BUSH CHALLENGES EUROPEANS TO DEFINE U.S. NATO ROLE

ROME -- President Bush, reflecting the uncertainties about NATO's future since the collapse of the Soviet military threat, sought fresh assurances from European allies Thursday that their drive to achieve political unity would not undermine American leadership of the alliance.

Addressing leaders of the alliance, Bush departed from his prepared text and bluntly declared: "If, my friends, your ultimate aim is to provide independently for your own defense, the time to tell us is today." A senior Administration official said later that the remark was motivated by "concern on our part that some of the allies may eventually want to go it alone. If that is the case, they should put their cards on the table now."...

Led by Britain and the Netherlands, several allies moved swiftly to try to smooth any friction at the gathering by making resounding declarations about the vital necessity of keeping the U.S. involved in Europe....

In remarks Thursday, President Mitterand reaffirmed the French decision to remain aloof from NATO's integrated military command and insisted that a European security system is "compatible and complementary" with the alliance. But he said that while "NATO is good, it must not be considered to be the holy alliance."...

Some senior French officials voiced resentment over Bush's comments, characterizing them as unfairly harsh. "We don't understand what lies behind his comments, because Bush knows that all of the allies support the presence of American troops in Europe," said Mitterand's spokesman, Jean Musitelli.

U.S. Gets Vote Of Confidence From NATO Members After Strong Language By Bush

ROME -- President Bush employed unusually strong language here Thursday to make sure the U.S. got a vote of confidence to continue to play the lead role in defending Western Europe.

Addressing a summit meeting, Bush said the U.S. was prepared to pack up its troops and go home if asked.... The response from the European heads of government was pretty much what Bush wanted: Yes, they still want NATO around to ensure European security for some years to come, and yes, they still want the U.S. to lead it, though perhaps not to dominate it.... Bush, in raising the question of continued American involvement in the defense of the continent, directed his comments at proposals being discussed by European leaders to create a new, multi-nation European force that would not be part of NATO.... Secretary Baker was asked Thursday night why the President had chosen to raise so directly an issue that could have been finessed. "We wanted to make certain that there were no ambiguities and no confusion," Secretary Baker said. "We support strongly the formation of a European security identity, but in a way that complements this alliance.... We wanted to lay our cards on the table and make clear the position of the U.S. on the importance of this alliance." (Larry Eichel, Knight-Ridder)

American Role Secure, NATO Allies Tell Bush

ROME -- President Bush challenged his independence-minded NATO partners Thursday to speak up loud and clear if they want the U.S. to butt out of future European security arrangements....

Asked if any one of the allied leaders had expressed opposition to the U.S. presence in NATO, Bush replied, "Not one."...

In addition, Bush tried to deflect criticism that the U.S. wants European nations to follow its lead, and he fought the European perception that the White House opposes European unity.

"While some suggest that the U.S. wants followers in this alliance, what we want are partners," he said. "The U.S. has been, and will remain an unhesitating proponent of the aim and process of European integration." (Paul Bedard, Washington Times, A1)

NATO SUMMIT MARKS HISTORIC TURN FOR ALLIANCE

ROME -- Western allies are ringing down the curtain on a watershed summit by affirming America's leadership of NATO and urging the crumbling Soviet Union to keep its nuclear weapons under a strong central command....

Thursday's closing session offered closer ties with NATO -- but not membership -- for the members of the now disbanded Warsaw Pact and the Baltic states.

The closer ties could provide Western expertise in controlling Soviet-trained military forces and converting defense plants into civilian uses....

The two-day summit marked a turning point in NATO.

"We can consider the Rome summit a sort of new birthday for the alliance," proclaimed Italian Foreign Minister Gianni De Michelis.

With the demise of the Cold War and the elimination of the Soviet military threat, the NATO leaders embraced a new strategic policy calling for fewer soldiers, more mobile forces and far fewer nuclear weapons. (Terence Hunt, AP)

BUSH MEETS WITH MITTERRAND, FINAL NATO SESSION

ROME -- Backed by strong show of allied support, President Bush conferred Friday with President Mitterrand, the chief proponent of an independent defense effort in Europe.

A convivial Bush, seeking now to repair any strains caused by a mostly behind-the-scenes standoff over the question, sat down with Mitterrand for an early morning meeting before the closing session of the summit.

Asked how U.S.-French relations had fared over the course of the debate, Bush said only, "I think they're very good but I am not taking questions." (Lori Santos, UPI)

TRADE IMPASSE REMAINS ON EVE OF SUMMIT

As President Bush prepared to meet Saturday with top officials of the E.C. in an attempt to bridge year-long trade differences, an E.C. spokesman reported "no breakthroughs" in talks on the disputes that have snarled global free-trade talks....

After being stalled for a year, the negotiations moved back to the front burner this fall after Chancellor Kohl expressed a willingness to move ahead on shifting the E.C.'s stand on farm subsidies....

France has gone along reluctantly with Germany in what French Industry Minister Dominique Strauss-Kahn called "a significant step."

"Given this signal, it is up to our partners to make a move," Reuter quoted Strauss-Kahn as saying Monday.

She urged the European delegation to "speak firmly to George Bush" when they meet the President Saturday. Washington "has not moved on anything," she added.

BUSH-POPE VISIT MEETING PROVIDES OPPORTUNITY TO IRON OUT DIFFERENCES

VATICAN CITY -- Recent Middle East peace talks in Madrid may provide reason for the Vatican to reassess its policies toward Israel, with whom it has no diplomatic relations, a Vatican official says....

The Vatican sees hopes for peace improving as a result of the Madrid conference convened by the U.S. and the Soviet Union.

Papal spokesman Joaquin Navarro indicated Thursday that in view of the Madrid talks, "The Holy See must examine the new elements of a new situation."...

Although saying relations with Israel won't come "tomorrow," Navarro praised "progressive and continuous" changes in climate....

Pope John Paul's spokesman expressed appreciation for President Bush's "delicate gesture" of scheduling his appointment with the pope late Friday morning, following the end of the two-day summit, "to avoid any connection" with the strategic Western alliance.

INTERNATIONAL NEWS

CANCELLATION OF BUSH'S ASIAN TRIP FUELS FEAR OF WANING U.S. INFLUENCE

TOKYO -- The abrupt cancellation of a long-awaited visit to Asia by President Bush has fueled concern over America's declining military and economic influence in the Far East.

"It seems a rather disturbing signal," said Tomohide Murai, associate professor of social science at Japan's National Defense Academy. "Many Japanese feel that the Bush Administration is not paying enough attention to the region."...

"The Bush Administration has lagged far behind in announcing a comprehensive policy for the Asia-Pacific region," stated an editorial in Yomiuri Shimbun. "We are concerned that Washington henceforth may place priority on domestic issues and turn inward at this critical moment in history."

Said Charles Morrison, an Asia expert at the East-West Center, a Honolulu think tank: "The U.S. is not the active player in the region it once was. And this Administration has shown a particular lack of interest and initiative in the Pacific."

MIYAZAWA STRESSES JAPAN, U.S. SHARE RESPONSIBILITY FOR WORLD PEACE

TOKYO -- Prime Minister Miyazawa said Friday Japan and the U.S. must recognize their shared responsibilities for world peace and cooperate on a global scale.

Opening a 36-day extraordinary session of the Diet, he stressed relations with the U.S. are the cornerstone of Japanese foreign policy.

He also pledged Japan's determination to help bring a successful conclusion to the Uruguay Round of world trade talks and called on lawmakers to pass a bill allowing Japanese forces to participate in U.N. peacekeeping missions overseas....

Miyazawa said he intends to develop initiatives supporting political and economic reform in China, peace and stability on the Korean peninsula and strengthen relations with the Association of Southeast Asian Nations.

CHINA APPROVES TALKS ON HUMAN RIGHTS

BEIJING -- Chinese officials agreed Thursday to discuss human rights issues with Secretary Baker next week, but opposed taking immediate steps to reduce international criticism.

"We are ready to exchange views with the U.S. and other countries on the question of human rights," foreign ministry spokesman Wu Jianmin said.

SEOUL BANS NUKES IN NUDGE AT NORTH

President Roh Tae-woo declared Thursday night that his nation would not "manufacture, possess, store, deploy or use nuclear weapons."

The dramatic announcement on Seoul TV apparently signaled the kickoff of a new multinational campaign to muzzle rival North Korea's nuclear buildup.

Senior Bush Administration officials, clearly forewarned of Roh's plans, told The Washington Times earlier Thursday that the U.S. will support new approaches to deter Pyongyang from manufacturing a nuclear bomb....

Leaving no doubt about his intended audience for the proclamation of South Korea's nuclear renunciation, Roh declared, "There can be no reason or justification for North Korea to develop nuclear weapons or evade international inspection of its nuclear facilities."...

Richard Solomon, assistant secretary of state for East Asian and Pacific affairs, said in an interview Thursday that the U.S. plans to put more focus on the North Korean nuclear question....

"If they refuse to meet their international obligations...then we're going to have to look at other ways of making them conform so they don't turn into another Iraq," Solomon said.

DEMOCRATS SAID TO DROP SOVIET AID PLAN UNLESS BUSH ASKS FOR IT

Embarrassed House Democrats announced after a firestorm of protest Thursday that they will pull a $1 billion Soviet aid plan out of a defense bill unless President Bush or his aides publicly say he wants it.

A number of Republicans and several Democrats denounced the plan saying many Americans need assistance first....

Sen. Dodd said millions of taxpayers could not afford to provide the aid to the Soviet Union when millions of Americans are unemployed....

Sen. D'Amato called the Soviet aid plan "incredible."

"We pay the price for freedom and then we give a peace dividend to the Soviet Army," he said. "If we talk about a peace dividend we'd better give it to the people here."

MEXICO TO ELIMINATE REVOLUTIONARY TENET OF AGRARIAN REFORM
Small Holders Could Sell Or Rent Co-op Plots

MEXICO CITY -- Jettisoning one of its most sacred revolutionary legacies, the Mexican government moved Thursday to revise drastically its agrarian reform so that for the first time millions of cooperative farmers will be able to own, rent or sell their plots.

The proposed constitutional amendment on land ownership constituted another in a series of sweeping changes initiated by President Salinas to modernize the economy and society in advance of commercial integration with the U.S. and Canada under a Free Trade Agreement now under negotiation.

E.C. IMPOSES SANCTIONS ON YUGOSLAVIA, CALLS FOR OIL EMBARGO

ROME -- The E.C. imposed wide-ranging economic sanctions on Yugoslavia Friday and asked the U.N. Security Council to impose an oil embargo, an official statement said....

S. AFRICA ACQUIRING ARMS FROM ALL OVER THE WORLD, INCLUDING U.S.

JOHANNESBURG -- Despite the decades-old U.N. embargo on the sale of military equipment to South Africa, government documents obtained Thursday show that this nation has continued to aggressively acquire arms and materiel from all over the world, including the U.S....

A number of American companies are named in the documents as sources of goods shipped to Armscor [South African government-owned armaments company] as well as its affiliates.

SURPRISE PROBE LOOKS LIKE A GO

Congressional Democrats are pressing ahead with plans for expensive investigations into the so-called "October Surprise" allegations against the Reagan presidential campaign, even in the face of new published accounts calling the theory a fraud.

House and Senate Republicans, who hope to derail the investigations, have been emboldened by detailed cover stories this week in two national magazines -- Newsweek and The New Republic -- debunking the theory that Reagan campaign aides engaged in a conspiracy to delay the release of American hostages in Iran.

SENATE GOP TASK FORCE UNVEILS
PLAN TO EXPAND COVERAGE FOR HEALTH CARE

A Senate Republican task force unveiled its plan to revamp the nation's health system Thursday, as pollsters, politicians and health industry officials said the surprising victory of Sen. Wofford has given new energy to the health reform movement. Observers said the apparent potency of the health issue could push President Bush into bringing forth an Administration health plan during the 1992 session of Congress....

Health industry and Administration sources said that while the Pennsylvania results could speed things up, their impact is not great enough to guarantee approval for any proposal, or that the White House will relax its opposition to a centralized government-run national health insurance system like the one in Canada....

Sen. Chafee said the GOP task force plan would neither junk the nation's current health system in favor of national health insurance nor mandate that employers provide health insurance to their workers. But he said it would nevertheless help nearly all the 34 million uninsured Americans obtain health insurance and also help control fast-growing health costs.

Chafee said the Administration had not endorsed the plan but Secretary Sullivan seemed pleased with many aspects.

GOP Senators Check in With Health-Care Plan

...Democratic senators who introduced a broader proposal last June, were critical.

"Republicans have placed themselves miles ahead of the Bush White House, but they are still light-years behind the American people," Sen. Kennedy said Thursday. (Judith Hasson, USA Today, 4A)

CANDIDATES PRESSED ON CHILDREN'S NEEDS

CONCORD, N.H. -- Using the setting that will hold the nation's first presidential primary, the children's Defense Fund launched an initiative Thursday to place children's issues in the forefront of the 1992 campaign.

The Defense Fund, considered to be the country's leading children's advocacy group, issued a report that painted a dismal picture of the condition of youngsters and families in the U.S. Without major improvements in the education and health care systems, the study said, the rate of children living in poverty will rise from one in five to one in four by the end of the century....

Marian Wright Edelman, president of the children's Defense Fund, blamed the deteriorating condition of children's lives on the unwillingness of political leaders, including members of Congress and President Bush, to make the needs of the poor a priority.

FDA PLANS REFORMS FOR DRUG PROCESS
Agency Aims To Speed Marketing Of Products

The FDA is planning to implement the most sweeping changes in the drug approval process in 30 years, including letting private contractors review applications to market new drugs, lifting key regulations governing pharmaceutical research and creating an approval "fast-track" for drugs intended to treat life-threatening illnesses....

Officials of the White House Competitiveness Council and the FDA, who jointly developed the reforms, said the drugs to be evaluated by outside contractors would be those in well-established categories and not any new and different drugs intended for serious diseases.... The reforms...highlight the increasing aggressive role that Vice President Quayle's Competitiveness Council is playing in deregulation at the agency level.

SENATE VOTES TO NULLIFY POLICY BANNING ABORTION COUNSELING

The Senate voted 73-24 Thursday to approve a $205 billion spending bill that would nullify a Bush Administration rule banning abortion counseling at federally funded family-planning clinics.

ADVOCACY GROUPS ASK SUPREME COURT TO ISSUE RULING SETTLING ABORTION RIGHTS

Abortion rights advocates asked the Supreme Court Thursday to state clearly whether abortion remains a protected constitutional right, wetting the stage for a possible ruling on the incendiary issue before the 1992 election.

(Ruth Marcus & Maralee Schwartz, Washington Post, A4)

Abortion Rights Advocates Challenge Supreme Court To Reaffirm Roe Vs. Wade

..."Presidents Bush and Reagan used an anti-choice litmus test to reshape the Supreme Court. President Bush, you are responsible for the costly and divisive battle that lies ahead," Kate Michelman, head of NARAL said at a news conference. "The right to choose is about to be taken from women and handed to the government."

(Anne Reifenberg, Dallas Morning News)

BUSH TO FACE DIFFICULT POLITICAL CHOICES OVER ABORTION

President Bush will have to make difficult choices over the abortion controversy in battles being fought with the Democrat-controlled Congress and in a potential landmark Supreme Court case.

The case asks the Supreme Court to reaffirm its 1973 ruling legalizing abortion, ensuring that the emotional issue will play a prominent role in next year's presidential elections.

Faye Wattleton, president of Planned Parenthood, said abortion will be at the forefront of the upcoming elections.

"From county sheriff to the U.S. President, no elected official will escape scrutiny," she told a news conference.

HILL PANEL TO BLOCK RULE ON MEDICAID MATCHING FUNDS

The House Energy and Commerce Committee moved Thursday to block implementation of a proposed Bush Administration rule that would cut billions of dollars from federal Medicaid payments to the states.

