DATE: FEBRUARY 14, 1992
TIME: 10:45 AM
LOCATION: OVAL OFFICE
THROUGH: SHERRIE ROLLINS
FROM: BOBBIE KILBERG

I. PURPOSE

To have your picture taken with Mandi Rutherford and Dan Giuliano, the National Easter Seals Society 1992 Child and Adult Representatives.

II. BACKGROUND

Mandi, a second-grader from San Diego, California, was born with spina bifida. She is paralyzed below her hips and wears body and leg braces for mobility. Easter Seals has helped Mandi and her family with some of the medical costs that she has incurred since birth. Some of Mandi's activities include swimming, roller skating, cycling and attending Junior Wheelchair sports camp where she plays tennis and has earned an orange belt in karate. Mandi will be wearing her "tae kwon do" outfit and will present you with a home-made Valentine card. Mandi has said that the most exciting part of her new job is "getting to meet President Bush," and went on to proclaim that you are "cute".

Dan, a 33 year old bereavement counselor and recipient of a master's degree in counseling psychology, is paralyzed from the waist down. He was shot during an altercation at a traffic accident when he was 18. Dan is planning to enter a doctoral program in psychology. He works out four times a week and plays wheelchair racquetball and basketball. As a spokesman for disability rights, Dan will spend the next year working to help people of all ages and disabilities achieve maximum independence. Dan will present you with the 1992 Easter Seals mounted on a walnut base.

III. PARTICIPANTS

PANEL'S DEMOCRATS DEBATE TAX RELIEF PLAN

House Ways and Means Committee Democrats Thursday debated a plan to revive the economy that would provide tax relief for the middle class at the expense of the wealthy and penalize major corporations that pay their top executives exorbitant salaries.

The economic growth package, which was presented to committee Democrats by Rep. Rostenkowski at a private meeting, takes several of President Bush's economic proposals and gives them a middle-class spin.

"I think we have every right as Democrats to write a package in contrast to what the President wants to do," Rostenkowski later told reporters. "Let the American people make a judgment about whose proposals are better or who has (in mind) the best interest of the middle Americans."...

Several Democrats after the meeting expressed enthusiasm for Rostenkowski's plan, although some said they expected substantial changes to be made in the capital gains measure and a proposed restoration in the passive loss tax benefits for the real estate industry.

(Eric Pianin, Washington Post, A4)

TAX REDUCTIONS ARE NOT AMERICANS' TOP PRIORITY

At a time when Washington is rushing to enact a package of election-year tax relief, most Americans say they would rather use the post-Cold War "peace dividend" to boost domestic spending or reduce the deficit instead of financing tax cuts, according to a new Times poll.

While Americans remain largely pessimistic about the economy, the nationwide poll found little evidence of a mounting grass-roots tax revolt that might pressure Congress to rush through the kind of anti-recession tax cuts advocated by President Bush and key Democrats....

When asked what Washington should do with the peace dividend, only 22 percent said the savings should be used to finance a tax cut. By contrast, 35 percent said the money should be used to boost spending on domestic programs, while 33 percent said it should go directly for deficit reduction.

(James Risen, Los Angeles Times)

ROMER CONTINUES ATTACK ON BUSH BUDGET

Colorado Gov. Romer Thursday continued his assault on President Bush's budget, buoyed in part by an approving constituency back home. After a speech at the National Democratic Club, in which he again accused Bush of "budgetary gimmicks," Romer said his office had gotten more than 2,000 phone calls about his celebrated set-to Feb. 3 with Bush, and about 80 percent of the callers have been supportive.

(John Brinkley, Scripps Howard)

SEC TO ALLOW VOTES ON EXECUTIVE PAY
New Shareholder Right Seen Curbing Huge Compensation Packages

The SEC Thursday granted shareholders the formal means to protest the salaries of top corporate executives, responding to a groundswell of criticism regarding multimillion-dollar compensation packages. For the first time, the SEC said it would force companies to let shareholders propose and vote on resolutions advising boards of directors on compensation of senior executives and of directors themselves.

(Robert McCartney & David Hilzenrath, Washington Post, A1)

RETAIL, AUTO SALES RISE; CLAIMS BY JOBLESS FALL
Analysts See Consumer Confidence Growing

In a surprising burst of good economic news, the government Thursday reported an increase in retail sales and fewer workers seeking unemployment benefits.

Automakers reported a sharp early February rise in sales of North American-made vehicles, offering further hope that consumers are growing more confident about spending.

Retailers rang up a 0.6 percent increase in sales in January, the biggest in eight months, the Commerce Department said in a report suggesting shoppers may be ready to help revive the economy....

A second government report, from the Labor Department, showed that new claims for unemployment insurance benefits posed their second straight decline in the week ended Feb. 1, falling 13,000 to 437,000. "It is not time for fireworks," said Secretary Martin, "but these are positive signs."

(AP, Washington Post, B1)

FORD REPORTS RECORD LOSS OF $2.3 BILLION FOR LAST YEAR

Ford Motor Co. Thursday reported a $2.3 billion loss for 1991, the biggest loss in its 89-year history. The report means that 1991 losses for the Big Three U.S. automakers probably will exceed $6 billion.... Unfortunately for the Big Three and other companies struggling for vehicle sales, the conditions that brought about last year's flood of red ink will linger in 1992, said James Mateyka, a vice president and auto industry analyst at Booz-Allen & Hamilton, Inc., a Bethesda-based consulting firm.

POOR DEMAND AT THIRD TREASURY AUCTION

NEW YORK -- The Treasury saw poor demand for its sale of $10 billion in 30-year bonds Thursday, pushing interest rates up and raising costs to the taxpayer for financing the huge U.S. budget deficit. Bond prices fell sharply after the auction produced a higher-than-expected average yield of 7.91 percent. While that was a two-year low, it was higher than analysts had expected.

TRICK FOR BUSH IS TO RUN AGAINST THE BUSH OF 1980

In a new commercial that his campaign began showing on television Thursday, President Bush gazes into a camera in the White House. He reminds New Hampshire Republicans that they "will once again lead the nation" in choosing a President and asks them to "stand united to defeat the liberal Democrats in the fall."

Campaigning in New Hampshire last month, Vice President Quayle repeatedly told voters: "The Republican revolution began here 12 years ago in the snows of New Hampshire. They've been trying to tell you made a mistake. You did not make a mistake."

There is only one catch: Bush's 1980 candidacy, built on moderate Republican themes, died in the snows of New Hampshire, where he lost badly to Ronald Reagan.

But now it is an important part of Bush's strategy for the New Hampshire primary to harken back to the Reagan legacy and present himself as a true conservative in hopes of countering Patrick Buchanan's insurgency from the right -- even if it ignores Bush's 1980 defeat. (Andrew Rosenthal, New York Times, A18)

BUCHANAN BRACES FOR WEEKEND BUSH ASSAULT

CLAREMONT, N.H. -- Patrick Buchanan says he's bracing for a weekend assault from the Bush campaign and would be flattered if it includes negative TV ads. That would be just one more sign of "the nervousness in the White House," asserts Buchanan.

With just days to go before the nation's leadoff primary, Buchanan is picking up steam and his pace. He's talking as if he really thinks he has a chance to go all the way. "I don't think they can stop me if I can break out of New Hampshire," Buchanan told the Claremont Kwanis Club. (Tom Raum, AP)

QUAYLE, DENYING GOP LEAKED CLINTON STORY, SAYS 'I SERVED'

BOSTON -- Vice President Quayle firmly denied Thursday that Republicans had leaked information about Gov. Clinton's draft record, and said the case is not similar to his own in 1988, because "I served." Asked about Clinton's assertions that Republicans leaked the story, Quayle bristled: "That is just total nonsense. There is no evidence to support that allegation. We had nothing to do with it. And we won't have anything to do with it."

CANDIDATES ZERO IN WITH FINAL AD BARRAGE

Using personal appeals, political hyperbole and some old-fashioned distortion, the presidential candidates have sharpened their attack lines in a final blizzard of ads before Tuesday's New Hampshire primary....

While Clinton has one new ad featuring a New Hampshire woman who lost her home to foreclosure, he tries in several other spots to portray himself as the victim of unfair publicity. Clinton blames "President Bush's Republican operatives" for instigating the stories about his personal life, although he has produced no evidence for this claim. (Howard Kurtz, Washington Post, A18)

SCIENTISTS DECRY BUSH INACTION ON GLOBAL WARMING

Leaders from the scientific and environmental communities are urging the Administration to take dramatic action on global warming or face responsibility for collapse of a treaty to preserve the world's climate....

The leaders of six environmental groups, including the Union of Concerned Scientists and the National Audubon Society, said Thursday they failed to get any commitments from the Administration.

"The White House has apparently decided to listen to the oil boys instead of the scientists," said John Adams, executive director of the Natural Resources Defense Council. "We're about to miss the boat, and blame will fall on the United States government if they do not act."...

Although pleased that White House officials were willing to listen, the group said they were disappointed by the reaction. Instead of accepting their recommendations, Adams said, "Skinner gave us a civics lesson. He said it is a slow, deliberate process and change will not occur by Feb. 18." (UPI)

EPA EASES BAN ON PESTICIDE, FINDING CANCER RISK OVERESTIMATED

The EPA Thursday reversed its plan to ban most uses of a popular pesticide, acknowledging that it overestimated the cancer risks of the family of chemicals previously considered a major threat to the U.S. food supply.

The decision to reinstate compounds containing EBDC for use on 45 common agricultural commodities represents a victory for pesticide manufacturers because it was based on a new method of assessing risk long promoted by the chemical industry.

SPACE INDUSTRY EXECUTIVES, TWO CONGRESSMEN EYED FOR NASA JOB

The Bush Administration is considering chief executives from the space industry and two former Democratic congressmen as possible successors to fired NASA Administrator Truly.

An Administration source said the nominee is likely to come from outside the agency. Speculation focused on non-NASA executives including Norman Augustine, the chairman and CEO of the Martin Marietta; Edward Aldridge, president of McDonnell Douglas; Joseph Allen, president of Space Industries; and two former congressmen.

The two former congressmen figuring in speculation are Edward Boland of Massachusetts, and Don Fuqua of Florida.... The Administration source said it is unlikely the nominee will be the highly respected J.R. Thompson, who returned to Huntsville, Ala., last fall after resigning for personal reasons as the agency's No. 2 man.

HUNT BEGINS FOR TRULY'S SUCCESSOR

While the White House scurries Thursday to find a replacement for NASA Administrator Truly, the space agency's supporters on Capitol Hill reacted to his firing with chagrin.

Even Truly's critics, who have pushed for new leadership at NASA, said the timing of Wednesday's firing -- called a "resignation" by the White House -- was atrocious.

"Whoever picked the timing ought to be shot," said one key congressional source. "You have a lame-duck administrator, an empty seat for deputy, and neither will be filled for months -- all at the outset of a particularly difficult budget year."

The source said the firing, and the Senate confirmation process for Truly's replacement, would stir up another round of publicity focusing on the space agency's management problems. "It's a self-inflicted wound."

John Pike, a space policy analyst for the Federation of American scientists, said, "If they don't get a real administrator in there soon, they're going to get chopped into little pieces -- either on the Hill, or internally."

KEY OFFICIAL ON BLACK COLLEGES FIRED

An Education Department official appointed to oversee the federal role in strengthening historically black colleges and universities was abruptly removed from his post last week.

The swiftness of Robert Goodwin's removal and the absence of consultation with the President's Board of Advisors on Historically Black Colleges and Universities led James Cheek, that board's chairman, to conclude, "We think we are in a hostile environment."...

Carolynn Reid-Wallace, the assistant secretary for post-secondary education, said Thursday she asked for Goodwin's resignation Feb. 6 to make way for an appointee of her own choosing.

VACCINATION DATA FOR 2-YEAR-OLDS DISAPPOINT CDC

ATLANTA -- A study of children in nine major cities has found that no more than four in 10 were properly vaccinated by age 2, federal health officials said Thursday. The Centers for Disease Control reported that compliance with the full recommended immunization schedule for 2-year-olds ranged from 42 percent in El Paso to 10 percent in Houston. (AP)

INVESTIGATING LEAKS IN HILL-THOMAS CASE

Newsday reporter Timothy Phelps refused Thursday to reveal to a Senate special counsel the sources for an Oct. 6, 1991, story that first disclosed Anita Hill's charges of sexual harassment against Justice Thomas. Phelps, 44, the newspaper's Supreme Court reporter, based his refusal to answer not only on his constitutional rights under the First Amendment, but also those of readers of the Long Island newspaper and "the American people," Phelps said.

U.S. PLEDGES TO SUPPORT EFFORT TO DESTROY IRAQI MISSILE PLANTS

The White House pledged support Thursday for a stepped-up U.N. effort to destroy Iraq's capability to make ballistic missiles, a move that U.S. and diplomatic officials say could spark a new quarrel with Saddam Hussein....

Brent Scowcroft provided the pledge of U.S. support for the destruction plan in a meeting here Thursday with Swedish Amb. Rolf Ekeus, chairman of the U.N. Special Commission on Iraq, according to U.S. officials.

Scowcroft said that in the event of any Iraqi effort to obstruct the commission's effort, the U.S. would back a Security Council resolution of condemnation, the officials said. But it could not be learned whether Scowcroft and Ekeus discussed the possibility of U.S. military support for the destruction efforts.

TURK WARNS AGAINST FORCE TO OUST SADDAM

Turkish Prime Minister Demirel said Thursday that he advised senior officials of the Bush Administration during consultations in Washington this week not to use military force to depose the regime of Saddam Hussein. He said he shares the Administration's belief that Iraq will remain a regional problem until Saddam is out. But he cautioned that "it is very wrong" for the U.S. to seek his ouster by force and said "some more patience is needed" in Washington.

INQUIRY FOCUSES ON ALTERATION OF U.S.-IRAQ SHIPPING RECORDS

The Justice Department is investigating allegations that Bush Administration officials altered records, which were sent to Congress to disguise shipment of technology with military uses to Iraq, according to interviews and documents.

The investigation is trying to determine which officials were responsible for deleting military designations on some of the Administration-approved export licenses and whether the changes violated federal law, two sources said....

The sources said they were aware of no evidence that the NSC officials participated in the alterations, and no one has been accused of wrongdoing.

IRAQ ACCUSES U.S. OF 'PSYCHIC' WARFARE

BAGHDAD -- An Iraqi newspaper published by Saddam Hussein's son Uday reported Thursday that the U.S. and Israel employed psychics to try to kill the Iraqi president during the Gulf War. EGYPTIAN WARNS AGAINST U.S. STRIKE

Egypt's ambassador to Washington cautioned Thursday against any U.S. military action against Iraq or Libya, claiming it would be counterproductive and "full of dangers."

Both Saddam Hussein and Moammar Gadhafi should be dealt with through diplomacy, with U.N. backing, Amb. Abdel Raouf El-Reedy told editors and reporters of The Washington Times.

He also called on the U.S. to maintain the peace process in the Middle East as the most effective way of containing extremism and defusing the area's political and economic frustrations, which encourage Muslim fundamentalism.

IRAN INTERESTED IN ARMS CONTROL AGREEMENT, DIPLOMAT SAYS

Iran isn't trying to develop nuclear weapons capability and would favor a Middle East arms control agreement that includes all the countries in the region, an Iranian diplomat says. "We are basically against an arms race in the region and we think our resources have to be allocated for the reconstruction" after a devastating war with Iraq, Kamal Kharrazi, Iran's ambassador to the U.N., said in an interview Thursday.

He dismissed reports that Iran was obtaining parts for medium-range missiles from China and said Iraq, or more likely Israel, was behind "baseless" allegations that Iran was seeking nuclear weapons. "We don't have ambitious programs for missiles," the Iranian diplomat told a reporter. "We are building short-range (non-nuclear) missiles in the country with our own development."

WHITE HOUSE HAILS YELTSIN, SAYS IT EXPECTS LONG TENURE

Amid new warnings that President Yeltsin's hold on power may be growing more tenuous, the White House on Thursday issued a new statement of support for him, saying it expects him "to be in office for some time." Officials also announced expanded medical shipments to the Central Asian republics.... The new aid, although far short of the amount that Yeltsin says is needed, will mean 10 more flights of medicine and bandages. This will raise the planned total of U.S. air missions to 64.

POWER COMPETITION IN CENTRAL ASIA
U.S., Other Nations Vie For Influence In Former Soviet States

DUSHANBE, Tajikistan -- As Secretary Baker and Turkmenistan President Niyazov worked their way through a 15-course meal at a mountain dacha this week, Niyazov told Baker that he was only the second foreign minister to come to independent Turkmenistan since the collapse of the Soviet Union. The first, he said, was Iran's Ali Akbar Velayati.

His comment spoke volumes about the evolution of the vast remote republics of Central Asia that Baker has glimpsed during his visit to the region this week. The dissolution of the Soviet Union has unleashed a complex competition for power and influence among these new countries. (David Hoffman, Washington Post, A33)

BOUTROS-GHALI RECOMMENDS DEPLOYMENT OF U.N. FORCE IN YUGOSLAVIA

U.N. -- Secretary General Boutros-Ghali recommended Thursday that the Security Council deploy more than 10,000 U.N. peace-keeping troops in Yugoslavia, despite concern that "a number of unanswered questions" remain, a U.N. spokesman said.... The Security Council, which has supported a U.N. role in ending the Yugoslav civil war, is expected to meet early next week to vote on the deployment, and diplomats here predicted it will support Boutros-Ghali's recommendations.

HONDA CASE REFLECTS RISE IN U.S.-CANADA CONFLICTS

Canada has delivered a protest to the Bush Administration on the Customs Service's decision to charge duties on Canadian-made Honda autos. One Honda executive said Thursday that the Customs Service "calls foreign content domestic and domestic content foreign." (John Maggs, Journal of Commerce)

KINGPIN FROM GOVERNING PARTY FAVORS BUSH FOR PRESIDENT

TOKYO -- The governing party's No. 1 political strongman said he favors President Bush in the presidential election, the Japan Times reported Friday. U.S. GETS NEGATIVE ABOUT JAPAN
Post-ABC Poll Shows American Public Defending Its Workers

As the rhetoric heats up on both sides of the Pacific, anti-Japanese feelings have increased sharply in the U.S., and a growing majority of Americans now say they are trying to avoid buying Japanese products, according to a new Washington Post-ABC News Poll. The survey also found evidence that the public may be rallying in defense of U.S. workers, characterized as lazy and unproductive by a Japanese political leader in widely publicized comments last week. TOO FEW GOOD MEN
Marines Warn Against Planned Cuts

Marine Corps Commandant Gen. Carl Mundy has told key lawmakers and congressional staff members that the Administration's plans to cut the Marines by 35,000 troops over the next five years to a force of 159,000 could undermine morale, personnel retention and ultimately the service's ability to carry out its mission.

