PRESIDENT BLAMES SENATE DEMOCRATS FOR RECESSION

Citing Resistance To Capital Gains Tax Cut,

Bush Defends His Own Economic Potpourri

NEW YORK -- President Bush, on the political defensive as he begins his reelection drive, Tuesday put the blame for the recession on Senate Democrats and offered a stew of remedies that mixed everything from tort reform to a plea to credit card firms to drop their interest rates.

In a third of a series of Bush-Quayle fund-raising events, Bush portrayed himself as having a full program to deal with the nation's ills and said the Democrats have resisted that program at every turn....

Bush's address prompted little applause or enthusiasm as the President moved from one topic to another, rarely devoting a few seconds to any theme....

Bush met with more than a dozen Jewish leaders after the campaign speech, in a session requested by the White House.

Shoshana Cardin, president of the conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations, expressed satisfaction with Bush's responses during more than an hour of discussion. While Bush would not discuss the timing or amount of loan guarantees, she said, he repeated his previous commitment to aid for Israel to absorb Soviet immigrants.

Cardin, saying the Jewish leaders were "very pleased" with the session, said Bush displayed "rock-solid recognition of the need for Israel to be secure." (Ann Devroy, Washington Post, A6)

Bush Trounces Liberals, Just Like In '88

NEW YORK -- The liberals are back, at least as far as George Bush, the not-yet announced candidate for re-election, is concerned.

Still battling troublesome public opinion polls and groping for ways to strike back at the Democrats, the President took up a weapon that had proved extremely potent in the 1988 campaign: painting himself as the guardian of the political center and the Democrats as far-out liberals.

In a speech at a $2.2 million fund-raising event at the New York Hilton that seemed to try out virtually every campaign theme the Republicans are preparing for 1992, Bush referred to the leadership in Congress and the Democrats in general as "liberals" more than 10 times in a 25-minute speech.

America, Bush declared, is "tired of hearing a liberal litany." The "liberal leadership" in Congress, he said, is blocking his efforts to bring the country out of an economic recession. (Andrew Rosenthal, New York Times, A20)

Bush Accuses Democratic Congress Of 'Tawdry, Negative' Campaign

President Bush, at a Manhattan fund raiser that took in more than $2 million for his 1992 campaign, accused the Democratic Congress Tuesday of conducting a "tawdry, negative" campaign to convince Americans that times are bad.

Plying what appears to be a budding campaign theme at the fund-raiser, Bush told the crowd that Congress had blocked many of his major economic efforts....

Bush said, "I honestly believe the American people want to move in a new direction. They're tired of hearing a liberal litany.... Sometimes, I get this sinking feeling that the Democrats feel they can win only when times are bad. What a tawdry, negative way to view this, the greatest country in the world."

In response, Rep. Gephardt said in Washington that Bush had not offered "any sense of leadership on any of the issues that might be able to pull us out of the economic mess that we are in."

Gephardt said Bush has blocked efforts to expand unemployment benefits and keeps pushing for a capital gains tax cut for the wealthy but no break for the middle class, indications he is "frozen by his insensitivity to what people are feeling."

(Jack Sirica, Newsday)

Bush Defends Foreign Policy, Rips Mitchell

NEW YORK -- President Bush attacked congressional critics of his foreign travels again Tuesday in a scathing speech that also appeared to accuse Sen. Mitchell of personally triggering the recession. ...

The President linked blame for the recession to Mitchell's unyielding stand against cutting the tax rate on capital gains.

Bush says the tax cuts would stimulate the economy and, at least in the short run, offset the "obnoxious deficit" with higher tax collections as investors cash their chips.

Although Mitchell did not respond directly, a Senate aide said, "The President is repeating himself," adding that Mitchell apparently "scored some points" by proposing a comprehensive economic growth package last week.

(Frank Murray, Washington Times, A1)

Bush's Re-Election Speeches Hit Democrats On Economy

President Bush, struggling against a stubbornly sagging economy and trying to keep Americans from turning their unhappiness against him, is blaming Democrats in his early re-election forays.

In the face of polls that show his popularity sliding, Bush on Tuesday stepped up his anti-Democratic rhetoric, throwing the blame for the nation's ills on "the liberals that control the Congress."...

In a recent interview Ron Brown predicted Congress-bashing would be a frequent Bush re-election theme but predicted it would have limited success.

"What President Bush needs to realize and the American people will realize is that the President will be running against a Democratic nominee for president, not the Congress," Brown said.

(Rita Beamish, AP)

SOME CREDIT CARD GIANTS CUTTING RATES

Some of the nation's biggest credit card issuers are experimenting with a revolutionary way to attract customers -- cutting their prices.

Breaking the logjam that saw seven of the top 10 issuers charging interest rates of 19.8% or higher, No. 6 First Chicago Corp. has quietly cut the rate for some of its 10 million cardholders to 14.4 percent. The move follows the announcement by No. 11 Banc One of Ohio last week of a new 13.9 percent credit card with a $25 annual fee.

Support for the lower rates came from an unexpected source Tuesday when President Bush interrupted a fund-raising luncheon address Tuesday in New York to jawbone down the cost of credit cards. (David Sands, Washington Times, C1)

BUSH SHOWS CUOMO-LIKE INDECISION ON ECONOMY

Call Mario Cuomo indecisive? You should see President Bush agonizing over what to do to prod the economy. So self-assured on foreign policy, the President has been frozen for weeks on a prospective economic-growth package as he watches his poll ratings slipping as steadily as some recent economic indicators. Bush doesn't want to become an unemployment statistic himself next year. Yet his advisers are torn over what course to set as election year approaches. His vacillations have come to resemble Governor Cuomo's celebrated inability to make up his mind on a presidential bid. (Tom Rawn, AP)

EDITOR'S NOTES: "A Banking Bill That Suits No One," by Jerry Knight, appears in The Washington Post, page C1.

CUOMO ON VERGE OF DECISION; BRADLEY POSSIBLY CONSIDERING RUN

Amid fresh evidence that President Bush's job approval rating is on a downward slope, Democratic eyes are turned to New York and to Governor Cuomo. And, it turns out, to New Jersey, and Sen. Bradley. Cuomo is on the verge of deciding whether to become the seventh candidate to pursue the Democratic presidential nomination.... Bradley, according to party sources, may also be thinking about entering the race. An aide to Bradley, however, called these accounts "speculation without foundation."

(Walter Robinson, Boston Globe)

DEMOCRATS TO HOLD SERIES OF NATIONAL PUBLIC HEARINGS ON DOMESTIC WOES

Congressional Democrats plan to hold a series of nationwide public hearings in December to portray a sense of concern for the nation's domestic problems that they hope will contrast with the perception that President Bush is more interested in foreign affairs.

Sen. Mitchell began planning the hearings last month and is set to announce them later this week.

But the opportunity they could open for Democrats grew in importance when Sen. Wofford rode an activist domestic agenda to a surprise victory last week.

The hearings will focus on the increasing lack of affordable health care.

The Democrats also want to keep the pressure on Bush with a variety of other domestic issues, including unemployment benefits, campaign spending reform, education reform, highway funding and medical leave.
(Mitchell Locin, Chicago Tribune)

DEMOCRATIC FIELD LOBBIES AFL-CIO
Convention Hears Criticism Of Bush, Call For Health Care

DETROIT -- The six major Democratic presidential candidates bid for labor support here Tuesday with sharp attacks on President Bush's management of the economy and a call for speedy action to provide health care to all Americans....

Governor Wilder said that Bush and former President Reagan use "greed and prejudice" to pit the middle class against the poor "in order to divert attention from the real culprit...voodoo economics."...

Paul Tsongas drew the biggest response of the afternoon with a stinging rebuke of Bush, saying the President's use of Willie Horton in the 1988 presidential campaign had fostered a climate that made the candidacy of David Duke possible.

"David Duke is the son of George Bush," Tsongas said.

Six White House Hopefuls Woo Labor, Bash Bush

DETROIT -- ...Sen. Kerrey said President Bush appears "to look only through the lens of a pollster."

"(Bush) stands in the Rose Garden of the White House and says no to parental leave, no to increases in the minimum wage, no to extended unemployment benefits, no to giving strikers the right to come back to the job after they've settled their dispute, no to a woman's right to choose, no to civil rights," Kerry said.

PROTESTERS URGE PRESIDENT TO SPEND MORE MONEY ON AIDS

NEW YORK -- About 100 AIDS activists protested in Manhattan Tuesday to urge President Bush to spend more money on AIDS.

One protester, Shraga Lev, of Manhattan, said he attended the rally "to protest Bush's murderous neglect of the AIDS crisis."

AIDS ACTIVISTS CALL BUSH INVITATION TO MAGIC JOHNSON

Some AIDS activists say President Bush's request that Magic Johnson join the AIDS Commission, though welcome, is only window-dressing. But members of the panel say it demonstrates a White House commitment to fight the disease....

[Regarding the announcement of the invitation to Johnson], Gregory King, spokesman for the Human Rights Campaign Fund, an AIDS advocacy group, said, "We're more interested in having the President follow the recommendations of the commission than focus on individuals. "There is no evidence President Bush has ever read any of the commission's reports, and he certainly has never implemented their recommendations or followed their call for greater presidential leadership." Rep. Rowland agreed that "Bush should do more." But he said Johnson might be just the individual to make him do so.... "Our report was really quite critical of the silence from the White House, but simply asking Johnson to be on the commission...means the President is willing to speak out on the issue," added David Rogers, a commission member and professor of medicine at Cornell University Medical College.

HEALTH PLAN WINS MAJOR SUPPORT

The movement for an overhaul of the nation's health care system gained an important endorsement Tuesday from an alliance of unions, major U.S. corporations and two former presidents.

The National Leadership Coalition for Health Care Reform, unveiling a plan for a broad restructuring of health care, brought together support from Chrysler Corp., Bethlehem Steel Corp., food, utility and paper companies, as well as former presidents Carter and Ford and some of the country's biggest unions....

The plan would require all employers to provide private health insurance to their workers or pay a payroll tax of 7 percent, matched by an employee tax of 1.75%, to help the government provide coverage.... Workers not covered on the job and the unemployed would receive private insurance policies purchased for them by the states, using funds from the 7 percent tax and related taxes....

Secretary Sullivan repeated his "most serious reservations" about the kind of plan offered by the coalition. "We must address the problems that are preventing so many smaller businesses from offering health insurance," Sullivan said. "An immediate objective should be to take steps to make insurance affordable for all businesses, and indeed all Americans."

$5.2 BILLION COMPROMISE NEAR ON JOBLESS AID

The White House and congressional Republican and Democratic leaders said late Tuesday they were close to agreeing on a compromise $5.2 billion package of extended benefits for millions of jobless workers whose regular benefits have expired....

The plan, offered by Rep. Rostenkowski, would provide up to 20 weeks of additional benefits for unemployed workers who have exhausted their regular benefits since last March or who will exhaust their benefits by next summer.

Congress And Bush Near Jobless Bill Agreement

...There are only one or two minor glitches," said Rep. Michel.

"My goal is to get this down there to the President by the end of this week," Michel said. "We want to make sure it passes muster down there (at the White House) and gets a presidential signature and get this thing behind us."...

"It would seem pretty clear we're getting close enough that with a little more work we'll get there," Richard Darman told reporters. (David Lawsky, Reuter)

BARR, AT CONFIRMATION HEARING, DEFENDS OPERATIONS AT JUSTICE
Early BCCI Probe Lacked Coordination, He Says

William Barr opened his confirmation hearings Tuesday by generally defending the Justice Department, especially its much-criticized inquiry into criminal activity at the BCCI....

Three of eight Democrats on the panel voiced support for Barr in the hearing. Sen. DeConcini said he favors Barr's nomination. Sen. Kohl said he was "inclined to support" it. And Sen. Simon said he believes "the President has chosen someone honest and capable."...

Asked what his priorities would be, Barr listed drug enforcement, violent crime, civil rights enforcement and white-collar crime. (Sharon LaFraniere, Washington Post, A2)

Barr Says He Has Put BCCI On Front Burner

Attorney General-designate William Barr said Tuesday he has taken control of the Justice Department's investigation of BCCI and that "all allegations that have surfaced are now being pursued aggressively."

Barr, testifying at his Senate Judiciary committee confirmation hearings, accepted personal responsibility for the complex international fraud probe and invited the senators to check his progress in the coming months.

"Starting from the time that I have been involved, I'll accept personal responsibility for performance in this case," Barr said. "And I'll be held accountable for it."

ATTORNEY GENERAL NOMINEE BACKS GUN CONTROL AS PART OF CRIME BILL

Attorney General William Barr delighted Senate gun-control advocates Tuesday by saying he would advise President Bush to sign crime legislation that included a ban on certain assault weapons.

Barr also told the Senate Judiciary Committee that he would not object to extending a proposed waiting period for handgun purchases to the type of assault weapons targeted in a Senate-passed bill....

"Ultimately," Barr said. "I would recommend the President sign a bill that had the Brady waiting period and the DeConcini assault weapons provision in it as long as we had other tough crime measures in it." (Steve McGonigle, Dallas Morning News)

GATES TAKES OVER AS DIRECTOR OF CIA

Robert Gates took over as director of central intelligence Tuesday with a promise to "move forward boldly" but in a spirit of cooperation with CIA personnel who may be apprehensive about his appointment.... President Bush, who attended the ceremony, said in opening remarks that he intended to keep U.S. intelligence capabilities strong despite the end of the Cold War and that he is confident Gates will be "a very strong and effective manager" in making the transition to "the complex problems of the 21st century."

BUSH, AT GATES' CEREMONY, PROMISES MORE SPIES

President Bush vowed Tuesday to strengthen U.S. intelligence in the post-Cold War world by increasing the number of human spies who collect information for the CIA.... Bush did not elaborate on plans to beef up human spying. But an Administration official said later that secret agents are "extremely important" in measuring political, military and economic intentions of foreign adversaries.

Although overall hiring by the CIA is expected to decline as part of efforts to reform the agency, "we will still be hiring clandestine officers," said the anonymous official.

WHITE HOUSE CLEARS HEAD OF AID ON ALLEGATIONS OF ETHICS VIOLATIONS

The White House Tuesday cleared Agency for International Development Administrator Ronald Roskens of allegations of ethics violations, saying it found only one violation that it concluded was "inadvertent and unknowing." C. Boyden Gray, in an 18-page report, directly contradicted an investigation by the AID inspector general's office that concluded Roskens violated federal law and ethics codes in accepting money from outside organizations....

The report, however, is unlikely to be the last word on the matter. The GAO has launched a parallel investigation at the request of Rep. Conyers.

BUSH AMONG 'DEAD' IN NEA-LINKED ART

A federally funded theater is exhibiting "death masks" of President Bush, Vice President Quayle and their wives among famous Americans who the artist says "should be dead." "The whole thesis of this exhibit is that these people...are opposed to recognizing the rights of what I call common Americans," artist Lee Brozgold said. "These masks are intended to be funny."... "They represent the old order," Brozgold said of his mask subjects. "They're outdated.... They should be dead."

BUSH SAYS U.S. MUST STRENGTHEN LINKS WITH ASIAN NATIONS

NEW YORK -- President Bush said Tuesday that Asia was just as important as Europe to U.S. security and prosperity and pledged to build a closer American partnership with countries on the Pacific rim....

Bush coupled his commitment to strengthen ties with a warning against a revival of old enmities between the U.S. and Japan....

"Japan-bashing has become a minor sport in the U.S. , and some in Japan have become equally scornful of the U.S. Both our nations must reject those who would rather seek scapegoats than tackle their own problems," Bush said. (Gene Gibbons, Reuter)

BUSH ANNOUNCES U.S. SENDING ENVOY TO LAOS

NEW YORK -- President Bush on Tuesday announced the U.S. will send an ambassador to Laos for the first time since communists took power in 1975 in a sign of gradually improving relations.

Bush, in a speech to the Asia Society, also praised U.S. cooperation with Japan and said he still intends to make a trip to the region at a later date....

The change in position on Laos is the result of quiet steps that have been undertaken by the two governments over several months.

U.S. officials said Laos has been helpful in furthering U.S. efforts to find American servicemen still missing from the Vietnam War and has worked with the Administration on narcotics control.

In addition, Laos has taken steps toward economic and political reform, Bush said.

"I am announcing that we will upgrade our relations with Laos and that we soon will place an ambassador in Vientiane," Bush said.

BUSH DEFENDS SENDING BAKER TO VISIT CHINA U.S. Will Upgrade Relations With Laos

NEW YORK -- President Bush Tuesday defended his decision to send Secretary Baker to China and announce the U.S. was upgrading its relations with Laos.

In a speech to the Asia Society here, Bush offered a broad policy overview for the Asian region and said the U.S. must remain "engaged" with China to bring change. "If we retreat from the challenge of building democracy, we will have failed many who have worked hard, even died, for the cause" in China, he said.

