Bush Goes to the Theater

November 10, 1991

Pool Report

The president came back from Camp David by motorcade Sunday afternoon, partly to attend the last performance of Michael Crawford performing the music of Andrew Lloyd Webber at the National Theater.

The president and first lady were accompanied for the evening by Senator Alan K. Simpson, and his wife. They arrived just as the show was about to begin and sat in a box on the left side of the theater. Although Mr. Bush sat closest to the wall, both he and the first lady, who was dressed in a bright, red suit were easily visible to much of the audience.

Patrons of the sold out show were abit put out by the intrusion of your pool. "Hey, do you guys have seats?" someone yelled. The management also was unhappy because there were no extra seats and the pool was considered a nuisance in the aisles. A compromise was reached when the reporters were allowed to stay in the theater and the photos were kind enough to wait next door in a bar. Mags were also set up in the lobby--another annoyance to the patrons

But when Michael Crawford recognized the president at the end of the show, the audience clapped, just as it had when he first arrived and when he returned from intermission after a mix and mingle with the cast. He's lucky he wasn't at a sporting event, where the fans are usually much ruder.

The presidential party remained for every encore, returning to the White House at 10.40 p.m. Thirteen vehicles were required to make the three-block from the White House to the National. All returned safely.

DEPUTY ASSISTANT TO THE PRESIDENT

FROM: BEITINA BRENDA ^{cb}
OFFICE OF NATIONAL SERVICE

SUBJECT: Amy Grant

I thought you might be interested to hear that Amy Grant has been working with the Office of National Service to help thank and recognize "Points of Light".

Amy Grant has been giving tickets to Daily Points of Light in each city along her current fall tour. To date, we have coordinated 10 of her shows to have a representation of Daily Points of Light in the audience. In a couple of cities Amy has been able to meet with the Points of Light backstage.

Media advisories are sent out to various media markets in each city she performs in which produces a great deal of press.

Dear George and Bar,

Just returned from the Presidential Youth Awards ceremony, a truly heartwarming experience. After it was over, Mike O'Reilly, my boss, turned to me and said that this is the 3rd year in a row that the President has personally made the awards (that Carter may have done it once!) and that the President's personal interest is truly wonderful.

Anyway, I just wanted to let you know that your love and affection for the youth in the country came through loud and clear!

Nov.10, 1991,

Dear Billy,

This is just to say I loved hearing from you from Argentina. I look forward to seeing Menem here. I like him and respect the job he's doing.

Maine did take a real pounding from the sea; but already it is bouncing back. All our precious books and pictures on that first floor were either soaked and ruined or, as was the case with most of 'em, swept out to sea.

Mother, bless her, is frail but hanging in there- full of love as always.

Dear Mr. President,

Thank you for your birthday card!

I am in Argentina and we are expecting the largest and most extensive Crusade in the history of my ministry. I deeply appreciate your message to President Menem. He has invited me to see him this coming Monday, shortly after which he comes to the States and will be seeing you.

This is certainly a potentially wealthy, progressive country. I have toured here twice before and have never quite understood why they are not one of the leading industrial countries in the world.

I got a wonderful letter today from your brother John, inviting me to visit them when in New York. He mentioned your Mother, and I think of her constantly, and Ruth and I pray for her daily. Ruth had to stay home this time because of her bad hip.

I hope the loss of Mr. Thornburgh in Pennsylvania does not discourage you. There is no doubt that the economic situation will be a major factor next year, but in my judgment your opponents have no person of major stature to run against you. The people will never forget all the wonderful things that you have done for the country and the world during your first term. You can certainly count on my support.

When I saw pictures of your home in Kennebunkport I felt as though I were watching a disaster of my own home. You and Barbara have made Ruth and me feel so much at home at that wonderful place. I am delighted you are rebuilding it.

I wish I could have been with you all at the dedication of the Reagan Library. He was kind enough to invite me but I felt I had to keep my appointments here. I'm sure that he and Nancy understood. You have certainly been a wonderful and loyal friend to him.

With much love to Barbara and the family.

As ever,

The President

RELEASES

November 12. Release of Owning Farmland in the United States (Agriculture). The report reveals that U.S. farmland is held by fewer owners now than at any other time in this century. Nearly half of all U.S. farmland is held by about 4 percent of all farmland owners. Over 40 percent of the 833 million acres of private farmland is held by owners or organizations that do not operate farms themselves.

November 13. Release of the Producer Price Index (PPI) for October (Labor). Finished goods prices edged up by 0.1 percent in September, but are decreasing at a 0.9 percent annual rate through the first nine months of the year. Markets expect little or no change in the October index.

November 14. Release of the Livestock and Poultry Situation and Outlook Report summary (Agriculture). The report indicates that large red meat and poultry supplies are pressuring livestock and poultry prices downward. During 1992, retail prices of red meat and poultry are expected to be lower than in 1991, due to abundant supplies.

November 14. Release of the Consumer Price Index (CPI) for October (Labor).

November 14. Release of the Retail Sales figures for October (Commerce). Sales rose by 0.7 percent in September, more than offsetting a 0.6 percent decline in August. Most of the September gain resulted from a jump in retail automobile sales. Markets are projecting a slight decline in the level of sales in October.

November 15. Release of figures on industrial production and capacity utilization for October (Federal Reserve Board). Industrial production edged up by 0.1 percent in September following no change in August. Employment data already available point to little change in the October industrial production index.

November 15. Release of figures on business inventories for September (Commerce). Inventories eased by 0.1 percent in August following no change in July. Data already available for September showed manufacturers' inventories rising by 0.4 percent.