Mundy also warned that the service will be spread so thin under the plan that troops assigned to combat units will spend 54 percent of their time deployed on ships or foreign bases, straining Marine families and driving talented troops from the service, according to Marine officials and congressional staff members who attended his briefings earlier this week....

Mundy also has questioned the military logic behind the Administration's plans, saying that instead of a careful reassessment of roles and capabilities, the Pentagon essentially presented the Marines with a budget target and told the service to live with it.

CHENEY OFFERS VIEW OF FUTURE OF DEFENSE INDUSTRY

SAN DIEGO -- Secretary Cheney Thursday offered little to alleviate concerns of defense workers and scientists facing unprecedented changes and economic hardship from reductions in military spending.

WITH COLD WAR WON, JOBS ARE BEING LOST
Hill, Military Face 'Peace Dividend' Irony

For as long as most lawmakers can remember, Congress dreamed of the day it could declare the long-awaited "peace dividend," showering a grateful nation with the fruits of victory from the nearly half-century-long Cold War.

Now the moment is at hand, and there is little joy on Capitol Hill. "The truth is we are not prepared for peace in the world," said Rep. Dixon.

The reason for the dismay -- and second thoughts about defense spending cuts that are gripping doves and hawks alike -- is jobs, especially jobs during a recession.

As many as 2 million civilian and military jobs will be lost by 1996 even if Congress goes no further than President Bush has proposed in cutting the defense budget, Sen. Nunn has concluded.

OAS OFFICIALS SAY THEY'RE UNLIKELY TO TAKE TOUGHER MEASURES AGAINST HAITI

Although a four-month embargo has failed to restore democracy to Haiti, top officials of the OAS conceded Thursday that they are highly unlikely to use tougher measures, such as military intervention, against the current regime.

"We are trying to reverse a coup d'etat by peaceful means, and that is very difficult," OAS Secretary General Joao Baena Soares told journalists. He said that both legally and politically, the OAS is "not prepared" to send a peace-keeping force into Haiti....

OAS officials and ambassadors said it would be impossible to send an OAS peace-keeping force into Haiti, given the strictures of international law, the strong opposition from governments such as Mexico's and Peru's, and the long-standing tenet of nonintervention that still prevails within the 34-nation body.

APPEALS COURT ORDERS INS TO REOPEN AMNESTY FILING PERIOD

LOS ANGELES -- A federal appeals court ordered immigration officials Thursday to reopen their amnesty and legalization program to hundreds of thousands of undocumented aliens illegally excluded for taking short trips out of the country. NETWORK NEWS

(Thursday evening, Feb. 13).

ECONOMY

ABC's Peter Jennings: We begin tonight with slightly encouraging news on the state of the economy -- emphasis on the slightly. Last week there was a hint that consumers were ready to do some shopping again when some of the big department stores reported that sales were up in January. Today the government said that retail sales of all kinds, from cars to carpets, gasoline to groceries, rose 0.6 percent last month. That is the largest increase in eight months.

ABC's Stephen Aug reports that at the Ford Motor Company, even though they reported a $2.3 billion loss the last year, the biggest in the company's history, they say things are beginning to look up. The automobile companies say sales rose in January and during the first two weeks of February as well. Does this mean consumers are feeling better?

(Woman: "Everything seems to be starting to get a little better, and I feel a little more secure in my job. So I'm able to spend this money that I was holding on to just in case something happened to the job.")

Some economists are also upbeat.

(John Albertine, economist: "The economy is beginning to pick up. We don't see a searchlight at the end of the tunnel, but we're beginning to see some flicker.")

A flicker, maybe, but it's worth remembering that it was just one year ago that economists were sensing similar signals and forecasting the end of the recession by last summer.

Jennings: The government says that for the second week in a row the number of Americans filing new claims for unemployment benefits was down. Many economists expected the number to go up.

CAMPAIGN

NBC's Tom Brokaw: Remember, no president has been elected since 1952 without first winning the New Hampshire primary. And tonight that first-in-the-nation test for 1992 goes into the final hours looking like a wild horse race. Bill Clinton's campaign is entangled in his draft status during Vietnam, and that has re-opened talk of the Mario scenario.

NBC's Andrea Mitchell reports that Bill Clinton was trying to put his campaign back on track today in the face of more slippage in the polls. His organization is still strong, crowds are large. But he's almost pleading for another chance.

Mitchell continues:

(Clinton: "Other people have questions [about] my life. After years of public service, I'll tell you something. I'm going to give you this election back, and if you give it to me I won't be like George Bush. I'll never forget who gave me a second chance, and I'll be there for you till the last dog dies.")

Mario Cuomo's supporters are talking about a different kind of draft, a write-in campaign.

(Campaign worker singing to the tune of Simon & Garfunkel's "Cecilia": "Mario Cuomo -- you care for our needs -- we're begging you please to run -- run run run.")

They were able to watch Cuomo last night at Harvard, across the border in neighboring Massachusetts, delivering a passionate campaign-style speech against George Bush's policies and campaign tactics.

(Cuomo: "That's what the pledge of allegiance was. That's what Boston Harbor and Willie Horton were. That's what the quota debate was last year. And that is what welfare could be about this year.")

And he gave the write-in movement a big boost.

(Cuomo: "In my own state they're saying lousy things about me. If they're going to say nice things in New Hampshire I'm going to encourage it." [laughter])

Cuomo didn't say yes, but he gave a broad wink, and did it within eyesight of New Hampshire voters. (NBC-Lead)

ABC's Jim Wooten reports that Gov. Clinton did not look like a candidate in trouble today, not in a raucous high school gym heavy with enthusiasm. But Clinton has launched an 11th-hour advertising blitz that defends his draft record and without offering proof blames the White House for his tabloid troubles.

(Clinton ad announcer: "Fact: The President's Republican operatives were involved in promoting the untrue Gennifer Flowers story to destroy Bill Clinton.")

ABC's Judy Muller reports on Tom Harkin: He calls himself a populist, an unabashed liberal, and the only real Democrat in the race. Labor union support in New Hampshire is the backbone of Harkin's campaign. He is proposing a new New Deal reminiscent of President Roosevelt's -- one aimed at creating jobs through a massive public works program.

(Man: "Someone has come from the people who hasn't forgotten where he came from and is looking out for the little guy -- me.")

But in courting the white-collar vote at an insurance company, Harkin sounded not so much like a champion of the little guy as an accountant out to slash defense spending in favor of social programs.

(Harkin: "Head Start -- I want to fully fund Head Start. How much does it cost? Five-billion dollars, the cost of five B-2 bombers.")

But the new generation here may not buy a New Deal. Harkin has difficulty convincing a younger generation that he is not a political relic. He also has been criticized, even by colleagues in the Senate, as being mean-spirited, a loner. The issue comes up on the campaign trail. The polls show Harkin with only 13 percent of the vote in New Hampshire. Like it or not, a populist needs popularity to win. (ABC-3)

CALIFORNIA RAIN

Rather: Southern California is scrambling to repair storm damage while far out in the Pacific the weather system called El Nino is winding up for yet another vicious blast at the shore. At least seven people have been killed, hundreds of businesses swamped by the rain and wet.

CBS's John Blackstone reports that forecasters say residents have little more than 24 hours to prepare for the next assault.

(CBS-Lead)

Jennings: There wasn't as much rain in southern California today, which gave residents a chance to do a little clean-up work. Five days of heavy rain, floods and mud slides destroyed homes, washed out roads and left at least seven people dead. And a new storm is expected tomorrow.

(ABC-4, NBC-3)

CORPORATE EXECUTIVE PAY/SEC

CBS's Bill Plante reports that the SEC says it's none of the government's business how much corporate executives are paid, but that public stockholders are entitled to better information than they're getting about the politically explosive issue of executive pay.

(Richard Breeden, SEC: "We're going to try and take that information and capsulize it so that all shareholders can be able to see in one convenient location clearly presented the facts.") For example, in 1990 one chairman of a Fortune 500 company got a salary of about $600,000. But by the time his bonuses, stock options and grants were added in, his salary came to $2.4 million. And in many cases, stockholders say, it's impossible to figure out.

(Breeden: "If you look at proxy statements, it requires a PhD in finance to begin to understand what was paid.")

The SEC today also ordered 10 giant corporations including IBM, Chrysler, Kodak and Aetna to include shareholder motions on the executive pay issue on the proxy statements for their annual meetings, although their results won't be binding. Critics in Congress are pushing for new laws.

(Rep. Schumer: "We seem to have the worst of both worlds: poorly run companies where the executives are paid a whole lot.")

The SEC's new rules require companies to publish a comparison between corporate performance and executive pay, particularly stock options. So now if profits are down but executive salaries are up, the board of directors will have to explain to the stockholders why.

(CBS-3)

BAKER TRIP

Jennings: Overseas today, Secretary Baker has been trying to convince another group of newly independent nations that the U.S. should be the model for their future. He has gone to the region of the former Soviet Union where the majority of citizens are Moslems. They're already being courted by the government of Iran. Secretary Baker is trying to convince them the U.S. has more to offer.

ABC's John McWethy reports that Secretary Baker is the first American secretary of state to come the heart of Moslem Asia. After 70 years of communism, these Moslems are experiencing a powerful resurgence of Islam. Within their borders are vast oil, gas and mineral resources, and as a result a tremendous need for western know-how. Through Baker the U.S. is trying to establish a diplomatic foothold so American business can compete. American officials fear that Iran will agitate for creation of fundamentalist Moslem governments that will shut out the West. Thus far most of the regimes now in power are looking to Turkey as their model with its strong ties to the West and secular government. At every stop Baker's message is if you want help from the West and access to its money and technology, you must respect human rights and push for democracy and free-market economies.

THOMAS FBI REPORT LEAK

Brokaw reports that Newsday reporter Timothy Phelps refused to tell a special Senate council how he got hold of a confidential memo which helped trigger the Senate hearings on Clarence Thomas. A special counsel is busy taking testimony and gathering documents from senators and their staffs. Nina Totenberg of NPR also has been subpoenaed.

(Totenberg: "I won't cooperate because it would lead to the disclosure of my source or sources, and that I simply will not do.")

(NBC-2, CBS-13)

RED TIDES

ABC's Barry Serafin reports that increasingly the bottom of the food web is turning toxic, becoming deadly blooms of algae, sometimes red, sometimes brown or other colors, collectively known as red tides. They kill fish, marine mammals, sea birds, and sometimes people, and they are spreading. Many scientists now believe that like global warming, red tides pose a growing threat that can no longer be ignored.

(ABC-9)

CROP CHEMICAL

Rather reports that a crop chemical the government once called a cancer threat may now be making a comeback. Dozens of kinds of fruits and vegetables you buy could be treated with it, now with the EPA's blessing.

CBS's David Dow reports it was just over two years ago that the EPA proposed banning most uses of EBDCs, widely used chemicals to control fungus and disease in dozens of fruits and vegetables. The agency cited a potential cancer risk. But today the EPA basically reversed itself.

(Administrator Reilly: "The EPA has obtained much more information from a market-basket survey and from extensive analysis about EBDCs. This information revealed that the potential dietary risks of the EBDCs are much lower than what was estimated in 1989.") The EPA will now allow use of EBDCs on tomatoes and potatoes and 43 other crops, including apples, lettuce and onions.

(CBS-12)

SCHOOL BREAKFAST

Jennings reports that a group called the Food Research & Action Center, which advocates better nutrition for children, says that millions of children who should get breakfast at school do not, even though federal money is available to pay for it.

ABC's Bob Jamieson reports that despite the clear effect of breakfast programs in schools, and the availability of funds, today's report says fewer than half the eligible schools have enrolled in the federal program. And the program is reaching only a third of the low-income students it could help. Officials say it is not always easy to rearrange bus schedules, to provide meals at schools without kitchens, and bring in teachers early to supervise students. Other officials say the federal government does not always cover every cost. And some school administrators argue they should not be taking on another family responsibility like breakfast.

(Robert Fersh, FR&AC: "The bottom line is that some kids either get fed or not get fed. Let's err on the side of making sure children get fed. What wrong can come of that?") (ABC-2)

YUGOSLAVIA

Rather reports that as many as 13,000 U.N. peace-keepers may soon be heading to Yugoslavia. A spokesman says the U.N. Secretary General will ask the Security Council to authorize the force, one of the biggest in U.N. history. The soldiers would try to shore up the six-week-old truce in breakaway Croatia. (CBS-6)

CUBA

NBC's Robin Lloyd reports on Cuban dissidents. In the past four months, 40 political dissidents have been arrested. But opposition to the Castro government is increasing anyway in the alleyways and houses of Havana. Even some of the privileged intellectual elite here have begun to rebel. (NBC-5)

RUSSIA

ABC's John Donovan reports that President Yeltsin put friend-turned-critic Alexander Rutskoi in charge of agriculture, a thankless job that communists used to give politicians they wanted to demote. But few people think Rutskoi is so easily dismissed as a national leader. (ABC-7, CBS-7)

RUSSIAN NUKES

NBC's Jim Maceda reports on the Russian city of Krasnoyarsk, secret city of the biggest weapons-grade plutonium factory of the former Soviet Union -- the very center of Russian nuclear might. NBC was the first foreigner to be shown videotape of the plant's three plutonium reactors which made the fuel for thousands of nuclear warheads. Though frustrated, the plant's experts insist they have not yet been tempted by lucrative jobs abroad. Instead they've started from scratch. Circuit boards for black and white TVs will save a few thousand jobs. (NBC-9)

WALRUS POACHERS

Rather reports that there is plenty of illegal profit to be made killing and trafficking in wild animals. In Alaska, federal agents have infiltrated a suspected ring of walrus poachers, who kill the animals for their ivory tusks. (CBS-4)

TEXAS RESIDENCY/DOONESBURY

Rather: A lot more people are claiming to be Texans these days. If you're wondering why, just look in the funny papers. You'll find the answer deep in the heart of taxes.

CBS's James Hattori: It's a question of side-stepping.

[TV coverage of President Bush jogging]

George Bush has long claimed Texas as his home, but in fact he's the non-resident president who rents a room when he comes back to Houston.

(Gov. Richards: "And the point is if the President can have a hotel room as a permanent residence, well why not everybody else?") A point raised in the funny pages two weeks ago by Doonesbury cartoonist Gary Trudeau, who suggested that Mr. Bush made a shrewd choice in Texas, one of six states with no income tax. It struck a chord with readers from Maine to California who clipped a form from the cartoon requesting residency in the Lone Star State.

(Mary Kay Stevens, CA taxpayer: "What makes him think that Texas is his primary residency, and is he doing it for tax-evasion purposes?")

(Clayton Stemple, FL taxpayer: "You've gotta take it funny, 'cause if you took it serious you'd just get very depressed.")

The White House says it's all legit. Bush used to live and work and still votes in Texas. But responses have flooded the capital in Austin -- cards and letters from folks who want to pay no state taxes, like George Bush.

(Diana Maldonado, mail clerk: "Thirty-thousand, 31,000 -- in a week-and-a-half's time.")

They're stacked 10-feet high in the office of Texas state controller John Sharp.

(Sharp: "We anticipated it being about 2,000 or 3,000. It's starting to get a little bit out of hand.")

Sharp was playing along, even sending back official-looking residency certificates for those seeking the Bush exemption.

(Sharp: "If you can present this to your tax office in Michigan and they'll buy it, that's great with us. We're suspicious that that's going to happen.")

Texans have always expected that deep down everybody really wants to be like them. But state officials do worry that some of the people who've written in may be taking all of this a bit too seriously.

(Sharp: "There's one guy that really wrote in and said if you don't send me my certificate and make me a Texas resident I'm going to sue you. So, okay already. You're a Texas resident. Fine.") Still, the phones keep ringing.

(Phone operator: "I don't think it'll carry any weight with your California tax collector.")

And the letters keep coming from Texan wannabes -- folks who say if it's good enough for the President it's good enough for them.

News From the Hill

MEMBERS BATTLE over plan to stimulate economy.

House Democrats and President Bush appeared on a collision course over an economic recovery package after the Ways and Means Committee on Wednesday rejected a scaled-down administration tax plan and wrote its own.

After a bitter partisan debate, the panel voted 22-14 to report a bill (HR 4210) incorporating all of Bush's tax proposals. By a 13-23 vote, members rejected a Republican substitute proposal preferred by Bush that would have limited the package to seven tax provisions, including a cut in the capital gains tax rate, a $5,000 tax credit for first-time home buyers and incentives for business investment.

Panel Democrats then drew up an alternative plan yesterday that includes $90.9 billion in tax cuts over six years.

The plan would provide low- and middle-income workers a tax credit of up to $200, repeal the luxury tax on boats, airplanes and furs that Congress approved in 1990 and allow interest on student loans to be deducted from a worker's income taxes.

It also would permit penalty-free withdrawals from Individual Retirement Accounts (IRAs) for the purchase of a first home.

The tax breaks would be paid for, in part, by a new 35 percent tax bracket for workers with a taxable income of at least $85,000 ($145,000 for a joint return) and a 10 percent surtax on taxable income of more than $1 million.

Panel Democrats must still give final approval to the package; they will meet this morning to review the plan.

Although the six-year measure would pay for itself in the long run, in the first three years it would increase the deficit by more than $30 billion.

Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., has said that the House will take up HR 4210 in the next two weeks, well before March 20, the date by which Bush asked Congress to send him an economic stimulus bill. The House will consider the administration's seven-point tax package and the Democratic alternative plan as substitute amendments to HR 4210.

GOP Opposition. House Republicans and Bush administration officials denounced the process as a plan to embarrass the president. "This process is clearly designed to hurt the president politically, and I won't stand for it," said Bill Archer of Texas, ranking GOP member on the Ways and Means Committee.

At the heart of the dispute is the administration's call for Congress to enact two separate tax bills, with the first including a series of tax breaks to boost the economy and the second encompassing the rest of Bush's growth proposals.

Among the items that Bush wants to delay action on are a $500 per-child increase in the personal exemption, penalty-free withdrawals from IRAs for the purchase of a first home or to cover medical or education costs.

Bush decided to push for quick action on the parts of his growth plan that he says are needed now to jolt the economy out of a recession.

But Democrats said the administration's two-bill strategy was a ploy to provide tax breaks to the wealthy while ignoring lower- and middle-income workers.

At a Senate Finance Committee hearing on Tuesday, Chairman Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said the political climate mandated that tax breaks and tax increases be considered in the same bill, the "vinegar along with the honey."

Bentsen questioned Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady about the administration's contention that a cut in the capital gains tax rate would increase revenue.

Bentsen said in 1986 Treasury projected that a hike in the tax rate would increase revenue. "Now you're telling us that a decrease in the tax rate will also increase revenue," Bentsen said.

Brady said the circumstances were different now but did not elaborate.

