VOTERS SEE BIG NEEDS AT HOME

If America's voters could write a script for the 1992 campaign, they would tell President Bush and his Democratic rivals -- in blunt terms -- to get serious about the problems at home....

The clearest message in a series of Washington Post/ABC News polls, reinforced by interviews by Post reporters, is that the concerns voters would put on the agenda are focused on their own families and neighborhoods, not halfway around the world....

Seven in 10 voters say the President should turn his attention to domestic affairs....

The concerns most important to poll respondents are the ones that threaten their families and communities. Crime, drugs and AIDS top the list, and all seem out of control....

Supposed "hot-button" political issues as quotas and affirmative action, abortion, gun control and the ideological direction of the Supreme Court are of much less concern to voters....

Seven out of 10 blacks said they worry a great deal that their family "won't be able to afford adequate medical care." Forty-three percent of Republicans said affordable medical care is a major concern of theirs....

The public may be mad at Washington, but it blames the Democratic Congress more than Bush. Those polled were asked: "When the federal government fails to act on major problems facing the country, whose fault is it usually: Bush or the Democrats in Congress?"

Only 29% blamed Bush; 49% blamed the Democrats in Congress.

(David Broder & E. J. Dionne, Washington Post, A1)

ECONOMY IN THE U.S. ISN'T NEARLY AS SOUR AS THE COUNTRY'S MOOD But Pessimism Could Become A Self-Fulfilling Prophecy Further Stalling Recovery

Like a pre-Wright Brothers airplane, the U.S. economic recovery can't seem to get off the ground....

Meanwhile, businessmen and consumers appear convinced the economy is even worse than the economists and their statistics say it is. A sour mood has set in across the land, that attitude itself has emerged as a major roadblock to economic revival....

A new Wall Street Journal/NBC News poll shows that 32% of voters think the economy will get worse in the next year, while only 26% think it will get better....

Such pessimism has the potential to cause the economy to turn south again -- perhaps leading to the "double dip" recession that some commentators have long feared. At best, the combination of sour attitudes and stalling statistics suggests the recovery will continue to be a halting one....

Moreover, pollsters are picking up disturbing signals about people's sense of the nation's long-term economic health. Some 53% of the respondents to the poll said they believe the U.S. is now "in a state of decline." (Alan Murray, Wall Street Journal, A1)

ECONOMIST: RECOVERY IS LOST

Top economist Sam Nakagama of Nakagama & Wallace says, "We're in a hell of a mess."

"We've lost the economic recovery," he says. "It's in a relapse; we're back in a mini-recession."

October's jobless rate, out Friday, rose to 6.8% from 6.7% in September. Ominous to Nakagama: the drop in manufacturing jobs to recession lows. "It's more evidence the economic rebound is dead," he says.

(Dan Dorfman, USA Today, 1B)

DARMAN SAYS TAXES WON'T BE TRIMMED IN '91,
BUT MAY BE CUT NEXT YEAR IF ECONOMY STAYS LIMP

A tax cut won't be enacted this year but might be next year if the economy remains sluggish, Richard Darman predicted.

In an interview, Darman said that "if the economy is still sputtering" next year, "then it is conceivable to me that there would be the right political context in which to enact a responsible tax cut." The White House and Republican leaders in Congress are close to a substantive agreement on a tax package, he said, but they disagree on whether it would be wise to push it aggressively right now. The plan would reduce the capital gains tax, expand IRAs, create new tax incentives for home buyers and give the middle class a tax cut for just one year.

(Alan Murray & David Wessel, Wall Street Journal, A20)

MITCHELL SAYS BUDGET CHANGES NEEDED, CALLS FOR TAX CUT

Sen. Mitchell said Sunday it was time to review the five-year budget deal forged last year to reduce the federal budget deficit.

In a CNN interview on the economy, Mitchell said the economic environment had changed since the budget deal was passed last November. With the economy floundering, he said, a tax cut for middle-income Americans may now be needed.... Mitchell also heated up the political rhetoric on the economy saying President Bush had the worst record on the economy since the Depression.

"If President Bush had a substantial domestic program, it's the best-kept secret in American politics," he said.

(Knight-Ridder)

YEAR-OLD PACT ON BUDGET DEFICIT SEEN FAILING

Members of Congress say that last year's budget agreement, despite its heralded promise to reduce the Federal deficit, has given them virtual license to disregard a deficit that has swollen to its highest level ever. The budget agreement imposed new fiscal discipline on Congress, requiring it to pay for new spending with tax increases or spending cuts elsewhere. And it included yearly targets for the size of the deficit. But there is no immediate penalty for missing the target, and lawmakers and economists say it has become almost meaningless. The agreement did not require the government to find savings to offset the extra costs of unemployment insurance, food stamps and other benefits arising from the recession, or the huge cost of protecting depositors at government-insured financial institutions.

(Robert Pear, New York Times, A1)

BUSH ADMINISTRATION HOPES TO DEFEAT
PASSAGE OF BANKING BILL BY HOUSE TODAY

The Bush Administration hopes to defeat House passage of the banking bill Monday by arguing that the legislation doesn't do enough to strengthen banks.

After two days of contentious and increasingly partisan debate on the bill, Rep. Gonzalez gave the legislation only a 50-50 chance of House passage. (Kenneth Bacon, Wall Street Journal, A3)

BUSH CIVIL RIGHTS COMPROMISE WON'T KILL ISSUE FOR DEMOCRATS

Although lawyers in both political parties think the civil rights compromise removed the dicey topic of race as a 1992 presidential issue, Democrats running for the top job plan to continue their attack on the issue.

The challengers intend to attack President Bush for what they say is a history of exploiting race relations....

"I'm pleased the President reversed himself, but he is still someone who tries to put together this coalition of a variety of different interest groups that are against things," said Sen. Kerrey. "He will still try to hold onto that small group of people that thinks civil rights legislation is bad. You watch."...

Democrats who use the race issue must face the fact that if they attack the President, he will have a powerful weapon to defend himself: a signed civil rights bill.

"People have sort of long memories and some people do see Bush and his camp as the people who started it," said Carter Eskew, a Democratic consultant. "What's tricky about it is, this is a tough issue for Democrats, and I think they'd be correct to talk about divisiveness and class issues rather than race."

(J. Jennings Moss, Washington Times, A1)

WHITE HOUSE TRYING TO STOP DUKE ELECTION

The White House and Republican Party are quietly campaigning to prevent David Duke from being elected Louisiana's next GOP governor.

But President Bush will not endorse Duke's Democratic opponent, former governor Edwin Edwards....

Behind the scenes, the White House and RNC are busy:

Governor Roemer and former GOP Governor Treen -- in a move coordinated by the White House and RNC -- have backed Edwards' election.

The RNC is encouraging Louisiana Republicans to give money to anti-Duke efforts. Treen said he has been "raising funds from private sources" to oppose Duke. (Jessica Lee, USA Today, 1A)

MITCHELL PRODS BUSH AGAIN TO SUPPORT DUKE OPPONENT

President Bush should urge Louisiana voters to support former Governor Edwards against David Duke, Sen. Mitchell reiterated Sunday....

"I would urge the President that if he really believes what he says about being appalled, he would urge people to vote for Edwards," Mitchell said on "Newsmaker Sunday."

John Sununu, appearing on "Face The Nation," said, "We are not sure that that kind of an action would not have an unintended negative consequence" because of perceptions of unwanted outsider interference. Said Mitchell: "That is one of the lamest excuses for not doing the right thing that I ever heard."

On another political note, Mitchell predicted that appointed Sen. Wofford will defeat Dick Thornburgh.

"I think the big winner will be Harris Wofford, and the big loser will be George Bush," Mitchell said....

Even if Wofford loses, Mitchell said, "the fact that this is a competitive race is a great and devastating defeat for the policies that the President is pursuing."

(W. Dale Nelson, Washington Times, A5)

U.S. SENATE RACE IN PENNSYLVANIA
IS BEING WATCHED AS PRECURSOR TO '92

Sen. Wofford struggles to keep his appointed seat on Tuesday night against a challenge from Dick Thornburgh....

Republicans sought to minimize any damage as Thornburgh and Wofford attacked one another in a final weekend of TV and radio commercials. "Everybody I know of that understands Pennsylvania politics expected this thing to come to the this kind of a head-and-head horse race," John Sununu said. Other Republicans said there was more to it, as President Bush, his rivals and Republican and Democratic congressional candidates prepare for next year.

"To the extent that he (Wofford) is successful...it says to every Democrat next year that it's an issue that's working," said Eddie Mahe, a Republican consultant. (David Espo, AP)

SUNUNU SAYS HE'S CLEAN IN BCCI SCANDAL

John Sununu on Sunday categorically denied any connection with BCCI. Sununu cited as proof an internal investigation last week by the White House counsel and the Justice Department that cleared Ed Rogers and himself of any ethics violations.... On other subjects, Sununu, appearing on "Face The Nation," said the Administration would not propose any emergency economic legislation but would rely on bills the White House has already submitted. "We have not gotten constructive action in Congress in the last three years on job creation," Sununu said. "They can't say the President has done nothing, and he will continue to press for his program."... Discussing the Louisiana governor's race, Sununu said Bush had discharged his moral responsibility by disavowing David Duke's candidacy. He said an endorsement of Edwin Edwards could "have an unintended negative consequence," with Duke using it as evidence that outsiders were trying to influence the outcome.

AIDE HID JOB, SAYS SUNUNU

John Sununu said Sunday his closest aide, Ed Rogers, never told him he was leaving the Bush Administration to lobby for a former Saudi official linked to the BCCI scandal.

"If he had come to me, I would have said absolutely that I thought it would have been the wrong thing for him to do," Sununu said. (Major Garrett, Washington Times, A3)

WHITE HOUSE ETHICS POLICY TRIED BY ROGERS-BCCI LINK

The $600,000 contract between a former senior White House aide and a Saudi Arabian sheik implicated in the BCCI banking scandal sent a shudder through the White House....

A combination of quick damage control and lucky timing -- with the Middle East peace conference dominating the headlines -- appeared to squelch the matter and keep President Bush above the fray.

The President appeared to emerge without any "sleaze factor" residue....

"It's too early to tell if its over," said one senior official, wondering aloud if an investigation by Bush's counsel, C. Boyden Gray, would unearth any impropriety by Ed Rogers....

Democratic political analyst Bob Bechel said he doubts the matter will provide much fodder for Democrats.

"Bush emerges unscathed," he said. "Rogers is scarred, and the guy that scarred him more than anybody was his boss, George Bush," because of his quickness to distance himself from Rogers.

FIVE PRESIDENTS HOLD UNPRECEDENTED REUNION

Five American presidents forever intertwined in history will greet one another Monday at the dedication of the Ronald Reagan Presidential Library in Simi Valley, Calif.

The gathering will feature a group photo and serve as a reminder how their respective paths to the White House repeatedly crossed....

During a golf outing Sunday, President Bush told reporters: "I think it's proper that all the presidents will be there and I think it will be a very nice event."

He also praised Jimmy Carter for making an "extraordinary effort" to get to Simi Valley from Zambia. (Thomas Ferraro, UPI)

PRESIDENT SAYS INSURANCE WON'T COVER ALL DAMAGE TO HOME

President Bush says his insurance won't begin to cover the cost of repairing the severe damage his oceanside home sustained in a fierce storm last week.

Bush said after a golf outing Sunday that he expects to know the amount of loss in a few days.

"It's more than the insurance, unfortunately," he told reporters. (AP)

ISRAEL, ARABS HOLD BILATERAL TALKS Lengthy Meetings Focus On Procedure; Future Parley Site Still Unsettled

MADRID -- Israel opened the first face-to-face negotiations in its history with Syria, Jordan and the Palestinians here Sunday, launching a new phase of the Middle East peace process after a day of false starts, brinkmanship and mediation by U.S. officials.

The landmark sessions, which also included talks between Israel and Lebanon, failed to move beyond discussions of procedures to be followed in the talks and did not produce agreement on where and when the next round of negotiations will be held. Nevertheless, Israeli, Arab and U.S. officials hailed the fact that the direct meetings had finally taken place after four decades of conflict between the parties and months of preliminary negotiations brokered by the U.S....

At a news conference Sunday night, Secretary Baker hailed what he called "the breakthrough" represented by the beginning of negotiations and said he was "pleasantly surprised" by the results of the first Israeli-Palestinian meeting. "That gave us some room to believe that we really are entering a new phase in the Middle East," Baker said.

Baker Is Hopeful

MADRID -- In a day of intense diplomatic maneuvering that finally brought Israel into separate and direct talks with its Arab neighbors, the Israelis and Palestinians announced Sunday that they would begin negotiations on self-rule for the West Bank and Gaza strip....

At the close of the meeting, the atmosphere among the Israelis and Palestinians was friendly....

Israeli and Palestinian officials said they will split the Jordanian-Israeli talks, thus responding to the long-held hopes of the Palestinians to address their grievances with Israel directly, away from the umbrella of Jordanian hegemony.

Baker Hails Peace Talks; Syria, Israel Make No Progress

MADRID -- ...Israelis and Syrians talked for five hours into Monday morning without making any progress, chief Israeli delegate Yossi Ben-Aharon said.

"We did not agree on anything," he told reporters.

But the two sides did agree to meet again at an unspecified date.

The Syrians complained Israel had refused to discuss withdrawal from occupied Arab territories, but its chief delegate Muwaffaq al-Allaf said Syria had not given up hope of eventual progress.

SYRIA WANTS ITS NAME OFF TERRORIST LIST

MADRID -- The U.S. could agree to remove Syria from its list of nations that sponsor terrorism, as an enticement to Damascus not to obstruct the peace talks.

"Why not?" Egyptian foreign minister Amir Moussa asked in a Sunday interview.

Moussa lent further credence to such a deal by saying "I would bet yes" that Syria won't appear on next year's terrorism list....

Moussa also said the PLO "contributes to" and "influences" negotiations. (Lee Michael Katz, USA Today, 6A)

ISRAELIS HALT BOMBARDMENT OF LEBANON

JERUSALEM -- Israel has eased a massive artillery bombardment of guerrilla targets in southern Lebanon, Israeli security sources said Sunday....

Lebanon said Saturday the U.S. had made Israel pledge to end attacks in southern Lebanon.

Defense minister Moshe Arens declined to confirm or deny reports of U.S. pressure to end the shelling.

SADDAM CUTS OFF SUPPLIES TO KURDS IN MOUNTAINS

ZAKHO, Iraq -- Saddam Hussein is denying Kurds in the mountains of northern Iraq food and fuel as winter closes in, relief workers say....

While the blockade is not total, it could wreck efforts to stockpile supplies and shelters before winter takes hold, relief workers say. (Kurt Schork, Washington Times, A7)

HOSTAGE DEAL

Newsweek reports that a mistake may be the source of a theory that the Reagan/Bush campaign team cut a deal for Iran to delay the release of U.S. hostages. In July, 1980, Iranian arms dealer Cyrus Hashemi met with an Iranian official at a Madrid hotel. Hashemi was apparently acting as a go-between for the Carter Administration. Within a week, Iranian president Abolhassan Bani Sadr was told by the Ayatollah Khomeini's nephew that Iran had been approached by Reagan's team. The magazine, which theorizes the nephew could have confused Reagan and Carter, concludes there's no basis to the hostage deal theory.

BUSH: NATO SUMMIT TO LOOK AT ROLE IN '90S; NO 'SURPRISES'

President Bush said Sunday there will be no "shocking surprises" at this week's NATO summit in Rome as the U.S. and its major Western allies chart defense strategy for the 1990s.

The main topic for the meeting Thursday and Friday is "the future role of NATO" and "defining security roles for well into the 1990s," Bush said. (AP, Washington Post, A7)

U.S. IS SHOPPING AS SOVIETS OFFER TO SELL ONCE-SECRET TECHNOLOGY

NEW YORK -- The Soviet Union is marketing an array of secretive items from its space program -- things that no spies or reconnaissance satellites could have pried loose during the Cold War -- and the U.S. is so interested it is sending teams of bargain hunters to look at the merchandise.

Items on the block include nuclear reactors, satellites, rocket engines, space stations and scientific reports on space testing and experiments. The goods are seen as the cream of the Soviet industrial complex and in some cases are considered better than similar items in the West....

For the U.S., the purchases would be a technical bonanza and would possibly help stabilize a rival superpower now on the brink of chaos.

BAKER TO VISIT CHINA TO DISCUSS 'VERY REAL' PROBLEMS

MADRID -- Secretary Baker announced plans Sunday night to visit China later this month in an effort to resolve "real problems" in Sino-American relations....

In a press conference here, Baker said he was going to China to talk with Beijing about U.S. concerns. Although he did not list them, other officials have said these concerns include China's transfers of nuclear and missile technology to the Middle East, continuing repression of democracy movement leaders and growing trade surplus with the U.S. (David Hoffman, Washington Post, A11)

Baker Visit To China Will Give Bush Critics Ammunition

MADRID -- Secretary Baker will visit China later this month in a move that will give fresh ammunition to critics of President Bush's policy of maintaining close ties with Beijing.

Coming only days after U.S. officials disclosed that China had been helping Iran develop a nuclear bomb, Sunday's announcement was bound to provoke a new effort by Democrats in Congress to confront Bush.

Aware that he could be stepping into a political minefield, Baker offered a spirited defense of his decision to include China on his itinerary in an Asian tour.

"China has almost one fourth of all the people in the world," Baker said.

"It has nuclear weapons, it has great influence in the region and it has immense economic potential," he said.

HAITIAN PRIME MINISTER STARTS ELECTION PROCESS, CRITICIZES FOREIGNERS

PORT-AU-PRINCE -- The interim prime minister has urged parents to send their children to schools, which are opening for the first time since President Aristide was ousted.

Prime minister Honorat also told Haitians in an interview broadcast Sunday that he was preparing elections....

Honorat said he would convoke parliament to start the local assembly process needed to create a national elections council, the body which oversees balloting.

Honorat did not, however, directly commit himself to holding new elections. He described the measure as one of several he said the government will take to re-establish democracy. Others include creating independent courts....

Honorat charged that the foreign community "has heard only one side" in the controversy over Aristide and charged that the Organization of American States' decision to apply severe economic sanctions represented illegal and unfair interference in Haitian internal affairs.

WILL EMBARGO BEND HAITIAN ARMY?

Troops May Choose Economic Chaos, Civil War To President's Return

PORT-AU-PRINCE -- The U.S. and other Western Hemisphere nations, hoping to force a return to democracy in Haiti by a punishing economic embargo, now face a thornier problem: the Haitian army.... Having ousted a widely popular elected leader, rank-and-file troops are convinced that his return would spark an uprising in which they and their families would be prime targets for reprisals. Even when the soldiers learn that the embargo is one enemy that can not be cowed by bullets, it is unlikely they will throw in the towel. "This thing has little to do with politics and nothing to do with ideology at this point," said a diplomat who knows the armed forces well. "The little soldiers are afraid: not only their livelihoods, but their lives, are on the line. You could solve all the political problems, but you'd still have the army problem as it existed" before the coup.

DRUG LORDS NOW FALLING IN BOLIVIA

LA PAZ -- This country's alleged drug kingpin, who surrendered here to avoid extradition to the U.S., is behind bars and out of action as a cocaine trafficker, according to U.S. and Bolivian officials. The surrender of Hugo Rivero in September is among the indications that Bolivia is also making progress in its U.S.-backed campaign to smash cocaine-trafficking, the officials say.

And U.S. officials here blast a report issued last week by the State Department's Office of the Inspector General saying that Bolivian efforts to fight cocaine processing and trafficking have been largely ineffective.... Interior Minister Carlos Saavedra said he could guarantee an end to illicit narcotics production in Bolivia if the U.S. would earmark $500 billion for an effective crop-substitution program that would persuade the estimated 250,000 growers of coca leaf to switch to legitimate crops that could be sold abroad.

DRUG TRAFFIC SHIFTING TO SURINAME
Isolation Facilitates Shipment Of Cocaine

Suriname has grown into a major narcotics center, serving as a central transshipment point for the growing flow of cocaine to Europe, according to Surinamese and senior U.S. officials and international experts.

Senior U.S. officials and Surinamese opposition leaders say Suriname also is becoming an important shipment point for the U.S. drug market....

A senior U.S. official monitoring the region said, "There is no question in the view of the U.S. government that there is significant army, and probably some police, involvement in narcotics trafficking in Suriname."

