PRESIDENTIAL HOPEFULS AWAIT N.H. VERDICT

MANCHESTER, N.H. -- The New Hampshire primary campaign, which has produced an unlikely Democratic front-runner, a dazzle of shifting expectations and an unexpectedly strong challenge to President Bush, closed Monday with political leaders uncertain whether voters in this recession-bound state will settle much in either party's contest....

For Republicans, the question was not whether President Bush, facing the most serious primary challenge to an incumbent in 12 years, would defeat Patrick Buchanan, but by how much. Partisans of both Bush and Buchanan were themselves uncertain about what benchmark to use as a measure of Buchanan's success....

Buchanan boasted that his insurgent campaign now had the President "running scared." Said Buchanan: "We can wake up this country and we can shake up the world."

The White House is now as worried about journalists' interpretations of the President's showing as it is about what the voters here will actually do. Samuel Skinner urged reporters to focus on Bush's expected victory, and not the margin.

(Dan Balz & E.J. Dionne, Washington Post, A1)

STAGE SET IN N.H. FOR GOP DRAMA

MANCHESTER, N.H. -- A pleased, confident and slightly surprised Patrick Buchanan wound up his 10-week duel with President Bush Monday in a cavalcade of buses, vans and cars that wound through much of New Hampshire.... The President, meanwhile, joined in his staff's effort to lower expectations of a major New Hampshire primary victory over his conservative challenger....

Bush campaign officials also turned their attention to the March 3-10 primaries when 23 states -- 10 in the South -- will choose convention delegates.... Campaign and Administration officials, in a signal that they remain worried about Buchanan's protest campaign, are moving quickly to form strong organizations in states Buchanan plans to run in, such as Maryland, Georgia, Louisiana and Mississippi.

(Ralph Hallow & Paul Bedard, Washington Times, A1)

BUCHANAN DIGS AT BUSH ONE LAST TIME BEFORE PRIMARY

MANCHESTER, N.H. -- Patrick Buchanan on Monday retraced the worn treads of the campaign trail one last time, calling on party voters to make history in Tuesday's primary by supporting his drive against New Hampshire....

Bush, meanwhile, spent the last day before the primary campaigning from Washington by telephone and satellite hook-up, urging the state's Republicans through radio and television to vote for him instead of "trying to send some message" over current conditions.... Buchanan appeared immediately after Bush on WBZ-TV Monday night, chiding him for dropping a tax cut that was "pathetic" to begin with.

(Chris Black & Michael Kranish, Boston Globe)

EDITOR'S NOTE: "Twin Political Dramas Unfold Today At Polls," by Adam Nagourney, appears in USA Today, page 1A.

"With Nary A Vote Counted, The Scenario In New Hampshire Is Already A Surprise," by James Perry, appears in The Wall Street Journal, page A22.

"New Hampshire Brings Tough Lessons Home," by R.W. Apple, appears in The New York Times, page A17.

RECESSION'S WOES TO REMAIN PRIMARY FOCUS
Like New Hampshire, Many Other Key States
Have Experienced Economic Hard Times

When the presidential candidates pack up their offices in recession-wracked New Hampshire, they won't leave behind the economic blues.

From Florida to Illinois to California, many of the critical stops on the campaign trail ahead are reeling with their own problems. And the American tendency to blame the President for a weak economy virtually ensures that the topic will continue to dominate the campaign debate....

"The moral is that, as the campaign leaves New Hampshire and moves on, the overall gloom of the country will overwhelm the variations of economic performance in the various states," said Thomas Mann, director of government studies at the Brookings Institution. "It doesn't mean (Bush) is going to lose any primaries, but...he's operating in an unfavorable climate..."

"Concerns about the economy become the inescapable context in which the candidates have to operate," said Democratic pollster, Geoffrey Garin. "It is a special burden on George Bush. New Hampshire is a special case, but people feel the economy is in trouble, border to border, coast to coast."

(Barbara Vobejda, Washington Post, A4)

IN SOUTH, MISGIVINGS AMID LOYALTY TO BUSH

COLUMBIA, S.C. -- Voters likely to cast ballots in next month's critically important South Carolina Republican primary repeatedly voice concerns that President Bush has not lived up to the standards of their conservatism. But their loyalty to the man who followed Ronald Reagan in the White House suggests the Bush's challengers face an uphill battle here....

Ralph Scurry, a construction project supervisor in Columbia, voted for Bush in 1988. "But I am very disappointed that he is wishy-washy on a lot of things like taxation. I think he has compromised with getting my vote. He's back-pedaled against what I thought he believed in."

Despite these concerns, Scurry said, "I'd vote for Bush. It's like the worst of two evils. Pat Buchanan is a staunch conservative. I believe in a lot of his philosophy, but he cannot get elected. And I'd hate to see a weak Bush go up against the Democratic Party."

(Thomas Edsall, Washington Post, A4)

VOTING-AGE POPULATION AT 189 MILLION PEOPLE

The Census Bureau says the U.S. voting-age population will total 189 million by Election Day, an increase of 3.4 percent or 6.3 million potential voters over the 1988 presidential election....

But being old enough to vote doesn't guarantee the right will be exercised. In a separate report issued earlier, the Census Bureau reported that in the 1990 congressional elections, just 45 percent of the persons 18 years old and over said they voted, down 1 percent from four years earlier. AFL-CIO WARNS AGAINST FISCAL 'BIDDING WAR'Labor Says Tax Cuts Are Not A Cure-All, Offers Its Own Plan

BAL HARBOUR, Fla. -- Organized labor Monday warned congressional Democrats against becoming involved in a "bidding war" with President Bush over tax cuts for the middle class.

In a policy statement adopted by the AFL-CIO Executive Council, the labor leadership said Congress should recognize that "a few extra dollars in a weekly paycheck will not send middle-class America on a huge shopping spree that will bring America out of a recession."

The statement was adopted by the federation's 35-member policy group just before it met with top Democratic leaders from the House and Senate who had flown here for what has become an annual President's Day visit....

In its economic policy statement, the AFL-CIO leadership called on Congress to "immediately adopt a fiscal stimulus program in the neighborhood of 1 percent of gross national product, or about $60 billion to be spend on desperately needed investment in America's future." (Frank Swoboda, Washington Post, E1)

LABOR LEADER: BUSH ECONOMIC PLAN IS 'SUSHI'

BAL HARBOUR, Fla. -- AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland denounced President Bush's economic recovery plan as inadequate and said the economy "needs beef." "He's offering us sushi, freeze-dried sushi at that," Kirkland said Monday. Kirkland noted that when Bush accepted the Republican presidential nomination four years ago, he pledged to create 30 million new jobs but has only created 6,000. "We read his lips," Kirkland said. "At this point, he owes us 29,994,000 jobs." (Jane Sutton, UPI)

DEMOCRATS' TAX PLAN UNDER ATTACK

The Bush Administration attacked the House Democrats' tax bill Monday as a bad deal for the middle class that would bring them "25 cents a day for two years" in exchange for cuts in Medicare, farm subsidies and veterans' benefits and, eventually, tax increases.

In an interview, Richard Darman amplified the attacks President Bush has made in recent days on the Democratic measure.... Darman contended there would inevitably be pressure to extend a tax cut beyond two years, even though it would have little value to recipients. Each member of a family of four would be getting only about 25 cents a day, he said.

NEW PLANS FOR S&Ls AND BANKS

Federal regulators are preparing a new strategy of investing in some failing banks and S&Ls rather than taking them over and closing or selling them.

The regulators, whose goal is to find a less expensive way to deal the ailing institutions, are being prodded by a law passed by Congress last year that requires the authorities to step in earlier when lending institutions are troubled. But the plan carries high financial and political risks because it would also bail out the owners of troubled institutions.

"The bottom line is we want to save taxpayers money in a reasonable way and perpetuate rather than liquidate institutions," said John Robinson, deputy secretary of the Treasury. "This is being offered as an alternative to liquidation."

A GREEN LIGHT FOR GREENSPAN

Despite The Grumbling, Fed Chief Is Close To A Reappointment

For nearly three years, President Bush and his top economic team have complained that the Fed was squeezing the U.S. economy by keeping interest rates too high.

The President then turned around last fall and nominated the man in charge, Fed Chairman Greenspan, to a second four-year term.... Most and maybe all of Greenspan's harshest policy critics on the Senate Banking Committee will soon recommend to the Senate that he be confirmed to a new term, Senate staffers say.