SENATE LEADERS scrap March recess to work on tax plan.

The Senate has canceled a planned weeklong recess in March to give members more time to work on an economic recovery package.

The recess had been scheduled for March 9-16; President Bush has challenged Congress to send him an economic stimulus bill by March 20.

The House had not scheduled a similar recess for March.

Senate Majority Leader George J. Mitchell, D-Maine, and House Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., said they do not feel obligated to meet the president's non-binding deadline, but both have emphasized their desire for Congress to clear an economic package as quickly as possible given the state of the economy.

ROYBAL, DYMALLY plan retirement at end of 102nd Congress.

Two veteran California House Democrats have announced that they will call it quits at the end of the 102nd Congress, increasing to 17 the number of lawmakers that have decided to retire.

The departure of Edward R. Roybal, who has served 15 terms, and Mervyn M. Dymally, who has served six, will open up a committee chairmanship and two coveted subcommittee chairmanships.

Roybal has been chairman of the Appropriations Treasury, Postal Service and General Government Subcommittee since 1981. As one of the "cardinals" — the sobriquet given the chairmen of the 13 Appropriations subcommittees — Roybal has had an influential voice over federal spending.

Steny H. Hoyer, D-Md., who heads the Democratic Caucus, is in line to replace him. Roybal's departure will also open up the chairmanship of the Select Committee on Aging. Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., chooses select committee chairmen, and Thomas J. Downey, D-N.Y., appears the likely replacement.

Dymally took over the Foreign Affairs Subcommittee on Africa in 1991. Some of the candidates to succeed him include Howard L. Berman, D-Calif., and Ted Weiss, D-N.Y.

Roybal, 76, cited the health of his wife Lucille as a key reason for his retirement.

Dymally was born in Trinidad and became the first foreign-born black elected to Congress. He endorsed his daughter Lynn Dymally to take his place.

SOME WEAPONS production necessary to keep jobs, Aspin says.

The chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, Les Aspin, D-Wis., said in a speech on Wednesday that some spending on unneeded weaponry might be necessary to keep parts of the nation's defense industry alive.

"If we continue with business as usual, we soon won't be doing much business at all," he told the American Defense Preparedness Association.

Major defense contractors are expected to announce layoffs because of the Defense Department's decision to slow down or cancel several major weapons systems as a result of the end of the Cold War.

General Dynamics Corp. already announced the first round of up to 4,000 layoffs at its Electric Boat Division in Groton, Conn., because of the Pentagon's decision to cancel the Seawolf submarine program.

In the speech, Aspin suggested buying certain weapons to keep some companies in business — including prototypes of some new weapons without full-scale production. He said the shipbuilding industry could be one candidate.

POW/MIA FRAUD investigation requested by Sen. McCain.

John McCain, R-Ariz., a member of the Senate Select Committee on POW/MIA Affairs, asked the Justice Department on Wednesday to investigate possible fraudulent reports of missing Americans in Southeast Asia.

McCain, a prisoner of war in Vietnam for six years, made the request after ABC News reported that a photograph said to be of missing Army Capt. Donald Carr in a Laotian prison camp was actually a picture of a German man taken in Thailand.

Jack Bailey, who heads an organization trying to locate missing American servicemen, testified before the Senate POW/MIA committee in October that he had information about Carr, including the same photograph.

"Both the question of the Carr fraud and the question of widespread fraud concerning POW/MIAs should be thoroughly investigated," McCain said in a letter to Attorney General William Barr.

McCain said he did not know if Bailey was guilty of fraud.

The committee is planning a trip to Vietnam, Cambodia, Laos and Thailand in April to try to determine the fate of the 2,273 Americans still listed as missing from the Vietnam War. ■

S 2166

National Energy Security Act of 1992 continue consideration

Outlook

The Senate will likely take up S 1150, a bill to reauthorize the Higher Education Act of 1965, after completing work on the Energy bill.

The only thing standing between you and the support of a representative.

Try to get the support of a representative or senator without consulting his or her closest aides, and your legislative efforts could go to waste.

Instead, attend CQ's seminar, Strategies for Working with Congressional Staff on March 11 or June 3, and find out how to win over the powerful professional staff who can make or break your legislative success on Capitol Hill.

Led by House and Senate staff, lobbyists and a former member of Congress, this seminar shows you what personal, committee and subcommittee staff really do for members — and what you should and shouldn't do if you want their support.

In just one morning, you'll learn practical tips that you can put to work the very next time you're on the Hill, such as: • When to set up a meeting with congressional staff • What you can expect from the meeting and how to follow up afterward • How to avoid common — and embarrassing — mistakes • How to write a one-page memo that congressional staff will read.

Plus, a copy of CQ's comprehensive manual, Strategies for Working with Congressional Staff, is yours to keep after the program. It will provide invaluable background on committee, subcommittee and personal staff to use on your next call or visit to the Hill.

Don't let your legislative efforts go to waste! Register today for Strategies for Working with Congressional Staff.

Register now to reserve your space! Call (202) 887-8620 or (800) 432-2250, ext. 620

HOW'S BUSH PLAYING? At least one NH poll shows Bush still in free-fall. HOTLINE source hears poll respondents echo Buchanan "person on street" ad -- which criticizes Bush, but without Pat doing the attack. (#8, #9)

DANG VARMINTS: Fitzwater on Ways/Means Dems: "Weasels." Cmte passes full version of Bush tax plan (just 7 of 36 measures from State of Union speech). Cmte GOPers wanted campaign "racehorse," got "jackass," as Bush keeps up NH Congress-bashing. (#7)

CLINTON KEEPS GAME FACE ON

Day 2 of live NH TV; more concern Down South. (#1) NH 3-night tracking says he's still falling; but a 2-nighter sees an upswing. (#9) Tsongas swim (and underlying health message) gets big press. (#2) Harkin late-game fusillade targets all, including green shots at Tsongas. (#3) Kerrey takes draft high road, but aide hits Tsongas on textiles. (#4)

NC SEN: SANFORD BARELY AT 50%
Against 3 quiet GOPers. (#11)

SPOTLIGHT

BIG BIRDS CIRCLING

A damaged Clinton and a Tsongas out-of-New England-waters make non-candidate "supporters" inquire into late entry mechanics. Balz & Broder cite Dems who say, if it happens, it may have to be within 48 hrs. of NH.

BENTSEN: Still gives same answer, said to be "receptive." One aide: "He hasn't ruled it out."

GEPHARDT: With House support, has most potential for quick entry. Backers inquire about SC slates.

CUOMO: Troops try to draft off JFK speech, look for NH bounce into ME. Flynn to build MA slate. Ex-Marino boss Hennessy handing out pencils in NH.

GORE: Says '96, but aide says phones keep ringing.

ROCKY: Hosting pre-Super Tues. health forum in FL.

BRADLEY: 6th man?

===== QUOTE OF THE DAY =====

"I think the cases are entirely different. First, I served."

? ? ? ? OVERLOOKED ? ? ? ?

Grover Cleveland, hit by the campaign barb "Ma, Ma, Where's My Pa," avoided service in the Union Army. Some historians attribute his November victory to Southern support for his non-service (courtesy Mark Sherman, ATLANTA CONSTITUTION).

*1 CLINTON: TAKING HIS CASE PAST THE MEDIA

"No longer railing about Republican dirty tricks and 'cash-for-trash' journalism," Clinton "made a studious effort to return the forceful, upbeat message that once made him" front-runner (Feeney, DALLAS MORNING NEWS). Clinton: "The character issue in this election is who is really willing to put it on the line to change your lives. ... I've answered all the ethos questions. And that's all I'm going to say on the subject" (2/14). N.Y. TIMES' Robin Toner: "Clinton sprinted back on the campaign trail ... Advisers said he was intent on reaching over the heads of the news media" (2/14). He attempted to do so in a paid-for 30-minute exchange on WMUR-TV with 10 self-identified uncommitted NH voters: "As painful as it's been, in a way if I endure it and you ratify it -- my vision, my message, my plan, my record, my ability to change this country -- then you are saying I'm electable" (Manchester UNION LEADER, 2/14). W. POST's Edsall & Broder called the panel of voters "highly sympathetic" (2/14). B. GLOBE's Curtis Wilkie: "Clinton's campaign seemed to take on a new fire" (2/14). Many reports note the NH appearance of Vietnam vet Bob Jones, who endorsed him at one event. Clinton buys 30-mins. on WMUR again tonight at 9:00p, this time for a live call-in. Dems outside the campaign remained "skeptical" about whether Clinton's effort "would restore his sagging public support" before the primary (MORNING NEWS, 2/14). But his advisors "believe five days might be enough." AR DEM-GAZETTE's Noel Oman notes Clinton was "insulated from reporters" all day (2/14). He addressed the NH Leg., drawing applause from the GOP-majority group, and appeared at a candidate forum sponsored by NH AARP (DEM-GAZETTE, 2/14). One NH lobbyist said Clinton "blew the roof off" the Capitol, "surpassing" the receptions given Bush or Buchanan (Fiedler/Boyd, KNIGHT-RIDDER, 2/14). ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH's Lambrecht observes, "Clinton's reaction from audiences [2/13] reinforced his assertion that voters cared less about the draft issue than did reporters and [Dem] leaders" (2/14). The campaign will distribute 20,000 videos to NH voters over the weekend (Clinton release, 2/13).

VIETNAM QUESTIONS/ANSWERS: W.S. JOURNAL's Shribman: "The lesson for politicians ... may not be so much the importance of serving in Vietnam. Instead, it may be for politicians to tell the truth -- clearly and soberly, without recourse to legalisms -- about what they did, or maneuvered not to do, in the war years. That's where Mr. Clinton ... stumbled." George McGovern: "If he had only said this in the beginning -- talked about his torment -- he would have been a lot better off." Ex-NH Dem chair/Gov. cand. Ned Helms, a Viet vet: "Clinton could have gotten rid of this issue if he had laid it all out in the beginning." But VP Dan Quayle "hasn't put the issue behind him." In '88 he was questioned about "whether he used influence" to get into the IN National Guard, but he "hasn't acknowledged that he joined the Guard unit so as to avoid Vietnam service." Although Quayle spokesperson David Beckwith noted Guardsmen "were not guaranteed exemption of either active service or Vietnam duty," Shribman writes "there was only a minuscule chance" of being sent to Vietnam, according to the Pentagon (2/14). Quayle: "I think the cases are entirely different. First, I served. Secondly, I'll talk about my own particular situation. I don't care to comment about Bill Clinton's problems" (B. GLOBE, 2/14). WASH.

POST's Richard Cohen: "Oddly enough, the letter ... Clinton did not want revealed shows the best of him" (2/14). W. POST editorial: "Clinton's answers ... have gone a long way to dispelling any idea that he is somehow disqualified" (2/14). PHILA. INQUIRER editorial: "Clinton's behavior places him morally in a murky middle ground ... But there are two points in his favor: His opposition to the war was deeply felt ... and he did, in the end, take his chance on the draft ..." (2/14). Manchester UNION LEADER editorial calls him "most assuredly ... a revolving, self-serving hypocrite" (2/14). DETROIT NEWS editorial: "Is this really the sort of man [Dems] want to lead them?" (2/14). N.Y. TIMES editorial: "To single [Clinton] out as some sort of devious draft-dodger does him, and the anguish of Vietnam, an injustice" (2/14). N.Y. TIMES header over historical review: "Clinton Could Have Known Draft Was Unlikely for Him" (2/14). W.S. JOURNAL's Birnbaum: "Clinton's detailed explanation ... still contains some gaps and unanswered questions" (2/14). Cleveland PLAIN DEALER's Brazaitis reviews the war records (and lack thereof) of both the Dems and GOPers (2/14). ORLANDO SENTINEL's Crawford compiles recent stories "questioning Clinton's integrity" (2/14). B. GLOBE's Curtis Wilkie: "Clinton has been transformed into a character out of Conrad, flawed by human frailty and struggling for redemption" (2/14). Germond/Witcover: "Republicans would relish running against Mr. Clinton" (Balto. EVENING SUN, 2/13).

MORE: He released another document from 6/70 "that seems to back up his contention" that he thought he could be drafted. A form to the Rhodes Scholarship Trust asked Clinton if he would be returning to school that fall. Clinton answered that he might, but "if not will be entering Yale Law School or getting drafted" (DEM-GAZETTE, 2/14). B. GLOBE's Kiernan: "There was no doubt" that Clinton "had touched the hearts and minds of many" in NH with his '69 letter. For some, "it may be enough to sway them to Clinton's side. But it was equally clear that Clinton's eloquent writing, which so plainly revealed his depth of feeling, also elicited an array of other reactions, including further doubts about his character" (2/14). B. HERALD header: "Clinton struggles to right his tottering campaign" (2/14). DEM-GAZETTE reports Vietnam vet/author Brian Carland "attacked" Clinton, and Nat'l Resistance Cmte's Edward Hasbrouck "praised" him (2/14). N.Y. TIMES' Apple interviewed men of Clinton's age around the country: "Most ... exonerated Mr. Clinton, either by implication or in so many words" (2/14). WASH. POST's Isikoff interviews many of Clinton's Oxford colleagues (2/14).

DEM REAX: Harkin: "It seals his fate. He thanked them for getting him out of the draft. You can't get any clearer than that." Clinton: "Harkin spends a lot of time ... running me down and all his other opponents down, and I don't think it makes him a bigger man." Tsongas called Clinton "viable. To dismiss Gov. Clinton, I think, is a major mistake." Kerrey: "I do have an obligation to say I'm proud of my military service. Governor Clinton, can I trust your record?" (STL. POST-DISPATCH, 2/14).

DOWN SOUTH: Ex-GA Dem chair Bert Lance said Georgians supporting Clinton are "antsy and uncertain." Dem pollster Alan Secrest said recent Southern polling suggests Clinton's candidacy is "irretrievable ... A substantial number of [Southern] likely voters describe him as unacceptable" (B. GLOBE, 2/14). GA-based pollster Claiborne Darden: "Right now Clinton reminds me of Civil War soldier with his stomach shot, leaning up against a tree for days, waiting to die. He can't carry that freight in the South. The letter was the kiss of death" (WSJ, 2/14).

Clemson's Charles Dunn: "Clinton may have nailed the final nail of confidence in his coffin. [SC] is his only hope now" (Charleston POST & COURIER, 2/14). N.Y. TIMES' Applebome: "Throughout the South ... Clinton's supporters were rallying to his defense." Many reports featured quotes like this one from FL atty Ted Brabham: "A man who laid out his heart and soul on paper, who said what he believed" (2/14). KY Gov. Brereton Jones (D), a Clinton backer was "none too confident": "He's still the same person he was ... if anybody can overcome these kind of hits, he can" (Cross, Louisville COURIER-JOURNAL, 2/14).

PILING ON: The AR-based group ARIAS, which has raised more than $13,000, will run NH newspaper ads recounting Clinton's taped comments on Cuomo. The group received $1,250 from Nat'l Italian-American Foundation founder Jeno Paulucci, who is said to be "upset" (DEM-GAZETTE, 2/14). W.S. JOURNAL's Paul Gigot: "The most damaging question raised" by the letter "isn't whether he dodged the draft, but why he dodged a life. ... It may not be Mr. Clinton's past that is haunting him, but his lack of one" (2/14).

TV: ABC's Jim Wooten: "Clinton did not look like a candidate in trouble ... He's launched an 11th hour advertising blitz that defends his draft record and without any proof blames the [WH] for his tabloid troubles ... After a day off, the new front runner in the polls, Paul Tsongas, reappeared today and took the high road on Clinton." Tsongas: "They have attacked Bill from the very beginning, as soon as he became the front runner. I'm not going to participate in that." Kerrey: "I'm not going to re-open the wounds from that war ... It's a political issue for Bill Clinton, it's not a campaign issue for me" (2/13). NBC's Andrea Mitchell: "Clinton was holding his head high and blaming his troubles on the news media. His organization is still strong. Crowds are large, but he's almost pleading for another chance" (2/13). GOP strategist David Keene: "It's become a character issue. ... He has not been forthright." George McGovern, for whom Clinton worked in '72: "We're not talking about a candidate, we're talking about a teenager" ("Crossfire," CNN, 2/13). Sen. John McCain (R-AZ): "I don't think [if Clinton avoided the draft] very relevant. ... Clinton should be judged on his record ... a letter such as he wrote, displayed, to a large degree, what many young Americans were going through at that time. It's hard for us to recapture the incredible emotional instability that existed in this nation at that time." ATLANTIC's James Fallows: "Quayle's position was that the war was a good idea and somebody should do it, but not him. Clinton's position was that nobody should do it." Ex-Sec/Navy James Webb: "It's a question of moral authority. ... Does Gov. Clinton, having come of age and taken a specific set of actions during the war, have the moral authority to order other people to die?" ("MacNeil/Lehrer," PBS, 2/13). ABC's Mike Von Fremd: "Clinton loaded up his schedule with five events in a near-frantic attempt to reach voters and pull out of his current nosedive in the polls" (2/14). Harkin: "It looks like this race is coming down to a two-person race: Mr. Tsongas and myself." CBS' Richard Threlkeld: "If tradition is any indication, most [NH] voters are only now, four days before the primary, starting decide which of the candidates is in fact most electable" (2/14). NBC's Ann Curry: "Clinton says he feels the Vietnam draft controversy won't hurt him, but Tom Harkin says the draft matter has already torpedoed Clinton's campaign ... Tsongas criticized both candidates for not devoting more time to discussing economic problems." NBC's Lisa Myers: "His opponents are like sharks with blood in the water ... For most a second place finish means money to compete in the next round of primaries. For Clinton, anything less could be disastrous" (2/14).

*2 TSONGAS: BIRTHDAY IN NEW HAMPSHIRE

He "splashed his way through a photo opportunity" at the Concord, NH, YMCA which "included a mini news conference at each end of the pool." But For Tsongas, the event was "more than a photo op. He wants to overcome any voters' doubt about his health in the wake of his apparent successful battle against cancer": "The word 'cancer' frightens people. You have to deal with it" (Schwartz, WASH. POST, 2/14). Tsongas, on charisma: "People say I don't have any charisma, so I brought some" -- he pointed to Rep. Joe Kennedy (D-MA), who endorsed him, at his side ("Inside Politics," CNN, 2/13; USA TODAY, 2/14). On Clinton's draft status: "The issue is worthy of discussion. But to dismiss Gov. Clinton would be a major mistake." USA TODAY's Nagourney/Nichols note, "It's as if everybody's favorite uncle was running for election" (2/14).