LEAKED U.S. REPORT EMBARRASSES NEW ZEALAND GOVERNMENT

WELLINGTON -- Prime Minister Bolger arrived home Monday to a barrage of questions over a report purportedly from a U.S. intelligence agency saying he was trying to weaken New Zealand's anti-nuclear policy.

The report, released by the New Zealand Press Association and widely published Monday, said it had obtained a copy of a telex to this effect, sent between sections of the agency, which it said appeared to be genuine.

The Press Association said it obtained a copy of the telex sent between sections of the U.S. Defense Intelligence Agency but did not reveal its source....

The telex contained an assessment of Bolger's decision on Oct. 14 to set up a special committee to review the country's anti-nuclear ships ban following President Bush's announcement that nuclear weapons would be withdrawn from U.S. surface ships.

"The decision to form a committee is part of a continuing effort by Bolger to weaken or skirt anti-nuclear laws that have strained U.S.-New Zealand relations," the telex said.

Bolger said he knew nothing of the authenticity of the report but said it would be a matter of concern if U.S. intelligence saw him wanting to "skirt" the anti-nuclear legislation as reported.

PEACE CONFERENCE

ABC's Forrest Sawyer: It was a game of diplomatic push and shove in the Middle East peace talks today, but they still managed to move a historic step ahead. Despite the objections of Syria, Palestinian and Jordanian negotiators sat down for four and a half hours of direct talks with Israelis and emerged saying they were good, businesslike discussions. That declaration of independence left Syria alone in its resistance to the talks and willingness to listen to reason.

ABC's Jim Laurie reports American diplomats, joined at times by Egyptians and even Saudis, shuttled among three Madrid hotels, exerting maximum diplomatic pressure. Finally, Syria was persuaded to sit down with Israel for their first-ever, face-to-face talks. The historic breakthrough was clearly a relief for Secretary Baker.

(Secretary Baker: "Amidst all of the procedural wrangling, it's important, I think, not to lose sight of the breakthrough represented by the start of direct, bilateral negotiations.") Syrian reluctance to meet stemmed from Israel's demand to switch the location of the talks to the Middle East.

(Zohair Jannan, Syrian spokesman: "Israel insists on moving the venue of the talks into the region and confining peace talks to this question alone. This is not an acceptable position.")

The talks between the Israelis and the Jordanian-Palestinian delegation ended with a promise to meet again soon at an undetermined location.

(Abdul Salam Majali, Jordanian delegate: "The talks were held in good businesslike atmosphere.")

Israel's negotiator, Eliakim Rubenstein [phonetic], says future talks would focus on Palestinian interim self-government. And while the Palestinian team leader reserved the right to focus on other issues, too, the Israelis shook hands for the first time in public with Jordanian and Palestinian leaders. As Secretary Baker put it tonight: There can't be any guarantees -- this is the Middle East. (ABC-Lead)

NBC's Garrick Utley: It has been a long time coming. More than 43 years after the creation of the state of Israel -- four decades of continuing conflict -- today in Madrid, Israelis and Palestinians sat down, talked to each other in a civilized way and then they shook hands. No, they didn't solve their dispute. They didn't even agree where they will meet next. But they did start the process which could lead to peace in the Middle East.

NBC's John Dancy reports both sides said they were pleased with the talks.

(Majali: "Talks were held in good, businesslike atmosphere. Matters discussed involve procedural issues of the talks to be held in the future, which it is hoped will take place soon.")

Late this afternoon, Saudi Arabian Amb. Sultan announced the procedural logjam had been broken.

Dancy continues:

(Amb. Sultan: "What happened is less important than the fact that we are back on track now in a positive way.")

Baker worked behind the scenes all weekend and through most of last night and today to resolve the dispute. Tonight, he declared victory. (NBC-Lead)

Utley discusses the conference with Hanan Ashrawi, Palestinian spokesperson:

Utley: Will [the Syrians'] reluctance influence your negotiations in the future? Are you going to be totally independent of their position?

Ashrawi: As you know, the Arab position is a coordinated and unified position. The Syrian problems were really technical, procedural problems. They didn't have much to do with substance, and therefore I don't think they will have any negative effect on the process as a whole because the Syrians themselves say they are committed to the process.

Utley: Who proposed the idea and said, yes, let's shake hands?

Ashrawi: Actually, it was discussed before. But let me be very frank with you. The Palestinians have never had any hangups with such symbolic gestures and we've always said we are willing to shake hands with anybody who is reaching out to us in peace. And I think it was a very natural reaction. We are meeting people, after all, at the human level, and the human level is to acknowledge each other as humanity.... (NBC-2)

Utley discusses the conference with Dep. Foreign Minister Netanyahu:

Netanyahu: We're going to try to persuade the parties that they can come to us and we should go to them. Again, if we're talking about a peace that somehow avoids this -- if somebody says, well, we don't want to go to Israel or we don't want Israel to come to us, to Syria or to Jordan -- it's a very peculiar kind of peace. I think the most natural thing is to have peace talks in each other's countries.... (NBC-3)

CHINA/SECRETARY BAKER

Utley reports Secretary Baker said he will go to Asia and will visit China later this month. That would be the first time a senior U.S. official will visit Beijing since Tienanmen Square. (NBC-4)

ECONOMY/POLL

Sawyer: While President Bush continues to push foreign initiatives like the peace talks, he is under increasing fire for neglecting the home front. A new ABC News-Washington Post Poll, the first in a series, shows that what Mr. Bush seems to care about most, Americans care about the least. It also shows that when you root him to America, many people are deeply disillusioned with government and deeply worried about the future.

Sawyer continues:

ABC News-Washington Post Poll

What is the biggest problem facing the country?

ECONOMIC ISSUES.....42%

SOCIAL ISSUES.....41%

FOREIGN ISSUES.....7%

As for the domestic issues that seem to command a lot of attention in official Washington -- abortion, affirmative action, the Supreme Court -- they just don't matter much to most Americans.

(Sen. Kasten: "A number of us are very concerned about the overall direction of the economy, and frankly, we're scared.")

Republicans have good reason to be scared. Our poll shows the President has been hurt by the perception of 87 percent that the economy is in bad shape. The President's approval rating has fallen from a Gulf War high of 90 percent to 59 percent. And confidence in the Administration as a whole has tumbled to just 34 percent.

Do you think the country is on the wrong track?

YES.....71%

NO.....26%

(Sen. Mitchell: "President Bush's record for economic growth and job creation is worse than for any other president since Herbert Hoover.")

Returning to the White House today, President Bush expressed confidence voters will not blame him for the economy's problems.

(Reporter: "Are the voters going to beat up on you because they're against government, do you think?")

President Bush: "No. They can beat up on Congress because they're against government.")

Whom do you blame for the country's economic woes?

PRESIDENT.....34%

CONGRESS.....63%

Percentage of people who trust government to do what is right most of the time.

1991.....26%

1985.....36%

1958.....55%

Do you prefer President Bush
or Gov. Cuomo in 1992?

BUSH.....58%

CUOMO.....30%

Do you prefer President Bush
or any of the announced Democrats?

BUSH.....51%

PENNSYLVANIA/SENATE RACE

NBC's Andrea Mitchell reports the Pennsylvania Senate race is a trial heat for the economic themes of the 1992 campaign.

(TV coverage: President Bush at Thornburgh fund-raiser.)

Dick Thornburgh is running scared. He even went to a hospital last week with Secretary Sullivan. But Thornburgh's idea of health coverage is hardly populist.

(Thornburgh: "The fact of the matter is that very few people go untreated in Pennsylvania today, because we have a large network of non-profits that never turn people away from coverage.")

(Sen. Wofford: "I'm glad I got him into a hospital. I'm glad he has decided that it's right for people to get unemployment compensation extended benefits. I even hear yesterday he said he's favoring a middle-class tax cut.")

Thornburgh's strategy of campaigning as a Bush surrogate could backfire. In a state with 400,000 unemployed workers, he had to apologize for Bush's vetoes of extended unemployment benefits.

(Thornburgh: "Mr. President, when I served in your Cabinet, I owed you and gave you undivided loyalty. But when I come back to represent the commonwealth of Pennsylvania, I have to put this state's interests first.")

(Wofford: "Why did he wait until it would do him some good as a candidate to say he would stand up to the President?")

(Mark Mellman, Democratic consultant: "People in Pennsylvania are rejecting not only Dick Thornburgh, they're rejecting George Bush. George Bush's coattails are so short at this point, they're up around his ears.")

In fact, if the Democrats are to have any hope of upsetting Bush a year from now, it will be with the kind of raw economic appeal being tested in Pennsylvania by a little-known politician. Even if Wofford only comes close, Democratic presidential candidates will be refining the same issues that seem to be catching fire in Pennsylvania: fear about jobs, worry about health care and a deep-rooted anger at Washington. (NBC-9)

DEMOCRATS/NEW HAMPSHIRE

ABC's Cokie Roberts reports New Hampshire finally has a presidential primary campaign. The state is suffering from a bad economy and many people are angry at President Bush. The Democrats capitalized on that anger this weekend.

(Sen. Harkin: "I see he just got back from Madrid. But don't you think it's time for a President to come visit Manchester?")

(Sen. Kerrey: "Since George Bush was elected, 49,000 men and women in New Hampshire no longer have jobs.")

(Paul Tsongas: "Economic despair, thy name is George Bush. Economic hope, thy name is a Democratic president in 1992.")

Democrats are beginning to believe that any of these candidates, even if untested, just might have a chance against a President who once seemed unbeatable. (ABC-3)

VIRGINIA THOMAS

Sawyer reports Virginia Thomas writes in People that she believes Anita Hill was probably in love with Justice Thomas and "never got what she wanted." Mrs. Thomas says she believes Hill's charges were politically motivated. (ABC-7)

EDUCATION/PUBLIC SCHOOLS

NBC's George Lewis reports attendance numbers keep growing at public schools, while their budgets keep shrinking. The budget crunch comes when there are many questions about whether big-city schools can really turn out kids capable of joining today's workforce. Both educators and business leaders agree that schools will have to change to prepare students for a world of high technology.

(Bill Honig, California schools superintendent: "If we ever could join forces with the business community and the political leadership in the state and put a little bit of resources in there for the changes -- if some of it is capital development -- then you will see a first-class, real competitive school system by the year 2000.")

Educators say turning the schools around cannot be done by government alone, that both parents and private industry will have to get more involved in creating schools that really work, that taxpayers may be called on to shoulder a bigger burden. (NBC-7)

PHILIPPINES/MARCOS/AQUINO

ABC's Mark Litke reports Imelda Marcos is returning to the Philippines.

(Marcos: "I do hope that my homecoming will be a mission for love and peace.")

She is expected to be arrested and formally charged with graft, corruption and tax evasion. Solicitor General Frank Chavez is confident he has the goods on Marcos.

(Chavez: "She stands to suffer imprisonment, if convicted, of no less than 150 years.") (NBC-5, ABC-4)

NBC's Brad Willis reports President Aquino can no longer control congress. Her greatest failure since taking office is the economy. A recent study concluded that graft and corruption are the worst in Asia, and it's a terrible place to invest. Aquino, many say, has presided over one of the greatest missed economic opportunities of modern times. (NBC-6)

ABC -- THIS WEEK WITH DAVID BRINKLEY

Moderator: David Brinkley. Panel: George Will, Sam Donaldson.
Guests: Jordanian Foreign Minister Abu Jaber, Israeli Amb. Shoval.

On the peace conference: With Shoval.

Will: Do you have a feeling that there are iron links binding this [Jordanian-Palestinian] delegation to the PLO?

Shoval: If the links are iron links, I think they're becoming rusty, and whatever the claims may be or the rhetoric, Arafat and the PLO are kept under wraps. These people here on the spot may begin to have their own constituency, and I think that's a good sign.

Donaldson: What is your attitude now toward the role of the U.S.?

Shoval: I think the U.S., especially Secretary Baker, made a magnificent effort to get this whole thing together.... I think it was successful on the whole. But be this as it may, I believe for the chances of peace to really proceed now, from now on we should be less in the limelight of TV cameras....

Donaldson: Can you do it now by yourself...or must the U.S. hold hands sort of every step of the way?

Shoval: I don't think so. I hope not, anyway. There may be a stage perhaps towards the end or if there should be very severe disagreement, the U.S. and the Soviet Union could again play a more active role....

Brinkley: Is it possible that the Palestinians and Israelis can work out something without regard to what Syria wants or does not want?

Shoval: We would like to have comprehensive peace. But I don't think that if there were a possibility to achieve peace with one or another factor, and somebody else does not want to make peace with us, I think we shouldn't hold the process up....

On the peace conference: With Foreign Minister Abu Jaber.

Abu Jaber: ...I was dismayed somewhat when Mr. Shamir said that territory is not the issue. If territory is not the issue, then what on earth is the whole exercises about?...

Donaldson: Is it going to be the Palestinian's position that after some interim arrangement, that in fact there must be a territory called a "state," which the Palestinians must inhabit?

Abu Jaber: This is the whole idea of the solution that we are talking about, is that there will be an Israeli withdrawal, an Israeli recognition of the right of the Palestinian for self-determination, that there will be a state called the Palestine....

Donaldson: When you say an Israeli withdrawal, do you mean from all of the territory?

Abu Jaber: Yes.

Will: Suppose your outcome came to pass, that there was a Palestinian control under some kind of confederation of the West Bank with Jordan. Would Jews...retain the right to live there?

Abu Jaber: The idea is that the settlements will be dismantled and the Jews will be withdrawn into the state that is called Israel. Otherwise, what are we talking about?

POLITICAL DISCUSSION

On the economy: Tom Wicker joins the panel.

Will: [President Bush] should be worried because the bread-and-butter issue always is the price and availability of bread and butter, and the economy is in bad shape. What is, I think, yet to be fully understood...is that the problem didn't begin two years ago with the recession. The problem began really in 1973....

Wicker: I don't think the public necessarily demands a free lunch, but I do think that the public demands -- not always fairly and not always reasonably -- that the President do something. And he may be doing something, but I think quite often they don't perceive that he's doing something.... I would say that George Bush should be worried very much, because whether or not this is his fault, that's aside from the point. The question is a lot of people look to the President for leadership and to do something, and it would appear that fewer and fewer Americans are looking to this President at this time for that sort of thing.

Brinkley: President Bush last week attacked Congress in very bitter, ugly terms, which means of course he's going to run against Congress next year....

Will: The President, not for the first time, has his wetted finger in the air and has done what he does best, which is detect the breeze. There is a great feeling in the country that Congress is unpopular, and the ABC poll shows that Congress is blamed more than anyone else for the condition of the country. I think that's kind of unfair. I think there's enough blame to come around.

Donaldson: Bush ought to come up with a program for the economy, not blame just Congress.

NBC -- MEET THE PRESS

Moderator: Garrick Utley. Panel: Robert Novak, John Dancy.
Guest: Secretary Baker.

On the peace conference:

Novak: Do you think it is possible to move toward Palestinian autonomy without concurrence by the Syrians?

Baker: I think it's possible to move toward that. Indeed, I think it's far better if the Syrians are a part of the process, if the Lebanese are part of the process.... That will make it more likely, I think, that some sort of an ultimate agreement on interim self-government arrangements or, indeed, even permanent status can be reached.

Novak: Were you disappointed with the rhetoric on all sides, or were you specifically disappointed with the attitude of Syria?

Baker: ...I was disappointed and expressed that disappointment because I really feel that the parties have neglected the human dimension of the problem. They've neglected to reach out to each other in that way....

Novak: You have pending in the Bush Administration the question of loan guarantees for Israeli housing. Is the final decision by the President in some way dependent on the outcome of these talks and the performance of Israel in these talks?

Baker: We have gotten an agreement from and with the Congress, and everybody understands that the subject of absorption-aid assistance is a subject that will be addressed after January.... I can't get into that with you now.

Novak: Are you going to be spending less time on the Middle East than you have been?

Baker: ...I will be continuing to concentrate on this to the extent that's necessary, but not to the exclusion in any way of my other responsibilities.

POLITICAL DISCUSSION

Dancy: ...If I could write the lead on what we heard here today, I think the Secretary held out the possibility that if the parties cannot resolve this, the U.S. will simply issue invitations to come to the peace conference. Anybody who does not attend, of course, would then be blamed for not talking part in it.

Novak: I would suggest that the Secretary was saying that it's nice if the Syrians will sit down, but he's saying: We're going to get a Palestinian-Israeli agreement on Palestinian autonomy with or without the Syrians. I think the Syrians have got a real problem.... So, I think that Secretary Baker was saying to Assad: Come in if you want, but we're going to go ahead without you.

CBS -- FACE THE NATION

Moderator: Bob Schieffer. Panel: Howard Fineman, Susan Spencer.
Guest: Gov. Sununu.

On the economy:

Sununu: I think the President will continue to press for [his economic proposals] across the board. I mentioned the transportation package. We'd like education reform for a long-term benefit. The President wants an unemployment bill, but one he can sign without breaking the budget....

Schieffer: So what will be the next thing that the President does?

Sununu: He is going to underline what he has already asked for.... You cannot have a growth program if for years you have a Congress that is unwilling to provide stimulus for growth.

On Ed Rogers:

Sununu: Boyden Gray [and] Bob Mueller made it very clear in letters on Friday to the Hill that there was absolutely no wrongdoing by Mr. Rogers....

Fineman: But if he had come to you to ask your advice about whether taking a client like that for that kind of money was a good idea for him or for the Administration, what would you have said?

Sununu: If he had come to me, I would have said absolutely that I thought it would have been the wrong thing for him to do. I was under the impression he was going to be dealing mostly with corporate and political clients.

On the 1992 campaign:

Sununu: I think there are very few people in politics who think that Mario Cuomo will not run, but I probably am one of the ones who think he will not run.... I just don't think it's the right time for a northeast liberal to run on the Democratic ticket. I think we'd have more trouble, for example, against a conservative governor like Bill Clinton.

On health care:

Sununu: Health care is a wonderful issue, for those who just want to demagogue on an issue -- to grab hold of -- because you can always talk about the positive things you're going to do and ignore the negative implications....

Spencer: So I gather we should not expect any kind of major health-care reform plan out of the Administration any time soon?

Sununu: You will hear, at some point, the Administration addressing the health-care issue. It may not be a plan that would satisfy a former health-care reporter in terms of what it touches on and doesn't touch on, but it will try and deal constructively with the health-care needs of the country.

On David Duke:

Spencer: Why hasn't the President thrown his support to Edwin Edwards?

Sununu: I think the President's made it clear that he's opposed to David Duke.

Spencer: But that's not the same thing as doing everything in his power....

Sununu: But we're not sure that kind of an action would not have an unintended negative consequence, and so you have to make clear your opposition in just the way that does not help the opposition.

On the economy:

Schieffer: How bad is the recession?

Sununu: In terms of personal terms, people terms, the most important indicator you like to look at is the unemployment number. The number's now around 6.8. We don't like it to be at that level.... The President's concerned. He wants to give benefits to them.... We have encouraged a reduction of interest rates, and we've encouraged Congress to pass legislation that would stimulate jobs and growth. Those are the things the President can do, and he'll continue to try and do them.

THE McLAUGHLIN GROUP

Moderator: John McLaughlin. Panel: Fred Barnes, Jack Germond, Morton Kondracke, Christopher Matthews.

On the peace conference:

Matthews: I think the prospects are good in the long run, but not because of all this holy-rollers stuff, all this stuff about religion and brotherhood and avoiding bloodshed. These people like to fight. But I think their interests are in peace, in the long run.... I think it'll take about a year.

Barnes: I'm not that optimistic at all.... The fact is that if Bush thinks he can be just a catalyst, which is what he said he wanted to be, he can forget it. He's got to get in and really do some elbow twisting, and actually he could probably do it more productively elsewhere, like Yugoslavia.

Kondracke: ...James Baker ought to be sitting on Hafez Assad and telling him that he is the stumbling block to all this....

Barnes: The EC -- they're feckless. The Soviet Union is there for window dressing. The fact is, the U.S. has the role.... The U.S. has to do it.

Matthews: Israel won this week because they looked very good in the U.S. I've never seen Shamir look charming before. He was dynamite this week....

Barnes: I thought Israel won, but the Arabs are counting on Bush leaning on Israel later, and we'll see what happens there.

McLaughlin: I think the Arabs won. The Arabs won simply because of the fact that Israel attended the conference.