AID SET FOR NUCLEAR SCIENTISTS

MOSCOW -- The U.S., Russia and Germany Monday announced plans to establish a science and technology institute to employ nuclear scientists from the former Soviet Union in an attempt to keep them from selling their services to other nations.

The U.S. and Russia also decided to move ahead to build storage facilities for radioactive uranium and plutonium from dismantled nuclear weapons. And President Yeltsin and Secretary Baker announced that the U.S. would provide rail cars and special containers to help Russia safely move and store nuclear warheads.

Yeltsin said he expected to hold a formal summit meeting in Washington with President Bush in July, somewhat later than had been expected, and added that he hoped both sides could reach agreement on new cuts in strategic nuclear arms by then. U.S. officials said no date had yet been set.

YELTSIN, BAKER CITE PROGRESS IN CUTTING NUCLEAR ARSENALS

MOSCOW -- President Yeltsin and Secretary Baker have reported progress in talks on new proposals for more radical cuts in nuclear weapons, but they failed to reach agreement. Yeltsin said Monday that while the two sides were "very close to each other" in talks on arms control, what he called "minor differences" remain to be worked out.

SENATORS SAY RUSSIA HAS INFORMATION ON GIs

MOSCOW -- Sens. John Kerry and Robert Smith said Monday that the Russian government has acknowledged that American deserters and possibly prisoners of war were brought to the Soviet Union after the Vietnam War, but there is no evidence any are still here. Kerry and Smith also said Russian officials agreed to open archives and share information on the fate of some of the 2,273 Americans missing in action in Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia.

PALESTINIANS DELAY DEPARTURE TO PEACE TALKS TO PROTEST ARRESTS

JERUSALEM -- Accusing Israel of jeopardizing the peace process by arresting two of their delegates, Palestinian negotiators said Monday that they were delaying their departure for Washington peace talks. The Palestinians demanded that the U.S. pressure Israel to release the delegates and also stop what they described as harassment of their negotiators.

The delegation's adviser, Faisal Hussein, said it would not go as scheduled to Amman on Wednesday on the first leg of their journey to the U.S.-sponsored talks.... "It has become very clear that the whole peace process is being placed in jeopardy by these Israeli actions," said Palestinian spokeswoman Hanan Ashrawi. "The whole peace process cannot remain subject to unilateral actions by Israel."

Israeli General Warns Against Retaliation

BEIRUT -- Angry Shiite Muslims took to the streets of Beirut Monday, vowing to avenge Israel's killing of the leader of the pro-Iranian group Hezbollah. But Israel warned that any retaliatory raids would carry "a very high price."...

Lebanon said it still plans to attend the Middle east peace talks scheduled for Feb. 24 in Washington. The Palestinians also indicated they will attend, despite two other Israeli attacks Sunday on refugee camps and PLO bases in Lebanon.

KEY EXECUTIVES VIEW BUSH TRIP TO JAPAN AS A SUCCESS

While President Bush's trip to Japan last month has been widely seen as a political disaster, key corporate executives who deal with Japan are viewing it as a success that could produce expanded business and create the jobs for American workers that the President said he was aiming for.

Some business executives, including several who went to Japan with the President, said in recent interviews they are seeing signs the trip could help their efforts to sell not only in Japan but also in the rest of Asia....

"The trip was a commercial success," said William Wheeler, a corporate vice president of Chicago-based FMC Corp. "We believe that it created greater opportunities. The Japanese are clearly concerned about the political situation...(and) they are going to do something about it. It's going to be a bit easier to sell. The door is open a bit. Their uneasiness (about anti-Japanese feelings in the U.S.) is likely to translate into some action, as little as they can get away with."...

"Without the political effort from the President in concluding the agreement, we stood a very small chance of succeeding. It's still an open question whether we will, but now we have a chance," said Peter Young, director of international business for Guardian Industries Corp.

NEW JAPAN ENVOY SEES CRISIS IN U.S.

TOKYO -- Japan's newly appointed ambassador to the U.S. described the relationship between the two countries Monday as teetering at "a rather crucial period of mutual adjustment," as the U.S. only slowly gets used to the idea of sharing power with an economically resurgent Japan. The comments by Amb. Takakazu Kuriyama underscored the growing view here that relations are nearing a crisis because of growing trade tensions and the difficulty the U.S. has in accepting its diminished influence in the post-Cold War era.

JAPAN'S U.S. ENVOY WILL TRY AMERICAN

Japan's new ambassador to the U.S. says he'll do his part to reduce trade tensions. "There are a number of American cars, I'm told, which are just as good as Hondas or Toyotas," Takakazu Kuriyama told reporters Monday in Japan. "So when I go to Washington, I'll try an American car."... Kuriyama said he doesn't believe U.S. industry is uncompetitive. But he didn't hesitate to point out what he seeks as a key U.S. shortcoming -- the propensity to spend too much and save too little. (USA Today, 1B)

AQUINO ASKS BUSH TO LET BITTERNESS PASS ON BASES

MANILA -- President Aquino has asked President Bush to put aside bitterness between their countries to help turn Subic Bay Naval Station into a commercial port providing access to U.S. warships.

In a letter to Bush released by the presidential palace Monday, Aquino said the senate's decision in September to reject a new base treaty with the U.S. should not damage the relationship between the two allies....

An American official suggested U.S. forces might take drydocks with them when they leave. "Our position is that if they are needed elsewhere, we will have to take them and, right now, it looks like there is need for them elsewhere," said the official.

NUCLEAR PULLOUT

The U.S. has begun withdrawing short-range nuclear weapons from Europe, said Army Gen. John Galvin, top NATO commander in Europe. The withdrawal of an estimated 2,000 short-range missiles and nuclear artillery shells, based mostly in Germany, began several weeks ago and will take up to three years, Reuter reported.

FIGHT TO KEEP SEAWOLF SUB EXPECTED

President Bush's attempt to cancel the government's order for two Seawolf submarines is gaining momentum on Capitol Hill. But the $2 billion Seawolf isn't likely to go down without a fight. Rep. Murtha said he's leaning toward approving Bush's proposal because of the rapid change in the world military situation....

"The threat is diminished so substantially when it comes to this type of weapons system that you've got to consider not worrying about an industrial base," Murtha said. With about 85 attack submarines already in the water, Murtha said the U.S. would have ample time to tool up its submarine industry if an emergency arose.

WAR IN 1990S? DOUBT ON HILL

By spelling out potential foreign conflicts that might draw U.S. forces into combat, the Bush Administration is headed for confrontation with a skeptical Congress over national security assumptions at the end of the Cold War, analysts and congressional aides said Monday....

With the disclosure by The New York Times on Monday of internal Pentagon documents detailing the seven Pentagon "scenarios" for future foreign conflicts, Congress now has a working understanding of the underlying assumptions of Pentagon spending plans until the end of the decade....

Several military experts who work on Capitol Hill said Monday that the major issue for Congress was whether to accept the Pentagon's view that the military ought to be large enough to fight two major regional wars simultaneously, in the Persian Gulf and Korea.

U.N. AGENCY LAUNCHES DRIVE TO HALT NUCLEAR PROLIFERATION

The director of the U.N. agency that polices nuclear proliferation has launched a three-year drive for universal adherence to treaties blocking additional countries from obtaining nuclear weapons.

GLOBAL WARMING PACT TALKS TO RESUME
'No Appreciable Change' Seen In
U.S. Stance Against Binding Goals

As diplomats resume negotiations Tuesday on an international treaty to curb global warming, the U.S. remains the largest emitter of heat-absorbing gases as well as the strongest opponent of specific goals for limiting them in a binding agreement.

Though there has been an ongoing review of U.S. policy, there will be "no appreciable change" in the U.S. position at the 10-day session at U.N. headquarters, Michael Deland, chairman of the White House Council on Environmental Quality, said in an interview last week....

Administration officials have heard new proposals by environmental officials that focused for the first time on carbon dioxide controls. The proposals received a better reception than expected, sources said, and may eventually spawn some shift in policy.

NEGOTIATORS EXPRESS CONFIDENCE OVER CLINCHING TRADE AGREEMENT

DALLAS -- U.S. trade negotiator Julius Katz denied speculation the U.S. does not want the North American Free-Trade Area treaty this year with Canada and Mexico for political reasons. "There has been no decision, as is sometimes said, for not proceeding with the agreement this year," said Katz....