NEW LOOK PART II: "Being the new Democratic front-runner means being the target," and Tsongas was "getting hit" from all sides (Deborah Orin, N.Y. POST). He "did fine parrying shots from his rivals, but he bristled about a report in the Boston Herald that he defaulted on a Yale Law School student loan and had to be sued, as a freshman congressman in 1975" (See HOTLINE 2/13). Tsongas, on serving in the Peace Corps.: "I committed myself to public service and I paid a price for that. I would have been much better off going to a New York law firm and making a fortune -- [then] this would not be an issue." But Tsongas' critics have "warned" that under fire, "St. Paul" sometimes "takes on a self-righteous tone" (2/14). ENVIRONMENT: He responded to "mounting attacks from nuclear critics and political foes" on his support for nuclear power by "divulging" his role in the Boston Edison Co. The company has been criticized by enviros for "running one of the nation's sloppiest nuclear plants," but Tsongas contends he helped transform it "from one of the nations' most-troubled electric utilities to one of its most stable" (Tye, BOSTON GLOBE, 2/14). He "fought back" Harkin's attack on his support for nuclear energy by "questioning Harkin's own record on energy policy: "There are nuclear power plants in Iowa; there's no record of Harkin saying 'boo' to any nuclear power plant there. ... Tom has spent a lot of time criticizing me, and criticizing Gov. Clinton, and maybe he would be a lot better off spending his time developing a good economic program" (Lauter, L.A. TIMES, 2/14). Tsongas also "draws criticism" for his work for Iroquois Gas Transmission System, a Canadian pipeline that is "controversial because it hurts domestic gas producers and angered property owners and some local conservationists. But Tsongas insists the project was "a model," and that natural gas is "the cleanest energy source" (Richter/Ostrow, L.A. TIMES, 2/14). BOSTON HERALD's Alan Levin reports in '90 Tsongas "represented" Norton Co., one of MA's "top air polluters," as a lobbyist. Norton, the "world's largest producer of abrasives ... quadrupled its use of a chemical that attacks the Earth's protective ozone layer." Tsongas, who was paid $360 per hour, "said he was trying to protect the firm from an unfriendly takeover" (2/14). ELECTABILITY/HEALTH: He has been "dogged by questions about his health and his ability to win an election outside the Northeast": "I have not only confounded the pundits, but my best friends. Maybe they should get together and figure it out and let me know." Harkin: "He has no other place to go" (Moss, W. TIMES, 2/14). Tsongas has made "exceedingly public a show of his fitness," but some doctors, "although they see no reason why a past cancer should prevent Mr. Tsongas from running for, or assuming the presidency, are hesitant to predict the state of his future health." Even his own doctor, "although greatly optimistic about [Tsongas'] future, stops just short of using the word 'cured.'" Doctors "agree" Tsongas' history with cancer "should not necessarily be a matter of concern to voters" (Baer, Balto. SUN, 2/14).

SOUTHERN SUPPORT: According to Tsongas press sec. Peggy Connolly, Sen. David Boren (D-OK) "has told the campaign that although he won't endorse because he is friends with both" Kerrey and Clinton, "he will make very supportive statements about Tsongas' candidacy." Boren: "I would lean in Sen. Tsongas' direction because of the strength of his message and the thoughtfulness of his program" (BOSTON GLOBE, 2/13). With four weeks to go to SC's 3/7 primary, SC Dem leaders "still aren't taking Tsongas ... seriously." Other than Brown, Tsongas is the only Dem candidate yet to visit SC. USC pol. scientist Earl Black, who calls Tsongas "basically a stranger," says he "carries the baggage of 'a northeastern liberal.'" Should Clinton lose popularity in the South, Black sees Kerrey rather than Tsongas "gaining." But Rep. Butler Derrick (D-SC), who sat next to Tsongas on the House Banking Cmte in the '70s, "described him as 'very conservative' economically and said he would appeal to South Carolinians, if they had an opportunity to get to know him": "He is one of the finest people I have ever known. I don't think there is any Democratic candidate who is brighter than he is" (Adam Smith, SPARTANBURG HERALD-JOURNAL, 2/12).

THE NEXT STAGE: In NH primary politics, with its emphasis on personal campaigning and "where voters fancy themselves as iconoclasts," Tsongas' "unorthodox political persona may be paying off. But his job will be a lot harder when and if the campaign comes down to 10-second soundbites and 30-second commercials. ... And if he gets far enough, Tsongas will have to learn to supplement wit and finger-wagging with both passion and compassion" (Mark Jurkowitz, BOSTON PHOENIX, 2/14 issue). In a separate PHOENIX interview, Tsongas was asked if it would be easy to prove himself a leader: "I don't doubt that I can do it. ... I've tried to be honest about the fact that in the last several months, I've had to change a mindset from 'I'm here to change the party' to 'I'm here to lead the country.' ... one day you begin to realize, 'Hey, if I'm not elected, the difference between me and [the other Dems] is real.' What they're doing is the same thing George Bush and Ronald Reagan did" (2/14). AEI's Ben Wattenberg spent a day with him and writes, "Tsongas, quite simply, is a remarkable human being. ... We swam with him there, then went to his rambling house in Lowell for some potluck stew over noodles." ON possible VPs he said Boren and Nunn are the "two names that keep coming up" (N.Y. POST, W. TIMES, 2/14).

RAKING IT IN: He's bringing in about $30,000 a day from direct mail alone -- up from $1,200 a day a short time ago. Atty Michael Kail, who hosted an August $-raiser for Tsongas: "A lot of people ... are now calling and pretending the only reason they couldn't contribute before is because of some change in circumstance" (Barbara Demick, KNIGHT-RIDDER, 2/14).

TV: CNN's Candy Crowley: "Tsongas knew when he took the lead they'd be gunning for him. Tom Harkin was the first to open fire." Tsongas: "I'm ahead of them in Maryland in the polls, I'm ahead of the nationally in the polls. I'm gonna beat them here in [NH] and I'm unelectable? If I'm unelectable what the heck are they?" Crowley: "The stream of salvos into the Tsongas camp may only be the light artillery compared to what's ahead, but Tsongas staffers are serene. Said one, 'he can give as good as he gets'" ("Inside Politics," 2/13). ABC's Sam Donaldson: "Here you are a Greek liberal from Massachusetts, what are you doing running for the presidency?" Tsongas: "What are you doing sitting in my living room? ... I'm not plastic, I'm not programmed and I'm not as slick as most candidates are, but when you hear me you don't doubt that I'm telling you what I think." Tsongas, on not looking "fierce": "I got into this race when George Bush was at 91%. All those 'fierce' Democrats were under the table." Donaldson noted Tsongas has been cancer-free for more than five years ("Prime Time Live," ABC, 2/13).

3 HARKIN: CALLS TSONGAS A "CHEERLEADER" FOR NUCLEAR POWER

Standing with NH's controversial Seabrook nuclear plant in the background, Harkin "repeatedly attacked" Tsongas for being pro-nuclear power: "Tsongas believes the only energy choice is more Seabrooks or global warming. That's not true ... Seabrook is Tsongas' vision of the future ... it's not my vision." But Harkin, who advocates increased use of natural gas and the development of alternative energy sources, "refused to commit to the immediate shutdown of all nuclear plants" (Miller, Manchester UNION LEADER, 2/14). At a news conference, Tsongas "said he had criticized the construction of the Seabrook Station Nuclear Power plant, while Harkin had not": "Here we are just five days before the primary, he has discovered Seabrook. ... There are nuclear power plants in Iowa. There is no record of Tom Harkin saying boo about any nuclear power plant in Iowa." He said Harkin's "attack was a sign of a flagging campaign" (Canellos/Lehigh, BOSTON GLOBE, 2/14). Tsongas: "What you have now is a candidate who's not doing well. I would hope that the cynicism of what he is trying to exploit would rebound against him" (BOSTON HERALD, 2/14). Harkin: "This is coming down to a two-man race, Mr. Tsongas and myself. I feel the surge" (BOSTON GLOBE, 2/14). "Clinton's problems are giving Harkin some of the good luck he's enjoyed" in his IA campaigns. "Just as he's done in [IA], the street-wise Harkin exploits Clinton's vulnerabilities at every stop" (David Yepsen, DES MOINES REGISTER, 2/14). BOSTON GLOBE's Robinson/ Wilkie write Harkin's recent "strategy of targeting three of his rivals set off a flurry of counterpunching that is almost certain to create an acrimonious conclusion to the shortened primary campaign" (2/14). N.Y. POST's Orin: "sharp elbow politics like this is how Harkin has come to have even higher negative ratings than Clinton in some polls. But they also guarantee that Harkin ... is in the center of the rat-a-tat-tat of battling for the advantage in the final days" (2/14). On Cuomo's Harvard speech: "I said, my gosh, his program for America is just like mine. ... What we want to do for the country is the same" (W. POST, 2/14). ENDORSEMENTS: More than 40 women leaders throughout NH endorsed Harkin, citing his "exemplary national record on the issues of choice and women's rights" (release, 2/13). "Idahoans for Harkin" announced its formation 2/12. Among the group, state Sen. Dem Caucus chair John Peavy, and state Rep. Molly Lasechko (Popkey, IDAHO STATESMAN, 2/13).

AD WATCH: He "opened fire" on his Dem rivals yesterday in a new 30-second spot that criticizes Tsongas, Clinton and Kerrey for their tax policies (Joe Brennan, OMAHA WORLD-HERALD). TEXT: Narrator over "unflattering" black-and-white photos of the three with caption "For tax cuts for the rich": "These three Democrats are saying the same thing: more tax cuts for the rich and big business. Create wealth at the top, they say, and it will trickle down to us. In 10 years haven't we learned? They never, never let it trickle down. Only Tom Harkin will stop tax giveaways to the rich and do what Roosevelt, Truman and Kennedy did: invest in our people, rebuild this nation from the ground up and put America back to work." REAX: Kerrey: "If he's saying that I think we have to be very careful to provide incentives for the creation of jobs in America and attempt to develop a strategy to use our tax and regulatory system to create high-paying jobs in America, he's absolutely right. I'm guilty as charged. I believe that is precisely what we ought to do" (2/14).

TV: ABC's Peter Jennings: "More than any of the Democratic rivals, Sen. Harkin has tried to tailor his message to those working class groups which have formed the core of the Democratic Party since the days of Franklin Roosevelt." ABC's Judy Muller in NH: "Labor Union support here is the backbone of his campaign. ... But in courting the white collar vote at an insurance company, Harkin sounded not so much like a champion of the little guy as an accountant trying to slash defense spending in favor of social programs" (2/13). CNN's Crier: "On the attack, Tom Harkin, whose uncontested win in this week's Iowa caucuses seemed to have produced about as much bounce as a dead tennis ball. ... The key targets for political potshots these days, Bill Clinton and Paul Tsongas." Harkin: "I have a national campaign. ... Quite frankly Mr. Tsongas doesn't" ("Inside Politics," CNN, 2/13).

*4 KERREY: CONTINUES TO BACK OFF CLINTON

"At nearly every campaign stop" yesterday, journalists pressed Kerrey to "reveal any animosity toward" Clinton on the question of his military service. Kerrey's response was "an emotional plea 'not to refight the Vietnam War'": "I'm sympathetic [to Clinton], but I'm also very conscious that people like myself did serve and took a fair amount of abuse" (Michael Frisby, BOSTON GLOBE, 2/13). Kerrey: "I do not want to reopen the wounds of Vietnam." That "is between Bill Clinton and the voters" (Robinson/Wilke, BOSTON GLOBE, 2/14). GLOBE's Frisby notes, "Kerrey's tone was less critical than a week ago." He said "he still holds" his opinion that Clinton's account lacks "the ring of truth," though "he was careful not to offer any new or direct criticism." Kerrey aides acknowledged they "do not plan any new attacks" on Clinton's character (2/14). S.F. CHRONICLE's Susan Yoachum writes, "If anyone should benefit from [Clinton's] troubles with the draft, it is Kerrey. "But if anyone has been unable to take advantage of opportunities in this ... campaign, it has also been Kerrey." Citing Kerrey's softening on Clinton's draft question, Yoachum contends, "At times, Kerrey seems to be running against himself." He has a "brooding" quality that "makes him joking and affable at one juncture and almost vacant and disengaged at the next. It is a quality that concerns his handlers and apparently puzzles voters" (2/14). CHICAGO TRIBUNE's Steve Daley calls Kerrey the Dems' "grand enigma" (2/13). Jack Germond writes, the "immediate problem" for Kerrey is to run ahead of Harkin and "well enough to be judged a survivor. ... But Mr. Kerrey has never been able to distill a clear message to the electorate. And going into the home stretch, he is still changing themes" (Balto. SUN, 2/14). Kerrey's NH prediction: "I do not expect to finish a weak fourth" (Schwartz, WASH. POST, 2/14).

TSLAMMING TSONGAS: Kerrey chief strategist Larry Harrington "accused" Tsongas of "being willing to let the textile industry 'die off'": "If Paul Tsongas were elected, ... we would see a continuation of the same policies that have cost the South and the entire textile industry tens of thousands of jobs in the past decade." Harrington said comments by Tsongas represented "a dangerous, naive and cavalier attitude toward good, solid industries in the South." He referred specifically to Tsongas' reply on ABC's "Brinkley" 2/9 when asked whether he would protect the U.S. textile industry from "Pacific rim nations" with a competitive advantage. Asked whether it is "important to keep the domestic operations going or should the emphasis be on other industries," Tsongas: "My strategy, very simply, is grow the new companies, so when companies die off and industries die off, there are new ventures coming along." Tsongas spokesperson Peggy Connolly said he "wasn't suggesting that the textile industry be allowed to die": "[He] often says that he refuses to engage in a 'save what's left philosophy,' that it's very important to expand the manufacturing opportunities in this country. No, he is not anti-textile industry" (Hoover, GREENVILLE NEWS, 2/13).

ON "TODAY": On Clinton: "Any Democrat, as I do, that supports the First Amendment finds himself vulnerable to Republican charges in general elections, that's what we saw in 1988." Asked if Tsongas is a "regional candidate": "Yes ... he has become a regional candidate." Asked, with polls showing Clinton supporters moving to Tsongas, why he hasn't been able to capitalize: "That's a good question" ("Today," NBC, 2/14).

5 VULTURE WATCH: CUOMO, BENTSEN, GEPHARDT, GORE, ETC ...

With the Dem race "still wide open possible alternative candidates have been investigating how their favorites could yet enter the contest, even though a new candidate would face formidable obstacles" (Mashek, BOSTON GLOBE). Mentioned are Cuomo, Bentsen and Gephardt. "Supporters" of Bentsen and Gephardt "acknowledge they are looking into the mechanics of entering the campaign, but nothing beyond that" (2/14). N.Y. TIMES' Krauss mentions Gephardt, Gore, Bentsen and Mitchell. Only Mitchell "goes so far as to say he will not run ... The other three are not quite slamming the door, and their press secretaries ebulliently volunteer that their employers are being courted by colleagues urging them to jump into the race" (2/14). "Potential candidates, like others in the party, are waiting" for NH results "before determining what, if any, steps to take" (Balz/Broder, W. POST). "If anything is going to happen, party officials say, it would have to happen quickly, perhaps within 48 hours after the polls close" 2/18. "Party sources say friends of Gephardt and Bentsen have been examining the obstacles to a late candidacy, with Gephardt's advocates somewhat further along in their understanding of what it might take." Two Dems said Gephardt "supporters had inquired" about the 3/7 SC primary and the "availability of uncommitted slate of delegates there. ... Much of the talk in Washington is driven by staff, not by the potential candidates themselves" (2/14).

CUOMO: Draft Cuomo chair Phil Krone called Cuomo's 2/12 speech at Harvard's JFK School "a complete and total endorsement" of the NH write-in effort (Fredric Dicker, N.Y. POST). Krone:

"It was the best campaign speech of the season. ... It had a tremendous impact, our phones won't stop ringing, we're taking in thousands and thousands more dollars" (2/14). BOSTON GLOBE's Martin Nolan quotes Krone as saying the speech "filled the air with excitement" at the Draft Cmte's Concord HQ. So far, the draft effort is organized in ME, IL, MO and KS, "but organizers are also hoping for write-ins in the [3/10 MA primary] and conferred" with aides to Boston mayor Ray Flynn (2/14). Flynn "could supply the organizational muscle for an uncommitted delegate slate that would go up against slates for the active delegates" (Woodlief, BOSTON HERALD). The Draft Cmte is also hoping to "mount an ambush" at the 2/23 ME caucuses. Draft exec. dir. Barry Newman, on ME: "We don't need to mount a write-in, we just need to get people to the caucuses, and if we do well in [NH], we think we'll do well in Maine" (2/14). Both HERALD and GLOBE note historian/ex-JFK aide Arthur Schlesinger Jr. will endorse the write-in effort in Manchester today (2/14). NBC's Andrea Mitchell: Cuomo didn't say yes, but gave it a broad wink. And did it within eye sight of New Hampshire voters" (2/13). N.Y. TIMES' Leslie Gelb, after interviews in the past week with IA Dems, writes they would pick Cuomo should Harkin drop out: "They wanted this dragon-slayer, though none could cite his deeds" (2/14). Albany TIMES-UNION's Tom Precious reports ex-NY Dem chair William Hennessy "quietly began rounding up Cuomo backers from around [NY] Wednesday to travel to [NH] today." Hennessy "denied Cuomo" or NY Dem chair John Marino, who once worked under Hennessy, "were involved in the write-in campaign." However, anonymous NY Dems "said Hennessy's efforts have Marino's blessings. The sources said Marino also met with party loyalists last weekend in Syracuse, where a post-New Hampshire strategy was discussed, including plans" for the 2/23 ME caucuses. Marino denied any such meetings took place (2/14). BOSTON HERALD's Rachelle Cohen: "OK, Mario Cuomo, enough already. The act is getting tired. It isn't cute any more. It isn't funny. What it is now is an affront to the political process" (2/14). N.Y. POST's Mike McAlary quotes Cuomo on his JFK address: "It was exciting. The way the speech was received, it validated my belief in people. If you give people the facts, they'll be very fair and even honorable. ... The Democrats aren't doing it. And the Republicans aren't doing it ... they're both lying to us. The speech made some sense. But it's hard to believe they can get any significant numbers" (2/14). N.Y. DAILY NEWS' Nelson calls him a "mixture" of FDR, Humphrey Bogart, Bugs Bunny and Jackie Mason. "He had the Harvard audience laughing and crying, conscience-stricken and proud -- all at the same time." GOP strategist Ed Rollins, on how to face Cuomo: "I would every day call a press conference and say something negative about him, then spend the rest of the day watching him react to it. Then you'd see Cuomo vs. Cuomo" (2/14). Bill Pascoe writes a Cuomo run "would leave Mr. Bush off the hook, allowing him to cruise to victory in the fall" (W. TIMES, 2/14). BENTSEN: One close friend: "It would take a big-mandate coalition of Democrats to get Bentsen into this thing. But I know he's watching it with interest and not shutting any doors" (BOSTON GLOBE, 2/14). Bentsen: "My answer's the same it's been all along. And you don't see me up in [NH]." But a Bentsen spokesman "was not so firm": "He hasn't ruled it out" (N.Y. TIMES, 2/14). Dem sources say Bentsen "has been receptive to encouragement, but would find it difficult to enter the race with Clinton still in it" (Broder/Balz, W. POST, 2/14).

