval of Gov. Wm Donald Schaefer (D), have launched an effort to remove" MD Dem chair Nathan Landow. (Thomas Waldron, Balto. EVENING SUN). "Criticism of Landow reached a crescendo last week after a bruising fight over congressional redistricting, when several party officials gave him a four-page letter that blasted what they said was a domineering and cavalier leadership style." The letter was signed by MD's five DNC members, state Sens. Clarence Blount and Juanita Miller, Baltimore councilwoman Vera Hall and activists Lanny Davis and Mary Jo Neville. Gov. Schaefer "has not joined in the public criticism. But an aide said the governor has decided not to intervene on Landow's behalf, amounting to "silent approval of the move to dump him." Asked if Schaefer plans to step in, the aide replied: "Probably not." The letter "complained ... of an 'ongoing lack of consultation before major decisions [are] made for the party, including the taking of positions not authorized by the party.' ... A final showdown may develop at the party's central committee meeting Nov. 20." Landow "acknowledged he may not have been diplomatic enough during his two-year tenure," but "said that what he may have lacked in communication with other party members, he has made up for by improving party fund-raising and programs, such as voter registration and candidate training" (10/28).

*19 MASSACHUSETTS: WELD SUFFERS SLIP IN FAVORABILITY

A poll, conducted by the Becker Institute for "a number of business clients," including the BOSTON GLOBE from 10/4-8, surveyed 400 adults; margin of error +/- 3-5% (GLOBE, 10/28). Tested: Pres. Bush, Gov. William Weld (R), Boston Mayor Ray Flynn (D), Treasurer Joe Malone (R), AG Scott Harshbarger (D), BU Pres. John Silber (D), LG Paul Cellucci (R).

	FAV / UNFAV		FAV / UNFAV.
Bush	61% / 33%	Silber	40% / 34%
Weld	41 / 37	Harshbarger	40 / 12
Flynn	58 / 16	Cellucci	35 / 15
Malone	45 / 16

The results "represent a 26-point slide in Weld's favorability rating and a 15-point increase in his unfavorable rating since a February Becker poll" (GLOBE, 10/28). 40% said they "mildly object" to Weld's budget cuts, while 35% "strongly object." Weld rated unfavorably among women -- 37% fav/39% unfav. "While some of Weld's policies -- his abortion rights package and his decision to review the cases of battered women in jail for killing a spouse -- were thought to have enhanced his standing with female voters, there were indications that Weld's fiscal stands may be alienating women" (Robert Connolly, BOSTON HERALD, 10/26).

*20 THIS MORNING: ABC's "GMA" interviewed American U's Clovis Maksoud and ex-Israeli Foreign minister Abba Eban on the peace talks. NBC's "Today" had Israeli PM Yitzhak Shamir and Egyptian Foreign minister Amr Moussa. "CBS This Morning" had Israel Amb. to the U.S. Zalman Shoval and Palestinian journalist Rami Khouri. "FOX Morning News" had Nat'l Women's Law Center's Marcia Greenberger and GOP consultant Ann Stone on the proposed cap on sexual harassment suits, Dem consultant Ray Strother, who did Gov. Buddy Roemer's (R) media and conservative activist Alan Keyes on the LA Gov race, and NOW VP Patricia Ireland and Concerned Women for America Pres. Beverly LaHaye on gender equality (10/29).

A.M. QUOTABLES: LaHayes on NOW's role in advancing women's issues: "I believe the feminist movement has really set back families because the agenda I see, and most American women see, is an obsession with abortion, and one of their top four priorities is lesbian rights ... those do not build strong families." Ireland: "We do face a backlash from this administration and groups like Beverly LaHayes' group that allow people who benefit from this discrimination to hide behind their skirts" (FOX, 10/29).

LAST NIGHT: All nets led with violence marring the Mideast peace talks. PBS' "MacNeil/Lehrer" interviewed ex-Sec/State Alexander Haig, ex-OAS ambassador and Mideast analyst Sol Linowitz, ex-Kennedy/Johnson NSA chief McGeorge Bundy, and Defense analyst Richard Perle on the Mideast talks. NBC interviewed Israeli PM Yitzhak Shamir. CNN's "Crossfire" interviewed Oliver North. "Larry King Live" hosted entrepreneur H. Ross Perot. ABC's "Nightline" hosted author/journalist Seymour Hersh and Carnegie Endowment's Geoffrey Kemp on arms control in the Mideast (10/28).

MEA CULPA?: Under the music "Who's Sorry Now", NBC's Andrea Mitchell: "Alan Simpson was telling a [WY] audience he was sorry." (Video of Simpson speaking at a roast) Simpson: "Arrogance? Sure, that can happen. ... too smart by half, sometimes. You can get riding pretty high around this town." Mitchell: "He'd been hearing from friends and family that he might have gone too far in trying to discredit Anita Hill. ... It was not the first time Simpson had attacked first and apologized later. During the Gulf War he called CNN's Peter Arnett an Iraqi sympathizer. ... Simpson was reflective today, but not remorseful." Simpson: "I guess I need some sensitivity training, or whatever, and I'll be listening, I'll sure shape up." Mitchell: "Simpson has learned that if you want to continue or advance as a Senate leader, don't cross the line between being outspoken, and being outrageous" (10/28).

For Immediate Release

October 29, 1991

PRESS CONFERENCE BY PRESIDENT BUSH AND PRIME MINISTER GONZALEZ

Moncloa Palace
Madrid, Spain

7:03 P.M. (L)

PRESIDENT BUSH: I simply want to thank Prime Minister Gonzalez, and also Foreign Minister Ordenez for this fantastic cooperation and leadership on this conference. In a very short period of time, Spain has pulled this whole thing together, and everyone I've talked to tells me that it has been just nothing short of a miracle. And of course, I am very grateful for the hospitality, but also for the way they've handled these arrangements. And so I want to thank the Prime Minister and everybody else involved in these wonderful arrangements.

In terms of U.S.-Spain bilateral relations, they are very, very good. We, of course, are excited about 1992, the quincentenary of Columbus's first voyage to America. That all can wait until after this visit, but nevertheless, we're here at the beginning of interesting times in terms of U.S.-Spanish relations, which I can attest to are very, very good.

But my thanks to you, sir, for all you've done to facilitate the convening of this historic conference.

Q I would like to ask President Bush what do you think about Spain's cooperation in the future in the peace process in the Near East after the Madrid conference is over and for the future phases where they might also have a role? And I would like to know if this visit excludes the fact that in July of '92 you will be here -- does this exclude the fact? Thank you.

PRESIDENT BUSH: First, this visit here does not exclude future visits of any kind, although we have no firm schedule for my own personal travel in 1992.

Secondly, because your Prime Minister is widely respected in the countries that are participating, who knows what the future role of Spain will be? And it could well be in terms of -- they've already offered the facilities for ongoing talks of one kind or another, bilateral talks. And so, Spain having demonstrated not only its interest, but your Prime Minister having demonstrated his knowledge about the area, I would say we'll just have to wait and see -- see what the parties want. But they've already served in an extraordinarily useful role in hosting this conference.

Q President Bush, at a meeting that you had in Camp David when you met the King of Spain, was that when you decided that Spain would be the perfect place? Could you tell us a little bit about what happened? Was it your proposal, was it the King's proposal? We'd really like to know a little bit more about how Spain was chosen. Thank you, sir.

PRESIDENT BUSH: No, I think Secretary Baker has explained it very well that it had to be a place where the participants would feel at home and comfortable, and Spain immediately came to the fore. I can't say that other sites were not considered. I believe there was some consideration given to The Hague, some consideration given to a spot -- Lausanne, I believe, in Switzerland. But emerged as the leading choice. And with all great respect for His Majesty -- and I might say what a joy it was to Barbara and me to have the King and Queen of Spain at Camp David -- that matter was not decided at that level.

Q Mr. President, 10 days ago or just about, Secretary Baker did not want to make -- to predict chances of success of this conference. Four days ago the French President Mitterrand did not want to do it again. Now, just the day of the conference, how do you rate chances of success? And also from President Gonzalez I would like to hear his own impression. Thank you.

PRESIDENT BUSH: I rate it the same way that Secretary Baker did 10 days ago, not wanting to rate it or quantify that. But the very fact that it's taking place, the very fact that the parties are coming together is, I think, an important sign that there is a chance for success. But I think we would all agree that there's a lot of hard negotiation between the parties to take place before we can say with joy in our hearts that there will be lasting peace in the Middle East. So I can't quantify it for you, but I'd say that I'm more optimistic today just because we're this much closer to the actual convening of the conference.

PRIME MINISTER GONZALEZ: Years ago, we had hoped that something would lead to negotiations in this region, and it seems that we finally have something that is going to lead to these conversations. For the first time in 43 years, we have the possibility of dialogue in this region, and I think that this is really hope for all of us.

Q We would like to know what you talked about this afternoon, and we would like to know if you mentioned Cuba and if you talked about new ideas in the Caribbean area.

PRIME MINISTER GONZALEZ: There has been nothing but very pleasant and friendly conversation. We reviewed the conference itself -- the peace conference -- and we've also reviewed the situation in Central America. We didn't mention Cuba, except a passing mention. We talked about the situation in Europe and the Soviet Union. And the meeting was very friendly and very cordial, as President Bush has just said.

PRESIDENT BUSH: May I add a word to that, please? Prime Minister Gonzalez has a very special standing in South America, Central America, and the leaders there turn to him often for advice and counsel, as we do. So when we talk, for example, today about Salvador, his role as a special "friend" of the Secretary General -- you're familiar with the term "friend" to the Secretary General -- we can talk to a man who has established not only his knowledge and his interest in the area, but has a following in the area.

So the visit, from my standpoint, did not relate simply to the conference, nor to bilateral relations between Spain and the United States, but getting his views once again on matters affecting our own hemisphere, including the antinarcotics business. So we spent maybe 10 minutes talking about that and getting his ideas on that.

Q Mr. President, assurances were given to each of the parties by Secretary Baker on your behalf. Do each of the parties know what assurances were given? When will the American people know these assurances, since we obviously will be responsible for any commitments you've made?

PRESIDENT BUSH: Well, Helen, I'd have to refer that question to the Secretary of State. And I think the American people have a right to know these things, but I think sometimes when you're having quiet negotiations to make something happen, the American people assign their trust to the President, to the Secretary of State to conduct these sensitive matters. This conference is historic. And there's nothing that's going to be of difficulty for the American people in any way; I can assure you that. But I would simply leave to Jim any discussion of any details of that nature.

Q Will they be made public at any point?

PRESIDENT BUSH: I don't even know what you're talking about. What ones are you referring to?

Q We understand assurances were made to each party --

PRESIDENT BUSH: Like what?

Q -- to bring them to the table. We don't know.

PRESIDENT BUSH: Well, they're here -- put it that way. And we're very, very pleased, and I don't think there are any secret covenants; if that's what you're getting at. But I'm sorry, I just don't know what you're talking about. But let me refer you to the Secretary of State on this.

Q White House officials have said that there are assurances.

PRESIDENT BUSH: Well, assurances -- I mean, there are certain things in our policy that we're -- assure all the time.

Q To Mr. Bush. Do you believe that the violence in the Middle East the last 36, 48 hours was in attempts to disrupt the peace talks before they begin? And if you do, your comments on such tactics.

PRESIDENT BUSH: Condemning such tactics -- total condemnation of the kind of violence we've seen. And if they were designed to disrupt the conference, let's hope they fail. And I think it's just one more -- actually, these terrorist acts of violence are one more reason I'd like to see this conference succeed so people will not resort to the violence in the future that they have resorted to in the past.