There is growing concern in the U.S. that the pact will only exacerbate the current economic climate by causing more losses of jobs. Because of that, some published reports have suggested the Bush Administration does not want a treaty in this election year, which the Democrats could exploit....

"Our instructions are to produce an agreement as quickly as possible. And we are working to produce as good an agreement as we can," Katz said. (Harihar Krishnan, UPI)

U.S.-CANADA RIFTS GROW OVER TRADE

TORONTO -- Despite a 3-year-old free-trade agreement, the U.S. and Canada are headed into a new phase of confrontation, accusing each other of protectionist ways. The battlefield is beer, lumber and automobiles.

Even as the neighbors negotiate with Mexico about expanding the agreement to include all of North America, the tensions are growing, heightened by political sensitivity about jobs lost through imports. The lingering economic slumps and approaching elections in both Canada and the U.S. add more pressure.

Prime Minister Mulroney has complained, "We're getting sideswiped by American Japan-bashing." He has also said Washington is playing "low-level politics."

RETURN OF HAITIANS COST $24M

Reports Monday the government has spent $24 million to pick up house and return fleeing Haitians raised the ire of human interest groups. NETWORK NEWS

(Monday evening, Feb. 17)

NEW HAMPSHIRE

ABC's Peter Jennings: We begin tonight with presidential politics. Tomorrow when the New Hampshire primary finally gets here, we'll hear how ordinary voters instead of pundits and poll takers rate the presidential aspirants. The pundits will certainly be looking to see how President Bush does against a very strong challenge from the right. And on the Democratic side we'll all be looking to see if New Hampshire voters are as concerned as the press has been with Gov. Clinton's past. We'll begin with the Democrats. In what may be the supreme act of confidence the man who is seen as the clear front-runner in New Hampshire, Paul Tsongas, says he's already compiling a list of possible vice presidential running mates.

ABC's Jim Wooten reports that contributions to Tsongas' campaign are pouring in as never before.

(Tsongas: "Money is the mother's milk of politics, and we've been discovered by a lot of mothers.")

And with cash in his pocket, Tsongas was looking beyond tomorrow to Maryland and Maine, Colorado and South Dakota. Question for Clinton. Can you survive if you don't win New Hampshire?

(Clinton: "Goodness! I'm going to be alive regardless. I've got a campaign base in the South, I've got a campaign base in the West. Those are my natural bases.")

As for others it was a day for grand dreams and bravado.

(Harkin: "When we come out of here tomorrow night, we are going to Maine and South Dakota and then we're going to have it in the bag.")

Question for Kerrey. If you finish fifth....

(Kerrey: "Fifth? I'm not gonna take fifth. Next question.")

Well, if the polls are accurate, the question after tomorrow for Kerrey and Harkin and Gov. Brown is how to stay within shouting distance of the rest of the campaign. The question for Clinton is whether a second-place finish here will be seen as a disaster or merely a temporary setback. And for Sen. Tsongas who has come from nowhere to somewhere, the next question is can it last?

(Tsongas: "I am such an unlikely candidate.")

Jennings: Patrick Buchanan was all over New Hampshire today predicting that tomorrow's results would produce what he called "a stunner." President Bush usually avoids using Mr. Buchanan's name, calling him instead "the other guy."

ABC's Brit Hume: The White House was quiet today in honor of the holiday, but the President continued to campaign by long distance in radio interviews with New Hampshire stations. He wouldn't say just how well he'll do tomorrow.

Hume continues:

(President Bush: "I read the polls like anybody else does, and of course I can't rely on those numbers. But generally speaking I think we're getting our message out, and I'm encouraged.")

[TV coverage of Barbara Bush reading to a group of children]

The First Lady, meanwhile, who those polls suggest is more popular in New Hampshire than her husband these days, was in the state making sure no one got the idea the Bushes are taking anything for granted.

(Barbara Bush: "George Bush wants me to thank you all and to remind you to get out and please vote for him. And remember: You're voting for president. You're not voting to send a message.")

The insurgent Buchanan campaign, meanwhile, continued to roll merrily along, today by bus through 14 New Hampshire towns. The candidate is the picture of a man having the time of his life, getting along better with even the media than he or anyone else might have imagined.

[TV coverage of Buchanan shouldering a video camera on the bus]

(Buchanan: "Okay, somebody's going to have to hold me up.")

Unless all the polls are wrong, Buchanan seems certain to get enough votes here tomorrow to at least go on to other states, though his prospects outside conservative New Hampshire are uncertain. You wouldn't know that to listen to him, though.

(Buchanan: "And I think we're going to give the White House and the Congress of the United States a wake-up call tomorrow.")

In fact, the White House got that call some time ago, and that's why the President, who spent the weekend in New Hampshire, was doing radio there this morning and made the evening news in New Hampshire tonight by satellite.

(President Bush: "I believe that we've got the best plan for a recovery in this country. One of the reasons I was here today is talk to the Republican leaders. I'm meeting with them all tomorrow trying to make a real push to get our incentive plans through the Congress. And so I would just encourage a turnout.")

The White House is worried that a low turnout would help Buchanan, whose exuberant supporters are considered certain to vote. But getting people out to help an incumbent president who's expected to win anyway just to enlarge his margin of victory is another matter. (ABC-Lead)

CBS's Dan Rather: The presidential race this President's Day was no holiday for candidates in New Hampshire. On the eve of the primary tomorrow, Pat Buchanan was pressing his we-can't-afford-four-more-years-of-Bush campaign against the President.

CBS's Eric Engberg: Pat Buchanan, whose long-shot insurgency can't survive without a strong showing in New Hampshire, campaigned by caravan across the state today, pounding the President at every stop.

(Buchanan: "We're offering you something new and different and bold and dramatic. Mr. Bush's State of the Union was anemic and pathetic and everybody knows it.")

In the final days here he has encountered good crowds and outspent the President three-to-one in advertising.

[TV coverage of the President speaking in a gymnasium]

Engberg continues:

Mr. Bush fought back in a series of weekend appearances in the state in which he dismissed Buchanan as just another TV personality. Back in Washington today he reached out to the Granite State in six different interviews with radio and TV outlets.

(President Bush: "So I would just encourage a turnout and say don't worry about trying to send some message. Let's put the person in that has a proven leadership worldwide and can move this country forward.")

At times the incumbent seemed to be preparing the ground for an embarrassment, portraying this state as somehow untypical of the nation because of its economic hard times.

(President Bush as monitored through a radio station control booth: "New Hampshire is rather special because of the hurt there and the disproportionate agony in that state.")

[TV coverage of Buchanan carrying a little girl on his shoulders] It's the consensus view of political analysts that Buchanan has about a third the vote and could do better -- enough to expose flaws in a Bush campaign that was slow to start and slow to adjust, and also enough to ensure that Buchanan will be around nipping at the presidential heels for many weeks to come.

Rather talks with CBS's Richard Threlkeld:

Rather: Even if you believe all those newspaper columnists who say Tsongas has a lot, who there believes Tsongas can win outside New England?

Threlkeld: Well that's the question. Tsongas himself does. He said at a campaign rally today, "It's true, I am a regional candidate -- North, South, East and West." Well, is he really? He's off for Maryland on Wednesday to try to prove that two weeks from tomorrow in the Maryland primary.... The Clinton people expect to finish second. So Clinton has now got to go down two weeks from tomorrow and start working in Georgia. Georgia primary, a victory there is do or die for Bill Clinton.

Rather: ...What about somebody else jumping in?

Threlkeld: It's safe to say from our research that for at least the next several weeks no other Democrat is going to jump into this presidential race. The Cuomo write-in effort, it seems to me, has got to break into the double digits to be respectable. That may be a problem. There's a lot of resentment up here to court Mario Cuomo for not putting his name on the ballot and getting into the race. New Hampshire Democrats feel deserted. (CBS-2)

NBC's Tom Brokaw: The 1992 presidential campaign is starting with a bang, not a whimper as we head into the final hours of the first primary with an unconventional and unlikely Democrat out front and a sitting Republican president working to the final hour to head off embarrassment.

NBC's Andrea Mitchell reports from New Hampshire:

(Tsongas: "This is so bizarre. This is so bizarre. I am such an unlikely candidate.")

During the last few weeks more money has been coming in for Tsongas, as much as $40,000 a day. Turnout could be affected by the weather. It is expected to snow here tomorrow afternoon.