The legislation prohibits the Administration from implementing the rule until after the fiscal year ends Sept. 30.

Rep. Waxman said the rule issued in September by the Health Care Financing Administration will produce "budgetary and programmatic chaos in the states" if it takes effect as scheduled Jan. 1.

DEMOCRATS PROPOSE THREE ALTERNATIVES TO BREAK JOBLESS PAY IMPASSE

Senate Democratic leaders, hoping to break a stalemate over providing extended benefits to millions of unemployed workers, Thursday proposed giving President Bush three alternatives for financing a $5.6 billion program....

"Surely amongst the three I would hope the President could find one he could sign," Sen. Bentsen said at a news conference....

But Democrats are now beginning to feel the heat from the White House and congressional Republicans, who complain that the Democrats have refused to engage in meaningful negotiations.

Sen. Dole said Thursday that Democrats and Republicans on Capitol Hill need to "drop politics and get down to work...to work out a plan President Bush will sign and that pays for itself so the checks start to flow."...

Meanwhile, House Democratic leaders quickly closed ranks behind Rep. Rostenkowski's proposal for a income tax credit....

"While it's not a big-money bill, it still does something for the economy," said Rostenkowski. "It's simple, it's fair and in my opinion, it gets the job done.... No bells, no whistles."

(Eric Pianin, Washington Post, A8)

DEMOCRATS WANT 'TAX FAIRNESS,' BUSH PUSHES CAPITAL-GAINS CUT

Congressional Democrats, laying the groundwork for a major election-year debate, are betting their middle-income tax cuts will do more for the economy -- and voters -- than the capital-gains tax reduction proposed by President Bush.

The big question is whether Bush will jump aboard the tax-cut bandwagon and offer his own plan for reducing the burden on low- and middle-income families....

"If the President were a doctor, we could sue him for economic malpractice," Rep. Gephardt said in soliciting Bush's support. While Bush can't find the money to help the unemployed, Gephardt said, he "actually supports a giveaway [cut in capital gains] to the wealthy that will add $20 billion to the deficit."

BRADY BACKS STILL-LOWER INTEREST RATES

Secretary Brady said Thursday night that he favored still lower interest rates to spur the nation's sagging economy.

"I think they can continue to come down," Brady said of interest rates on the "MacNeil/Lehrer News Hour."

Brady indicated, however, that there was "some disagreement" on further rate cuts among senior economic advisers to President Bush.

"Nobody can say for sure" which way the economy is heading now, he said. "But I think that lower interest rates, which would mean lower home payments for Americans and lower credit card charges, make sense to me."

Asked if he was confident the economy would avoid slipping back into the recession that took hold in July 1990, Brady said nobody ever knew for sure which way the economy was going "and nobody can say for sure now." (Reuter)

REAL ESTATE LOAN POLICY IS UNVEILED
Rules Are Latest Move On 'Crunch'

The Bush Administration renewed efforts to revive bank lending Thursday, unveiling a unified policy that will be followed by four regulatory agencies for dealing with troubled commercial real estate loans.

Developed jointly by the four agencies and the Treasury Department, the commercial real estate lending policy is the latest of a series of steps the Administration has taken this year to deal with a "credit crunch" that many business executives say is weakening the economy by making it harder for their companies to borrow.

The policy does not directly ease real estate lending rules, but it requires the four regulatory agencies to follow the same guidelines "to ensure that misunderstandings about supervisory policies do not impede the availability of credit to sound borrowers."...

Real estate industry groups unanimously praised the steps taken Thursday....

"It should make it easier for lenders to do what lenders should be doing -- lend," said Steven Wechsler, president of the National Realty Committee. (Jerry Knight, Washington Post, G2)

CIVIL RIGHTS MEASURE SENT TO WHITE HOUSE

Ending two years of charged debate over racial quotas, the House Thursday overwhelmingly [381-38] passed a major civil rights bill that makes it easier for victims of job discrimination to sue and collect damages. (AP, Washington Post, A18)

CONSERVATIVES SAY BUSH YIELDED TOO MUCH ON CIVIL RIGHTS BILL

Conservative Republicans are complaining that President Bush gave too much ground to backers of a compromise civil rights bill aimed at fighting job discrimination....

"This bill is not a compromise, it's a cave-in. The effect is to put pressure on employers to adopt quotas," said Rep. Rohrabacker....

Rep. Walker disagreed, saying, "There is absolutely no quota language in this bill. The President won a major victory in regard to negotiations on this bill."... "Virtually nothing of substance has been changed," Rep. Brooks said. "How do we cook a red herring? David Duke turned up the heat," said Rep. Washington. The "red herring" he was referring to was quotas.

SOME SEE CARTERESQUE SCENARIO UNFOLDING

...For President Bush, the NATO event should have been a festive one. But most of the smiles belong to the Democrats back home who sense perhaps for the first time that Bush might not be as invincible as he once seemed.

That notion grew partly out of the defeat Tuesday of Dick Thornburgh, an outcome that has some Democrats smelling blood and some analysts recalling Jimmy Carter.

Jimmy Carter? Much like Bush's own experience, things went well for Carter in foreign policy during his first 2.5 years....

But during his last 1.5 years, the roof fell in on Carter. There was the Iran hostage crisis, the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan and, most importantly, an economy that reeled under the weight of skyrocketing inflation and interest rates.

Bush, like Carter, was able to establish himself early on as a wily foreign policy practitioner.... Things began to unravel for Carter in the fall of his third year. Bush's popularity has been slipping of late, but it remains to be seen whether he can do better than Carter did in maintaining voter support.

BENNETT URGES GOP: ESTABLISH AN IDENTITY

The Republican Party must describe itself to the American people in ways that make it clear it is different from the Democratic Party, William Bennett said Thursday.

Bennett said the GOP should draw on the example set by Clarence Thomas during his confirmation hearings.

"Say who you are, say what your principles are, and stand on them" he said in a lecture at the Heritage Foundation....

Bennett said if "honorable" Republicans and Democrats do not talk about affirmative action, quotas, welfare and other issues related to family, "then demagogues will seize the issues, and we see that situation with David Duke."...

"I don't believe the President's reluctant to lead. I believe a lot of the advice he's getting is wrong. I think people tend to think -- because they've been democratized -- that domestic policy means domestic spending and it means a fortune in spending on social programs. It doesn't mean that at all."

NEW YORKER IS JOURNALISTS' BEST HOPE FOR EXCITING RACE

Mario Cuomo is the reporters' candidate for president.

Cuomo's latest flirtation with a White House bid has drawn more media coverage than that accorded the six declared Democratic candidates combined. Part of the reason, several journalists acknowledged, is that they see Cuomo as the one Democrat guaranteed to provide an exciting presidential campaign....

Newsweek reporter Howard Fineman said that, "just for the sheer energy and entertainment value, most reporters would like to see him run."

ILLINOIS REDISTRICTING FAVORING GOP

CHICAGO -- In the first court decision affecting congressional redistricting before next year's elections, a panel of three federal judges here has approved a plan that could imperil the political futures of at least four House Democrats from Illinois.

REFLECTIONS ON THE 'GLASS CEILING'

The "glass ceiling" that keeps women and minorities out of corporate upper management is caused in part by white men at the top who tend to help other white men get ahead, Secretary Martin said Thursday.

"Often it is not lack of ability that stops women and minorities dead in their tracks. It can be their manager's inability to deal with someone who does not fit his, yes, mostly his, precise mold," said Martin.

"If at the top...are mainly white males, that means they're going to have to make an effort to mentor and network someone a little different than they," she said.

KEMP'S INITIATIVES FOR PUBLIC HOUSING ARE THE BIG LOSER
$23.8 Billion Appropriation Rebuffs HUD Chief's Plan

Secretary Kemp has waged a long and public battle to shift directions at HUD toward home ownership for poor Americans and away from public housing.

For the most part, it's been a losing battle. Last week, President Bush brushed aside Kemp's appeal for a veto and signed a $23.8 billion appropriations bill. The legislation contains deep cuts in some of Kemp's most cherished initiatives, particularly grants called HOPE to pay for homeownership for poor and middle-income people.

The biggest winners were the nation's public housing agencies, which got a record amount of money to operate and modernize the properties that house 3.5 million poor tenants, and state and local governments, which will receive $1.5 billion to provide rental housing on the private market for low- and middle-income people.

PRESIDENT'S TRIP

ABC's Peter Jennings: President Bush was overseas today, meeting in Rome with the 15 other leaders of NATO. They all agreed on the obvious: that the reason NATO was established 42 years ago -- to discourage a Soviet invasion of Western Europe -- has disappeared. The question is now, how much longer will NATO be necessary and should the U.S. have a military role in the future of Europe?

ABC's Brit Hume: Facing uncertainty about how the NATO summit would go, Mr. Bush met first today with Prime Minister Major, one leader whose support for the Atlantic alliance and continued U.S. leadership in it, he knew he could count on.

(President Bush, to Major: "You think that will all be smooth, don't you, Prime Minister?"

Prime Minister Major: "Absolutely. We're all here to reinforce NATO.")

But at today's closed-door summit opening, after the obligatory picture taking, first to speak was President Mitterrand, who said NATO is not a holy alliance, suggesting the French at least wouldn't mind seeing NATO give way to an all-European force. When his turn came next, Mr. Bush said, "My friends, if your ultimate aim is to provide independently for your own defense, the time to tell us is today." U.S. officials said the President's blunt challenge was intended to force the other NATO leaders to either speak up or by silence, acquiesce in a continued U.S. role in the alliance. Secretary Baker later said in effect, it worked, that no one had said a discouraging word.

(Secretary Baker: "The United States will for quite some time continue to be the leader of the alliance, and that our European allies are very anxious that that be the case.")

If that is the case, it means there will continue to be American troops in Europe, though in smaller numbers. It will also mean American nuclear forces to protect Europe, and this Administration fully expects, continued overall U.S. command of NATO forces.

(ABC-9)

NBC's Tom Brokaw: After successfully confronting the Soviet threat, the Western military alliance NATO today became a political alliance. The effort, however, was not without frustration.

NBC's John Cochran: The NATO allies saw a different George Bush today. Instead of the amiable diplomat, they found the Bush that congressional Democrats have seen lately: the cranky, confrontational Bush.

(TV coverage: President Bush at NATO conference.)

He told the Europeans if they want American GIs to go home, then say so. They did not say so.

(Baker: "We wanted to lay our cards on the table, if you will, and make it very clear the position of the United States with respect to the importance of this alliance, even as it undergoes transformation.")

Cochran continues:

Despite reassuring murmurings from most allies, Mitterrand had a chilling effect when he said there is nothing sacred about NATO. France and Germany already have a joint 5,000-force brigade, and now they want to expand, inviting other Europeans to join -- but only Europeans. American influence has ebbed here because the Soviet threat has ebbed. But one thing Bush and the allies do agree on is the new danger that the Kremlin may lose control of its nuclear weapons. Tomorrow, the allies will invite their former enemies, East Europe, to join in close discussions. What NATO really wants is to keep an eye on the former Soviet bloc as it evolves into something unpredictable. But where, in the middle of this muddle, is America's role?

(Baker: "My sense, John, is that the United States will for quite some time continue to be the leader of the alliance.")

Maybe, but the Pentagon plans to reduce troop levels in Europe from 320,000 to 150,000. The President is waging fights on two fronts. Not only is he trying to persuade the allies to accept U.S. leadership, but back home he must sell Congress and the public on the need to continue a huge military investment in Europe. And that's a tough sell when Americans are looking inward, when isolationism looks increasingly attractive to many Americans preoccupied with their own problems. (NBC-5)

CBS's Dan Rather: President Bush is in Rome at a NATO summit. The President said the U.S. will never abandon the Western alliance, but he asked whether NATO still wants the U.S. to play a central role in European defense. The NATO leaders adopted a new strategy: small-crisis response units. They also invited their former enemies of the Warsaw Pact in Eastern Europe to unprecedented security talks next month. (CBS-7)

NATO/FUTURE

ABC's Bob Zelnick reports if NATO were being shaped for today's conditions, some things would change. Because the world is changing, the new NATO would need to consider intervening outside its traditional areas, such as Yugoslavia.

(Barry Blechman, analyst: "These threats are not in the NATO area, and NATO is not able to deal with them because of its historical roots. We need new organizations to deal with the new threat.") What worries U.S. officials is that these new organizations may decide to exclude Americans. Most senior U.S. officials fear that as an independent European force take shape, it could undermine the willingness of Congress to keep paying for 150,000 American troops in Europe.

(Secretary Cheney: "We don't want just a token presence. We're not interested just in the symbolic presence of the United States in Europe. We're interested in meaningful military capability.")

(Gen. Galvin: "Americans need to stay committed in Europe. When we were not committed in Europe, we got dragged into wars over there anyway.")

Despite efforts to refurbish the alliance, many defense experts predict the number of American troops in Europe will fall to 75,000 or even 50,000. Having outlived the threat from the East, NATO as it has been known, may now be afflicted with a case of terminal success. (ABC-10)

TAX CUT

ABC's Cokie Roberts reports Rep. Rostenkowski today proposed a tax cut aimed at the middle class. The plan has just the ingredients the Democrats relish.

(Rep. Rostenkowski: "If you're a middle-income American, you get a tax cut. If you're in the top 1 percent, you get a tax increase.")

The proposal has the virtue of simplicity.

(Rostenkowski: "No bells, no whistles, no untested economic theories or gambles. What you see is what you get.")

What you get is up to $200 in tax credit if you're a single taxpayer, and up to $400 for a couple. That would affect 90 million taxpayers and would be paid for by raising the rates for 1 million. The tax rate would climb to 35 percent for single people making more than $85,000 and for couples making more than $145,000. It would also add a 10 percent surtax for the 30,000 Americans whose taxable income is more than $1 million. Republicans warn today's tax cut could be tomorrow's tax increase.

(Rep. Archer: "Ultimately, the middle class is going to pay. And you may start out by saying we're raising on the rich, but in the end it's going to creep down and it's going to hit the middle class. It's a tax-rate increase.")

For years, Republicans have convinced voters that when Democrats say taxes, they mean tax hikes. Republicans will try to do that again. Democrats hope the middle class believes they're fighting a President trying to give tax breaks to the rich. With each party blaming the other for high taxes, it will be difficult to pass any tax plan anytime soon. (ABC-3)

NBC's Andrea Mitchell reports leaders in both parties today predicted Congress will approve an election-year tax cut. Rostenkowski's plan is a direct challenge to the President.

(Rep. Gephardt: "Where is his position on tax cuts for the middle class to get this economy stimulated? He's off in Rome and people are here in the United States having trouble paying their bills.") Elements of Rostenkowski's plan will likely be combined with Sen. Bentsen's plan. Bentsen sees an eventual compromise with the White House.

(Sen. Bentsen: "Well, I think after the election Tuesday in Pennsylvania, the Administration is going to be more responsive to the concerns of middle-income America. And they'll probably adopt some of these ideas that I've proposed or that Chairman Rostenkowski has.")

Republicans immediately rejected the Democratic proposal, but compromise is in the air. Sen. Dole told NBC News that chances are 100 percent of a tax cut next year, possibly hammered out at a February tax summit. (NBC-3)

CBS's Bob Schieffer reports a parade of Democrats loved the plan because they say tax cuts for the wealthy have backfired.

(Rep. Schroeder: "We were convinced that if we just lessened taxes on millionaires, it would all trickle down and we would all feel it. What we're seeing is nobody even got damp, nobody got trickled on.")

But Republicans dumped on the plan.

Schieffer continues:

(Archer: "It's an attempt to redistribute the wealth. It is a reincarnation of George McGovern, but it is a stingy George McGovern.")

It may well be next year before Congress votes on any of this. But it does show what campaign '92 promises, with both sides trying hard to fix the economy or at least fix the blame. (CBS-5)

UNEMPLOYMENT BENEFITS

Jennings reports Senate Democrats have introduced another bill to extend unemployment benefits. The Democrats are offering some new ways to pay for it, including taking money out of foreign aid.