GEPHARDT: Rep. Dan Glickman (D-KS): "If Bill Clinton doesn't weather the storm, you'll see a groundswell for others and the best positioned is Gephardt." Glickman admitted his "preference" for Gephardt. N.Y. TIMES' Krauss cites some cong. aides who suggest Gephardt "is most popular because members have the most to gain by getting on his good side" (2/14). GLOBE's Mashek writes "a number of House colleagues would be expected to support him if he jumps into the fray." He is called a "vigorous campaigner" (2/14). Dem sources "said they believed that Gephardt ... would be the likeliest ... to move quickly, if at all. But there is no evidence that he is eager to jump in" (Broder/Balz, W. POST, 2/14).

GORE: Press sec. Marla Romash: "He continues to get calls from supporters around the country suggesting that he run. He is listening to them but he is not taking any action" (N.Y. TIMES, 2/14). Gore appeared on "Dennis Miller" last night. Asked of his pres. ambitions, Gore: "It didn't feel like the right thing for me to do in my personal life this time around. ... I hope I will have a chance to do it in the future." Miller, a little later: "So who rolled a tighter joint, you or Tipper?" (2/13).

*6 DEM ROUND-UP

NEW HAMPSHIRE MUSINGS: Ad-watcher Kathleen Hall Jamieson calls Clinton's use of the 30-min. call-in format tonight "a very smart strategic move." And Clinton is not the only one doing 30 minutes shots. Brown has been using his "Take Back America" half hour as his only ad, save for the 30-sec. spots to promote the long form. Buchanan has bought a half-hour slot 2/17. N.Y. TIMES' Michael Specter focuses on many Manchester voters' disinterest and dissatisfaction with the candidates (2/14). NEWHOUSE's Tom Baden visits the household of young Nicholas Campasano, a 2-year-old who each morning before mom sends him to day care, sits in front of the tube, taking in the TV ads. Nicholas recognized Bob Kerrey, minutes later he recited like a NH pro: "Read my lips, no new taxes." Nicky's mom: "He has no idea what he's saying. But he's heard it so many times" (2/14). BOSTON PHOENIX's Keller finds a "rhetoric gap" between candidates' ideas and words: A NH voter "besieged" by TV ads and position papers, "is likely to conclude there's been no really sincere rhetorical break from the predictable Democratic mantra of the post-New Deal era: for every problem, we've got a program" (2/14 issue).

SOUTH DAKOTA: Sioux Falls ARGUS LEADER reports Clinton is the only Dem not to commit to 2/23 forum before the 2/25 primary. Agran has been invited and confirmed. Clinton field dir. Bill Morton wouldn't rule attendance out, but said, "This is a state that is in some ways Senator Kerrey's and Harkin's backyard, so it's an uphill battle for us" (2/14). Brown opened a Sioux Falls office 2/13. LaRouche is the only of 7 Dems on the SD ballot without an SD office (ARGUS LEADER, 2/14). After declaring Tsongas the NH victor, Charles McDowell's "Reliable Source" urged a look at SD, "Can you imagine nice, gentle Paul Tsongas, with a big cowboy hat falling down over his ears, striding into South Dakota for a shootout?" (RICHMOND TIMES-DISPATCH, 2/13).

*7 BUSH: ROSTY GIVES OLD PAL PRE-PRIMARY SEND-OFF

The Dem "donnybrook" in the NH primary race has "served to obscure growing concerns among President Bush's advisers, including his state chairman, Gov. Judd Gregg, that support for Bush is unenthusiastic among Republicans, and that the president may have to settle for a narrow victory next week unless he can get a major lift from his two-day weekend campaign trip here" (Robinson/Wilkie, BOSTON GLOBE). "How much the trip will help Bush is unclear: His Wednesday visit apparently did nothing to lift him in the polls, despite the massive media coverage it received" (2/14). Citing the Political/Media Research/CONCORD MONITOR poll (see #9) showing Bush leading Buchanan only 50-33%, BOSTON HERALD's Wayne Woodlief writes the results "came as the President tried to sell [NH] voters on a recovery plan that even members of his own party find unpalatable because of the inclusion of several new taxes" (2/14).

"WEASELS": House Ways and Means Dems "moved to embarrass the president ... by passing on -- for almost certain defeat on the floor -- his entire State of the Union tax plan. The problem for Republicans was that the total package contained some unpopular measures and actual tax hikes -- including taxing annuities and imposing Medicare taxes on government employees -- items they hoped to quietly defeat after more popular parts of the package were passed first." One "unhappy" GOP Ways and Means member: "We wanted a racehorse (tax bill) for the campaign. We got a jackass" (HERALD, 2/14). The middle-income tax cut ($500 increase in the personal exemption for families) and the plan to make interest on student loans tax deductible, both promised by Bush in the State of the Union, were "pulled" from the plan sent from the WH to Ways and Means. "In fact, the stripped-down Bush package submitted to the House panel contained only seven of the three dozen tax proposals Bush outlined in his State of the Union speech -- seven that the President considers necessary for quick economic stimulus" (DiStaso, Manchester UNION LEADER, 2/14). W. POST's Eric Pianin writes Ways/Means chair Rostenkowski's (D-IL) plan "takes several of President Bush's economic proposals and gives them middle-class spin." WH spokesman Marlin Fitzwater: "The weasels have come out of their holes and shown up with higher taxes and fewer jobs" (2/14). The Dem plan is "centered on temporary tax credits of up to $400 for 80 percent of all taxpayers, a permanent one percentage point reduction in the corporate tax rate and a modest cut in taxes on capital gains" (Clymer, N.Y. TIMES, 2/14). Dem leaders, "mindful" of Bush's 3/20 deadline, "want the full House to choose between their plan and Mr. Bush's proposals by the end of February" (Calmes, W.S. JOURNAL, 2/14). Rostenkowski said the WH plan to pass the mid-class tax cut in a "second phase" would mean "it would be quietly forgotten" (PHILA. INQUIRER, 2/14).

NEW ENGLAND REAX: "The changes -- and especially the timing of the changes -- have astounded some of Bush's most loyal supporters in [NH]" (DiStaso, UNION LEADER). One GOP cong. aide called it "a classic example of leading with your chin." Ex-Rep./Buchanan backer Chuck Douglas: "Pinocchio politics." Rep. Dick Swett (D-NH): "This man truly does have a death wish." Rep. Bill Zeliff (R-NH) "defended the change in the plan as streamlining designed to insure quick passage" of what the WH considers the "most important" parts of the State of the Union package (2/14). BOSTON HERALD editorial calls Bush "not so much running as -- ON THE RUN. ... Whether it's in the halls of Congress or the malls of [NH], George Bush's administration is morally and politically adrift ... The tough commander-in-chief of last winter has become the whiner-in-chief when faced with a more stubborn foe -- the faltering economy. ... Why should Congress give a hoot what the president wants? After all, when it comes to domestic policy -- tax hikes, unemployment compensation extension, racial quotas -- they know the president will give in" (2/14). Evans & Novak, citing a 2/5 WH meeting with cong. GOPers, write "it was unclear whether there was any Bush strategy for what to do with the tax bill that will land on the president's desk. ... To the dismay of [the GOPers] present, the White House seemed unable to choose between the options and had no game plan in mind" (W. POST, N.Y. POST, 2/14).

WEASEL-BASHING: Bush's latest TV ad shows him in the Oval Office speaking to the camera: "Tuesday, [NH GOPers] will once again lead the nation. You'll choose a president to move us forward in this changing and uncertain world. I ask for your vote to lead America back to prosperity. And send Congress a message to pass my Plan for Economic Growth. I ask for your vote to put our nation on notice that [NH GOPers] stand united to defeat the liberal Democrats in the fall" (release, 2/13). N.Y. TIMES' Andrew Rosenthal sees two strategies in the Bush approach: To "harken back" to the Reagan years, and "drive home the theme of Presidential leadership" (2/14). CNN's Wm Schneider says "Bush may actually gain from the Democratic maneuvers": "He can say, 'These guys are trying to destroy me' and attempt to deflect blame for the economy from himself to Congress" (HERALD, 2/14).

NH SIGHTS AND SCENES: UNION LEADER profiles Bonnie Raymond who was able to get Bush's autograph during his top at the Bedford Mall. She handed him her unemployment identification booklet. Raymond: "I was hoping by the time he reached me he would stop and when he saw what it was he would at least say, 'I'm sorry you're unemployed.' He didn't see me, he didn't see it. His eyes are not open." Pictured next to the article is Raymond holding the booklet with "George Bush" on it (2/14). KEENE SENTINEL makes no endorsement: "The unappealing choice between George Bush and Patrick Buchanan is one we would rather not consider. We suspect we are not alone" (2/13). Dave Barry, on Bush's mall trip: "It is against security regulations to admit ordinary citizens to a mall when the president is inside getting in touch with ordinary citizens" (W. POST, 2/14).

MORE VIEWS: RICHMOND TIMES-DISPATCH editorial: "'Four more years' is more of a question than a confident vow" (2/13). CHICAGO TRIBUNE editorial: "If Bush is embarrassed by Buchanan, embarrassed is all he will be. ... This race is truly over before it begins" (2/13). BOSTON GLOBE's Steven Stark still gives Bush 5 stars: "The press usually underestimates him" (2/14). GOP strategist Ed Rollins: "The Reagan Democrats are a fleeting group, and my main concern is that I think the coalition that were out together in the 80s are very much up for grabs. ... The other important group that I'm concerned about ... is young voters, under 35. And I am starting to see some erosion among them" (HOUSTON CHRONICLE, 2/13).

*8 BUCHANAN: THREATENING ENOUGH FOR NEGATIVE ADS?

He said he "expects the Bush campaign to do whatever is necessary, including airing negative [TV ads], to stave off political defeat" in the NH primary: "I think they're going to throw everything at me but the kitchen sink before this is over. I sense they probably are making the call on negative ads this afternoon or tomorrow morning." A "senior Bush/Quayle campaign official told reporters" that they were "prepared to directly attack Buchanan in negative [TV ads], hinting the attack would be focused on Buchanan's opposition to the Persian Gulf War." But Bush spokesperson Rich Myers: "We do not make a practice of releasing our future advertising plan." Buchanan on Bush's trip to NH: "They came up here and had to bring the President up here to stop the hemorrhaging." On Bush calling him "protectionist": "I am not a protectionist. I'm a trade hawk" (Cousineau, Manchester UNION LEADER, 2/14). He appeared on WTSN, WOKQ radio: "If the country wants to go in a liberal direction that does not bother me. If I have made the best case I can and my message has gotten through and people say that they do not want conservative Republicanism any more, I understand that." He also said Bush's budget "contained $25 billion in new taxes and $52 billion in new spending over the next five years, including a 15 percent increase" for HUD: "HUD is a Great Society agency. What are we doing?" (Black, BOSTON GLOBE, 2/14). UNION LEADER editorial: "Buchanan isn't alone in sounding that alarm over Bush era spending binge" (2/14). L.A. TIMES header: "Buchanan Shows Confidence in Attacking Bush" (2/14). He "received his biggest applause not by boosting the Buchanan program but by denouncing the Bush record" (Matthews, S.F. EXAMINER, 2/14).

THE ANTI-SEMITISM THING: N.Y. TIMES' A.M. Rosenthal writes, "It cannot be taken away from Mr. Buchanan that he not only has introduced anti-Semitism into the mainstream of American politics, but has made it acceptable, respectable enough to ignore -- a potentially profitable" (2/14). ABC's Sam Donaldson followed Buchanan on the campaign trail after Buchanan refused "Prime Time" a formal interview: "You would ask me questions that would get in the way of the message I want to project." Donaldson: "He was right." Donaldson explained some of the specific racial and anti-Semitic observations others have made about Buchanan: "A group over here ... called you a hater and a bigot." Buchanan: "Well, go find 'em Sam" (2/13).

VOICE FROM THE DEAD: 15th Pres. James Buchanan urges his namesake to "finish" with NH: "Don't risk bringing down the both of you lest you lose, for good, a bully pulpit, should Mr. Bush be defeated" (W. TIMES ad by Edward Patterson, 2/14).

*12 WASHINGTON: ADAMS LAUNCHES CAMPAIGN, SEEKS AIR SUPREMACY

"Dogged by stubborn polls and branded the most vulnerable" Senator up in '92, Sen. Brock Adams (D) launched his re-election campaign "that even he concedes faces long odds" (Matasse, SEATTLE TIMES). He begins with a "dismal base" of support, "split ranks" within the party and "generally poor" media relations. "Yet his campaign also has the feel of personal crusade, which his supporters say will pump it full of strength over the next nine months." Adams launched TV spots in a $140,000 buy. In one of three spots, produced by Jim Margolis, a woman "credits" Adams with "securing important legislation and money for breast-cancer research and treatment" and a man talks about Adams' enviro record. "Observers" say the early ads are intended to raise Adams' low re-elect numbers which have been hovering around 25%. One Dem strategist: "Let's take a poll after the spots have run and see what his electability numbers are like then. If they're not dramatically improved in a poll he's willing to release ... he should do the party a favor and the voters a favor and back out." Adams spokesperson Peter Fierford said there is "no specific goal" for the ads. So far, none of his challengers have mentioned "the persistent but officially discounted allegations" of ex-staffer Kari Tupper (SEATTLE TIMES, 2/13). Adams, in his announcement speech: "I know the awards and the knocks that come from" public and private life. "These matter little to me now. What I do care about is my country, my state, and our people" (release, 2/12). He argued reporters "ignore his accomplishments" and "remain preoccupied" with the Tupper story. Ex-Rep. Mike Lowry (D) "stepped up" his campaign, hiring Seattle activist Sue Tupper (no relation) as manager (Connelly, SEATTLE POST-INTELLIGENCER, 2/13). Other candidates: State Sen. Patty Murray (D), Rep. Rod Chandler (R-08), state Sen. Leo Thorsness (R), Land Commis. Brian Boyle (R) and King Co. exec. Tim Hill (R). Primary 9/15.

*13 GOVERNOR GUMBO

MONTANA: Auditor Andy Bennett (R), who announced before Gov. Stan Stephens (R) said he would not seek re-election, is "undaunted" by AG Marc Racicot's (R) entry into the race. The pro-choice Bennett said abortion could play an "important role" in the primary (GREAT FALLS TRIBUNE, 2/7). "Racicot's campaign was barely 10 minutes old" when the abortion issue came up. He is "staunch" pro-life (BILLINGS GAZETTE, 2/7). Judge Bob Kelleher (D): "I welcome Marc into the race because he is pro-life. ... I am the only pro-life Democrat." State Rep. Dorothy Bradley (D): "My campaign strategy will not change. I will continue to be pro-choice." (BILLINGS GAZETTE 2/7).

MISSOURI: "Firms and individuals with financial dealings" with St. Louis "donated at least 20 cents out of every dollar raised" by Mayor Vince Schoemehl (D). However, this is well below his first two mayoral campaigns where more than half of the money he raised from 1981-85 came from "contributors with ties to city government." LG Mel Carnahan (D): "The record of gifts from contractors and those receiving city business is crystal clear, and it has continued right into his race for governor." Schoemehl: "There is absolutely no evidence to support that allegation. ... My fund-raising activities have been subjected to more scrutiny than any other public official in this state." GOP candidates: AG Wm Webster, Sec/State Roy Blunt and Treasurer Wendell Bailly (ST. LOUIS POST DISPATCH, 2/11).

NORTH CAROLINA: A Mason-Dixon poll, conducted 2/5-8, surveyed 810 reg. voters; margin of error +/- 3.5%. Dem primary subsample: 478 LVs +/- 5%. GOP primary subsample: 234 LVs +/- 6% (Greensboro NEWS & RECORD, 2/13). Candidates: Ex-Gov. Jim Hunt (D), AG Lacy Thornburg (D), Marcus Williams (D), LG Jim Gardner (R), Ruby Hooper (R) and ex-House Speaker Joseph Mavretic (I).

DEM PRIMARY		GOP PRIMARY		GENERAL ELECTION MATCHUPS
Hunt	58%	Gardner	71%	Hunt	44%
Thornburg	23	Hooper	8	Thornburg	36%
Williams	3	Undec.	21	Gardner	34
Undec.	16			Mavretic	8
				Undec.	24
				Undec.	16

Thornburg formally began his campaign 2/10 questioning Hunt's two terms in education, economic development and prisons. On hand were ex-Sen Robert Morgan and ex-Gov Robert Scott. Thornburg termed himself "a pugnacious underdog who would carry the fight to Hunt." But he faces some difficult tasks, "his cash short campaign" has no immediate plans to air a TV ad "attacking Hunt" (Raleigh NEWS AND OBSERVER, 2/11).

WEST VIRGINIA: Dem chair Chuck Smith said no split exists in the party despite his endorsement of Gov. Gaston Caperton (D) who faces a primary with AG Mario Palumbo and state Sen. Charlotte Pritt. "Critics say as party chairman Smith had no business choosing sides in the primary." Smith: "It was my personal choice." Smith said he will not campaign against Palumbo or Pritt (CHARLESTON DAILY MAIL, 2/5).

*14 SENATE "A": ECONOMIC NON-SPECIFICS, JUDGEMENT QUESTIONING
 DEMS: Making the economy the "centerpiece" of his campaign LG Leo McCarthy (D), "who began talking about the economy even before it was electorally fashionable," wants a 5% tax credit for the creation of new CA jobs, 10% bid preference for CA companies and a sliding scale capital gains tax cut. McCarthy is expected to announce his candidacy next week (Susan Yoachum, SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE, 2/11). SACRAMENTO BEE's Martin Smith writes Rep. Mel Levine (D-27) "is either doing very well or failing miserably ... depending on what information is judged more important." Levine supporters are "nervous" over last month's Field Poll that showed Levine, at 6%, trailing both Rep. Barbara Boxer's (D-06) 25% and LG Leo McCarthy's 43%. "But there's a newer and possibly more important set of figures" -- FEC reports -- which finds Levine with $3.7M in the bank compared to Boxer's $1.25M and McCarthy's $801,000. Levine advisors Michael Berman and Carl D'Agostino discount the value of early polling and favor "hoarding" the most money for the closing days of a campaign. But, "getting one's message across to voters during the final days of a campaign may not be an easy task this year" as CA TV "will be crowded with campaign commercials during this unusually busy primary election season" (2/9). S.F. CHRONICLE's Yoachum asks, "Could it be that Boxer, an ardent feminist, is guilty of salary discrimination?" Boxer said she wanted to look for a woman with Southern CA expertise when she parted company with strategist Ed McGovern and found one in Rose Kapolczynski. But FEC reports show McGovern was paid $1,000-1,500 more per month than Kapolczynski. Kapolczynski: "I got what I asked for, and I feel fine" (2/11).