On the Soviet Union:

Barnes: ...Gorbachev and Bush are equal partners [at the peace conference] the same way that Danny DeVito and Arnold Schwarzenegger were twins. It's only in a make-believe world. Bush is playing a game there, and that is it's his make-believe game of building up Gorbachev to make the Arabs feel better....

Kondracke: The biggest story in the Soviet Union is Yeltsin's plunge into a free market. It's both daring and risky.

Matthews: The key thing is that [Yeltsin] has become head of the Soviet Union. This week that we were parading this sort of partnership [with Gorbachev], our partner was no longer a leader of the Soviet Union.... Yeltsin's the boss over there.

On the national debt:

Barnes: The fact is the level of taxation taken from Americans has stayed the same. What's happened is spending is out of control. Is Ronald Reagan partly to blame for that? Yes. So are a lot of other people, like Democrats in Congress.... The fact is Darman engineered the budget deal, which was a downer because it smothered the economy and we're not bringing in revenue....

Matthews: The only way to solve the problem is if the people decide they want to lower the deficit. Nobody cares about it politically. It's not a voting factor. You say people think about this issue. They don't think about it....

McLaughlin: I think the only solution is a constitutional amendment to balance the budget.

On the Thornburgh-Wofford race:

Kondracke: This has got to be a warning for the Bush Administration. They're scared, they're paralyzed. They don't know what to do. You've got Darman, Sununu and those people [who] don't want to do a growth package....

Matthews: ...This is bad news for our man in Madrid, George Bush, because it shows that a Democrat can focus the issues on the economy, on health care, and he can blast back any dirty shot that's taken at him....

PREDICTIONS

Matthews: Louisiana voters will show their economic shrewdness, as they always have, and defeat David Duke.

Barnes: President Bush now stands a good chance of losing his perfect record on having vetoes sustained, and he may lose it on the parental leave bill. Democrats in the House are putting together a compromise that will appeal to Southern Democrats, and I hope his veto is overruled. It's good legislation.

Germond: The most interesting election...is in Washington next Tuesday: referenda on term limitations and on euthanasia, both of which will carry by close to 3 to 2.

Kondracke: John Sununu seems to be hinting that it will be OK if Jack Kemp left the Cabinet, because there are differences over economic policy. Kemp is going to stay and he's going to fight for the growth package.

McLaughlin: Democrats in the House will lose 38 seats in November 1992.

INSIDE WASHINGTON

Moderator: Gordon Peterson. Panel: Charles Krauthammer, Carl Rowan, Strobe Talbott, Juan Williams.

On the economy:

Rowan: Maybe two years from now, we will say that this was the start of something historic in the Middle East. But the story this week is of economic dislocation, economic suffering and political change.

Talbott: There are going to be ups and downs in the American economy and zigs and zags in the political story for another year, but what happened this week in the Middle East peace process was a watershed for which President Bush is going to get a lot of credit from historians. Whether he gets credit from voters is another question.

Krauthammer: ...In terms of American electoral politics, the Middle East isn't an issue. In terms of the American political scene, it's not a 1 on the Richter Scale.

Williams: ...[Economic advisers] are in a box. They don't know exactly what to do to cope with this situation.... President Bush is in the box with the rest of his economic advisers.

Talbott: But the Democrats are in the same box. Yes, the Democrats stand to benefit.... But for them to really capitalize on this issue, they have to have coherent answers of their own....

Rowan: In Pennsylvania, Harris Wofford has shown that all you have to do is appeal to the economic woes, the fears of people, to talk to people about the fact that they don't have health care, and you wipe out Dick Thornburgh's 44-point advantage in almost no time. If you don't think [the Republicans] are worried about Pennsylvania being a harbinger of 1992, you just talk to these people.

Krauthammer: ...Democrats have to have a candidate. And even if they're doing well in one Senate race...on a single issue, health care, that's not the same as having an economic program. And the reason that neither party has a program is because the fiscal stimulus is exhausted.... The only way out of this recession, unfortunately, is not fiscal but monetary. It's got to be a drop in the interest rates....

Williams: ...The big question becomes Ronald Reagan's question: Are you better off today than you were four years ago, and George Bush comes up short on that answer.

On the peace conference:

Krauthammer: I think a lot happened, even though it looked like a lot of hot air.... I think the bad news is that there's not going to be any peace between Syrian and Israel. The Syrian opening speech was one of the ugliest in a long time....

-more-

Williams: ...I think what really happened this week was that you had both sides in that Middle East conference saying to the international community: We're not going to be the stumbling block....

Krauthammer: ...I think [the Palestinians] are going to deal. The Israelis also are exhausted, but the Syrians don't believe that time is against them. They are arming very heavily.... My sense is that Assad thinks there's going to have to be another war before this issue is settled with the Israelis.

Rowan: I disagree with the notion that Syria thinks there has to be another war. They know Israel has nuclear weapons. They are absolutely certain that the U.S. is going to come down on the side of Israel, that the U.S. will do to them what it did to Iraq....

On Sen. Simpson:

Peterson: He's been apologizing all week....

Rowan: And he'll still be the mean rascal he's always been. He isn't fooling anybody, I don't think.

Krauthammer: That's become a kind of a political style, and I don't think anybody really takes it seriously as apology.

On unemployment benefits:

Williams: ...I think that clearly [President Bush] is sensing the economic problems going as deep as they are, that the American people are in no mood for him hardlining it....

Talbott: That was a good argument that the White House had, and I hope they stick to it in the negotiations that they're now going to have with the Democrats.

Rowan: I saw a cartoon in Friday's Chicago Sun-Times: blacks at the bar. Guy says, I hear President Bush has agreed to a new civil rights bill. He says, what does it cover? He says, it covers Bush's butt.

CONGRESSIONAL MONITOR

Monday, November 4, 1991

Volume 27, Number 171

This Week In Congress

Activity will continue at a high level on both floors this week as lawmakers begin to wrap up business for the year.

Congress is expected to clear a compromise civil rights bill and send it to President Bush, who is likely to sign it.

If conferees can reach final agreement, both chambers may take up the conference agreement on a measure (HR 2100) that would authorize $290.8 billion for the fiscal 1992 defense budget. Republicans have signaled that President Bush would accept the bill.

And, if an agreement can be reached with the administration, both chambers may act on legislation that would provide extended benefits to unemployed workers.

Although this is an off-election year, some voters will go to the polls Tuesday to decide on local officials and issues. In addition, one senator, two House members and two governors will be elected. (See box, p. 4)

Senate Floor Action

Gates Nomination. The Senate will begin debate today, and vote tomorrow, on the nomination of Robert M. Gates to become director of the CIA.

Although Gates now appears set for easy confirmation, his nomination hit some rough spots earlier as members of the Intelligence Committee probed his involvement in the 1986 Iran-contra scandal. CIA analysts also charged that during an earlier stint at the agency Gates revised intelligence estimates to conform with the policy objectives of the Reagan administration.

Voter Registration. Senators may also be asked to take up legislation (S 250) that sponsors say will increase voter participation. The first step would be to try — for third time this year — to shut off a filibuster on the motion to bring up the bill.

The measure would make it easier for citizens to register to vote by linking registration with an application for a driver's license and allowing people to register in federal and state offices year round.

Republican opposition to the measure has delayed action on the bill. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., says the measure would add millions of dollars in administrative costs to the states and could lead to increased voter fraud.

Banking Bill. Senate leaders hope to begin work on a measure (S 543) that would revamp U.S. banking laws and allow the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation to borrow up to $30 billion to close down failing banks.

On Tuesday night, the Senate is scheduled to vote to close debate on a motion to proceed to the bill.

The measure generally tracks a bill (HR 6) currently up for House consideration. It does not include a Bush administration proposal to allow commercial firms to buy banks.

House Floor Action

Banking Bill. Today the House will continue consideration of HR 6, a bill that would overhaul existing banking laws. It also would provide up to $30 billion to recapitalize the insurance fund that protects bank deposits.

Civil Rights. The House is expected to take up the Senate-passed version of a civil rights bill worked out between Senate leaders and the administration. The Senate approved the bill (S 1745) last week. The measure would strengthen key anti-discrimination laws for women, blacks and religious minorities, mainly by reversing recent Supreme Court decisions. The bill would also apply some of the anti-discrimination rules to Senate employees.

The House passed a differing version (HR 1) on June 5. President Bush has threatened to veto that legislation.

Labor-HHS Spending Bill. The House on Wednesday is expected to begin

Last Week

The Senate's passage of landmark civil rights legislation and the House's rejection of a conference report on a large foreign aid bill were among the highlights of a busy week in Congress.

The House passed a supplemental appropriations bill to cover the costs of the Persian Gulf War and domestic emergencies.

But a sweeping national energy strategy bill got derailed in the Senate when supporters failed to break a filibuster.

Conferees wrapped up work on a $291 billion defense authorization bill for fiscal 1992 and a $205 billion fiscal 1992 spending bill for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education.

Congressional leaders and White House officials found an agreement on a new unemployment benefits package to be elusive. On Friday, the House Ways and Means Committee met but refused to endorse a $5.6 billion proposal that would provide up to 20 weeks in extended benefits.

Here's a rundown of last week's major action:

Senate Floor

Civil Rights. The Senate approved, 93-5, a major civil rights bill (S 1745) that overturns eight Supreme Court decisions that made it more difficult for women and minorities to successfully sue employers for job discrimination. President Bush has indicated he will sign the measure, which is the result of lengthy negotiations between proponents and White House officials.

The measure would put the burden on employers to prove that any discriminatory practices are necessary for their businesses but basically leave it to the courts to decide what constitutes a "business necessity."

The bill also would limit damages for women in discrimination cases but not for minorities.

Senators amended the measure to extend some of the bill's protections and

1992 Congressional Election Calendar

The 1992 election is 52 weeks away, but filing deadlines in a number of states are already looming. In fact, congressional candidates in two states (Illinois and Maryland) must officially file candidacy papers before the end of 1991.

In addition to the presidency, all 435 House seats and 35 Senate seats will be at stake, along with 12 governorships and thousands of state and local offices.

In some states, the fast-approaching filing deadlines are being viewed with some trepidation by would-be congressional candidates. That's because the redistricting progress has been painfully slow in a number of states, and candidates don't yet know what their prospective districts will look like. Every state with more than one House district must redraw the lines to reflect the results of the 1990 census.

work on the conference report on the fiscal 1992 appropriations bill (HR 2707) for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services (HHS) and Education.

President Bush has threatened to veto the $205 billion measure because it contains provisions that would block enforcement of administration regulations barring abortion counseling in federally funded family planning clinics.

NOAA Authorization. Also on Wednesday, the House may begin consideration of HR 2130, a bill that would authorize fiscal 1992 appropriations for the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA).

The measure would authorize $1.6 billion for NOAA in fiscal 1992, up from current funding of $1.5 billion and about $46 million less than the Bush administration requested.

Family and Medical Leave. Some time during the week, the House may take up a measure (HR 2) that would require employers to grant up to 12 weeks per year of unpaid leave to workers who want to spend time with newborn or newly adopted children or with seriously ill family members. The Senate approved its version of the legislation (S 5) on Oct. 2. President Bush vetoed a similar bill last year.

Dairy Bill. The House may also consider HR 2837, a bill that would raise milk price supports by 25 percent and curb production with government-imposed quotas.

The bill would raise milk price supports from $10.10 per hundredweight to $12.60 per hundredweight.

Supporters of the bill say it is needed because dairy farmers are facing the lowest milk prices in 13 years.

The administration opposes the bill, saying it would raise the cost of milk to consumers by about 10 percent.

Non-Controversial Bills. On Tuesday, the House will take up a number of bills under suspension of the rules (a procedure that allows for speedy action on bills, without amendments). Among the measures to be considered are:

- HR 3624, which would change the procedures for the appointment of the chairman of the U.S. International Trade Commission. The bill would provide for an automatic rotation of the chairmanship even if the president fails to appoint a new chairman before the start of the next two-year term.

- HR 3350, which would reauthorize the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights through fiscal 1994, as approved by the Senate on Oct. 28. The House first passed the measure on Sept. 30 as a two-year reauthorization.

The bill would authorize $7.16 million for the commission in fiscal 1992, the same amount that was included in the fiscal 1992 appropriations bill (HR 2608) for the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, and the federal judiciary.

- HR 3298, which would fine-tune the 1987 Farm Credit Act. The Act bailed out and reorganized the Farm Credit System. As a so-called government-sponsored enterprise, the Farm Credit System is a government-created private corporation that enjoys certain benefits such as an exemption from state and local taxes, as well as implicit government backing of its financial soundness.

- HR 3049, which would require applicants for citizenship to file with the nearest federal district court. If the court failed to process their application within 45 days, applicants could then apply through the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS).

- HR 3387, which would reauthorize a government-sponsored corporation established to reinvigorate the area around Pennsylvania Avenue in the District of Columbia. The measure would authorize $2.8 million for fiscal 1992.

Committee Action

Transportation Research. The House Science, Space and Technology Committee on Thursday will consider legislation (HR 2941) that would authorize research into future technologies to improve the nation's transportation system.

For fiscal 1992, the bill would authorize $164.5 million for Transportation Department research and development programs. The authorization would be increased to about $180 million in 1993 and $200 million in 1994.

About 8 percent of the funding would have to be earmarked for auto body safety, electromagnetically levitated trains and "short-haul" transportation systems that would replace city and suburban bus systems.

Lead Exposure. Members of the House Energy and Commerce Subcommittee on Health and the Environment may take another crack today at a bill (HR 2840) that aims to reduce human exposure to lead.

The measure would strengthen regulations governing the amount of lead that can be contained in drinking water.

The panel will meet if they can reach a consensus on provisions that would require lead inspections for homes and apartments before they are sold and the testing of schools and day-care centers for lead paint. The real estate industry opposes the inspections, saying it would further damage an already depressed housing market.

Technology Transfer. The House Science, Space and Technology Subcommittee on Technology and Competitiveness on Thursday will mark up a bill (HR 191) that supporters say will encourage closer collaboration between federal laboratories and U.S. companies in the development of computer software.

The measure would establish programs to promote technology transfer for works prepared under cooperative research and development programs.

Fire Safety. Legislation (HR 3360) that would address fire safety deficiencies in federal office buildings and federally subsidized housing will be considered Thursday by the House Science, Space and Technology Subcommittee on Science.

The measure would require that automatic sprinklers be installed in federal housing units and in newly constructed federal buildings that house more than 25 employees.

Case Consolidation. The House Judiciary panel's Intellectual Property Subcommittee will mark up legislation (HR 2450) on Wednesday that would allow federal district courts to consolidate 25 or more cases into one action, as long as the suits are against the same defendant and stem from the same incident. Such consolidation would apply to a case, for example, involving numerous suits filed by victims and their families against an airline after a plane crash. ■

Election Day, 1991, On Tap Tomorrow

A Senate seat and two House seats are just a few of the political jobs up for grabs tomorrow as voters go to the polls in several states.

Political pundits will use the results to look for hints about voters' moods just a year from the 1992 presidential and congressional elections.

In Pennsylvania, voters will elect a senator and fill a House vacancy in the 2nd District. Voters in Virginia's 7th District will select a new House member. In addition, Kentucky and Mississippi have gubernatorial races.

And, in Washington state a term-limit initiative appears set to be approved, which would trigger lawsuits challenging its constitutionality.

Pennsylvania Races. After trailing by more than 30 points in the polls early in the campaign, Senate appointee Harris Wofford, D, has stormed back to draw even with challenger Dick Thornburgh, R, a former governor and Bush Cabinet official. Wofford was a little-known state official when Gov. Robert P. Casey, D, named him on May 8 to fill the vacancy caused by the death of John Heinz, R.

Almost immediately, Thornburgh gave indications that he would step down as U.S. attorney general to run against Wofford. Thornburgh, who served as the Keystone state's governor from 1979-1987, was seen as the prohibitive favorite because his fund-raising ability and name recognition dwarfed that of Wofford.

But an Oct. 25-26 poll by a Pittsburgh news organization indicated that the race was a dead heat. Wofford's image as an outsider and strong showing among women were given as reasons for his success.

Pundits have looked to the race for hints on how Bush will fare in 1992. The election has become a referendum on the administration's handling of economic and domestic issues, according to Ross Baker, political science professor at Rutgers University.

• In the race for the 2nd District House seat, Lucien Blackwell, a former Philadelphia city councilman, has the Democratic machine behind him, but Consumer Party candidate Chaka Fattah is running an effective grass-roots campaign that could produce an upset.

The seat opened up when William H. Gray III, D, retired from the House on Sept. 11 to head up the United Negro College Fund.

Fattah, a freshman state senator, was endorsed by the Philadelphia Enquirer on Oct. 29 and has the support of labor groups. Still, support for Blackwell from Democratic Party regulars will make him tough to beat.

Independent John F. White, a former state welfare official, is well-financed and has run as a young Turk. Also running is Republican Nadine G. Smith-Bulford, a minister.

Virginia House Seat. Voters in Virginia's 7th District have two prominent names to choose from when they elect a new House member tomorrow.

State Rep. George F. Allen, R, the son of late Washington Redskins football coach George Allen, will face Kay Slaughter, D, who is the first cousin of incumbent D. French Slaughter, R, who announced he was retiring for health reasons.

Polls show Slaughter has been helped by her surname, although Allen and Rep. Slaughter have fought against that.

Gubernatorial Races. Tomorrow Rep. Larry J. Hopkins, R, will find out if he is getting a new job: governor of Kentucky. But it is more likely that Kentuckians will vote for Hopkins' opponent, Democratic Lt. Gov. Brereton Jones.

It has been nearly 25 years since the state elected a Republican governor, and Hopkins has been fighting an uphill battle to chip away at Jones' Democratic base.

The winner will replace Democrat Wallace G. Wilkinson.

In Mississippi, Gov. Ray Mabus, D, is a narrow favorite to win a second term over GOP challenger Kirk Fordice. Since his election in 1987, the 43-year-old Mabus has been known as a reform-minded, "New South" politician who has been willing to buck the state Legislature.

Term Limits. If Washington approves a term-limit initiative tomorrow, it would become the second state to do so. Colorado passed a 12-year limit in 1990 — but it is not retroactive like the one Washington is considering.

If approved, House members in Washington would be forced to retire after three terms. Incumbents who have served that amount would have to retire in 1995, meaning Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D, and all seven of his House colleagues would have to leave.

First-term Sen. Brock Adams, D, would be allowed to serve one more six-year term if he is re-elected in 1992. Two-term Sen. Slade Gorton, R, would be allowed to serve one more term because his previous terms were not consecutive.

Foley calls the initiative "patently unconstitutional," and is planning a court challenge. But its passage could fuel voters in other states, at least 11 of which will have term-limit initiatives on their ballots in 1992.

—By Thomas Galvin

other major anti-discrimination laws to Senate employees, allowing them redress through an internal process and a limited right of appeal in federal court. Senators would be personally liable for damages.

Energy Bill. Senate backers of far-reaching energy legislation (S 1220) failed on Friday to get the 60 votes needed to invoke cloture on the motion to proceed to the bill. The vote was 50-44.

One of the key provisions that troubled members who voted against cloture would open Alaska's Arctic National Wildlife Refuge to oil and gas drilling.

The bill would overhaul a host of regulations to promote construction of nuclear power plants, increased electricity generation and use of alternative energy sources.

Interior Bill. On Friday, the Senate cleared, by voice vote, the conference report on the $12.6 billion fiscal 1992 Interior appropriations bill (HR 2686).

Senators agreed, 73-25, to back the decision by House-Senate conferees to drop language that would have restricted the National Endowment for the Arts' (NEA) funding of projects depicting sexual or excretory functions in a "patently offensive" manner. North Carolina's Jesse Helms, R, led the fight to restrict NEA's funding authority.

The Senate, on the insistence of the House, agreed on Friday to drop language that would have provided $5 million for a fossil fuel technology plant in Cheyenne, Wyo. Earlier in the week, House members removed similar Senate language that would have provided $44.2 million for the project.

Civil Rights Commission. The Senate passed legislation (HR 3350) that would reauthorize the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights through fiscal 1994. The House-passed version of the bill would reauthorize the commission through fiscal 1993. President Bush had sought a 10-year reauthorization.

Abandoned Infants. Members passed a bill (S 1532) to extend the authorization for federal programs designed to help find foster homes for babies who have been abandoned at hospitals because they suffer from some type of affliction, such as AIDS or prenatally developed drug addiction.