(ABC-4)

CIVIL RIGHTS

Jennings reports the House today passed a civil rights bill. President Bush is expected to sign it. (ABC-5)

ABORTION/SUPREME COURT

Jennings reports pro-abortion groups have challenged the Supreme Court to rule once and for all on the question of legalized abortion. Planned Parenthood and the ACLU want the court to use Pennsylvania's new law as the ultimate test, and they want the court to do so by next summer, before the fall campaign.

ABC's Tim O'Brien reports on the call from abortion-rights groups. (Kathryn Kolbert, ACLU: "We have presented one question and only one question to the nine justices: Has the Supreme Court overruled Roe v. Wade.")

(Faye Wattleton, Planned Parenthood: "If Roe is no longer the law of the land, what is? Women can no longer remain in limbo.")

(Kate Michelman, National Abortion Rights Action League: "For elected officials, this means that the days of dancing and dodging, of hemming and hawing on the right to choose are absolutely over.") If abortion-rights groups lose and Roe v. Wade is to be overruled, the strategy is to let it happen quickly, in hopes of exacting a price next November at the ballot box. (ABC-6)

GULF WAR

Jennings reports the Pentagon today said the Gulf War cost $61 billion, nearly $3 billion more than the allies committed.

(ABC-13)

KUWAIT

ABC's Ned Potter reports 10,000 firefighters from 34 countries were brought in to fight Kuwait's oil fires. Kuwait's oil production is 1/5 of normal and parts of the desert will be an oily mess for years. (ABC-14)

YUGOSLAVIA

NBC's Dennis Murphy reports Yugoslav fighter jets today strafed at least four towns in Croatia. The beleaguered Croatian president asked the U.S. to intervene.

(President Tudjman: "U.S. is the most important power in the world, yah.")

Serbian today gave Dubrovnik an ultimatum: to surrender or be destroyed. (NBC-6)

SOVIET UNION

Jennings reports today was Revolution Day in the Soviet Union, the 74th anniversary of the Russian Revolution. There were some fairly small demonstrations in Moscow, both for and against communism. But most people simply ignored the anniversary, and for the first time since World War II, there was no formal parade. (ABC-11)

PHILIPPINES

Jennings reports 3,400 have died from floods and landslides caused by a tropical storm. (ABC-12)

PAN AM 103/LOCKERBIE

NBC's John Miller reports the families of victims of Pan Am 103 are in Lockerbie, hoping to meet tomorrow with the prosecutor in charge of the case. They hope to learn that arrest warrants will be issued for Palestinian terrorists suspected of the bombing. (NBC-4)

HOMELESS/VETERANS

ABC's Beth Nissen reports many veterans are homeless because VA treatment programs are too crowded to keep them. Most cannot find a job and almost all of them are bitter. There is shelter available: thousands of vacant buildings and foreclosed homes that government agencies already own. The law requires that surplus homes be turned over to the homeless, but government compliance has been poor. (ABC-15)

MAGIC JOHNSON

Jennings: We begin tonight with the fate of a single individual. The basketball star Magic Johnson confirmed a short while ago that he has the AIDS virus and he will retire from the Los Angeles Lakers. His doctors said he isn't showing any symptoms at the moment, but he is not up to playing a professional basketball season. The news is like a thunderclap for millions of Americans, for he's one of the country's truly great athletes who was admired by adults and idolized by children from every walk of life. He becomes a statistic, for as many as 1.5 million other Americans have the AIDS virus, more than .25 million of them children. And for all the efforts, there is still no cure. (All networks-Lead)

The bill calls for the establishment of a 16-member advisory panel to assist the Department of the Interior in developing the mapping program.

The panel also gave voice-vote approval to a bill (HR 2790) that would bar new hard-rock mining in Cave Creek Canyon in southeastern Arizona.

GEORGIA LAND bill will cost jobs, N.C. lawmaker says.

Legislation that would designate national forest land in Georgia as wilderness has sparked a dispute between Georgia and North Carolina lawmakers.

Under the bill (HR 3245), approved by voice vote yesterday by the House Interior Subcommittee on National Parks and Public Lands, about 7,800 acres of the Chattahoochee National Forest would be off limits to logging.

The measure will cost thousands of North Carolina lumber mill workers their jobs, said Charles H. Taylor, R-N.C., because the mills rely on Georgia timber.

But George "Buddy" Darden, D-Ga., said that North Carolina should rely on its own resources, saying that 75 percent of Georgians polled support designating the area as wilderness, which would sharply restrict development on the land.

Taylor did not fight approval of the bill yesterday, but he said he would offer an amendment to protect North Carolina mills when the measure is considered by the full committee.

The subcommittee also approved, by voice vote, a bill (HR 3012) that would allow for the study of the White Clay Creek in Delaware and Pennsylvania as a potential addition to the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System.

TAX-CUT proposals floated in House and Senate.

A bipartisan group of Senate and House lawmakers yesterday unveiled a capital gains reduction plan that they say will have a better chance of enactment than past proposals, and a key House committee chairman introduced a bill to cut taxes for 80 percent of all taxpayers.

The capital gains bill would give investors in small businesses with equity of $100 million or less a 50 percent deduction on gains in stock held more than five years.

Investors in companies with $5 million or less in equity could take a 60 percent to 100 percent deduction on capital gains resulting from "seed capital" investments held for six to 10 years.

Chief Senate sponsor Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., said broad bipartisan support combined with the targeting of the tax deduction at investments in newly formed, entrepreneurial firms will help the package succeed. Bumpers said he was discussing ways to offset the costs of the bill, which would run $900 million over five years.

Robert T. Matsui, D-Calif., planned to introduce a companion measure in the House yesterday.

Under a bill proposed yesterday by House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., individuals would receive as much as a $200 tax credit and couples a $400 credit.

The $46 billion in cuts over two years would be financed by increasing taxes on the wealthy. A new 35 percent tax bracket would be permanently established above the current highest bracket of 31 percent. In addition, anyone with an income exceeding $1 million would have to pay a 10 percent surtax.

Rostenkowski said the strength of his plan was its simplicity. "If you're a middle-income American, you get a tax cut. If you're in the top 1 percent, you get a tax increase."

Majority Leader Richard A. Gephardt, D-Mo., said the bill would be the first priority when the House returns in January. In the meantime, the Ways and Means Committee will hold hearings on the plan.

speed train projects.

Also yesterday, the House Energy and Commerce Committee approved a bill (HR 1087) aimed at promoting the development of "maglev" and other high-speed rail systems. Maglev systems make use of electromagnetism to propel elevated trains.

The Science panel's bill (HR 2941), approved by voice vote, would authorize the Transportation Department to spend $164.5 million in fiscal 1992 on maglev and other high-speed rail projects. Authorization levels would be increased to about $180 million in 1993 and $200 million in 1994.

Maglev research and development funds were included in the Senate highway bill but not the House version to avoid a referral to the Energy Committee. Yesterday's action by the Science panel was intended as an endorsement of maglev research.

The Energy bill, approved by voice vote yesterday, would make high-speed projects eligible for loan guarantees under a program that supports the rehabilitation and upgrade of conventional railroads.

Supporters of the legislation say additional government help is needed to enable the United States to catch up with Europe and Japan, which have high-speed railroads in place.

'OCTOBER SURPRISE' task force OK'd by Rules panel.

The House Rules Committee yesterday endorsed the creation of a special Foreign Affairs Committee task force to look into allegations about the timing of the release of U.S. hostages in Iran more than a decade ago.

After an acrimonious hearing and markup, the panel voted, 8-4, along party lines, to approve a measure (H Res 258) creating the task force.

The task force will look into allegations that officials of Ronald Reagan's 1980 presidential campaign conspired with Iran to delay the release of the hostages until after the 1980 election.

Rules panel members yesterday rejected a number of Republican attempts to limit the length of the inquiry to six months and/or to investigate actions by the Jimmy Carter presidential campaign, which some Republicans say may have offered to sell arms to Iran in exchange for an early release — an "October surprise" — of the hostages.

The measure now goes to the House Administration Committee, which has jurisdiction over funding for the task force.

SOFTWARE COPYRIGHT for federal employees approved.

Legislation (HR 191) that aims to increase computer software innovation in federal laboratories was approved, by voice vote, yesterday by the House Science Subcommittee on Technology and Competitiveness.

Because federal employees currently do not have the authority to copyright their work, there is a disincentive to develop software, bill sponsors say.

The measure would give federal agencies the power to copyright computer software and extend royalties to federal employees who write software programs.

Members approved, by voice vote, a substitute amendment that narrowed the scope of the bill.

The definition of computer software was changed to ensure that private entrepreneurs could write and sell manuals on how to use the programs. In addition, government data, databases and database retrieval systems were excluded from copyright protections.

Once the federal government can protect its work, sponsors say, private firms will no longer be reluctant to enter into cooperative agreements with agencies to research, develop and write software programs.

D.C. PANEL rebuffs attempt to overturn assault gun referendum.

The House District of Columbia Committee approved three bills yesterday, one of which would waive the period of congressional review for certain actions taken by the D.C. mayor and the city council.

Chairman Ronald V. Dellums, D-Calif., said such a measure (HR 3709) must be approved as Congress nears the end of the session so that certain acts approved by the D.C. council are not held up while Congress is out of town.

As specified by the 1973 home rule law, all new D.C. laws must be submitted to Congress for review — civil laws have a 30-day review period, criminal laws have a 60-day period. HR 3709, which was approved by voice vote, would allow certain laws to take effect without being reviewed.

During consideration of HR 3709, Dana Rohrabacher, D-Calif., attempted to amend the bill to overturn the referendum approved by D.C. residents on Tuesday that would hold gun manufacturers and sellers of some assault weapons liable for injuries caused by the guns.

Calling it an "irresponsible piece of legislation," Rohrabacher said the law is unconstitutional because it would affect gun manufacturers outside of the city.

But Dellums asked him to withdraw the amendment, pointing out that Rohrabacher had also introduced a separate bill (HR 3712) to overturn the referendum. Dellums said he had promised that hearings and committee action would be held on that bill. Rohrabacher then agreed to withdraw the amendment.

The committee also approved:

• HR 3703, which would authorize the Columbia Hospital for Women to buy from the federal government for $12 million 1.2 acres of adjoining land. The measure was approved, 7-4.

• HR 2626, which would eliminate 17 obsolete annual reports from various D.C. agencies and utilities to Congress. It was approved by voice vote.

PRESIDENTIAL FUND laws would be changed by House bill.

The House Administration's Elections Subcommittee yesterday voted 5-3 to approve legislation (HR 3644) to ensure that presidential primary candidates receive federal matching funds.

Primary candidates are entitled to matching money from the Presidential Election Campaign Fund, but the law requires that money in that fund first be set aside for the general election and party conventions. Democrats say their presidential hopefuls will be hindered because of a shortage of funds during the primary season.

The Presidential Election Campaign Fund, which is supported by taxpayers designating that $1 of their taxes be set aside for campaigns, has been dwindling in recent years.

Under the bill, federal funds would be made available for primary candidates first and then general election candidates and the party conventions.

Similar provisions were attached to a fiscal 1992 supplemental spending bill (HR 3543) passed by the House.

By a 3-3 vote, the panel rejected an amendment by Robert L. Livingston, R-La., to do away with the Presidential Election Campaign Fund.

The panel approved, by voice vote, an amendment that would require candidates who accept federal funds to close-caption their campaign commercials.

GEOLOGICAL mapping would be expanded under House bill.

The House Interior Subcommittee on Mining and Natural Resources yesterday approved, by voice vote, legislation (HR 2763) that would establish a national geological mapping program to make available more information on mineral deposits and environmental characteristics of lands.

Geological maps provide data on coal, oil and natural gas reserves, and can help states and communities decide where they should put landfills and waste dumps.

Panel Chairman Nick J. Rahall II, D-W.Va., said production of geological maps has been greatly curtailed over the past two decades.

The intent of the bill is to streamline various mapping programs at the U.S. Geological Survey and to refocus mapping efforts to promote conservation of natural resources, better ground water management and environmental protection.

News From the Hill

HOUSE FLOOR: Civil rights bill cleared for president.

The House yesterday cleared legislation (S 1745) that would strengthen laws banning discrimination in the workplace.

The 381-37 vote culminated a two-year struggle between congressional Democrats and the Bush administration over a job-bias bill. President Bush last year vetoed a version of the bill, contending that it would cause employers to adopt hiring and promotion quotas for minorities and women to avoid lawsuits.

But a Senate-White House agreement Oct. 25 that made only minimal changes to the bill paved the way for quick Senate and House action. The Senate passed S 1745 on Oct. 30 by a 93-5 vote.

The legislation addresses nine Supreme Court rulings, five of them from 1989, that have made it harder for victims of job discrimination to bring and win lawsuits.

Additionally, for the first time, limited money damages will be allowed for victims of harassment and other intentional discrimination based on sex, religion or disability.

Not all were happy with the compromise. F. James Sensenbrenner Jr., R-Wis., said the measure "continues to be a lawyers' bonanza" that will clog the courts with job-bias lawsuits.

Democrats were quick to suggest that the quota argument had been a purely political one all along. "Where did the quotas go? They swam upstream, as red herrings often do," said Craig Washington, D-Texas.

SENATE FLOOR: Labor-HHS spending bill sent to president.

The Senate yesterday cleared, 72-25, the conference report on legislation (HR 2707) to provide nearly $205 billion for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services (HHS), and Education in fiscal 1992.

The measure includes a provision that would prohibit the administration from implementing current regulations preventing abortion counseling at federally funded family planning clinics.

President Bush has said he would veto the bill if it suspends the regulations.

While the Senate passed the conference report by a veto-proof majority, the House vote fell 18 short of the number needed to override a veto. Proponents of the bill say they'll be able to pick up the needed votes.

Members also passed, 96-0, legislation (S 838) to boost federal and state efforts at preventing child abuse.

The bill would increase grants to states to upgrade the training of workers in child abuse prevention and treatment centers. It would also expand shelter and counseling services to provide more immediate protection for victims of domestic violence.

HIGHWAY BILL conferees begin talks, little accomplished.

House and Senate conferees on legislation (HR 2950) to overhaul federal highway and mass transit programs convened for the first time yesterday but did not get down to negotiations.

The conferees plan to meet again next Tuesday amid concerns that they may not reach an agreement before Congress adjourns for the year. "We all agree that we can afford no delays in the completion of this legislation," said Public Works and Transportation Chairman Robert A. Roe, D-N.J.

Among the differences the two sides will have to resolve are the time frame for the authorization and its price tag. The Senate version is a five-year, $124 billion bill; the House passed a six-year, $151 billion measure.

Differing formulas for distributing funds to states will have to be reconciled.

The House version would distribute money to states based on highway usage factors such as fuel consumption and vehicle miles traveled. The Senate bill would base each state's funding levels on an average of its highway receipts over the past five years.

MEDICAID PAYMENTS to be allowed under House Energy bill.

The House Energy and Commerce Committee approved three health measures yesterday, including one that would block administration rules banning federal Medicaid matching payments for state funds raised through voluntary donations from health-care providers as well as through some taxes levied specifically on hospitals and nursing homes.

Although subject to a veto, the measure (HR 3595) was approved by a wide margin, 36-7, with many Republicans crossing over to support it. The bill's sponsors say that the new regulations violate an agreement that was part of last year's budget reconciliation law. Under the law, the administration is allowed to ban donation programs beginning Jan. 1, 1992, but provider-tax programs are permitted.

Bill sponsor Henry A. Waxman, D-Calif., said that it was important to stop the rules now so that they can be discussed in more detail next year.

The committee also approved, by voice vote, HR 3635, which would reauthorize through fiscal 1996 the Preventive Health and Health Services Block Grant. Created in 1981, the block grant can be used by states for a variety of purposes, including such broad health concerns as rodent control and rape counseling.