Brokaw: As for the Republicans, the President has done everything but build an extension of the White House in New Hampshire as he tries to keep Pat Buchanan in low numbers.

NBC's John Cochran: After a weekend in New Hampshire the President was back here in Washington, but he's still campaigning in radio and TV interviews. Tonight he was asked why he failed to put his proposal for personal exemption tax cuts in the economic package he wants Congress to pass next month.

(President Bush: "As I said in the State of the Union message it's in the longer-term plan. The longer-term plan is not long-term. It's to get it done this year. But what I'm trying to do in the seven-point plan is to get the committee to lay aside politics and pass incentives that will stimulate the economy.")

Today, challenger Pat Buchanan kept hammering away at Bush's credibility like a prize fighter aiming his punches at cuts which have already drawn blood. Buchanan has ridiculed Bush over and over again for reneging on his no-new-taxes pledge. But the President is most vulnerable on the economy.

(Lynne Berry, N.H. voter: "Everybody's out of work and I just don't think he realizes the problems that the working people have. I think he's too far above us to understand it.")

Buchanan has tapped a rich vein of anger. But Bush has most of the Republican establishment working for him, and the outcome may hinge on whether the rough-and-ready enthusiasm of Buchanan's volunteers can compete with the experienced Bush staffers. Bush may have campaigned too little and too late here. This weekend he never set his modest crowds on fire. It took his pal the Terminator to do that.

(Arnold Schwarzenegger: "Hasta la vista, baby." [cheers])

Today, Buchanan claimed his own crowds are a sign his campaign is peaking.

(Buchanan: "[inaudible] a fellow that was up here yesterday and left town a little disheartened. Mr. Bush, he took the Terminator with him and went back home.")

The President may have stayed in Washington, but Mrs. Bush returned for 11th-hour campaigning. Even Buchanan's supporters admit she is formidable. But most people don't vote for spouses.

[TV coverage of Barbara Bush signing Bush-Quayle campaign placards]
The real question is whether more than 30 percent of Republican voters will go for a protest candidate. Right now some polls show Buchanan below 30 percent.

Brokaw: Let's talk about the expectation game. What does Pat Buchanan have to do to truly embarrass the President, based on the White House definition of that?

Cochran: They're saying, predicting here he may get 38 to 42 percent, but they don't believe it. If he gets that high George Bush is seriously embarrassed and is in trouble on Super Tuesday down South.

(NBC-Lead)

N.H. VOTERS

Jennings reports: We've said before that New Hampshire voters are an unpredictable lot. We spent the weekend in New Hampshire asking voters not so much about which candidate they would vote for but rather, in these troubled times, whether politicians in general are capable of helping them repair some damaged lives. The view across the natural landscape of New Hampshire is as beautiful as any in America, but it is not enough to sustain body and soul. It doesn't pay the rent.

(Bush-Quayle campaign commercial announcer: "Now the President has a plan to cut wasteful spending, create jobs and restore home values.")

All over this state there are economic casualties in search of help from their politicians. In New Boston this weekend we met Laura Casseva [sp] and her two children. Laura and her husband had a construction business which failed when the boom up here went bust. Their marriage went bust as well. Laura works as a secretary by day and a waitress by night.

(Clinton campaign ad: "It's time we had a president who cares, who takes responsibility, who has a plan for change.")

(Jennings: "Don't candidates always say the right things in the main?")

Casseva: "Yeah."

Jennings: "Does that grate on you at all?"

Casseva: "Sure. Sure. I'm not sure that any of them really know what it's like to be in my position or the position of a lot of people."

With only a day left before it is time to vote, the level of campaign rhetoric is as thick as a New England blizzard. But how much sense does it make even to those who are listening?

(Phil DeMint [sp]: "I've listened to all of them through either ads or TV and stuff, and a lot of them are saying things, but I really don't believe it.")

Phil and Donna DeMint had it all eight years ago when New Hampshire's economy was thriving. Two jobs, a house on the lake, a boat, a comfortable retirement just around the corner. Phil's company was bought out and his job was phased out.

(Brown campaign ad: "Together we can make democracy work for all of us.")

It is very easy to see this winter that the American dream is more elusive for more people. Brad and Dee Morgan both worked for companies that make computer parts.

(Dee Morgan: "I would love to stay home with my children. I'd love to. But as it is we can't survive on one income.")

The Morgan's problem is as clear as their balance sheet. Largely because of skyrocketing property taxes their monthly expenses have risen to $4,000. Their income is stuck at $2,800.

(Kerrey campaign ad: "I'll fight for a middle-class tax cut and a national industrial policy to invest in technology, education, training.")

All the people we met, no matter how limited their prospects, said they had an enduring faith in America. Dee Morgan, who's pretty far down, said it just couldn't be better anywhere else.

(Dee Morgan: "I'm proud of who I am. And if people keep their faith -- they have to believe in this country, they have to believe in who they are.")

Jennings continues:

(Buchanan campaign ad: "We need a president who will stand up to Congress and get the job done.")

But all the people we met really wonder whether any of the individual politicians who've been courting them so hard can really make a difference. (ABC-13)

SOCIAL SECURITY

NBC's Bob Kur reports on the political danger of messing with Social Security. Means testing -- Washington talk for if you can pay for benefits you should to help reduce the deficit. Unless the cost of Medicare alone is reduced, not much can be done about the national debt. There is talk about applying means testing to Medicare, raising significantly the premiums paid by senior citizens with six-figure incomes. And many seem willing to do their part. But seniors insist Social Security ought to remain sacred. There's also talk of taxing high-income Americans on any health benefits they get from their employer exceeding $4,000 a year. The budget mess is forcing politicians at least to discuss means testing. And some propose adding unemployment, school lunch subsidies and crop support payments to the list of benefits that should some day be determined by income. (NBC-2)

PAY RAISES

Rather: A survey out today says American workers can expect pay raises averaging less than 4.5 percent this year. That's the smallest projected average increase since the mid-1980s. (CBS-8)

MIDEAST VIOLENCE

ABC's Dean Reynolds reports from Tel Aviv on a funeral demonstration for slain Hezbollah leader Abbas Musawi. The Israeli helicopter attack on Musawi, his wife, and five-year-old son triggered an immediate response from his followers, with 20 rockets fired at Israeli targets overnight. While none did any damage, the Israeli army was on a high state of alert along the northern border, and the chief of staff acknowledged more trouble is possible. After three Israeli soldiers were murdered Saturday by Palestinians, everybody here believes, Israeli officials wanted to restore public confidence in the military. Attacking the leader of Hezbollah was one way to do it, even though he was not responsible for Saturday's bloodshed. With Israeli elections four months away, Prime Minister Shamir wanted to point out that he could be tough on Israel's enemies. Tonight he dismissed the idea that Israel's action amounted to political assassination. Israelis note that there has been little or no outcry over the killing of Musawi among Arab governments. Arab leaders fear the rise of fundamentalism, and may well be relieved that a powerful voice for Islamic revolution has been silenced. (ABC-5, CBS-3, NBC-10)

BAKER TRIP/NUCLEAR SCIENTISTS

Jennings: In Moscow today, Secretary Baker told President Yeltsin what the U.S. will do to help Soviet nuclear scientists find new jobs. The U.S. is going to contribute $25 million to set up a research center for developing civilian projects.

There was a surprise for Secretary Baker today. Mr. Yeltsin unexpectedly asked for another $600 million in U.S. loan guarantees so that his country can buy more American grain. The U.S. has already extended nearly $4 billion in credit to Russia during the past year. (ABC-8, CBS-5, NBC-9)

SOVIET MILITARY

Jennings reports on a dispute between Russia and Ukraine over who should control the former Soviet military. Ukraine has reportedly taken over an air force division that Russia says should be under the general command of the new commonwealth. (ABC-11)

IRAQ/SUGAR

ABC -- THIS WEEK WITH DAVID BRINKLEY

Moderator: David Brinkley. Panel: Sam Donaldson and George Will.
Guests: Robert Teeter, followed by Sen. Harkin and Gov. Clinton.

Brinkley: As the Campaign Director, did you anticipate Mr. Bush having so much trouble in New Hampshire? That is, opposition from both the left and the right?

Teeter: Well, once we got started, certainly when we -- at the very beginning, we didn't know we'd have opposition from the right, but New Hampshire is a tough state. It always has been a tough state, and this year is unique in some ways from others because New England has been hit so hard by the recession, and the economic difficulties have gone on longer here and have been more severe here, and so any time you have a challenge and you've got five people on one side and one on another, all spending a lot of money and a lot of time attacking you, then you're in for a tough race....