BAKER, ASIAN MINISTERS SQUARE OFF ON TRADE ISSUES

SEOUL -- Secretary Baker opened a face-to-face campaign Wednesday to convince some of America's toughest trading partners to relax their formidable barriers against many U.S. products.

"Major trading nations, the U.S. and Korea included, benefit from an active and viable and healthy multi-national trading system," Baker said at the opening of a meeting with South Korean Foreign Minister Lee Sang-ock....

As Baker and Lee posed for photographers in advance of their meeting, Baker was asked if he thought it fair that nations with open access to U.S. markets continued to exclude American products.

Baker said he intended to make the point in his discussions that "it is important that all countries that are interested in free and open trade do what they can" to ease restrictions.

An anonymous senior aide traveling with Baker conceded that the Administration was concerned with the domestic political implications of signs of discord between the U.S. and the Asian countries.

He referred particularly to a Malaysian proposal for creation of a grouping of Asian nations that would exclude not only the U.S. but also Canada, Australia and New Zealand. (Donald Rothberg, AP)

WHITE HOUSE AIDES STILL MULLING TIMING OF BUSH'S OVERSEAS TRIP

...White House officials are discussing rescheduling the two-week trip to Asia and Australia officials said Tuesday....

Administration officials appear to have rejected the possibility of beginning the trip after Bush attends ceremonies in Hawaii on Dec. 7 marking the 50th anniversary of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor. ("Short Takes," Washington Post, A17)

U.S. AND E.C. REACH ACCORD ON SUBSIDIES

The U.S. and the E.C. have forged a crucial compromise over the issue of agricultural subsidies that opens the way to a major overhaul of world wide rules governing trade, U.S. and E.C. officials said Tuesday.

Under the compromise, reached Saturday at a summit meeting between President Bush and E.C. leaders at The Hague, the E.C. dropped its outright refusal to reduce subsidies to farmers while the U.S. scaled down the level of subsidies it would consider acceptable, the officials said.

The officials stressed that the summit compromise set the framework for an accord but that hard bargaining is expected over key details.... The U.S.-Europe talks continued in Rome Tuesday night at a meeting between Secretary Madigan and the E.C.'s farm commissioner, Ray MacSharry. "I see signs now of some movement on all sides which makes me cautiously optimistic," Madigan said, according to news agency reports.

Carla Hills declined Tuesday to outline the shape of a possible farm agreement, but European and U.S. sources said cuts in subsidies are likely to be smaller than the Bush Administration originally demanded but would be spread over five years instead of 10. They said the agreement is likely to include a clause to review the agreement after five years, which could lead to further cuts in the subsidies. (Stuart Auerbach, Washington Post, G1)

HILLS SAYS U.S. DIDN'T CAVE IN TO E.C. ON AGRICULTURE SUBSIDIES

Carla Hills denied that President Bush backed down in agricultural trade talks with the E.C., saying the U.S. had suggested a two-stage approach favored by Germany....

News accounts of the [Saturday meeting in The Hague] said Bush agreed to scale back the U.S. proposal on farm trade reform, which called for a 75% cut in domestic subsidies and barriers to imports, and a 90% cut in export subsidies, all over 10 years.

Several reports said the U.S. had offered a five-year plan to cut domestic subsidies and import barriers by 30% and export subsidies by 35% over five years.

"There was no agreement on those numbers," Hill said in a phone interview from Seoul. She added, however, that "we did say, if you can't take it in one bite, what would you think about two bites?"

Another U.S. trade official said the U.S. would insist on a "continuation clause" in any five-year deal on agriculture, in which "there would be a presumption that there would be further reductions of a similar level."

"There was no caving in at all," said Hills Tuesday. "We will be flexible, so long as the other party is negotiating in good faith. That doesn't mean we are caving."

'92 TRADE DEFICIT TO RISE SLIGHTLY, TREASURY FORECASTS

The U.S. foreign trade deficit next year will start rising again, but only modestly, the Treasury Department forecast....

Next year, the department said, the trade deficit may rise by about $10 billion to the $75 billion range, as a higher U.S. economic growth rate draws in more imports.

BUSH EXPECTED TO ANNOUNCE ADDITIONAL $2 BILLION IN AID FOR SOVIET UNION

President Bush is expected to announce Wednesday that the government will provide $2 billion more in food and medical assistance to the Soviet Union to help its citizens and reform-minded politicians survive the winter, congressional aides said Tuesday....

But the new U.S. aid package might be costly for American taxpayers and, subsequently, for Bush.

Although a booster shot of U.S. food could avert bread riots in what remains of the Soviet Union and stave off the reimposition of an authoritarian state, the U.S.S.R. might not be able to repay bank loans used to finance its imports. And if the Soviets default, U.S. taxpayers would have to pay off the lenders, under terms of the loan guarantees....

"When you talk about any kind of an aid program to the Soviet Union, other than credits for grain sales, you get a lot of problems with my constituents," Sen. Dixon said in an interview Tuesday. "The general perception back home is we ought to be doing less with foreign aid and more in domestic assistance programs."

MODEST AID PLAN DYING IN CONGRESS
Miscalculations Sink Measure To Divert Pentagon Funds

A plan to divert $1 billion from the Pentagon budget to aid the Soviet Union appeared all but dead Tuesday, the victim of political miscalculations by two of the most powerful lawmakers [Sen. Nunn and Rep. Aspin] in Congress and a growing public perception that Washington is putting foreign aid ahead of domestic problems.

Efforts to salvage the Soviet proposal were virtually exhausted Tuesday as the Bush Administration failed to offer a public endorsement of the plan. (Eric Schmitt, New York Times, A1)

GORBACHEV SAYS BUSH WARNED HIM OF COUP
Soviet Dismissed Alert: 'Everything's Okay'

MOSCOW -- President Gorbachev said Tuesday that President Bush warned him in a telephone call that an attempt would be made to remove the Soviet leader from power. But Gorbachev said he dismissed the warning, saying he believed "only a paranoiac madman" would try to overthrow the Soviet government....

Although Gorbachev did not say when Bush made the call, Marlin Fitzwater told reporters that it occurred in June....

U.S. sources said the information had come from a senior Soviet official who had passed it on to an American official....

Gorbachev also confirmed Tuesday that he also had an indirect warning about the planned coup from Secretary Baker in June. Baker alerted then-foreign minister Bessmertnykh; Bessmertnykh recently told a Soviet reporter that he passed the information to Gorbachev.

Negotiations Sought On Chechen-Ingush

MOSCOW -- President Yeltsin Tuesday backed away from his declaration last week of a state of emergency in the region of Chechen-Ingush. U.S. EXPECTED TO PROPOSE WASHINGTON
AS SITE OF DIRECT MIDEAST PEACE TALKS

The U.S. is expected to propose within the next few days that the next phase of the Middle East peace process be held here, probably beginning immediately after Thanksgiving, U.S. officials and diplomatic sources said Tuesday. In addition, the sources said, Secretary Baker probably will travel to Western Europe during the first half of December to preside over an organizational meeting of foreign ministers to prepare the third part of the three-stage process: multilateral talks on regional issues.

Prime Minister Shamir and President Bush will hold a crucial meeting next week to try to break the deadlock on where direct talks between Israel, the Arab states and Palestinians should be held, Israeli diplomats said Tuesday.... Israeli diplomats said they were working with the White House to arrange a Shamir-Bush meeting for Nov. 20 to try to come up with a time and place for these meetings.

SYRIA ANGRY AT SHAMIR; RELUCTANT AT U.S. TALKS SITE

DAMASCUS -- Syria and some Palestinians expressed reluctance Tuesday to hold the next round of Mideast peace talks in the U.S.

An anonymous senior Syrian official said Syria was reluctant to meet in the U.S. because Washington still regards Syria as a sponsor of terrorist groups, and because PLO members are denied U.S. visas.... In Syria's strongest statement since the first session adjourned last week, state-run Damascus radio said Tuesday that Israeli "provocations" appeared aimed against the peace process. The commentary responded to a statement by Prime Minister Shamir on Monday that Israel was unwilling to yield occupied territory "because Israel's measurements are too small."

AGREEMENT EASES CONFRONTATION BETWEEN IRAQ'S ARMY, KURDS

ANKARA -- A 10-day military confrontation between Iraqi forces and Kurdish rebels appeared to have receded Tuesday after Baghdad agreed to lift a month-old economic blockade of rebel-held areas in the north of the country and rebels agreed to pull their forces from cities there.

U.N. ALLOWS IRAQIS MORE TIME FOR DATA

The U.N. announced Tuesday it has given Iraq another month to provide a complete list of factories capable of producing components for weapons of mass destruction.

"We requested from Iraq a very detailed declaration with regard to activities in the civil, in the military field which could be supportive of acquiring weapons of mass destruction," said Rolf Ekeus, head of the U.N. commission in charge of eliminating Iraq's unconventional arms. The original one-month deadline expired Tuesday but Ekeus said in New York that another month "is more reasonable."

THREE KILLED AT HAITI PROTEST

PORT-AU-PRINCE -- Three people were shot to death Tuesday as nightstick-wielding soldiers firing machine guns and tear gas broke up a demonstration against the coup that ousted Haiti's democratic government. SENTIMENT GROWS IN WASHINGTON FOR SHIFT IN U.S. ZAIRE POLICY

In Congress and the Bush Administration there is now broad agreement that the U.S. must press for the installation of a transitional government in Zaire if the country is to be saved from further violence and economic ruin. There is also a consensus that the interim government should be led by a newly unified political opposition.

Where Congress and the Administration differ is over the immediate fate of President Mobutu....

Tuesday, Sen. Simon sought to force the debate on President Mobutu's future into the open by asking the Administration to persuade him to leave Zaire, at least temporarily, after turning power over to an interim government.

"There is a general feeling that we're facing some very grim times in Zaire," Sen. Simon said. "One of these days we're going to have people in the streets either celebrating an election or causing chaos. We have to be more firmly on the side of saying we need a new government. Let's get people into the streets for constructive reasons." (Barbara Crossett, New York Times, A6)

Indonesia's Forces Gun Down Marchers

LISBON -- Indonesian security forces opened fire on demonstrators in the disputed southeast Asian territory of East Timor Tuesday, killing 20-60 people and wounding many others, according to eyewitness reports reaching Portugal.

As many as 100 people were hit when soldiers fired automatic weapons on more than 1,000 Roman Catholics arriving at a cemetery to lay flowers on the grave of a young man killed by Indonesian troops on Oct. 28, an unidentified representative of East Timor's nationalist resistance movement told Portuguese state radio in a telephone call....

PRESIDENT'S TRIP

ABC's Peter Jennings: President Bush was sounding optimistic about the economy today. He told a Republican fund-raiser in New York that signals on the economy are mixed right now. But he said lower interest rates will kick in soon and boost consumer confidence. (TV coverage: President Bush speaking at fund-raiser.) (ABC-6)

NBC's Tom Brokaw: The President came to Gov. Cuomo's homestate today to sharpen what has become his early favorite campaign theme.

NBC's Jim Miklaszewski: And it's an old Ronald Reagan tactic, to paint the opposition as bad news, gloom-and-doom Democrats. At a fund-raising luncheon for the Bush-Quayle campaign, Bush didn't even mention Mario Cuomo, but lambasted Democrats in Congress. Under attack for the poor economy and accused of having no domestic agenda, Bush struck back.

(President Bush: "I am not going to be the javelin catcher for the liberals that run the Congress anymore.")

Bush revived an old Republican tactic -- said he was tired of the Democrats' liberal litany of what's wrong with America.

(President Bush: "Sometimes I get this sinking feeling that the Democrats believe that they can win only if times are bad. They have a vested interest in seeing us fail. And what a tawdry, negative way to view this, the greatest country on the face of the earth.")

Bush blamed the Democrats for playing politics, blocking his domestic agenda. Democrats accuse Bush of lack of leadership.

(Rep. Gephardt: "We don't have a problem of political bickering. We have a problem of lack of presidential leadership -- even presidential followership. That's our problem.")

And they're confident they've struck a nerve.

(Mark Siegel, Democratic consultant: "This man is on the ropes. He needs another war.")

Bush himself acknowledged times are tough. He issued a call for reduction in credit-card interest rates to try to breathe some new life into the economy. The economy may be hurting, but the Bush-Quayle campaign is in the chips. Bush raised more than $2 million at this event alone, and he's not even a candidate -- yet.

(TV coverage: President Bush at fund-raiser.)

But Bush is rushing to meet the December deadline for federal matching funds for the primaries. The more he gets for himself, the less there'll be left for all those Democratic candidates.

(NBC-2)

DEMOCRATS/1992 CAMPAIGN

Brokaw: The economy is in trouble, voters are in a rebellious mood and 1992 is just around the corner. So today, Democratic presidential candidates ganged up on the President and he, in turn, ganged up on Congress. And Gov. Cuomo was still deciding whether to jump in.

-more-

NBC's Andrea Mitchell reports the six Democratic candidates, making their first joint appearance, were almost overshadowed by the man who wasn't there -- President Bush. They were in Detroit, courting big labor. But the AFL-CIO won't endorse anyone until it sees white puffs of smoke coming out of the state capitol in Albany.

(Gov. Cuomo: "I'm doing it as fast as I can. Most candidates take a year to figure this out.")

Those already running took target practice on Bush, blaming him for everything from the recession to David Duke.

(Sen. Kerrey: "[He] stands in the Rose Garden of the White House and says no to parental leave, no to increases in minimum wage, no to extended unemployment benefits.")

(Paul Tsongas: "We have to put George Bush out and say once and for all that your kind of politics that gives us a David Duke -- David Duke is the son of George Bush.")

The biggest applause was for Sen. Harkin.

(Sen. Harkin: "It's time for a president to get tough on trade. Don't lower our standards to theirs. Make them raise their standards up to ours.")

Gov. Clinton said workers have to shape up, too.

(Gov. Clinton: "And you always clap when people tell you what [you] want to hear. But the truth is, last year, Germany's productivity growth was three times ours, Japan's was four times ours.")

Some are still waiting for Cuomo, while others are fed up.

(Tom Martin, union member: "If Mario can't make up his mind whether he wants to run for president, I wonder what kind of president he'd be.")

Meanwhile, Cuomo is trying out campaign themes, such as: Blame Bush for New York's problems.

(Caller, on New York talk show: "You're the head of the ship here.")

Cuomo: "Slow down. If you're going to say I'm the head of the ship, then therefore I'm responsible for the city taxes, then President Bush is the head of the fleet and he's responsible for the state taxes and the city's taxes, right?"

Caller: "Well, do you take any blame whatsoever?"

Cuomo: "I'm using your logic. If you're saying the captain has it, what about the admiral? Does he take any blame?"

Cuomo has not confided in anyone, but leading Democrats say that after putting on such a public display, he has to run or else become irrelevant.

(NBC-Lead)

CBS's Scott Pelley reports on the Democrats' appearance.

(Harkin: "Building roads and highways and bridges and mass transit and sewer and water and energy and communication systems, and I mean to do it with American steel and American products and American labor here in our own country.")

Only Harkin caught fire with the delegates. The message from the others was often muddled. One exception was this torpedo from Tsongas.

(Tsongas: "David Duke is the son of George Bush.")

Some of the delegates longed for more from the candidates, even another candidate.

HEALTH CARE

CBS's Dan Rather: A new proposal tonight for trying to solve America's health care problem, a major worry across the country and a growing campaign issue. This national health care insurance idea is aimed at extending coverage to the millions of Americans who have none, while at the same time holding down medical costs for all.

CBS's Mark Phillips reports the plan is a radical one and comes from a coalition of industry and labor. It is designed to fix the two major problems of the current system: accessibility and cost.

(Paul Rogers, Health Care Reform Coalition: "America spends more per person [inaudible] than any other country in the world, and yet we've still got 34 million not even covered.")

To pay for the plan, called Pro Health, business and employees would each contribute a basic .5 percent of payroll and salary. Beyond that, companies could either offer standard private insurance or kick in another 7 percent payroll tax to participate in a national system available to all. Costs could be kept down by a watchdog committee.

(Robert Ray, former Iowa governor: "Health care reform isn't a choice between ideologies. It's a choice between indulging in political bickering or finding a way to change the health care course of calamity that we're on.")

The plan has the bipartisan support of former presidents Ford and Carter. But the Administration opposes it.

(Gail Wilensky, HHS: "It is true that the Bush Administration has not come up with a plan, but we are working on trying to develop strategies that we think address the problems and don't create as many new problems as the ones that we're trying to fix.")

Small business also is opposed.

(Carolynne Miller, International Federation of Independent Business: "They'll do three things under a mandated payroll-tax approach. They will stop expansion, they will cut back on current production and they'll start laying off workers.")