Under the bill, the block grant's authorization would be increased from $110 million in fiscal 1989 to $150 million in fiscal 1992.

The third bill (S 1475) would reauthorize through fiscal 1995 a program to create protection and advocacy programs for the mentally ill. Passed by the Senate on July 31, the bill would authorize $19.5 million for fiscal 1992.

HIGH-SPEED rail development sought by two House panels.

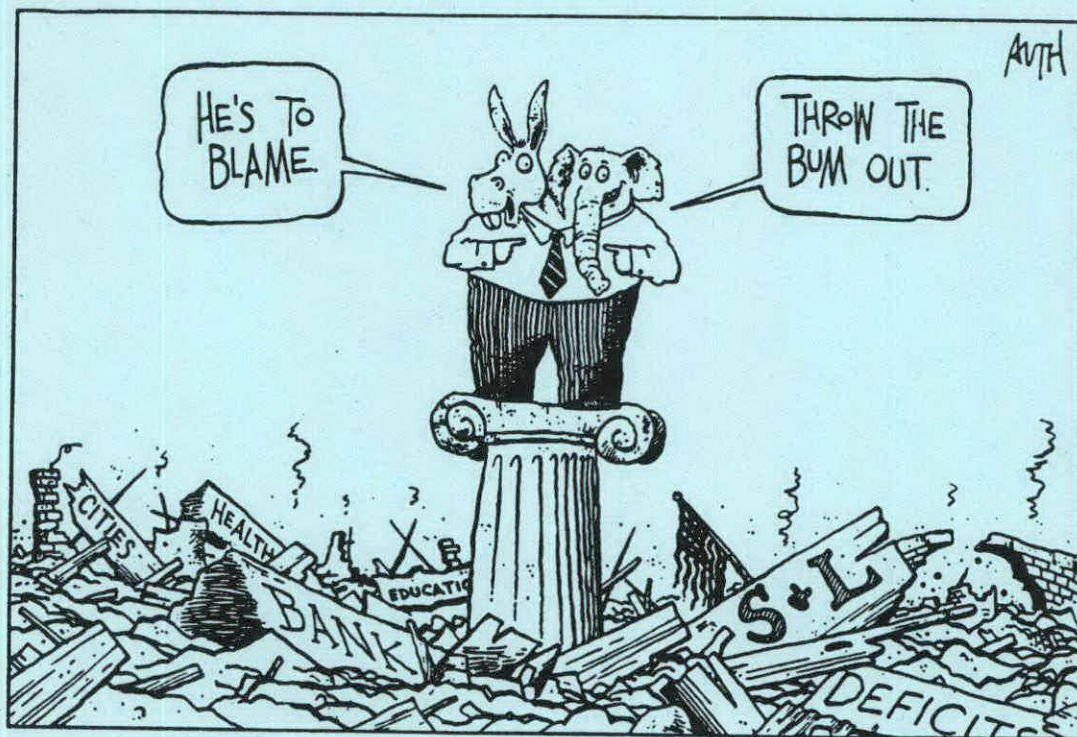

Members of the House Science, Space and Technology Committee wanted to make sure that conferees on a major highway reauthorization bill (HR 2950) knew of the panel's support for magnetically levitated train systems, so on the same day the conference convened, the Science panel voted to authorize research funds for high-

*1 NEW YORK CITY: HARKIN, WILDER IN CUOMO'S "BACKYARD"

"While Mario ruminates and ruminates about running for President, other [Dems] are running hot and heavy right in his backyard" (Frank Lombardi, N.Y. DAILY NEWS). Harkin and Wilder both campaigned in NYC, and Kerrey "will be in town today for private fund-raising meetings. Wilder and Harkin both dismissed Cuomo's plans as immaterial to their own bids. Both also pooh-poohed the notion that if Cuomo runs he becomes the 800-pound gorilla." Harkin, addressing the World Jewish Congress: "It doesn't make any difference to me who's in or who's out." Wilder "encouraged" Cuomo to run, "but politely scoffed at the notion Cuomo would overshadow the other [Dems]": "From where I go and what I see, I don't hear it from the people." Both believed Cuomo would have to compete in the NH primary were he to run (11/8). Both "spent a lot of time answering questions about Cuomo" (Crucker, AP/RICHMOND TIMES-DISPATCH). Wilder, at a luncheon organized by VA's Chamber of Commerce and Dept. of Econ. Development, "said that he understood Cuomo's refusal to make a quick decision about running": "My reaction is that he should do what is in his best interest, and I can appreciate the time he has taken. It's a very momentous decision to make." Wilder said he believed Cuomo's "deliberations ... would not hurt" Dems: "The party is bigger than one individual" (11/8).

*2 CLINTON: PLAYING CATCHUP IN THE SUNSHINE STRAW STATE

Clinton bagged the endorsement of LG Buddy MacKay (D), state Sens. Helen Gordon Davis and Robert Wexler, and state Reps. Jim Davis, Elaine Bloom, Scott Clemons, Daryl Jones, Mike Langton, Anne Machenzie and Ron Silver. during his first "sweep" through FL. ORLANDO SENTINEL's Peter Mitchell notes Clinton's organizational effort in FL had been "lagging" (11/7). TALLAHASSEE DEMOCRAT's Susan Lyle agrees: "Late start" (11/7). "Despite his confidence," Clinton "acknowledged ... he's running behind Harkin and Kerrey in the bid to garner support for the straw ballot" (Jerry Fallstrom, FL TIMES-UNION, 11/7).

VIEW FROM THE OUTSIDE: "Clinton's campaign is reminiscent of outsider Jimmy Carter. As the nation's longest-serving governor, Clinton is bashing [DC's] politicians for losing contact with everyday people" (Mitchell, ORLANDO SENTINEL, 11/7). Clinton: "I am the candidate of change. I will shake up government like no one else." The "Clinton shake-up" would include: slashing health care costs, establishing "uniform standards" for national health care and raising the tax deduction for children, while boosting the tax credit for earned income. Clinton said he "wouldn't rule out a tax increase, although he views it as a last resort": "Bush should prove to all Americans that nobody should go out and promise that" (Michael Sznajderman, TAMPA TRIBUNE, 11/7). TAMPA TRIB's Ray Locker on the "popular" outsider argument: "Clinton has what it takes to pull it off. Being an insider in Little Rock doesn't qualify anyone as being a Washington insider. While all politicians answer questions robotically, as if someone has pulled a string on the back of their necks, Clinton has an appealing spontaneity and sincerity. ... Of the six [Dem] candidates, only Clinton and [Kerrey] have the vitality, freshness and sense of middle-class values to appeal to the millions of voters necessary to win a presidential election" (11/7).

EDUCATION: TAMPA TRIBUNE's Ray Locker notes, "Many of Clinton's education reforms are similar to those proposed by Bush earlier this year." (11/7). TALLAHASSEE DEMOCRAT's Susan Lyle notes, "While Arkansas' teacher salaries and test scores still lag behind the nation's, Clinton reforms have reduced the dropout rate, increased the number of high-school graduates going to college and raised basic student skills across the board" (11/7).

SOUTHERN DISCOMFORT? "The defeat of two progressive Southern governors in [MS] and [LA] signals not only resurgent racism but also a despair about government, according to the wife of a third progressive Southern governor." Hillary Clinton was in Austin 11/6 speaking to county organizers for Gov. Ann Richards (D): "I think part of the appeal is race-bating, and that needs to be repudiated just as hard and as fast as it raises its head." On Clinton's chances of success: "I think that part of Bill's great attraction in this campaign is that he knows how to pull together coalitions that cut across race and income and party lines. ... We think if Bill could be the Democratic nominee, we think he could carry (Texas) in the fall despite the best efforts of George Bush and [Sen. Phil Gramm (R-TX)] and anybody else who tried to stop us. We think we could pull together a combination of Democrats and independents that would win" (Dave McNeely, AUSTIN AMERICAN STATESMAN, 11/7).

*3 CUOMO: TODAY'S BEST GUESS

"Friends said they expect the answer next week" (Dan Balz, WASH. POST). Cuomo "said without hesitation yesterday that he believes he would make a good president and that the issue now before him as he considers whether to become a candidate is 'how do you handle the governorship.'" He "remains undecided about whether to enter" the race, but said "that he is 'going as fast as I can.'" ... Still another factor holding up a decision, friends said, is that his wife, Matilda, is out of the country and won't return until this weekend. ... One nice piece of symmetry: he is scheduled to appear Thursday on the same radio show he used in 1987 to bow out" (11/8). N.Y. DAILY NEWS editorial: "The need for inspirational candidates has never been disputed. Jackson's bowing out just makes it more obvious. Are you listening, Mario?" (11/8). Cuomo told the BOSTON HERALD: "If you ask me, 'If you don't run for president now, will you ever have another opportunity?' I'd say, 'Probably not.'" Cuomo said it's only been 3 weeks "since he first said he'd 'think about' running": "It must be absolutely clear by now that I had no plans to make plans (to run). There was not a single poll that had been done, we didn't even know the primary dates." On being driven by "personal desire" to achieve the presidency: "Show me a guy with so called 'fire in the belly,' and I'll spritz him in the mouth with seltzer" (11/7).

HELLO BUFFALO, YOU'RE NEXT: During his 11/6 PBS statewide call-in program, carried live on C-SPAN, Cuomo was "put on the defensive by callers who raised questions about matters that would be sure to be part of a national campaign, like the high taxes and crime rate in New York City and state" (N.Y. NEWSDAY, 11/7). N.Y. DAILY NEWS' Lars-Erik Nelson writes on the call-in shows: "These are not the governor's finest moments. He is a wonderful, intelligent, compassionate man, with great intellectual gifts. Unfortunately, on these call-ins he would rather win a 30-second debate with some poor scared, angry guy at the end of a phone than face reality. ... The reality is that people are fleeing his city and his state, angry about taxes and fearful of crime. ... The only reason anybody listens to a [KKKer] like David Duke is that so many of these other politicians -- Reagan, Bush, Cuomo -- can prove to you that nothing is really wrong, nothing is their responsibility and nothing is under their control. As an alternative, Duke begins to look almost reasonable" (11/8).

WARMING UP? RNC chair Clayton Yeutter "took a pre-emptive slap" at Cuomo "by citing as a sign of Cuomo weakness" Robert Gaffney's (R) victory over Dem Patrick Halpin (D) in the Suffolk Co. exec. race, and "similar GOP wins in county-executive races in Albany and Rochester" (NEWSDAY, 11/7). W. POST's Howard Kurtz writes Cuomo is the "reporters' candidate ... the one [Dem] guaranteed to provide an exciting presidential campaign" (11/8).

TV: Rep. Tom Downey (D-NY): "I think the other candidates are good candidates, I just don't think they are going to be as powerful in articulating the message as Governor Cuomo would be." GOP consultant Roger Stone: "There will be a lot of talk about mismanagement, but it's going to be about the mismanagement of [NY] ... Cuomo has presided over an economic disaster ... I just don't think he'll be able to walk away from his record." Downey on Cuomo's "thin-skin": "I find him to be a good politician ... he likes to reward his friends and make sure his enemies feel the wrath of his anger, and I don't think there's anything wrong with that." Stone: "I'd be delighted if he ran because I think he is the most vulnerable Democrat they can field" (FOX, 11/8).

*4 KERREY: FIGHTING DEADLINE FOR MATCHING FUNDS

He "launched a fund-raising drive to collect $500,000 over a 10-day period" (Joe Brennan, OMAHA WORLD-HERALD). In a direct mail piece sent out 11/4, he asked for donations of $15, $20, $30 or more and "hoped" to raise the amount by 11/14. Kerrey NE finance chair Denny Jorgensen "said the mailing was sent" to NE and other states and "was organized" through Kerrey's DC campaign office. Dem consultant Jim Robinson, "who is assisting" Kerrey, said Kerrey is also "conducting a national telemarketing fund-raising campaign" from Omaha, NE, St. Cloud, MN and CA. "Kerrey is expected to submit" a request for matching funds 12/2. He has also "set a goal" of raising $750,000-1M in NE by the end of '91. In the mailer, Kerrey says the campaign "will test me and it will test our nation. At a time when Americans have lost faith in our political process, we must find a way to break through the cynicism and build hope. At a time when Americans are uneasy about our future, we must give our nation a bold new vision and once again take control of our destiny" (11/8).

TV: "MacNeil/Lehrer" featured a "Conversation" with him. PBS' Kwame Holman, after video of Kerrey singing "Waltzing Mathilda" on the night of his '88 Senate win: "That Australian ballad about a soldier who loses his legs in [WWI] goes to the heart of Bob Kerrey's own war experience." Kerrey was shown in a '73 interview with Jim Lehrer speaking out against the war. Kerrey, in '91: "The fundamental thing that I've got is, frankly, I don't care what the polls say. I'm not guided by polls." On why people are frustrated with government: "We've been governed for the past 11 years by people who were hostile to government, and tried to prove it couldn't operate, and they succeeded." On health care: "George Bush's proposal would spend $150 billion more than mine will. ... You've got to be willing, as the President's not willing to do, to take on the vested interests [such as insurance companies]. ... They've become part of the problem" (PBS, 11/7). WORLD-HERALD's David Kotok reports Kerrey, in the PBS interview, "accused" Bush and Reagan of "consciously making government ineffective in dealing with human problems." Kerrey said the "growing belief" by Americans that "government is irrelevant to their jobs, schools and health care" is "justified" given the "effort during the last 11 years to make people hostile to government" (11/8). On "Good Morning America," Kerrey described his Health USA plan: "What's required now is a fundamental change in the way we finance health care so as to provide, not just the opportunity for health care for all Americans, which it does as a right, but to provide for economic opportunity ... it does change significantly the environment in which Americans live so that Americans won't have to worry about pre-existing health problems, will not worry about losing benefits, will not have to worry about going on welfare if they lose their job" (ABC, 11/8).

*5 WILDER: CAN YOU MATCH THIS?

He announced 11/7 that he has met the federal matching fund requirement and will file qualifying papers today (Margaret Edds, Norfolk VIRGINIAN-PILOT). But Wilder finance chair Al Dwoskin "cautioned that he is assuming nothing until the final report is in hand": "They're up there working on it right now. They think they have it ... They're saying that to me, and I'm saying, 'I'd like to see the report.'" Those who "hope to get a large financial boost" from the fund by 1/92 "must file" today. Under FEC rules, those who don't "could still get limited matching funds" in 1/92, "as long as they qualify" by early 12/91. The larger sums "will be available only" to those filing today. Dwoskin: "I have two little signs on my desk. One is 'Assume nothing.' The other is 'Make it happen'" (11/8). REFERENDUM? While Wilder did take some of the blame for the GOP's gains in the elections (see HOTLINE 11/7), he also "chastised" Dems "eager to fault him" for some of their losses (Hardy/Schapiro, RICHMOND TIMES-DISPATCH). On the anti-Wilder sentiment that GOPers and analysts said was a contributing factor: "I haven't felt it; I don't see it." But even "Wilder ally" state Sen. Stanley Walker (D) said, "I think that Wilder played some role in the defeats ... because he wasn't putting as much emphasis on state races as he should." Wilder: "I did all I was asked to do" (11/7). It was one of the "bluntest commentaries" on whether Wilder contributed to the Dem losses. (Drummond Ayers, N.Y. TIMES, 11/8). Wilder adviser/VA Dem chair Paul Goldman said, "As for the election results, all of that is 'local stuff.' They will not 'hamper him from running nationally'" (TIMES-DISPATCH, 11/7).

*6 DEM ROUND-UP

TSONGAS: Of the Dem candidates, Tsongas and Kerrey "have written specific proposals for reforming the country's health care. Tsongas advocates setting national standards but continuing to have private companies provide insurance and health care. If the government were to take over all aspects of health care, he said, the costs would run out of control." Tsongas' plan "fits within the criteria" the American Assn of Retired Persons "is looking for" (Deborah Snyder, CONCORD MONITOR, 11/7).