Q Prime Minister Gonzales, your comments as well?

PRIME MINISTER GONZALEZ: I apologize, but we really don't have much time left. I'm trying to get an international balance here. From on that side --

Q Mr. President, what will be the role of Spain in the new world order?

PRESIDENT BUSH: A very respected partner who stands for peace and democracy and whose leaders are respected around the world. And I think that the fact that we consult very closely with Prime Minister Gonzalez on various matters, and I've touched on some of them -- the Middle East, touched on our own hemisphere; I remember talking to him at the time of Desert Storm -- means that we -- as far as the United States goes, Spain has a very special standing and can be extraordinarily helpful in terms of world peace. So you have to see what the situation is, but I've given you some examples of where they've already played a very constructive role.

Q Do you miss the United Nations in this conference? And why have you allowed Israel not to pay any attention to the U.N. for many years?

PRESIDENT BUSH: I think the conference is properly structured. The United Nations, we've all seen, has come into a very important new phase in its existence, fulfilling the dreams of some of its founding fathers in terms of peacemaking, peacekeeping in various parts of the world. The standing up against the aggression caused by Iraq is perhaps the foremost example. But they're also playing a useful role, still, in trying to achieve peace in Cyprus. They're trying very hard, the Secretary General is, in El Salvador, and you look around the world and they are very active, constructively so, in many areas.

In this particular area, because of the view of some of the parties, it was deemed better to go forward in the way the conference is structured now. But that isn't to denigrate the United Nations. Israel -- I think everybody knows the history -- feels that in the United Nations they are ganged up on. That's their view and they're an important player here, and their views had to be considered as this conference was structured. I think other countries in the area that are going to be participating clearly went along with this.

PRIME MINISTER GONZALEZ: As far as I remember, Secretary Baker and Secretary Pankin talked about 338 and 242, the United Nations -- (inaudible) -- that finally have started a dialogue, a dialogue that everyone has waited for, for such a long time.

Q For President Bush. Sir, do you know any reason at this point why the bilateral negotiations would not get underway, and can you tell us what day they're scheduled to start?

PRESIDENT BUSH: The bilateral negotiations that would follow this opening session? No, I know of no reason why -- I mean, I can think of a lot of conditions, but it's not helpful to go in and elaborate on everything that might go wrong. What I want to do is point out what might go right. And what might go right is these countries realize that this is the best hope for peace.

And I think that's what I will be talking about in my opening remarks tomorrow. I expect President Gorbachev will be talking about the same thing. So I see no built-in stumbling block that will keep these talks from going forward, if I'm interpreting your question correctly.

Q What day will they begin?

THE PRESIDENT: I can't answer that. I just don't know. I think all that has to be negotiated out.

PRIME MINISTER GONZALEZ: Thank you, very much and -- the first time we're five minutes late. Thank you, very much.

THE PRESS: Thank you.

- I WANT TO MAKE CLEAR MY FIRM CONVICTION THAT THE US WILL STAY ENGAGED IN EUROPE. BUT WE HAVE NO WISH TO DOMINATE.
- WE FULLY SUPPORT THE PROCESS OF EUROPEAN INTEGRATION. I SEE IT AS CREATING A MORE COHESIVE AND EFFECTIVE PARTNER WITH WHICH WE CAN WORK BOTH IN NATO AND IN THE US-EC CONTEXT.
- HOWEVER, LET ME MAKE CLEAR THAT I DO NOT SEE NATO AS A TRANSITORY ALLIANCE, WHICH WILL FADE AWAY NOW THAT THE SOVIET THREAT IS DIMINISHED, OR WHICH WILL BECOME AN ANACHRONISM AS EUROPE INTEGRATES.

- THE ATLANTIC ALLIANCE IS BUILT ON THE BASIS OF SECURITY INTERESTS AND VALUES THAT WILL BE VITAL EVEN IF OUR BEST HOPES FOR CHANGE IN THE EAST ARE REALIZED. IT IS ALSO BASED ON THE CLEAR LESSONS OF THIS CENTURY -- WE MUST KEEP THE TRANSATLANTIC LINK CLOSE IF WE ARE TO AVOID WAR.
- PRESERVING NATO SHOULD BE COMPLETELY COMPATIBLE WITH DEVELOPMENT OF A EUROPEAN SECURITY IDENTITY. THE TWO SHOULD BE MUTUALLY REINFORCING.
- IF THE WEU IS TO SERVE AS THE DEFENSE IDENTITY FOR THE EC, IT MUST ALSO BE THE EUROPEAN PILLAR OF NATO.
- TO FULFILL THIS DUAL ROLE, IT WILL NEED STRONG TIES TO BOTH INSTITUTIONS, CONSISTENT WITH THE PRINCIPLES OUR MINISTERS AGREED AT COPENHAGEN.

- BUT WE CAN WORK TO ASSURE THAT BOTH THE ROME NATO SUMMIT AND THE EC SUMMIT IN MAASTRICHT SHOW THAT THE ALLIANCE AND A EUROPEAN DEFENSE IDENTITY ARE COMPLEMENTARY.
- IN ROME, WE ALSO NEED TO ENSURE THAT NATO PLAYS ITS PART IN HELPING TO MEET THE NEEDS OF THE NEW DEMOCRACIES IN THE EAST. THE WAY IT CAN BEST MEET THEIR CONCERNS AND SHARE ITS

THE PRESIDENT DOES MADRID

AF One pooler Jerry Seib advises there was no Bush and no news on the flight.

Arrival was open coverage.

Motorcade to the ambassador's residence, an undistinguished boxy structure set on a hillside below the embassy and shielded from the busy street by trees, was uneventful, as were the motorcades to and from the Soviet Embassy.

Bush and Gorbachev ate lunch on the second floor and then met in a large, high, arch-ceilinged neo-classical room. The walls were pale green, the trim white with gold accents. The floor was inlaid hardwood. The two leaders sat on a small sofa with white wooden arms and legs, covered in green brocade. Behind them was a large landscape of a seaside villa, autumn leaves scattered on the patio, with a rainbow arcing across the sky. Bush gave out a grunt of what your pool interpreted to be fatigue as he sat down. "It's good to see you," he told Gorbachev. "A very lovely place," he added as he looked around the room. Gorbachev replied that Bush's descriptions of Madrid as "lovely" proved accurate. They were joined by Secretary of State Baker, Soviet Foreign Minister Pankin and national security advisor Scowcroft. "Uh-oh," Bush said with a laugh as the still photographers charged in, elbows flying. White House Chief of Staff Sununu and U.S. Ambassador to the Soviet Union Strauss talked along the sidelines.

Press conference transcript coming.

There was a lone protestor outside the Soviet Embassy as Bush left, holding a sign that read: "President Bush Stop Your Tilt Toward the Arabs."

Marlin advises that the following bilateral meetings are scheduled for Wednesday morning, all at the ambassador's residence: 7:30, Shamir; 8:10, Egypt; 8:35, Lebanon; 9, Syria; 9:25, Jordan and the Palestinian representatives.

Michael Busch reports that a revised press schedule will be forthcoming to reflect these new meetings, but says that both Travel Pool D and the Peace Conference Pool should assemble in the Filing Center at--brace yourselves--6:45 a.m.

Bush Meeting With Spanish Prime Minister Gonzalez
Joint Press Conference

Pool was ushered into the American Embassy but kicked out when a bomb threat emptied the holding room in the U.S. consulate we were to wait in. The motorcade went about as well, as we were split from the Bush half of the train by a crush of traffic.

Bush met with Gonzalez for about an hour at the Moncloa Palace, Gonzalez's official residence.

As we waited for the press conference to begin, Marlin Fitzwater came out to talk. He discussed the special envoy plan to the Middle East and he discussed the U.S. aid plan for the Soviets. None of us ran a tape, unfortunately. And on the envoy stuff, Marlin later spun in another direction but after talking with Secretary of State Baker.

On the special envoy, he said, "We'll need someone to carry forth over a period of time," and added that the envoy would handle things "down the road."

But after the Bush-Gonzalez press conference, Marlin braked the talk on naming a special envoy. He said Baker wants to stay in the fray for a while. "He hopes to participate even going down the road." Marlin added, "He wants to stay with it." Clearly the message was that, as Baker said after the Bush-Gorbachev press conference, there are no immediate plans to name an envoy.

On U.S.-Soviet relations, Marlin said the superpower leaders spent most of their time discussing the economic situation in the Soviet Union. Before any U.S. aid is announced, Fitzwater said, "more work needs to be done." Included in that will be more meetings with the G-7 folks, he said.

"One of the things that's important to us is that the republics are participants," he added. Fitzwater said the republics must be involved in any loan and aid agreements with the administration. Fitzwater said Gorbachev understood the U.S. position. "That is a new reality of the Soviet Union," he said. He said Gorbachev "is the leader of the center. Some kind of coordination function is necessary."

Fitzwater said the White House has "a lot of faith" in Gorbachev, "but that shouldn't be taken as support to the exclusion of the others." He said the United States is "clearly going to be working with the republics...we would expect to have an ambitious role in dealing with the republics."

Fitzwater added that Gorbachev assured the president that Soviet military systems are "under control and nuclear weapons are safe...and under control of the center."

Fitzwater said the United States still has concerns about Soviet creditworthiness and ability to pay back any loans.

Fitzwater said Gorbachev is still a "dynamic kind of leader." He said Gorbachev "is an amazing man in the sense that he presents a lot of different appearances and emotions that coincide with the differences in his country at the time."

Press conference was to be piped in. And, guess what, the motorcade to the royal palace was broken up.

Lastly, he talked briefly on the terrorist actions in the Middle East. "It's unfortunate someone would try to break up the talks," he said. "It's all very tragic and hope it would end."

Paul Bedard - The Washington Times

POOL REPORT #3

OCTOBER 29, 1991

Zarzuela Palace pool report:

The palace is an elegantly proportioned two-story brick structure with stone cornices and wide front steps at the end of a ~~xxxxx~~very long drive. King Juan Carlos, Bush and Gorbachev appeared on the steps for photographers as your pool arrived. At 8:23 p.m., the queen and Raisa Gorbachev came out the front door, got into a blue Mercedes and sped away, a trail of other cars following them. The pool was ushered through a double drawing room with tapestries, portraits of three women (one being the queen) and flower upholstered furniture to a small wood-paneled dining room. ~~xxxxxxx~~ The king and Bush sat on the left side of of the table, which was laden with glassware and silver. ~~xxxx~~ The food had not yet been served. Gorbachev and Gonzalez faced them. Gorbachev's interpreter stood behind him, and was talking when the pool entered, ~~xxxxxxxxxxxx~~ translating Gorbachev's remarks into English. The conversation was inaudible in the jostle (the camera crew may have picked it up) but was lively enough to produce laughter all round. A large bowl of carnations was on a ~~xxx~~ sideboard behind Bush and the king. A tapestry hung on the opposite wall.

DALLAS.TS

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: BUSH-QUAYLE EVENT
DALLAS, TEXAS
FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 1, 1991
8:45 P.M.