Tribal Jurisdiction. Members passed a measure (S 962) that would reinstate the authority of Indian tribes to exercise criminal jurisdiction over all Indians in their territorial limits. Jurisdiction would be limited to misdemeanor violations.

Maritime Treaties. The Senate ratified two maritime treaties, including one (Treaty Doc. 102-11) that requires countries who are signatories to the International Convention on Oil Pollution

Preparedness, Response and Cooperation to increase efforts to respond rapidly to major oil spills.

Another treaty (Treaty Doc. 102-12) requires shipowners and commercial salvage operations to take precautions to avoid environmental accidents.

House Floor

Foreign Aid. In a vote that indicated general unease over the state of the domestic economy and the unemployed, the House rejected, 159-262, the conference report on a $25 billion foreign aid authorization bill (HR 2508).

The bill would authorize $12.5 billion in both fiscal 1992 and 1993 for military, economic and development aid abroad.

Also fueling opposition to the conference report were two provisions dealing with abortion that would likely draw a presidential veto. One would overturn current restrictions on U.S. aid to world family planning organizations.

Another would authorize funds for the U.N. Population Fund, which provides assistance to countries that have been accused of forcing abortions on young women.

Supplemental Funds. The House passed, 252-162, a $7.5 billion fiscal 1992 supplemental appropriations bill (HR 3543) to cover costs remaining from the Persian Gulf War and provide disaster relief to farmers hit hard by domestic emergencies and persistent bad weather.

The measure would also provide $1 billion to the Federal Emergency Management Agency to help communities recover from natural disasters.

Disability Prevention. The House passed legislation (HR 3401) that would reauthorize for five years federal programs intended to help prevent disabilities.

The bill would authorize $15 million in fiscal 1992. About $10 million was appropriated in fiscal 1991.

Veterans Disability Pay. Members cleared legislation (HR 1046) on Wednesday that would authorize a 3.7 percent cost of living adjustment (COLA) for disabled veterans and their families. The COLA would go into effect on Dec. 1. The Senate passed the same bill earlier in the week.

The House on July 29 passed a different version of the bill, which would have set the COLA at 4.8 percent.

Bulgaria, Mongolia. The House passed measures (H J Res 281, H J Res 282) to normalize trade relations with Mongolia and Bulgaria.

The bills would extend most-favored-nation trading status, which provides low, normal tariffs on imports, to both countries.

Conference Action

Defense Authorization. Conferees came close to finishing work on the $290.8 billion fiscal 1992 defense authorization bill (HR 2100).

They agreed on compromises on both the B-2 stealth bomber and the Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI). No new B-2s would be authorized, but the bill would provide $1.8 billion to keep the production lines for the bomber operational should Congress decide in the future to build more bombers.

The bill also would put $1 billion into an escrow account. That money could be used to build a bomber but only after both House and Senate approval. President Bush had requested $3.2 billion to buy four planes in fiscal 1992.

The agreement would give SDI $4.15 billion — $1 billion less than Bush requested. That amount includes $390 million for the Brilliant Pebbles space-based defense system.

The measure would authorize the Defense secretary to divert up to $1 billion for humanitarian aid to the Soviet Union.

Negotiators were unable to reach agreement on a provision allowing members of the military and their dependents to have abortions in military hospitals overseas. Conferees hope to wrap up action early this week.

Labor-HHS Spending Bill. The conference on the fiscal 1992 $205 billion spending bill (HR 2707) for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services (HHS), and Education was completed last week when House conferees agreed to decrease their education spending totals, while Senate conferees gave a little on the health programs for which they had been fighting.

Conferees ultimately included in the bill more than $4 billion worth of "delayed obligations" — appropriating funds that will not become available until Sept. 30, 1992, the last day of the fiscal year. Because this money will not actually be spent until the subsequent fiscal year, appropriators were able to inflate program funding totals without having most of the funds "scored" against fiscal 1992 spending limits.

The negotiators included language stating that the National Institutes of Health's National Cancer Institute should make breast, cervical, ovarian and prostate cancer its "top priorities" and that funding for related research should receive "significant increases." But the conferees did not earmark specific funds to carry out the research.

House Committee Action

Honoraria Ban. Legislation (HR 3341) that would lift the ban on honoraria for most federal workers was approved last week by the House Judiciary Committee.

The measure would allow all federal career employees, as well as non-career workers who earn less than $101,300 annually, to accept honoraria as long as the work is unrelated to their official duties.

The current ban prevents federal workers from collecting any speaking or writing fees.

Citizenship Processing. The House Judiciary Committee approved a bill (HR 3049) that would put the federal courts back in the business of dealing with citizenship applications.

The 1990 Immigration and Nationality Act gave people the option of filing for citizenship with the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) instead of the courts, which were often criticized for long processing delays.

HR 3049 would require applicants for citizenship to file with the nearest federal district court. If the court failed to process an application within 45 days, an applicant could then apply through the INS.

ITC Chairmanship. A measure (HR 3624) that would change the procedures for the appointment of the chairman of the U.S. International Trade Commission (ITC) was approved by the House Ways and Means Committee.

Under current law, the ITC chairmanship must be rotated every two years among individuals of different political parties. The president designates the chairman from among eligible members of the commission.

Under the bill, if the president fails to appoint a chairman before the start of a two-year term, the commissioner with the longest period of continuous service who is also a member of a political party that is different from the previous chairman would automatically become chairman until a new appointment was made.

Energy Strategy. The House Energy and Commerce Subcommittee on Energy and Power finished work last week on a national energy strategy bill (HR 776). The panel approved sections that would encourage development of renewable energy and require additional study of policy options for controlling global warming. The bill was approved, 21-1, and combines 12 draft titles.

But the panel failed to take up controversial proposals to require tougher automobile fuel economy standards. Such Corporate Average Fuel Economy (CAFE) standards are vigorously opposed by full Energy and Commerce Committee Chairman John D. Dingell, D-Mich.

Senate Committee Action

Higher Education. Federal student aid programs for college students would be revamped under a bill (S 1150) approved, 17-0, by the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee.

The measure would reauthorize the 1965 Higher Education Act for seven years, authorizing $17.4 billion for the first year.

Under the bill, the Pell grant program would be established as an entitlement program beginning in academic year 1997-98.

Paul Simon, D-Ill., citing lack of support, did not offer an amendment that would have reorganized the federal student loan program to provide loans directly to students instead of through banks. The House bill (HR 3553) contains such a direct loan program.

Welfare Dependency. The Senate Labor Committee agreed to legislation that would order the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) to develop new techniques to improve the quality of information that the government uses to analyze cases of welfare dependency.

The bill (S 1256) would require HHS to report to Congress annually on the progress of government efforts to help people get off welfare.

Alzheimer's Research. A measure (S 1577) that would reauthorize the Federal Council on Alzheimer's Disease, which was established by a 1986 law, also gained the voice-vote approval of the Senate Labor Committee.

The council is authorized to coordinate federally sponsored research into Alzheimer's and other related diseases.

Indian Measures. The Senate Indian Affairs Committee approved two measures that would provide more income for certain Indians.

S 754 would provide that $4,000 in income derived from trust land — land given by the federal government through treaties — owned by an individual Indian would not be counted in calculating eligibility for government assistance, such as food stamps.

S 168 would set up trust funds for two tribes as compensation for lands lost because of the building of the Garrison and Oahe dams.

The tribes would have access only to the interest on the funds and could use the money for education, social and welfare programs and economic development, with the approval of the Interior Secretary.

Iran Hostage Probe. A resolution (S Res 198) authorizing an "October Surprise" probe into allegations that officials of the 1980 Reagan presidential campaign tried to delay the release of U.S. hostages held in Iran until after the November election was approved, 9-8, by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Some panel Republicans strongly opposed the investigation, saying that there was not enough evidence to warrant spending $596,000, as would be authorized under the resolution, for the investigation.

The investigation would be conducted by the committee's Near Eastern and South Asian Affairs Subcommittee.

Public Lands. The Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee approved, 20-0, a number of public lands bills.

Among the bills was a measure (S 140) that would boost the authorization for payments in lieu of property taxes that counties with federal lands receive. Local governments are not permitted to tax federal lands, and many counties in the West rely on federal payments as a means of financing local services.

Caller ID. The Senate Judiciary Committee approved a bill (S 652) to protect the privacy of telephone customers by limiting the use of caller ID devices.

Caller ID reveals the telephone number of anyone calling a phone linked to the service.

Approved by a 10-1 vote, the bill would require telephone companies to allow customers to block the display of their phone numbers on a per call basis, free of charge. ■

BASHAWAY BASHAWAY BASHAWAY ALL

Dems focus most energy on Bush, economy. Two undercards: Tsongas rankles Harkin on PAC funds; Clinton calls Wilder bluff on welfare reform. (#1)

HEAVYWEIGHT WATCH: Jackson opts out. (#3) Cuomo in search of "divine intervention"? (#4)

BASH THIS: With economic conditions on par with those of the summer house, Bush vows to "hit back," takes out his frustrations on Congress. (#7)

CAMPAIGNS '91

PA SEN: Both drop over $1M on final weekend TV. Wofford plays up underdog role, while Thornburgh attacks his health-care plan. (#12)

WA 553: Foley heads home in face of tidal wave. Pro-limit SEATTLE TIMES editorial, Jerry Brown waiting for him. (#10)

KY GOV: Final poll shows Jones with 12-point lead. (#13)

MS GOV: Low black turnout only hope for Fordice? (#14)

DOLE: NOT-SO-SUBTLE HINT (#11)

May enforce a personal term limit if GOP Sen. losses loom.

SPOTLIGHT

BCCI AND MR. ROGERS

The 1980 October Surprise seems a dud (see NEWSWEEK, NEW REPUBLIC), but the 1991 version may be explosive.

Ed Rogers quit his $600K account with the BCCI sheik and the White House has cleared him. Few may want to be Mr. Rogers' neighbor right now (e.g., Thornburgh in 11/5 PA race, #12), but some won't leave him alone.

N.Y. TIMES' Safire: "The cover-up is on ... Did the longtime Sununu hatchet man ... play a part in reversing the Justice decision? Nobody wants to know."

TIME's Beaty seconds Safire's call for a special prosecutor with his own for independent investigator.

NEWSWEEK's McDaniel cites sources saying "questions remain concerning Sununu's connection to BCCI." (#9)

===== QUOTE OF THE DAY =====

"I'll do whatever he wants -- stay away or go, whatever helps the most."

-- Bush, between golf shots, on whether he would go to PA to help ex-AG Thornburgh in his senate race, N.Y. POST, 11/4. (#12)

THE APN BULLETIN BOARD

FROM TODAY'S GREENWIRE: Does ANWR vote signal beginning of transition to post-petroleum era?
FROM TODAY'S DAILY REPORT CARD: The repercussions of school violence are being felt in Houston, Brooklyn and Chicago.
FROM TODAY'S ABORTION REPORT: Guam law before appeals court; abortion at the ballot box in WA, PA, MS, KY and VA on 11/5.

???? OVERLOOKED ???? ?

This is true.

An obituary in today's PHILADELPHIA INQUIRER reports the demise of Richard Thornburgh (11/4).
(No relation.)

*1 NH DEM CONVENTION: JUST DOING WHAT DEMS DO BEST

Clinton, Harkin, Kerrey, Tsongas and Wilder "engaged in a Bush-bashing gala" 11/2, "accusing [Bush] of disregarding Americans' needs and fostering the political climate that led to a former Ku Klux Klansman's success in [LA]" (Pertman, BOSTON GLOBE). The speeches "contained far more scathing and more personal attacks than most of them have used in the past -- with the exception" of Harkin, "who has made lambasting Bush a hallmark of his campaign ... All of the candidates except for Wilder, who adopted a more sedate tone, gave the crowd the aggressive rhetoric that it came for. And in the case of Clinton, Kerrey and Harkin, the words were also forcefully delivered" (11/3). The candidates "did what [Dems] do best: they bashed Bush, bemoaned the state of the economy and engaged in a little infighting of their own even as they called for party unity" (Milligan, N.Y. DAILY NEWS, 11/3). Noting the 11/2 Manchester UNION LEADER front-page headline, "N.H. Food Stamp Usage Jumps 51%," WASH. POST's Balz writes, "That was like manna from heaven for the candidates, who portrayed the state as an economic basket case and blamed Bush for the decline" (11/3). As they spoke, "the band played 'Happy Days are Here Again.' But it should have played 'Brother Can You Spare A Dime?" (Simon, Balto. SUN, 11/4). CBS' Richard Threlkeld: "Cuomo may announce his intentions next week but whether he runs or not, [Dems] here seem honestly convinced they can beat George Bush next year" (11/2).

PAC ATTACK: "In the first squabble" of the campaign, Harkin told Tsongas "to stop 'attacking' him with demands that he return his PAC money" (DiStaso, NH SUNDAY NEWS). Tsongas raised the issue during the 11/1 TV forum, from which Harkin was absent, and the two "went nose-to-nose backstage" at the convention. "Harkin called the Tsongas demand a 'Republican argument,' and said that with George Bush raising $2 million for his re-election campaign in less than a week, he doesn't intend to play 'touch football.'" Tsongas: "That puts Tom Harkin on one side, and all the other [Dems] on the other" (11/3). Harkin to Tsongas: "I won't define you and you don't define me. ... Let's not start attacking each other." As he walked away, Tsongas replied, "It's an important issue, Tom." Harkin, later: "By gosh, if they start beating me up, they better watch out" (BOSTON GLOBE, 11/3). Kerrey, who also accepts PAC $, was not involved but later defended the practice: "The question is are you willing to take on the special interests. Can you say no to your friends? I've demonstrated that" (DALLAS MORNING NEWS, 11/3). "Harkin said he treats a supporter who gives him one dollar the same as a PAC that gives him $5,000." Tsongas: "That is absurd on its face. That bespeaks a misunderstanding of human nature" (SUNDAY NEWS, 11/3). "Harkin lost ground here when Tsongas provoked his temper. ... Tsongas clearly has drawn blood on the PAC issue" (Woodlief, BOSTON HERALD, 11/3).

HARKIN: Harkin, "whose political oratory is rarely cool, was particularly hot" (Toner, N.Y. TIMES, 11/3). "In the most militant call to arms against Bush, Harkin said the party should be ready for a negative campaign assault from the White House" (Milligan, N.Y. DAILY NEWS). Harkin: "All you've got to do is look at what they did to Anita Hill and you'll see what kind of campaign they're going to run" (11/3); "There are those who say we should not bash Bush. Well, if not us, who? If not now, when?" (Balto. SUN, 11/3). "Harkin, freed of the fear that Jackson might compete with him for the farthest ranks of the left, displayed a coalition of blue collar workers, the disabled and, significantly, seething [Dems] who believe Harkin is equipped to fight the meanest battle against Bush next year" (Wilkie, GLOBE, 11/3). Harkin: "Every 15 minutes, someone in [NH] runs out of unemployment benefits. ... Bush just doesn't get it" (NH SUNDAY NEWS, 11/3).

CLINTON: He was introduced by ex-NH Dem chair George Bruno "as a candidate who isn't wringing his hands on the Hudson, or any other rivers in the country." Clinton: "We need a president that cares more about Littleton, [NH], than Liechtenstein" (NH SUNDAY NEWS, 11/3). "Clinton, suspect in some liberal circles because of his Southern roots" and his DLC ties, "took steps to dispel that perception. ... As he described the plight of 'a middle class going down,' he sounded like a fervent populist" (Wilkie, GLOBE, 11/3). Clinton entered to Billy Joel's "We Didn't Start the Fire" -- "the musical equivalent of the [Dems'] contention that their party is not to blame for the country's problems" (N.Y. DAILY NEWS, 11/3). "Clinton was a winner with the force of his speech, a big man making big, sweeping gestures, pounding the lectern and shouting himself hoarse to frequent bursts of applause" (Woodlief, HERALD, 11/3).

TSONGAS: He "was the most organized ... at the convention, just as he is statewide" (Pertman, GLOBE). Tsongas offered "one of the most pointed verbal blasts" when he "drew a verbal picture of [David] Duke standing outside the White House calling out: 'Father, father ... You made me father, you made me.'" Tsongas to Bush: "Take in your child and show the real bloodline of the [GOP]" (11/3). Tsongas also targeted Bush's visit to Kennebunkport to assess damage done to his home: "He should come to [NH] and see the damage he has done here" (NH SUNDAY NEWS, 11/3). Tsongas: "Economic despair, thy name is George Bush" (S.D. UNION, 11/3). "Tsongas was definitely a winner. The national press corps, out in force to cover the convention, is taking Tsongas seriously now" (Woodlief, BOSTON HERALD, 11/3).

KERREY: Kerrey, "whose campaign seems aimed at the voters of the baby boom, devoted much of his speech today to an angry attack on Mr. Bush's use of social issues, like abortion rights" (Toner, N.Y. TIMES, 11/3). He also "mocked Bush's suggestion" -- made during Bush's TX trip -- "that now is a good time for Americans to buy a home or car": "It's a difficult time to even buy groceries" (DALLAS MORNING NEWS, 11/3). "A line Kerrey added to his speech without his aides' knowledge drew the most applause." On committing to children's education: "In 1988 George Bush campaigned on the Pledge of Allegiance. If you require the Pledge ... then the least we can do is pledge our allegiance to them" (OMAHA WORLD-HERALD, 11/3). Kerrey's supporters included many who helped Hart to his '84 NH primary win. "Their hair, in many instances, is going to gray now, but they still have the enthusiasm to match the passions around Harkin" (Wilkie, GLOBE, 11/3). "Kerrey was helped by not drawing fire from anyone else, while Harkin and Tsongas fought and Wilder and Clinton tangled" (Woodlief, HERALD, 11/3).

WILDER: He "accused Bush of sacrificing moral leadership in favor of divisive talk about racial quotas": "It has been shameful, it has been destructive, and it has produced a climate conducive to [GOPers] like David Duke" (AP/PHILA. INQUIRER, 11/3). "Wilder acknowledged the day before the convention that he needed to establish a greater 'presence' in [NH] 'because I haven't been up here enough" (Wilkie, GLOBE, 11/3). But he "spent part of his day trying to undo the damage from a comment he made during a Friday night debate with Clinton and Tsongas" (Balz, W. POST, 11/3). Clinton, "a long-time advocate of welfare reform, took issue with Wilder's published comment that Clinton called for reforms only after ... David Duke's recent prominence. Wilder offered conflicting explanations about the comment, then finally conceded [11/2] he may have made it" (Feeney, DALLAS MORNING NEWS, 11/3). "Without directly apologizing to Clinton, Wilder said: 'I have never disparaged and will not disparage Bill Clinton. I don't consider him to be like David Duke and don't compare him to David Duke in any way, and respect him very highly'" (W. POST, 11/3). AP's Jill Lawrence "stood by her story. Later, Mr. Wilder's press secretary said [Wilder] recalled the conversation with the reporter but did not recall making such comments" (N.Y. TIMES, 11/3). Clinton, "shrugging, refused to call Wilder a liar" (N.Y. DAILY NEWS, 11/3). "Wilder suffered another setback here by being loose with his facts" (Woodlief, HERALD, 11/3). "For Mr. Wilder's inner circle, the remark brought back painful memories" of Wilder's statement regarding Clarence Thomas' Catholicism. Wilder adviser Joe Trippi: "We're just warming up here. I don't think most people will even remember it after the weekend" (Clardy, W. TIMES, 11/4). Wilder "got a largely lukewarm reception ... Other than among 200 backers imported largely from other states to cheer as he took the podium, there was little evidence of support for [him]" (Winston/Fiske, Norfolk VIRGINIAN-PILOT, 11/3). Of the five, only Wilder "looked out of his league" (Wilkie, GLOBE, 11/3).

OTHERS: "While the known candidates presented speeches that went over their allotted time and little or nothing was done," when ex-Irvine, CA Mayor Larry Agran went over his limit "a party official had the person running the sound system play 'Happy Days are Here Again,' effectively drowning him out." Tom "Billy Jack" Laughlin, "noted the action when he stepped up to speak saying he had a lot to say and only five minutes to say it. He then imitated a record being played at high speed, evoking laughter from what audience was left" (PORTSMOUTH HERALD, 11/3). Agran called his 5-minute allotment a "last-minute trick" by the NH Dems (B. GLOBE, 11/2).