GOP: "Usually staunch conservative" ex-TV commentator Bruce Herschenson told the SAN JOSE MERCURY NEWS he "will not advocate changes in [the] politically popular system" of Social Security. Herschenson, who once called the program a "con job": "I'd be writing my concession speech. ... It's either (leave it alone) or don't become a senator." After a second MERCURY NEWS interview Herschenson "recanted his earlier statements that he would not advocate changes ... because of the electoral cost involved." Primary foe Rep. Tom Campbell (R-12) is making a "potent issue" of a '90 newsletter in which Herschenson advocated the privatization of the Social Security system (2/13). By having campaign vet Bill Lacy as his campaign manager, Palm Springs Mayor Sonny Bono (R) brought in some much-needed "credibility." GOP activist Steven Merksamer said Bono "wasn't taken seriously" until Lacy came on board. "I got a call from Lacy asking me to meet Bono. I don't know what I would have done if Bono had called. But the fact that Bill Lacy called, there was no question I would meet with Bono" (Sample, SACRAMENTO BEE, 2/10).

*15 SENATE "B": UNKNOWN SEN, AIDS CONTROVERSY, GRUDGE MATCH
 GOP: "Portraying himself as both an effective inside player and an angry critic" of Congress, Sen. John Seymour officially kicked off his bid. Seymour "acknowledg[ed] that Californians don't know that much about him even though he has served in the Senate ... for more than a year." An "unusually somber" Seymour talked about his local roots in Anaheim while a "more feisty, self-confident side ... emerged" at a Long Beach shipyard where he talked about saving jobs (Bill Stall, L.A. TIMES, 2/12). Statewide polls show him "comfortably beating" his primary challengers but losing to "either of the Democrats" running for the seat (John Marelus, S.D. UNION-TRIBUNE, 2/12). Seymour: "I've got my work cut out for me" (Robert Gunnison, S.F. CHRONICLE, 2/12). Rep. Wm Dannemeyer (R-39) was "surprised" by the remarks of Bush M.D. Burton Lee who said Dannemeyer "takes a very subjective and prejudicial attitude" toward AIDS. Dannemeyer, long "criticized by homosexual groups and AIDS activists for his anti-gay vehemence," was named along with Sen. Jesse Helms (R-NC) by Lee for "impeding efforts to stem the disease" (Marshall, L.A. TIMES, 2/11). Lee: "[Dannemeyer] thinks everybody who has AIDS is bad" (Nicholson, N.Y. POST, 2/10). WH spokesperson Marlin Fitzwater: "We do share the doctor's concern about AIDS research ... [but] we wouldn't comment on specific members of Congress." Dannemeyer called the president's AIDS program a "policy for failure" and "attacked" Bush for not supporting sanctions to force states to collect names of sex-partners of people with AIDS. Dannemeyer: "I think [Lee's] comments are politically motivated" (N.Y. POST, 2/11). Next, Dannemeyer wrote to Bush that he is "convinced" that Magic Johnson "would be HIV-free today had your administration fought" for AMA and Centers for Disease Control recommendations on AIDS (N.Y. POST, 2/14). Other GOPers: ex-U.S. Civil Rights Commissioner Bill Allen.

DEMS: Controller Gray Davis (D) officially kicked off his campaign promising to prevent CA from "drifting into economic mediocrity" (S.F. EXAMINER, 2/11). He offered "few specifics" and called for a "broad array" of tax credits: "Let's lead the nation in bullet trains, rapid transit and environmental technology." Davis issued "sharply focused criticism" of 6/2 Dem primary opponent Dianne Feinstein in an attempt to "undermine her popularity with women voters." Davis called Feinstein a "born-again feminist" whose pro-Anita Hill campaign mailings reached "the height of hypocrisy" since Feinstein vetoed several resolutions supported by womens' groups while she was S.F. mayor. Feinstein manager Kam Kuwata cited polls showing Feinstein with a 3-1 lead over Davis: "Clearly the women of [CA] are supporting Dianne" (Shuit, L.A. TIMES, 2/11).

INDEPENDENTS: State Sen. Quentin Kopp (I), calling the race a "free ride" until after the 6/2 primary, filed a declaration of intent to run: "It's an enormous undertaking but I'm intrigued." If Kopp does run, he might face Feinstein in the general, "renew[ing] ... the long-standing grudge match between the two." Kopp lost to Feinstein in the '79 S.F. mayoral race and has been a "consistent critic" for the past 20 years. His probable entrance will "likely ... detract" from Feinstein's "more conservative support" (Yoachum, S.F. CHRONICLE, 2/13).

*16 THIS MORNING: ABC's "GMA"'s pre-recorded Q&A with the Dems focused on education. NBC's "Today" focused on Cuba and spoke with Kerrey. "CBS This Morning" focused on the Olympics (2/14).

LAST NIGHT: CBS led with CA floods. ABC and CNN led with the loss in retail sales. NBC led with a report from NH. PBS' "MacNeil/Lehrer" led with Congress' tax battle and focused on Clinton's draft deferment with ex-Sec/Navy James Webb, ATLANTIC MONTHLY's James Fallows, Johns Hopkins' Michael Mandelbaum and Sen. John McCain (R-AZ). CNN's "Inside Politics" hosted Dem chairs Phil Angelides (CA) and Gary La Paille (IL) and started their piece "On the Stump" featuring candidate's speeches. CNN's "Crossfire" hosted ex-Sen. George McGovern (D) and GOP strategist David Keene on campaign '92. ABC's "Prime Time Live" profiled Buchanan and Tsongas in a piece called "The Spoilers," and "Nightline" focused on the CA floods (2/13).

LATE NIGHT: Dennis Miller on Clinton: "He was campaigning in [NH], someone left a window open, Clinton felt a draft and he split. ... evidently a letter has come back to haunt Bill Clinton and this time it isn't even a scarlet one. ... It's bad enough he likes sex, now it turns out he hates war, what the hell is that?

... Avoiding a draft is something that can ruin a candidate's chances of becoming president, although it actually increases a candidate's chances of becoming vice president." On Cuomo: "Sounding more and more like a candidate, Mario Cuomo gave a totally boring and meaningless speech yesterday. ... There's continuing pressure to draft Mario Cuomo and I think if Cuomo wants to beat the draft, he might call Bill Clinton" ("Dennis Miller Show," 2/13). David Letterman on Clinton: "Earlier today Vice President Dan Quayle phoned ... Clinton and invited him over to play army." On Clinton's "Nightline" performance: "He said no, it's true he did not serve in Vietnam but then he added in a somber note that during his marriage at least 10 times he has officially been listed as missing-in-action" ("Late Night," NBC, 2/14). Johnny Carson on CA's rain: "My house has more leaks than the Clinton campaign." On Clinton: "I turned on CBS last night and saw a guy hurling downhill at 95 [mph] in the snow and I thought, 'That's enough about Clinton's campaign in [NH]. ... Every day there's a new revelation about Clinton ... they've got tapes, files, phone calls. Clinton could open up a presidential library before he gets elected." On Tsongas' frontrunner status: "The moral is, 'if you want to be dark horse, don't have a filly on the side'" (NBC, 2/13).

I'm gonna beat them here in New Hampshire. And I'm unelectable?

If I'm unelectable what the heck are they?"

WALRUS POACHERS

Rather reports that there is plenty of illegal profit to be made killing and trafficking in wild animals. In Alaska, federal agents have infiltrated a suspected ring of walrus poachers, who kill the animals for their ivory tusks. (CBS-4)

TEXAS RESIDENCY/DOONESBURY

Rather: A lot more people are claiming to be Texans these days. If you're wondering why, just look in the funny papers. You'll find the answer deep in the heart of taxes.

CBS's James Hattori: It's a question of side-stepping.

[TV coverage of President Bush jogging]

George Bush has long claimed Texas as his home, but in fact he's the non-resident president who rents a room when he comes back to Houston.

(Gov. Richards: "And the point is if the President can have a hotel room as a permanent residence, well why not everybody else?")

A point raised in the funny pages two weeks ago by Doonesbury cartoonist Gary Trudeau, who suggested that Mr. Bush made a shrewd choice in Texas, one of six states with no income tax. It struck a chord with readers from Maine to California who clipped a form from the cartoon requesting residency in the Lone Star State.

(Mary Kay Stevens, CA taxpayer: "What makes him think that Texas is his primary residency, and is he doing it for tax-evasion purposes?")

(Clayton Stemple, FL taxpayer: "You've gotta take it funny, 'cause if you took it serious you'd just get very depressed.")

The White House says it's all legit. Bush used to live and work and still votes in Texas. But responses have flooded the capital in Austin -- cards and letters from folks who want to pay no state taxes, like George Bush.

(Diana Maldonado, mail clerk: "Thirty-thousand, 31,000 -- in a week-and-a-half's time.")

They're stacked 10-feet high in the office of Texas state controller John Sharp.

(Sharp: "We anticipated it being about 2,000 or 3,000. It's starting to get a little bit out of hand.")

Sharp was playing along, even sending back official-looking residency certificates for those seeking the Bush exemption.

(Sharp: "If you can present this to your tax office in Michigan and they'll buy it, that's great with us. We're suspicious that that's going to happen.")

Texans have always expected that deep down everybody really wants to be like them. But state officials do worry that some of the people who've written in may be taking all of this a bit too seriously.

(Sharp: "There's one guy that really wrote in and said if you don't send me my certificate and make me a Texas resident I'm going to sue you. So, okay already. You're a Texas resident. Fine.") Still, the phones keep ringing.

(Phone operator: "I don't think it'll carry any weight with your California tax collector.")

And the letters keep coming from Texan wannabes -- folks who say if it's good enough for the President it's good enough for them.

(CBS-17)

-end of News Summary-

Mitchell continues:

(Clinton: "Other people have questions [about] my life. After years of public service, I'll tell you something. I'm going to give you this election back, and if you give it to me I won't be like George Bush. I'll never forget who gave me a second chance, and I'll be there for you till the last dog dies.")

Mario Cuomo's supporters are talking about a different kind of draft, a write-in campaign.

(Campaign worker singing to the tune of Simon & Garfunkel's "Cecilia": "Mario Cuomo -- you care for our needs -- we're begging you please to run -- run run run.")

They were able to watch Cuomo last night at Harvard, across the border in neighboring Massachusetts, delivering a passionate campaign-style speech against George Bush's policies and campaign tactics.

(Cuomo: "That's what the pledge of allegiance was. That's what Boston Harbor and Willie Horton were. That's what the quota debate was last year. And that is what welfare could be about this year.")

And he gave the write-in movement a big boost.

(Cuomo: "In my own state they're saying lousy things about me. If they're going to say nice things in New Hampshire I'm going to encourage it." [laughter])

Cuomo didn't say yes, but he gave a broad wink, and did it within eyesight of New Hampshire voters. (NBC-Lead)

ABC's Jim Wooten reports that Gov. Clinton did not look like a candidate in trouble today, not in a raucous high school gym heavy with enthusiasm. But Clinton has launched an 11th-hour advertising blitz that defends his draft record and without offering proof blames the White House for his tabloid troubles.

(Clinton ad announcer: "Fact: The President's Republican operatives were involved in promoting the untrue Gennifer Flowers story to destroy Bill Clinton.")

ABC's Judy Muller reports on Tom Harkin: He calls himself a populist, an unabashed liberal, and the only real Democrat in the race. Labor union support in New Hampshire is the backbone of Harkin's campaign. He is proposing a new New Deal reminiscent of President Roosevelt's -- one aimed at creating jobs through a massive public works program.

(Man: "Someone has come from the people who hasn't forgotten where he came from and is looking out for the little guy -- me.")

But in courting the white-collar vote at an insurance company, Harkin sounded not so much like a champion of the little guy as an accountant out to slash defense spending in favor of social programs.

(Harkin: "Head Start -- I want to fully fund Head Start. How much does it cost? Five-billion dollars, the cost of five B-2 bombers.")

But the new generation here may not buy a New Deal. Harkin has difficulty convincing a younger generation that he is not a political relic. He also has been criticized, even by colleagues in the Senate, as being mean-spirited, a loner. The issue comes up on the campaign trail. The polls show Harkin with only 13 percent of the vote in New Hampshire. Like it or not, a populist needs popularity to win.

EDITOR'S NOTE: "Nation's First Primary Looks More Exciting Than Pundits Foresaw," by James Perry & David Rogers, appears in The Wall Street Journal, page A1.

SCIENTISTS DECRY BUSH INACTION ON GLOBAL WARMING

Leaders from the scientific and environmental communities are urging the Administration to take dramatic action on global warming or face responsibility for collapse of a treaty to preserve the world's climate....

The leaders of six environmental groups, including the Union of Concerned Scientists and the National Audubon Society, said Thursday they failed to get any commitments from the Administration.

"The White House has apparently decided to listen to the oil boys instead of the scientists," said John Adams, executive director of the Natural Resources Defense Council. "We're about to miss the boat, and blame will fall on the United States government if they do not act."...

Although pleased that White House officials were willing to listen, the group said they were disappointed by the reaction. Instead of accepting their recommendations, Adams said, "Skinner gave us a civics lesson. He said it is a slow, deliberate process and change will not occur by Feb. 18." (UPI)

EPA EASES BAN ON PESTICIDE, FINDING CANCER RISK OVERESTIMATED

The EPA Thursday reversed its plan to ban most uses of a popular pesticide, acknowledging that it overestimated the cancer risks of the family of chemicals previously considered a major threat to the U.S. food supply.

The decision to reinstate compounds containing EBDC for use on 45 common agricultural commodities represents a victory for pesticide manufacturers because it was based on a new method of assessing risk long promoted by the chemical industry.

SPACE INDUSTRY EXECUTIVES, TWO CONGRESSMEN EYED FOR NASA JOB

The Bush Administration is considering chief executives from the space industry and two former Democratic congressmen as possible successors to fired NASA Administrator Truly.

An Administration source said the nominee is likely to come from outside the agency. Speculation focused on non-NASA executives including Norman Augustine, the chairman and CEO of the Martin Marietta; Edward Aldridge, president of McDonnell Douglas; Joseph Allen, president of Space Industries; and two former congressmen.

The two former congressmen figuring in speculation are Edward Boland of Massachusetts, and Don Fuqua of Florida.... The Administration source said it is unlikely the nominee will be the highly respected J.R. Thompson, who returned to Huntsville, Ala., last fall after resigning for personal reasons as the agency's No. 2 man.

TRICK FOR BUSH IS TO RUN AGAINST THE BUSH OF 1980

In a new commercial that his campaign began showing on television Thursday, President Bush gazes into a camera in the White House. He reminds New Hampshire Republicans that they "will once again lead the nation" in choosing a President and asks them to "stand united to defeat the liberal Democrats in the fall."

Campaigning in New Hampshire last month, Vice President Quayle repeatedly told voters: "The Republican revolution began here 12 years ago in the snows of New Hampshire. They've been trying to tell you made a mistake. You did not make a mistake."

There is only one catch: Bush's 1980 candidacy, built on moderate Republican themes, died in the snows of New Hampshire, where he lost badly to Ronald Reagan.

But now it is an important part of Bush's strategy for the New Hampshire primary to harken back to the Reagan legacy and present himself as a true conservative in hopes of countering Patrick Buchanan's insurgency from the right -- even if it ignores Bush's 1980 defeat.

(Andrew Rosenthal, New York Times, A18)

BUCHANAN BRACES FOR WEEKEND BUSH ASSAULT

CLAREMONT, N.H. -- Patrick Buchanan says he's bracing for a weekend assault from the Bush campaign and would be flattered if it includes negative TV ads. That would be just one more sign of "the nervousness in the White House," asserts Buchanan.

With just days to go before the nation's leadoff primary, Buchanan is picking up steam and his pace. He's talking as if he really thinks he has a chance to go all the way. "I don't think they can stop me if I can break out of New Hampshire," Buchanan told the Claremont Kwanis Club.

QUAYLE, DENYING GOP LEAKED CLINTON STORY, SAYS 'I SERVED'

BOSTON -- Vice President Quayle firmly denied Thursday that Republicans had leaked information about Gov. Clinton's draft record, and said the case is not similar to his own in 1988, because "I served." Asked about Clinton's assertions that Republicans leaked the story, Quayle bristled: "That is just total nonsense. There is no evidence to support that allegation. We had nothing to do with it. And we won't have anything to do with it."

(Toni Locy, Boston Globe)

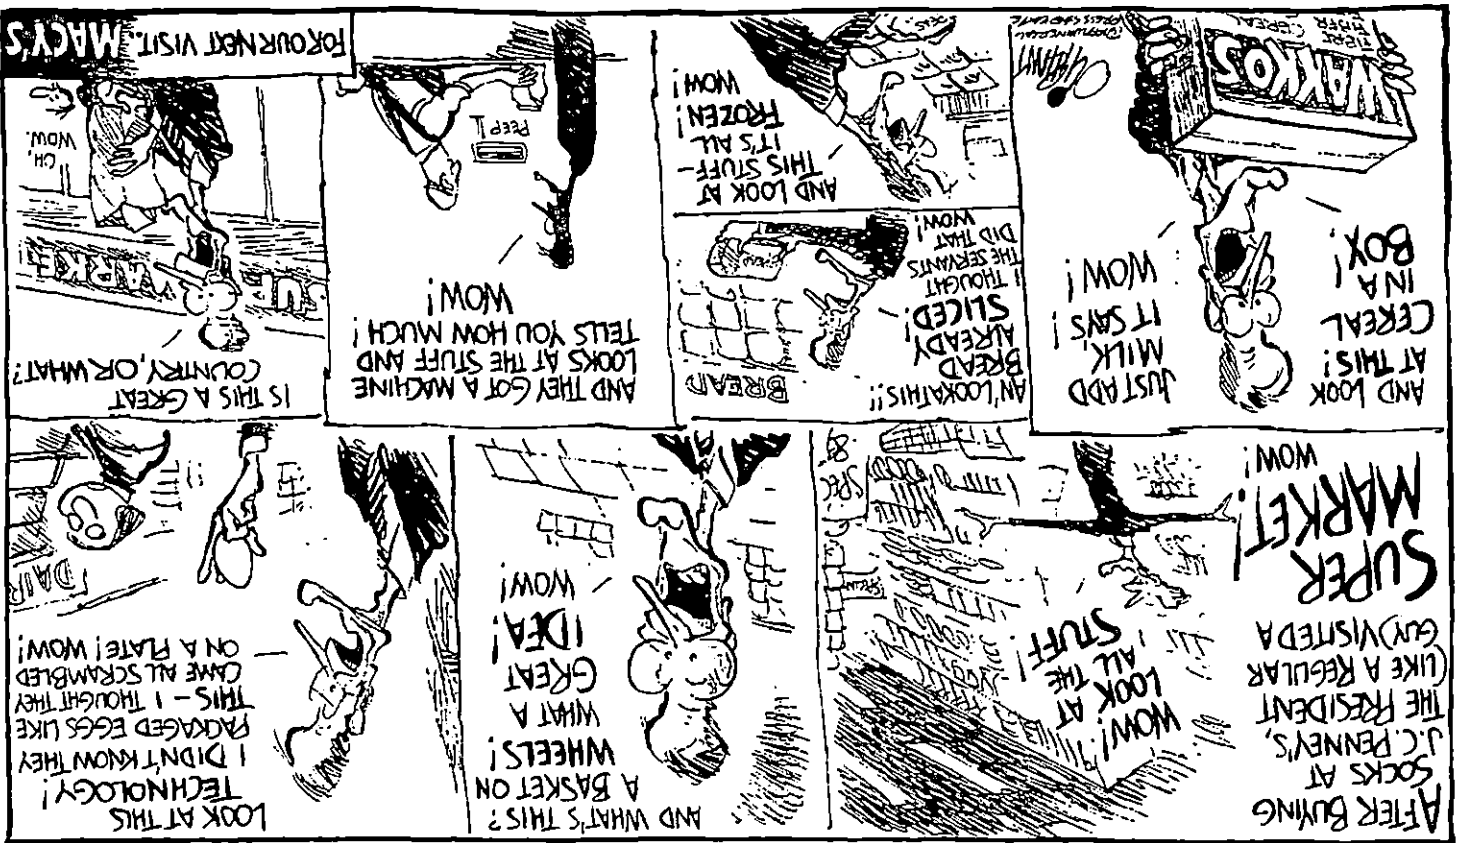

CANDIDATES ZERO IN WITH FINAL AD BARRAGE

Using personal appeals, political hyperbole and some old-fashioned distortion, the presidential candidates have sharpened their attack lines in a final blizzard of ads before Tuesday's New Hampshire primary....