Thank you, Ray Hunt, for that introduction. I also want to salute my good friends Bobby Holt and Perry Bass. / A special thanks to RNC Chairman Clayton Yeutter, who could not be with us. Bill Clements, along with Phil Gramm, Tom Loeffler and Bob Mosbacher, are here -- and they, too, have my appreciation. / It's great to have our strong statewide team here: State Chairman Fred Meyer, state treasurer Kay Bailey Hutchison, and Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry. Reverend Don Benton. The Texas Boys Choir (national anthem). Most of all, hello to my fellow Texans, and friends. //

((I want to thank you for that outstanding welcome. I don't think your enthusiasm could have been warmer if I had changed my name to "Troy Aikman.")) //

We are here tonight to talk about America's bright hopes for the future -- a future built upon the special values that Americans have always held dear.

This quest is founded upon a commitment to economic growth, a steadfast respect for the individual, and a proud determination to carry faith in democracy to the rest of the world.

Phil Gramm knows what I'm talking about. So do thousands of other Texans -- and millions of Americans. We have an extraordinary opportunity before us. Together we can cement the gains we have made these last few years. Let me tell you why:

Everyday the difference between the liberals' agenda and ours becomes clearer and clearer. They are the crowd asking questions about the last century when we should be finding solutions for the next. //

It's about what we believe as human beings -- what we are as a nation. //

✓ Liberal Democrats want to burden people for the benefit of government. //

✓ We want to use government to ease burdens on people. //

They believe America's finest hours are behind us. We believe our finest hours are still ahead. //

We believe that because we have an abiding faith in the American people. We understand that when we talk about issues, what we're really talking about are people. For example, too often we talk of the economy as if it were some dusty inhuman thing, rather than the canvas on which we paint our lives and dreams.

Years ago I learned that economics focuses mostly on people, not numbers. I remember driving a red Studebaker from the East with Barbara and the kids. When I got to Texas, I saw people working hard to achieve their dreams. They started in small homes, they scrimped, they saved. They sent their children to school, and they taught them to love their country.

It doesn't take long for anyone to understand that the great strength of the Nation lies not on Capitol Hill in Washington, an economy that died grow

an economy in which a lot of people are still hungry

America's strength comes from a simple source, freedom.
Let liberal Democrats pursue programs that enlarge government.
We'll pursue policies that enlarge opportunity. //

We've tried to do just that for years. Right now, we're working to energize a sluggish economy. We have promoted a series of growth initiatives to help it along: a capital gains tax cut, personal savings incentives, the creation of a permanent R&D tax credit, and increased investment in science, technology, and infrastructure. And cutting needless government red tape.
Texans know that you don't unleash the genius of the American system by weighing it down with unnecessary regulations.
short, we're trying to give this economy a shot in the arm.

What's happened? Our efforts have been blocked by a Congress controlled by liberal Democrats. [[Some people ask why we can't take the kind of action, get the kind of results with the economy, that we were able to do in Desert Storm. The answer is easy: In Desert Storm, I didn't have to get an OK from Secretary of State Ted Kennedy when I wanted to make something happen! When I wanted to Norm Schwarzkopf to move Saddam Hussein

The liberals in Congress have a simple agenda: to block opportunity. Important appointments to key economic positions have gone unfilled because the Senate won't vote on them.

Speaking of the economy, let me say a few words about the unemployment issue. First, I want to help those whose unemployment check has dried up. Families are hurting, and I have said for months I want to help them. I want a bill that does not break the budget agreement.

Second, the only safeguard we have against more and more federal spending is last year's budget agreement. Every time I turn the liberal democrats want to bust the agreement -- add to the deficit and thus eventually add to the tax burden of present generations and the debt burden of future generations. We have a proposal before Congress that extends benefits -- gets the checks going to those families that are hurting and does it within the budget agreement.

Third, the Democrat leaders of Congress can try to play political games all they want. I will veto any compensation bill that comes down busting the agreement. Finally, I challenge Congress again tonight -- send me a bill that will help those families and send me a bill that also protects the taxpayers.

Congress talks a lot about unemployment, but they ought to be doing something about economic growth. Let the liberal Democrats be the Party of the Unemployment Check, ours is the Party of the Paycheck. The time has come for Washington to put aside partisan, inside-the-Beltway disputes. I call on Congress to stop doing business as usual, and start doing the people's business. If they can't do that, then it's time we got ourselves a new Congress. //

step
~~Sure, we've had some successes on the legislative front. We pushed through legislation to give parents dramatically increased access to child care without creating a new government bureaucracy. We got the first legislation to guarantee the rights of people with disabilities -- the Americans With Disabilities Act. We put together a pioneering bill -- the Clean Air Act -- to employ market incentives in preserving our environment. And our Administration has sought unprecedented spending on our drug strategy in order to fight back against drugs. I might add that I believe that's part of the reason for optimism -- we are winning the war on drugs.~~

All of us know that there's more to do. But we can't do it when the Congress won't deliver. Last March 6, I challenged Congress to pass a bill to take criminals off the street -- including a workable federal death penalty. I still don't have a bill. // That same day I asked Congress for a job-creating transportation bill. Same answer -- still no bill. For two years, we have prodded Congress to pass legislation to help make us No. 1 in education by the year 2000. // Liberal Democrats want to throw money at the problem -- keep the status-quo. That answer won't do either. We need education reform to get the most out of our schools -- and prepare ourselves for a better future. If we're going to teach democracy in our schools, let's practice more of it in our education system. That means more local control and parents being allowed to choose where their kids go to school. //

Yes, like most Presidents, I've had my share of problems with the Congress. But I believe the American people are smart enough to see through all the bluster and bravado that's come to symbolize Capitol Hill. A few days ago I nudged Congress to pay a little more attention to its own backyard.

I would wager that most Americans don't know that Congress regularly exempts itself from those same laws Congress passes for everyone else. Laws like the Equal Pay Act of 1963 or Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 -- that's the title that prohibits sexual harassment, as well as discrimination on the basis of race, color, sex, religion and national origin. And the list goes on. Just recently, we heard an extraordinary chorus about sexual harassment up on Capitol Hill, and yes, we all should do more to stamp out this ugly and obscene practice. But as we do that, let's also resolve that those who make the laws, live by the laws they make.

Finally, Thomas Jefferson once said the price of freedom is eternal vigilance. // I say: We must be vigilant, we must be strong, we must be principled.

We have a record to be proud of in that regard. When a dictator crushed hopes for democracy in his homeland and endangered the Western Hemisphere -- we helped the Panamanian people restore free elections and the rule of law. //

When a brutal tyrant invaded and plundered Kuwait -- we helped build an international coalition that rolled back his aggression and liberated a nation. //

As Communism crumbled, we extended a helping hand and made it clear that America will support those who promote democracy, free enterprise, and individual liberty. // We who are free to live our dreams, must support those who dream of living free. Everyday the world becomes a little bit smaller. The line between foreign policy and domestic policy becomes almost invisible.

When I hear some liberal Democrat carping about our engagement in world affairs, I have to ask the question, when I sit down with Latin and South American leaders to keep crack cocaine off our streets, is that foreign policy or domestic policy? When I sit across the table from the best customers for America's farmers, is that foreign policy or domestic policy? Or when Desert Storm reignited America's faith in itself was that just foreign policy? I have a responsibility to advance and promote America's interests -- at home, and abroad. And America has a special responsibility to lead, and lead we will.

I believe in these ideals with every fiber of my being. // But just as I believe in fidelity to principles, I also believe in loyalty to people who serve their nation well. //

One man among us has taken more unfair criticism in three years than anyone should have to endure in a lifetime. Yet he remains steadfast in his service to the Nation. I am proud of the job Dan Quayle has done as Vice President. ////

You might remember his call for legal reform before the members of the American Bar Association. [PAUSE] Dan, you may have upset a few lawyers in the A.B.A., but you certainly became a hero to a lot of everyday people in the U.S.A. ///

In my view, the Election of 1992 will revolve around this type of leadership -- moral leadership, economic leadership, international leadership. // We need to provide that leadership -- leadership committed to the general interest, not the special interest. // We need leadership which talks not of hate, but of heroism; indulges not in character assassination, but builds character. //

One hundred and thirty years ago, Abraham Lincoln left Springfield, Illinois, to assume the Presidency. He addressed his home people at the Great Western Railway Station. Here is what he said: "To this place, and the kindness of these people, I owe everything. // I now [go to assume] a task...greater than that which rested on Washington. Without the assistance of that Divine Being who ever attended him, I cannot succeed. With that assistance, I cannot fail."

What Lincoln felt about Illinois, I feel about Texas. Without God's help, we cannot succeed. With it, we cannot fail. Thank you for this occasion, and for your loyalty and love. God bless the United States of America.

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

October 25, 1991

Dear General Quinn,

Thank you very much for Wednesday evening. It was a most pleasant evening. Besides, I liked being the youngest guy in the crowd.

I mentioned the possibility of having you and Barry Goldwater come by the White House for supper on November 13th, but, when I got back to the office, I found out I will be in Missouri that evening. I am sorry, but please let me know when Barry comes again, as I'd love to have you, him and families come to dinner.

Again, my thanks for a wonderful evening and for my medallion which I treasure.

Sincerely,

Lt. General William W. Quinn

(Madrid/Reuter) -- Israel reluctantly agreed to give Palestinian delegates at the conference equal speaking time to all the other delegations, U.S. and Israeli officials said.

CONFERENCE/SAUDIS (Madrid/Ralph Begleiter, CNN) -- There is an unexpected delegation here from Saudi Arabia, which had earlier said it would not attend the initial stage of the conference. CNN has been told that the Saudi ambassador to Washington plans to attend after all to add to the conference momentum.

CONFERENCE/FRANCE (Paris/Reuter) -- France appointed an observer to the peace conference although the EC is still consulting Washington and Moscow about their representation at the meeting.

GNP (AP) -- The U.S. economy, beset by recession since the middle of last year, started growing again in the July-September quarter, rising at an annual rate of 2.4 percent, the government said. It was the biggest advance in the GNP in more than two years and the clearest signal yet that the 1990-91 recession has come to an end.

UKRAINE (Philadelphia/UPI) -- The spiritual leader of Ukrainian Catholics in the U.S. has chided the Bush Administration for its resistance to total independence for their homeland. Archbishop of Philadelphia Stephen Sulyk, the Metropolitan for Ukrainian Catholics in the U.S...., sent a letter to President Bush saying, "We are embarrassed by the stance you have taken not only in contrast to a venerable American tradition honoring the civil, human and God-given rights of all men but also by the suggestion that freedom and independence are negotiable items based on what one considers economically and militarily feasible."

CHERNOBYL (Moscow/Reuter) -- The Ukrainian parliament voted in principle to close the Chernobyl atomic power station.

HAITI (Brussels/Reuter) -- Ousted President Aristide has urged the U.S. to strictly apply economic sanctions aimed at restoring him to power. In an interview with Belgium radio, Aristide applauded a tough U.S. public stance over sanctions but said words must be matched with action. "We welcome this fine declaration..., but we want strict application," he said.

(Paris/Reuter) -- Medical charity Medecins du Monde said it had sent three tons of medical supplies to Haiti after a fact-finding mission found food supplies and hygienic conditions on the island "very worrying."

BOAT PEOPLE (Hong Kong/AP) -- Vietnam and Britain signed a plan that could force more than 50,000 Vietnamese boat people from Hong Kong.... Secretary of Security Asprey said he hoped all boat people would be gone from Hong Kong in "two or three years."

PA SENATE RACE (Harrisburg/UPI) -- Sen. Wofford has closed dramatically into a virtual dead heat with Dick Thornburgh in the race for Wofford's Senate seat, according to a statewide poll released yesterday.... Wofford's populist message stressing the need for national health insurance appears to be wooing voters.