There are more than a dozen proposals for remaking the health care system, and there is a growing political imperative to do something about it. (CBS-Lead)

UNEMPLOYMENT BENEFITS

(CBS-2, ABC-8)

TENNESSEE/ECONOMY

ABC's Linda Pattillo reports on life in Cumberland County, whose school budget was cut by $1 million. To make up for the shortfall, the county will stop running its 44 school buses.

(Marge Johnson, parent: "Bush has kept this thing going where he's pushing education, saying how much we need it, but yet we can't get our kids to school. We can't find the money.") (ABC-7)

MIDDLE EAST

Jennings: We begin tonight with another challenge for the Bush Administration. Having put together one conference to advance the cause of peace in the Middle East, can the U.S. do it again? The first conference in Madrid, at which the Israelis and Palestinians sat at the same table for the first time, led to some encouragement and a lot of skepticism in both Israel and the Arab world. Secretary Baker now intends to accentuate the positive.

ABC's John McWethy reports U.S. officials say Secretary Baker is trying to set up another highly publicized meeting in early December, probably in Europe, that would include not only those who attended the Madrid conference, but also a long list of other countries, to deal with such regional issues as arms control, water and refugees. As an incentive to lure some of the poorer Arab nations to sit down with Israel, sources say the U.S. is trying to put together a development fund, with money from such contributors as Japan, Saudi Arabia and Kuwait. The money would be available only to those countries that participated in the talks. It is likely Baker will take another step early next week to prod Israel and Arabs to begin one-on-one talks. Baker will try to solve the problem of a meeting site by inviting them to the U.S., an invitation he hopes no one can refuse. (ABC-Lead)

ABC's Dean Reynolds reports the Palestinian peace negotiators have been swept up in a wave of public pride.

(Hanan Ashrawi, Palestinian spokesperson: "The popular support that we have is a tribute not just to the tenacity of the Palestinian people, but to the strength of the commitment to a peace process which would safeguard their basic rights.")

But the negotiating team is aware the adulation could be fleeting if tangible results are not visible soon. The Palestinians have already established PACs to promote the peace process.

(Ziad Abu Ziad, Palestinian advocacy group: "We are trying to make our people realize that they should be patient and that the road is very long.")

Left unsaid is the worry that the negotiators could be vulnerable to violence from those who reject the peace talks. Some rival political factions say the negotiators are little more than a subsidiary of Yasser Arafat's movement. (ABC-2)

EDITORIALS/COLUMNISTS

ELECTION RESULTS

The Natives Are Restless -- "Republicans say the voting Tuesday was a good day for them. It was, but only because more incumbents were Democrats than Republicans.... The President is lucky. He has a full year to do something about the economy, health care and other domestic issues. If he doesn't, he risks being the third incumbent President of the last four to be voted out of office. It will take more than cancelling trips overseas and saying he is interested in domestic affairs, as he has just done, to save himself. Americans clearly want action and results." (Baltimore Sun, 11/7)

A Pennsylvania Point Of Light -- "Despite denials that he was stunned by the setback in Pennsylvania, Bush is scurrying to reposition himself as a President properly concerned with the deteriorating American economy.... To a remarkable degree, this was a real-life enactment of the polls that pit Bush against unidentified Democratic opponents, polls in which support for Bush has fallen below a winning margin. And that is why the White House is scrambling.... Clearly, Bush got Wofford's message he must do something on [the health care] front.... For the moment, prospects are brighter for a Democratic presidential challenge in 1992." (Boston Globe, 11/7)

The '91 Elections: A Message For Mr. Bush... -- "It was an OK day for Republicans in general, but for Bush in particular, Election Day was awful.... [Thornburgh's] humiliating defeat...said less about him than about Bush, with whom he was so closely identified.... Popularity can melt quickly, as Thornburgh has just learned. And presidents who inherit high-spirited economic booms and turn them into glum national recessions by breaking campaign promises are presidents who can be beaten. Live by the polls, and you're liable to die at the polls." (Boston Herald, 11/7)

Voters' Message To Bush: Heed Domestic Issues -- "The deep public anger...shook the somnambulant White House. Finally, the President is stirring.... Trouble is, Bush twice vetoed jobless-benefits bills and his Administration has been studying health care for two years. His advisers are split on an economic stimulus package and Bush is frozen with indecision. But at least the President's slumber has been broken. Now he must get up and get to work. Real policy proposals and cooperation with Congress are what's needed." (Newsday, 11/8)

Mixed Messages In The '91 Vote -- "The rejection of Thornburgh...is a warning to President Bush that he needs to adjust his agenda if he wants to be re-elected. But voters in several states also resoundingly rejected tax increases, indicating a deep distrust of the political establishment as well as a general unwillingness to support more government spending.... Thornburgh's loss suggests that hard times could cost the GOP the White House.... [But] voter disgust with government is strong, threatening all incumbents, not just Republicans." (St. Louis Post Dispatch, 11/8)

NATO SUMMIT

Roman Holiday -- "The U.S. must continue to be involved in helping set the military and political priorities for the alliance's security agenda. The President was right to attend despite heavy domestic criticism of his foreign travels. This meeting is a pivotal mark for the future direction of NATO.... Bush would be remiss if he did not lend the weight of his presence to the negotiations.... One last delicious irony: The most insistent calls for retaining an American presence in NATO, and for the continuing existence of the alliance, come from -- are you ready? -- the Soviet Union." (Newsday, 11/8)

President Missed Real Opportunity For Change -- "If there was one overseas trip that the President could have missed, this was it. The NATO summit produced nothing that had not been already worked out among its members.... The dramatically changed world does not require that the U.S. maintain [a military link] by paying billions of dollars each year to keep military forces there. Instead, it requires that the link be transformed into an economic link.... Had the President gone to Rome to press for converting NATO to more of a political/economic alliance...he would have done much to blunt criticism of his globe-trotting." (Dallas Morning News, 11/8)

U.S. Forces In Europe -- "Good for President Bush. With President Mitterrand shooting ironic Gallic barbs...and with Chancellor Kohl wavering between his contradictory commitments to Paris and Washington, it was indeed time for an American president to speak up.... NATO's armies must become smaller, more mobile and less dependent on nuclear weaponry.... Given the situation, the U.S. has every right to know what its allies intend.... Predictably, after President Bush's broadside, all the Europeans saluted with the usual bromides about trans-Atlantic unity."

(Baltimore Sun, 11/11)

Bush Hits The Wrong Note In Rome -- "Somebody tell Bush the Cold War is over. Tip him off that the Soviets aren't about to attack Western Europe. Apprise him of the Europeans' aspirations toward their own foreign and security policies. Last week in Rome, the President acted as if he were unaware of the changes that led to the NATO summit.... Although the allies reassured Bush, it might have been more honest of them to own up to a desire to fend for themselves.... It is not necessary to keep so many [American troops] there so long. Their numbers can be cut far more substantially."

(Chicago Tribune, 11/10)

On NATO, Another Bush Triumph -- "President Bush may be under pressure at home for his globetrotting during this recession year, but his trip to bargain with NATO and the EC has shown that he remains a master of diplomacy.... Bush has reminded American voters that he and his team, seasoned by 12 years of continuity in power, know how to manage international relations. None of Bush's potential Democratic opponents can make that claim.... The U.S. carried the day -- thanks to Bush's cool performance under pressure. Despite his weakness on domestic policy, Bush is wisely maintaining the internationalist approach that has stabilized the peace."

News From the Hill

HOUSE FLOOR: Third stopgap funding bill wins approval.

With several fiscal 1992 spending bills unsigned, the House yesterday approved, by voice vote, a stopgap funding bill (H J Res 374) that would keep all government agencies operating through Nov. 26. The current short-term spending bill (H J Res 360) will expire on Thursday.

Congress has yet to clear a fiscal 1992 spending bill for defense (HR 2521) and President Bush is expected to veto a spending measure (HR 2707) for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education because of abortion language.

The president has until Friday to sign the Interior spending bill (HR 2686). Funding for foreign aid, through March 31, 1992, was provided in H J Res 360.

Immigration. Legislation (HR 3049) that would restore some of the federal courts' authority to deal with citizenship applications also passed the House yesterday, by voice vote.

Before 1990, the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) made recommendations on naturalization applications, which were almost always approved by the courts.

But complaints that the courts took too long to formally approve applications and swear in new citizens led to enactment of a 1990 law that gave individuals the option of applying to the INS to complete the process, including the formal swearing-in.

In response to charges that the law shut the judiciary out of the naturalization process, HR 3049 would require individuals to apply first to the courts.

Applicants could turn to the INS if the courts waived their jurisdiction or did not schedule a naturalization ceremony within 45 days.

The House passed several other bills, all by voice vote, including:

- HR 2270, which would protect senior federal employees from arbitrary income reductions by allowing pay cuts only for reasons of misconduct.

- HR 3508, which would reauthorize federal programs that provide loans to medical students and funding for medical education programs for doctors and nurses. About $2 billion in health professional programs under the Public Health Service Act would be authorized through fiscal 1994.

Allen Sworn In. George F. Allen, R-Va., was sworn in as a member of the House yesterday. Allen, who won a Nov. 5 special election to replace D. French Slaughter, R, was given seats on the Judiciary, Small Business and Science committees.

SENATE FLOOR: Older Americans legislation passed.

The Senate passed, by voice vote, legislation (HR 2967/S 243) that would reauthorize, through fiscal 1995, federal programs under the 1965 Older Americans Act that provide food and transportation assistance for the elderly poor.

The bill would authorize $1.7 billion for such programs in fiscal 1992 — $121 million more than in fiscal 1991. The act was last reauthorized in 1987.

The popular Meals on Wheels program, which helps distribute food to disabled older people, is one of the many programs created by the act. Another popular program provides federal subsidies for part-time community service jobs intended for needy people over 55 years old.

Members approved, by voice vote, an amendment by Thad Cochran, R-Miss., to remove a section of the bill that would provide benefits to workers whose companies have defaulted on agreements to provide pensions.

Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, who supported the amendment, said the pension provision amounted to a "raid" on the national pension insurance fund.

Members agreed, by voice vote, to an

Today

House Floor: The House schedule is uncertain, but members are expected to take up a measure (HR 2) that would guarantee 12 weeks of unpaid leave to parents of newborn children or those who stay home to care for an ailing family member.

The bill is similar to legislation vetoed by President Bush last year.

Members will consider two substitute amendments under a "king-of-the-hill" procedure in which the last amendment adopted becomes part of the bill.

The first amendment, to be offered by Charles W. Stenholm, D-Texas, would grant employees up to six years leave to raise a child or two years to care for an ill family member. The person would not be guaranteed a job upon his or her return but would get preference when a job became available.

The second amendment, to be offered by Henry Hyde, R-Ill., would grant employees 12 weeks of unpaid leave, while trying to make the law less burdensome for businesses.

It would limit eligibility to those who have worked at least 12 months and at least 25 hours a week and allow employers to exempt highly paid workers. Employees would have to give 30 days' notice before taking leave.

Banking Bill. The House leadership may also try to move legislation (HR 2094) that would bolster the insurance fund that protects bank deposits and give regulators new authority to take over ailing banks.

Work on a narrow banking bill became necessary after the House rejected a comprehensive bill (HR 6) on Nov. 4 that would have overhauled U.S. banking laws and allowed banks to expand into new business areas.

The challenge for the leadership has been to come up with a measure that can pass the House. The Bush administration opposes a narrow bill. And Democrats have been unwilling to vote for a measure that would allow up to $30 billion in taxpayer-guaranteed funds to be borrowed without some Republican support.

Members will consider amendments that would add some of the provisions of HR 6.

One amendment by Banking Committee Chairman Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Texas, includes provisions that would base deposit premiums on the risk a bank poses to the insurance fund and restrict the activities of state-chartered banks.

Another amendment, to be offered by Chalmers P. Wylie, Ohio, ranking Republican on the Banking panel, would allow interstate branching while giving state legislatures the authority to bar such activity in their states.

Senate Floor: Senators plan to vote on whether to cut off debate to allow consideration of a comprehensive banking bill (S 543).

As approved by the Senate Banking Committee on Aug. 2, the measure would lift a number of restrictions on business activities by commercial banks. The bill would allow banks to open branches across state lines and affiliate with securities firms.

The bill would also replenish the nearly insolvent Bank Insurance Fund administered by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Drift Nets: The House Ways and Means Committee is scheduled to mark up legislation (HR 2152) to strengthen enforcement of international agreements barring drift net fishing.

As approved by the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee on Oct. 3, the measure would allow the president to ban imports from any nation that allows drift net fishing.

A more controversial provision in the bill would require the president to impose trade sanctions on countries that do not abide by a recent U.N. resolution that calls on nations that use drift nets to come up with plans for more humane methods of fishing by June 30, 1992.

HR 2152 would go further than the U.N. resolution by requiring the president to impose sanctions on countries that are still using drift nets on June 30, 1992. These sanctions would apply to fish and fish products.

The Bush administration and some Republicans on the panel oppose trade sanctions, which they contend would violate the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) and lead to retaliatory action. They argue, moreover, that Japan and other nations that use drift nets are looking into different fishing methods.

Committee Republicans may offer an amendment to give the president more discretion in imposing sanctions.

Child Labor: The Senate Labor Committee will mark up legislation (S 600) that would boost the penalties against employers who break child labor laws.

The measure would increase to 10 years the maximum prison sentence for employers found guilty of willful violations of child labor laws that result in the death of a child. Under current law, the second time an employer is found guilty of breaking the labor laws, he or she can be sentenced to six months in prison, though no one has ever been sentenced to jail time.

Supporters of the bill said that more than 100,000 children under 18 are injured every year in work-related accidents.

Opponents of the measure argue that the majority of violations are minor paperwork mistakes. Such groups and the Bush administration want Congress to wait to see if a law enacted last year will curb accidents.

As part of last year's budget reconciliation law, Congress raised the fines on employers found guilty of violating child labor laws. The maximum fine was increased from $1,000 to $10,000.

VA Drug Prices: The House Veterans' Affairs Committee will mark up legislation (HR 2890) that is designed to lower drug prices for Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) hospitals and patients. Majority staff members expect the bill, which has bipartisan support, to win approval easily.

A measure cleared by Congress last year that forced pharmaceutical companies to charge Medicaid programs the "best price" for drug purchases has affected other federal drug-purchasing programs, particularly those administered by the VA.

In the 1990 measure, Congress mandated that Medicaid programs be given the same price for bulk drug purchases as other federal programs. The drug companies responded by raising the price for all federal programs. As a result, VA drug costs are up more than 40 percent since last year, panel members said.

The measure would exempt the VA from the "best price" requirement, but it would also require that VA officials negotiate with pharmaceutical companies to return to the old prices. If the negotiations fail, the bill would require drug companies to lower their prices for VA programs to what they were on Oct. 1, 1990, plus inflation.

Timber Sales: The House Agriculture Subcommittee on Forests is scheduled to mark up proposals aimed at substantially scaling back federal "below cost" timber sales.

But the bills (HR 3414, HR 2501) face major roadblocks, including significant opposition within the subcommittee and budget considerations that will prevent the measures from reaching the floor in their current forms.

Below cost sales occur when the government's expenses for related activities such as road building exceed revenues received from timber companies. Environmentalists, who have been trying to curb federal timber sales, have found allies among members who say below cost sales subsidize timber companies at taxpayer expense.

Both measures would require that the Forest Service calculate whether a sale is a revenue loser. Most of these sales would be banned.

But the bills face strong opposition from Western lawmakers, whose districts' economies benefit from the sales. They say that the bills will result in a loss of local jobs and tax revenue.

Because the measures would reduce federal revenues, they would violate last year's budget deal, which requires offsetting spending cuts.

Subcommittee Chairman Harold L. Volkmer, D-Mo., is expected to spend much of the session sounding out his colleagues to determine how to proceed.

GSA Authorization: Legislation (HR 3161) that would overhaul the General Services Administration (GSA) as well as the federal procurement process will be marked up by the House Government Operations Committee.

The bill would put the GSA on an annual authorization cycle in an attempt to make the agency more accountable to Congress. Currently, the agency operates under a permanent authorization.

The bill would also expand the GSA's congressional reporting requirements and restrict the number of high-ranking officials at the agency who have no government experience.

The markup follows accusations by committee Chairman John Conyers Jr., D-Mich., of mismanagement and waste at the GSA.

The measure would alter government procurement practices by requiring federal agencies to buy more commercial products as opposed to items that are custom-made and generally more expensive.

According to committee staffers from both parties, Republican members of the committee oppose some provisions in the bill and are trying to fashion a compromise with Conyers.

Presidential Funding: The House Administration Committee will mark up legislation (HR 3644) that would require the Treasury Department to divert money originally set aside for the presidential conventions and general election campaigns to fund the presidential primary campaigns.