Brinkley: Some of the people are unhappy about the recession, seem to blame it all on Mr. Bush, don't they?

Teeter: Well, I think that goes with the territory. One of the problems of being President is there are certainly great advantages going into a campaign though -- is that you have to deal with the real world as it is, and we've had a very difficult economic time in this country, particularly in this state, for the last year, year and a half, and when that happens, the President's approval ratings tend to go down, and people do tend to associate those problems and blame them with him. But on the other hand, we're a good long way from this fall yet.

Will: Mr. Teeter, as Mr. Clinton's problems have mounted, both with regard to Ms. Flowers and with regard to the draft in the 1960's, he has said that his troubles stem in part from the Republican attack machine. Can you state categorically that the Republican campaign had nothing to do with any of this?

Teeter: Yes, absolutely, I can state categorically that there is no one in our campaign, the Bush campaign, no one in the national Republican apparatus, no one that I am aware of anywhere in the Republican party who has had anything to do with this. I think those attacks have been absolutely wrong. I haven't seen any of them where they have been substantiated yet. They have really been totally unsubstantiated attacks, and I can state categorically they are absolutely without foundation.

Will: Let's talk about the leading Democratic for a moment, Mr. Tsongas. You have no doubt what he says. He's in favor of a targeted capital gains tax cut. He's skeptical about government intrusion in the economy. He stresses growth over fairness. Suppose you're a Republican -- conservative Republican -- in New Hampshire, worried about the economy, that that's the number one issue, why wouldn't you vote for Tsongas?

Teeter: Well, I think you probably answered that in your own question, because, first of all, you are a Republican.

Teeter continues: I think, however, it's ironic that one of the reasons probably that Mr. Tsongas is leading the Democrats is he's running very much like a Republican and sounds very much in some issues like a Republican. On the other hand, I think if you're a conservative Republican in New Hampshire, first of all, by definition, you are a Republican, and secondly, you have an incumbent Republican President, who has been a good conservative President, who has been a good President with a record, and when it comes right down to it and you compare this President's record, his personal qualities, his ability to make judgments, the kind of problems he's dealt with in office, I think he'll compare favorably against any Democrat.

Donaldson: Yesterday the President said that his opponent Patrick Buchanan is telling outright lies about him. What lies?

Teeter: Well, what the President was referring to yesterday is a series of ads that started running here and an accusation that Mr. Buchanan made two or three days ago, that the President in some way had walked away from his middle class or his family tax relief component of his economic plan, which is specifically the increase in the standard deduction for those families with children, and that is absolutely not true. The fact is the President presented every one of the bills that he referred to in the State of the Union were before the Congress within 48 hours after the State of the Union, including the increase in the standard exemption for children, and the fact is he has not walked away from it. He would be happy to have the Congress pass it tomorrow morning, get it down tomorrow afternoon, and he would sign it.

Donaldson: Mr. Teeter, do you think that Pat Buchanan is a bigot or an anti-Semite?

Teeter: No, I wouldn't say that. I think Pat Buchanan has been a conservative Republican for a long time. I think that if you look back over his record, he may have been a little indiscrete about some of the things that he's written or said, but I don't think he's a bigot or an anti-Semite.

Donaldson: You're in trouble up there. At least the polls suggest you are, and there are people here not only in Washington, but elsewhere, who are blaming you in part and pining for the days when James A. Baker could come back and be the campaign Chairman. Do you think that will ever happen?

Teeter: Well, I doubt that very much. Jim Baker is a good friend of mine. I don't think, when I talk to him, he has any desire to return to this chair. First of all, let me just go back to your question. The polls -- looking over this morning or any time this last week, I don't think there is any evidence we are in trouble here. The press in some ways has been able to in a peculiar fashion to take a candidate that is behind by 25 points, in some way persuade the public or at least persuade themselves that the candidate who is ahead by 25 points is in trouble and the one who is behind is ahead.

Donaldson: You know the ghost of Eugene McCarthy still lives. He won 42 percent and knocked an incumbent president out of the race, which brings me to my, I guess, final question. Give us the figures. What will the President win by, if indeed he wins?

Teeter: Well, I've been around the fire too long to make some projection. I will project he will win, and he will win comfortably. I'm not going to get into the numbers, because primaries are so volatile, particularly with turnout, that it's very hard to do....

Donaldson: You certainly will agree, will you not, that the President has to get well above 50 percent to be seen to have turned back this challenge?

Teeter: No. What I will agree with and I have had one consistent rule all my life in politics, and that is the person who wins is the one who gets the most votes. The person who loses is the one who gets the fewer votes.

Guest: Sen. Harkin.

Brinkley: Now, tell me, if you had the means to do so, would you like to revive the Roosevelt New Deal in some form? It sounds that way.

Harkin: Well, not really. What I want to revive is the spirit of innovation, the "can do" spirit, the spirit of looking ahead and trying new ideas to meet the problems that we have. The one thing about the New Deal is that Roosevelt brought into the government some of the brightest, most innovative thinkers that we've ever had in government. They tried new ideas. They threw out the old 12 years of Republican mistakes under Coolidge, Harding and Hoover. They tried new programs, and they set the stage for, I believe, the ability for the United States to lead the world in the Second World War and set the stage for the greatest economic growth this world has ever seen. That's what I want to bring back to government. Let's throw out the old. Throw out trickled down economics. Throw out all these tax breaks for the rich. It doesn't work. Let's try something new, because we have a new world out there.

Guest: Gov. Clinton.

Will: You've been in this business a long time. The most arresting sentence to me in the letter you wrote when you were 23 years old was where you said that you had for years...been planning and thinking about a political career. You've never had or aspired to, as far as anyone can tell, a job outside of politics. Do you think that's the best kind of person to be President?

Clinton: Well, let me say this, when I was 23, what I was referring to is that when I was 16, I decided that I would get a good education, try to train to be a public servant and to come home to Arkansas. I never had any idea at that time of coming from the very modest circumstances I did that I'd be able to run for attorney general at 30 or Governor at 32. I certainly didn't know I'd be here at 45. But I believe in the American system....

Will: Your people in Congress last week passed a tax bill. I have two questions about that -- or proposed a tax bill. They would propose to cut individual taxes about a dollar a day. It would index capital gains. Some would say that helps the rich, I gather. They would have a permanent cut in corporate taxes. It amounts to, some people say, raising individual taxes on people at some unspecified level in order to cut corporate taxes. Do you think this is sensible? Is it stimulative? Is it good economic policy? What's the justification?

Clinton: Well, I think that tax bill is a much better bill than the President's bill. Let me tell you, there's some things you didn't mention in it. I agree with indexing capital gains. I agree with giving a big tax credit to people with the guts to start a new business in this economy; if they hold it for five years, taxing them at half the normal rate. I agree at giving some incentives to reinvest in real estate again. I don't agree with the corporate income tax cut. I think it would be much better to leave the rates where they are and go back to an investment tax credit, that any business could get, but only if they invested more money in plant, equipment, goods, services, things that will make us more productive. Otherwise, I think it's a good bill.

Will: What the Democrats in Congress want, I gather, is to be able to cut Medicare taxes and Social Security taxes, and in order to do that, to pay for it, to have a new 35-percent bracket. Now, there are those who say that in order to pay for the cut in Social Security and Medicare taxes, the new 35-percent bracket would have to apply to individuals making $35,000 a year or couples making $70,000 a year. If that is true, if you had to raise taxes on people down that low in the scale, would you be in favor of it?

Clinton: No, I would not be in favor of it. Keep in mind, the problem with the Social Security taxes today is that they max out at about $52,000 a year, and Social Security is running $65-70 billion surplus. So it's a regressive tax on wage earners and small business people. They pay whether they earn money or not. And it's being used to pay against the deficit. Would I be in favor of it, if we had to raise income taxes on people with incomes of $35,000 a year, couples at $70? No, I think that's too low.... My tax plan triggers in much higher. Couples would have to make well over $150,000 a year before their taxes went up....

Let me make one other point. You let old Bob Teeter get away with murder on this show earlier when he said the President still stuck by his tax package. He sent a tax bill to Congress last week that did not have the exemption increase for children. It did not have interest deduction for college loans. He said pass this package later, do something -- pass the middle-class package later, do something for the wealthy now. I mean, I don't know why you didn't call him on it, but that is an appalling about-face.