MIDEAST CONFERENCE (Madrid/Terence Hunt, AP) -- Presidents Bush and Gorbachev met today in prelude to a Mideast peace conference and the Soviet leader said they had used their time to "synchronize our watches" about subjects as diverse as arms control, the Soviet economy and Arab-Israeli disputes. At a joint news conference following about two hours of private talks, Bush said the leaders had agreed to renew arms control talks in the wake of unilateral cutbacks.... "Our schedules are very close," Bush said. On the Middle East, Gorbachev...said he and Bush would use "all the remedies at our disposal" to forge peace.... Bush said the two men also talked about possible food aid to the Soviet Union. "No specifics have been agreed on," he said.

MIDEAST ATTACKS (Jerusalem/AP) -- Arab guerrillas killed three Israeli soldiers and wounded 11 today in two attacks in southern Lebanon on the eve of the Mideast peace conference, officials and sources said. A roadside bomb was detonated by remote-control at 9 a.m. as an Israeli patrol passed near Aramta, a village at the northern edge of Israel's self-proclaimed security zone. Lebanese security sources said the blast left three soldiers dead and six wounded. In a separate attack, five Israeli soldiers were wounded in a clash with guerrillas near the village of Marwaheen in which two Arab commandos were killed and one wounded, according to Israeli military sources. Hezbollah claimed responsibility for the Aramta bombing in a statement from Tyre. Meanwhile, Abbas Musawi, leader of Hezbollah, pledged to step up attacks on Israel and its proxy, the South Lebanon Army militia, as part of a "pan-Islamic campaign to foil the conference."... In Madrid, an Israeli government spokesman, Yossi Olmert, accused the PLO of a role in the Aramta attack. "This is not a situation which can be allowed to continue," he said.

(Madrid/AP) -- Israel said the ambush wouldn't deter it from talking peace in Madrid.... "Some might have expected that in the face of this terror Israel would not attend the conference. But despite this violence, our quest for peace is unrelenting," Prime Minister Shamir said as he arrived in Madrid.

(Jerusalem/AP) -- After a terror attack on Jewish settlers, police began barring Palestinian residents of the occupied territories from entering Jerusalem until the peace talks end.... "Although we are going to a peace conference, we shall hit with all our force the terrorists and their leaders," said Prime Minister Shamir.

CONFERENCE/PALESTINIANS (Madrid/AP) -- A senior Palestinian official said he hoped an agreement to give autonomy to Palestinians in Israeli-occupied territories as an interim step could be reached at the Mideast peace conference. Faisal Husseini, head of the advisory committee overseeing the official Palestinian negotiating team, said the self-rule period should serve as a transition to independent statehood.... Asked if this demand was coordinated with the PLO, Husseini said: "Yes."

In another development, a PLO official and Arab diplomatic sources said a PLO delegation was arriving today to set up an operations room to monitor the peace conference.... The imminent arrival of was expected to cause Israeli protests. -more-

Barbara Bush: "George really does have a domestic policy agenda"

DALLAS (UPI) — First Lady Barbara Bush assured some 2,000 Republicans Tuesday that President Bush does have a domestic agenda.

Attending a Dallas County Republican Women's Clubs fundraising luncheon, Mrs. Bush praised the work of her husband and Secretary of State James Baker, who are attending the Middle East peace talks in Spain.

"America 2000 is at the top of the president's domestic policy agenda. That's right, George really does have a domestic policy agenda," she said in a joking fashion.

"It may be biased to say so, but I think George Bush is a superb president."

Mrs. Bush also promoted one of her favorite causes, literacy.

"Your work with Literacy Volunteers of America and the Dallas Public Library System is vital, and I also know this project is just the latest in a long list of community service programs which you have all supported," she said.

The money raised from the fundraiser will be used for Republican causes, with some of it going to local literacy programs, GOP party workers said.

Wilder Calls for Clean Cars

Plan Would Adopt California Standards for Tailpipe Emissions

By D'Vern Cohn
 Washington Post Staff Writer

Virginia Gov. L. Douglas Wilder proposed yesterday requiring that all new cars registered in Northern Virginia meet California's tougher tailpipe pollution standards.

Cleaner "California cars" would cost an extra $70 to $500, burn more fuel and have worse performance compared with vehicles now sold in Northern Virginia. But officials said the cars with more sophisticated antipollution controls would make a significant dent in the area's serious problem with smog, three-fourths of which is caused by autos.

Wilder's proposal, which would require the approval of the General Assembly, focuses attention on a growing movement in the area to reduce pollution from automobiles. Maryland Gov. William Donald Schaefer is considering similar legislation, aides said yesterday. And if its neighbors impose requirements for cleaner cars, there would be political and economic pressure on the District to do the same.

Today, representatives of states from New England to Virginia, meeting in Philadelphia, are expected to vote on a resolution endorsing the sale of the less-polluting cars within their borders. According to the American Lung Association, New York, Massachusetts, Connecticut and Maine have taken formal steps toward such requirements.

As has happened with similar proposals in other states, Wilder's

Koreans' Commercial Success Heightens Tensions With Competitors

By Liz Spayd

Charles Choi barely knows who Arnold Schwarzenegger is, but the Korean wholesaler felt sure that the sleek black sunglasses the film star wore in "Terminator II" would be a big fashion hit with the sidewalk shoppers of Washington. A cheap imitation of the shades was one of Choi's blockbusters this summer.

For other wholesalers, it's fold-up umbrellas. Or neon-colored headbands. Or gold-sprayed earrings. Inexpensive merchandise is what Koreans such as Choi, with strong commercial ties back home and an unerring sense of what the strolling shopper wants, are using to revolutionize the street vending trade in the District.

Today, Koreans hold nearly one third of the city's 3,000 street vendor jobs and, through their two dozen wholesalers, are in a position to exert control over much of the merchandise sold on the streets.

Their commercial triumph in a miniature, bustling economy was a decade in the making and as in many ways quintessentially American—the product of hard work, tireless energy and mutual cooperation. But success also has come at a price. City officials and vendors themselves say tensions have heightened considerably between Koreans, black vendors and dozens of other immigrant groups in their merchant subculture, both at the wholesale level and on the streets.

"They control everything," says Israel Rubio, who has a stand at the corner of 17th and L streets NW. "We refer to them as the Korean Mafia."

Yeltsin Announces Economic Reform

Russian Predicts 'Painful' Period

By Michael Dobbs
 Washington Post Foreign Service

MOSCOW, Oct. 28—Russian President Boris Yeltsin today staked his political career and the future of this vast republic on a program of drastic economic reforms designed to overcome the legacy of seven decades of Communist rule and steer Russia toward a Western-style market economy.

The plan would free prices and remove subsidies by the end of the year, privatize large sections of state-owned industry and agriculture and create a more viable currency.

Addressing the Russian parliament and nation at what he called "one of the most critical moments of Russian history," Yeltsin also nominated himself to the vacant post of Russian prime minister and said he was ready, in addition to being president, to head a new government of national unity to tackle a painful period of reforms.

By dominating himself, he has chosen to assume direct political responsibility for the success or failure of the long-awaited reform package.

In the past, successive Soviet governments have refrained from such a move toward a market economy for fear it would lead to runaway inflation and possibly uncontrollable social unrest.

But the economic situation has deteriorated to the point where Russian leaders have concluded that they now have no alternative. Economists predict that this year's budget deficit will amount to around 25 percent of gross national product and could double by next year if present trends continue.

Yeltsin conceded that lifting price

Economic Reform Plan of Yeltsin

■ Lifting of price controls on many food and consumer items and transportation by the end of 1991.

■ Denationalization of small and mid-sized state-owned industry and agriculture.

■ Creation of a viable currency.

■ Readiness to join with other republics in a new economic community.

■ A halt to Russian funding of 70 Soviet ministries and to foreign economic aid.

■ A decision to deal with newly independent Soviet republics in hard currency at "world prices," ending subsidization.

■ Nomination of Yeltsin as prime minister to head a national unity government to carry out reforms.

Fetal Monitors Widely Used, Often Unneeded

By William Booth
Washington Post Staff Writer

In the nursing station on the maternity wing at Georgetown University Medical Center, a row of Hewlett-Packard computer screens is keeping tabs on the anxiously beating hearts of babies about to be born.

With a glance at the central console, a nurse or doctor can see how a fetus is doing down the hall, where an expectant mother is attached to a Corometrics electronic monitor that eavesdrops on the fetal heart during the push and shove of labor.

It all looks so modern, so efficient, so comforting—a symbol of America's technological prowess and its commitment to the best medicine money can buy.

But many experts say the electronic fetal monitor is a costly device that is usually unnecessary and does little to improve the outcome of most pregnancies. In fact, it may make some deliveries riskier than they need be by encouraging unnecessary Caesarean sections.

The fetal monitor, health care experts say, illustrates many of the forces that make U.S. medicine the most expensive in the world, as patients demand the latest procedures and tests—and are prepared to sue if they don't get them—and as doctors assume a defensive crouch, willing to use technology that is not really needed rather than risk charges of malpractice.

Ethnic Strife Splintering Russian Republic's Core

KAZAN, U.S.S.R.—When Czar Ivan the Terrible captured this Volga River city from the Tatars in 1552, he opened the way to more than four centuries of almost uninterrupted Russian expansionism. Today, the multinational empire founded by the czars and consolidated by the commissars is falling apart.

"This city is where the Russian empire started. It is also where it is going to end," predicted Fani Ahmad, a green-robed Muslim cleric, at a Tatar independence rally outside the parliament building here in

The collapse of empire—the historical process that got underway in earnest in 1989 with the toppling of pro-Soviet regimes in Eastern Europe and then spread to the Soviet Union itself—has now reached the core of the centuries-old Russian state. Davis's Roots As Compromiser Reach Deep

Fairfax Republican's Style Seen as Strength, Weakness

By Peter Baker
Washington Post Staff Writer

Thomas M. Davis III spent the last 12 years on the Fairfax County Board as a peacemaker, crafting compromise between developers and slow-growth groups, between longtime residents and new immigrants. Now, he wants to be board chairman, continuing his search for common ground, a role he says he learned as a child.

His father, Tom Davis II, was sometimes a decent, gentle man, a brilliant college professor who liked to take his family on picnics along the Potomac River in Great Falls and grill his oldest son, Tom III, about U.S. presidents on the ride home.

But other times he was a mean alcoholic who shouted and raged, who left home for nearly five years, who embarrassed his children by showing up drunk in public places, who was jailed for crimes such as petty larceny committed while he was drinking.

There were times when, in a drunken fit, he would chase his wife out of the house and around the front lawn—youth Tom lost in pursuit, trying to protect his mother and calm the situation. "Very often when he was drinking, Dad was very verbally abusive of our mother and I think that's one of the reasons [Tom] likes to be a peacemaker and he likes to find a comfortable settlement," said Patricia Elliott, Davis's older sister. "He doesn't like confrontation. He doesn't shy away from it, because he's had to deal with it, but he doesn't like it."

Thomas M. Davis III has been trying to make peace ever since—between Democrats and Republicans, between developers and slow-growth activists, between longtime residents and newly arrived immigrants, between advocates for the bankrupt and upset neighbors of a proposed shelter

Now, as the Republican candidate for chairman of the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors, the three-term Mason District supervisor wants to bring his brand of compromise politics to the highest office of the Washington area's largest jurisdiction.

Friends and foes say the same thing about Davis: He tries to please everyone.