Under current law, taxpayers can designate $1 of their taxes to be used to provide matching funds to presidential candidates in the primaries and the general election. The money, which is deposited in the Presidential Election Campaign Fund, also goes to help fund the major party conventions.

The Treasury Department sets aside funds for the general election and the conventions before the primaries begin.

See TODAY on p. 3

TODAY from p. 2

Currently, there is not enough money in the fund for the primaries after these set-asides.

To free up money for the primaries, the bill would require Treasury to include the amount likely to be collected in 1992 (estimated to be about $30 million) in determining how much to set aside.

All of the committee Republicans oppose the measure, saying that Democrats are trying to rig the system to make the primaries the greatest funding priority. Since the Republican presidential candidate is almost certain to be George Bush, the primaries are much more important to the Democratic Party, minority members argue.

Indian Bills: The House Interior Committee will mark up several bills affecting Native Americans, including a measure (HR 3394) aimed at helping tribes move toward self-governance.

The bill would expand a demonstration program established by a 1988 law under which 20 Indian tribes were given the authority to carry out certain tribal services, such as medical and health programs, that otherwise would have been handled by the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

The bill would extend the authorization for the program and include 10 new tribes.

The measure reflects both the eagerness of tribes to take over programs currently managed by the bureau and congressional dissatisfaction with the bureau's management of Indian programs.

Another bill on the agenda (S 668) would aid tribes in cutting through federal red tape to help them qualify for federal grants to clean up air and water pollution on reservations.

The committee will also mark up several public lands bills, including legislation (HR 3245) to designate almost 26,000 acres in the Chattahoochee National Forest in Georgia as wilderness.

Reservists' Pay: The House Post Office and Civil Service Committee will consider a bill (HR 3209) that would allow federal and Postal Service employees who served as reservists during the Persian Gulf War to be compensated for the difference between their government salaries and their military pay while they were in the gulf.

The measure would also allow federal and postal employees who served in the war to make up contributions they missed to the Thrift Savings Plan, a federal retirement program. Current law does not allow contributions to the federal retirement system to be made up.

HR 3209 would also extend health and life insurance benefits for the duration of a federal employee's military service.

The measure has broad support and only technical amendments are expected to be offered during the markup.

Undersea Research: Two House Merchant Marine subcommittees will mark up legislation to authorize an ongoing undersea research program and reauthorize an Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) program that regulates ocean dumping.

The Oceanography Subcommittee will first mark up HR 3247, which would give more solid congressional backing to the undersea research program administered by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA).

The program, which has never been written into law, funds research in such fields as offshore dumping of sewage and dredging.

The bill would create an office within NOAA to oversee the program, under which the agency has established research centers affiliated with five universities.

Following markup of that measure, the Fisheries and Wildlife Conservation Subcommittee will add its input in a joint markup of a bill (HR 3749) that would reauthorize the EPA ocean-dumping permit program through 1995.

Under the program, the EPA regulates dumping, generally of municipal sewage, and charges a fee for every ton of sludge dumped. The Army Corps of Engineers also dumps dredged material from its projects.

Dumping of sewage is slated to cease by the end of the year. Cities that cannot meet the deadline will be charged large penalty fees per ton of sludge.

Temporary Visas: Legislation that would eliminate the current cap on the number of temporary visas issued annually to foreign athletes and entertainers will be marked up by the House Judiciary Subcommittee on International Law, Immigration and Refugees.

Under the Immigration and Nationality Act of 1990, the United States can issue only 25,000 temporary visas for athletes and entertainers annually.

The bill (HR 3048) would amend the act by removing the limit on the number of these temporary visas that can be issued.

Bill proponents say the immigration caps and other restrictions on temporary visas, which took effect Oct. 1, will make it more difficult for talented people to come to the United States.

Subcommittee Chairman Romano L. Mazzoli, D-Ky., will offer a substitute amendment that would require the General Accounting Office to report on other countries' policies on the entrance of U.S. athletes and entertainers.

Both the amendment and the bill are expected to be approved without opposition. ■ amendment by John McCain, R-Ariz., that would repeal the Social Security income earnings test, which limits the amount of income a recipient can earn before his Social Security payments are reduced.

Although the amendment was approved, McCain and others said they expected the provision to be dropped during a House-Senate conference.

Senators passed the House bill after inserting the Senate version and called for a conference.

HIGHWAY BILL conferees postpone major decisions.

Conferees attempting to reconcile conflicting versions of House and Senate highway and mass transit authorization bills decided yesterday to put off all major decisions until tomorrow.

Although conference leaders decided to postpone discussing the large issues — such as whether it should be a five-year bill as the Senate approved or a six-year measure as passed by the House and the best way to restructure federal highway programs — they did agree that they would not settle for a short-term extension of federal highway spending authority, which expired on Sept. 30. Most states have only a small amount of unspent highway funds to carry them until a new authorization measure is enacted.

Senate bill author Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., and House Public Works and Transportation Committee Chairman Robert A. Roe, D-N.J., said they were adamant that the conferees finish work on a multi-year authorization bill.

BARR DENIES any foot dragging in BCCI probe.

William Barr, President Bush's nominee to succeed Dick Thornburgh as attorney general, yesterday defended the Justice Department's handling of the investigation into the closed Bank of Credit and Commerce International (BCCI).

In his confirmation hearing before the Senate Judiciary Committee, Barr denied that there had been any foot-dragging at the Justice Department or political pressure from the White House to go easy in probing the U.S. activities of BCCI.

But Barr did acknowledge that, until this summer, there had been "no coordination" among various U.S. attorneys and the Justice Department, a lapse that may have slowed the investigation.

Barr, 41, said he had no responsibility for the BCCI case until August, when he became acting attorney general after Thornburgh resigned to run unsuccessfully for a vacant Senate seat in Pennsylvania. "I will take personal responsibility for what has happened since I took over,"

See NEWS on p. 4

NEWS from p. 3

Barr said.

He said he has asked for an internal review to see if there had been "slipups" earlier in pursuing allegations against BCCI. But he said he is confident that career prosecutors are doing all they can to build criminal cases against those involved in wrongdoing.

Although Democrats pressed him on the BCCI matter, Barr received a generally warm reception from the Judiciary Committee. No one expressed opposition to his nomination, and Paul Simon, D-Ill., said, "I think from what I've seen of you so far the people are going to be well served."

The hearing continues today. The panel will vote on the nomination on Friday.

CAMPAIGN FINANCE plan unveiled by House leaders.

Saying the "money chase" has to end, House Democratic leaders yesterday introduced a campaign finance proposal that would set voluntary limits of $600,000 on spending by candidates for primary and general elections for House seats.

Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., said yesterday the House would consider a campaign finance measure before adjourning for the year.

The package, drafted by a House task force led by Sam Gejdenson, D-Conn., includes incentives to encourage candidates to abide by the spending limits: Those who stick to the spending caps would receive up to $200,000 in public financing. And candidates with opponents who did not agree to the limits would receive unlimited matching funds.

"It will bring a level playing field to the campaigns of members of Congress and challengers, and it will bring fairness to the campaign reform process," Foley said.

Contributions from political action committees would be limited to $200,000.

President Bush has threatened to veto a bill if it includes public financing or spending limits. Republicans are expected to offer a competing plan on Thursday when the House Administration Committee marks up legislation incorporating the Democratic proposal.

EPA LAGS in implementing Clean Air Act, Dingell says.

The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) is missing scores of regulatory deadlines imposed by the 1990 Clean Air Act amendments, House Energy and Commerce Committee Chairman John D. Dingell, D-Mich., said yesterday.

At a hearing of the panel's Oversight and Investigations Subcommittee, which he chairs, Dingell said that the EPA had missed deadlines for issuing rules in nearly a dozen areas, including reformulated gasoline, motor vehicle inspections, toxic air pollutants, and utility emission allowances under acid rain control requirements.

EPA Administrator William K. Reilly told the panel his agency had made substantial headway in implementing "the vast majority" of the new clean air law and said some delays had occurred because the agency had focused its efforts on the most dangerous of the toxic air pollutants.

"The new act contains 55 major rulemakings and 30 other guidance and actions to be completed within the first two years of passage," Reilly said. "This represents about a fivefold increase over our air program regulatory activity of the past several years."

But officials from the General Accounting Office told the subcommittee that, to speed action, the EPA needs to adopt a "clear roadmap" detailing how it will implement toxic release regulations for the 189 hazardous air pollutants — such as arsenic, cyanide and formaldehyde — that are listed in the 1990 act.

ECONOMIC RECOVERY slower than expected, official says.

U.S. Treasury Undersecretary David Mulford told a Senate Banking subcommittee yesterday that he is concerned about the slow pace of the U.S. economic recovery and that America's industrial allies need to do more to increase global economic growth.

He said worldwide high interest rates were hampering economic expansion and pointed to Germany as one industrialized nation that had not cut interest rates in recent months.

Mulford did not agree with International Finance Subcommittee Chairman Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., who said the economy was still in a recession, but the Treasury official did acknowledge that growth was extremely slow. "We are still experiencing a positive recovery but not as strong as we would like it to be," Mulford said. "It's sluggish."

He also said that U.S. export growth, which played a major role in sustaining the economy last year, has slowed as the economies of America's major trading partners have leveled off and their demand for U.S. goods has decreased.

Mulford also told the panel that China's trade surplus with the United States is becoming a growing concern as that nation has an "entire paraphernalia" of import license controls, exchange rate restrictions and other policies designed to generate large trade surpluses and keep its goods competitive on world markets.

CHILD ABUSERS should be listed in registry, TV host says.

Calling child abuse "one of the most inhuman and destructive forces at work in our nation," television talk show host

Oprah Winfrey told the Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday that a centralized national background check system is needed to screen people who provide or seek to provide child care.

Describing her own experience as an abused child, Winfrey said abused children often blame themselves.

She said that available statistics show that there are more than 2 million reports of suspected child abuse and neglect annually in the United States, many of them by repeat offenders.

Committee Chairman Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., said he intends to use a proposal drafted by Winfrey as the basis for legislation that he and ranking Republican Strom Thurmond, Miss., will introduce later this week.

Winfrey said her proposal would require that child abuse crimes are fully reported by all states to a national registry. Day-care operators could then check with the national registry when evaluating job applicants. Such a system would prevent convicted child abusers from gaining access to children simply by moving from state to state and would help to protect the nearly 6 million children currently in day care, she said.

The committee released statistics yesterday showing that such background check systems, which are currently in place in six states, have identified more than 6,200 individuals who have been convicted of sex offenses, child abuse, violent crimes or felony drug charges and have sought jobs as child care providers.

REP. OWENS enters race for Senate seat now held by Garn.

Democratic Rep. Wayne Owens of Utah announced on Monday he will run next year for the Senate seat being vacated by Utah Republican Jake Garn.

Utah Republicans quickly denounced Owens' decision, saying he was reneging on an earlier promise that he would not seek the Senate seat.

"I feel I have been betrayed by a very close personal friend," Garn said, adding that Owens had promised him he would not run for the Senate. Garn beat Owens for the Senate seat in 1974.

Owens, 53, said he had encouraged Garn to seek re-election in 1992 and tried to persuade a Utah law professor, Scott Matheson Jr., to run following Garn's decision to retire. Owens said he decided to run only after Garn and Matheson opted out of the race.

Republicans in the race include former Geneva Steel president Joseph Cannon, former state U.S. Attorney Brent Ward, Utah Public Service Commission Chairman Ted Stewart and Robert Bennett, a management consultant and son of former Sen. Wallace F. Bennett, a Republican senator who served from 1951 to 1974. ■

SPOTLIGHT

THE REVISION THING

Doonesbury's oxymoronic cover-up strip on the VP is producing some revisionist studies of Quayle's actual performance. The first was the current NEWSWEEK; today comes the BOSTON GLOBE; next may be the W. POST -- by Broder and Woodward-Redford-Redfern, no less.

All this from what Tom Oliphant calls the "great American Scandal Machine," capable of printing a comic strip on what it rejects as a legitimate story. (#8)

Note: In 1988, ABC ran a blistering review of the accuracy of Bush's Dukakis-in-the-tank ad -- once. The ad kept running and running and running. Revisionist Quayle pieces will run -- once -- as the GLOBE, POST and hundreds more run the strip daily until 11/22.

===== QUOTE OF THE DAY =====

"When I am president of the United States, every double-breasted, scab-hiring, union-busting employer in America will know working people have a friend in the White House."

-- Harkin at AFL-CIO debate, DETROIT FREE PRESS, 11/13. (#1)

THE APN BULLETIN BOARD

FROM TODAY'S GREENWIRE: Wetlands -- as media focuses on Quayle behind-the-scenes role, a battle brews in the states.
FROM TODAY'S DAILY REPORT CARD: In 4 states, measures are making parents responsible for kids' violence & truancy.
FROM TODAY'S ABORTION REPORT: Pro-lifers call on pro-choicers to join them against David Duke's "new message."

*1 AFL-CIO DEBATE: HARKIN STANDS TALL ON FRIENDLY TURF

The six announced candidates "blew into Detroit [11/12] to stage a debate that looked like a six-man tag-team wrestling match, a one-sided competition to see who could put the nastiest stranglehold on the one-man opposition, George Bush. The clear winner, in the eyes of the enthusiastic AFL-CIO audience at ringside, was the son of an Iowa coal miner, a scrappy populist named Tom Harkin" (James Gannon, DETROIT NEWS, 11/13). Harkin "emerged ... as the favorite for labor's endorsement in next year's presidential race, blowing away" the five others (Montemurri/Cook, DETROIT FREE PRESS). Harkin: "When I am president of the United States, every double-breasted, scab-hiring, union-busting employer in America will know working people have a friend in the White House." MI AFL-CIO pres. Frank Garrison: "Harkin won the debate." Of 100 people "informally asked" after the debate, 82 called Harkin the winner, 13 picked Kerrey, 3 for Clinton, 1 each for Tsongas and Brown, and zero for Wilder (11/13). DES MOINES REGISTER subhead: "There was no clear winner at Tuesday's forum, but ... Harkin was reportedly 'close to the top'" (11/13). CBS' Scott Pelley: "Only Harkin caught fire with the labor delegates" (11/12). NBC's Andrea Mitchell: "The biggest applause was for [Harkin], who has tailored his campaign to be a hit with labor. ... Unlike [Clinton], who said workers have to shape up too" (11/12). Harkin "clearly won the most fans for his promises to champion their concerns. But most of his listeners ... appeared to favor him even before the talking began. And, judging from interviews afterward, Harkin was not able to lock up many hearts so securely that they cannot be stolen by" Cuomo (Adam Pertman, BOSTON GLOBE, 11/13). Wilder: "It was understood that Tom (Harkin) was the favorite here" (Norfolk VIRGINIAN-PILOT, 11/13). While Harkin "appeared to be the favorite," Clinton and the others "managed to hold the delegates' attention ... if not their support" (Noel Oman, ARKANSAS DEMOCRAT-GAZETTE). AR AFL-CIO pres. Bill Becker, "who has had his differences and agreements with Clinton, gave tepid support to his own governor" (11/13). "As expected, the best-received candidate" was Harkin. "But several labor officials and consultants agreed that Harkin might lose some potential labor support" if Cuomo runs. MI AFL-CIO's Garrison said labor leaders "are tired of the games [Cuomo's] playing." But "he might back Cuomo": "I'm not fussy. I want a winner" (Carl Leubsdorf, DALLAS MORNING NEWS, 11/13).

ON THE BUBBLE: "While Harkin drew applause by promising to 'get tough' on trade with Japan 'and quit exporting our jobs,'" Clinton "evoked little enthusiasm with his challenge to American workers. Clinton said his trade and tax policies would be determined by whatever it takes 'to compete and win in the global economy,' and he said U.S. workers will be challenged to become more productive and competitive" (Gannon, DETROIT NEWS, 11/13). NE AFL-CIO pres. Gordon McDonald, a Kerrey supporter, called Kerrey's presentation "fair": "He didn't set the place on fire. ... Obviously, Tom Harkin is the favorite son in this group. For all the baggage Tom Harkin has carried, labor should endorse him." Harkin "made one point directed at Kerrey," when he noted he was the only candidate who voted against the fast-track Mexican trade proposal. Kerrey voted with the administration on the Mexican free-trade agreement. "But when Kerrey and Clinton defended their positions in favor of fast-track authority, Harkin avoided further direct criticism of the two. Instead, he criticized Bush for fostering trade policies that he said benefit American companies using cheap labor to produce products for the U.S. market" (Kotok, OMAHA WORLD-HERALD, 11/13). While Harkin "struck the most responsive chord," Kerrey and Clinton "also drew positive reviews" (Balz/Swoboda, WASH. POST, 11/13). "In his closing statement, Clinton tried to appeal to blacks, saying his grandfather ran a small-town store in [AR] that had many poor black customers who needed food": "And he fed them if they were good people, even before food stamps." His statement "startled some," including one of Detroit Mayor Coleman Young's top aides, Larry Simmons: "It was grossly inappropriate, and I resented it" (DETROIT FREE PRESS, 11/13).