Donaldson: Well, you're quite right, Governor, we should have called him on it. The President, of course, says that it's a two-tier system: Pass this bill now, and the second bill will come later.

Clinton: After the election....

Brinkley: Wouldn't you find it pleasing if sometime we found a political candidate or a political leader who had something to talk about other than manipulating and playing around one more time with a tax code? Hasn't that become rather tiresome?

Clinton: Well, it's become tiresome, but I don't agree that the tax code has no impact on investor behavior. That was the theory of the '86 tax act: we'll just get two rates; they'll be broad and flat; we'll take away most of the deduction; and then everything will flourish. Well, the stock market continued to go up, but wages continued to go down. Net investment continued to go down. The deficit continued to go up....

Will: We did ask Mr. Teeter if there was any basis of your accusation that a Republican attack machine was behind your recent troubles. He said no. Are you prepared now to offer an apology or evidence with regard to that charge?

Clinton: Well, first of all, we have offered a lot of evidence about the involvement of the local Republicans who were certainly supporting the national campaign in attacking my record in New Hampshire and in trying to stimulate the tabloid story. With regard to the draft story, all I did was repeat what I was told by your network, by Mr. Koppel. I believed him then. I believe him now. He said later he was wrong, that the story did not come out of the Pentagon. I never accused anybody of anything. I simply repeated what ABC told me.

Political discussion: Hodding Carter joins panel.

Donaldson: ...Tsongas says he's not Santa Claus, we've got to pay for what we spend. And it is resonating in New Hampshire. And I hope it resonates across the nation, whether Tsongas carries it or not....

Carter: The nice thing about Paul Tsongas is he's talking about specific issues with specific ideas in ways that simply baffle the old categories of liberal and conservative....

Donaldson: Hodding, we want to ask you a question. You're from Mississippi. Is Tsongas electable?

Carter: The man is as electable as a number of other unelectables I can recall, named Harry Truman, or named Jimmy Carter, or named others who were laughable in the beginning. Do I know that he can be elected? I have no earthly idea. Is it unthinkable? Of course it's not unthinkable. The guy is talking to an audience that desperately wants to hear something.

Donaldson: What I'm asking is the obvious. Is it Greek? The man with Greek heritage from Massachusetts, who is a liberal on social issues, who's had cancer, electable?

Carter: Can a boy with a southern accent carry a northeastern state? The answer is yes. Can a guy with a Greek name carry a southern state? The answer is yes.

Donaldson: And they threw that boy out after one term.

Carter: Well, listen, they throw lots of people out after one term who it turns out in the past in history were perfectly good. This guy is offering up something which each one of knows going around the country people want to hear. I mean, which is honestly about where he is and where he thinks the country ought to be.

NBC -- MEET THE PRESS

Moderator: Tim Russert. Panel: John Chancellor and David Broder.
Guests: Sen. Tsongas.

Russert: You talk about economic truths. Let's raise two that you don't emphasize but nonetheless exist in your economic plan. The first is a gasoline tax -- three to five cents per year per gallon for 10 years. Fifty cents a gallon per gallon, $500 dollars a year on the average working family in this country in increased gasoline bills. Can they take that kind of hit?

Tsongas: Well, the fact is we've had a number of presidents who've talked about an energy policy and did not deliver on one. You have to get serious about energy conservation. We just fought a war and people died because we did not have an energy policy. And at some point, it's not a difficult reality. We simply have to get an energy policy in place. Now, there are two ways of doing it. One is to ignore it, which I don't think is appropriate, but the second would be to give people the 50 cents, bang, on day one. They could not adjust to that. So what I'm saying to people is, "This is coming. So when you buy your next car, think about mileage," so that people can plan over time what their purchases are going to be on their vehicle. So it's an attempt to say, "This is where we are going," but give you enough time so your family can adjust to it....

Russert: Would you cap spending on Social Security?

Tsongas: I would not cap spending, because people have put that into their own incomes, but like George Bush--I hate to say --(laughs)-- something similar to him, but the fact is I would freeze the federal budget, and I would exclude Social Security from that freeze. And, unlike George Bush, I would not drain the treasury. So I think my deficit plan is actually more operable than his is.

Broder: Senator, you said up here on Friday that if you were president today, you'd veto that tax bill that the Democrats in the House Ways and Means Committee have put together to give a certain small relief to middle-income families. Your opponents and many of the congressional Democrats say 11 years of Reagan-Bush tax policy benefiting the rich, hurting middle class -- isn't it time to do something for the middle-class tax -- or the middle-class families.

Tsongas: I think that's a very legitimate argument, and, all things being equal, I would love to endorse it. I mean, that is a very valid argument. But the fact is the need for this country is to get the economy moving. So I think my ultimate responsibility to the middle class is to give them a job. And once I give them a job, then the economy is running, so my focus is the manufacturing base, get this engine running. And once I do that and you have a booming economy, then you go back and redo the injustices of the Reagan years.... If you have a middle-class person who's not working, giving that person a tax cut is irrelevant.

Tsongas continues: So my responsibility to that person is I'm going to get you a job, and then hopefully, down the road -- it may not be in my first term -- but hopefully, down the road I'm going to redress the imbalance of the Reagan-Bush years....

Chancellor: "Business Week" magazine a couple of weeks ago had a story that said that at all levels -- local, state, and federal -- the United States has the lowest tax burden of any major industrial nation. Do you think the American people need to pay more taxes?

Tsongas: I don't think they need to pay more taxes, but I have to pay for what I propose. For example, I am strongly in favor of a targeted capital gains tax for investments and securities. Not George Bush's, but investments and securities to regenerate the manufacturing base. I'd pay for that by raising the tax on the wealthy. So if you're wealthy, under my administration you would be much better off investing in securities to get this engine running, and if you invest in, for example, your own consumption, you'd be a lot worse off....

Russert: What is the current state of your health?

Tsongas: ...I swim, as you know, competitively at the national level, had not intended to do it again, but since this issue is recurring, I think people have a right to raise it, that I've entered myself in both the YMCA nationals and the masters nationals in May. So if you can stand me in my Speedo, I'll give you some sense of my stamina....

Broder: [What's the difference between your economic policies and those of Michael Dukakis?]

Tsongas: I'm a liberal, as you know, on social issues but I'm aggressively pro-business. I think if you talk to the business -- I don't want to be negative about Michael. He and I are good friends. I just want to say that the business community has never seen a Democrat like me come along who was extremely liberal on the social issues. I grew up in a dying city and this is where my views come from. And I understand if economic engine does not run, I don't care what your philosophy is, everything else falls apart.... In terms of the theme in November, I would love to get into a debate with George Bush and put my economic program against his economic program in front of a group of Rotarians or Chamber of Commerce types and challenge them and ask them which do they think is better. I do that in New Hampshire all the time. I think my economic program is based on reality. George Bush is Republican Santa Claus. I mean, you look at his State of the Union message. You get this, you get that, you get this, trying to cover you by giving you a tax break and draining the treasury. It's ironic that I, the liberal Democrat, on social issues, am the fiscal conservative saying no to all these give-aways....

Russert: One last point, this suggestion you don't want to be a Santa Claus, but some Democrats say, well you want to raise a gasoline tax, you want to have a means test on Social Security. Where is the man's compassion? I mean, does he have a potential of being a Scrooge, rather than a Santa Claus?

Tsongas: Tim, I grew up in a city where people struggled because they did not have a job. Run through New Hampshire. Talk to people who cannot provide for their families. They go home and say, "I lost my job. You kids have no future." That's the person I'm concerned with.

Tsongas continues: I care less, frankly, about someone who's working to give them a tax cut than I care about someone who's not working, who's struggling. That's the person I care about. That's where my passion comes from. Is that being Scrooge to say, "All right, my policies are going to be focused to give you a job so you can provide for your family?" That's not compassion? You think it's not easy for me to say no to a middle-class tax cut, to say no to Japan bashing? That's the usual rhetoric and it's always worked.

Political discussion:

Chancellor: I don't think the Republicans here in New Hampshire want the President to be seen by too many people who will yell at him, and so I think we're having these sort of discrete, upper-class rallies around the country. They're very attractive looking, very nice. I thought the President was quite effective yesterday when I saw him in a question-and-answer session. What is interesting to me is that when you say to people who go to those things, "You're going to vote for him, aren't you?", they say -- (pause) -- "Yeah." (Laughter.) And there's always a little pause there, so that I think the support is -- is loyal support, but it's not very enthusiastic.