As his backers see him, Davis can work with people of different backgrounds and huge a workable compromise, even in trying circumstances. In

Participants Gather for Mideast Peace Talks

By Jackson Diehl and David Hoffman
Washington Post Foreign Service

MADRID, Oct. 28—Israeli and Arab delegations to the Middle East peace conference arrived here tonight and immediately plunged into backstage procedural disputes with the United States, a signal of the difficulties that some diplomats fear may hamstring the negotiations.

On the eve of a summit meeting Tuesday between President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev that will set the stage for the conference, Israeli officials complained that the United States had brushed aside their objections to the high profile to be played by Palestinians at the ceremonial opening sessions of the talks.

The Palestinians, seeking to establish themselves as a quasi-independent entity at the talks despite their official status as part of a joint delegation with Jordan, received permission from U.S. and Soviet sponsors to deliver one of the 45-minute speeches allocated to each delegation. Israelis protested that since the address will be in addition to a Jordanian speech, it will undermine the conference ground rule, demanded by Israel, that the Palestinians appear only under Jordan's umbrella.

Zalman Shoval, Israel's ambassador to the United States, met today with State Department Policy Planning Director Dennis Ross to discuss the issue, but official sources said Israel's complaint was rejected. Afterward, Shoval said the dispute would not threaten Israel's participation in the conference, but he added, "I would characterize it as a snag and a hitch and a problem."

In private, Israeli officials said they were upset about the dismissive U.S. response to several complaints this week about the role of the Palestinians. Before leaving Washington, Shoval met Ross to complain about statements by a Palestinian delegate, Saeb Erakat, that the group was a "PLO delegation." Israel and the United States had agreed that none of the Palestinian delegates could be a member of the PLO, and that the PLO would be formally excluded from the conference.

According to Israeli sources, Ross responded to Shoval by saying, "Hold your breath."

Bush, before leaving Washington today, warned against expectations becoming too great that the conference could produce a breakthrough. "We have a long, long way to go before we have the makings of, or have an agreement for, peace in that troubled corner of the world," he told a business group at the White House.

Defense Secretary Richard B. Cheney, in a speech in Washington to the Jewish Institute for National Security Affairs, pledged Monday that the United States "will continue to support Israel's qualitative military edge over all possible enemies, and we remain committed to ensuring Israel's security in the years ahead," Reuter reported.

See CONFERENCE, A18, Col. 3

CONFERENCE, From A16

Gorbachev, who with Bush will convene the conference Wednesday, arrived here tonight on his first trip abroad since he was confined for three days in August during a failed hard-line coup. The Soviet president, considerably weakened politically since the coup, is scheduled to meet Bush Tuesday to discuss the Middle East and bilateral issues.

Although the Soviet Union was far less active than the United States in bringing the Middle East nations to the conference table, a Gorbachev spokesman, Igor Malaschenko, said tonight that the Soviets had played an important role in persuading Syria to take part and would stay involved in the peace process.

Bush is to meet with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir—their first direct talks in almost a year—and with a delegation of Arab officials in separate sessions Wednesday morning before the peace conference begins, administration officials here said today.

As the delegations poured into Madrid along with thousands of journalists and Middle East activists, the sponsors outlined how the actual talks will be conducted, around a table in the shape of a "T" with the United States and Soviet Union sitting at the top of the "T" and the others along the sides. The European Community, the joint Palestinian-Jordanian delegation and the Syrians will sit on one side, facing the Egyptians, Israelis and Lebanese.

The peace conference will be opened Wednesday by Spanish Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez, followed by speeches from Bush and Gorbachev. Then Egypt and the EC delegations will speak. On Thursday, Israel will speak, followed by the twin Jordanian-Palestinian presentations, and then Lebanon and Syria.

On Friday, rebuttals have been scheduled, starting with Israel and followed by the dual Jordanian-Palestinian delegation, Lebanon, Syria, Egypt, and then Soviet Foreign Minister Boris Pankin and Secretary of State James A. Baker III.

Five Others Wounded in Shooting; Iranian Radical Calls for Suicide Attacks on Israel

By William Tuohy
Los Angeles Times

JERUSALEM, Oct. 28—Two Jewish settlers were killed and five others were wounded tonight in a machine-gun attack on a civilian bus heading from the Israeli-occupied West Bank to a rally in Tel Aviv to protest any disbanding of Israeli settlements.

The attack came despite a high state of alert observed by the army and the police, which have been preparing for terrorist violence during the Middle East peace talks that began Wednesday in Madrid.

Witnesses said bursts of automatic weapons fire erupted in the growing darkness near the town of Shilo north of Jerusalem. Police had no immediate suspects. Wire reports said perhaps as many as four children were among the wounded.

Settlers were quoted as blaming the Palestine Liberation Organization for the attack, and one declared, "How can you sit down with the PLO at a peace table?"

Hanan Ashrawi, a spokeswoman for the Palestinian peace talks delegation, condemned the attack. She said in a television interview that it reflected the "extremely volatile" situation in the occupied West Bank.

An estimated 100,000 settlers live in the West Bank and Gaza, the home of about 1.7 million Palestinians. The settlers have been adamant that their controversial new towns should not become a negotiable issue at the Middle East conference.

Earlier in the day, Yossi Ben-Aharon, Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's chief political adviser, declared that Israel will be the "defendant" at the Madrid conference and therefore should have special status.

"Perhaps a number of Arab states will come and each with its claims and criticisms," he said, as the Israelis prepared to depart Tuesday. "Therefore, Israel should be allowed more time and more possibility to present its position."

Right-wing members of Israeli settlements in the West Bank held the demonstration in Tel Aviv to warn against any agreement in Madrid that would result in dismantling the new communities in the occupied territories. It was billed as a counterdemonstration to a Saturday protest that attracted 30,000 people to endorse the concept of trading land for peace as a way of reaching agreement with the Arabs.

A Palestinian revolt against Israel's 24-year-old occupation of the territories is nearing the end of its fourth year. Today's attack brought to 74 the number of Israelis killed in the rebellion. A total of 834 Palestinians have been killed by Israelis during the revolt. A further 410 have been killed by fellow Arabs—mainly for aiding Israeli security forces.

An Iranian radical, meanwhile, called in an interview for suicide attacks on the Jewish state, the Associated Press reported. The Beirut newspaper Ad-Diyar quoted Ali Akbar Mohtashemi, Iran's former interior minister, as describing the Madrid conference as "high treason" and a "crime against the Palestinian people."

Mohtashemi, a founder of Hezbollah, the Shiite group believed to be an umbrella for factions holding Western hostages in Lebanon, was quoted as saying: "I have the wish to sacrifice myself for the sake of fulfilling the teachings of Imam [Ayatollah Ruhollah] Khomeini for the liberation of Palestine."

In Ankara, Turkey, two separate explosions today killed an American serviceman and seriously wounded an Egyptian diplomat, the AP reported. An extremist group opposed to the Middle East peace conference claimed responsibility.

An anonymous caller made the claim in the name of Islamic Jihad, or Islamic Holy War, but it appeared unlikely he was referring to the Lebanese group of that name that is holding Western hostages.

Also today, U.S. Ambassador to Jordan Roger Harrison was seriously injured in an auto accident just west of Jerusalem when he was driving from Amman to the Tel Aviv airport to catch a flight to Madrid, where he was scheduled to attend the talks as an observer.

In a head-on collision involving an embassy limousine and an Israeli car, an Israeli woman was killed; Harrison sustained serious stomach injuries for which he underwent an operation at Hadassah Hospital. He was reported to be out of danger tonight.

Gorbachev Playing New Role

Soviet Meeting Bush With Power Reduced

By Fred Hiatt
Washington Post Foreign Service

MADRID, Oct. 28—Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, whose past meetings with U.S. presidents helped make him a superstar on the world stage, will meet with President Bush Tuesday morning as a diminished figure, a victim of his own success in ending the Cold War and stimulating revolutionary change at home.

To be sure, Gorbachev's appearance here, his first venture into global diplomacy since a failed hard-line putsch in August greatly weakened his power, still holds great significance. The two leaders are expected to discuss the domestic turmoil in the Soviet Union, prospects for Western aid, future arms reductions and the Middle East peace conference which the two presidents will convene on Wednesday.

But the most dramatic fact of the meeting may be the changed position in which Gorbachev finds himself as he lunches with Bush at the Soviet Embassy here.

"Of course he can speak for the Soviet Union," said Vladimir Lukin, a senior member of Gorbachev's own delegation. "But the question is, what is the Soviet Union?"

The uncertainty of the answer to that question was underscored over the weekend when Turkmenistan, a small Central Asian republic, became the 10th of 12 remaining Soviet republics to declare independence. Only Kazakhstan and Russia, the two largest, have yet to formally break away.

Gorbachev has responded to the fragmentation of the Communist superpower by seeking to unite the republics in a loose confederation with central foreign, military and economic policies. But most of the republics are resistant to anything that smacks of control from Moscow.

Gorbachev's changed role was underlined today when Russian republic President Boris Yeltsin unveiled a dramatic blueprint for radical economic reform, the success or failure of which is likely to have more impact on the future of the Soviet Union than anything Gorbachev might accomplish in Madrid.

The Soviet role in assembling the peace conference, the formal reason for Gorbachev's presence here, has been subsidiary to the efforts of Secretary of State James A. Baker III, Soviet diplomats agree.

Gorbachev himself acknowledged the new realities by including in his small delegation both Lukin, chairman of the Russian parliament's foreign affairs committee, and the foreign minister of the republic of Tajikistan. Though he was included, Lukin was highly critical of the Soviet Foreign Ministry's failure to consult in advance with the foreign ministries of Russia and other republics.

"For the Soviet Union now to act without the active involvement of its constituent republics is not only difficult but ridiculous," Lukin said.

Lukin, however, said he believes the central government still has an important role to play. And in an interview today, Gorbachev's deputy spokesman, Igor Malaschenko, said the Soviet president remains an important person for the West to do business with.

"Yes, there are many independent players in the Soviet Union," Malaschenko said. "But they need and they want their activities to be balanced in one way or another. There are disagreements among them."

"President Gorbachev in the foreseeable future is the only one able to play this role—the role of great coordinator."

Malaschenko said the Soviet Union also has an important role to play in the Middle East, especially given the increasing importance of its Muslim Central Asian republics. Gorbachev may meet with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir on Tuesday.

Soviet officials said Gorbachev is likely to urge Bush to withhold Western aid from republics that do not agree to coordinate economic and military policies.

But if Gorbachev is seeking a boost at home through his return to summit diplomacy, it is also in the interest of the West to support his efforts to maintain some union structure as the Soviet Union's republics spin away. Sergei Rogov, an arms control expert in Moscow, said in an interview. That interest is most compelling when it comes to Gorbachev's efforts to maintain control over the Soviet arsenal of 27,000 nuclear warheads, which are dispersed across several republics.

"A civil war in a nuclear superpower is not in the interest of anyone in the world," Rogov said. "The major challenge now is joint management of our common nuclear legacy. This legacy needs very delicate handling, and neither side can do it on its own."

Yeltsin Announces Economic Reform

Russian Predicts 'Painful' Period

By Michael Dobbs
Washington Post Foreign Service

MOSCOW, Oct. 28—Russian President Boris Yeltsin today staked his political career and the future of this vast republic on a program of drastic economic reforms designed to overcome the legacy of seven decades of Communist rule and steer Russia toward a Western-style market economy.

The plan would free prices and remove subsidies by the end of the year, privatize large sections of state-owned industry and agriculture and create a more viable currency.