While Clinton has one new ad featuring a New Hampshire woman who lost her home to foreclosure, he tries in several other spots to portray himself as the victim of unfair publicity. Clinton blames "President Bush's Republican operatives" for instigating the stories about his personal life, although he has produced no evidence for this claim.

FROM THE PRESIDENT

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

January 29, 1992

Dear Mrs. Elder:

On behalf of the President, thank you for your recent letter expressing interest in joining the Bush-Quayle organization. I am truly sorry for the delay in the response.

As you may know, the Bush-Quayle '92 Primary Committee opened at 1030 25th Street, N.W., Washington, DC 20005. The telephone number there is (202)-336-7080. I have taken the liberty of forwarding your letter to them for their consideration. Your enthusiasm is certainly appreciated.

I might suggest that you contact them directly at the above address to let them know of your willingness to help with the Bush-Quayle '92 Primary Committee.

Again, thank you for taking the time to write and for your continued support and friendship.

Sincerely,

The President
The White House
Washington, D.C. 20500

Dear Mr. President:

It was an honor for Lee and me to attend your State Dinner for Argentine President Carlos Saul Menem and the recent White House Christmas Party. We were extremely pleased to be invited to be present at these two very prestigious events, and we are grateful for the opportunity to interact with you and your special guests.

Thank you for sending the three packages of autographed photographs, they are a wonderful reminder of the lovely times we have spent with Mrs. Bush and you. It was very thoughtful of you to send these memories for our personal records.

Mr. President, I will always remember and appreciate the time that you allowed me from your very demanding schedule for a personal visit with you in The Oval Office. Pursuant to our discussion, and in acknowledgement of the high esteem in which I hold you, I wish to restate my willingness to work with you on your Presidential campaign and to accompany Mrs. Bush on some of her campaign speeches. I would be honored and delighted to assist Mrs. Bush and you in any manner you designate.

Lastly, Mr. President, I appreciate the gracious way that you acknowledged and settled our little football wager. I will recall it fondly when the Redskins take the field next month at The Super Bowl!!

Very respectfully yours,

Rose H. Elder

SAVE FREE TV AND STOP CODDLING CABLE

ALEX DREYFOOS

WPEC TV2

WEST PALM BEACH

FL 33407

There is an important battle now underway in Washington that will determine the future of an important American institution -- free television. A vigorous assault in recent years by big cable companies has left the future of network and independent broadcasters very much in doubt. According to the Federal Communications Commission, prompt corrective action is needed to ensure the survival of free TV.

The demise of free TV is particularly bad news for the millions of viewers who are unwilling or unable to pay the steeply rising costs of cable television subscriptions. In fact, as many on Long Island know, cable rates have skyrocketed since the cable industry was de-regulated in 1984. Nationwide, rates for cable service have gone up 56% in the last four years.

I am supporting legislation in the House of Representatives that is designed to save free television and end the coddling of the powerful cable industry. My bill, HR 3380, recognizes that cable companies have gotten rich by using the signals of free broadcasters -- like our own channels 2,4,5,7,9, and 11 -- and retransmitting them to their subscribers for a fee. This "retransmission loophole" has enabled cable companies to improve their programming package, gain additional subscriber revenues, and attract more advertising entirely at the expense of the broadcasters with whom they are competing.

To preserve free TV and level the playing field, Congress must close the "retransmission loophole." HR 3380 will do just that by finally giving local broadcasters the right to negotiate compensation -- either financial or non-financial -- for cable's use of their programming.

The cable industry's response to my bill and a similar one in the Senate has been a slick $10 million advertising campaign aimed at scaring subscribers and Members of Congress. Yet, contrary to claims of the cable lobby, nothing in the bill imposes new charges on cable customers or forces payment from cable operators to broadcasters.

Sports enthusiasts were the first to suffer from the cable industry's increasing clout. I can remember the days when Long Island fans could regularly enjoy their favorite local teams on free television. In recent years however, revenue-bloated cable companies have outbid broadcast stations for the rights to most Yankees, Mets, Rangers, Islanders, and Knicks games. To prevent further erosion of free TV programming in more critical areas like local and national news, Congress must put an end to the special treatment of the cable industry and pass HR 3380.

Political/Domestic Questions:

1) Why did you fire Admiral Truly?

*served well, good man -
let him stay, speak for self*

2)

By the actions of the Ways and Means Committee in the last few days, it doesn't look very promising for growth package. What is your plan to get it through Congress before March 20 and what happens if you don't?

3)

Do you think it is appropriate for sub-cabinet level officials to be out campaigning for your economic package?

4)

Vice President Quayle has said several times that he believes Governor Cuomo will be the Democratic nominee. Do you agree with his assessment?

5)

Our paper's latest poll finds you falling to 50% of likely Republican primary voters to Buchanan's 33%. If Pat Buchanan gets over 30% of the vote in the New Hampshire primary, don't you think this could be considered a victory against an incumbent president?

6)

Is your campaign planning on running "attack" commercials on Buchanan?

7)

What is your strategy for re-election? How much time do you plan to spend campaigning and how much governing?

8)

Why won't you sign a "no new tax" pledge?

9)

There has been a lot of attention about the fact that you don't pay state income taxes anywhere. Aren't you dodging Maine taxes, the only place you own a home, by claiming Texas as your official residence?

10)

Is it true that the Administration leaked this story about Governor Clinton, and if so will you condemn this action or do you agree with this type or tactic?

11)

Why was New Hampshire chosen as the first state for the SBA's New England Lending and Recovery Project and so many other federal special grants and programs?

12)

Why didn't you present a concrete way to pay for your health care package when you presented it and when are you going to send up legislation to show your serious about it?

*continue to

13) Why did it take you three years to come up with an health care package?

14) Do you have full confidence in Richard Darman as your OMB Director?

Foreign Questions:

1) Is it true that the Administration is skeptical of Yeltsin's staying power and is not moving forcefully with aid or support for him?

2) Do you have a covert action plan to overthrow Saddam and are you now contemplating military action?

3) Are you contemplating military action or sanctions to make Libya comply with the UN resolution or Pan Am 103?

4) Is an Israeli commitment on stopping future settlements part of the deal for new loan guarantees?

5) Why are you sending Haitians back in view of reports of brutality against the returners?

MEMORANDUM FOR SAMUEL K. SKINNER
W. HENSON MOORE ✓

FROM: C. BOYDEN GRAY mg

SUBJECT: Regulatory Reform Initiative

put on my Desk

Attached are the talking points you requested, in addition to a progress report on the entire regulatory reform initiative.

Talking Points on Deregulation Initiative
(Timing of Initiative)

- o A number of people have asked why we chose now to launch a full-scale effort within the Executive Branch to reduce the economic burdens of regulation. There are two reasons.
- o  The first is Congressional inaction. Congress has so far failed to enact ~~most of our pro-growth reform proposals,~~ such as ~~our banking and energy legislation.~~ Because we cannot afford to wait any longer, we must try to do what we can under existing laws, and hope that Congress will finish the job later.
- o  Similarly, Congress has failed for two years to confirm the ~~official who oversees the regulatory review process.~~ We must now take steps to fill the resulting gap as best we can.
- o  Second, it is always appropriate from time to time to reassess regulations to see if they still make sense in light of changes in technology and markets. Such a review is particularly appropriate given the current economic situation.

Talking Points on Deregulation Initiative
(Progress Report)

In the week since the President announced his regulatory reform initiative, the Administration has taken the following steps to cut red tape and reduce the burden of federal regulation:

- o ✓ On Thursday, January 30, the Administration announced the specifics of several initiatives to improve access to capital by businesses and individuals, and to reduce the costs of compliance with the tax laws. These include:
 - ✓ -- actions by the bank and thrift regulatory agencies to enhance the ability of banks and thrifts to raise capital by making capital standards better comport with market realities; and
 - ✓ -- upcoming actions by the SEC to make it easier for small businesses to raise capital in the stock market.
 - ✓ -- actions by the IRS to reduce the compliance burden of the payroll tax system by abolishing several requirements that needlessly increase employer costs.
- o ✓ We expect to announce several more pro-growth initiatives in these and other areas during the next 90 days. Members of the Competitiveness Council and White House staff have been working with various agencies to develop such initiatives in energy, the environment, financial services, transportation, communications, and exports, among others.
- o ✓ The vast majority of the 24 Departments and agencies that received the President's memorandum have already begun an intensive review of their existing regulatory schemes, and have begun to identify changes that will promote economic growth without threatening health or safety.
- o ✓ 18 of these Departments and agencies have appointed a permanent regulatory oversight official, as the President requested. All of the remaining agencies expect to name this official by Monday.
- o To our knowledge, all of these departments and agencies are abiding by my request to observe a moratorium on regulations that do not promote economic growth and do not fall within one of the exceptions outlined in my memorandum.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM:

WILLIAM R. HARLOW WRH

SUBJECT:

Presidential Interview with Defense Daily

Attached is the revised version of the President's Defense Daily interview incorporating all appropriate changes suggested in the White House staffing.

Please advise when the text has received final approval so that I may pass it on to Defense Daily for publication.

Attachment

QUESTION: Many in Congress are calling for deeper defense budget cuts than already planned. It appears that a $250 billion annual defense budget is not an unlikely prospect. Does a $250 billion defense budget represent too drastic a defense cut or is this a reasonable level given the lessened Soviet military threat?

THE PRESIDENT: We should recall that several times in this century we have followed victory in war with rapid disarmament that endangered the nation and the world. At the same time, the extraordinary improvements in the international situation justifies the substantial but prudent defense reductions we have proposed. We have already cut defense significantly, and we are planning further cuts in the years ahead. From 1985 to 1997, defense spending will experience a cumulative decline of 37 percent -- more than a third, in real terms. At that point, it will represent only about 16 percent of all federal outlays -- less than one in every six federal dollars.

These are profound cuts, but we can manage them because they are carefully planned. They are based on the dramatic changes that have taken place in the world. However, we have made sure they also take into account what our future needs will be. We want to avoid taking the budget down too far, too fast, destroying the careful planning that is needed to cut our expenditures while maintaining adequate military capability. I don't need to remind you of what happened in the 1970s following the Vietnam War, when we engaged in a too-rapid build down. We got hollow forces. We got fighter wings that could not fight. We got ships that were dangerously undermanned. We must not permit that to happen again. Cutting too far, too fast is a prescription for problems.

I have directed Secretary Cheney and General Powell to ensure that the cuts we are proposing are managed in a way to ensure we have the capability we need in the years ahead. We must be able to keep U.S. forces deployed in forward areas where crises can erupt. We must have the strategic deterrence and the defense we need to protect America. We must be able to respond quickly to regional crises that erupt with little warning, such as Iraq's invasion of Kuwait. We must maintain our technological edge to ensure we can prevail on the sophisticated battlefields of the future.

These matters cut to the very heart of my new defense strategy.

Let's not forget that it was U.S. strength and resolve, combined with the efforts of our coalition partners, that enabled us to lead the roll-back of aggression last year in the Persian Gulf. Had we not been prepared, had we not been strong and had we not been determined, a tyrant could control large areas of a region that is vital to the strategic interests of the United States.

We have taken account of the lessened threat from the former Soviet Union, and moved forward rapidly with significant reductions in our armed forces and with my nuclear force initiatives. But it's important to recognize that the international security environment remains uncertain. The new governments of Eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union have a long way to go before strong democratic institutions and free market systems are established. And there are many potential risks to U.S. interests in other regions of the world.

We also continue to be concerned about the Soviet legacy of thousands of nuclear weapons, and we hope to work with the republics to dismantle these arsenals and convert their military industries to civilian production.

So, we need to stay prepared. And we don't want our men and women in uniform to be jeopardized by the kind of unplanned cuts that could endanger American security in a still uncertain time.

QUESTION: Under the Budget Enforcement Act of 1990, defense spending will compete with domestic and international programs in the budget debates for fiscal 1994 and 1995. There have been hints that the administration may be willing to revise the budget agreement to have defense spending compete with domestic and international programs in fiscal year 1993. Are you considering this?

THE PRESIDENT: In my FY 1992-1997 budget plan, defense budget authority is $50.4 billion less than the levels that were in last year's request, adjusted for inflation, and last year's plan was already consistent with the budget summit. The adjusted defense plan reductions are as deep a decline in defense spending as our nation can prudently undertake. The world has not become so safe that we can cut our military strength as much as some critics are proposing.

The reductions we have proposed are the most we believe can be accomplished without risking our ability to lead and influence world events, at a time of great world change and uncertainty. It is essential that we be able to shape international change to build the kind of world in which our peace and interests are secure.

This is the goal behind my recent strategic nuclear initiatives, which will not only reduce world nuclear arsenals, but encourage the leadership of the former Soviet Union to shift their attention away from the business of building nuclear weapons and toward the needed economic and political reforms that will make us all safer. The deeper cuts some critics propose would endanger that effort.

QUESTION: Following Operation Desert Storm, there appears to be a growing consensus not only behind the idea that strategic and theater ballistic missile defenses are needed but even feasible. However, what types of defenses are still at issue. While there is growing support for limited ground-based strategic missile defenses, there is still much resistance to space-based defenses beyond research. Given this, are you willing to lower your sights on deploying Brilliant Pebbles within the next decade and step up efforts to develop and deploy ground-based strategic missile defenses?

THE PRESIDENT: We have refocused the Strategic Defense Initiative program on providing protection from limited ballistic missile strikes, whatever their source. We are pursuing an SDI program that is necessary to deal with any future threat to the United States, to our forces overseas and to our friends and allies.

The refocused program has received tremendous bipartisan support on the Hill. The lessons learned from Desert Storm, the current potential for instability and the possible spread of nuclear technology from the former Soviet Union, which has about 30,000 nuclear warheads, and finally, the growing problem of ballistic missile proliferation, have all combined to bring strategic defense to the forefront of the nation's defense agenda.

The new technology embodied in the SDI program makes a missile defense capability a realistic, achievable and affordable concept. We need this protection because of the potential that too many people in too many countries will have access to ballistic missiles.

The Missile Defense Act of 1991, which Congress enacted this year, is largely consistent with my vision for a refocused SDI, concentrating on Global Protection Against Limited Strikes, or what we now call the GPALS system. We know how important such protection is. We saw its value in the Gulf. When the Scuds came in, the people of Saudi Arabia and Israel and the brave forces of our coalition were grateful they had defenses to protect them.

As Commander-in-Chief, it is my responsibility to provide the American people with the best and most cost-effective system of strategic defense. To that end, we seek a GPALS system that includes Brilliant Pebbles. Such a defense would be designed to offer complete protection from limited ballistic missile attack and return the best investment to the American taxpayer.

We have agreement on the mission of strategic defense. We have much agreement on the right way of accomplishing it. And now we must move forward with this important contribution to American defense.

QUESTION: How does the reduction in the size of the naval fleet affect the U.S. ability to project power in response to worldwide crises? On the same note, once budgets are cut and military forces are reduced, could the U.S. meet a crisis like Operation Desert Storm?

THE PRESIDENT: We will still have the strongest Navy in the world when our current reductions are accomplished. The force projection and air power represented by the Navy, even at the lower levels we project for the future, are beyond the challenge.

We must keep in mind the need to remain forward deployed. The force we plan to have will be "balanced," including a ready and deployed fleet that can quickly respond to regional crisis while simultaneously maintaining the maritime superiority we have worked hard to achieve and maintain.

I'm confident that our reductions can be done safely and still leave us with a naval force adequate to meet the demands we place on it.

Could we handle another Operation Desert Storm with reduced forces? Yes, although the stress levels might be a bit higher on all the services than before.

More important is what we do to ensure we don't need to fight another Desert Storm, and that means preserving sufficient capability to deter aggression.

One of the major successes of the war was the coalition naval force that operated around the Arabian Peninsula; we will continue to rely on our Allies and friends around the world to meet our mutual defense needs.

Let me add a word of caution, however. As we reduce the size of our forces -- and here I refer to all forces, not just naval forces -- we must pay close attention to training and readiness levels. The kinds of weapons that will prevail on tomorrow's battlefield involve complicated technologies and require top people with plenty of opportunity to work with the systems in realistic training. With so much at stake, our people must be fully trained and ready and the weapons must be well maintained.

QUESTION: In light of efforts to reduce defense spending, is the U.S. still committed to offering military and technical assistance to South American countries in the fight against drugs? If so, what services and equipment will be used?

THE PRESIDENT: We remain absolutely committed to the fight against illegal drugs. National security can take many forms, and ensuring that addictive drugs do not reach our borders preserves the lives and futures of all Americans. It is a national security priority.

We view this effort as one of helping our friends help themselves. We are not fighting a drug war for them. This is a different kind of war in which efforts such as strengthening judicial systems are also a top priority. We seek only to help provide the infrastructure our partners need to fight the drug cartels and encourage them to do so. And we are trying to make sure there is a basis recognition of human rights so the fight is properly conducted.