Russert: The Bush people tell me they are very concerned they won't break 50 percent because of Buchanan, because of another businessman who's up here, afraid of some Republican write-in votes for Tsongas, and they're keeping their fingers crossed. They spent an extra two days up here.

Broder: Fifty percent or 60 percent? Russert: Fifty percent.
Chancellor: Fifty. Broder: They'll break 50 percent.

THE McLAUGHLIN GROUP

Moderator: John McLaughlin. Panel: Jack Germond, Fred Barnes, Eleanor Clift, Clarence Page and Paul Gigot.

On Clinton:

All panelists except Gigot agree the Clinton campaign is still strong despite all the negative press about his Vietnam draft record. But Gigot says that record will hurt him in the South and in a general election against President Bush.

Barnes: There's one very telling poll that shows that Democrats in New Hampshire still think Clinton is the most electable. But when you ask the question, 'Which candidate is the one who has the moral values and strength of character you think a president ought to have,' Clinton drops through the floor....

On Mario Cuomo's write-in campaign:

Germond from New Hampshire: ...The fact is, if he comes in ahead of a couple of the candidates, two or three of the candidates who are on the ballot, that tells you something about their viability. That wouldn't surprise me at all....

On President Bush and Pat Buchanan in New Hampshire:

Germond: There's been an interesting late development as they say. The tracking on the last two nights, the two nights after Bush was in the state shows that Bush either just maintained where he was -- held his own -- or lost ground after the personal campaigning, which makes you wonder why [they brought] him up here again Saturday and Sunday, except for I guess they have to. Buchanan, meanwhile, has begun -- and I said a week ago I thought Pat had hit his head. That is not correct. Pat has edged up, and now we have a situation where Bush is in the tracking in a couple of different polls just at 50 or slightly above and one even slightly under, and Pat Buchanan up over 30. You're now getting to the point where you've got a close race, or a race close enough to be potentially very embarrassing to the President.

Clift: Pat is really charging, and the reason is that Bush has opened up the tax artery in New Hampshire by pulling back the middle-class tax cut, and Buchanan is charging him with consumer fraud, and even Clinton has gotten an issue out of this in defining the difference between public morality and private morality. So I think Bush is really on the run in the state.

Barnes: ...The problem is this: Bush has lost a bunch. Pat has picked up a little of it. The thing that Pat is doing well is he is on television at a saturation level, particularly during the Celtics games. I saw the same ad that Buchanan had three times plus three or four of his other ads. He is really reaching people on television.... His negatives are still very, very high. He has to get the vote of people who like Bush, don't like Pat, but want to send a message to Bush.

Clift: Bush is going up there acting presidential. He cuts commercials in the Oval Office. I mean it's mud wrestling up there. They don't want a guy who's going to look presidential. That's the last thing they want.

Gigot: The other problem is Bush's message -- it's kind of Bush vs. Bush. It's just not Bush vs. Buchanan. He's saying, look, I may have lied in the tax thing, but I won't do it again. And he's saying that 'Look, despite what you know about three years of my compromising with Congress, now I'm going to fight them.' And Pat is coming right at that and at Bush's credibility.

[A campaign ad from each candidate is run.]

McLaughlin: Don't you just love the way Pat, who is inbred in this environment, was born here, says, 'I'm going to go down to Washington'? Come on Pat, give us a break!

Barnes: Pat's ad is better than Bush's ad. It's direct, it's appealing....

Germond: ...One of the great advantages of being 600 miles from here, ...one of the things that's interesting about this is I don't think the advertising is as important as it would be in another situation, because the campaign is so pre-media intensive.... People are getting their information from so many sources, I don't think the commercials matter as much as they ordinarily do....

McLaughlin: What percentage of the New Hampshire Republican primary vote will Buchanan get and Bush get?

Germond: I think Buchanan's now going to get 40. Barnes: I think Bush 58, Buchanan 38, change for a write-in. Clift: I'm in the 40-degree range for Buchanan, too. Page: I was going to say 35 coming in here, but I'm persuaded to say 40 now. Gigot: I'm going to go 58-35. McLaughlin: I'm saying 35 and I'll go with your 58.

Predictions:

Germond: Assuming that Tsongas and Clinton finish here in that order, the next big test will be -- the most attention getting will be in Maryland and Georgia March 3. Barnes: The economy will roar back in the second quarter, maybe only for the second quarter, but it will grow by more than 4 percent.... Gigot: If Buchanan is still campaigning in the South, the Bush campaign will go negative on him for his opposition to Desert Storm. McLaughlin: I predict that housing prices are going to skyrocket.

INSIDE WASHINGTON

Moderator: Tina Gulland and Gordon Peterson. Panel: Tom Oliphant, Carl Rowan, Charles Krauthammer, Margaret Carlson, and Evan Thomas.

On New Hampshire:

Rowan: I think [Bill Clinton is] a goner. We've got a situation where George Bush is running as your Commander in Chief. He never fails to mention Desert Storm, and a lot of Americans are going to swallow the patriotism bit.

Thomas: I think Clinton's bleeding, but he's still alive. If for no other reason, who's going to go South on Super Tuesday?...

Oliphant from New Hampshire: Well you better buckle your seat belts, folks, because Clinton is anything but dead. I think New Hampshire's rotten economy has provided a context for this story that we in the press have not been able to supply, and if Clinton doesn't waste time talking about how the rest of the world is out to get him he's going to do very well indeed.

Peterson from New Hampshire: If you were to ask me if Clinton's dead I'd say not yet, and if you were to ask me about George Bush I would say if I was George Bush I'd be very jumpy about this upstart Buchanan. He's somebody to be watched....

Carlson: The thing that made me think that Tsongas can't go the distance is not just that virtually everybody in Democratic and Republican circles believe it, but that at the White House there's a group of folks who are really afraid of this Mario scenario of an unbruised Mario Cuomo having not been in the primaries, coming into the convention and coming out as the white horse....

Peterson: The people at the White House better put Mario on the shelf right now and start worrying about Pat Buchanan....

Oliphant: If you want to name a hot candidate in New Hampshire this weekend it is Pat Buchanan, and it is all George Bush's doing. I have not seen as dreadful a campaign in my life as the President is running up here. He is playing -- with this business in the House Ways and Means Committee -- he's playing right into Buchanan's wheelhouse this weekend, and he is in real trouble.... What Buchanan is able to do is say, 'He lied to you four years ago, he forgot about you, and now he's doing it to you again.'

Carlson: One of his great applause lines is there's been more sightings of Elvis in New Hampshire than George Bush, and Buchanan is what Bush isn't: He's a great performer, he's a great speaker. The crowds love him. He's put away the crazy stuff and he just talks about jobs and the economy.

Krauthammer: Buchanan's great success is that he's been able to make the issue Bush and not Buchanan, and you already hear recriminations in the White House of people who believe that they should have gone negative on Buchanan, which means just telling people what he said in the past and the kind of weird and eccentric--...

Rowan: We in the media cannot overlook the fact of what Pat Buchanan is. He throws out some of the most dangerous views that exist in America, and I have of course had to swallow hard in writing columns saying what Buchanan is because it looks as if I'm supporting George Bush.

Thomas: [The Bush campaign has] prepared [a political ad] bomb to drop on Buchanan that shows a soldier in desert fatigues standing there in the desert saying, 'Well, when I needed him George Bush was there. But where was Pat Buchanan?' And it will be an effective ad, but it's a negative ad and they've decided not to use it on the theory that they don't want to go too low-road going into [the primary]....

Oliphant: The ads that the Bush campaign has prepared have been prepared for a very specific reason. There is not just a gender gap up here, there is a gender canyon. Bush's entire margin over Buchanan in the polls if from female voters: nice guy, he cares. Among men our stuff is showing them dead even, and that has to do with whether or not Republicans feel Bush will stand up and fight Congress. It's the wimp issue again.

Rowan: I wouldn't bet any money that if they get embarrassed enough, if Bush gets embarrassed enough in New Hampshire, when they head south they're going to pull out some of these ads that they thought they were not going to run, because when you're in trouble the low road starts to look pretty high....

Gulland: Margaret, you were talking about the effectiveness of Bush on the campaign trail and the fact that he didn't get much of a pick-up in the polls after his visit just this last week to New Hampshire, but you expect he might get one for this week.