Addressing the Russian parliament and nation at what he called "one of the most critical moments of Russian history," Yeltsin also nominated himself to the vacant post of Russian prime minister and said he was ready, in addition to being president, to head a new government of national unity to tackle a painful period of reforms.

By nominating himself, he has chosen to assume direct political responsibility for the success or failure of the long-awaited reform package.

In the past, successive Soviet governments have refrained from such a move toward a market economy for fear it would lead to runaway inflation and possibly uncontrollable social unrest.

But the economic situation has deteriorated to the point where Russian leaders have concluded that they now have no alternative. Economists predict that this year's budget deficit will amount to around 25 percent of gross national product and could double by next year if present trends continue.

Yeltsin conceded that lifting price controls over a wide range of food items, consumer goods and transportation is a "painful measure," but said talk of a free market without such a step was "idle chatter."

"Over the last few years, everybody has realized this, but nobody had the nerve to actually do it," he told the deputies, who must vote on his economic plan.

"The time has come to act decisively, harshly, without hesitation," Yeltsin said, staking his political career on reforms designed to overcome the legacy of seven decades of Communist rule. "If we don't seize this real chance to break the unfavorable course of events, we shall condemn ourselves to beggary and our centuries-old state to disaster."

"This is the most difficult decision in my life. I have never sought the easy way out, but I clearly understand that the next few months will be the most difficult I have ever experienced," said Yeltsin, who played the decisive role in defeating a coup attempt by hard-line Communists in August.

Yeltsin has previously shied away from making tough economic decisions that could harm the living standards of his supporters, and had been expected to nominate either a professional economist or a close political aide as prime minister.

"He is putting his own popularity on the line. His rating in the opinion polls is bound to go down—and he understands this very well. We all know what happened in Poland," said Pavel Voschanov, his press secretary, referring to the electoral defeat of Polish politicians responsible for introducing the economic reform package known as "shock therapy."

Yeltsin's decision to embrace a Russian version of "shock therapy" follows two months of political hesitation and in-fighting between senior Russian officials following the failure of the coup attempt. His hour-long speech to the Russian Congress of People's Deputies was clearly intended to end the sense of drift that has seized the population and to regain the confidence of Western governments and international financial institutions.

His speech contained a blunt warning to the Communist Party, other republics, and the congress itself not to interfere with the process of economic reform in Russia, the Soviet Union's largest and wealthiest republic. He asked to be granted additional executive powers to rule by decree during the transitional period and dismiss local officials who refused to carry out his orders.

Yeltsin said Russia is prepared to cooperate with other republics in implementing reforms and creating a new economic community, but would go it alone if necessary. He said moves by the Ukraine and several other republics to establish their own currencies and national armies could provoke Russia into taking similar measures.

The economic reforms announced by Yeltsin today bear some similarity to the 500-day program for a transition to a market economy that was debated a year ago by the Soviet parliament but never implemented. But the current package puts much greater emphasis on freeing prices from government control in a single comprehensive operation designed to liberalize the economy and plug a gaping hole in the state budget.

Reform-minded economists and legislators welcomed Yeltsin's speech, while expressing concern over the possibility of an inflationary explosion as soon as prices are lifted. Several said that the implementation of the reforms would prove even more difficult in Russia than in Poland, where the Communists had allowed small-scale private enterprise and some private farming for many years.

"It would have been much easier to do this if we still had the financial resources," said Yevgeny Yasin, one of the authors of the abortive 500-day plan, pointing out that Russia's hard currency reserves have dwindled sharply over the past year. He estimated prices will rise by four to five times within weeks of being freed.

Although Yeltsin said prices would be freed "in the current year," his aides said a more likely date is Jan. 1, 1992. Oil products and some consumer staples, such as bread, are likely to be excluded, they said.

The price move will be preceded by a financial stabilization program designed to mop up some of the billions of excess rubles in circulation and cut the deficit. Yeltsin said that Russia would stop funding about 70 Soviet ministries as of Nov. 1 and would end all economic assistance to foreign countries.

Yeltsin said Russia would initiate a sweeping denationalization program in the next three months, closing loss-making collective and state farms and selling 50 percent of small and medium-sized companies. But he conceded that it would be very difficult to privatize huge industrial plants, and called instead for forming joint stock companies free of direct government supervision.

In a move that could have a serious impact on the economies of the Baltic states and other former Soviet republics demanding full independence, he said Russia would deal with them on the basis of "world prices." Until now, Russia has in effect subsidized the other republics by supplying them with oil and other raw materials at a fraction of the world price. Yeltsin's principal economic adviser, Egor Gaidar, estimates that Russia is losing about $9 billion a year by doing this.

Earlier this month, Russia joined seven other republics in setting up an economic community with the aim of guaranteeing a single economic space across the territory of the former Soviet Union and establishing an inter-republican bank to control the money supply. Today, Yeltsin appeared to set limits to Russia's participation in the community by insisting Russia would take steps to protect its consumer market from a flood of worthless rubles from other republics.

Insisting that his government was determined to regain control over the money supply, he said Russian participation in the bank was conditional on other republics giving up attempts to introduce their own currencies in the near future. He also demanded that each republic's vote in the bank reflect the size of its capital contribution, a provision that would almost certainly give Russia effective control over the bank.

While Yeltsin promised to take steps to protect low-income families from the effects of the price rises, he acknowledged that the living standards of many Russians would drop significantly over the next few months. He said wage controls would be lifted to allow enterprising Russians willing to take on several jobs to earn considerably more than now.

KGB Defector Predicts an Increase In Moscow's Industrial Espionage

By George Lardner Jr.
Washington Post Staff Writer

Soviet KGB defector Stanislav Levchenko predicted yesterday that Moscow will step up its industrial espionage in the years ahead because of its deteriorating economic situation.

Speaking at a conference on American international business security, Levchenko, a KGB major before defecting in 1979, predicted that the new Soviet intelligence service, now divorced from the traditional KGB and its secret police functions, would exploit the increasing number of U.S.-Soviet business contacts to steal Western technology.

With their economy crumbling, the Soviets "don't have the money to pay" for advanced business techniques and designs so they will steal them or obtain them with bribes, he said. "The Soviets in the field of intelligence were always very practical."

Some U.S. experts disagreed with Levchenko's assessment. One U.S. official said an aggressive Soviet program of economic espionage would jeopardize the help from other countries that it so badly needs. "I don't know if they want to cut off their nose to spite their face," this official said.

Levchenko, who once directed Soviet covert actions in Japan and other Far East countries, said the economic espionage would be subtle, frequently under the guise of offering to help U.S. businesses get established in the Soviet Union. One ripe target, he warned, will be small U.S.-Soviet joint ventures that can be expected to grow with the help of American capital. "That's where you will find a lot of KGB [officers] under cover," he said.

Levchenko spoke at the opening of a three-day International Security Systems Symposium in Crystal City where the emphasis was on the threat of economic espionage and the wares available to fight it. More than 80 companies set up booths in an exhibit area with high-tech paraphernalia ranging from powerful electromagnetic locks to video enhancement devices that can find startling amounts of detail in dark-gray pictures.

The keynote speaker, Michelle Van Cleave, assistant national security policy director for the White House Office of Science and Technology, said American businesses have put too little emphasis on recognizing the dangers of international industrial espionage. She said there are limits on the help the U.S.

government can provide businesses—partly because of the difficulty of defining "what constitutes an American company" and partly because helping one company might put others at a disadvantage.

Former CIA director Richard M. Helms, another speaker, said "a visceral recognition of the problem" by business executives would be more valuable than new laws and sanctions beyond those already on the books, such as export controls and licensing regulations.

"The ball really is in industry's court," he said. Helms said the intelligence agencies of many countries regard industrial and commercial targets as more important to them than military or political targets. But it is up to individual businesses, he said, to decide what secrets they must protect and how to protect them.

Greenspan Notes Weak Recovery

Prospect Is Raised For Interest Rate Cut

By John M. Berry
Washington Post Staff Writer

The nation's recovery from recession has "turned demonstrably sluggish" in recent weeks, Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan said yesterday, raising the prospect that the central bank could cut interest rates again soon in an effort to give the economy a boost.

Using unusually blunt language, Greenspan told a University of Rhode Island business conference: "The economy is moving forward, but in the face of 50-mile-an-hour head winds. . . . From all the data that we have, it is evident that the economy is rising, but at a pace a good deal slower than one typically sees during the recovery out of a recession."

Greenspan's comments were similar to those from several senior Bush administration officials, such as Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady, who have been urging the Fed to reduce interest rates. On Sunday, Brady said, "It is obvious the economy is not coming back as strongly as it should."

While Greenspan did not explain what economic indicators were worrying him the most, he is known to watch closely the monthly flow of new orders received by manufacturers and the weekly level of new claims for unemployment benefits filed with state employment offices across the country.

After a record surge in July, new orders fell moderately in August and did so again in September for long-lasting goods such as cars, steel and machine tools. The level of initial jobless claims, which rose to more than 500,000 a week during the recession, fell to a low of around 400,000 a week in July and has since risen again to about 420,000 to 430,000.

Greenspan's cautious comments on the economy came on the eve of the Commerce Department's first report on the gross national product for the July-September quarter. Most analysts expect it to show that the economy grew at about a 2.5 percent annual rate, but most of that gain will reflect growth in June and July that significantly boosted the third-quarter figures. Monthly data for August and September suggest the recovery was far less robust, analysts said.

See GREENSPAN, D7, Col. 1

Most of the Fed chairman's speech yesterday was devoted to the lack of availability of bank credit, particularly for small and medium-sized business. This problem is acute in some areas such as New England, where many financial institutions have suffered large loan losses, and is one reason the recovery is so sluggish, Greenspan said.

The broader need for many households and businesses to reduce their debt loads, which rose sharply during the 1980s, is also a factor in the weak recovery, he said.

"Greenspan's comments represented a real change in tone," said Charles Lieberman, managing director of Manufacturers Hanover Securities Corp. in New York. "In a sense, Greenspan had been acting about like a cheerleader for the economy. I take this to indicate that the Fed's perception of the economy has turned decidedly more unoptimistic."

Lieberman predicted that that loss of optimism at the Fed would cause it to cut short-term interest rates by a quarter of a percentage point sometime between today and next Tuesday, when the U.S. Treasury will begin its regular quarterly auction of long-term notes and bonds.

The central bank has reduced the federal funds rate—the interest rate financial institutions charge one another on overnight loans—in a long series of quarter-point steps from nearly 10 percent to 5.25 percent. The reduction from 5.5 percent came on Sept. 13. Long-term interest rates have fallen much less sharply, but recently home mortgage rates hit their lowest level in 14 years.

At its last meeting in late September, the central bank's top policy-making group, the Federal Open Market Committee, gave Greenspan the authority to cut the federal funds rate by up to half a percentage point. So far, he has not acted despite strong public pressure from President Bush and other administration officials.

Other analysts speculated that a rate cut could come Friday if the Labor Department's report on employment and unemployment for October, due out that morning, shows the sort of weakness Greenspan pointed to yesterday in Rhode Island.

Lieberman said details of the GNP report today could also trigger a Fed move, especially if, as he expects, most of the third-quarter's increase in production went into business inventories rather than being consumed in the nation's homes or invested in new plants and equipment for business.

Meanwhile, President Bush appeared to rule out any new tax or spending proposals to stimulate the economy.

"I know there's a lot to be done. I'm not relaxed about the economy," the president told an American Gas Association convention in San Diego via a television hookup.