HARKIN: He "complained in a conference call with Iowa reporters that the press has failed to write about his plans for preventative health care, which he said are as important as a national health insurance plan." Harkin 'reacted strongly when asked by a reporter why his proposals for reviving the economy include few specifics": "Excuse my frankness; that's just B.S." (DES MOINES REGISTER, 11/7).

BROWN: Supporters as well as opponents "credited the surprising defeat" of WA's term-limit initiative "to a successful campaign that raised the threat of a California raid on Washington's Columbia River water" (William Endicott, SACRAMENTO BEE). "The fact that [Brown] was in [WA] trying to advance his own campaign for the [Dem] nomination by tying it to the term-limit initiative only added to the California-covets-our-water theory." Nat'l Tax Limitation Cmte's Lewis Uhler, a leader of the national term-limits movement, "said opponents of the [WA] measure 'played the California angle very well,' adding, 'Governor Moonbeam (Brown) went up there and wandered around and gave some credence to the claims.'" LIMIT's Sherry Bockwinkle: "Maybe Jerry Brown wasn't the right person to speak for our campaign" (11/7).

NO C-SPAN AT AFL-CIO FORUM On 11/12 at about 2:30p, the Dem pres. contenders will participate in a candidate's forum at the AFL-CIO's bi-annual convention in Detroit, moderated by Paul Duke. "Since that forum is intended as an internal communication to AFL-CIO union members and their families, the AFL-CIO must insist ... news coverage of the forum be limited to 'brief excerpts'" and recordings of the event are not to be distributed outside of news organizations (AFL-CIO release, 11/5). Due to this limitation, C-SPAN, which provides "gavel-to-gavel" coverage of such events, will go to Detroit.

'92 FORECASTS: DALLAS MORNING NEWS' Carl Leubsdorf notes "the most likely 1992 scenarios": 1) "As in 1972 and 1984, Mr. Bush wins a decisive re-election victory but his party fails to make significant gains in Congress, ensuring four more years of governmental gridlock." 2) "Unlike Mr. Nixon, and Mr. Reagan, Mr. Bush not only wins a second term but leads an across-the-board sweep. Unexpected GOP gains in Congress give the president a working majority." 3) "The nation's economic woes increase and the Democrats succeed in making Mr. Bush into a 1990s version of Herbert Hoover, regaining the [WH]" (11/7).

JACKSON: Balto. SUN editorial: His decision not to run "should make it more likely that the [Dems] will have a winner relatively early in 1992. If they do not -- if, in fact, they do not have a winner even by the final lap, if the decision is left up in the air and up to the national convention, do not be surprised if the Jackson car comes roaring right back into the pack" (11/8).

*7 POST-ELECTION POT-POURRI OF QUOTABLES

Balto. SUN's Paul West: "After this week's election, the president faces a political fate worse than a plateful of broccoli: [Dem] control of both houses of Congress extending into a second Bush administration, if there is one" (11/8).

DALLAS MORNING NEWS' Carl Leubsdorf: "Who knows -- anti-incumbent fever may rage so strongly the Democrats will win the White House and the Republicans will capture Congress" (11/7).

From Columnist Jeff Greenfield's questions candidates should be asked: "Why are poor people poor? ... What has been the best change in your lifetime about the way Americans live? What's been the worst?" (N.Y. POST, 11/8).

GOP consultant Eddie Mahe: "There is going to be some kind of health care legislation in '92. [The president] cannot just sit back and react to Democratic legislation" (Julia Malone, COX NEWS SERVICE, 11/6).

Columnist Mike Royko on a few of Bush's unfavorite things: "Health care. That's part of the compassion thing. I've got it, the compassion thing. Sickness is bad, health is good. Been sick, didn't like it. Been healthy, felt good. Health care, all for it. Best thing when you're sick ... But who's gonna pay for it. Can't have the socialism medicine thing ... Try running. Running is good ... Running and walking. Better than socialized medicine" (CHICAGO TRIBUNE, 11/5).

WASH. TIMES' Wesley Pruden: "Bush is naturally attracted to the kind of campaign that Dick Thornburgh ran in Pennsylvania: mild, meek, dignified, and a disaster ... Suddenly all the people who wanted to 'let Reagan be Reagan' are terrified they won't be able to 'keep Bush from being Bush'" (11/8).

Manchester UNION LEADER publisher Nackey Loeb: "The Democrats are making their case against Bush but no one, Bush included, is defending the conservative ideas and principles of the GOP ... We know no one better for that task than Pat Buchanan ... Run, Pat, run!" (11/7).

*9 LOUISIANA GOVERNOR: EDWARDS, DUKE SPAR IN SECOND DEBATE
 The 11/6 debate between ex-Gov. Edwin Edwards (D) and state Rep. David Duke (R) "brought the campaign to a new level of intensity" as the two "traded verbal jabs and faced some of the harshest questioning to date." Edwards "painted himself as a healer and coordinator" and "depicted Duke as a divisive candidate whose message is undercut by racial and ethnic hatred." Duke "accused Edwards of being a corrupt politician who traded jobs for campaign contributions during his 12 years as governor" (Ed Anderson, N.O. TIMES-PICAYUNE). Panelist/"black television reporter" Norman Robinson asked why "minorities shouldn't dislike" Duke: "I am scared, sir. I've heard you say that Jews deserve to be in the ash bin of history. I've heard you say that horses contributed more to the building of America than blacks did." Duke, asked if he would apologize, "repudiated the Klan": "Of course, I apologize for the things I've said" (John Hill, Monroe NEWS-STAR). Edwards: "In Texas and Iowa the Klan people have already announced that they're coming down here to help their friend, Mr. Duke" (AP/TIMES-PICAYUNE). TIMES-PICAYUNE header: "Rhetoric veers from the truth" (11/7).

DUKE "ANYWHERE BUT LA" TOUR: Duke has made "few campaign stops" in LA since the 10/16 runoff, while Edwards has been "meeting voters around the state." Duke, on "Donahue" said he appears on national TV "because it's a free way of reaching [LA] voters." But Edwards "said he believes that Duke is seeking the national audience because he plans to run for president. ... Whether or not Duke is using national TV "as a springboard for a presidential bid, he is clearly using them as a way to gain contributions." Duke has built his list "to 100,000 people. He raises much of his money by writing to them and appealing for money" -- reports showed "nearly half of his contributors live outside [LA]" (Tyler Bridges, TIMES-PICAYUNE, 11/7).

"JUST SAY NO": TIMES-PICAYUNE header: "Bush asks N.O. teacher for advice on election." Sue Ellen Lyons: "He said he wanted to do the right thing to help Edwin Edwards, but wasn't sure of the best approach to take" (11/7).

CROSS-EYED: Christians for Truth led by Rev. Jimmy Tharpe ran a full-page ad in NEWS-STAR: "[Edwards] actually mocked the crucifixion of our Savior. ... there are a few liberal clergy who are actually asking Christians to vote for him. Because, they say, they're worried about David Duke's past." Duke "has sinned; every Christian has. But he has repented for his sins, and has had a perfect Christian voting record in the House. ... There's not been any mention by the media (in the present campaign) of Edwards' anti-Christ actions. Meanwhile, the newspapers have repeated every error [Duke] ever made in his lifetime" (11/7).

UN-CONVENTIONAL WISDOM: The Nat'l Assn of Recording Merchandisers, who "earlier committed to bring 2,000 to 3,000 people" to N.O. 3/92, said it "will definitely move its 1992 convention ... if David Duke is elected" (11/7). Patti Sue Plumer, "one of the nation's top middle distance runners," said she would be "in favor of moving the Olympic Trials" from N.O. if Duke is elected (McMillen, TIMES-PICAYUNE, 11/7).

QUICK CHECK UNDER THE HOOD: Duke says his welfare attacks are "not racist": "It's no more racist than saying that welfare is racist because most welfare recipients in the state are black." Though Duke insists "he does not want to eliminate welfare, just reform it," some of his proposals are "in place already, while others would require" state Leg. and fed. approval -- "which he will have a hard time getting" (Hill, NEWS-STAR, 11/6). Edwards: "People like [Duke] stir up passions by suggesting erroneously that all these people are out there sitting on their butts and drawing welfare ... He doesn't tell them that 69,000 are old people who cannot get out of bed or out of their homes, that 200,000 of them are young children and the rest are disabled who cannot see or hear or speak or move their limbs" (Fogel, NEWS-STAR, 11/6).

RECALL: N.O. TIMES-PICAYUNE header: "Don't count on recall effort to set matters straight." Atty Ted Schirmer said he is "ready to start circulating recall petitions no matter who wins." Public Affairs Research Council's Mark Drennen notes most states require valid signatures from 25% of all registered voters, while LA petitioners need 33% of RVs: "It would be difficult if not impossible to collect 744,000 valid signatures in a period of six months ... the present law must be changed" (Jack Wardlaw, 11/6).

GUMBO: Columnist John Maginnis notes, "the danger" of Edwards' alliance is "the message it may send to the common folk that it's business as usual" (NEWS-STAR, 11/6). Washington AFRICAN-AMERICAN header: "Klansman threatens Black Republicans' recruitment" (11/9). CA Gov. Pete Wilson (R): "I would say disown him, except we've never owned him -- and we don't want to. ... There's no place in the [GOP] for [that] kind of racism or Nazi tactics" (L.A. TIMES, 11/7).

POLLS: 2 LA Business 2000 polls conducted 10/24 and 11/4 by Verne Kennedy, surveyed 800 voters each; margins of error +/- 3.5%. 10/24: Edwards 42.8%, Duke 35.3%. 11/4: Edwards 51.1%, Duke 28.3%. Adjusted for "hidden vote": 10/24: Edwards 51%, Duke 49%. 11/4: Edwards 56%, Duke 44% (NEWS-STAR, 11/7). A statewide poll conducted 11/21-25, 28-31 by students at Southeastern LA U., surveyed 767 registered voters; margin of error +/- 3% showed Edwards over Duke 42.6% to 28.2%. They "did not report how the sample was picked" and did not correct for a Duke "hidden" factor (TIMES-PICAYUNE, 11/6).

10 LOUISIANA GOVERNOR: "VOTE FOR DUKE. CREATE A FUHRER"

The following 3 spots, produced by "Politics Inc." for the LA Dem Party, began airing last night (Politics Inc., release):

"GENERAL": [Gen. Stroud in full military garb with American flag in background]. TEXT: "I'm Major General Ansel M. Stroud, head of the Louisiana National Guard. For 47 years, I've served my country with pride. David Duke is a Nazi sympathizer who openly admired Adolph Hitler, who glorified Nazi Germany as recently as 1989. David Duke's political behavior has been outrageous, shameful, and un-American. It would be a disgrace to ask our men and women in the National Guard to serve with a Nazi sympathizer as their commander in chief." [Video of Gen. Stroud in full military uniform with American flag in background.]

"NAZI": ANNCR: "In 1969, David Duke said, 'I am a National Socialist. You can call me a Nazi if you wish.'" [Video: Goose-stepping Nazi soldiers, with above quote on screen]. In 1976, he organized a meeting of a Nazi group which called for the release of all Nazi war criminals. In 1988, he hired a former American Nazi Party captain to manage his 1988 presidential campaign, and in 1989, David Duke was caught selling Nazi books and tapes from his legislative office." [Video: Nazi soldiers and flags with swastikas throughout the commercial, which ends with a shot of Adolf Hitler giving the Nazi salute to shouts of 'Sieg Heil.']

TAG: "Vote for Duke. Create a Fuhrer."]

"NEWSCAST": TEXT: Script, read by woman meant to be a news anchor, with Duke's face on screen behind her. "Today, yet another major corporation announced its plans to move out of state." After brief TV "fuzz," TV reporter appears on screen standing next to construction site and reads: "Louisiana has lost thousands of jobs since Duke became governor. And the worst is yet to come." Another brief TV "fuzz" cut, followed by anchorman saying: "The state's bond rating has taken a nose dive. Business leaders blame Governor Duke." Another quick cut to a reporter in the field who says: "Tourists are no longer to Louisiana." Finally, one newsman, outdoors, presumably near the state capitol in Baton Rouge, says: "I'm Peter Hackis in Baton Rouge. The national boycott of Louisiana is leaving the state's economy in a shambles." The spot ends with TV "fuzz" and a graphic reading, "David Duke. Bad news for Louisiana."

EDWARDS MEDIA: In the latest reporting period, ending 10/27, Edwards had $468,000 cash-on-hand, while Duke had less than $262,000. "As a result, Mr. Edwards has been broadcasting [TV] ads for a week with no response from Mr. Duke, who has had to rely on two televised debates with Mr. Edwards and appearances on national talk shows to get his message across. ... Rather than dwell on Mr. Duke's controversial past Mr. Edwards [TV ads] attempt to portray a grim picture of what would happen to [LA] if Mr. Duke should be elected. Against images of padlocks on factory gates and employees that vanish from their workplaces, one commercial states, 'Unless Edwin Edwards is elected Governor, [LA's] shaky economy may collapse'" (Suro, N.Y. TIMES, 11/8).

*11 MAYORS: ROUND II

HOUSTON: State Rep. Sylvester Turner "may pull 90 percent of the black vote in the second round" against developer/ex-Whitmire transit chief Bob Lanier. "That means he might need as little as a third of the white vote to become the city's first black mayor" (Bernstein/Simon, HOUSTON CHRONICLE). Lanier is relying on the Hispanic vote to "provide him the edge he needs to win," but first-round turnout in Hispanic precincts "was lower than in mostly black and white areas" (11/7). "Lanier rejected Turner's challenge to cap campaign spending during the runoff at $400,000 each." Lanier spent $1.1M by late October, compared to Turner's $500,000. Defeated Mayor Kathy Whitmire said she hasn't decided whether to make an endorsement. But Whitmire press aide Dawn Dancy is "openly considering joining the Turner campaign." Whitmire aide David Berg "said most Whitmire supporters lean toward Turner." The runoff will "probably" be held 12/8 (Bernstein, HOUSTON CHRONICLE, 11/7).

SAN FRANCISCO: Public Opinion polls conducted before the election 11/5 indicated Mayor Art Agnos would defeat ex-Police Chief Frank Jordan head-to-head. "But the polls failed to predict Jordan topping Agnos on Tuesday." Jordan scored a surprising 32% to Agnos' 28%. Agnos "predicts he will fare better in a two-man race, without challenges from other liberals." Neither Supervisor Angela Alioto, City Assessor Richard Hongisto or Supervisor Tom Hsieh have said whether they would endorse either Jordan or Agnos. Hsieh "pledged early in the campaign to endorse Jordan in a runoff against Agnos." But has since said "'all bets are off' because of what he called underhanded campaign attacks by Jordan to discredit the Hsieh campaign." An exit poll conducted by S.F. WEEKLY's David Binder showed Alioto and Hongisto supporters will vote for Agnos in far greater number than for Jordan, whereas Hsieh's supporters are inclined to vote for Jordan" (Eric Luse, S.F. CHRONICLE, 11/6). Jordan "may now expect a boost ... from the momentum and media coverage likely to accompany his stronger than expected showing" (Jerry Roberts, S.F. CHRONICLE, 11/6).