In this Administration, we have increased sharply the efforts of our armed forces to fight illegal drugs. This effort involves aerial and maritime detection and monitoring support and assistance both to domestic law enforcement agencies and to host nation law enforcement agencies and militaries.

Our assistance, in coordination with the nation that has requested our help, also includes technical and logistical assistance, operational support and planning help. We furnish equipment through existing security assistance programs, in consultation with the U.S. Ambassador in any particular country and in consultation with the State Department. In addition, under the authority of the Foreign Assistance Act we provide materiel from existing stocks that have been declared excess.

Among the Pentagon support functions are mobile training teams to provide expertise in command, control and communications, airmobile and riverine operations skills, technical and logistics skills and civic action programs. But our military personnel do not take part in actual anti-drug operations in the field conducted by foreign countries' military and police forces.

Every branch of the service has had some role to play in the effort. The Navy and Air Force provide the bulk of the detection and monitoring of suspect aircraft or vessels, while Marine, Army and Navy special operations forces have been involved in small unit training.

I am very encouraged with the level of cooperation and support for our efforts with our friends in South America.

QUESTION: Many critics of defense say that the lack of inter-service coordination results in inefficient defense budgets. How can the administration engender more cooperation among the services?

THE PRESIDENT: I believe the Services are working very closely together, and their joint effort in Operation Desert Storm is a case in point. It was a team effort entirely. The armed forces work together all the time -- they are trained to do so, and they want to do so. General Powell, the Chairman of our Joint Chiefs, has been a leader in the effort to unify our warfighting doctrine, bringing together the various strengths that the Services have to offer.

Secretary Cheney is implementing changes under his Defense Management Report, and those efforts are resulting in significant reductions in annual operating costs at the Department of Defense. The idea is to centralize policies, procedures, and systems where appropriate under the Office of the Secretary and decentralize their execution in the Services and defense agencies.

They have consolidated maintenance depots, financial management, contract administration, supply depot operations and other functions. They've also worked to streamline the Pentagon's acquisition system to make it more efficient and to make sure approved procurement programs do not continue unless they meet strict performance and cost criteria. All the services are involved in these changes.

We expect that through fiscal 1997 these reforms will save us about $70 billion. In addition defense civilian end strength at the start of FY92 is about 90,000 below the FY87 peak.

Please be sure someone calls Voinovich with this bad news.

Also let's be sure we have legislation that will correct this. The way Voinovitch describes this, the Dayton program, without a waiver, will not work and gov't costs sky rocket.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

32 FEB 13 P4:59

I am writing in response to your inquiry about the State of Ohio's request for a Medicaid "waiver" to operate the Dayton Area Health Plan's (DAHP) coordinated care program. DAHP has served over 40,000 Medicaid recipients in Dayton, Ohio, since the program began in May 1989. Governor Voinovich has requested an emergency exemption from Federal Medicaid regulations to continue the DAHP managed care program. The program is scheduled to expire on April 30, 1992. You have asked that my Department determine why an exemption has not been granted.

Unfortunately, the Department does not have the legal authority to grant an exemption to allow DAHP to continue serving the Medicaid population. DAHP does not meet a Congressionally-mandated requirement that no more than 75 percent of the enrollment of a health maintenance organization (HMO), such as DAHP, can be persons eligible for Medicaid and/or Medicare. This is known as the "75/25" enrollment composition requirement. Current law allows the Department to grant an exemption of this requirement only for a maximum period of 3 years. I have granted this exemption for DAHP, but the 3 year exemption period expires on April 30, 1992.

The statutory 75/25 requirement is of Congressional origin. The requirement is premised on the assumption that entities that serve predominantly Medicaid or Medicare enrollees do not offer the same caliber of care as HMOs that also serve commercially insured individuals.

Over the years, as we have dealt more extensively with HMOs serving Medicaid populations, we have been increasingly impressed with the quality of services provided and the commitment of these HMOs to serving the poor. The present provisions are barriers to the broad development and expansion of Medicaid coordinated care as envisioned in your health care reform proposal.

We support legislation that would eliminate the 75/25 enrollment composition requirement for all managed care organizations, and other "anti-managed care" Medicaid statutory requirements currently on the books.

I hope that I have adequately addressed your concerns.

TO: Secretary of HHS

It is my understanding that a "waiver" has been requested for the Dayton Area Health Plan. As you know, I am committed to speeding up the waiver process where possible. Indeed, I have publicly stated that the Administration will do this. Governor Voinovich summarizes the problem in the following language:

"The Dayton Area Health Plan needs an emergency exemption from federal Medicaid regulations in order to continue their managed care program. Currently, this state-supported program is operating under a HCFA exemption, but that waiver will expire on April 30. If the waiver is not extended, the plan will cease to exist. This is a model program that reduces Medicaid costs and provides better care to its patients. A permanent exemption serves the interests of HCFA, the State, and the Dayton area."

The Governor tells me that this program has saved many millions of dollars already. Would you please determine why a waiver has not been granted as requested and let me know.

The whole pitch was how William had been the victim of racist attacks by us. I am not quite sure why they had him on, though Bode's long standing credentials could have something to do with this.

Anyway the part of the interview I saw showed Bode talking to Horton in jail and it all related as to how William was upset because of racist attacks on him.

I was talking to Roger and suggested maybe a conservative interviewer talk to Horton- perhaps bringing out the killings, the rapes, the brutality. We'd have to get an interviewer who was not suspect or unacceptable to William.

Please discuss with Marlin, but we better get prepared for some more Horton attacks. Wow, what a year!!!!

MEMORANDUM FOR SAM SKINNER

FROM:

EDE HOLIDAY

SUBJECT:

Background on the Multilateral Investment Fund

The Multilateral Investment Fund (MIF) is designed to help Latin American and Caribbean countries undertake investment reforms to stimulate private investment. It is a key element of the President's Enterprise for the Americas Initiative (EAI) which he announced in June 1990. The MIF complements and strengthens the debt reduction pillar of the EAI. The Latin American countries have responded enthusiastically to the Initiative.

The MIF will benefit U.S. business. As investment reform enables Latin American economies to grow, demand for U.S. exports will increase, creating more U.S. jobs. Latin America is the fastest growing regional market for U.S. exports. It accounts for one of every seven dollars of U.S. exports. Exports to the region have doubled since 1986 to $62 billion. Every $1 billion increase in U.S. exports generates 20,000 export related jobs for Americans.

Most countries in Latin America recognize that more debt is not the answer to growth. Governments are increasingly dedicating themselves to market-oriented reforms. They realize that trade and investment are vital to private sector growth. The MIF will provide resources to help a country lessen constraints on investment. For example:

- Help to identify and implement policy changes that will transform the climate for investment;
- Provide advice on needed investment sector legislative and regulatory reforms;
- Help privatize state-owned companies;
- Help train and re-train workers to support an upgrading of the work force; and
- Provide financing and technical support to small businesses.

The MIF will be administered by the Inter-American Development Bank over a five year period and will be capitalized at $1.5 billion. The U.S. has said it will contribute $500 million. Neither the authorizing nor appropriating legislation has been approved by the Congress. The signing of the MIF Agreement by Secretary Brady completes the multilateral negotiations. Japan will also contribute $500 million. Spain, Germany, Italy, Canada, Portugal and France will also contribute. In addition, 13 Latin American countries will also participate. Currently, total pledges amount to approximately $1.3 billion toward the target capital of $1.5 billion.

SUBJECT: Ozone Depletion -- Accelerated Phase-Out

Following our meeting today, I spoke with Jim Johnson, Vice President and Washington representative of General Motors, and Helen Petrauskas, Vice President of Environmental Safety and Engineering at Ford, both of whom indicated their companies could meet the December 31, 1995 phase-out date. Johnson stated the date "can be accommodated"... "From all the information I have, our programs will fit within that time frame." Helen stated that Ford was "comfortable" with the date in the CFC Alliance proposal.

I then asked Kevin Fay, the Executive Director of the CFC Alliance, who else, other than the automotive industry, might be concerned. He indicated that a limited number of producers of methyl chloroform might be concerned. However, he stated that Dow, a major producer, was on board. (I independently confirmed that with a phone conversation with Frank Popoff, the Chairman of Dow, on Saturday, February 8). Additional research by the Counsel's office revealed that the Vulcan Company, which has offices in Illinois, was the most likely to be concerned but their concerns should be allayed by the exemption clause.

I then asked him as to the status of the industry petition and he stated he could hold it ~~until close of business on Tuesday but no longer.~~

Eileen Claussen, speaking on behalf of Hank Habicht at EPA, stated that with the exemption they "don't think we'll get any opposition." She did add that the mention of methyl bromide might cause concern among Florida citrus growers but felt that those concerns could be allayed since methyl bromide was mentioned only as a chemical undergoing review.

In sum, it appears that the '89 fee has prompted the manufacturing segment of industry to move faster than required. The user segment obviously feels a strong need for exemptions but is comfortable if exemptions are part of the package. When I pushed Kevin Fay on the wording of the exemption, his response was that "we have plenty of time to work that out. They don't come into play until phase-out."

Thus, I think the proposed announcement will stimulate very little by way of industry opposition and will likely elicit the predictable "not far enough or fast enough" response from the environmental community, although hopefully there might be some grudging recognition of the President's continuing leadership role.

February 11, 1992

Statement by the Press Secretary

President Bush today announced that the United States will unilaterally accelerate the phaseout of substances that deplete the Earth's ozone layer and called on other nations to agree to an accelerated phaseout schedule. Recent scientific findings indicate that emissions of these substances -- major CFCs, halons, methyl chloroform, and carbon tetrachloride -- are depleting the stratospheric ozone layer more quickly than previously had been believed. The President announced that, with limited exceptions for essential uses and for servicing certain existing equipment, all production of these substances in the United States will be eliminated by December 31, 1995. To accelerate progress in the near term, the President called upon U.S. producers to reduce production of these substances to 50 percent of 1986 levels by the end of this year.

Under the terms of the Clean Air Act of 1990, which President Bush signed into law in November of 1990, the Administration has authority to accelerate the phaseout of these substances without new legislation. The President also announced that the U.S. will re-examine the phaseout schedule of HCFCs, and will consider recent evidence suggesting the possible need to phaseout methyl bromide.

The President noted that due in large part to the use of innovative, market-based mechanisms such as production fees and tradable allowances, the U.S. has already reduced CFC production 42 percent below 1986 levels, a reduction beyond that required by either the Clean Air Act or the amended Montreal Protocol. The President pointed out that the U.S. has been a leader in reducing CFCs -- agreeing to a full phaseout of these gases in February 1989, enacting a fee on their production in November of 1989, legislating the full phaseout in November of 1990, and making the first contribution to a multilateral fund established to assist developing countries in phasing out CFCs.

The President called upon those nations which have not yet signed and ratified the Montreal Protocol to do so, and urged other nations to join the U.S. in accelerating the phaseout of CFCs and other ozone-depleting gases even faster than required by the Protocol.

THE WHITE HOUSE
OFFICE OF THE PRESS SECRETARY

For Immediate Release

February 11, 1992

FACT SHEET

Accelerated Phase-Out of Ozone-Depleting Substances

President Bush today announced that the United States will unilaterally accelerate the phaseout of substances that deplete the Earth's ozone layer and called on other nations to agree to an accelerated phaseout schedule. The new U.S. timetable continues a record of U.S. leadership on ozone layer protection by ending most production of these substances five years ahead of current international deadlines.

Scientific Basis for Action

Man-made emissions of chemicals called halocarbons (including chlorofluorocarbons, halons, carbon tetrachloride, and methyl chloroform) are known to be depleting stratospheric ozone over Antarctica and appear to be the cause of ozone depletion observed year-round at middle and high latitudes in both hemispheres.

Stratospheric ozone depletion leads to an increase in the amount of harmful ultraviolet radiation reaching the Earth's surface, potentially resulting in increased incidence of skin cancer, cataracts, suppression of the human immune response system, and environmental damage.

The recent findings of the U.N. Environment Programme International Ozone Assessment (October 1991) and the NASA/NOAA Arctic Ozone Experiment (February 1992) show faster and more widespread ozone depletion than was previously known and provide insight into the new processes that could be contributing to these larger losses.

The U.S. Will Accelerate its Phaseout Timetable

The President today announced the following actions:

- o The President announced that the U.S. will phase out production of most halocarbons by December 31, 1995--more than five years ahead of the deadline set by the London Amendments to the Montreal Protocol on Substances that Deplete the Ozone Layer.
- o To accelerate progress in the near-term, the President has asked U.S. producers to cut 1992 output to one-half of 1986 levels. Under existing law, producers are required to be at 80 percent of 1986 levels for 1992.

- o The President announced that the U.S. will re-examine the phaseout schedule of HCFCs and will consider recent evidence suggesting the possible need to phase out methyl bromide.
- o Since fewer than 20 nations have ratified the London amendments to the Montreal Protocol, the President called on other nations to match the US commitment by ratifying the amended Protocol and accelerating their phaseout schedules.
- o Under Title VI of the Clean Air Act, exemptions to the phaseout may be made for essential uses such as remote-use fire extinguishers and metered dose inhalers for asthmatics. The new policy allows for limited quantities to be available for such uses and for servicing the existing equipment base.
- o The President directed EPA to accelerate its review of halocarbon substitutes that do less damage to the ozone layer.

A Record of U.S. Leadership

Policy Actions

Due in large part to the use of innovative, market-based mechanisms such as fees and tradable allowances, U.S. production of CFCs is currently 42 percent below the levels allowed by the Montreal Protocol, illustrating continued U.S. leadership to protect the ozone layer. Other U.S. actions to protect the ozone layer have included the following:

- o In 1978, the United States unilaterally and voluntarily banned use of CFCs as propellants of aerosol products. Many countries continue to use CFCs as propellants.
- o In 1985, the U.S. led efforts to sign the Vienna Convention for Protection of the Ozone Layer, the "parent" agreement of the Montreal Protocol.
- o As part of the FY 1990 Budget Reconciliation Act, the U.S. enacted a tax on CFC production, a step not yet taken by any other country. The tax is calibrated to the ozone-depleting potential of each substance, providing an incentive for industry to phase out the most harmful substances.
- o In February 1989, President Bush was among the first world leaders to endorse a complete phaseout of halocarbons by the year 2000.
- o By enacting the Clean Air Act Amendments of 1990, the United States was the first nation to actually legislate the complete phase-out of CFCs.

- o The United States was the first nation to provide payments to the multilateral fund to help developing countries meet their obligations under the Montreal Protocol.
- o The U.S. was the first nation in the world to bring enforcement actions against violators of CFC rules.

Scientific Leadership

For years, U.S. scientists have provided much of the knowledge base for dealing with this issue. In the mid-1970s, researchers at the University of Michigan and the University of California-Irvine first identified the links between CFCs and ozone depletion, and subsequent research has demonstrated cause and effect.

Periodic scientific and technical assessments are conducted under the auspices of the U.N. Environment Programme (UNEP). Over 100 U.S. researchers contributed to the most recent UNEP assessment, including experts from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, Environmental Protection Agency, Department of Energy, and other agencies, as well as universities and private industry.

Work proceeding under the U.S. Global Change Research Program is providing additional information. Using the Total Ozone Mapping System (TOMS) and the Upper Atmosphere Research Satellite (UARS), scientists have measured accurately the extent and regional distribution of ozone depletion. Ground-based observation and modelling studies will provide insight into future ozone losses.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM:

CLAYTON YEUTTER

This will be my final report to you as RNC Chairman. The year has gone fast, and we've laid such good groundwork for November I hate to leave. But I also realize that domestic policymaking is the much higher priority now. The outcome of this Presidential election will be determined by what we do or do not do in the White House over the next eight months, irrespective of what happens at the RNC or the campaign organization. The latter two entities can be helpful and supplementary, but the outcome will be determined by how well we govern. You've placed a lot of confidence in Sam Skinner and me and we'll both do our best to deliver.

Thanks to you and Barbara for meeting with the RNC members, hosting the major donors at the White House, and then joining in on the Inaugural Gala. That took a lot of your time, but was deeply appreciated. Those folks will all go home with more motivation than they've had. I could sense the rising spirit as these events unfolded.

As you could see, Rich Bond was greeted warmly by the RNC, with most of them already knowing him. He has hit the ground running, and he'll do well the rest of the way.

Now for some wrap-up comments here. Without meaning to be self-serving, the state of the RNC is much better than it was a year ago. There was great instability here when I came, lots of personnel turnover, and very low morale. There was also a very cavalier attitude about spending money--big entourage on trips, etc. That has now changed. We've been operating on a businesslike basis with an austere budget, and hopefully that attitude is pervasive and permanent.

Our financial base was also very shaky a year ago. The direct mail donor base had shrunk, little "prospecting" for new donors had been done in several years, and the major donor programs were much too oriented to just a few industries, some of which (real estate, e.g.) were in financial straits. Jeanie Austin and I have both devoted a lot of personal time to this, and the situation is now dramatically improved. We finished 1991 about $800,000 in the black, added well over 100,000 new names to our donor list, and broadened our appeal in the Eagles and Team 100 program in a major way. As one example, we organized "issue groups" among the major donors so that they can have policy input to the Administration, and this has been a huge success. Some of these groups have been holding their own meetings around the country at their own expense, and doing a fine job. All this has begun to pay off, as evidenced by the $17 million in pledges we had for the Inaugural Gala, the most ever for any political fundraiser.

As you know, we've had redistricting as our highest priority of all, and the Democrats still don't know what hit them there. The plan in California is now final, and that went our way, as have almost all the other battles. We truly have a good chance to alter the political landscape of this country over the next decade. If all goes well in the coming weeks as redistricting moves to a close, it will have been the unsung political story of 1991-early 1992 and a huge win for us.

Of particular importance to you is the shift of our political field force to the campaign organization. That was done smoothly, and they are a first class group--now reporting to Mary Matalin essentially as they were here at the RNC. We've filled in behind them, and with Rich and Norm Cummings in place that whole operation should work well.

In summary, I believe we are well postured for the 1992 campaign, at all levels where the RNC participates. I do not believe the DNC is half as well prepared. They may make more noise, but we've done far more work!

The one concern I have is with recruiting quality candidates. Even if we level the playing field through redistricting, we've still got to run strong people or they'll lose. That may be our biggest challenge as a party over the next several months. The other elements of a victory package are either in place, or soon to be there.

Finally, I see anecdotal evidence of an improvement in the economy. We must nudge it along in the coming months, and your State of the Union proposals fit that need. We should also work on policies that will be good in the long run, as your message also suggested. I'm convinced the turnaround has begun, with one of our tasks now being to keep the Congress from mucking it up!