But Bush turned thumbs down on some congressional proposals to cut taxes. "I'm not going to jump in and take steps out of some congressional panic that might make the situation worse. It might burden future generations more," he said.

Aid Is Urged For a New South Africa

Program Would Be Linked to Democracy

By Don Oberdorfer
Washington Post Staff Writer

A bipartisan group of members of Congress asked President Bush yesterday to initiate an international aid program to help South Africa after establishment of a democratic government there.

The lawmakers, led by Rep. Stephen J. Solarz (D-N.Y.), said in a letter to Bush that the establishment of such an aid program would be a "positive incentive" to encourage South Africa's leaders to move rapidly toward creation of a non-racial democracy.

The South African government of President Frederik W. de Klerk last year declared its willingness to enter into negotiations for a new constitution that would give the majority black population the vote for the first time, but these negotiations, while in prospect, have not yet begun. Experts said it is likely to take one to three years to complete a new constitution and hold more democratic elections.

Solarz, a leader in the U.S.-sponsored Multilateral Aid Initiative for the Philippines several years ago, cited that program as a model for the aid initiative now being proposed. The United States took the lead in planning and organizing the Philippine aid effort and pledged $1 billion of the $6.7 billion raised from a total of 24 countries and international organizations.

The proposal sent to Bush yesterday drew support from 13 members of the House and five members of the Senate who represent a broad spectrum of political opinion. In addition to Solarz, the House members include Ronald V. Delums (D-Calif.), former chairman of the Black Caucus; Mervyn M. Dymally (D-Calif.), chairman of the Africa subcommittee of the Foreign Affairs Committee; House Minority Whip Newt Gingrich (R-Ga.), and Vin Weber (R-Minn.), secretary of the House Republican Conference. The senators include liberal Democrat Howard M. Metzenbaum (Ohio); conservative Republican Alan K. Simpson (Wyo.), and Richard G. Lugar (R-Ind.), a leading proponent of the Philippines initiative.

The broad sponsorship of aid for a democratic South Africa was facilitated by Bush's decision in July to lift economic sanctions, according to congressional sources. The president's action effectively made moot the sanctions issue, formerly a contentious question on Capitol Hill.

In view of the progress toward political reform that has already been made, the lawmakers said, the time has come to signal U.S. and international support for a democratic South Africa. They forecast that immense economic challenges will face a post-apartheid South Africa, where they said the black average monthly wage is $175 compared with white per capita income of $1,000.

The lawmakers declared that the aid program "should commence only after the adoption of a new constitution, the holding of free and fair elections and the establishment of a democratically elected government." The letter said this is "to avoid simply compensating for South African social programs that currently provide benefits on a discriminatory basis."

A State Department official said the administration has no official position yet on the congressional plan, but in principle favors economic help to a future democratic South Africa.

Bush's 'New' Science Awards Mean Fewer Grants Overall

Other Program for Young Researchers Cut

By William Booth
Washington Post Staff Writer

At a Rose Garden ceremony last month to honor recipients of the National Medals of Science and Technology for their lifetime achievements, President Bush announced the creation of a program to support brilliant young researchers at the beginning of their careers.

Called Presidential Faculty Fellows, the program would provide awards of $500,000 each to 30 youthful researchers. The windfall would allow the scientists to do their work for five years without having to apply for other federal grants or grub money from industry.

"Our commitment to science and technology," Bush said, "proves beyond doubt we will not shortchange the future."

Rep. Howard Wolpe (D-Mich.) says baloney.

In a crackling letter to the White House science adviser, D. Allan Bromley, an architect of the new program, Wolpe charged, "What neither you, nor President Bush bothered to include in your announcement was the fact that this is not a new program, but a reprogramming of funds that will actually reduce the total number of presidential grants to promising young academicians."

According to Wolpe, the president and Bromley are being "cavalier and deceptive." The White House is taking money from an existing program for young scientists to create its "new" and similar program. In the end, fewer young scientists will get money, though some will get larger cash awards.

"The bottom line is that 30 or 40 fewer academicians will get awards," said Wolpe, chairman of the Science, Space and Technology subcommittee on investigations and oversight. "My hope is that by exposing an example of this kind of deception it will discourage such experiences in the future."

Wolpe called the White House initiative "a shell game."

"I do not consider this a shell game," Bromley said in an interview last week. "It's not quantity we're after, but quality."

The Bush initiative, however, does take its money from a similar awards program begun in 1983 by Ronald Reagan and called Presidential Young Investigators (PYI).

The PYI grants, administered by the National Science Foundation, provide young scientists—defined by academic experience, not by age—with an average of about $50,000 a year for five years. The exact figure depends on how much matching money a scientist can get from industry. The foundation gives a minimum of $25,000, then adds as much as $37,500 if the money is met with industry funds.

Over the years, the number of youthful investigators awarded PYI grants has gone up and down. Last year, 211 scientists got awards. This year there were 220.

But because the impact of Bush's program had to be "budget neutral," the Presidential Young Investigators program will be cut to pay for Bush's Presidential Faculty Fellows. Instead of funding 220 young scientists, the PYI program will support about 150 researchers next year, allowing Bush to support 30 in his program.

"There's no new money," said Terence Porter, division director for research career development at the science foundation.

Moreover, because there now will be two award programs for youthful scientists, Porter said, there will be more bureaucracy.

Recipients of the Presidential Faculty Fellows awards will have to be formally approved by the White House, though Bromley said no one will be denied a grant for political reasons. They also will have to undergo an FBI background check.

Bromley defended the initiative, saying it is more prestigious, because awards will go to only 30 scientists and engineers.

Replied Wolpe, "Tell that to the people who will not have the support that otherwise would have been available."

The CIA's Unrepentant Side

Robert M. Gates has promised that things are going to be different at the CIA—no more lying to Congress, no more cooking of reports or suppression of dissent. What is he going to do about the condescension?

The official motto of the agency is "Seek Ye the Truth." The real one, however, is "None of Your Business."

Acting Director Richard Kerr—gray hair, gray suit, patronizing manner—went before the Senate subcommittee on terrorism, narcotics and international operations the other day and the "old" CIA was in full view.

He was not amused by Chairman John F. Kerry's presumption that the CIA should explain what it was doing with BCCI, the big bad bank accused of duping public officials and laundering drug money. Charges that it had failed to blow the whistle were, he said, "outrageous and unfounded."

Why, said Kerr huffily, the agency had written hundreds of reports—and disseminated them all around the government except to the one agency that could have done something about it—the Federal Reserve.

"Even in hindsight," he said, Treasury, Justice and other law enforcement agencies were the appropriate customers for the agency's reports. Snidely, he went on, "If I had addressed the Federal Reserve, that probably would have been useful for this hearing."

Kerry (D-Mass.) asked politely if the committee might see the reports.

Kerr was reflexively not at all sure. "Our problem with disseminating individual reports is one very close to sources and methods." He would, however, be "glad to pursue it."

"Is this going to be one of those long pursuits?" asked Kerry.

"Well," said Kerr, "I would like to look carefully at what we are talking about and talk to our oversight committee . . ."

That last was a little reminder that the man monitoring the spooks is doting David L. Boren (D-Okla.), who is infatuated with the agency, and is leading the charge in the Senate for Gates's confirmation.

Kerry gently pointed out that other departments had seen the information. "If they can get it, the U.S. Senate ought to get it, is that fair?" Kerry's good manners briefly discountenanced Kerr, who agreed it was fair.

The exchange illustrated the difficulty of reconciling a secret intelligence agency with democratic openness. The Senate should, of course, be debating the excellent suggestion of Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan (D-N.Y.) that with the end of the Cold War, the CIA should be shut down and its activities taken over by the State Department. But conservatives can't very well push other favorite follies like space stations and "Star Wars" if they turn the CIA into a homeless shelter, and make it official that Moscow is a basket case.

Sen. Hank Brown (R-Colo.) attempted to persuade Kerr that the spook who chose not to alert the Fed should be called on the carpet.

"My training is, someone is supposed to take responsibility," said Brown. Kerr did not even attempt to conceal his contempt. He had no intention of punishing the individual who had made "an honest mistake"—a mistake that caused a tidal wave in banking circles and endangered the life savings of thousands of small depositors.

"I am not sure it was a bad decision," he said, unrepentantly, exhibiting an unfamiliarity with the repentance curve so effectively ridden by Gates in his confirmation hearings before the Senate intelligence committee.

Contrition is all the rage now. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (D-Mass.) was driven to it and Sen. Alan K. Simpson (R-Wyo.), too. The Senate loves to see heavy traffic on the sawdust trail.

The real rap against Gates is that he was not a good citizen in the Iran-contra affair. He wasn't even mildly curious about the bad things coming down in his own government. His career, the agency, came before the country. He knew what was up earlier than he ever admitted to Congress and did nothing about it, just as Kerr knew that BCCI was a rogue bank and felt no obligation to go the extra mile.

The CIA is a law unto itself, with a culture, a mystique that is probably in the walls over there, like the condescension. But Gates's minimalist concession that he should have asked more questions cinched his confirmation. Kerr treated the senators with an arrogance that doubtless guaranteed him a hero's welcome back in Langley.

The acting director was disdainful of their questions. "I am not sure what the point of that question is," he would sniff, or, "I am not sure how relevant this is to this issue."

The real problem is that the CIA does not think there's any point or relevance to Congress, and Congress's reaction is to lick its boots.

End Nuclear Testing Now

In no area of nuclear arms control have the Soviets more egregiously violated agreements than on limiting nuclear testing, the worst violation being their resumption of testing after a three-year moratorium (1958-1961) involving the most massively contaminating series of tests in history. With such a record it would seem downright hypocritical for Mikhail Gorbachev to declare a one-year moratorium on Soviet underground testing and invite the rest of the world to join him.

So what should the U.S. response be? To answer this question, consider the most pertinent areas of nuclear application and how vital the need for testing in these areas may be.

■ Strategic Warfare: For decades the United States has sought to develop a doctrine for actually fighting, not just deterring, a nuclear war. It has failed abysmally. The best it can do today, as at the beginning, is to threaten such a terrible reprisal that the Soviets never would dare attack. In the areas that truly count for nuclear war-fighting, our shortcomings have been deplorable—in intelligence, targeting, force survivability, etc. Least important in this bizarre business is nuclear warhead technology, which is almost irrelevant to the central issue. Add to this President Bush's plans for reducing strategic armaments and discontinuing some of our major weapon programs, plus Gorbachev's declaration to go him even one step farther, there seems no need for continuing to test strategic nuclear warheads.

■ Tactical Warfare: There have been tactical nuclear weapons in our arsenal for close to 40 years. Never, however, has there been a coherent doctrine for their use on the battlefield. Technical progress in this area has not reflected itself in truly improved military capabilities or the resolve to use them. And now that both Bush and Gorbachev plan to eliminate practically all of them, it seems almost ludicrous to argue for improving these warheads through testing. The realities of tactical nuclear politics have prevailed over the fantasies of nuclear planners and technologists, and they should accept this fact.

■ Missile Defense: For the United States, nothing should be more important than protecting itself from nuclear attack, which would be catastrophic at almost any level. President Bush agrees with this view, and apparently so does President Gorbachev. Accordingly, both have left anti-missile developments off their weapon hit lists. Yet, even though the threat is nuclear, on the U.S. side it has become clear that only non-nuclear defenses are under serious consideration. Moreover, the Soviets now seem willing to amend the ABM treaty of 1972, prohibiting such defenses, to allow both countries to deploy a limited non-nuclear anti-ballistic missile system. As promising as certain nuclear defensive technologies may be, the political realities governing the Strategic Defense Initiative program do not justify the need for nuclear testing in this area.