*2 NH TV FORUM: DISCUSSION CENTERS AROUND ECONOMY

Clinton, Tsongas and Wilder met 11/1 in a televised forum moderated by ABC political dir. Hal Bruno. "In a congenial hour-long exchange," each called for "spurring growth through domestic investment" (Pertman, BOSTON GLOBE). "Clearly sensitive to GOP charges that [Dems] are big taxers and spenders, all three men also agreed that no new revenues would be needed to enact their proposals. Although all of them are relative [DC] 'outsiders,' Wilder tried most aggressively to seize the label by criticizing not only the [GOP] president but also the Congress, and by repeatedly suggesting that cutting waste in government could pay for much of what he wanted" (11/2). They focused on "criticizing Bush more than each other, while discussing the economy, health care" and negative TV ads (Manchester UNION LEADER, 11/2). "Wilder said he would send Congress a balanced budget. Tsongas asked what it would look like." Wilder: "I could tell you what it looks like in [VA]." Tsongas: "You're running for president." Adds WASH. POST's Balz, "Later, Wilder backed away from his claim that he would send Congress a balanced budget" (11/2). Wilder and Clinton suggested a middle-class tax cut, "something Tsongas labeled irresponsible until the nation's budget deficit is dealt with": "Why don't we show that as [Dems] we can finally deal with the deficit" (GLOBE, 11/2). Wilder and Clinton "clashed" over the '88 Willie Horton ad. Asked whether Dems would swear off negative campaigns, Clinton "attempted to make a complicated point about the Horton ad: "not a negative ad until it was answered." A "sarcastic" Wilder challenged Clinton, who "tried to recoup, acknowledging that it was both negative and had racial overtones. But he added that the message of the ad appealed to voters' insecurity about crime and had to be answered strongly to prove to Americans that it was negative" (Balz, WASH. POST, 11/2). Wilder "said he would not engage in negative campaigning but would 'set the record straight' if anyone distorted his record. Clinton then accused Wilder of engaging in such tactics," referring to the disputed comments by Wilder to AP on Clinton's welfare reform stands (UNION LEADER, 11/2).

*3 JACKSON: FORGOES A GO

He said he will not run in '92, but "will nevertheless make his presence felt, vowing to use his support among black voters for continued leverage within the [Dem] Party" (Mark Barabak, COPLEYS.D. UNION, 11/3). Jackson said it was just "a matter of time" before he would become president: "It's like an auto race. We ran in '84. We ran in '88. Now we're coming in for a pit stop to get new tires and overhaul our motor. We're going to come back out faster and stronger than ever before" (mult., 11/3). "Jackson declined to endorse any candidate and he rejected the idea that any candidate might 'inherit' his supporters. Democrats should stop assuming black support and Republicans should stop writing it off, he said" (Walters, PHILA. INQUIRER, 11/3). Jackson advisor Ron Walters said Jackson's "'political constituency could split very badly unless he moves very quickly' to support another candidate" (N.Y. TIMES, 11/3).

REAX: Analysts "generally agreed" Wilder would be the "chief beneficiary" of Jackson's votes. But others suggest Harkin, "running as an unvarnished New Deal [Dem], could have broad appeal among traditionally liberal black voters" -- "but only in the absence of a Cuomo candidacy." Clinton "could also make inroads among black voters, particularly in the South." Brown, Kerrey & Tsongas "appear less likely to benefit" (COPLEY, 11/3). Wilder "said he had already received some backing from Jackson supporters and expected to get more." Wilder "has assigned" ex-Rainbow Coalition exec. dir. Joe Johnson and pollster Ron Lester to "enlist minority support in Super Tuesday states" (RICHMOND TIMES-DISPATCH, 11/3). "Wilder's rhetorical emphasis on fiscal austerity ... contrasts sharply with Jackson's populist appeals" (Winston/Fiske, Norfolk VIRGINIAN-PILOT, 11/3). Dem analyst Bob Beckel: "[Jackson] has a way of sucking up all available air time. With him out of the race, it allows [others] more exposure" (PHILA. INQUIRER, 11/3). N.Y. TIMES' Gwen Ifill notes, "By shifting his focus from what Mr. Jackson called the 'political center' to the 'moral center,' he is taking a risk of being counted out of the political formula entirely in 1992" (11/3). But Jackson "vowed to register 1 million new voters and said he may run independent delegate slates in some states, a move that could enhance his voice in the nomination process"

(COPLEY, 11/3). Jackson will host a weekly talk show on CNN.

TV: Beckel: "Jackson still has a very substantial constituency in the black community, that constituency is critical to the [Dem] party and frankly somebody's going to inherit that constituency and Jackson's going have a say about that" (CBS, 11/2). CBS' Richard Threlkeld: "Wilder was obviously very relieved, I think most of the candidates were. A Jackson candidacy would certainly have been a complication, but I don't know anyone here who took a Jackson candidacy all that seriously anyway" (11/2).

*4 CUOMO: RON BROWN'S DEADLINE MAY NOT BE HIS

He "has not said when he will reveal his decision, but [Dem] leaders are watching whether he will ignore the request" of DNC chair Ron Brown that candidates announce their intentions by 11/5. Cuomo, "who has said in the past he would take as much time 'as Ron Brown says he can afford,' said [11/1] he has 'no date or commitment.' After saying two weeks ago that he wanted to discuss his decision with Mr. Brown, he said, [11/1] that he might not do so" (Sack, N.Y. TIMES, 11/3). While Cuomo "hates being called a political tease and says he would love some divine intervention, his self-examination seems intended, either consciously or unconsciously, to seduce the public and the party into demanding his candidacy" (Dowd, N.Y. TIMES). Of the letters he has received on whether or not to run, his favorite reads, "Stop jogging. Run," and is signed "God" (11/4).

CHEERING SECTION: Sen. Pat Moynihan (D-NY) said he should run: "Nobody will blindside [Cuomo] and if asked what would he do to anyone who had raped Matilda [Cuomo], he'd say, 'I would do bleep and I would do bleep and I would do bleep -- and then I'd turn myself over to the authorities'" (N.Y. POST, 11/3). N.Y. NEWSDAY's Sydney Schanberg writes, "What's the magnet that's pulling on you to stay home? Is it the prospect of more of that lofty, intellectual dialogue with the Legislature's hack leaders, Mel Miller and Ralph Marino? In short, Mario, it's time to end the soap-opera suspense and say, 'I do'" (11/1). Richard Reeves writes, "If Cuomo doesn't run, he's a jerk!" (PHILA. INQUIRER, 11/2). Balto. SUN editorial: Cuomo "would make an exciting race of it. ... Whether he would make a close race out of it were he nominated to oppose President Bush is not as certain" (11/4).

DOUBTING SECTION: Bob Beckel seeks to dispel some "myths" in an L.A. TIMES op-ed. On the "Cuomo Consensus": "The clamor for Cuomo from the usual suspects -- liberals, [DNC] officials and the Eastern media -- is real and loud. ... However, this roar is muffling the distress signals from the South and West." On the "brief nomination fight": "Instead of a quick ending and the emergence of a nominee, the Anybody-But-Cuomo candidate will be invigorated." On Cuomo supplanting Harkin: "Harkin will realize his greatest and most immediate threat is Cuomo, and won't hesitate to turn his attack from Bush to [Cuomo]." On Cuomo as "best qualified": His "temperament and style, ideal for lobbing verbal assaults from the box seats, may fit badly in the superheated arena of a presidential campaign. ... His tendency to think out loud is also well known." Beckel believes Cuomo will pass (11/3). BOSTON GLOBE headline over Martin Nolan column: "Hamlet on the Hudson -- Audience is wearying of the Mario scenario" (11/3).

LITTLE OF BOTH: "The State capitol press corps is overwhelmingly convinced Cuomo won't run ... even though most of the journalists -- for strictly professional reasons -- would love to see him enter the race" (Dicker, N.Y. POST, 11/4). U.S. NEWS' David Gergen said a win by Sen. Harris Wofford (D) in PA "would be a very, very powerful incentive for Mario Cuomo to come in and declare himself as a candidate." Mark Shields: "Cuomo's public agonizing, self-reappraisal is frankly, very tiresome to me, and I think it's growing tiresome for a lot of [Dems]" ("MacNeil/Lehrer," PBS, 11/1).

5 BROWN: THE ULTIMATE OUTSIDER

His campaign "began with a bang -- picking a fight with" NH Dem chair Chris Spirou (Amy Bayer, COPLEY/S.D. UNION). Spirou did not allow Brown to participate in the 11/1 NH TV forum because of Brown was "sitting out" the 11/2 convention, the only one of the six candidates to do so. Spirou: "That's the rule. You don't come to the convention, you don't get on TV." NH Brown backer Bob Backus: "The real question is, what is the purpose of this convention anyway? Is it to raise money or is it to present candidates and hear their ideas?" Brown aides also "questioned whether personal politics" were involved in Spirou's decision. According to the Manchester UNION LEADER, "Spirou has professed independence in the primary, but has been working behind the scenes" for Harkin. Other candidates "had no objection to Brown participating" (11/2). Brown spent the weekend in WA, stumping for the term limit Initiative 553. Brown: "The system is constipate" (SEATTLE POST-INTELLIGENCER, 11/3).

6 DEM ROUND-UP

HARKIN: He engaged in more "Bush-bashing" before the AZ Dems' hall-of-fame dinner in Phoenix (ARIZONA REPUBLIC, 11/4).

KERREY: An appearance at the home of NH state Rep. Barbara Baldizar, "while well-received, was not enough to make [her] commit to his candidacy" (OMAHA WORLD-HERALD, 11/2). A central FL organizational meeting drew a crowd of 50. Kerrey backer Scott Sokol: "We never in our wildest dreams expected this kind of response." Sokol "said Kerrey's grass-roots organization in the area is far ahead" of those of Clinton and Kerrey (ORLANDO SENTINEL, 11/2). Sighted in NH: Ex-DNC communications director Mike McCurry has signed on as a part-time senior adviser to the Kerrey campaign (HOTLINE sources).

TSONGAS: BOSTON GLOBE's Robert Jordan, under the headline, "The surprising rise of Paul Tsongas," writes, "It is his grass-roots efforts that have boosted his standing among [NH] voters.

... He hit the Rotary clubs and chambers of commerce, espousing his pro-business theme of economic rebirth and growth for [NH] and the nation. Evidently, Tsongas' strategy is working, while Harkin's strategy -- and populist themes -- have not yet produced the support expected for his candidacy" (11/3).

WILDER: TIME's Laurence Barrett profiles him under headline, "A Ghetto Kid Who Remembers His Roots" (11/11 issue).

7 BUSH: MEDIA STAGES THE PANIC WATCH

U.S. NEWS headline: "Presiding over disorder." Walsh & Bowermaster write, "As his re-election campaign begins with multi-million dollar fund-raisers across the country, [Bush] is still groping to explain not only what his presidency has been about but what it may yet become. ... Clearly, Bush is in a muddle. There is no panic in the [WH], but, for the first time, senior Bush advisers are nervous about his re-election. They fear, in particular, that a [Dem] governor" -- perhaps Cuomo or Clinton -- "might run effectively against Bush as an anti-Washington outsider" (11/11 issue). "The triple K strategy" -- crime, quotas and Kuwait -- "has run headlong into reality with a capital R -- recession. ... In the White House, near panic has set in" (Ann McDaniel, NEWSWEEK, 11/11 issue). NEWSWEEK's Bush CW arrow is down. "The Big Mo is on the rocks. Even his summer house takes a hit" (11/11). One Bush aide said the two 8/91 strategy sessions, where the Bush team decided the WH "would schedule events in easy segments to show the president's interest in domestic issues," now seem "like they happened in another century" (Devroy/Yang, WASH. POST, 11/2).

HAVE WE GOT A DEAL FOR YOU: Bush, in Houston following his 10/31 $-raiser: "I don't want to over-cheerlead on the economy, but I don't want to talk people into a further lack of confidence because it's a good time to buy a house, frankly. It's a good time to buy a car in terms of historic interest rates. It's a good time for sound banks to make sound loans" (DALLAS MORNING NEWS, 11/2). Bush said some Dems "think the only chance they have to defeat me is to talk this country into hard times. And I don't want to be a part of that" (N.Y. DAILY NEWS, 11/2). VP Dan Quayle: "I am hopeful we will not have a recession. I don't anticipate that happening. But if we don't start acting more optimistic, if lending institutions don't start lending more money. If we don't do perhaps a better job of communicating that we are out of the recession ... this thing we don't want to happen could possibly happen" (INDIANAPOLIS STAR, 11/2).

TV: ABC's Jim Wooten: "The President was making the best of the latest bundle of economic statistics." Bush: "These things really need to be in perspective. Doesn't help to tell someone that's out of work that unemployment's at 6.8%, and that's far lower than ... back in the '81-'82 days" (11/1). NBC's Irving R. Levine: "All the signs today show that the economy going nowhere fast. In fact, we may be heading into a double dip, a second round of recession" (11/1). U.S. Chamber of Commerce's Lawrence Hunter: "There have been as many sightings of this economic recovery as there have been of Elvis lately" (NBC, 11/1). NBC's Jim Miklaszewski: "Bush is like a prize-fighter who got mugged during the 'Star-Spangled Banner.' He's been roughed up even before the opening bell of the campaign. With the economy in a stall, the [Dems] smell blood, and Bush knows he's in for a fight. ... But Bush is taking a beating in the polls, and he's fighting back. ... what originally looked like George Bush's cake-walk to reelection, may now become his long march" (11/1).

EYE OF THE STORM: WH aides are still "divided" over what form an economic legislative package should take. "Visibly frustrated by the debate, Bush told his aides that he felt like he was standing in the middle of a hurricane. All he could hear was the noise swirling around him" (McDaniel, NEWSWEEK, 11/11). One Bush adviser says: "He's got to Desert Storm it" and "engage totally, use all tools available to him as president, jawbone, gather outsiders, do whatever it takes to let people see whatever can be done is being done." WASH. POST's Devroy & Yang cite some GOPers who say "Bush believes that few tools are available to the White House to actually alter the course of the economy" (11/2). Bob Novak: "If [Bush] keeps this up, if he goes into the recession, and continues to treat it with just a lot of shouting, he's going to end up ... in the same shoes as Herbert Hoover." Rep. Vin Weber (R-MN): "The one guy in the administration who's saying the right thing about George Bush around the country is Jack Kemp, and they're not listening to him" ("Capital Gang," CNN, 11/1). Sununu denied administration "dissension": "There's a lot of general ideas in conflict and very few specific recommendations at all" (DALLAS MORNING NEWS, 11/2). "Bush is likely to adopt an emerging Sununu-Darman strategy of what amounts to smoke and mirrors. They want Bush to recycle his existing proposals, centered on cutting capital-gains taxes, increasing tax breaks to encourage research and development and expanding [IRAs], to prevent the [Dems] from capturing the economic issue" (Walsh/Bowermaster, U.S. NEWS, 11/11). Sununu, on Bush's expected actions: "He's going to underline what he has already asked for. ... You cannot have a growth program if for years you have a Congress that is unwilling to provide stimulus for growth" ("Face the Nation," CBS, 11/3). "If the economy recovers, [Darman] seems unlikely to push for any major tax or budget changes in the next year. But if economic growth fails to pick up, he may advocate more substantial action" (Murray/Wessel, W.S. JOURNAL, 11/4).

POCKETBOOK FACTOR: CHICAGO TRIBUNE's Wm Neikirk writes, "The American people are anxious, even frightened. They look to the president to define the economic problem and show them a way through it. Instead, they see nothing but political conflict and partisan bickering, with the president leading the charge" (Balto. SUN, 11/2). PHILA. INQUIRER headline: "Economy could turn '92 into a horse race after all." KNIGHT RIDDER's Carl Cannon writes "something funny happened on the way to the expected 1992 coronation of George Bush: The middle class got scared" (11/3). ECONOMIST subhead: "A mired economy could keep President Bush from getting back into the White House in 1993. And he knows it" (11/2 issue). "While Bush promotes the notion that the economy is on the mend, many Americans are unimpressed" (Gosselin, BOSTON GLOBE, 11/3). "Middle East diplomacy doesn't pay the bills or train the work force" (Alter, NEWSWEEK, 11/11).

STUMPING HARD: "Although it was overshadowed by Friday's economic news, Bush's blistering harangue of Congress at [the 10/31] campaign opener drew raves from the party faithful" (Lewis, DALLAS MORNING NEWS). One GOP strategist, calling the speech "about 95 percent" Bush's, "said it was Bush's decision to go confrontational" (11/2). KNIGHT RIDDER's Charles Green on Bush's new '92 theme: "Blame Congress for just about everything wrong in America" (MIAMI HERALD, 11/2). Bush said he had been a "placid punching bag" for the Dems, adding: "When a guy takes me on in a demagogic way, I'm going to hit him right back" (N.Y. DAILY NEWS, 11/2). "So much for kinder, gentler" (Santini, N.Y. DAILY NEWS, 11/3). U.S. NEWS' Walsh/Bowermaster write Bush is "uncomfortable with sustained attacks on the institution," and will probably leave future criticisms to VP Quayle "and other surrogates" (11/11). W. POST's Tom Curtis found the 10/31 Houston crowd "decidedly restrained, cautious, even a little wary" (11/2). Quayle raised more than $500,000 at a $1,000-a-plate $-raiser in Indianapolis. IN GOP chair Rex Early "declared it the most successful fund-raiser ever in Indiana" (INDIANAPOLIS STAR, 11/2). "Perhaps to counter [Dem] criticism that the Bush administration spends too much time on international matters, Quayle spoke to his supporters almost entirely on a domestic agenda including values, jobs and limits on government spending" (Mermel, INDIANAPOLIS NEWS, 11/2).

*9 ROGERS "CLEARED" BUT SAFIRE SAYS "SHAM ... SUNUNU WHITEWASH"

The WH said an investigation "found no violation of U.S. ethics laws by" ex-Deputy CoS Ed Rogers, who had signed a $600,000 contract to represent Sheik Kamal Adham, a "major figure" in BCCI (Kurkjian, BOSTON GLOBE). Last week, Rogers quit the contract. WH Counsel Boyden Gray, in a letter to Rep. Charles Schumer (D-NY): "We have determined that Mr. Rogers was not responsible for and did not participate in any effort to watch or monitor any investigation concerning BCCI." In a separate letter to Schumer, DoJ Criminal Div. chief Robert Mueller said neither Rogers, nor Sununu "ever communicated with the [DoJ] regarding its BCCI investigation" (11/2). But GLOBE's Kurkjian reports Gray, in his probe, "did not ask key questions about how [Rogers] landed" the Adham contract. Schumer spokesman Robert McCarson "said Gray did not investigate whether Rogers, while still at the White House, took any interest in the BCCI case or had been contacted about representing Adham" (11/3). TIME says Schumer keeps asking questions because "he believes that the White House may be far more involved in monitoring the BCCI case than was previously believed" (11/11 issue).

BILL SAFIRE: Under header, "Sununu Whitewash," he concludes "the cover-up is on" and repeats his call for a special prosecutor: "To date, nobody has been asked a single question under oath ... Returning the money does not wash away the deed. We have here a blatant, unmistakable reach for influence inside the Bush White House. Who were the brokers, the go-betweens, in the Middle East, in Paris and in [DC] who told Sheik Kamal which Bush aide to hire and what to ask for?" Safire describes a scenario in which Sheik Kamal's lawyers had wanted to give the DoJ an "unsworn proffer of evidence that will deflect prosecution from him" and do it overseas where he can't be arrested and extradited. US Atty Robert Morgenthau said no dice; then Rogers leaves the White House; signs with the Sheik; receives $136K up front; "Justice suddenly has a change of heart" -- sending an assistant US Atty to Cairo to meet the sheik "on the sheik's terms"; Rogers is present to meet the DoJ official in Cairo. "Did the longtime Sununu hatchet man, who has placed his political allies throughout the Federal Government, play a part in reversing the Justice decision? Nobody wants to know" (N.Y. TIMES, 11/4). TIME's Jonathan Beaty, whose reporting put the BCCI story on the front pages, likens the Rogers episode to Billy Carter embarrassing his brother in his deal with Muammar Gaddafi -- and concludes "in view of Kamal Adham's blatant attempt to buy White House influence, perhaps the time has come to appoint an independent investigator" (11/11 issue).

QUESTIONS FOR SUNUNU HIMSELF? Despite Gray's report clearing Rogers, NEWSWEEK's Ann McDaniel reports "senior [admin.] officials and congressional sources say questions remain concerning Sununu's connection to BCCI" (11/11 issue). Sununu told CBS' "Face the Nation" the magazine knew of Gray's letter before the article was written: "They made it clear in the article that they did know it. And those charges are irresponsible, reckless and malicious, and wrong." Sununu denied any knowledge of Rogers' contract before it was reported and having had any contact with Rogers on the matter (CBS, 11/3).