DIFFERENT TACK: Wilder courted labor by linking "the experiences of working class and black Americans, and by accusing the Bush administration of practicing 'code word politics' with both" (Margaret Edds, NORFOLK VIRGINIAN-PILOT). "If Wilder succeeded in part of his debate strategy -- highlighting the racial theme -- he apparently was thwarted in another aim." Wilder press sec. Glenn Davidson "acknowledged that Wilder had been primed to attack [Clinton] on safety regulations, collective bargaining rights" and other labor issues in AR. "None of the questions created an opening for the planned response, however" (11/13). Wilder, "whose message often centers around fiscal responsibility, was striking a different tone today" (Robin Toner, N.Y. TIMES, 11/13). Wilder "tried to position himself as the most outsider of the bunch, asking why colleagues hadn't done anything about health care while in office" (Adam Nagourney, USA TODAY, 11/13). "Wilder chided Harkin and Kerrey for not addressing some of the nation's problems from their positions in the Senate, saying, 'You've been there. What did you do?'" (David Yepsen, DES MOINES REGISTER, 11/13). FREE PRESS covered a Wilder trip to a Mission in Detroit with headline "... wins believers" (11/13).

NOT HIS CROWD? Brown "appeared to hurt himself with his strident, one-note attack on the political system" (Balz/Swoboda, WASH. POST, 11/13). "Brown's condemnation of special interest money seemed oddly misdirected at an audience composed of unions that operate some of the most sophisticated and effective campaign money machines" (Gannon, DETROIT NEWS, 11/13). "To every question, Brown returned to his theme that both parties are out of touch and beholden to the wealthy few who fund their campaigns" (Kotok, OMAHA WORLD-HERALD, 11/13).

IN THE LION'S DEN: "Tsongas staked out more areas of disagreement with labor than did the others, opposing the striker replacement bill and supporting fast-track legislation. Tsongas also drew the biggest response of the afternoon with a stinging rebuke of Bush": "David Duke is the son of George Bush" (Balz/Swoboda, WASH. POST, 11/13). "Tsongas did not make points with the delegates when he said he is committed to arbitration of labor disputes instead of strikes. Tsongas said he would not change his position just to court labor" (Kotok, OMAHA WORLD-HERALD, 11/13). Tsongas "drew the only chilly silence of the day when he singled himself out as the only candidate who does not wholeheartedly support legislation protecting the jobs of striking workers" (Pertman, BOSTON GLOBE, 11/13). CBS' Pelley: "All of the candidates were for health care reform and job creation, but their message was often muddled. One exception: this torpedo from former Sen. Paul Tsongas." Tsongas: "David Duke is the son of George Bush" (11/12).

NETWORK CLIPS: NBC's Andrea Mitchell: "The six ... were almost overshadowed by the man who wasn't there. ... But the AFL-CIO won't endorse anyone until it sees white puffs of smoke coming out of the state capitol in Albany, [NY]." NBC's coverage of the debate included an extensive excerpt from Cuomo's PBS/C-SPAN show last week (11/12). CBS' Scott Pelley: "Today, with this six pack of candidates, there was a strong longing for more." One delegate: "I think they've got to have a much stronger candidate than these six fellows. You've gotta have voter appeal, you've gotta have a program." Second delegate: "There's going to be some candidates come forward after this. ... I'm waiting for more." Pelley: "Even now, for many delegates, there is a sense the campaign has not really started. They are still shopping. And today, many felt they saw no clear winners. Only the unsuccessful [video of Jerry Brown], and the untested [video of Clinton and Kerrey]" (11/12). Neither ABC nor CNN's "World Today" reported on the debate.

*2 NEW HAMPSHIRE: CUOMO RANKS; TSONGAS LEADS REST OF PACK

A poll, conducted 10/28-11/8 by Univ. of NH, surveyed 469 NH Dem/Ind. likely voters; margin of error +/- 5% (WMUR-TV, 11/12).

DEM PRIMARY	W/CUOMO	W/O	FAV / UNFAV	U.S. DIRECTION
Cuomo	30%	--	54% / 14%	Satisfied 12%
Tsongas	10	16%	46 / 17	Dissat. 85
Kerrey	9	13	40 / 7
Brown	5	7	31 / 28
Harkin	6	8	34 / 7
Clinton	4	5	28 / 8
Wilder	2	2	21 / 20
Undecided	34	49

MORE: 38% said Cuomo had the best chance of beating Bush; without Cuomo in the race, 61% are unsure who has the best chance of beating Bush (Manchester UNION LEADER, 11/13).

*3 KERREY: BUSH-BASHING MORE OF THE NORM?

OMAHA WORLD-HERALD's David Kotok -- noting excerpts from Kerrey's 9/30 announcement speech, "I do not believe George Bush is the enemy. A more difficult enemy for us is our own pessimism particularly the [Dem] Party": "Those lines are no longer part of Kerrey's campaign speech." Kerrey in WV last weekend: "We are squandering our resources. We're floundering around. The president is confused about what ought to be done. In Rome, he said again we're not in a recession. Denying reality. Unable to see what's going on in the country. Bewildered as to why people are getting angry." But later he added "he isn't changing his tune as he uses anti-Bush rhetoric ... particularly in areas hard hit by the recession": "I still believe he is not the enemy. I want to make sharp disagreements with his policies, in particular his absence of direct attacks on economic problems in this country" (11/12).

FEEL THE POWER: Following a Kerrey Veterans Day appearance in MD; Navy vet Bob Rigger introduced himself to Kerrey and told him, "I met Jimmy Carter when he was running in the (1976) primary, and he went on to win. I'm meeting you here and passing you this same luck that I passed him." Kerrey responded, with his hand still out: "Touch me, again" (WORLD-HERALD, 11/12).

*4 HARKIN: WRAPS UP TWO HOUSES OF IOWA DEMS

IA Senate pres. Joe Welsh (D) announced in 11/12 "fly around press conferences" that all 83 Dem members of the IA Leg. have endorsed Harkin. Harkin Iowa dir. John Norris: "It's a totally unanimous endorsement." Norris also announced a series of 88 house parties in IA to coincide with Harkin's birthday 11/19. Harkin planners hope for 1000 such gatherings across the country (Dubuque TELEGRAPH-HERALD, 11/12).

*5 CUOMO: MEMO TO DC -- WATCH OUT

NY GOPers who know Cuomo "have a message for their colleagues" in DC: "Watch out." Bush media consultant Roger Ailes "warns that Mr. Cuomo remains a formal opponent," despite the head-to-heads in recent polls. Ailes said Cuomo "is such a good speaker" that he would make a more powerful candidate than Clinton, "even though Clinton has been a success as governor four times and Cuomo has been a failure twice ... You can't discount Mario Cuomo, even though he listens to nobody except God and [son] Andrew, and not in that order." GOP consultant Jay Severin, who has followed Cuomo's career with "horrible fascination": "As a Republican and a nonsocialist, the idea of a Cuomo candidacy scares me to death." Ailes: "If he wants to make race an issue, if he wants to continue to defend Willie Horton, I think that's fine. The public will make their own decision." '90 Conservative Party gov nominee Herb London says he believes Cuomo will run -- "with an eye on 1996": "By running next year and doing better than Dukakis did, Cuomo will instantly become the frontrunner for 1996." London "believes Mr. Cuomo could pull it off in '96" (N.Y. OBSERVER, 11/11 issue).

SOUTHERN SCENARIO: "While some Northern Democrats see Cuomo as a shining hope, Southerners saw a grainy rerun" of Mondale & Dukakis, "where [Dems] failed to carry a state between the Potomac and the Rio Grande" (Henry Eichel, CHARLOTTE OBSERVER). Pollster Claibourne Darden: "He is ripe to be classified as Michael Dukakis Jr." Ex-DNC press aide Neel Latimore: "You don't get a sense of warmth from the man. I don't think Mario Cuomo is the kind of person you'd invite into your home ... He's almost like a college professor you didn't do too well under." UVA's Larry Sabato says Cuomo's opposition to the death penalty "is really what's going to kill him in the South." LG Buddy MacKay (D-FL), who is supporting Clinton: "It would play to our weakness versus Bush's strength, as was the case with Dukakis. Bush could identify Cuomo with the things that people are frustrated about with [Dems] -- big government programs and welfare programs." In NC, Dems working for statewide candidates "are worried about running with Cuomo." Ex-legislator Roger Bone: "[Cuomo] is a very capable person ... But the [GOP] will paint him as a [NY] liberal, and you couldn't sell him for love or money" (11/11).

TURKEY DAY? AP cites a BUFFALO NEWS report that Cuomo supporters "are being told they may have to wait until after Thanksgiving" to hear his plans (Manchester UNION LEADER, 11/12).

MORE: NY Dem chair John Marino "said Cuomo has decided, among other things, that this is the time to run and that he can beat the other candidates, including Bush" (Walter Robinson, BOSTON GLOBE). He is presently "seeking a two-year state budget agreement that his advisers say represents the last major hurdle to a Cuomo candidacy" (11/13). NH state Rep. Miriam Dunn (D) wrote Cuomo: "Once upon a time, I might have been a Cuomo supporter. But please, stay home and stop this nonsense. It is divisive to the Democratic Party and insulting to the voters"

(Manchester UNION LEADER, 11/13).

*6 DEM ROUND-UP

BRADLEY: BOSTON GLOBE's Walter Robinson cites "party sources" who say Sen. Bill Bradley (D-NJ) might, "outside of public view ... be thinking about entering the race. An aide to Bradley, however, called these accounts 'speculation without foundation.'" Bradley aide Anita Dunn said he "has not altered his view, expressed to [NJ] voters a year ago, that he planned to serve his full six-year term." But she "stopped short of ruling out the possibility Bradley might change his mind" (11/13).

WILDER: Norfolk VIRGINIAN-PILOT's Bonnie Winston profiles Wilder manager/ex-Rainbow Coalition staffer Joe Johnson. He says he's "confident he can work with Wilder and [his] controversial political guru, [VA Dem chair] Paul Goldman. He will be in charge of the campaign, Johnson promised: 'I'm going to run (it) ... Just get to know me'" (11/13). The Rainbow Coalition issued a statement saying Johnson and Wilder press aide Eric Easter "were hired as free agents by Governor Wilder. They have no relationship to the Rainbow or to Jesse Jackson, either directly or indirectly" (Rainbow release, 11/12). ROANOKE TIMES & WORLD NEWS editorial headline: "Why is Wilder so unpopular?" (11/13).

BROWN BAKE SALE: His supporters in NH "plan to sell brownies to raise cash" when Brown campaigns in NH this week. He will speak at UNH today (AP/Manchester UNION LEADER, 11/12).

BENTSEN: "While remaining coy about any possible White House ambitions," he said 11/11 he's "trying to discourage talk of another race" (Frank Bass, HOUSTON POST). Bentsen declined to endorse any of the current candidates and "added that he doesn't feel pressure to make another bid": "I've been doing much more in the way of discouraging such talk" (11/12).

SC: The SC primary campaign "has begun to gear up. Several [Dems] ... are organizing on behalf of" Clinton, Harkin, & Kerrey. Kerrey "might make the first visit to the state," in preparation for the 3/7 primary. Clinton & Harkin have volunteers $-raising to get matching funds, and the Clinton campaign "is beginning to look for staff members to coordinate the state campaign." Dem activist Tom Turnipseed "has helped Harkin raise money," and Wilder "is apparently behind." USC's Earl Black: "Wilder certainly should do well among blacks ... but I don't think Wilder is in a position to consolidate the black vote. My hunch is that it's going to get divided between Harkin and Clinton. ... Wilder will get a majority of black support. I think Harkin is appealing to them on issues, and Clinton might have some support" (AP/Columbia STATE, 11/10). Actually, Cuomo may be the first in SC. He will address the Fortune 500 Forum in Charleston 11/16 (HOTLINE sources, 11/12).

*7 BUSH: HITS CONGRESS HARD, RAKES IN A COOL $2 MILLION

At a $1,000/plate $-raising luncheon at NYC's Hilton Hotel, Bush "accused Democrats of selfishly wishing for the worst for the nation" (Deborah Orin, N.Y. POST, 11/13). The event, attended by over 1,500, raised over $2.2 million for his still unofficial '92 campaign. Bush "sailed into [NY] with a fusillade of criticism for his [Dem] opponents -- and pointedly avoiding any whisper of the Cuomo name" (Kovaleski/Lombardi, N.Y. DAILY NEWS, 11/13). "Bush seemed in ill humor and peevish as he complained about Congress and Democrats, several times stumbling over his words and at one point referring to the lunch as 'this dinner'" (Orin, NYP, 11/13). Bush "took up a weapon ... that had proved extremely potent in his 1988 campaign: painting himself as the guardian of the political center and the Democrats as far-out liberals." Bush: "I saw that movie, 'Home Alone' and I owe it to the American taxpayer to make sure Congress never stays home alone. ... I'm not going to be the javelin catcher for the liberals in Congress anymore." The Bush team was "trying to play down the importance" of recent polls. "The luncheon speech was clearly intended as an old-fashioned tub-thumper to rally the party faithful. ... But the speech ... also left the impression of a candidate groping for effective themes, an impression bolstered by the relative lack of loud or sustained applause. ... He blamed other factors than the Presidency for economic problems, calling for a cut in credit card interest rates and at another all but blaming" Senate Maj. Leader George Mitchell (D-ME) "personally for the economic downturn" (Andrew Rosenthal, N.Y. TIMES, 11/13). Bush "portrayed himself as having a full program to deal with the nation's ills and said [Dems] have resisted that program at every turn. ... Bush's address ... prompted little applause or enthusiasm as [he] moved from one topic to another, rarely devoting more than a few seconds to any theme" (Ann Devroy, WASH. POST, 11/13). "... a scathing speech that also appeared to accuse ... Mitchell of personally triggering the recession. ... Bush threw more verbal shots at Congress in a speech last night before the non-partisan Asia Society" (Frank Murray, WASH. TIMES, 11/13). Bush on his postponed Asia trip: "That trip is going to be put back on, because it's too important" (WASH. POST, 11/13). "Bush carefully avoided mentioning Gov. Cuomo by name, but that didn't stop Cuomo ... from firing back. Cuomo said Bush ... should look in the mirror to see why consumers are disheartened": "The problem of the [Dems] was not that they were too pessimistic, it was that they were sold a bill of goods by voodoo economics." Bush was "effusive" in his praise of Sen. Al D'Amato (R-NY), up in '92. D'Amato hit Cuomo: "One unnamed governor who may -- or may not -- be running for president, thought we should be reasonable and give Saddam just a little oil and a little land" (N.Y. POST, 11/13). The only gov. Bush did mention by name was NJ's Jim Florio (D) (N.Y. DAILY NEWS, 11/13).

MEETS WITH JEWISH LEADERS: After the lunch, Bush met with Jewish leaders for the first time "since he touched off a firestorm last September by complaining about 'powerful' pro-Israel lobbyists." Leader Shoshana Cardin: "He gave a rock-solid recognition of the need of Israel to be secure. It was very positive, very friendly, very cooperative" (NYP, 11/13).

TV: ABC's Peter Jennings: "Bush was sounding optimistic about the economy today. ... He says lower interest rates will kick in soon, and boost consumer confidence. Which brings us this evening to the financial problems of rural [TN]. This fall, in a lot of TN counties, there just wasn't enough money to go around" (11/12). NBC's Jim Miklaszewski: "It's an old Ronald Reagan tactic, to paint the opposition as bad news, gloom and doom [Dems]. ... [At the $-raiser], Bush didn't even mention Mario Cuomo, but lambasted [Dems] in Congress. Under attack for the poor economy and accused of having no domestic agenda, Bush struck back." Bush: "The [Dems] believe that they can win only if times are bad." Miklaszewski: "[Dems] accused Bush of lack of leadership. ... And they're confident they've struck a nerve." Dem consultant Mark Siegel: "This man is on the ropes. He needs another war." Miklaszewski: "The economy may be hurting, but the Bush-Quayle campaign is in the chips. Bush raised more than two million dollars at this event alone" (11/12). CNN's Catherine Crier: "Descending in the polls, sagging along with the economy, President Bush hit the campaign trail and hit it hard Tuesday with some tough talk for [Dems]. [In NY], Bush lambasted [Dems] for mugging his plans to aid the economy. ... Bush renewed his call for the [capital gains] cut, saying it would help put America back to work" (11/12). GOP consultant Ed Rollins: "I think [Bush] has to go fight for a second term. ... he does have to focus on domestic issues. All the great successes he's had in the foreign policy arena ... will mean very little to the American public if the economy doesn't get moving." Dem consultant Bob Beckel: "Bush's poll numbers are catching up with his economic numbers. Republicans can back into the White House by running a negative campaign against the Democrats. The Democrats can't do that ... they have to have a program and tell the American people who are cynical about Democrats in the White House, 'here's our program, here's where we're going to take you'" ("CBS This Morning," 11/13). NBC's Henry Champ: "In Detroit, six declared Democratic candidates all promised union leaders they would support a national health scheme. In New York, the President ignored that issue but did defend against Democratic charges his concern has been foreign, not domestic. ... [Bush] was on the defense in New York, but Democratic candidates weren't lighting any fires in Detroit either ... what is emerging is the overwhelming importance of domestic issues" ("Today," NBC, 11/13). ABC's Karen Burnes: "Although Pres. Bush has not yet declared his intentions, he's acting much like a candidate, trying to persuade American voters his actions abroad have been carefully calculated to effect jobs and security at home" ("Good Morning America," 11/13).