In view of these considerations, President Bush would be well advised to go Gorbachev one dramatic step better and order the immediate indefinite cessation of nuclear testing. No serious security risk seems at stake here, and a great deal could be gained politically if such action, accompanied by a strong plea, persuades other nations to discontinue their nuclear warhead development programs.

The nonproliferation of nuclear weapons always has been a major U.S. policy objective. In particular, were the president to take such bold action, it could provide him with strong moral authority and support from most of the world should he decide to renew military operations against Iraq to terminate its nuclear program.

However one assesses our present nuclear stockpile and what will remain of it after Bush's new directive has been implemented, it seems to have been mainly responsible for keeping us and our allies out of nuclear war. If it ain't broke don't fix it, and perhaps we should stick with what we have for a while, cease nuclear testing and hope that most of the world follows suit, which could make much of the world a safer place than it is now.

The writer, now retired, worked on the Manhattan Project during World War II and later with the Rand Corporation on nuclear weapons issues.

We Should Pay As We Go for The S&Ls

Most Americans believe that we should pay our bills when they are due, not pass them on to our children and grandchildren. That's why, last fall, the president and Congress decided to put the government on a "pay-as-you-go" budget. From health care to crimes, from education to housing, every federal dollar spent must now be offset by a dollar raised or saved.

This rule applies to practically all government programs—except one of the biggest. The S&L bailout, which could cost well over a trillion dollars by the time it's over, is being paid for by a costly "borrow and spend" policy. The government borrows funds needed to close bankrupt thrifts and pays them back, with interest, over as many as 30 years. It is the only continuing government program paid for solely by increasing the country's debt.

Borrowing for the bailout has devastating effects on our nation's future. It could add as much as $900 billion in interest alone to the bailout cost. It drives up the budget deficit. And it places the bulk of the bailout burden on those who can least afford to pay it: poor and working families, their children, and their grandchildren.

This deficit spending "cure" is worse than the disease. Yet the president and others insist that it's the only way to raise the $80 billion in additional funds needed to continue the bailout. They claim that moving from a borrow-and-spend program to one that's pay-as-you-go is impractical. As one Republican said recently, the "difficulty of finding the money up front" is reason enough to put the bailout burden on the backs of future taxpayers.

That's not a rationale for sound policy; it's an excuse for irresponsibility. Furthermore, it perpetuates a terrible wrong against working families. They are forced to pay for a problem they neither caused nor profited from. Their hard-earned wages are transferred to those who need it least: wealthy investors who put their money in S&Ls in the 1980s and who are buying the government's bailout bonds in the 1990s. Such a wrong may not bother the Washington establishment, but it offends the common sense of ordinary Americans.

We can and should pay for this bill up front, not over two generations. In the process, we will put an end to budgetary double standards, cut the cost of the bailout by hundreds of billions of dollars, and leave our children with the resources they require to build a better future.

Members of a House banking subcommittee recently took a big step toward fiscal sanity in this regard. Against strong administration opposition, they adopted a pay-as-you-go plan for the bailout. Authored by Rep. Jim Slattery of (D-Kan.) and myself, the plan requires that bailout funds be raised in a way that does not add to the long-term indebtedness of the United States. It would go into effect early next year, allowing for a smooth transition that does not bring the bailout effort to a sudden, costly halt.

Finding these funds will be difficult but not impossible. They can be found by trimming the remaining fat from our $1.4 trillion annual budget, reversing deep and unfair tax cuts for the wealthy and reducing the military budget as the Soviet threat diminishes. It's a matter of will, not possibility.

In any event, the president and Congress weren't elected to make easy choices. The benefits of making a tough one on the bailout will be tremendous. According to the Treasury Department's own calculations, we can save taxpayers close to $200 billion in interest and principal by paying up front. That's $200 billion our children can use to reduce the deficit, fight crime and build better roads and schools.

Congress recently barred its members from writing hot checks on the House bank. Now it's time to stop writing them on the taxpayer's bank. We should pay for the S&L bailout bills as they come due and stop saving them for our children.

The Thomas Affair: Already the Revisionists Are at Work

If I were promoting a book or a movie (dream on, Cohen) and my publicist, Herb, asked hopefully whether my parents ever abused me either sexually or in more prosaic ways, I would regret to say that they were loving and considerate and nothing untoward ever happened. If however, Herb were to ask about my addictions ("Done any time in the Betty Ford clinic?"), I would have to confess to one: I am addicted to the Clarence Thomas Affair.

As with Civil War buffs, I love to "refight" the Thomas hearings and can do so on a day-to-day basis. I have many favorite moments when I think the tide of battle could have turned if only the Democrats on the Senate Judiciary Committee had stopped smiling for the cameras and done some thinking.

I would have loved, for instance, for Thomas to have been asked if he knew of Long Dong Silver, had seen any of the man's movies. The door to that line of questioning had been opened by none other than Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-Utah), who had suggested Anita Hill had come across a certain L.D. Silver in a court case. Any court in the land would have permitted another question or two along these lines to be put to Thomas: "Mr. Thomas, did you have occasion to know...

Another moment, analogous to some still-controversial Civil War battle, occurred when Anita Hill was asked by Sen. Hank Brown (R-Colo.) whether she and Thomas were in "significant disagreement" over the Supreme Court's Roe v. Wade decision. "Yes," replied Hill, but before Brown could ask what that disagreement was and how she knew—after all Thomas had maintained he had never discussed Roe v. Wade with any living person—committee Chairman Joseph Biden decided to play cavalry to Thomas's wagon train. The committee, he insisted, should stick with sex and not stoop to matters of substance.

But the defining moment—the one that will intrigue historians—is the very one that, conveniently, the anti-Anita Hill crowd has either forgotten or purposely overlooks. It came to mind while I was reading the most recent National Review, which contains more than a few references to the Thomas Affair. One of these is headlined "Guest Editorial: Feminist Harassment" and was written by Barbara Amiel. "As I understand it," Amiel writes, "feminism notwithstanding, we have not yet made it illegal to discuss sex."

There in that sentence we have the Great Misreading of the Thomas Affair: That it's about sex or, if you will, talking dirty. It's on this basis that a whole lot of dense European editorialists, particularly in France, have once again railed against American provincialism, Puritanism and, of course, hypocrisy.

But only half of the Thomas Affair was about sex—Thomas's half, according to Hill—and it wasn't playful at all. From Hill's perspective, nothing Thomas said was in the least way sexy. She found it disgusting and repulsive. Or so she said. But then she said something else as well. Hill recalled how Thomas had taken her to a farewell dinner and made a comment that, she said, she "vividly" remembered: "He said that if I ever told anyone of his behavior, that it would ruin his career."

Now, if true, that's quite an admission. It suggests Thomas was conscious of his behavior, that he knew that under the law he was out of bounds, that he was hoping Hill would keep her mouth shut. So while sex is an integral part of the Thomas Affair so, really, is something we might call simple courtesy or decency—a respect for an employee named Anita Hill by a supervisor named Clarence Thomas. The area of disrespect here concerned sex, but it could have been race or religion or almost any other matter that can be used to make what the Supreme Court has called "a hostile work environment."

So those of us who cannot let go of the Thomas Affair do so for all the usual reasons (it's an engrossing story); but also because we fight a rising tide of revisionism. If we keep at it, maybe more and more Americans will understand what the Thomas Affair was about—not sex, really, but human rights. Some of us are for both.

Bush Plans Anti-Drug Summit Next Year

U.S. Invitations Issued to Leaders of 6 Latin American Countries

By Michael Isikoff
Washington Post Staff Writer

President Bush has invited the presidents of six Latin American nations to the United States early next year for another "anti-drug summit" that will seek to rein-vigorate efforts to disrupt the international cocaine trade, the White House said yesterday.

Administration officials said the summit could take place as early as February and would most likely be held in a southern state, with Texas leading the list of candidates. It is designed as a follow-up to the February 1990 meeting in Cartagena, Colombia, when Bush met with the presidents of Peru, Colombia, and Bolivia and released a joint statement pledging increased cooperation against Latin drug cartels.

This time, administration officials said, the invitation list would be broadened to include the heads of Venezuela, Ecuador and Mexico. In part, the expanded list reflects what anti-drug officials said has been a dispersal of cocaine trafficking organizations to other nations in response to intensified U.S.-funded law enforcement efforts.

Administration officials said the summit would attempt to initiate greater "regional coordination," including sharing of intelligence and joint operations, against traffickers. Officials acknowledged that the summit is aimed, at least in part, at showing the administration's continued dedication to an issue that during the past year has appeared to slip off the president's agenda.

In contrast to the burst of publicity that surrounded the Cartagena session, anti-drug officials have become concerned in recent months that there was a growing feeling both here and in Latin America "that maybe we didn't think this [drugs] was as important as earlier," one anti-drug official said. "We felt the whole effort needed a shot in the arm, and the hope is this will do it."

Administration officials said domestic politics played no part in the proposed summit, noting that the initial idea came from an Andean summit of Latin American leaders earlier this year. But the announcement comes less than a week after a series of internal audits sharply criticized U.S. anti-drug efforts in Latin America as largely ineffective.

Yesterday, however, the White House used the occasion to tout what it described as "tremendous strides in the drug fight." Since the Cartagena summit, it said, "cocaine consumption in the United States is down" and "drug mafias have been attacked."

Off and Not Running, Bush Schedules 2 More Fund-Raisers

The campaign President Bush insists does not exist keeps rolling along, at least on the financial front, with the selection of two more dates and cities, New York and Washington, Nov. 12 and 20, for the Bush-Quayle fund-raising events that will follow the two kick-off events in Texas this week.

At the same time, two appeals for money by the president, the first fund-raising letters of the campaign, were mailed Oct. 23, both urging support for the president in the final campaign of his career.

Bush's public stance is that he is not running for reelection until he says he is. That announcement is expected after the January State of the Union address to Congress, a timetable Ronald Reagan followed as well.

The financial side of the campaign, meanwhile, moves into gear, with the establishment of a base of operations in Alexandria at the offices of Stan Huckaby, campaign treasurer.

Joining him there earlier this month was Margaret Alexander, the honcho of money-raising at the Republican National Committee and a few of her staff, who have formally left the RNC payroll for the Bush-Quayle campaign payroll.

The Bush team hopes to swiftly and efficiently raise the $25 million in primary season contributions and matching federal funds it needs to operate until the 1992 GOP convention.

The point of fund-raisers across the country and the mailings is to raise the $250 contributions needed in 20 states to meet FEC matching funds rules. Bush's fund-raising letters are being sent from two lists, one of major donors to prior Bush campaigns and the other of general GOP givers. In both letters, Bush makes a help-me-win appeal, but without expressing any sharp ideology, sources who have seen the letter say.

Simpson: If Bush Can Do It . . .

In his ongoing mea culpa, Sen. Alan Simpson said yesterday that President Bush is his role model, noting that if Bush could ditch the "wimp" thing, then Simpson could get past the arrogant and cocky thing. "This is the same man who in the early '80s was referred to as a wimp and some of the most extraordinary negative things that anyone could ever be confronted with. And that's the same man that is well-respected by everybody," Simpson told reporters outside the White House after a GOP leadership luncheon. His remarks followed his pledge at a weekend dinner in Cheyenne, Wyo., to change his confrontational ways.