*10 TERM LIMITS: FOLEY RETURNS FOR 11TH-HOUR CAMPAIGN

Currently, three states have passed limits on state lawmakers. CO's law limits Congress, but not until 1997. FL's Supreme Ct., which hears oral arguments this week on whether to allow a prop. on the '92 ballot, could be the first body to rule on the constitutionality of congressional limits.

WA'S INIT. 553 would limit Members retroactively in 1994 -- House members at 6 years, Senators at 12. House Speaker Tom Foley (D-05) flew to Seattle and Spokane "for an eleventh-hour campaign" to head off 553, warning it would "tilt the balance" toward CA "in conflicts over electricity and water," (Connelly/Boren, SEATTLE POST-INTELLIGENCER). Foley: "In January of 1993, one out of eight members of Congress will be a Californian. ... Seniority tends to control the influence of numbers and regions." Ex-CA Gov. Jerry Brown (D), who advocates term limits in his '92 pres. run, was in Seattle and "scoffed at [Foley's] claims": "Where is the clout helping [WA] right now? Clout didn't stop Clarence Thomas from being confirmed." Foley "chortled": "It's wonderfully ironic [an ex-CA Gov.] would favor term limits for [WA]" (11/2). Foley constituent/LIMIT supporter Diana Schnurr: "I really do like Tom Foley. ... Unfortunately, we can't treat him individually." The "liberal" SEATTLE TIMES "stunned" readers by becoming the first major WA paper to endorse 553 (Balto. SUN, 11/3). TIMES: "[T]he processes of governing have become so paralyzed ... radical shock treatment is required" (10/30). "If the measure is approved, as most ... predict, it will almost definitely be challenged in court. Nevertheless, proponents say a success ... will provide the spark to get similar referendums on the ballot in other states in 1992. And some advocates believe a big win here could put enough fear into Congress to initiate a constitutional amendment on the issue." 553 opponents point to the funding of pro-LIMIT group. "The vast bulk" -- $500K+ -- of the $760,000 raise for the pro-553 forces comes from Citizens for Congressional Reform (CCR), "a conservative [DC] group" founded by David and Charles Koch of Wichita's Koch Industries, "the nation's largest privately held oil company." Pro-LIMIT leader Sherry Bockwinkel, a veteran of many liberal causes: "Let [conservatives] spend their money here because it will be a good [govt] reform. ... we'll save the left's money to fight the war machine." The opposition, "No on 553," has raised about $245,000. Its coalition includes Common Cause, NRA, Sierra Club and organized labor (Bennett Roth, HOUSTON CHRONICLE, 11/3).

553 ADS: "No on 553" radio ads warn of outside $: "Did you know that the term limit campaign is being financed by two oil billionaires and other outside special interests? ... What do they want? They've stated that they want to end social security ... scrap the [EPA]" (No on 553 release, 11/3). Pro-LIMIT radio ad: "They bounce 8,000 checks without paying a dime in penalties; walk out of their own dining hall and leave the bill for the taxpayer to pick up; vote themselves hefty pay raises while working men and women are takin ghom less and less; not to metion the S&L scandal and the fact that they won't balance the budget ..." (LIMIT release, 11/3). A W.S. JOURNAL editorial mocks the opposition's spots about CA, water diversion and oil spills: "No ad yet linking term limits to global warming" (11/1). CCR exec. director Mary Ann Best said if 553 wins, CCR "will sponsor similar initiatives in 12 to 15 states next year" (Lou Cannon, WASH. POST, 11/3). George Will is FOR: "Term limits regulate competition in order to intensify it. ... Think of term limits as antitrust policy in politics" (WASH. POST, 11/3). N.Y. TIMES' Tom Wicker is AGAINST: "Passions are often an unwise basis for democratic action" (11/3). BUSINESS WEEK subhead: "The movement's big money comes from rich, far-right individuals" (11/11 issue). ECONOMIST subhead: "Far from ignoring public opinion, Congress is obsessed with it. Term limits would not change that" (11/2-8 issue). U.S. NEWS subhead: "As a way to fix the big problems in Congress, [limits] probably wouldn't work as advertised" (11/11 issue). NEWSWEEK subhead over Eleanor Clift piece: "Voters like the idea -- but will be disappointed" (11/11 issue).

TV: George Will: "How apt are fresh faces to do worse? ... We are trying to do this not because we don't trust elections, but because we want to invigorate them." David Broder: "It seems to me the burden of proof ought to be on those who are saying elections no longer work ("Crossfire," CNN, 11/1). Michael Barone: "I think it'll make for worse representation. ... But it would break this kind of logjam that exists on Capitol Hill." Rep. Susan Molinari (R-NY): "bad idea. ... The majority of members ... serve for nine years. Most of these term limits would allow them to serve longer" ("OTR," FOX, 11/3). ALSO ON THE WA BALLOT: INITIATIVE 119 -- A "death with dignity" measure, would make WA the first state to allow doctors to assist terminally ill patients -- those with less than 6 mos. to live -- in committing suicide. INITIATIVE 120 -- A codification of Roe v Wade (CHRONICLE, 11/3).

*11 DOLE: HINTS ANEW AT RETIREMENT

Senate Min. Leader Bob Dole (R-KS) said the "potential for [GOP] losses in the Senate in the 1992 elections will play a role in whether he seeks another term" (Barry Massey, AP/WICHITA EAGLE). Dole "said he had no timetable" for announcing a re-election bid "but hinted he might not if he thought [GOPers] would suffer substantial losses in 1992": "If we're going to be down in the 30s next year, 30 some [GOPers], this would be a pretty lonely place to hang around." Dems control the Senate 57-43. 20 Dem and 14 GOP seats are up in '92. Dole continued, "I'm not prophetic. I may not be able to pick them all. But I want to make certain that if it's going to be a minority, we're going to be a valuable minority and have some influence on policy." If the GOP dropped into the 30s, Dole said the GOP minority would become "a sideshow." If he does run for re-election, Dole said it "would almost certainly be his last": "I don't know what I'm going to do, but it won't be more than another term whatever happens." In order to get an "early indication" of the GOP's prospects, he "is closely watching" the PA Senate race between Wofford and Thornburgh (11/2). Rep. Dan Glickman (D-04), is still considering the race.

*12 PA SENATE: THORNBURGH LOSES LEAD OVER WOFFORD

PHILA. INQUIRER head: "The climax of a campaign full of surprises." Subhead: "Replacing Heinz turned out to be a race, not a walk." While analysts say the race is "too close to call," some are predicting a "narrow" win by Sen. Harris Wofford (D) over ex-Gov. Dick Thornburgh (R). Thornburgh pollster Fred Steeper said the two were tied "for several days," and Thornburgh "had fallen behind"; but by 11/1, "he detected 'a slight uptick' for Thornburgh" who has been "more on the offensive," which "could make the difference." Some GOPers complained Thornburgh "misperceived the electorate's mood and mishandled his re-entry into [PA] politics" (11/3). Neil Oxman -- Phila. Mayoral nom. Ed Rendell's (D) pollster -- notes "internal campaign polls show Wofford has overtaken Thornburgh" in Phila: "Thornburgh came home, wanted a coronation and ran into an election." UVA's Larry Sabato: "He's blown one of the surest things in a long time" (PITTSBURGH PRESS, 11/3). Thornburgh media man Greg Stevens: "The campaign has been slow in recognizing that the Wofford message was resonating. And the reason was we didn't think Wofford could get away with offering platitudes and no meat" (N.Y. TIMES, 11/3). Thornburgh, 11/3, joined the family of the late Frank Rizzo and "courted so-called Rizzocrats," while Wofford, "wooing black voters," was introduced by MLK's son at a church rally. Jesse Jackson, who twice endorsed Thornburgh for Gov., at Wofford's rally: "You can't sit here on Tuesday, while David Duke rises up in [LA], and Reagan and Bush and Thornburgh are on the loose here in [PA]" (PHILA. INQ., 11/4).

LAST DITCH ADS: Thornburgh manager Michele Davis said they will have spent $2M on TV and Wofford advisors "see a similar price tag for their efforts." This weekend's ads are expected to top $1M for both (PRESS, 11/3). Weekend ads include 2 by T-burgh attacking Wofford's healthcare plans and rise in unemployment. Wofford aired 4, including a bio of himself dubbed "Underdog," one advocating national health insurance and another claiming Thornburgh is in "trouble" for not doing so. Another includes Rev. Francis Shearer -- appointed to PA's Council on Aging by Thornburgh in '79: "I've seen Dick Thornburgh's ads about the elderly, and they are just not true" (Wofford release, 11/3). REAX: Thornburgh's camp, "suggesting a bit of desperation, has resorted to what some are calling, 'low level politics'" (Claude Lewis, INQ., 11/4). PHILA. TRIBUNE editorial: "Thornburgh has launched one of the most deplorable advertising efforts since his president made Willie Horton a household name. ... If Thornburgh blatantly lies in his campaign messages -- which he has -- how can we trust him to be honest at any other time?" (11/1). Ex-Gov. Wm Scranton (R) criticized Wofford negative advertising" (INQ., 11/3). NEWSWEEK cites Wofford's secret weapon: James Carville, who "crafted a campaign that made old-fashioned Democratic ideas sound like fresh populist insurgency," while lobbing "barely credible" charges against Thornburgh that "undermined [his] clean reputation and painted him as a pampered Washington insider" (11/11 issue). Both said they were "prepared for a last-ditch barrage" of ads for the Eagles' game on Monday Night Football (INQ., 11/4).

THORNBURGH: "In a bit of a Freudian slip," Bush "admitted he may be a hurt, not a help," to Thornburgh. Bush, during a golf game: "I'll do whatever he wants -- stay away or go, whatever helps the most" (Deborah Orin, N.Y. POST, 11/4). A Thornburgh defeat "would send a chill through [GOP] councils and, inevitably add credence to the notion" that the '92 pres race "might not be a mortal lock for Bush" (Steve Daley, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, 11/3). Bush "will not be the only one assessing the damage from Thornburgh's Senate bid (Charles Cook, ROLL CALL, 11/4).

TV: Al Hunt: "I don't know if the [Dems] are smart enough to steal [Wofford's] campaign for 1992, but ... it's working against Dick Thornburgh ... and it'll work against George Bush." Novak: "He has scared the hell out of the [WH]; they are terrified about this election, because they see the same kind of parallels." Clarence Page: "If the argument is race, [GOPers] tend to win, if the argument is class, [Dems] win" ("Capital Gang," CNN, 11/2). David Gergen: "[If Thornburgh] can see a lead evaporate practically overnight, then many [GOPers] are worried the same thing can happen to George Bush." Mark Shields: "You saw Dick Thornburgh ... talking about a tough trade policy. That was Wofford's issue. ... You don't sound good playing the other guy's harmonica" ("MacNeil/Lehrer," PBS, 11/1).

13 KENTUCKY GOVERNOR: POLL SHOWS HOPKINS CLOSING

A Mason-Dixon Opinion Research poll, conducted 10/30-31, surveyed 800 likely voters; margin of error +/- 3.5% (WKYT-TV, 11/2). LG Brereton Jones (D) and Rep. Larry Hopkins (R-06).

Jones	49%
Hopkins	37
Undec.	14

14 MISSISSIPPI GOVERNOR: MABUS STILL AHEAD, FORDICE GAINING

Jackson CLARION-LEDGER's Bill Minor notes, "The black vote becomes the critical factor," as businessman Kirk Fordice's (R) chance of winning "hinges on black voters staying home in sizable numbers and disaffected white [Dem] voters ... flocking to the polls" (11/3). Jackson State's Ally Mack "said that black voters who find" Gov. Ray Mabus (D) :distant and a bit arrogant were nevertheless likely to support him," because they "equate Fordice with David Duke." Fordice has "mentioned some of the same issues, like welfare abuse and affirmative action," as Duke (N.Y. TIMES, 11/3). Mabus endorsements: CLARION-LEDGER, Northeast MS DAILY JOURNAL and Memphis COMMERCIAL APPEAL.

*16 THIS MORNING: ABC's "GMA" hosted Imelda Marcos, '92 non-candidate Jesse Jackson, Surgeon General Antonia Novello, and term limit advocate Sherry Bockwinkel and Rep. Tom Foley (D-WA). NBC's "Today" hosted Imelda Marcos and PLO chair Yasser Arafat. "CBS This Morning" hosted Imelda Marcos and Reagan Library Dedication Dir/ex-WH aide Michael Deaver on the opening of the Reagan library. "FOX Morning News" hosted VA 07 candidates George Allen (R) and Kay Slaughter (D), Coalition to Stop Gun Violence's Albert Gallmon and the NRA's Carl Rowan, Jr., Sen. Richard Lugar (R-IN) on Gates and Reps. Dennis Eckart (D-OH) and Jim Nussle (R-IA) on term limits (11/4).

A.M. QUOTABLES: Bockwinkel: "We have tried [campaign finance reform] for the past 15 years ... you have to remove the desire for the career-minded politician from the re-election process." Foley: "There isn't any question the initiative attempts to limit voters ... that's the most offensive thing about it" (ABC, 11/4).

THIS WEEKEND: 11/1 -- ABC, NBC and CBS led with unemployment news. PBS's "MacNeil/Lehrer" led with the Mideast and hosted Reps. Vin Weber (R-MN) and Leon Panetta (D-CA), and Sens. Jim Sasser (D-TN) and Pete Domenici (R-NM). ABC's "Nightline" hosted Defense atty F. Lee Bailey, Dep. Asst Atty General Victoria Toensing, and "Trial Consultants" CEO Amy Singer on the Willie Smith trial. CNN's "Crossfire" hosted George Will and David Broder on term limits. CNN's "Larry King Live" interviewed Joan Rivers and Art Buchwald. 11/2 -- "Capital Gang" hosted Rep. Vin Weber (R-MN). 11/3 -- CBS' "Face the Nation" interviewed WH CoS John Sununu. NBC's "Meet the Press" hosted Sec/State James Baker. ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley" hosted Jordanian-Palestinian delegation leader Kamel Abu Jaber and Israeli ambassador to the U.S. Zalman Shoval.

CLEAN AND SOBER: ABC's Mark Potter: "Last night, Halloween revelers at Palm Beach bars parodied Sen. Edward Kennedy, whose presence at the family compound the night of the alleged incident fueled public fascination with the case against his nephew ... which worries Smith's attorneys." BOSTON GLOBE's Mike Frisby on whether Ted Kennedy would lose his seat: "In a word, no. He's taken a few body shots, but he's still standing." Goodgame: "He has among the highest negatives of any nationally known [Dem] in the country." Campaign slogans for Kennedy -- Barone: "I'm not going to cross that bridge." Molinari: "I have a blurred vision for the future." Goodgame: "Safer in the Senate than out driving in the streets." Frisby: "He's lean, he's mean, he promises to be clean." Beckel: "Ted Kennedy drunk is a better Senator than Jesse Helms sober" ("Record," FOX, 11/3). Krauthammer: "I think Teddy is fatally wounded ... in the Thomas affair, we really saw how that private life completely hampered him. ... I think the fact that he was so publicly humiliated is going to be very hard for him to overcome." Rowan: "There is a true element of tragedy there, because nobody in the U.S. Senate ... has done more for civil rights and stood up for social justice than Teddy Kennedy" ("Inside Washington," 11/3).

POP GROWTH: CBS' Mike Wallace: "Back in 1969, Congressman George Bush said, 'We need to make population and family planning household words.' ... But President George Bush hasn't done much about it, and he is now threatening to veto the whole U.S.

foreign aid budget mainly because the Congress insists on putting in it a measure granting 20 million dollars to the UN population fund." U.S. Population Crisis Cmte's Sharon Camp: "We know people want family planning, we know governments around the world want to slow population growth ... it's a matter of getting together the political will and the biggest political obstacles are not in Mexico City ... they're in the White House ... [Bush] is not willing to rile up the hard right in order to deal forthrightly with the world population problem." Camp: "Bush could solve the world's population problems. ... He doesn't have to spend a dime of taxpayer's money on abortion, that's not what this is about, but he cannot allow the anti-abortion lobby to dictate American policy on this" ("60 Minutes", CBS, 11/3).

SHOWSTOPPERS: "Gang's" outrages -- Mark Shields: "When it comes to telling Israel and the Arab states what their leaders ought to do ... President Bush is strong, and definite. But when it's a moral question, like the [LA] governor's race, Mr. Bush is a tower of jello." Hunt: 7th CD candidate George Allen for suggesting that his opponent, who favored sanctions over war in the Gulf, was "for Iraq" ("Gang," 11/2). "Record's" Backpaggers - Barone: NJ's legislative elections will be a referendum on Gov. Florio. Goodgame: Bush says he won't endorse Edwards in LA because he's a Dem, but he's endorsed Dems before. Frisby: Wofford's comeback. STARS -- Barone: Wofford consultant James Carville and manager Paul Begala. GOATS -- Beckel: Bush's economic team, "whoever the hell they are" (11/3).

DISHIN' IT OUT: Johnny Carson on the peace talks: "I haven't seen so much conflict in one room since Mario Cuomo dined alone." On the Reagan Library: "Reagan is going to be there for the grand opening, not for the ceremony ... he just wants to find out what he did." NBC's "Saturday Night Live" did a skit on the Willie Smith trial jury selection and also featured "Campaign '92: The Race to Avoid Being the Guy Who Loses to Bush." "Gov. Cuomo": "I resent the implication that I'm the strongest candidate here. ... The issue is my record. After eight years of my mismanagement as governor, the economy of New York state is in shambles. Now I don't think anyone here can point to a record like that." "Gephardt": "The fact is, I couldn't beat David Duke in Harlem." "Sen. Bentsen": "This election is about ideas, and I have not a one." "Sen. Bradley": "You want a leader who can defend against terrorism, not against the jump shot." "Tipper Gore": "My husband is with our kids at a gay porno theater" (NBC, 11/2).

POOL REPORT
AIR FORCE ONE
Andrews AFB to California

Monday, Nov. 4, 1991

Marlin came back to brief on progress of Mideast talks in Madrid, saying that President Bush and Secretary Baker took a call together on Air Force One from Asst. Secretary of State for Mideast Affairs Edward Djerejian. Mr. Fitzwater said Djerejian told Bush and Baker the talks lasted five hours "and had gone pretty well." In reply to a question, he said it appeared no date was set for a new meeting. "I don't think they have. That's yet to be worked out."

He read quote from Bush: "The talks are progressing well. These meetings have broken new ground, in effect establishing a new baseline for considering Mideast problems. We have a long way to go and interruptions will probably occur. But hopes are bright."

He read quote from Baker: "We're encouraged that the talks took place at all. They were businesslike and carried off in a constructive atmosphere. No one walked out in the conference or the bilaterals. There is a sense of engagement now that bodes well for the ~~xxxxxx~~ future."

Asked if Mr. ~~Bxxxx~~ Bush didn't sound pessimistic, Mr.] Fitzwater said, "I think we want to be prepared for any occurrence and not be overly optimistic. Everybody wants to be realistic in terms of the process."

Baker arrived at AAFB about 3 a.m. and slept on his plane, then boarded AF One with Mr. Bush about 7:30 a.m. He gave the president a fill before taking the call from Djerejian, Marlin said.

RE library trip: Accompanying Mr. Bush on AF One were Baker, Gates, Sununu, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Webster, Rep. Bob Michel. On the return trip, they also will carry Jack Kemp and Sen. John Seymour.

"It's a sentimental ~~trip~~ ^{trip} for everybody on the staff as well as President Bush," Mr. Bitzwater said, recalling that his own career spanned some of those presidencies as had the president's. "His career has been tied to President Ford, Nixon and Reagan." He added, "Bob Gates worked with all five of them." In another remark: "It's quite a class reunion here."

POINT MUGU TO LIBRARY

SIMI VALLEY, CALIFORNIA

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1991

Arrival at base was routine except for gaggle of adoring kids carrying a banner that said "Read Our Lips Welcome to Ventura County" and screaming. Motorcade was long but uneventful. Most of the spectators were field workers who stopped picking to stand and watch the motorcade pass. Fields were something of a salad bowl with lettuce, cabbage, peppers, celery and artichokes.