ROUND-UP: The Eagleton Poll, conducted 10/22-30, surveyed 800 NJ adults; margin of error +/- 3.5% (Newark STAR-LEDGER, 11/10).

*8 QUAYLE: DOONESBURY LEADING TO REVISIONIST COVERAGE?

The already infamous Trudeau cover-up strip began running 11/12 despite some wide-spread misgivings. ABC's Jeanne Meserve: "The Washington Post and most other Doonesbury subscribers will run the series even though Rick Redfern's real-life reporter brethren have investigated the same story and have come up empty-handed." ATLANTA JOURNAL-CONSTITUTION's John Walter: "Trudeau, who is great at living on the edge, in our opinion went too far." WASH. POST's Mary Hadar: "He is asking the question, was there some action taken that was unusual and maybe improper to stop these allegations from getting aired? I think that's fair game for a political cartoonist" (ABC, 11/12). NEWSWEEK's Jonathan Alter: "The reason the story didn't ignite ... is that despite extensive digging, not a shred of real evidence has been presented to suggest that Quayle ever used cocaine." Alter finds Trudeau "in the unlikely mold of Alan Simpson at the Anita Hill hearings -- spreading personal innuendo" (11/18 issue). BOSTON GLOBE's Tom Oliphant damns the press printing it all as the "great American Scandal Machine, which treats rumor and fact indiscriminately, and can't differentiate between a federal agency checking a tip and launching a serious investigation" -- "It's bad enough that [Quayle] has been slandered in a comic strip. What is incomprehensible is that the press has compounded the slander by treating it as news" (11/13). NOTE: The GLOBE is running the strip. Papers not running it because the allegations "were found to be untrue" include CHICAGO TRIBUNE, ATLANTA JOURNAL & CONSTITUTION, SAN JOSE MERCURY NEWS, ORLANDO SENTINEL, PROVIDENCE JOURNAL-BULLETIN, DAYTON DAILY NEWS, Stamford ADVOCATE, BUFFALO NEWS (N.Y. TIMES, 11/12).

REVISIONISM: Alter, who says Quayle "looks like the victim" (and "in today's high-tech-lynch-mob world, of course, the biggest 'victim' wins"), reports four major newspapers have long profiles of Quayle upcoming. The "new angle most likely will be -- surprise! -- that Quayle is not as dumb and unimportant as we have been led to believe. He actually has good political instincts on Capitol Hill and within the GOP, and is listened to inside the White House" (NEWSWEEK, 11/18). The first comes in today's long BOSTON GLOBE examination of the VP and his job by Michael Kranish -- covering everything from his Situation Room leadership in the Philippine coup against Aquino to his 42 foreign trips, but focusing mostly on his aggressive leadership of the Competitiveness Council (run by a handful of his aides, with no budget) to minimize the impact of new regulation on U.S. business. In that role he has taken some heat, but Kranish quotes his "closest adviser" Mitch Daniels: "The fact that he has taken some bold action has generated the inevitable criticism. But it has also addressed his image problem: You can't be a lightweight and a national menace at the same time" (GLOBE, 11/13). Upcoming is a 6-month look at Quayle "being prepared by David Broder and Bob Woodward of the Washington Post ... If the article does turn out to be at all favorable, it will be interpreted by the [DC] establishment as a seal of approval from the highest echelons of political (Broder) and investigative (Woodward) journalism" (Alter, NEWSWEEK, 11/18). The irony (as pointed out by Oliphant) is that Woodward is the original model (via Robert Redford and "All the President's Men") for the Rick Redfern reporter in the Doonesbury strip and "was one of the reporters who rejected the original [Quayle-drugs] story because it was false" (GLOBE, 11/13). Even NEWSWEEK's "Conventional Wisdom," which shows a sideways arrow this week, points to a new ray of hope: "If upcoming Woodward/Broder profile is positive, D could get his first up arrow ever." But in the end? "Yet another revisionist view will undoubtedly emerge to portray Quayle as just as empty as ever" (Alter, NEWSWEEK, 11/18).

PASS THE CHICKEN, PEAS: While Alter reports the VP has raised "some $15 million for GOP candidates at more than 300 events -- a lot of IOUs to be converted in 1996" (NEWSWEEK 11/18), Quayle will meet with Pat Robertson and his Christian Coalition on Friday at Virginia Beach. Purpose of the conference -- "strategy for turning out over 20 million pro-family voters in 1992" (RICHMOND TIMES-DISPATCH, 11/12). It might be a perfect place for expansion on his Magic Johnson comments: "I would not say safe sex; I would talk about abstinence. That's a sure cure, and we ought to be talking about it" (multiple, 11/9).

*9 LOUISIANA GOVERNOR: DUKE'S RELIGIOUS BELIEFS DOUBTED

State Rep. David Duke's (R) claim "to have embraced Christianity has come under growing scrutiny ... climaxing in [11/11's] assertion" (see HOTLINE 11/12) by departed aide Bob Hawks that Duke's religious faith is a "hoax" (Schleifstien/Grisett, N.O. TIMES-PICAYUNE). In every "public forum and debate, he has charged" ex-Gov. Edwin Edwards (D) "questioned the resurrection and mocked the crucifixion." Ironically, Duke's charges "have brought on a new wave of scrutiny of his own religious views." Rev. Charles Reed, a Monroe religious broadcaster, said Duke "lied about his church affiliation during a radio show" 8/91. Rev. Jim Rongstad, Duke's "spiritual adviser": "In my judgment, the Christianity of David Duke is genuine. ... if I ever experience anything like that [being tricked], I will seek out the media and spill the beans." After meeting with Duke, Conservative Christians chair Neil Curran, leader of evangelical members of the LA GOP who worked for Duke's '89 GOP state Rep. opponent John Treen, "said his group will begin broadcasting anti-Duke" spots on Christian radio. But New Covenant Fellowship Pastor Bill Shanks, who also attended the evangelical meeting with Duke: "[Duke] says he's a Christian and there was nothing in our meeting to show that he isn't" (11/13). Pollster Ed Renwick: "Duke has made such an effort to tout his Christianity; this has a possibility of hurting him." But pollster Silas Lee "predicted that most hard-core Duke supporters will believe Duke's explanation that Hawks was working for Edwards" (Perlstein/Bridges, TIMES-PICAYUNE, 11/13).

MEDIA: Duke began airing his first TV spots portraying himself "as an outsider under attack because he stands up for the little guy." In one, "he mocks The Times-Picayune and says he is the only candidate willing to talk straight on crime and welfare reform. In the second ad, he says liberals attack his views because they don't conform to liberal orthodoxy." Ad producer Rusty Cantelli, "has cut three more [ads] that will run this week." An N.O. law firm published a full-page ad in TIMES-PICAYUNE against Duke "after the firm received complaints that one of its partners had spoken favorably of Duke" (TIMES-PICAYUNE, 11/12). LA Vietnam Veterans Memorial chair Bill Ryan took out a full-page TIMES-PICAYUNE ad on Veterans Day against Duke, who "dodged the draft" (11/11). LA Chief of Police and LA Sheriffs Assn endorsed Edwards in a TIMES-PICAYUNE ad (11/11). On WSMB radio, Edwards "said he expects to get 58 percent of the vote" (Frazier/Cooper, TIMES-PICAYUNE, 11/13). Duke was on a TV talk show with WDSU anchor Norman Robinson, "the black reporter who confronted Duke about his past during last week's [TV] debate. That confrontation was not discussed" (NEWS-STAR, 11/12).

BUSINESS: Saints football owner Tom Benson, in the "first political endorsement of his life," backs Edwards (Bridges/Harrison, TIMES-PICAYUNE, 11/12). TIMES-PICAYUNE header: "N.O. fears Duke would gut help to city" (11/13). Lafayette DAILY ADVERTISER header: "Duke election fear nearly turned away Japanese delegation" (Pamela Glisson, 11/12). At the LA Assn of Business and Industry, Edwards and Duke "swapped verbal punches" as they "tried to convince [LA's] leading business lobbying group, that his election would improve" LA's business climate (Anderson/Wardlaw, TIMES-PICAYUNE, 11/9). Nat'l Assn of TV

Program Execs. said it "will move its 1997, 1998, and 1999 conventions" from N.O. if David Duke wins, costing LA an estimated $25M (TIMES-PICAYUNE, 11/13). Duke, on businesses locating in LA if he wins: "American businesses have located in Third World countries because they can make a profit" (TOWN TALK, 11/8). UNO's Timothy Ryan said a Duke win "might cost" 45,000 jobs and $1.8B in annual revenues (BUSINESS WEEK, 11/18 issue).

RECALL: ALEX. TOWN TALK's Robert Morgan writes, "One of the often-repeated reasons for voting for [Duke] is that he will not last the four-year term. Whether he will be recalled, impeached or otherwise eliminated, a vote for Duke is thought to be a vote for the [LG] to assume power." An atty, "acknowledging the near-impossible odds of collecting the necessary recall signatures ... says people will be less motivated to sign a petition" against Edwards: "No matter which one of these guys gets elected, there's going to be a recall effort. It may be in my best interests to vote for Duke because the anti-Duke forces are more committed (to recall) than the anti-Edwards forces" (11/12). SUNDAY ADVERTISER endorses Paul Hardy for LG (11/10).

POLITICS OF HATE: TIMES-PICAYUNE subhead: "Blasted Jews in '90 report." In a 5/90 interview with a Scottish journalist, "only days" after telling a crowd in at a U.S. Senate race rally that he no longer "held extremist views," Duke "said Jews were responsible for drugs and immorality in modern society and that they should be held accountable for rape, civil rights and communism": "Jews are trying to destroy all other cultures ... as a survival mechanism." Duke "said that Jews started World War II to destroy Aryan culture and that Jews ran the Russian concentration camps." Duke added that Hitler adviser Rudolf Hess should have won the Nobel Peace Prize (Bridges, 11/13). Duke claimed prisoners throughout LA "voted absentee last week, and they voted" for Edwards (TOWN TALK, 11/11). Duke, asking a crowd for $: "Either you pay me now or you pay more taxes later" (ADVERTISER, 11/12).

Poll: The Wirthlin Group surveyed 1,000 adults nationally 11/4-7; margin of error +/- 3%, asking them to rate Duke and Edwards from 1 to 100 -- 100 being most favorable. Those who "know enough" about Duke to answer: 58%, Edwards 30%. Scores: Duke 26.7, Edwards 39.4 (Wirthlin release, 11/12).

TV: CNN's Charles Zwiag: "In an effort to get out the vote, Edwards campaign sources indicate they'll spend upwards of a million dollars on election day" (11/12). Duke, interviewed on NBC's "Today": "I believe what's going on is reverse discrimination, truly the new racism of the '90s." Duke on Bush: "Maybe he's a little sensitive because of the Willie Horton commercials, I think that he's trying to play up to the liberal media" (11/13). Ex-Duke campaign coordinator Bob Hawks: "Duke is a liar. He is a ball-face liar. ... I think David Duke is like a chameleon ... he can change his color for whatever the occasion may be" ("CBS This Morning," 11/13).

*10 COLORADO: ROCK 'EM ZAKHEM

Ex-US Amb. to Bahrain Sam Zakhem (R), who ran finished 3rd in the four-person '80 GOP primary, announced his candidacy to challenge Sen. Tim Wirth (D): "I believe you'll find me on this campaign more thoughtful, more tolerant and willing to listen to diverse opinions" (John Sanko, ROCKY MOUNTAIN NEWS). Zakhem "said he wouldn't ask Bush to campaign on his behalf, but left the door open for inviting others": "I may ask some of my buddies, my comrades at arms like Norm Schwarzkopf ... some of those brave men and women who fought alongside with me ... may come and campaign for Sam Zakhem" (11/12). Zakhem cited his role in organizing a "Freedom Task Force" to rally support for Bush before and during the war as his foreign policy experience (AP, 11/12). Announced GOPer: State Rep. Ken Chlouber. Possible: State Sen. Terry Considine (R) (11/12).

*11 CONNECTICUT: GULF VET STEPS UP WHILE JOHNSON WAVERS

"Borrowing a page from President Bush's 1992 campaign primer," state Rep. Christopher Burnham (R) announced his bid against Sen. Chris Dodd (D), "blaming" the Dem-controlled Congress for the "nation's ills" (Michele Jacklin, HARTFORD COURANT). Burnham "sought to link Dodd to 'the tired policies of the past,' accusing him and other 'career politicians' of being part of the problem rather than the solution." As only 1 of 5 CT lawmakers to serve in the Persian Gulf, Burnham chided Dodd for his vote against military action. Jacklin cites analysts who believe Burnham is "not the strongest candidate the [GOPers] can field," and notes Rep. Nancy Johnson (R-06) "has reconsidered." Ex-House Min. Leader Robert Jaekle (R) "is leaning toward a run, but only if Johnson does not." Ex-state Sen. Thomas Scott (R) is also a possibility. Smith & Haroff will direct Burnham's media and Public Opinion Strategies will handle polling (11/13). COURANT's Don Noel calls Johnson "Cuomo-like," and writes she "should either get in the race or give Burnham her blessing. ... Johnson encouraged Burnham, but now is having one more look. She says the Clarence Thomas hearings convinced her that the Senate needs a few good women" (11/13).

*12 FLORIDA: GRAHAM STRATEGY KEEPS HIM HOME

Sen. Bob Graham (D) explained "he has deliberately kept a relatively low profile" in DC, focusing on FL concerns. He is "concentrating on his re-election and denying any interest in a spot on the national ticket in 1992" (Paul Anderson, MIAMI HERALD). He believes the strategy "eventually will make him a national figure": "I believe firmly that [FL] is one of the most significant places in America in terms of understanding the future of this country." But Graham said "he will take nothing for granted" in '92 because it "will be the first time his name appears on a statewide ballot during a presidential election." Graham has already collected nearly $1.5 million, including trips to NYC, Atlanta, Chicago, Dallas, L.A. and other cities (11/12).

*13 INDIANA: HOGSETT OPENS CAMPAIGN ON OFFENSIVE

IN Sec/state Joseph Hogsett (D), pronouncing his devotion to "fiscal conservatism," announced his candidacy to challenge GOP Sen. Dan Coats (Joe Fahy, INDIANAPOLIS NEWS). In "an apparent reference to [Coats'] support" of base-closings, Hogsett criticized the scheduled closing of IN military bases. Coats manager Brose McVey defended Coats' support of base-closings, saying Coats "'felt it would be hypocritical' to oppose them when he advocated cuts in military spending" (11/12). Coats "will make his support for term limits a centerpiece of his campaign, and hit [Hogsett] hard on Hogsett's willingness to leave the decision in the hands of the voters." They believe "they have a bona fide winning issue on their hands; to fight back, Hogsett handlers are likely to make hay out of Sen. Coats' status as a [DC] insider since 1980" (IN LEGISLATIVE INSIGHT, 11/11 issue).

14 MARYLAND: KEYES TO GIVE SENATE ANOTHER SHOT

Citizens Against Government Waste head Alan Keyes (R) has filed candidacy papers to challenge Sen. Barbara Mikulski (D) and scheduled a "campaign kickoff" 11/20 in Towson (Tom Bowman, Balto. SUN). Keyes, who lost an '88 bid to oust Sen. Paul Sarbanes (D), noted the public's dissatisfaction with Congress: "Barbara Mikulski is a part of that problem. She represents a failed ideology" (11/13). Meanwhile, Harford Co. State's Atty Joseph Cassilly (R) "says he is stepping up his travels around the state in an attempt to reach his target audience: middle-class residents he says have been forgotten by Congress." Although Mikulski, "who also espouses her regard for the middle class, has huge advantages in fund-raising and recognition," Cassilly "said he hoped to gain" from the anti-incumbent movement. Other: Caroline Co. consultant Stuart Hopkins (R) (Balto. EVENING SUN, 11/12).