12 ANALYSIS: KEYSTONES OF PENNSYLVANIA UPSET

SELECTED VIEWS: Wofford pollster Mike Donilon on the health care issue: "I witnessed this kind of phenomenon in 1989 when I was doing the polling for Doug Wilder where a lot of people would not rate the abortion issue as the top issue facing the state, but it was something that they cared about intensely. In this case, they cared about this [health care] issue intensely, and it was also affecting their lives on a day to day basis" ("HOTLINE Forum," C-SPAN, 11/7). Columnist Alan Keyes: "Politics, like nature, abhors a vacuum. Mr. Thornburgh's fate illustrates a new truth of the observation" (W. TIMES, 11/8). Columnist Earl Caldwell: "The vote from Pennsylvania tells us that voters are onto the Reagan/Bush scam. And they've had all they intend to take" (N.Y. DAILY NEWS, 11/8). NRSC chair Phil Gramm (R-TX): "Some messages in Pennsylvania were clear to a blind man: You can't let the opposition define the issues for you" (W. TIMES, 11/8). Columnists Evans/Novak say Bush aide's calling the Thornburgh campaign 'the worst in history' "inconveniently collides" with the fact that Thornburgh advisors included longtime Bush advisors Teeter and Ailes (N.Y. POST, 11/8). Thornburgh: "Politics has become the preserve of the campaign consultant more than it has of the candidate. Thoughtful candidacies, substantive candidacies are beginning to mean less and less" (W. TIMES, 11/8). W. TIMES editor Wesley Pruden: "Mr. Thornburgh let the Democrats define his campaign, and the Republican establishment, led by the chairwoman, a liberal dilettante, played cozy with Democratic themes" (11/8).

KEY COUNTY FACTOR: Few results were more stunning than Sen. Wofford (D) winning in the 3 suburban Philadelphia counties; Delaware, Montgomery and Bucks. They are generally considered basic to a Republican winning strategy in the state. In 1988, the three counties provided George Bush a margin of 157,063 votes; since he carried the state by 105,143, they clearly represented the Bush margin of victory.

	STATEWIDE	DELAWARE	BUCKS	MONTGOMERY	3 COUNTIES
Thornburgh (R)	45.2%	49.6%	48.9%	48.5%	49.0%
Wofford (D)	54.8	50.4	51.1	51.5	51.0

Dukakis (D)	48.8	39.4	39.3	39.2	39.3

POLL ON HEALTH INSURANCE: The Kaiser Family Foundation and the Harvard School of Public Health commissioned a post-election Pennsylvania poll by KRC Research of Boston. 1000 PA adults were interviewed by KRC 11/5-6, margin of error +/- 3% (Kaiser Family Fdn release 11/7). "The distribution of reported voters by candidate is nearly identical to the actual proportion of PA voters" on Tuesday: Poll -- Wofford 57%, Thornburgh 43%; Actual -- Wofford 55%, Thornburgh 45%.

*13 COLORADO: WIRTH "TIES" TO DREXEL ALLEGED BY GOP

CO GOP chair Bruce Benson called Sen. Tim Wirth (D) a "'congressional godfather' whose failure to push for reform laws let ... troubled [S&Ls] get deeply involved in junk bonds." Benson also "questioned" Wirth's decision to let an executive at Drexel Burnham Lambert "manage Wirth's assets in a blind trust" (Sanko, ROCKY MOUNTAIN NEWS, 11/7). Wirth, denying it, "said the trust was set up specifically to avoid any conflict of interest": "We are two arms' lengths away from any financial transactions." Though there is no GOP candidate yet, Benson "said he didn't know how" the nominee will use the issue (DENVER POST, 11/7).

*14 ILLINOIS: MACDOUGEL EYES DIXON CHALLENGE

"Encouraged by promises of support and what he sees as an anti-incumbent mood," businessman Gary MacDougel (R) "is on the verge of challenging" Sen. Alan Dixon (D) (Robert Estill, COPLEY/Springfield STATE JOURNAL-REGISTER). MacDougel, a senior advisor in Bush's '88 campaign, "said he is leaning towards" a run. He said NRSC chair Phil Gramm (R-TX) "has assured him that he would receive the 'maximum' financial assistance -- about $1 million -- from the [cmte]." MacDougel has also been encouraged by Gov. Jim Edgar (R) and a recent CHICAGO TRIBUNE poll showing Dixon with a 45%-29% Fav/Unfav. Another poll by Dem pollster Mike McKeon showed Dixon with a 55%-18% approval rating (11/7).

*15 SOUTH CAROLINA: HARTNETT SET TO GET IN AGAINST HOLLINGS

"Unless he gets cold feet," ex-Rep. Tommy Hartnett (R) "soon will announce he will challenge" Sen. Fritz Hollings (D) (Lee Bandy, Columbia STATE). "Sources say" Hartnett delayed making a decision "for personal monetary reasons": "Tommy is not a wealthy man and he has to worry about who is going to foot his salary for a year." Hartnett owns a real estate company in Charleston and "would have to give up much of that to campaign." NRSC chair Phil Gramm (R-TX) "met recently with Hartnett and according to sources, got the impression [Hartnett] was raring to go." Consultant Richard Quinn, who did all 3 Hartnett rep. races and was "involved in his unsuccessful bid for [LG] four years ago," said Hartnett "was sounding more and more positive" (11/7).

*16 UTAH: WILL OWENS OR WON'T HE?

Rep. Wayne Owens (D-02) has found "it may be easier to raise money for a House race than a Senate" run: "Some business groups ... tell me if I run for the House, then a donation is automatic. But if I run for the Senate, then they have to go back and review and debate everything. That's because business groups think" a GOP-controlled Senate "is possible," but "on the House side, they don't have any hope of a [GOP] majority." Owens will announce his decision 11/11, and "said he has not yet made up his mind" (DESERET NEWS, 11/6). Salt Lake Co. Dem chair Earl Hardwick resigned "to work full time" for Doug Anderson (D) (DESERET NEWS, 11/6).

*17 MARYLAND: LANDOW ROW LEAVES SCHAEFER IN PARTY LIMBO

"Public repudiation" of Gov. Wm Donald Schaefer (D) "by his party and its defiant" chair Nate Landow, "may signal the end of the long era of [MD] politics dominated" by Schaefer (Fraser Smith, Balto. SUN). Landow's ability "to raise money is valued by those who would succeed in power after Mr. Schaefer is gone." And Schaefer, "no cultivator of party loyalty, had few steadfast friends when the showdown came" (11/8). Schaefer tried to oust Landow as chair, but the MD Dem. exec. cmte backed Landow 23-12 (Thompson, Balto. EVENING SUN, 11/7). Landow supporters also defeated an attempt to "strip him of authority to spend party funds, speak for the party or arrange visits" by presidential hopefuls. LG Melvin Steinberg (D), a "potential" '92 gov hopeful, attended the meeting to "lend support" to Landow. Schaefer aide Pam Kelly said the vote "should not be viewed as a defeat for the governor" (Tapscott, W. POST, 11/7). W. TIMES header: "Schaefer a lamer duck after fighting Landow." The two met after the vote and Schaefer is "expected to call a truce" (Spangler, 11/8).

BANK SHOT: Rep. Tom McMillen (D-04) "met last year" with OTS regional dir. Jack Ryan "to discuss ways to keep open an ailing" First Fed. S&L of Annapolis -- "then facing a federal takeover" -- "whose major investors included a longtime McMillen business associate and campaign fund-raiser." A tape, made "secretly" by McMillen, shows Ryan offered "no assurances to McMillen." But Ryan called the taping "highly unusual" and said he is "outraged." McMillen: "When an elected official cannot go and talk to a regulator we have gone overboard [on ethics]. ... I in no way implied that this institution should be kept open or [that regulators should] get off their backs" (W. POST, 11/7).

*18 KENTUCKY: VULTURES CIRCLING OVER HOPKINS

Rep. Larry Hopkins' (R-06) "landslide loss" to Gov.-elect Brereton Jones (D) "has created a political vacuum" which Lexington Mayor Scotty Baesler (D) "is ready to fill." Newly elected Sec/State Bob Babbage (D) is also "mentioned" as a possible Hopkins challenger (Al Cross, Louisville COURIER-JOURNAL). Baesler "was already leaning toward running" for Hopkins' seat, but Hopkins' loss "in every county in the district ... makes a congressional race more likely." Baesler, who finished 2nd to Jones in the Dem primary, also "wouldn't rule out another bid for governor." Hopkins said he would seek an eighth term next year, "but the prevailing view in political circles" is that election fallout "will force him to retire." Babbage: "There's no question his constituents were looking for an alternative. His base has collapsed." Hopkins lost the 6th CD by 24%, and his home county by 14% (11/7). Under header "2nd rout in row has GOP factions talking peace," C-J's Cross writes Hopkins' loss "has prompted some factional opponents" to talk peace "in the interests of the party." Rep. Jim Bunning (R-04): "We have two choices -- we can go forward or we can split up." Bunning "has been mentioned" as a candidate for Sen. Wendell Ford's (D) seat next year, but "many" GOPers think Gov. primary loser Larry Forgy would be best. Forgy "has indicated" he "would prefer to stoke" a '95 Gov. campaign (11/7).

*19 NEW JERSEY: DON PARDO, TELL THEM ABOUT OUR PARTING GIFTS

Two days after losing Leg. control, Dems "began the 1993 campaign" when outgoing Sen. Pres. John Lynch (D) "suggested they might use the last two months in power to repeal" the $2.8B tax increase that was the major cause of their demise (Heidorn, PHILA. INQUIRER). GOPers, who used their opposition to the increase as the centerpiece of their campaign, "acted as though Lynch had dropped a dead mouse at their feet." If Lynch "carried through on his threat ... it would force [GOPers] to make Draconian cuts in [NJ's $15B] budget or raise taxes on their own" (11/8). GOPers, "who now maintain that they never intended to repeal all of the tax increase, ... reacted with sputtering outrage" (King, N.Y. TIMES, 11/8). Assemblyman/NJ GOP chair Bob Franks: "It would be an absolute outrage for the [Dems] to take such unilateral and irresponsible action" (INQUIRER, 11/8). Assembly Min. leader/Speaker-elect Chuck Haytaian (R): "All of a sudden the [Dems] are trying to be responsible" (N.Y. TIMES, 11/8). The GOP reaction "served to underscore how much more difficult it will be for the [GOP] to escape responsibility for [NJ's] problems -- fiscal and otherwise -- once they are in power." NJ Dem exec. dir. Steve DeMicco: "In the voter's minds what they voted for was repealing the $2.8 billion. ... I think there is something to be said for giving [GOPers] the opportunity to do it right" (INQUIRER, 11/8).

*20 OHIO: "NO ORDER IN THE COURT" AND IT MIGHT HELP GLENN

On 11/3, AKRON BEACON JOURNAL reported OH Supreme Court Justice Craig Wright (R) had purchased Super Bowl tickets from, and vacationed with, a person he subsequently wrote a court opinion clearing of a conflict of interest charge. Wright then accused fellow Sup. Court Justice Andrew Douglas (R) and his secretary of tapping into his office computer to get personal information to leak to the paper; BEACON JOURNAL says neither is a source. On 11/5, Douglas accused Wright of the leaking charge, Wright denied making it, Douglas called him a "f... liar," "Wright grabbed Douglas by the throat and pinned him [to the floor] in a choke hold." Wright is 6'5" and Douglas 5'9" (11/7). OH Highway Patrol announced its investigation 11/7; Wright said the assault never happened; Douglas was unsure whether to file an assault charge; ex-Chief Justice Frank Celebrezze (D) said the court was becoming "the laughingstock of the nation;" Chief Justice Thomas Moyer (R) issued a statement that said both Wright and Douglas regret the incident; Douglas disavowed the statement (11/8). BEACON JOURNAL editorial calls on higher ethical conduct on the part of both Wright and Moyer: "The irony of all this is that Moyer, Wright and Douglas led the successful effort to rid the court of the dictatorial and often unethical rule" of Celebrezze" (11/8). Douglas has been among those mentioned as a possible challenger to Sen. John Glenn (D) next year and is said not be related to fellow Columbus resident Buster Douglas.

*21 SENATE WATCH: MCCARTHY LAUNCHES PRE-EMPTIVE STRIKE ON BOXER

"In an unusual skirmish," LG Leo McCarthy (D) "criticized" primary opponent Rep. Barbara Boxer (D-06) "over a TV ad about the Clarence Thomas hearings" (Jerry Roberts, S.F. CHRONICLE). In the 30-second spot, "scheduled to begin airing [11/10] in a few cities on a very limited basis," Boxer makes a "gender-based appeal for her candidacy," saying "there are only two female members" of the Senate while "viewers see a picture of conservative" Sen. Strom Thurmond (R-SC) at the Jud. Cmte hearing on Thomas' alleged "sexual harassment": "When I watched those Senate hearings on TV, it hit me how out of step the Senate is." McCarthy, "charging that Boxer missed important votes in [DC] while making the ad in [CA], also accused her of hypocrisy in using the sexual harassment issue, because she co-sponsored a House civil rights bill that exempts Congress from strict enforcement of the measure's provisions on sexual harassment": "You can't claim to be good on the issue of sexual harassment if in fact you've sponsored legislation which exempts Congress from sexual harassment laws. What she's doing is trying to ride the wave and hoping she gets news coverage off a token TV buy." Boxer manager Rose Kapolczynski, "shrugging off McCarthy's attack," notes Boxer "marched to the Senate with other women House members to demand an investigation" of Anita Hill's "harassment complaint against Thomas [and] feels passionately about the issue." Roberts adds, "The exchange between the two Bay area contenders for the seat held by retiring Senator Alan Cranston [D] is unusual both because it comes so early and because it was initiated by McCarthy, who is the front-runner" (11/8).

"B" SEAT: H.D. Palmer, spokesperson for Sen. John Seymour (R), "offered this obviously subjective analysis" of the PA Senate race: "It does throw one bit of political conventional wisdom out the window. An appointee who the political pundits say can't beat a more widely known opponent turns around and surprises everybody by pulling off an upset victory. Dianne Feinstein, call your office" (Mark Barabak, COPLEY/S.D. UNION, 11/8).

Coleman on GOP gains in VA: "This is a repudiation of the current [admin.] and the presidential hopes of" Wilder (FOX).

LAST NIGHT: ABC, NBC, CBS, and CNN led with Magic Johnson's announcement. PBS' "MacNeil/Lehrer" led with economic news.

TAX BREAK: ABC's Cokie Roberts: "GOPers warn that today's tax cut could be tomorrow's tax increase." NBC's Andrea Mitchell: "The voters have spoken and the politicians are listening. Leaders in both parties today predicted that Congress will approve an election year tax cut. ... It's a direct challenge to the President." Sec/Treas. Brady: "There are a lot of lessons to learn from what the American people said on election night. The overwhelming result in my mind was that ... nowhere, in the United States, were any tax increases sent forth. "BUSH PROMISES" -- NBC's Lisa Myers on leadership: "There has been more high drama in Bush's first three years than anyone one would imagine. He took the nation to war ... had to deal with a hard-line coup in the Soviet Union ... these moments defined Bush as a leader." Pres. historian Barbara Kellerman: "I think any person who has said George Bush is not a leader has underestimated this man." Myers: "Historians are quick to add that Bush's flashes of vision are restricted to foreign affairs and almost always arise from an opportunity" ("Today," 11/8).

On Tsongas: "The [FDA] declared him a safe alternative to the sleep aid Halcion" (NBC, 11/7).

POOL REPORT #7

NATO POOL H

NATO POOL, BUSH ARRIVAL SECOND DAY

November 8, 1991

(Rome, Italy)

POTUS arrived at the Sheraton NATO HQ at 8:30 a.m. and was asked his reaction to Magic Johnson's shocking news. "Oh, its sad. Good man," Bush told your pool. We also saw the arrival of Canada's PM, who arrived in a small four-door Lancia. The pool was supposed to see the other 14 NATO chiefs but, true to NATO press handling, the other leaders arrived at the back door.

EUROPEAN POLITICAL COOPERATION

PRESS RELEASE

DECLARATION ON YUGOSLAVIA

(Extraordinary EPC Ministerial meeting, Rome, 8 November 1991)

The European Community and its member States held an extraordinary Ministerial meeting in Rome today, 8 November 1991, to assess the Yugoslav crisis. They took note of the evaluation presented by Lord Carrington of the 8th plenary session of the Yugoslav Conference which took place in The Hague on 5 November.