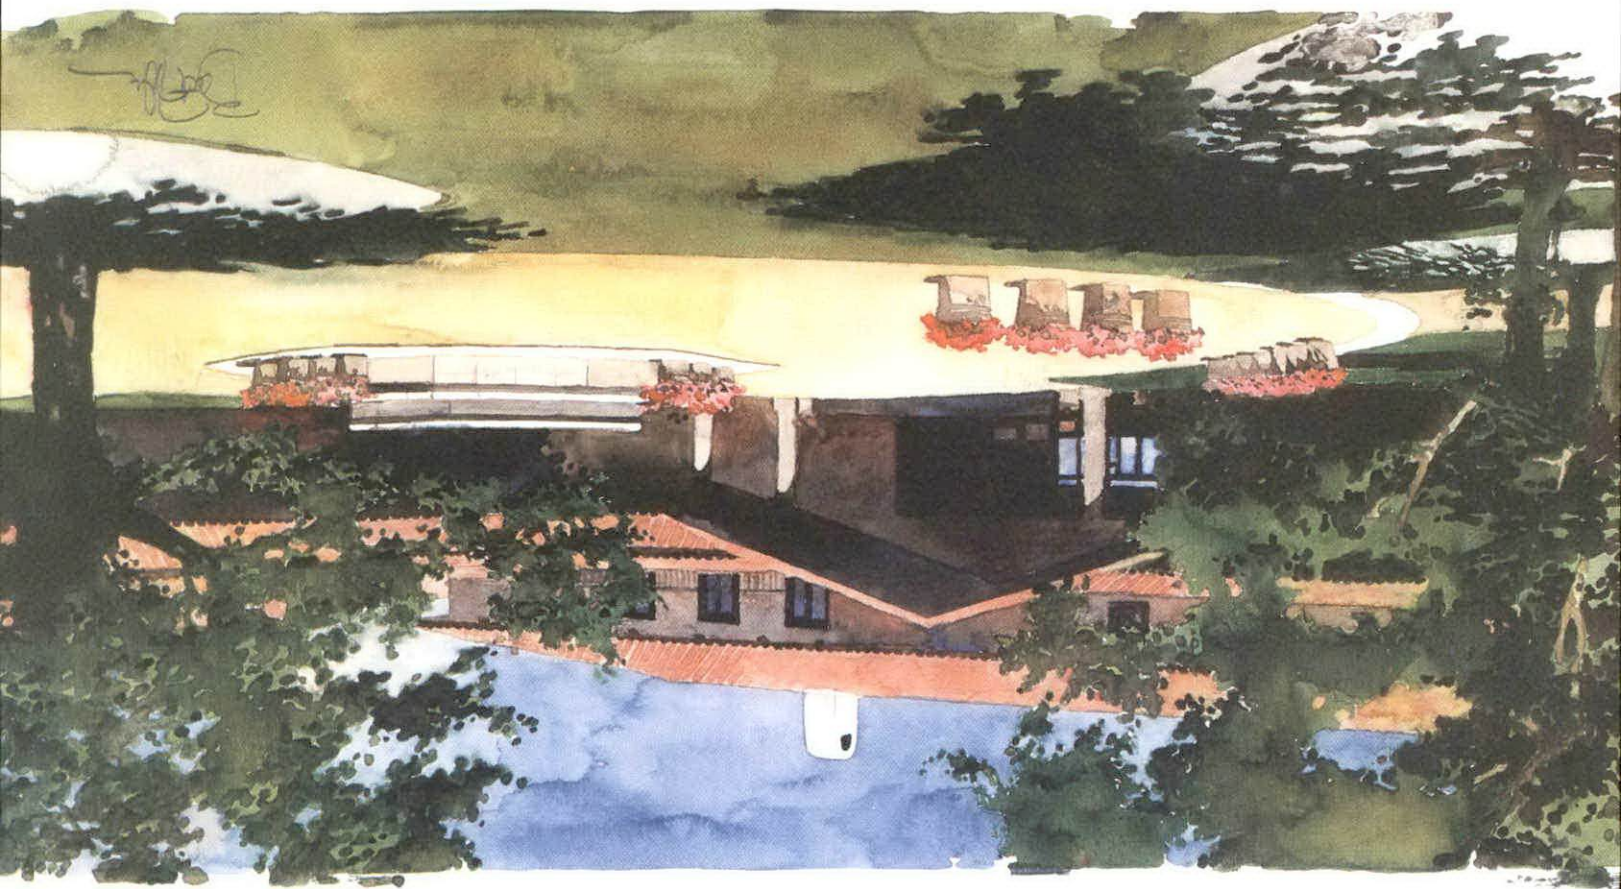

We came up the same back road to the library you folks did so no point in describing the ranchos, etc. The Reagans were standing outside the "Center for Public Affairs" entrance to greet the Bushes and Jim Baker. Lots of handshakes and hugs.

Wives did photo op in courtyard without speaking loud enough to be heard. From left, Mrs. Bush, Reagan, Carter, Ford, Nixon and Johnson.

Then came The Five. Bush, through the door first, then waiting to form a flank with a broadly grinning Carter at the center. From left, Bush, Reagan, Carter, Ford, Nixon. At one point, while all five were smiling in sequence, Carter waved to the cameras. Mr. Nixon was gesturing to Ford and appeared at one point to be holding the front of his left hip and limping. Mr. Bush took charge as they approached the toe line, pointing to the others where to go. Mr. Reagan was squinting at the bright sun. Nixon was heard to say "Incredible," apparently a reaction to the many reporters and photographers recording the moment. They spoke only to each other.

REMARKS BY FORMER PRESIDENT GERALD FORD
AT DEDICATION OF
THE RONALD REAGAN PRESIDENTIAL LIBRARY

The Ronald Reagan Presidential Library
Simi Valley, California

11:52 A.M. PST

FORMER PRESIDENT FORD: Mr. President, our distinguished First Ladies. As a young Congressman I well remember listening in rapt attention as General Douglas MacArthur addressed his farewell address to the Congress. He may have been right about old soldiers, but you can be sure that old Presidents never just fade away. (Laughter and applause.)

It's been over a year now since we last met in Yorba Linda to get President Nixon's library off to a very good start. It was a decade ago that both President Reagan and Vice President Bush came to Grand Rapids, Michigan to do the same for mine.

I like these reunions. I'm looking forward to the next one. But don't get me wrong -- I don't want to attend the George Bush library dedication any sooner than six years -- say about 1997. (Applause.)

Well, here we are at the 10th and the newest presidential library, which is being dedicated, like the others, to the American people. Herein, they will find hanging the spurs that Ronald Reagan won -- not just one pair, but several. He didn't stop with two successful acting and governor careers; he went on to be elected President of the United States by the third biggest landslide in history. (Applause.)

And what will history say of the Reagan presidency? This library contains the records that will document the details for unborn generations of scholars. But you know what they say about history. History is something that never happened written by those who weren't there. Let me give you my view as one who was there.

President Reagan, you will be remembered as a national leader who was able to articulate the highest hopes and deepest beliefs of the American people. (Applause.) You have a great gift for transforming the best instincts into the firmest articles of faith. Our misty memories of the past into bright visions of a better tomorrow.

People trust you and believe in you because they feel that you trust and believe in them. And more important, that you trust and believe as they do. Yes, you are rightly called "the great communicator." You've mastered the art of the television tube, as FDR did the radio microphone and Abe Lincoln the stump speech.

I was both touched and flattered when you came to Michigan 10 years ago and quoted approvingly of a speech that I delivered in the Old North Church in Boston on the 200th anniversary of Paul Revere's famous ride. I had prayed that Americans 200 years hence might look back and say of our generation, we kept the faith, freedom flourished, liberty lived.

MORE

Today, let me update that with thanksgiving. America kept the faith. Freedom prospered. Liberty lived. The Cold War died.

President Reagan, for eight eventful years, you kept the faith. You stayed the course. (Applause.) President Reagan, very likely -- I should say President Bush, very likely, you will be our last Commander-In-Chief who wore the uniform in World War II, as did all your predecessors beginning with President Eisenhower. A common policy of peace through strength can be seen running through these years, under both Democrats as well as Republicans.

The big question: Can the future learn from the past? Is there a lesson to be learned from the archives of the Cold War in Missouri, Truman; in Kansas, Eisenhower; in Massachusetts, Kennedy; in Texas, Johnson; in Michigan, Ford; in Georgia, Carter; and in California -- two in California, where they always do things bigger and better. (Applause.)

My answer would be the records show the United States won the Cold War by staying strong and free. The freedom of our society enabled our adversaries to see our strength. They and their dependency came to see that our freedom was the source of our strength. They came to the conclusion that they could never bury us, that they would really rather become more like us. We welcome them. We should help the process along. But perpetuating peace may be even far more difficult than waging war. Though the Cold War may be over, global competition has only begun.

Europe without an Iron Curtain may dwarf the economic miracles of devastated Germany and Japan. Russia, in economic and political turmoil, remains an unguided giant. China is stirring restlessly. The so-called Third World is pocked with trouble spots. Much is the same; much has changed.

What course should the United States set in the years ahead? Our counsel, our advice is unchanged. Keep the faith. Be vigilant. Remain strong. Let freedom flourish. Let liberty live. Stay the course. Stay the course. Stay the course.

Thank you, and God be with us until we meet again.
(Applause.)

REMARKS BY FORMER PRESIDENT JIMMY CARTER
AT DEDICATION OF
THE RONALD REAGAN PRESIDENTIAL LIBRARY

The Ronald Reagan Presidential Library
Simi Valley, California

12:02 P.M. PST

FORMER PRESIDENT CARTER: Fellow Presidents. Distinguished members of -- families of presidents, even who preceded us. Those who have made this day possible with the beautiful construction behind us, built to honor a great leader of our nation, also honored by the assemblage of so many thousand people here today. I'm delighted to be included in this event.

Mr. President, I have to say, though, that looking over the program, I had one concern. I noticed that the Republican representation has four times as much time on the program as the Democratic. (Laughter and applause.)

You all have another advantage over me. At least all of you have met a Democratic President. I've never had that honor yet. (Laughter and applause.) I might say, though, referring to President Ford's remarks, that I hope to have that privilege in the future. I won't go by President Ford's schedule, exactly, if you don't mind, today. (Laughter.)

Yesterday morning, Rosalynn and I left Lusaka in Zambia, flew back and arrived here late last night so that we could be present at this historic event. (Applause.) On the way, on those long hours on the plane, I thought about the significance of this assembly, unprecedented, of the leaders of our country.

What does it mean, as compared, for instance, with other nations? We participated in the election in Zambia and saw the vivid demonstration of the desire of people for true freedom and an honest election and real democracy after 27 years under a state of emergency, led by the same man and the same parties.

It was a wonderful occasion to witness that emerging into the democratic fold, side-by-side now with our great country. A few days before that we had been in Liberia, a country torn by war, named for freedom itself, founded by former slaves from the United States of America. Their capital is named after James Monroe, one of our early Presidents.

We drove through Monrovia, a hollow shell of a city, reminiscent to me and Rosalynn of Beirut; we visited there just a few years ago. A country still at war, struggling to achieve a united nation, peace, and a chance again for freedom and democracy.

In the United States, we have those same kinds of differences -- political differences. We have a heterogeneous population, wider dispersed in heritage, beliefs, language, than any other on Earth. But we have a solid, dependable, stable Constitution under which we all live. And what binds us together best of all is our common commitment to freedom.

MORE

In the political turmoil of our country which we see every day, it's always a vivid reminder to me that we're able to discern the continuum of history. Pete Wilson has just mentioned the Middle East. President Harry Truman was the first one to open up not only the freedom of an independent nation of Israel, but also the succeeding problems that we have all faced.

And now I want to congratulate James Baker, sitting in front of us, who's just come back from a wonderful achievement in Madrid. (Applause.)

I read the morning paper after we got up this morning. And just glancing down the front page, you see the same kind of stories in the news that were there when I was President: civil rights, the debate over how to yield to our people the same kind of human rights in this country that we always expressed as a need in the foreign nations.

Abraham Lincoln was the one who opened up this panorama of opportunity for us. And it goes down to the present day. Environmental issues are with us. I was a President who was very proud of the fact that, under Richard M. Nixon, we saw the Congress and him work together to achieve the Environmental Protection Agency, pure air and water legislation, the Council of Environmental Quality.

We still struggle together, Democrats and Republicans alike, on basic issues that affect our country, the insurance of military strength. All of us who have been in that office know that to plan, design, test and produce a weapons system as those used recently in the Gulf, it takes several presidential administrations to bring those dreams into reality, that our fighting men and women have a chance to prevail.

Let me point out that we still have some unanswered questions: How to provide good health care for all our people; homes for those who don't have a place to dwell; better education for our children. These are the kinds of things that make a common tie among all us Presidents who have served.

I would say parenthetically that one of the things that brings former Presidents closest together is the extremely onerous and burdensome task of begging for enough money to build a presidential library from private sources, not from the government. (Laughter.) And then turn it over to the federal government in perpetuity as a repository for the records of our great nation.

Under President Ronald Reagan, our nation stood strong and resolute and made possible the beginning of the end of the Cold War. This has led to a new opportunity for our country to exhibit its greatness which we accept for granted too often, more clearly to people around the world.

In the past, all during my lifetime as an adult, I've known both war in the Second World War period, and also since then, the Cold War. That Cold War is now over. And instead of two superpowers constantly struggle one against another everywhere on Earth, almost, in intense competition, we have one superpower. It's a matter of pride, but it's also a matter of sober realization that the world is now looking to us to exhibit our greatness.

There are characteristics that do not change, that measure our nation's greatness: an adherence to truth, to justice, to freedom, and to human rights. All can see that this is a goal for us to strive to achieve.

The men behind me have helped make it possible for us to look to the future, when the greatness of our nation will be measured not by achievements at war, but by the true and unchallenged champion of peace on Earth. (Applause.)

REMARKS BY FORMER PRESIDENT RICHARD NIXON
AT DEDICATION OF
THE RONALD REAGAN PRESIDENTIAL LIBRARY

Ronald Reagan Presidential Library
Simi Valley, California

11:45 A.M. PST

PRESIDENT NIXON: Governor Wilson, distinguished guests. May I first express my appreciation to the very gracious words that Governor Wilson has spoken of me, of my colleagues who have served as President, and of the First Ladies. And Pat and I, I want you to know, feel very honored that we can join all of you in paying tribute to two people whose friendship we have cherished for over 30 years -- Ronald and Nancy Reagan. (Applause.)

We have heard a great deal about the fact that this is an historic occasion because, for the first time, we have five Presidents and six First Ladies in attendance. But speaking as a politician, I think you should know that I'm much more impressed by the fact that there are four people here who served and were elected as Governors of their particular states. Over the past 45 years I have run for the House, have been elected to the House, I've been elected to the Senate, I've been elected as Vice President, I've been elected as President. I never made it for Governor. (Laughter and applause.) But by losing in 1962, I made it possible for Ronald Reagan to be elected Governor in 1966. (Laughter.)

This magnificent library is a deserved tribute to Ronald Reagan and to Nancy Reagan. But as far as Ronald Reagan's legacy is concerned, it does not need a building to make it live for all of us. Even without a building we always will remember that Ronald Reagan was the President who restored America's military might -- the military might that made it possible for George Bush to implement his brilliant strategy for victory in the Gulf war. (Applause.)

But great as that victory was, Ronald Reagan will be remembered for something even more important. Throughout his career, he has been one who had profound beliefs, who had the courage to fight for those beliefs, and who had the eloquence to inspire his fellow Americans to support those beliefs. He believed in the simple things -- he believed in freedom and democracy; he believed that America was on the right side of history, standing with the forces of good against the forces of evil in the world.

And some have dismissed him, therefore, as an idealogue, but Ronald Reagan has been justified by what has happened -- history has justified his leadership and those strong beliefs. (Applause.) Permit me to use a personal example. Thirty-two years ago, when I was in Moscow, the Premier of the Soviet Union Nikita Khrushchev jabbed his finger into my chest and said, "Your grandchildren will live under communism." And I responded, "Your grandchildren will live in freedom." (Applause.) At that time, I was sure he was wrong. But I was not sure I was right. And now we know -- thanks, in great part, to the strong, idealistic leadership of President Ronald Reagan, Khrushchev's grandchildren now live in freedom. (Applause.)

Debate at the National Press Club

The transcript from yesterday's National Press Club forum is being prepared by the Atlantic magazine, but it will not be available until next Tuesday or Wednesday. C-SPAN also recorded the proceedings, but did not air them. C-SPAN intends to broadcast the forum on Sunday or Monday and will make the tape available after that broadcast.

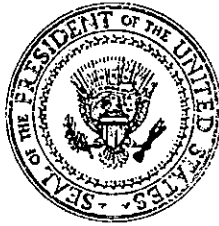

In the meantime, I have attached a number of news stories that reported on Secretary Kemp's remarks. As soon as the tape or transcript is available, I will forward you a transcript of the relevant sections.

Kemp Would Reopen 1990 Budget Deal

By JANE E. ALLEN

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Housing Secretary Jack Kemp said Wednesday that last year's budget agreement with Congress should be abandoned, a position hinted at but never before flatly stated by a Bush administration official.

Kemp joked to a National Press Club audience that it might be his last comment as a Cabinet member.

Administration sources say Kemp, in White House meetings, has privately stressed the importance of devising an economic package to stimulate the economy. Such a package would mean reopening the budget agreement, which sets strict spending ceilings and prohibits transfer of money from military to domestic spending.

During a forum on the domestic agenda, Kemp said he agreed with Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., that the collapse of communism in the Soviet Union, combined with the slowdown of the domestic economy and financial institution failures were compelling reasons to re-examine the deal.

"I think it forces us to open up the budget agreement, honestly and candidly" in a way that would "not exacerbate the deficit," he said. In recent weeks, as several tax-cut plans began circulating on Capitol Hill, the administration gave some indications it might be willing to reopen the deal.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Bush was not inclined to violate the budget agreement, but that all options were being considered. Others have hinted it might be necessary to reopen the budget agreement to alter the ceilings and apply any defense savings to domestic needs.

Two weeks ago, the White House said Bush would come up with an economic growth package. However, as recently as Monday, Bush told Republican leaders he was not likely to make any new economic proposals this year. Bush has held all along that the budget agreement is the best mechanism to control spending.

Kemp, an unabashed opponent of higher taxes, said it was no secret that he believed the budget deal was a mistake.

"It was bad politics," said the housing secretary. "It was bad economics and it raised taxes."

Kemp had made his displeasure known when Congress forged the deal with the administration last year.

During the forum, the participants' views converged on one point — that they believe in some sort of tax cut.

Kemp advocated taking steps, such as cutting or eliminating the capital gains tax on assets held more than three years "to get this economy moving again."

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, also called for a capital gains tax cut to help jump-start the economy by creating jobs through investments. He would apply defense reductions to deficit reduction as well as middle-class tax relief.

Gramm also showed some flexibility on the budget deal. He said could endorse a new agreement if it did not increase the deficit.

Bradley, who doesn't believe a capital gains tax cut will stimulate the sluggish economy, advocated a tax fairness plan. He would grant middle-class tax relief through $350 child tax credits, to be paid for with $80 billion in military reductions and nearly $40 billion in domestic cuts.

Sen. Jim Sasser, D-Tenn., discussed his proposal to cut $80 billion from the defense budget and an additional 5 percent in the next five years. He would use the proceeds for middle-class tax cuts, infrastructure spending and deficit reduction.

Kemp denies reports he is leaving Cabinet

BY HELEN THOMAS

UPI White House Reporter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Housing Secretary Jack Kemp Thursday emphatically and unequivocally denied reports that he plans to quit the Cabinet. He also insisted that he has no political ambitions for the near future.

In a telephone interview with United Press International, Kemp was questioned about rumors that he was planning to step down. "You have my unambiguous statement. I'm not contemplating leaving," he replied.

"No, unequivocally, unambiguously, unashamedly, no," he added. "Everybody knows how strongly I have supported the president."

Kemp, a former New York Republican congressman who once sought the presidential nomination and a well-known fiscal conservative, said the rumors may have started from a quip he made when asked about the budget.

"I smiled and said that might be the last question I answer as a member of the Cabinet," he recalled, adding that he was only joking.

In addition, Kemp said that on Fox Television Network Wednesday night there were hints that he might be quitting the Bush administration to return to the political arena.

"I'm not contemplating a political move," Kemp said, adding, "I'm a loyal member of the Cabinet."