15 NORTH DAKOTA: CONRAD POLL SHOWS HIM IN GOOD STANDING

A Garin-Hart poll, conducted 10/10-13 for Sen. Kent Conrad (D), surveyed 500 LVs; M/E not given (HOTLINE estimate +/- 4.38%) (Garin-Hart release, 11/8). Tested: Conrad, Fargo City Commis. Steve Sydness (R) and ND Public Service Comm. Dale Sandstrom (R).

16 SOUTH CAROLINA: HARTNETT JUMPS IN, TAKES WAR VOTE JAB

Ex-Rep. Tommy Hartnett (R) announced his candidacy to challenge Sen. Fritz Hollings (D), calling Hollings an "'arrogant entrenched politician,' who represents what's wrong with America" (Clark Surratt, KNIGHT-RIDDER/Columbia STATE). Hartnett "hit Hollings for his vote" against the Persian Gulf war and "for supporting a national sales tax." Hollings now contends such a tax would be bad timing. Gov. Carroll Campbell (R) agreed to serve as Hartnett's honorary campaign chair. He and Hartnett "sharply dismissed" a rumor that Hartnett is merely "holding a place for Campbell until the governor gets his legislative program in place early next year." GOP sources said Campbell was "tempted" to run, but deferred to Hartnett "when Hartnett produced a poll that showed him within striking distance of Hollings" (11/13). GOP pollster Whit Ayres: "If Tommy puts together the right kind of campaign, he has the potential to defeat Fritz." Hollings noted, "The RNC has been waving $600,000 around for someone to run" (Charleston POST & COURIER, 11/9). Hollings campaigned 11/11 in Columbia and received a special law enforcement award" from FBI dir. William Sessions (STATE, 11/12).

17 WASHINGTON: CHALLENGE TO ADAMS THICKENS

Two GOPers announced their bids to unseat Sen. Brock Adams (D) in two days. Public Lands Commis. Brian Boyle (R) announced on 11/12, while state Sen. Leo Thorsness (R), a Medal of Honor winner and 6-year POW, said he will run on 11/11. Thorsness "apparently will emphasize his military record" (Mark Matassa, SEATTLE TIMES). Thorsness: "If six years of brutality by my North Vietnamese captors could break my bones but not my spirit, certainly no Washington, D.C., special-interest [PAC] will ever control me or intimidate me" Matassa notes Thorsness' rejection of PAC $ is a "different approach" than he took in his '88 state Sen. campaign, when he "raised about ... $40,000 from the business PAC United for Washington" (11/11). His candidacy has been greeted "with some coolness by GOP circles, for fear he will win the primary but be too conservative to beat Adams." Thorsness "seemed willing to attack" primary foe Rep. Rod Chandler (R-08) when he "pointedly referred to 'an incumbent' who was saying 'Elect me, so I can clean up the mess in [DC]': "I thought, 'Holy Mackerel, who made it'" (Boren, SEATTLE POST-INTELLIGENCER, 11/12). In his announcement, Boyle "spoke almost contemptuously" of Adams, calling him a "shadow senator" in reference to his time spent in WA (P-I, 11/13). NRSC chair Phil Gramm (R-TX) told WA GOPers "it is time to remedy the 'embarrassment'" of Adams' election to the Senate (Joel Connelly, P-I, 11/12). Another possible Goper: King Co. exec. Tim Hill.

ADAMS HANGS TOUGH: "Despite persistent grumblings in his own party that he can't win," Adams "insists he is running for re-election and likens the whisperings of his critics to the 'wind blowing in the leaves'" (Les Blumenthal, TACOMA NEWS TRIBUNE). He "believes voters have grown weary of constant references to a 4-year-old allegation that he drugged and molested a female congressional aide," and are instead, "starting to focus on his record." Still, he warns: "I won't back up from anybody if they start to attack me personally or otherwise." But some "skeptics ...see no way [he] can shift attention" from the allegations to his legislative record (11/10).

*18 NORTH CAROLINA: GOV PRIMARY SPLITS TARHEEL DEMS

The 5/92 Dem primary "has caused a split" between supporters of ex-Gov. Jim Hunt and AG Lacy Thornburg, "based on old loyalties, geographic ties and hard-nosed political decisions" about who has the best chance of winning (Rob Christensen, Raleigh NEWS & OBSERVER). Guilford Co. Dem chair Ellen Emerson: "What it's going to come down to is which one will raise the most money and which one runs stronger. ... it takes some big bucks." Hunt "is regarded as having the edge in support among the [Dem] Party regulars." But Thornburg "starts the primary with a strong regional appeal in the western part of the state" where he is a judge. Thornburg also entered the race a year before Hunt, so "he has been able to line up some early commitments" (11/11). Hunt, Thornburg, GOPer Rudy Hooper, and atty Marcus Williams debated environmental issues 11/9 in a forum sponsored by the Conservation Council of NC (AP/Columbia [SC] STATE, 11/10).

*19 WEST VIRGINIA: BENEDICT ENTERS RACE

Agric. Commis. Cleve Benedict (R) announced for governor 11/12, saying he "isn't concerned" about Gov. Gaston Caperton's (D) campaign treasury: "I have always assumed I am going to be outspent by Mr. Caperton" (Cunningham/Owens, CHARLESTON DAILY MAIL). Benedict is currently the only declared candidate, though Caperton's "campaign machine has raised roughly $1 million without formally announcing" his candidacy. Benedict "said [WV] has a history of attracting two types of candidate for governor -- those who purchase the office, and those who are bought once in office": "We must smash that tradition and recapture the governor's office for the people." AG Mario Palumbo (D) "says he still may challenge Caperton" for the Dem nomination, "but speculation in state political circles" is that he will run for re-election as AG. Ex-WV GOP chair John Raese criticized Benedict for refusing to "take strong stands": "He's probably got a blister on his ass from riding the fence." While Raese announced 8/91 he would not run, he "would not close the door": "There's an old adage in politics. Never say never" (11/12).

*20 SENATE "A" SEAT: BOXER LAUNCHES THOMAS/HILL ADS

Rep. Barbara Boxer (D-06) "hit the airwaves" in S.F. and L.A. with a $100,000 buy of a 30-second spot 11/10 (Cathleen Decker, L.A. TIMES). The ad "draw renewed attention" to the Clarence Thomas/Anita Hill debate, and represents the "first snow flurries before a blizzard, for next year, Californians will be inundated" by ads for the as many as 10 contenders for both Sen. seats. Boxer's ad opens with a shot of Sen. Strom Thurmond (R-SC), ranking minority member of the Judiciary Cmte. Boxer mentions there are only two women in the Senate and says, "It's time to change the way the Senate works, because I gotta tell you, it's just not working now." The ad is "aimed at potential donors who are upset" over the Thomas/Hill debate. Referring to the early timing of the ad, Boxer manager Rose Kopolczynski said, "You need to talk to voters when they are ready to listen to you." LG Leo McCarthy (D) "criticized Boxer" for missing votes while filming the ads. A Boxer aide said this ad was filmed on a Saturday, but acknowledged Boxer did miss two votes on disaster relief to Oakland and the Bay Area, and on Head Start during earlier filming. McCarthy manager Roy Behr: "He wouldn't miss anything as important as that" (11/9). Boxer media man Jim Margolis said the hearings "became a lightning rod for frustration and anger. Barbara felt it too" (WASH. POST, 11/13).

BATTLE FOR WOMEN'S VOTE: Dukakis manager/USC prof. Susan Estrich, referring to Boxer in an L.A. TIMES op-ed: "If anyone is the likely beneficiary of activists' desire to elect women to the Senate, it's the woman who led the women of the House up the Senate stairs." One problem is that she and Rep. Mel Levine (D-27) are "targeting many of the same activists, donors and, ultimately, voters." Despite Levine's "solid" record on women's issues and his "outspoken opposition" to DoJ's "support" of Operation Rescue in Wichita, "Levine might have some explaining to do. If there's no difference" between the two, "why not vote for the woman?" (11/10). S.F. CHRONICLE's Larry Liebert writes Boxer "can offer herself ... as an [sic] woman who has challenged the male congressional establishment from the inside" (11/7).

*21 GOVERNOR: WILSON GETS SOME QUALITY TIME

In an interview with TIME, Gov. Pete Wilson (R) "warns that [CA] is confronting a painful choice: be less generous to newcomers or be buried by relentless growth. ... This is a rich state by any number of indexes. But as with a rich country, there are practical limits to what you can do. There are also political limits to what people are willing to assume in the way of burdens." On slowing population growth: "We will have to minimize the magnetic effect of the generosity of this state.

... people immediately will say, 'You're anti-poor people.' I'll be accused of racism. The fact of the matter is, Californians are having to pay a disproportionate share of the national burden for supporting the poor." Wilson said either CA has to be "less generous, or better, ask the Federal Government -- notably the Congress -- to give some relief" (11/18 issue).

*22 THIS MORNING: ABC's "GMA" hosted Revs. John Hewett and Billy Cline on the Southern Baptist convention. NBC's "Today" hosted LA gov candidate David Duke, GOP consultant Bethel Nathan, and Dem consultant Michael Donilon, and ex-President Jimmy Carter on Atlanta's urban poor. "CBS This Morning" hosted GOP consultant Ed Rollins and Dem consultant Bob Beckel on Bush, and ex-Duke campaign aide Bob Hawks (11/13).

LAST NIGHT: CBS and CNN led with the Health Care Reform Coalition's health care proposals. ABC led with an update on the Mideast peace talks. NBC led with the MI AFL-CIO Dem debate. PBS' "MacNeil/Lehrer" led with the dynamics of the Soviet coup and hosted Kettering Inst's David Mathews. CNN's "Crossfire" interviewed Nat'l Assn for Working Women's Ellen Bravo and W. TIMES' Suzanne Fields on sexual harassment. CNN's "Larry King Live" interviewed Citizen Medical's Michael Kennedy. ABC's "Nightline" hosted "October Surprise" author Gary Sick and NEW REPUBLIC's Steven Emerson (11/12).

ARE VOTERS BORED?: PBS' Jim Lehrer: "There is increasing evidence the polls, the candidates, and even the president are ... of interest mostly only to themselves and the journalists who cover them." Mathews: "We see a lot of evidence now of people not voting, as a way of voting against the system. The real challenge, is to get the formal political system reattached to the politics that people practice in trying to deal with local problems. ... It's not unreasonable for us to think that the public is more than a collection of interest groups. We all belong to interest groups. ... But the public interest is more than the sum total of the interest groups. ... The people that [politicians] hear from ... are the organized public. But that makes the average citizen feel even more left out ... So the elected leaders have a real tough sell against the cynicism that's out there." Mathews on people's opinion of the media: "They feel that the press sometimes interferes with their right to hear all sides. ... They don't find often in the press treatment [of] the things that they are concerned about when they look at the issues" ("M/L," 11/12).

SURPRISE?: ABC's Ted Koppel: "Several of us here at 'Nightline' who have been covering this story for years ... are confused. I, for one, find myself equally uncomfortable and also uncertain that the case has been made that members of the Reagan/Bush campaign helped delay the release of American hostages held in Lebanon back in 1980 ... just as uncomfortable with them as I am with those who declare the whole story a farce." ABC's Jeff Greenfield: "New information has also surfaced about the credibility of some of the leading sources for this story, and two national magazines, NEWSWEEK and the NEW REPUBLIC, report their conclusions that the October Surprise never happened." Sick: "We've identified three different times William Casey was out of the country, and if this had happened under the Carter administration and somebody had made these accusations, there would have been a flood of people coming forward saying 'I was with him that day, I know where he was, he wouldn't do such a thing' ... in this case, it has been dead silence." Emerson: "It's akin to the Hitler diaries hoax. Essentially this revolves around three or four people that have consistently embellished lies about themselves, inserted themselves in the center of major events, and fabricated major, major stories. They are documented perjurers and fabricators ... every single source Mr. Sick relies on, every single one, has been indicted or has been the subject of a federal investigation" (ABC, 11/12).

THE POLITICS OF RACE: NBC's Lisa Myers: "What makes today's brand of racial politics different is that it's less subtle and more potent. It's not that more voters are bigots ... it's that more feel economically threatened. Dem consultant Stan Greenberg: "There are a lot of angry Americans out there. There is an economy that's sinking and for many voters, race captures a particularly egregious part of their economic difficulties." Myers: "Experts warn that racial appeals will become even more powerful if the economy worsens and voter alienation grows ... win or lose, the politics of race works" ("Today," 11/13).

THE POLITICS OF HUMOR: NBC's Jay Leno on LA gov candidates: "You got David Duke, former head of the [KKK], versus Edwin Edwards, former womanizer ... hard part is figuring out which one has spent more time under the sheets." On the economy: "The politicians are all out there going to the $1,000 a plate dinners ... the way the economy's going, ALL dinners will be $1,000 a plate pretty soon." On Bush: "Bush said he'd go the 'extra mile' to help the economy ... if he really wants to help he should stay at home and stop going those extra miles." On Cuomo's indecision: "He wanted to flip a coin but the New York State budget didn't have one." On term limits: "People say once a politician gets into office there is no way to get him out ... really? Gee, why don't we try voting once in awhile." On Quayle/Doonsbury: "In fact just today [Quayle's] doctor came out and said 'Dan Quayle does not take drugs, that's just the way he always acts.'" On the opening of the Reagan library: "If you noticed, ex-President Jimmy Carter was surrounded by extra heavy security ... see, he's the only living Democratic president so he's protected under the Endangered Species Act" ("Tonight," 11/12).

AIDS ACTIVISTS CALL BUSH INVITATION TO MAGIC JOHNSON

Some AIDS activists say President Bush's request that Magic Johnson join the AIDS Commission, though welcome, is only window-dressing. But members of the panel say it demonstrates a White House commitment to fight the disease....

[Regarding the announcement of the invitation to Johnson], Gregory King, spokesman for the Human Rights Campaign Fund, an AIDS advocacy group, said, "We're more interested in having the President follow the recommendations of the commission than focus on individuals. "There is no evidence President Bush has ever read any of the commission's reports, and he certainly has never implemented their recommendations or followed their call for greater presidential leadership." Rep. Rowland agreed that "Bush should do more." But he said Johnson might be just the individual to make him do so.... "Our report was really quite critical of the silence from the White House, but simply asking Johnson to be on the commission...means the President is willing to speak out on the issue," added David Rogers, a commission member and professor of medicine at Cornell University Medical College.

HEALTH PLAN WINS MAJOR SUPPORT

The movement for an overhaul of the nation's health care system gained an important endorsement Tuesday from an alliance of unions, major U.S. corporations and two former presidents.

The National Leadership Coalition for Health Care Reform, unveiling a plan for a broad restructuring of health care, brought together support from Chrysler Corp., Bethlehem Steel Corp., food, utility and paper companies, as well as former presidents Carter and Ford and some of the country's biggest unions....

The plan would require all employers to provide private health insurance to their workers or pay a payroll tax of 7 percent, matched by an employee tax of 1.75%, to help the government provide coverage.... Workers not covered on the job and the unemployed would receive private insurance policies purchased for them by the states, using funds from the 7 percent tax and related taxes....

Secretary Sullivan repeated his "most serious reservations" about the kind of plan offered by the coalition. "We must address the problems that are preventing so many smaller businesses from offering health insurance," Sullivan said. "An immediate objective should be to take steps to make insurance affordable for all businesses, and indeed all Americans."

$5.2 BILLION COMPROMISE NEAR ON JOBLESS AID

The White House and congressional Republican and Democratic leaders said late Tuesday they were close to agreeing on a compromise $5.2 billion package of extended benefits for millions of jobless workers whose regular benefits have expired....

The plan, offered by Rep. Rostenkowski, would provide up to 20 weeks of additional benefits for unemployed workers who have exhausted their regular benefits since last March or who will exhaust their benefits by next summer.

SOME CREDIT CARD GIANTS CUTTING RATES

Some of the nation's biggest credit card issuers are experimenting with a revolutionary way to attract customers -- cutting their prices.

Breaking the logjam that saw seven of the top 10 issuers charging interest rates of 19.8% or higher, No. 6 First Chicago Corp. has quietly cut the rate for some of its 10 million cardholders to 14.4 percent. The move follows the announcement by No. 11 Banc One of Ohio last week of a new 13.9 percent credit card with a $25 annual fee.

Support for the lower rates came from an unexpected source Tuesday when President Bush interrupted a fund-raising luncheon address Tuesday in New York to jawbone down the cost of credit cards.

BUSH SHOWS CUOMO-LIKE INDECISION ON ECONOMY

Call Mario Cuomo indecisive? You should see President Bush agonizing over what to do to prod the economy.

So self-assured on foreign policy, the President has been frozen for weeks on a prospective economic-growth package as he watches his poll ratings slipping as steadily as some recent economic indicators.