They were deeply concerned at the fact that the fighting and indiscriminate bloodshed continued in spite of repeated cease-fire commitments. In this respect, they drew attention to the unacceptable threats and use of force against the population of Dubrovnik. Moreover, commitments for deblocking of barracks and withdrawal of JNA forces, to which parties subscribed on 18 October in The Hague and were reaffirmed on 5 November, have not been complied with. They reiterate that the use of force and a policy of fait accompli to achieve changes of borders are illusory and will never be recognised by the Community and its member States.

The Community and its member States also noted with great concern that the basic elements of the proposals on behalf of the Twelve put forward by Lord Carrington, aimed at a comprehensive political solution, have not been supported by all the parties. As a consequence, the negotiating process has been put in jeopardy.

In the light of the seriousness of the situation, the Community and its member States have decided to take the following measures:

- immediate suspension of the application of the trade and cooperation Agreement with Yugoslavia and a decision to terminate the same Agreement,
 - restoration of the quantitative limits for textiles,
 - removal of Yugoslavia from the list of beneficiaries of the General System of Preferences,
 - formal suspension of benefits under the Phare programme.
- Yugoslavia has not been invited to take part in the next Ministerial meeting of G-24 on 11 November 1991.

Furthermore the Community and its member States asked those member States which are also members of the the Security Council of the United Nations to invite the Security Council to reach agreement on additional measures to enhance the effectiveness of the arms embargo.

They have also decided to invite, in the same way, the UN Security Council to take the necessary steps towards imposing an oil embargo.

Additional economic and political measures are being considered for implementation when and wherever necessary.

The Community and its member States decided that positive compensatory measures will be applied vis-à-vis parties which do cooperate in a peaceful way towards a comprehensive political solution on the basis of the EC proposals.

The Community and its member States remain firmly committed to such a comprehensive political arrangement. They stress that the only way out of the crisis is through negotiations in good faith without the use of force.

~~In this respect they recall that~~ The prospect of recognition of the independence of those Republics wishing it, can only be envisaged in the framework of an overall settlement, that includes adequate guarantees for the protection of human rights and rights of national or ethnic groups. They urge parties concerned to prepare forthwith legal provisions to this end.

The Community and its member States are also extremely concerned about the humanitarian aspects of the crisis and insist that all parties involved allow emergency aid to reach the communities in need and the many persons displaced by the fighting. All involved should be reminded of their personal responsibility in complying with the basic humanitarian standards set out in the Geneva Conventions.

Despite the continuous violations of the cease-fire, the Conference is the only place where talks on a peaceful solution can continue among all parties.

In the light of the above, the Community and its member States launch an urgent appeal to the parties concerned to create the necessary conditions for an early continuation of the Conference. They urge other countries to support their positions.

Annex to the Declaration

If the economy of a member State is seriously affected by Yugoslav counter-measures, then the Community and its member States will show their solidarity by taking effective and concrete corrective measures towards the member State concerned.

POOL REPORT # 6

November 8, 1991

VARIOUS MOTORCADES AND MITTERRAND MEETING

Your pool was taken on a variety of motorcades from the hotel to the Ambassador's residence, Ambassadors residence to the Embassy, the Embassy to the Sheraton, none of which produced any sightings of the President or of anyone else. At the Sheraton, Bush came forward to greet and shake hands with French President Mitterrand outside the room in which they were to meet. When we were escorted inside, Bush and Mitterrand were in the front of the room facing two parallel couches, each seating three officials. For the U.S. these included Baker, Scowcroft, and Sununu.

Both Presidents were asked to comment on the status of U.S.-French relations. Bush said, "I think they're very good, but I am not taking questions ..." Mitterrand said nothing. As we were being shown the door, Mitterrand said to Bush in French something on the order of, 'This questioning -- this is an American tradition?' Bush replied in English, "Not one of our happier traditions."

VATICAN POOL

Friday, November 8, 1991

(Rome, Italy)

Warning: This is all color, no substance.

The pool was escorted into Vatican City well in advance of the President's arrival. St. Peter's Square was closed to the public and heavily guarded for the arrival and departure of the motorcade.

Arrival ceremonies were in Cortile San Damaso -- Saint Damasus Courtyard, named for an early pope -- which is a cobblestoned plaza surrounded by the papal palace and secretariate buildings. The palace, on three sides of the courtyard, is a four-story structure with mottled mustard colored stucco on the first level and mostly windows on the top three with the stucco giving way to marble at the top. A one-story covered passageway closes the courtyard.

A formation of the 25 Swiss guard in their 16th Century uniforms -- blue & yellow stripe blouse & pantaloons, black helmet with red plumes, carrying 8-foot halberds or spears -- lined up in two rows to one side of the palace entrance, which had the usual red carpet.

Also on hand were 12 men in white tie, tux and tails with lots of gold chains, medalions and medals. They are the "gentlemen-in-waiting," a collection of Italian aristocrats holding honorary positions as sort of a remnant from the time when the Popes had a temporal kingdom and a court.

Mrs. Bush and Mrs. James Baker arrived 20 minutes before the Pres and were greeted by Bishop Dino Monduzzi, the prefect of the pontifical household. Both ladies were in black dresses. Barbara had a black shawl and tiny black lace scarf over her silver hair. Mrs. Baker had a full-size black lace scarf.

The President arrived at 1241 - 4 minutes early - and was greeted by Bishop Monduzzi. He and James Baker shook hands with the gentlemen-in-waiting and was escorted into the palace by the Bishop, with lots of handwaving.

Scowcroft, Sununu and others in the entourage were left in the courtyard and later escorted in through a separate door.

Inside, you heard Bush's remarks to the seminarians in a routine almost identical to the President's first visit with the Pope here two years ago. Bush and the Pope first had a lengthy audience and then your pool was escorted into a vast room with the Pope, the Bushes and the Bakers standing in a row. The pope presented Bush with a gold, silver and bronze tryptich and Mrs. Bush with a silver rosary with mother-of-pearl beads. Bush complimented the Pope on his English as a zillion photographers took pictures. The two then walked through a hall into another vast hall where hundreds of American seminarians were gathered, cheering and applauding when the duo appeared. The President worked the crowd like a New Hampshire political rally and joked and hello-ed. After the remarks you heard, the seminarians, as they did two years ago, broke into a rendition of God Bless America, of which Bush heard only a few phrases before darting out the door for the press conference, for which he was late. The rest of the day, motorcades here and there, hanging around, walking into and out of various locales was uneventful.

POOL REPORT # 9

November 8, 1991

Motorcade to Airport
and Air Force One Rome to The Hague:

Motorcade uneventful. Bush brought Ag. Sec. Ed Madigan and U.S. Trade Rep Carla Hills back briefly as he gave them a tour of the plane.

As the pool fired a question or two he mentioned something about just having had an exhaustive press conference and said he was just showing them the plane.

Asked if we're going to hear something on Soviet aid, if there's going to be a breakthrough at the EC on trade barriers, and if he's going to talk about Yugoslavia tomorrow, the answers were: that he was getting ready to talk about those subjects on the plane.

Reminded of his speech tomorrow, he made a face and when the pool expressed a similar view he poked his head back around the corner and made another one.

Arrival at The Hague:

Clusters of people watched the motorcade along the long route from the airport in the chilly night air.

Queen Beatrix met the Bushes in the courtyard of Noordeinde Palace. It was a simple arrival ceremony, including the customary playing of national anthems, honor guard review, red carpet. Bush and the queen stood side by side on a platform facing the palace, the president in black all-weather coat and the queen wearing a black wool coat with a fur-trimmed cape and a dramatic fuschia hat.

A USIS official told us that tonight's dinner at the palace would be a small affair--22 persons. On the American side, the guest list included the Bakers, Sununu, Scowcroft, Carla Hills. Further info on the palace, the menu, etc. wasn't available but we're told USIS can provide the details later.

OPENING STATEMENT - PRESS CONFERENCE

This Alliance has been an extraordinary success. The Cold War, the division of Europe and the East-West military struggle are no longer subjects for leaders but for historians.

But, I won't dwell on NATO's successful past. I want to talk about NATO's future. The Rome Summit is a landmark event, for here we took decisive steps in transforming the Atlantic Alliance. In so doing, we demonstrated that NATO does not require a Soviet enemy to hold it together.

Yesterday, we approved a new strategic doctrine, reflecting the revolutionary changes that have taken place. NATO forces will be smaller, more mobile, more flexible -- able to protect any ally against any threat.

The doctrine provides for the elimination of U.S. land-based short-range nuclear forces, based on the recent U.S. initiative.

Today, we approved a Declaration on Peace and Partnership, establishing an extensive liaison program with the emerging democracies in the East. This program will address specific needs of these countries - defense conversion, civil-military relations, the environment, and so on. We institutionalized our relations with these countries by establishing a North Atlantic Cooperation Council. The Council will hold its first meeting in Brussels next month.

We also issued a special NATO statement on the dramatic transformation of the Soviet Union. The statement welcomes the new opportunity for democracy throughout the USSR and lays out agreed principles to guide our policies during these momentous changes. It stresses that the revolution taking place should be carried out peacefully, democratically, and with full respect for individual and minority rights. We are also calling upon Soviet and Republic leaders to implement CFE, START, and all other international obligations, as well as to maintain safe and responsible control of nuclear weapons. We are going to intensify our consultations in NATO to maintain a common Atlantic approach to the volatile situation in the Soviet Union.

This Summit gave me the chance to share with our partners our view on the future of the Alliance and the United States in the security of Europe:

- European and American security is indivisible, and the U.S. will maintain its commitment to Europe in this new era.

- Because of its Atlantic character, the Alliance cannot be replaced, even in the long run. The Alliance is the guarantor of the security and stability of Europe.
- We are developing a more balanced partnership with our European allies.
- European unity will strengthen the Alliance. It will neither diminish the need for NATO, nor substitute for it in the defense of its members.

Our allies share these views. Chancellor Kohl's remarks in Bonn on Wednesday could not have been more clear on this. We and our allies have succeeded in adapting and renewing this Alliance for the new world.

FOR PRIME MINISTER KIICHI MIYAZAWA, PRIME MINISTER OF JAPAN

Dear Kiichi,

I am so sorry about having had to delay the trip. I do want to reschedule it at a time convenient to you.

From our standpoint, it cannot be before the last week in December or early in January.

With that in mind, though there are no matters of an emergency nature to discuss, I would love to have you come to visit Barbara and me at Camp David in the interim. If this has any appeal, I would suggest any of the following dates:

Arrive Camp David Friday, November 15th, in the afternoon, spend Friday night, with a meeting Saturday morning. Leave Camp David after lunch November 16th.

Also convenient for me would be either November 22nd and 23rd, or November 29th and 30th.

I foresee a very informal get-together with very limited staff participation.

EAS/USDA

U.S. PROPOSAL CALLED FOR 90% CUTS OVER 10 YEARS STARTING IN 1991

NOVEMBER, 8, 1991

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: SECRETARY MADIGAN

SUBJECT: MACSHARRY PROPOSAL FOR AGRICULTURE NEGOTIATIONS

Yesterday I spent two and one-half hours with Commissioner MacSharry. He described to me a 30-30-30 proposal that is essentially the same as the "Compromise Paper" being circulated by the Dutch. The proposal, both as represented by Commissioner MacSharry and in the Dutch paper, are unacceptable for U.S. agriculture for the following reasons.

Commissioner MacSharry's 30 percent proposal on export subsidies was in budgetary terms. A 30 percent reduction in budgetary terms would leave us with only $700 million for export subsidies while leaving the EC with $8.4 billion, 12 times the U.S. level. What makes it even more unacceptable is that with the expected budget savings from the proposed reforms of their domestic agricultural policy, the EC will be able to export the same quantity that they export now. This means we will not regain any of the markets that we have lost to subsidized competition from the EC.

The Dutch paper acknowledges that market access is one of the major objectives of the Round. With a 30 percent tariff reduction, we would gain no access to the EC market. The EC's tariff on corn would still be 105 percent and the tariffs on wheat and beef would be 120 percent. Additionally, they continue to insist on increasing protection for certain commodities.

It is my assessment that this proposal would provide no benefits to U.S. farmers. In many respects, what the EC is now presenting as their final offer is essentially the same offer we walked away from in Heysel. U.S. farm organizations and our friends in Congress have made clear to me that they will not accept a proposal that does not contain meaningful market access opportunities and substantial quantity cuts in export subsidies.

The proposal does not provide any benefits for developing countries and emerging democracies in Eastern Europe and Central and South America. These countries will not gain any access in any third country markets nor in the EC market. Furthermore, they will continue to suffer the consequences of EC dumping of surplus stocks on world markets.

I gave Commissioner MacSharry a list of issues on which we are prepared to talk and to be helpful. While we are prepared to continue to negotiate with the EC and other Contracting Parties to the GATT, the EC should understand that neither we nor the Cairns Group countries are prepared to accept a deal that does not benefit U.S. and other farmers around the world.

4:30 p.m. EST UPDATE

FOREIGN TRAVEL (Rome/Barry Schweid, AP) -- President Bush, asserting he would not curb his foreign travels, fired back at domestic critics Friday after scoring a landmark success at a NATO summit meeting. "I'd say to the isolationists in the United States, look at your history. Don't pull back into some Fortress America." In fact, Bush said he would reschedule a trip to the Far East that he had scrubbed this week.... "I am not going to neglect that part of my responsibility as President because of some carping," Bush said at a news conference. With gathering emotion, Bush lashed out at his critics, even reaching back to appeals by some leading Democrats at the height of the Gulf crisis that he pursue a diplomatic rather than a military solution to Iraq's occupation of Kuwait. "We would still be sitting there, fat, dumb and happy, with Saddam Hussein maybe in Saudi Arabia," Bush said.

SOVIET AID (Reuter) -- Rep. Gephardt, challenging President Bush on foreign policy, proposed that the U.S. transfer $3 billion from defense to lead an allied effort to aid Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union. Gephardt said Bush had "canceled the wrong trip" when he postponed his Asian tour...and likened his foreign policy to "a Cold-War containment strategy minus the Soviet menace." In a speech prepared for delivery at Northwestern University, Gephardt called for favorable trade status for the USSR, a stabilization fund to back convertibility of the ruble, guarantees for foreign investors, increased grain sale credits and technical aid. "It's an investment," he said.... "George Bush doesn't 'get it.'"

MARTIAL LAW/YELTSIN (Moscow/AP) -- Russian federation President Yeltsin today imposed martial law in the secessionist Chechen-Ingush territory, Russian media said, making good on his pledge to prevent the breakup of his republic.

POPE/PRESIDENT (Vatican City/Reuter) -- President Bush discussed prospects for a Mideast peace and the Yugoslav crisis in an exceptionally long visit with Pope John Paul II.... "We had a major 'tour d'horizon' (general overview) about all the trouble spots," a broadly smiling Bush said of the visit, which put him behind schedule.

RECESSION (AP) -- President Bush said the country's present economic performance does not fit the definition of a recession, citing a return to growth during the July-September period. However, private economists maintain it is too soon to say whether the recession is over.

PHILLIPS CONFIRMED (Reuter) -- The Senate has confirmed Susan Phillips as a member of the Federal Reserve Board. The action came Thursday night by voice vote without debate.

MIDEAST TALKS (Rome/Reuter) -- Direct peace talks between Israel and its Arab neighbors will resume very soon, Spanish Prime Minister Gonzalez said. He also believed multilateral talks on Mideast problems would start within three weeks..., "although I say this with far less conviction," he said after talks with Secretary Baker.

-more-

PATRIOTS/SAUDIS (AP) -- The U.S. intends to sell 14 more Patriot missile batteries to Saudi Arabia in yet another move to shore up the kingdom's military defenses, Pentagon sources said. The $3.3 billion sale, if approved by Congress, includes an arsenal of 700 surface-to-air missiles for the systems, said the sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

IRAQ/NUKES (Vienna/Reuter) -- Iraq successfully tested key parts of a nuclear bomb just months before its Kuwait invasion but could not have produced a complete weapon, U.N. nuclear experts said.