"It is no secret that I am a strong proponent of holding the Congress in session until Christmas Eve if that's what it takes to get the president's growth package" passed, he said.

He said that he supported the middle income tax cut proposed by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, chairman of the Finance Committee. "It's no secret that I have for a long time believed we could get a pro-growth, pro-family, pro-man and woman tax package that would meet the goals of the Bush administration" and Bentsen and Sen. Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y., Kemp said.

However, on that score, White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said there is no decision on a growth package to stimulate creation of new jobs and to increase middle class income, and formulation of a package before the end of the year seems remote.

Kemp Says It's Time to Reopen 1990 Budget Agreement

By JANE E. ALLEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Housing and Urban Development Secretary Jack Kemp wants to reopen the 1990 budget agreement, as long as that doesn't put the country into deeper debt.

During a forum at the National Press Club, Kemp said the collapse of communism in the Soviet Union, combined with the slowdown of the domestic economy and financial institution failures were compelling reasons to re-examine the deal.

"I think it forces us to open up the budget agreement, honestly and candidly" in a way that would "not exacerbate the deficit," he said Wednesday.

Kemp's comments marked the first time a Bush administration official has flatly advocated abandoning the deal struck last year by Congress and the White House. Up to then, there had only been hints that the White House might be willing to take another look at the five-year agreement.

Kemp joked he might be making his last comment as a Cabinet member.

White House spokesman Sean Walsh had no comment about Kemp's remarks.

Administration sources say Kemp, in White House meetings, has privately stressed the importance of devising an economic package to stimulate the economy. Such a package would require reopening the budget agreement, which sets strict spending ceilings and prohibits transfer of money from military to domestic accounts.

In recent weeks, as several tax-cut plans began circulating on Capitol Hill, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Bush was not inclined to violate the budget agreement, but that all options were being considered. Others have intimated it might be necessary to alter the spending ceilings and apply any defense savings to domestic needs.

Two weeks ago, the White House said Bush would come up with an economic growth package. However, as recently as Monday, the president told Republican leaders he was not likely to make any new economic proposals this year. He has held all along that the budget agreement is the best mechanism to control spending.

Kemp, a vocal opponent of higher taxes, said it was no secret that he believed the budget deal was a mistake.

"It was bad politics," he said. "It was bad economics and it raised taxes."

The HUD secretary also made his displeasure known when Congress forged the deal with the administration last year.

Kemp advocated taking steps, such as cutting or eliminating the capital gains tax on assets held more than three years "to get this economy moving again."

Re: Productivity and Costs, Third Quarter

Productivity, which is output per hour worked, rose 2.4 percent in the third quarter for the entire nonfarm business economy. It did even better in manufacturing, rising 4.0 percent (both figures are annual rates). This was totally as expected, since we knew output grew at about this pace and employment increased only slightly.

I am working up some material on the economy, the labor market, etc. to give you a somewhat more in depth feel for what is actually going on and its dissonance with the media, political, and polling discussion.

SUBJECT:

Productivity and Costs, Third Quarter 1991, Labor Department release, Tomorrow Morning, 10:00 a.m.

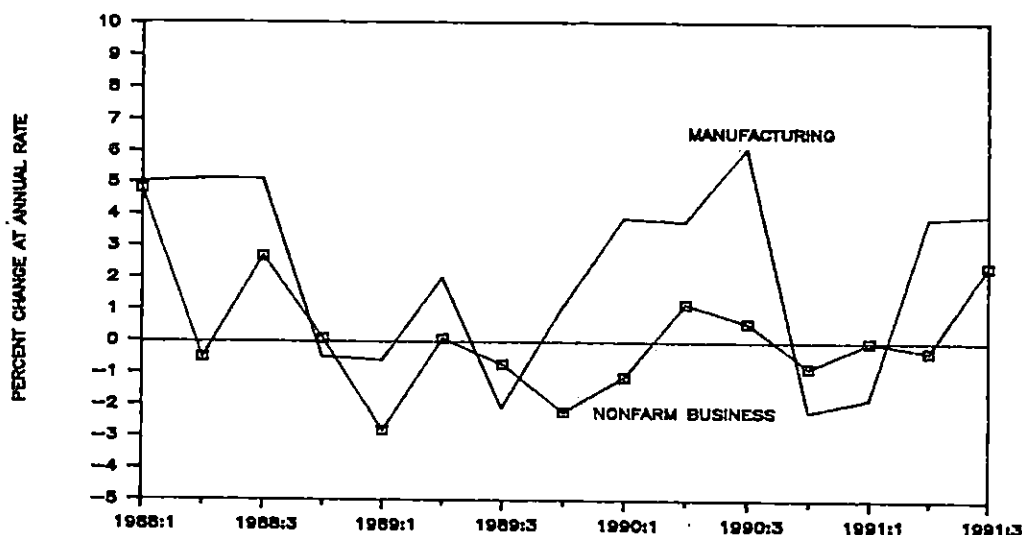

Productivity in the nonfarm business sector rose 2.4 percent at an annual rate in the third quarter of 1991. Revised data indicate that during the second quarter of 1991 productivity fell at a 0.3 percent annual rate, down from the previous estimate of a 0.5 percent rate increase. The revision reflects lower estimates of nonfarm business output.

For the manufacturing sector in the third quarter, productivity is estimated to have increased at a 4.0 percent annual rate. The increase in manufacturing productivity during the second quarter was revised to a 3.9 percent annual rate, 0.3 percentage point more than previously reported.

Hourly labor compensation in the nonfarm business sector rose 3.5 percent at an annual rate in the third quarter, following a 4.6 percent rate increase in the second quarter. For manufacturing, compensation increased at a 3.2 percent rate, down from 5.9 percent in the second quarter.

The graph below shows that last quarter's increase in nonfarm productivity was the largest gain since the third quarter of 1988. The recent increases in manufacturing productivity are similar to the rates recorded in the first half of 1990.

Dear George:

Sandra Parrino told me that she has been called by Teddy Kennedy to meet with her to follow up on their conversation at the White House Rose Garden ceremony. Kennedy was very touched by her recitation of her personal experience with a disabled son (presumably because of his own experience with a disabled child) and asked her if she would work with him on the problem of personal assistance for the disabled.

Sandy suspects that Teddy is going to ask her to help him draft legislation and to use the National Council on Disability as a spearhead to get Congress to move. Then, she thinks, he would put in the Bill to get the funds, etc. Sandy wants to work in such a way that, if the Administration is interested in moving on it soon, the Administration gets credit for the positive action on this problem.

You've seen all the demonstrators around the country who feel that nobody in government cares for them - not Secretary Sullivan, not you, not the Congress, etc. Sandy feels that the matter can very easily be blunted and turned to the Administration's advantage with quick action to preempt the leadership from Congress.

I realize you're swamped with many things, but this could have a very beneficial effect on '92 and might prevent the Democratic Congress from stealing some of your thunder.

All the best,

Dear Mr. President:

Thank you so very much for appearing in the U.S. Small Business Administration's new public service announcements. Your participation will greatly enhance their effectiveness and will help us reach millions of Americans with our message.

This new public service campaign will help increase the impact of SBA's important role in the nation's domestic economic recovery. We will be reaching out to the public coast-to-coast, letting them know that SBA can help keep American business on the cutting edge, here at home and in the global marketplace.

I have forwarded copies of the completed announcements to your Office of Public Events and will follow up in a couple of months with a report on usage by the 600 television and 1300 radio stations to which they were distributed.

You have my sincere appreciation for your assistance and support. I look forward to continuing our efforts to strengthen American small business -- both at home and in the international market.

Dear Mr. Stickney:

I have determined that the damage in certain areas of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, resulting from a major coastal storm on October 30, 1991, and continuing, is of sufficient severity and magnitude to warrant a major disaster declaration under the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act ("the Stafford Act"). I, therefore, declare that such a major disaster exists in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

In order to provide Federal assistance, you are hereby authorized to allocate from funds available for these purposes, such amounts as you find necessary for Federal disaster assistance and administrative expenses.

You are authorized to provide Individual Assistance and Public Assistance in the designated areas. Consistent with the requirement that Federal assistance be supplemental, any Federal funds provided under the Stafford Act for Public Assistance will be limited to 75 percent of the total eligible costs.

Dear David:

It was good to hear from you and catch up on your activities. Barbara and I are delighted to have the doll you brought back from Moscow. I haven't seen one like that before. Many thanks.

Thanks, too, for the update on the sculpture. With regard to your question about a permanent site, while I appreciate your thoughtfulness, I defer to your wishes on this matter. My initial thought, however, would be Texas A & M, since the George Bush Library will be built there, but that should be left to A & M to decide. Our upcoming schedule leaves no time for an unveiling ceremony in the foreseeable future. Please keep me posted and let me know how you decide to proceed. Jack Steel tells me he had a good conversation with you on this subject.

The Honorable President and Mrs. Bush

Dear Mr. President and Mrs. Bush

Enclosed is a small gift which I picked up on Arbat Street in Moscow in August. I was there for five VERY interesting weeks in July, August, in fact the same time you were there except that I was in Volgograd during your visit in late July examining "Motherland", the enormous 270' tall sculpture (the world's tallest) commemorating the battle of Stalingrad. Incidentally, the project I mentioned to you, i.e. to construct the centerpiece of a western theme park in the Northwest, a giant sculpture of a classic cowboy to be 280' tall (the equivalent of a 28 story building) is progressing about on schedule.

Arbat Street in Moscow is the essence of glasnost. It is a pedestrian mall filled with musicians and artists producing among other things very poignant political cartoons, for which a very few years ago they would have been immediately jailed.. I think it is interesting that their traditional folk-art of the painted wooden dolls is now used as a political medium. Most of the "nested" painted figures were of Gorbachev enclosing Brezhnev who enclosed Stalin who enclosed Lenin, etc. This is the only one I saw in which you were on the outside, or the first "encloser". I couldn't resist getting it for you. I'm sure that after the coup (which occurred just two days after I returned. As it turned out, wish I'd stayed for the excitement!) every artist in Moscow stayed up nights painting Yeltsin as the major "encloser".

While there I arranged for the symphony orchestra to record an instrumental version of "The Winds Of Change", similar to the tape which you have, but for full 85 piece orchestra. The recording session was scheduled for the day before I left, but there was an unfortunate glitch (and this is typical in the U.S.S.R.): the orchestra had just returned from London by plane the previous day, and some of the larger instruments (namely the kettle drums and double bases, both so important in this music) were held up in Moscow Airport customs, so they were playing with less than a full deck. I did get a hand-held Walkman tape of the rehearsal, and considering the missing parts, it sounds wonderful, especially the full strings. I plan to return to Moscow soon to get the music properly rehearsed and recorded.

My friends there are urging me to let them translate the words to Russian with the help of one of their major poets, and record a joint English-Russian version, using one of their fabulous choral groups, such as the Red Army Chorus! We didn't get past that point in the discussion, but it sure is tempting. Among composers and musicians the Russian-American feeling of cooperation and friendship is very strong. I would proceed with this only with your approval.

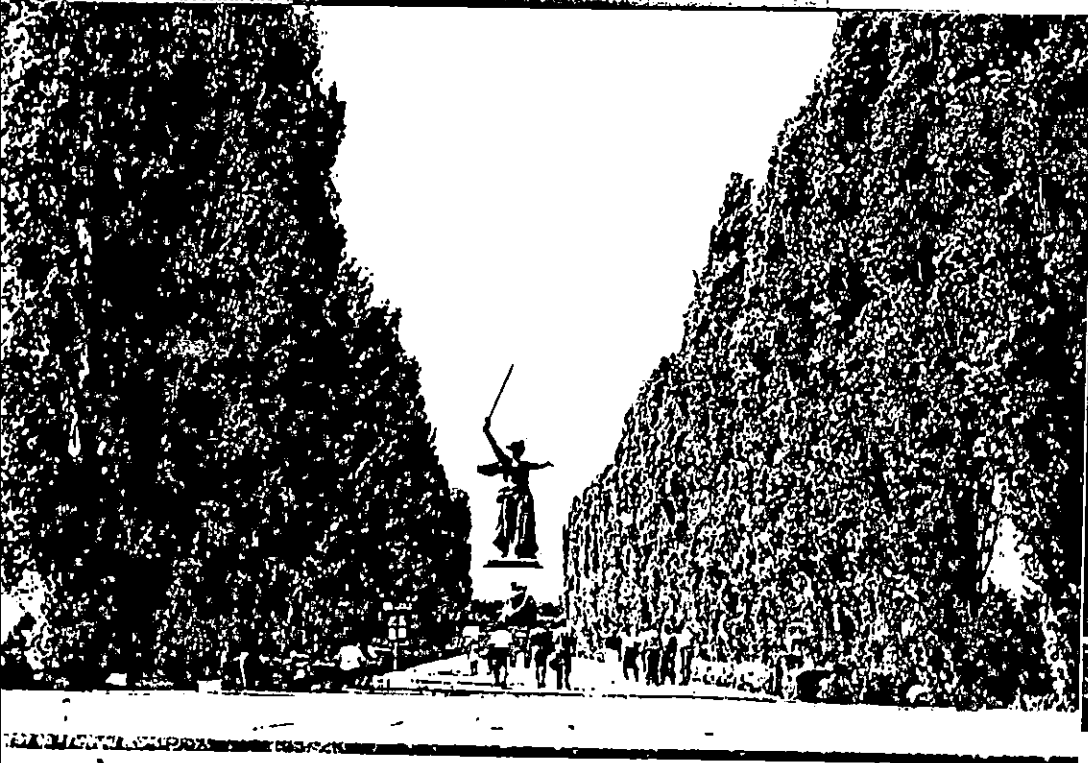

News of the sculpture: It is so close to being completed that very soon now it can be moved from the foundry to a temporary location awaiting your choice of a permanent site.

In the meantime, as I have mentioned to Jack, if it could be of use for any purpose, please let me know. Nothing would please me more, of course, than to have an unveiling of it in your presence. Everybody is asking "When can we see it??" I am VERY proud of it, and I hope you will be too.

My son, David Gerken, showed me your note to him and a copy of the New Haven Register's account of the Yale-Wesleyan game in 1947 which Wesleyan lost 11-0. I always knew that if there were big league scouts in the stands that day, they would be sizing up Dick Manville on the mound and not Walt Gerken. I think it was great of you to have someone dig out the press coverage of the game.

In addition to competing in a college baseball game, we also share having had Craig Fuller on our staffs. Craig was with Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Company from 1974-1977 during the period I was Chairman of the Board and CEO.

One other interest was having Lou Gehrig as a boyhood idol. Lou Gehrig lived next door to me on Circuit Road in New Rochelle, N.Y. when I was growing up in the late 1920's and 1930's.

Again, thanks for being so thoughtful and the best to you as you lead our nation at this interesting period in world history.

NOTICE TO THE PRESS

November 4, 1991

Secretary of State James Baker will brief on the President's upcoming visit to the NATO Summit in Rome and the European Community Meeting in The Hague on Tuesday, November 5 at 3:15 p.m. in the White House Briefing Room.

12:00 noon EST UPDATE

MIDEAST TALKS (Aboard Air Force One/Reuter) -- President Bush said Arab-Israeli peace talks in Madrid broke new ground and established "a new base line" for considering problems in the Mideast. "The talks are progressing well..., " he said.... "We have a long way to go and interruptions will probably occur, but hopes are bright."

(UPI) -- ... "We're encouraged that the talks took place at all," said Secretary Baker.... "They were businesslike and carried off in a constructive atmosphere. No one walked out in the conference or the bilaterals. There is a sense of engagement now that bodes well for the future."

(Madrid/AP) -- Israeli negotiators emerged from their first direct talks with Syrian officials expressing frustration and saying the Syrians had rejected everything they proposed. But both sides said they had agreed during the five-hour session to meet again -- once they can get past the issues of where and when.... Syria's chief negotiator, Muafaq Alaf, described the session as a waste of time and complained that Israel refused to budge on its resistance to territorial concessions.... Israeli officials said they failed to establish any kind of rapport with the Syrians, who insisted on nothing short of a complete withdrawal from occupied Syrian territory.... Syrian Foreign Minister al-Sharaa said both sides await suggestions from the U.S. regarding a possible venue for future talks. He declined to discuss options. U.S. officials say the U.S. will offer its suggestions within two to three weeks.

(Madrid/UPI) -- Israeli officials who met...with a Syrian delegation made no progress because they demanded top-level reciprocal visits ahead of any discussions on returning the Golan Heights, according to Arab delegations attending the Madrid talks. ...Arab delegates said talks with the Palestinians, Jordanians and Lebanese went smoother. The Israelis offered to cooperate more closely with Beirut in preventing repetitions of the cross-border Hezbollah attacks last week..., although there was no pledge that Israel would withdraw its troops from southern Lebanon....

[Meanwhile], Palestinian leader Hanan Ashrawi...said she felt the venue issue could be solved and a date for continued negotiations set within two or three weeks.... Deputy Foreign Minister Netanyahu said...Israel may be flexible on the issue.

(Jerusalem/Reuter) -- Israel, underlining its refusal to return the Golan Heights, went ahead with plans to inaugurate a new settlement for Soviet immigrants on the disputed plateau.

(Reuter) -- PLO Chairman Arafat said the peace conference has been very positive so far and he expects it will continue smoothly with the help of the U.S. and Secretary Baker. Interviewed on NBC's "Today," Arafat reiterated his confidence in the delegation representing the Palestinians and their preference that further bilateral talks with Israel take place in Washington, Moscow or an Arab capital.... He said he relied on the U.S. to keep the talks on track. "I am sure that we have an honest broker..., " he said.... He expressed confidence that the agreement would include a guarantee of peace for Israel in exchange for a return of the occupied territories and a withdrawal of Israeli military forces from the territories.

(Beirut/UPI) -- President Hrawi of Lebanon traveled to neighboring Syria for consultations concerning the ongoing diplomacy in Madrid, presidential spokeswoman May Kahaleh said.

IRAQ/KURDS (Zakho/Reuter) -- The Iraqi government closed a key highway checkpoint in northern Iraq, preventing the movement of fuel, food and other goods to rebel Kurds prior to winter.

YUGOSLAV FIGHTING (Zagreb/AP) -- Serbian-led federal forces today attacked the eastern Croatian stronghold of Vukovar with a deafening barrage of tank, cannon and howitzer fire and sent warplanes streaking over the city. Fighting also raged in the Adriatic port of Dubrovnik..., which was "being shattered by explosions," according to Zagreb radio.

(Budapest/UPI) -- Three Hungarian commercial ships steaming down the Danube River in Yugoslavia were fired upon with handguns and grenades near Vukovar, a spokesman for the foreign ministry said.... No injuries were reported.

SLOVENIA (Cleveland/UPI) -- Sen. Glenn urged President Bush to recognize Slovenia as a sovereign state, drawing applause from a Slovenian Heritage Foundation dinner audience.... "I simply don't understand why our government has been so hesitant and timid about embracing the principle of self-determination for the people of Slovenia," he said. "What are we waiting for?"... Glenn acknowledged the U.S. has its own budget problems and, therefore, cannot afford a large-scale financial aid package for Slovenia or Eastern Europe.

CAMBODIA/FIGHTING (Bangkok/UPI) -- A Cambodian resistance group said that government troops were still shelling resistance-held villages more than a week after the signing of a comprehensive peace agreement, with the latest attacks killing 16 civilians.

CHINA/IRAN/NUKES (Beijing/AP) -- China released more information about its nuclear cooperation program with Iran in an effort to convince U.S. critics that its purposes are peaceful.... A State Department press officer, Joseph Snyder, said in Washington that the U.S. opposes even civilian nuclear cooperation with Iran because of concern about its nuclear intentions.

NATO MEETING (Brussels/Reuter) -- NATO has agreed to invite foreign ministers from the alliance's former Warsaw Pact enemies and the Baltic states to a meeting in Brussels next month, a NATO official said.

SOVIET ECONOMY (Moscow/Reuter) -- President Gorbachev appealed to Boris Yeltsin's Russia not to go it alone on reform and warned the Soviet Union stood on the brink of an economic and political abyss.

REAGAN/POLL (CNN Headline News) -- A poll appearing in today's Los Angeles Times indicates that there's a drop in former President Reagan's popularity as the recession deepens. Twenty-eight percent of those questioned say he was an above-average president; 39 percent describe him as average; 33 percent say he was below average. Just prior to leaving office, Reagan had a 63 percent favorable rating against 33 percent unfavorable.