Bush doesn't want to become an unemployment statistic himself next year. Yet his advisers are torn over what course to set as election year approaches.

His vacillations have come to resemble Governor Cuomo's celebrated inability to make up his mind on a presidential bid.

CUOMO ON VERGE OF DECISION; BRADLEY POSSIBLY CONSIDERING RUN

Amid fresh evidence that President Bush's job approval rating is on a downward slope, Democratic eyes are turned to New York and to Governor Cuomo.

And, it turns out, to New Jersey, and Sen. Bradley.

Cuomo is on the verge of deciding whether to become the seventh candidate to pursue the Democratic presidential nomination....

Bradley, according to party sources, may also be thinking about entering the race. An aide to Bradley, however, called these accounts "speculation without foundation."

The House then passed H.R. 3489, the Export Administration Act, by voice vote. The bill is under a senior advisor's veto threat chiefly because it unilaterally lifts COCOM controls on the sale of fiber optic technology to the Soviet Union.

On Thursday the House passed the rule to accompany H.R. 6, the Deposit Insurance and Regulatory Reform Act of 1991 (the banking bill), by a narrow margin of 210 to 208. The rule made in order Title IV, the Dingell/Gonzalez compromise, which is the subject of a senior advisors' veto threat because it would weaken the banking system and increase taxpayer exposure to deposit insurance fund losses. However, Minority Leader Michel (R-IL) agreed to support the rule based on a statement from Speaker Foley (D-WA) that there were enough votes to defeat Title IV. Subsequently, Republicans became outraged when Representative Doug Barnard's (D-GA) amendment to strike Title IV failed, by a vote of 200 to 216. The House also took the following action:

- defeated Representative Charles Schumer's (D-NY) amendment that would provide for the creation of core banks, by a vote of 106 to 312.
- defeated Representative Matthew Rinaldo's (R-NJ) amendment which would have allowed commercial firms to purchase failing banks, by a vote of 137 to 272.

As a result of the failure to defeat Title IV, the Republican leadership in the House sought and obtained approval from the Secretary of the Treasury to declare H.R. 6 dead. The leadership resolved to blame the Democrats and hold firm until the time the Democratically controlled House passes a real banking reform bill.

On Friday the House defeated a motion, offered by Minority Leaders Michel, to rise from consideration of H.R. 6, by a vote of 158 to 243. The House is expected to complete action on the bill Monday. House Republicans will likely offer a motion to recommit the bill in an attempt to make it acceptable to the Administration.

SENATE

On Wednesday the Senate passed S. 1745, the Civil Rights Act of 1991, by a vote of 93 to 5. The bill would overturn a series of recent Supreme Court decisions regarding employment discrimination law. During consideration of the bill, the Senate took the following action:

- Passed a compromise amendment by Senator Charles Grassley (R-IA) and Senator George Mitchell (D-ME) establishing a Senate Fair Employment Office to deal with Senate employee grievances concerning

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: FREDERICK D. McCLURE FM
SUBJECT: Weekly Legislative Report

THE WEEK OF OCTOBER 28 - NOVEMBER 1

HOUSE AND SENATE FLOORS

HOUSE

✓ On Monday the House passed H.R. 3401, the Silvio O. Conte Disability Prevention Act Amendments of 1991, by voice vote. This five year reauthorization measure would provide grants to States for the development of disability prevention programs.

On Tuesday the House passed H.J.Res. 281, extending Most Favored Nation Status to the Mongolian People's Republic and H.J.Res. 282, extending Most Favored Nation Status to Bulgaria, by voice vote.

The House then passed H.R. 3543, the Dire Emergency Supplemental bill, by a vote 252 to 162. During consideration of the bill the House took the following action:

- approved Representative Patricia Schroeder's (D-CO) amendment, providing $1.39 billion for Headstart, the Women, Infants and Children Program (WIC), and a child immunization initiative, by a vote of 243 to 180.
- approved Representative Jamie Whitten's (D-MS) amendment, providing an additional $335 million to FEMA for recent disasters such as the California wildfires, by voice vote.

✓ On Wednesday the House disapproved H.R. 2508, the FY 1992-93 Foreign Assistance Authorization bill, by a vote of 159 to 262. The Democrats were split on the vote with 131 supporting and 127 against. Only 28 Republicans voted for the bill. This bill is under a senior advisors' veto threat because of objectionable UNFPA, Mexico City policy, and cargo preference provisions.

discrimination based on religion, color, sex, or national origin, by voice vote.

- ✓ -- Tabled an amendment by Senator Mitch McConnell (R-KY) that would limit the contingency fees that lawyers collect for employee discrimination cases to 20 percent of the total award, by a vote of 68 to 30.
- Tabled an amendment by Senator Don Nickles (R-OK) that would have allowed Senate employees to have jury trials in cases of discrimination and would have allowed them to collect punitive damages, by a vote of 61 to 38.
- Passed an amendment by Senator John Warner (R-VA) that would allow career federal employees to sue for compensatory damages in cases of intentional discrimination, by voice vote.
- Passed an amendment by Senator Warren Rudman (R-NH) requiring Presidents and Senators to reimburse the government for any fines levied for unfair employment practice offenses, by voice vote.

On Wednesday the Senate passed the conference report to accompany H.R. 2686, the FY 1992 Interior Appropriations bill, by a vote of 93 to 4. On Thursday the Senate considered amendments in disagreement with the conference report. Senator Jesse Helms (R-NC) offered language to eliminate National Endowment for the Arts funding of obscene material, which was tabled by a vote of 73 to 25.

On Friday the Senate voted down a motion to invoke cloture on the motion to proceed to S. 1220, the National Energy Security Act of 1991, by a vote of 50 to 44. At this time, it is uncertain whether Senator Bennett Johnston (D-LA) will seek another cloture vote.

Also on Friday the Senate confirmed Michael Moskow to be Deputy U.S. Trade Representative.

HOUSE AND SENATE COMMITTEES

HOUSE

On Tuesday the House Judiciary Committee reported out H.R. 3341, legislation which lifts the honoraria ban on most federal workers. The measure would also relax ethics rules to allow former senior government officials to lobby their former colleagues if the contacts are on behalf of a political party or campaign.

On Wednesday the House Ways and Means Committee approved by voice vote H.R. 3624, to change procedures for appointment of the chairman of the U.S. International Trade Commission (ITC). The measure is supported by the Administration and is scheduled for consideration on the floor Tuesday.

SENATE

On Tuesday the Senate Foreign Relations Committee marked up S.Res. 198, legislation to authorize the Committee on Foreign Relations to exercise investigatory powers in connection with its inquiry into the "October Surprise," the release of the U.S. hostages in Iran.

On Wednesday the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee unanimously reported out S. 1150, legislation to reauthorize the Higher Education Act of 1965, which mandates that Pell grants become an entitlement. An amendment by Senator Nancy Kassebaum (R-KS) to strike this provision was defeated.

On Thursday Richard Kerr, acting Director of the Central Intelligence Agency, testified in closed session before the Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee on Terrorism, Narcotics and International Operations on CIA involvement with the scandal-plagued Bank of Credit and Commerce International.

The conference on the FY 1992 DOD Authorization bill has tentatively completed work. Only the question on allowing abortions in overseas military medical facilities remains outstanding. However, but we expect this to be resolved in our favor. The bill contains $2.8 billion for B-2 bomber procurement, but authorizes only one plane contingent on the completion of certain tests and a second congressional vote. The bill also contains the basic elements of the bipartisan SDI program crafted this year by the Senate, provides $4.1 billion for SDI, including $390 million for "Brilliant Pebbles," and lifts the ban on women in combat.

APPROPRIATIONS CONFERENCES

On Friday the conferees on H.R. 2707, the FY 1992 Labor/HHS Appropriations bill completed action. The objectionable abortion language regarding counseling regulations for Title X family planning clinics, the so-called "gag rule," remains unchanged. The bill is scheduled to be considered in the House on Wednesday.

Nominations:

On Wednesday the Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee held a confirmation hearing on the nominations of Leslee Alexander and Victor Gold to the Board of Directors of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting.

THE WEEK OF NOVEMBER 4 - NOVEMBER 8

HOUSE AND SENATE FLOORS

HOUSE

On Monday the House will complete consideration of H.R. 6, the Deposit Insurance and Regulatory Reform Act of 1991 (the banking bill).

On Tuesday the House will debate a number of bills including: H.R. 3624, which amends the Tariff Act to provide for the appointment of the Chairman of the U.S. International Trade Commission; H.R. 3350, the Civil Rights Commission Reauthorization Act of 1991; H.R. 3298, the Farm Credit Banks and Associations Safety and Soundness Act of 1991; and H.R. 2130, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration Authorization Act of 1991.

On Wednesday, and for the balance of the week, the House is expected to consider H.R. 2, the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1991; H.R. 1, the Civil Rights Act of 1991; the Democratic leadership's new unemployment compensation bill; H.R. 2707, the FY 1992 Labor/HHS Appropriations bill; and H.R. 2837, the Milk Inventory Management Act of 1991.

SENATE

On Monday the Senate will begin consideration of the nomination of Robert M. Gates to be Director of Central Intelligence. The Senate will vote on the nomination no later than 6:00 p.m. Tuesday.

Later in the week, the Senate will likely consider S. 250, the "Motor Voter" bill which provides automatic voter registration for individuals receiving driver's licenses. Senator Bob Dole (R-KS) believes he has the votes to defeat cloture.

On Friday, the Senate will not be in session.

HOUSE AND SENATE COMMITTEES

HOUSE

On Wednesday Mayor Sharon Pratt Dixon will testify before the House District of Columbia Committee concerning H.R. 3851, which amends the District of Columbia Self-Government and Government Reorganization Act to eliminate Congressional review of newly passed District laws, and to provide the District of Columbia with autonomy over its budget.

SENATE

On Wednesday the Senate Banking Committee will vote on the nominations of Robert C. Clarke to be Comptroller of the Currency, Susan Phillips to be a Governor of the Federal Reserve, and David Bradford and Paul Wonnacott to be members of your Counsel of Economic Advisors.

The Senate Appropriations Committee is expected to mark up the FY 1992 supplemental appropriations bill.

APPROPRIATIONS CONFERENCES

Conferees will meet to reconcile differences on H.R. 2212, Representative Nancy Pelosi's legislation granting conditional MFN for China.

Presidential Log of Selected Congressional Mail

Week of October 25, 1991 - October 31, 1991

Member	Subject	Comments
Rep. Craig Thomas (R-WY) #281697	Expresses concern about your recent speech which holds "the entire Congress responsible for not implementing reform and making itself subject to all the laws of the land." States that Americans read these reports and they "don't get a clear vision that it's the Democrat majority and the Democrat leadership that has prevented these good things from happening." Asks you to differentiate between the Democrats and those "who are on your side in this important game."
Rep. Nita Lowey (D-NY) Also signed by 39 others #282298	Believe that your arms control announcement represents an unprecedented breakthrough in arms reduction that will greatly enhance world stability and U.S. national security. We should take the steps necessary to ensure that the number of nations possessing nuclear weapons does not continue to grow. They hope you will take this opportunity to continue to demonstrate U.S. leadership in the field of nuclear stability by pursuing negotiations toward a comprehensive test ban treaty.
Rep. Dante Fascell (D-FL) Sen. Lugar (R-IN) Sen. Simpson (R-WY) Rep. Gingrich (R-GA) Rep. Dellums (D-CA) Sen. Metzenbaum (D-OH) Also signed by 12 others #282299	State that South Africa's mineral wealth, strategic location and status as a regional power provide us with important geopolitical reasons for supporting a peaceful transition to democracy. Would welcome an announcement of a doubling of aid to black South Africans. Believe however, that the bulk of any aid initiative should be provided after adoption of a new constitution, free elections and the establishment of a democratically elected government.
Rep. Charles Rangel (D-NY) #282596	Commends the measures you have taken supporting President Aristide and the constitutional government of Haiti. In light of the grave situation in Haiti, he urges you to conduct a thorough review of U.S. detention, deportation and interdiction policies toward Haitian refugees and to consider immediately suspending those policies and extending to Haiti Temporary Protected Status.

Rep. Newt Gingrich
(R-GA)
#280626

Forwards two articles from the October 23 Washington Post portraying Republican confusion on "the current state of play on economic growth...coupled with a major advance by the Democrats." Believes that if we fail to correct the current perception and regain our momentum, we will soon find ourselves sitting idly by while the Democrats pass their so-called growth package." Calls for Republicans in Congress and the Administration to form a united front on economic growth.

Sen. Frank Murkowski
(R-AK)
Also signed by 7 others
#280888

Believe that the signing of the Cambodian settlement also begins the process of normalization with Vietnam. Urge that the Administration move quickly to lift our trade embargo against Vietnam, as it has pledged to do with Cambodia. Believe that "ending the trade embargo...will foster a meaningful resolution of the POW/MIA issue and broaden the prospects for peace and stability throughout Indochina."

Rep. John Doolittle
(R-CA)
Also signed by 56 others
#281402

"Urge you to stand firm in your commitment to civil rights without supporting any legislation that would lead to quotas, like the Danforth proposal." They believe that "to compromise on a civil rights bill that may lead to quotas just to appease the 'civil rights' leadership is no way to battle discrimination."

Rep. Ralph Hall
(D-TX)
Also signed by 29 others
#281576

Request your endorsement of a multi-billion dollar (defensive border protection) program in Saudi Arabia in which a U.S. defense team is competing with a French government led industry team. Believe "a U.S. win on this program counters the impact of defense spending draw downs." States that "the Dept. of State has proposed a letter (of endorsement) for your signature which has been under review at the NSC since mid-September."

Sen. Strom Thurmond
(R-SC)
#282630

Respectfully requests that you "reconsider your decision to prohibit certain staff members from having access to FBI reports on pending nominees before the Senate Judiciary Committee." Expresses concern that "if these staff members no longer have access to the FBI files...the number of nominees considered and reported by the Senate Judiciary Committee will be substantially reduced in the future."

DEPARTMENT OF STATE
WASHINGTON

November 12, 1991

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

From: Arnold Kanter, ^{He} Acting

1. Haiti: Following meetings yesterday with the military, the de facto government, and their supporters, members of the OAS civilian mission are pessimistic. The prevailing sentiment among those holding power in Haiti is that the current regime can tough out the trade embargo without negotiating Aristide's return. They have orchestrated anti-OAS demonstrations and is suppressing efforts of pro-Aristide and pro-OAS groups to assemble. The security situation remains tense and the OAS mission has a contingency plan to take refuge at our Embassy if necessary. The OAS mission chief will decide tomorrow how long to spend in Haiti; the original plan was 4-7 days. Meanwhile, more than 400 Haitian "boat people" have been taken aboard Coast Guard cutters. Absent quick third country agreement to give them refuge, we will need to decide whether to return these people to Haiti or take them to the U.S. (Ø)

2. UN: Cuban Resolution Against US Trade Embargo. Cuba's UN delegation tabled a draft resolution yesterday against the USG trade embargo. We have not yet seen the draft, but we assume it is similar to an informal draft the Cubans circulated last week. That draft did not mention the US by name, but made implicit references to our trade embargo (which was termed a "blockade"), and asked the General Assembly to declare the embargo a violation of the UN Charter. Resolutions critical of our embargo have prevailed in the past, but vigorous demarches this year indicate that some 30 countries will vote against the Cuban resolution; 20 will vote in favor; the remainder (as many as 100) probably will abstain. (Ø)

3. MTCR Conference. The November 4-7 meeting of the 18-nation Mission Technology Control Regime made significant strides toward enhancing international controls on missile proliferation. Members agreed on the desirability of extending the Regime's focus on nuclear missile delivery systems to include missiles for chemical/biological weapons. Members also approved criteria for admitting future members, chartered renewed efforts to secure Soviet membership, and agreed to engage Eastern Europe, Argentina, and Brazil on MTCR issues. A revised and updated list of items controlled by the Regime was approved as well. (Ø)

Japan: Foreign Minister Watanabe Praises Bush's Asia Speech

OW1311051891 Tokyo KYODO in English 0508 GMT 13 Nov 91

[Text] Seoul, Nov. 13 KYODO -- Japanese Foreign Minister Michio Watanabe on Wednesday praised President George Bush's New York speech underscoring close relations between the United States and its Asian and Pacific partners.

Commenting on Bush's Tuesday evening address to the Asia Society, Watanabe said Japan anticipates an early state visit by Bush to Tokyo because of its importance for further strengthening Japan-U.S. relations.

"Needless to say, our country considers our cooperative relations with the U.S. important for the benefit of world peace and prosperity, and endeavors to further strengthen the global partnership between our two countries," he said.

Watanabe is currently in Seoul to attend a ministerial meeting of the Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) forum.