ARCTIC OZONE HOLE (Reuter) -- U.S. pilots will fly modified ER-2 spy planes into the stratosphere next week to begin a five-month mission to search for evidence of an ozone hole in the Northern Hemisphere, the project's chief scientist, Jim Anderson, said.

SPOTTED OWL (AP) -- A fourth federal agency has joined the dispute over protection of the northern spotted owl, accusing the Fish and Wildlife Service of badly underestimating impacts on the Northwest's economy.

HOMELESS (UPI) -- As the first cold spell of the winter sent temperatures plummeting to record lows in a number of cities, the U.S. Conference of Mayors said the numbers of homeless mentally ill are growing in their cities. A survey of 22 cities found that the number of homeless severely mentally ill people had risen 7 percent since 1990. The survey showed a 9 percent increase in the number of homeless who are both mentally ill and addicted to drugs and alcohol.

AIDS (UPI) -- ... "The President has been in office three years and has given one speech on AIDS, and it's time he wakes up and realizes that the AIDS epidemic affects all Americans," said Dan Bross, executive director of the AIDS Action Council. His latest remarks [today] were "a step in the right direction," Bross said.

QUAYLE (Scripps Howard/Los Angeles) -- The revelation that Magic Johnson is infected with the AIDS virus should not cause the federal government to do more about AIDS research or promoting safe sex, Vice President Quayle said. Quayle added the proper response to the epidemic is sexual abstinence. "That's a sure cure," he said. "It's the proper response. I think there is a lot of virtue in abstinence." Quayle said neither he nor President Bush should be playing a larger role in pushing for either AIDS prevention or encouraging research aimed at finding a cure. "We're doing a lot," he said, meeting with political writers during a fund-raising swing through Southern California.... "On a per capita basis per patient, there's more money going to AIDS than cancer or heart disease."...

He bristled when asked about Doonesbury comic strips slated for use over the next two weeks.... "The strips are ridiculous, ludicrous, outrageous," he said, while admitting he hadn't seen them. "My office has tried to show them to me, but I didn't want to look."...

Quayle denied that his role in next year's presidential campaign will be to act as the Bush Administration's "hatchet man." "I will be the Republican Party's articulate spokesman," he said. But he seemed excited at the possibility that Gov. Cuomo might seek the Democratic nomination. ###

Barbara Bush and Valentino walk through a display of his designs.

When in Rome

While President Bush was busy at the NATO summit, Barbara Bush took in the ancient Roman culture. The First Lady, escorted by Sandra Carraro, wife of Rome's Mayor Franco Carraro, was given a taste of Rome that included a tour of the Capitoline Museums and a visit with top Italian designer Valentino. Mrs. Bush and the wives of the other summit leaders were invited to tour an exhibit of 300 of the designer's most famous outfits, including one that had been worn by Jacqueline Onassis. Later Mrs. Bush, who spent 45 minutes with the designer, joked that she would not have been as generous as the women who had donated their Valentino dresses to the exhibit. "I would just keep wearing it," Valentino quoted Mrs. Bush as saying.

While President Bush attends the NATO summit in Rome, his wife, Barbara, takes time out for fashion. Yesterday, Italian designer Valentino accompanied the first lady on a tour of his exhibit at the Academy of Fashion.

Markings

X Barbara Bush checks in with one of the year's first Christmas tips in the December issue of Ladies Home Journal: Recycle old gifts. "I mean, what am I going to do with 400 scarves?" said the first lady. "So I just rewrap them." She added that she and President Bush "do not do presents" for each other, and a new Camp David holiday rule dictates that "the children can only bring one present for each child. . . . I'm not trying to cut down on consumer buying. I'm just saying maybe people will find out you can't buy love with presents for children. The thing that really counts is sitting with that arm around them, reading."

Jack Larson, who played Jimmy Olsen in the 1950s Superman series, will guest on Saturday's episode of Adventures of Superboy on Channel 17. He'll play a nervous, nerdy-type guy. "I kind of wring my hands a lot like Richard Nixon," said Larson, 58. The actor-turned-producer says that he's often recognized, and that "to be remembered for Jimmy is a wonderful thing."

Nato summit wives visit fashion house

ROME (UPI) — While their husbands discussed the future of the Atlantic alliance at the NATO summit conference, Barbara Bush and other wives of the presidents and heads of government visited Rome's famed Campidoglio city hall and the fashion house of Valentino.

Wherever they went the genial Mrs. Bush was the star attraction for scores of photographers and reporters who were kept at a distance by a large turnout of police, some of them on foot and others on horseback.

Dressed in a black jacket with red buttons and a silk pleated skirt and wearing several strings of pearls, the American president's wife was escorted during the visits by Joan Secchia, wife of U.S. Ambassador to Italy Peter Secchia.

At the 16th Century Campidoglio the group was shown around by Rome Mayor Franco Carraro and Minister of Social Affairs Rosa Russo Jervolino, one of the two women in Prime Minister Giulio Andreotti's cabinet. Andreotti's wife Livia was also among the official escorts.

Reporters said the wives were particularly impressed by ancient Roman flooring dating from the first century in the city hall's famous "Wolf" salon.

They also toured the Campidoglio's museum and admired the recently restored equestrian statue of the Roman emperor Marcus Aurelius, now kept under glass in a courtyard to protect it from pollution.

At the fashion house of Valentino, Italy's top designer, they visited an exhibition marking Valentino's 30 years of activity and titled "30 years of magic" .

Walking through the display of high fashion, lit by soft lighting, Mrs. Bush said, "It is beautiful, like being in fairyland."

Valentino himself and his artist associate Giancarlo Giammetti showed the wives around the rooms, including his office, decorated by some of Giammetti's paintings.

"Now I understand how one can be so creative in surroundings like this," the president's wife said.

At the end of the visit Mrs. Bush invited Valentino to visit the White House.

"I will certainly accept," the fashion designer told reporters. "Mrs. Bush is strong and lively - and then she adores dogs."

First Lady Gets Taste of Roman Culture

By DANIELA PETROFF

Associated Press Writer

ROME (AP) — While President Bush was at the NATO summit, his wife Barbara was taking a Roman holiday.

In true "dolce vita," or easy life, style she started her day at mid-morning, with a tour of the Capitoline Museums overlooking the Roman Forum.

Escorted by Sandra Carraro, the wife of Rome's mayor Franco Carraro, Mrs. Bush was given a taste of ancient Roman culture, including a look at the recently restored equestrian statue of Emperor Marcus Aurelius.

At one point she stepped aside in a hurry when told that the mosaic floor she was standing on was an original from an ancient Roman villa.

Mrs. Bush also called on Italy's "numero uno" designer, Valentino, at his downtown palazzo. She saw an exhibit of 300 of his most famous outfits, including a white embroidered dress once worn by Jackie Kennedy Onassis.

Mrs. Bush and the wives of other summit leaders — including Canada's Mila Mulroney, Greece's Marika Mitsotakis and Carmen Gonzalez of Spain — were invited to Valentino's for a tour of the exhibit.

Mrs. Bush, dressed in a black jacket with bright red buttons worn over a silk printed pleated skirt, and wearing a pearl necklace and matching earrings, spent 45 minutes with the designer.

At the end of the tour, she said: "It was beautiful, just like being in a fairyland."

Later Valentino told reporters that Mrs. Bush, referring to the large number of women who had donated their Valentino creations to the exhibit, joked that she would not have been so generous. "I would just keep wearing it," Valentino quoted Mrs. Bush as saying.

The first lady also visited Boys Town on the outskirts of Rome, where she had lunch with the 135 boys and 25 girls who self-govern the community, established in 1945 by an Irish priest for adolescent war victims.

Signora Cuomo Shines as 'First Lady' On Summit Eve

By FRANCES D'EMILIO

Associated Press Writer

ROME (AP) — Hold that red carpet. Barbara Bush may be in town, but Matilda Cuomo arrived first to steal the show.

To judge by all the fuss — unofficial, of course — America's "First Lady" is the wife of the N.Y. governor and Democratic possibility for the 1992 presidential race, Mario Cuomo.

While President Bush and his wife Barbara were en route to the Italian capital Wednesday night for a NATO summit, Mrs. Cuomo, of Sicilian origin, was making at least her third TV appearance in Rome this week. She was in Italy to speak about child neglect.

Interviewers peppered her with questions about her husband.

"Mrs. Cuomo, your husband is often called the Hamlet of the Hudson," one journalist on state television said. "Can you tell us if he'll run for president?"

The nationwide La Stampa newspaper filled a quarter-page Wednesday with a picture of Mario Cuomo, his thumb held up in a victorious air, and next to it, an interview with Mrs. Cuomo.

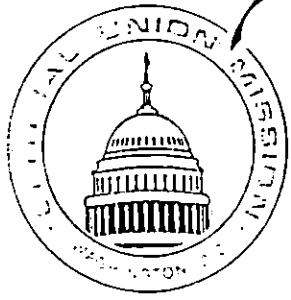

"Mrs. Cuomo, would you be happy if your husband accepted the candidacy?" asked the interviewer.

Mrs. Cuomo answered in the tradition of a true Italian politician, if not an American. "I believe in fate, something will happen."

Mario Cuomo has "one great friendship, his wife Matilda, an intelligent and discreet woman," wrote Furio Colombo, one of the country's premier columnists, in a half-page paean to the governor that ran next to the interview.

Said Mrs. Cuomo, as she hurried from the forum to do another television interview: "I didn't mean to be here" during the summit. "It was an accident."

Not that she was unaware of the VIPs in town — Mrs. Cuomo said she was staying with the wife of Manfred Woerner, the NATO secretary-general.

CHRISTMAS IS AROUND THE CORNER

Washington, DC—Soon our thoughts will turn to Christmas and Christmas with our families. For the hungry homeless and poor, there are some thoughts of home, but home to most them is just a memory so far back in their past, that clouds of haze seem to cover even those precious memories.

There is hope! The Central Union Mission is a new home for many, where we take every opportunity to be feed, clothe, shelter, care and help them find the Lord, so they may start on the road to recovery.

It is Christmas at the Central Union Mission, that the children remember the most. We too, look back on Christmas's past and remember First Lady Barbara Bush and her visit to our mission.

Early in the morning on December 13th, 1989, Central Union Mission staffers decked in their Sunday best, stood ready to welcome our First Lady. Dr. and Mrs. Rich escorted her in as she met the staffers. She looked lovely in her Christmas green dress.

Family Services Director Jo Etta Dornes prepared a program in which the First Lady read and told the Christmas Story from the gospel of Luke. The warmth and graciousness radiated from Mrs. Bush. No one anticipated the love and affection she freely gave to the children.

preschoolers. Those were golden moments for the mothers, children and the Central Union Mission staffers who were deeply moved by this elegant stateswoman. As she departed, she left Christmas treats for the entire staff.

Remember to call our Family Services Director, Jo Etta Dornes, between 9:30—4:30 at 202-745-7118, Tuesday through Friday for your personalized Christmas Gift Bags, for you to fill this holiday season.

NEW YORK (AP) — Barbara Bush and Nancy Reagan have at least one thing in common: They both recycle gifts at Christmastime.

"Of course," Mrs. Bush says in the December Ladies' Home Journal. "I mean, what am I going to do with 400 scarves? So I just rewrap them."

President Bush and his wife "do not do presents" for each other, she said. And the couple have a new rule for holidays at Camp David: "The children can only bring one present for each child."

Mrs. Bush says she would like to see more people move away from "thrusting so many material things upon their children."

"I'm not trying to cut down on consumer buying, but I'm just saying maybe people will find out you can't buy love with presents for children. The thing that really counts is sitting with that arm around them, reading."

Public Rushes In for First Look at Reagan Library

By KENNETH R. WEISS
TIMES STAFF WRITER

SIMI VALLEY—After waiting for a week of invitation-only celebrations to end, Caroline Hair) of Simi Valley was not to be deterred from touring the Ronald Reagan Presidential Library moments after it opened its doors to the public Wednesday.

"This is where I wanted to celebrate my birthday," said Hair, who just turned 40, as she pushed her 2-year-old in a stroller through the museum portion of the complex. She said her adoration of Reagan began when she was a Goldwater Girl in the seventh grade, supporting the presidential candidacy of former Sen. Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.) in 1964.

Reagan had shown up at a campaign event and signed a white felt hat she wore as part of her Western costume. "I think Ronald Reagan will be the greatest President we've every had," Hair said. "The museum confirms it."

Hair was one of nearly 600 people who pressed into the Reagan library and museum within its first hour.

A steady stream of cars snaked up Presidential Drive throughout the day, carrying admirers of the former President and others who were not invited to Monday's formal dedication of the library or Tuesday's Community Appreciation Day for local leaders and their friends.

By closing time, 2,636 visitors has passed through the museum.

The gift shop was mobbed with souvenir hunters immediately after the doors opened. Jamie Zinn of Agoura Hills led a mad dash for the store before seeing the museum's exhibits.

She and her husband, Dwight, arrived at the cash register triumphant, after scooping up six autographed copies of Ronald and Nancy Reagan's biographies and a collection of Reagan's speeches. "We collect these things, we have them on display," Jamie Zinn said.

Not all of the first-day visitors were admirers of the ex-President.

"You don't have to be a Reagan fan to be curious," said Burleigh Wilkins, a UC Santa Barbara philosophy professor who lives in Moorpark. "I think he should have been impeached, but that's ancient history now."

Said Breck Petrick of Newbury Park: "We may live in Reagan Country, but we are not Reagan fans." "The truth of the matter is, we would never pay to come here."

As a way to thank the surrounding community for its warm reception, library officials decided to waive the usual $2 admission fee through Sunday for Ventura County residents. Regular admission is $2 for visitors ages 16 to 61, $1 for those 62 and older and free for children 15 and under.

The library, off Madera Road, between Simi Valley and Thousand Oaks, is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and noon to 5 p.m. on Sundays.

The History of the Library

1981-83: The Reagan White House and Stanford University begin discussing plans for a possible Ronald Reagan Presidential Library and a museum after the Hoover Institution, a leading conservative think tank affiliated with Stanford, offers to act as a repository for Reagan's presidential papers.

November-December, 1983: Talks stall over White House's desire to have a related Reagan public policy center run by the Hoover Institution. University officials expect to run such a center themselves.

February, 1984: Both sides formally announce that the Ronald Reagan Presidential Library will be located at Stanford, assuming a site for the complex can be found.

March, 1985: President Reagan gives his approval to a 20-acre library site, clearing the way for selection of an architect and creation of a private foundation for financing.

June, 1985: After lengthy negotiations, Stanford University trustees agree to accept the library and small museum but refuse the Hoover-run policy center. The policy center will now probably be located in nearby Menlo Park.

November-December, 1986: The library plans are challenged by residents, students and others who say the building would be an eyesore. Still, the Santa Clara County Planning Commission gives preliminary approval for construction of the library at Stanford.

April, 1987: Faced with mounting opposition from Stanford faculty leaders and local property owners, Reagan Presidential Foundation trustees announce that the library will be located in Southern California instead.

November, 1987: One hundred acres of donated land in rural eastern Ventura County is selected as the site for the library and public policy research center.

September, 1988: Local environmentalists and Reagan Foundation officials resolve differences that threaten to delay library construction. Library officials agree to protect three rare plant species on the site and the foundation agrees to open the library to the public at 10 a.m. to avoid rush-hour traffic. In late September, the Ventura County Planning Commission unanimously approves plans for the library.

November, 1988: Groundbreaking.

July, 1991: The Ventura County Board of Supervisors unanimously approves the Reagans' request to be buried on the grounds of the library, despite charges by an environmental group that the two-plot cemetery will result in more visitors to the library and more pollution in the county's air.

November, 1991: Library was dedicated Monday and opened to the public on Wednesday.