Carlson: Maybe he'll do better, but you have Buchanan who's a great performer. He can really get the crowd going, you can parse his paragraphs. Bush you can't follow a sentence of his. You know, frogs that float, the nitty ditty gritty bitty dirt band. It doesn't track, and so I think Buchanan he's had the time, he gets the crowds, he's funny, he's good in back and forth -- that Jesuit training wasn't for nothing, and I think he's established his positives. It's going to be hard for Bush to establish his negatives....

Thomas: I think the real campaign strategy is the economy's going to get just enough better for them to win. I really think it boils down to not screwing up, the economy gets a little bit better, the Democrats self-destruct, and Bush gets four more years.

Krauthammer: ...I think if he beats Buchanan by two-to-one he's won. But I think if Buchanan gets about 40 percent, Buchanan has won. Anything in between, I think, is a draw.... If [Buchanan] does respectably in New Hampshire and if he does respectably, say, in Georgia or Texas, or in the West, then I think he's a strong, maybe the leading candidate in '96. And that's what this is all about.

Rowan: Yeah, but in the interim he could have done more than he wanted, and that is take the White House away from the Republicans. Because if he goes in the South and takes away a lot of white males and if David Duke is running as an independent, George Bush is in great trouble, and that South that the Republicans have had since Richard Nixon is gone. And it'll be hard for them to hold the presidency....

Thomas: Basically his strategy is 'I am the President.' And when the President won a war that's not such a bad strategy. Don't forget the ultimate card he has to play, which is to bomb Baghdad....

This Week In Congress

Congress returns from the Presidents Day recess this week to confront an ambitious schedule that will be highlighted by work on an economic plan for the nation.

With the president's March 20 deadline for congressional action on an economic stimulus plan looming, leaders in both houses will push the rank-and-file to move quickly on a bill. The Senate canceled a planned recess March 9-16 to provide more time to consider proposals for the economy.

Results from today's presidential primary in New Hampshire will almost certainly stir the political pot again as Democrats gauge the direction of the race and Republicans see whether President Bush is effective in turning away a challenge from the right by conservative columnist Patrick Buchanan.

The Senate plans to finish work on the energy bill. The House plans to take up a number of bills, including one to apply stiffer regulation to the 900-number industry.

More of what's on tap for the week follows:

Senate Floor Action

Energy Bill. The Senate this week is expected to complete work on comprehensive energy legislation (S 2166) that aims to boost domestic oil production, promote the use of alternative fuels, increase conservation and speed up the process for licensing nuclear power plants. The major action on the bill is expected to be over an amendment to open Alaska's Arctic National Wildlife Refuge (ANWR) to oil and gas drilling. Alaska Republican Sens. Frank H. Murkowski and Ted Stevens are pushing an amendment that would allow energy development in the refuge, saying it would provide needed jobs and reduce dependence on foreign imports. But Senate opponents say the drilling would damage a unique arctic environment.

Higher Education. Toward the end of the week, the Senate is expected to take up S 1150, a bill that would reauthorize the Higher Education Act of 1965 and expand programs that provide federal financial aid to college students.

The Senate bill, which would reauthorize the programs for seven years, leaves in place all current federal student aid programs. It would also turn the popular Pell grants, which provide aid for college and trade school students, into an entitlement, but would wait to do so until fiscal 1997 to comply with budget guidelines.

A comparable House bill (HR 3553) would make Pell grants an entitlement upon enactment. The Senate measure is expected to cost $17.4 billion during the first year.

House Floor Action

900-Numbers. The House today will meet to consider five bills under suspension of the rules. One measure (HR 3490) would give the Federal Communications Commission authority to regulate the 900-number industry and would require that callers to such services be allowed to hang up without charge after hearing an introductory message outlining the costs of a call.

The bill would also bar telephone companies from disconnecting telephone service for failure to pay 900-number charges. The Senate in October passed its own 900-number bill, S 1579.

The House's schedule for Wednesday and Thursday is uncertain. Members will not be in session on Friday.

Committee Action

Budget Rules. The House Government Operations Committee this week plans to take the first step toward revising the 1990 budget agreement.

The Legislation and National Security Subcommittee on Wednesday will consider a bill (HR 3732) that would al-

Last Week

With the presidential campaign as a backdrop, House Democrats kept Congress in the news by drafting an alternative to President Bush's tax package.

Although most members were out of town for a weeklong Presidents Day recess, members of the Ways and Means Committee met to lay the groundwork for early floor action on a tax bill (HR 4210) based on President Bush's economic proposals.

Lawmakers and Bush hope that a tax plan will revive the flagging U.S. economy.

Both chambers are moving quickly on a tax measure and a budget blueprint to meet Bush's March 20 deadline for action on an economic plan.

The administration and House Democrats disagreed on what should be in the package and how much of the package should be brought quickly to a vote.

After GOP support for his comprehensive tax plan wavered, Bush called on Congress to approve a narrow seven-point measure that included a capital gains tax cut and tax breaks for first-time home buyers and business investment.

Ways and Means Democrats rejected Bush's plan, and instead put together a $90.9 billion package that would provide a tax credit of up to $400 for couples and $200 for individuals. It would be paid for, in part, by raising the top tax rate from 31 percent to 35 percent for individuals with taxable income higher than $85,000.

Although some features of the plan are similar to that proposed by Bush, including some form of tax cuts for capital gains and incentives for real estate development, the Democrats' plan triggered a war of words with Republicans.

Democrats claimed that Bush was only looking out for the rich while GOP members countered that the Democratic alternative was a ploy to embarrass the administration.

The battle will culminate next week when the House is expected to vote on the competing plans. ■

House Committee Staff Changes

Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs

Joe Western is a new professional staff member for the minority on the Domestic Monetary Policy Subcommittee, focusing on the Federal Reserve System. Western had worked for Rep. Virginia Smith, R-Neb. He was assigned to the House Appropriations Committee for Smith, concentrating on energy and water development issues. He fills a slot that was vacant.

Budget

Mary Ann Chaffee has joined the committee's majority staff as a budget analyst on education issues, filling a newly created position. She comes from the minority staff of the House Education panel's Human Resources Subcommittee.

Education and Labor

James Pierce Myers has become the Education Committee's chief counsel, replacing Richard Johnson, who is retiring. Myers had been with the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee.

Judy Loughman has filled a vacancy on the majority staff of the Labor Standards Subcommittee. Loughman, who has become the subcommittee's legislative assistant in charge of education issues, was a project manager for the California Testing Bureau before assuming her present duties.

Mary Ann Chaffee, a professional staffer for the minority on the Human Resources Subcommittee, has left to work for the House Budget Committee. Chaffee has not been replaced.

Energy and Commerce

Staff Director John Clough Jr. will be leaving the committee to join the government relations firm of Bergner, Boyette and Bockorney. Clough has been with the committee since 1980. No replacement has been named.

John Shelk, a counsel for the minority since 1988, will be leaving to become the federal affairs counsel in the ITT Hartford Insurance Group's Washington office. Shelk has worked on a variety of issues, including insurance insolvency, energy and the Clean Air Act. No replacement has been named.

Government Operations

Judy Blanchard is the new minority staffer on the Environment Subcommittee, replacing Kirk Esherick, who enrolled in the University of Maryland's M.B.A. program. Blanchard had worked in the Environmental Protection Agency's Congressional Liaison Office.

Interior and Insular Affairs

Steve Heeley is a new deputy counsel in the committee's Office of Indian Affairs. Heeley had worked for the minority at the Senate Select Committee on Indian Affairs. Previously, he had been a tribal attorney in Arizona. He filled a vacancy.

Michael Jackson, a consultant on water and power issues for the majority, has left to join the Senate Indian Affairs Committee as a special assistant to the ranking Republican John McCain, Ariz.

Judiciary

Dan Cunningham and David Yassky have joined the majority staff of the Crime and Criminal Justice Subcommittee as assistant counsels, filling long-standing vacancies. Cunningham was an attorney at the Washington law firm of Arent, Fox, Kintner, Plotkin and Kahn, and Yassky served as a clerk for Federal District Court Judge Stanley Sporkin.

Michael Remington, an assistant counsel for the Intellectual Property Subcommittee, has left to become the executive director at the Commission on Judicial Discipline and Removal. No replacement has been named.

Post Office and Civil Service

Gerald Cerasale, who served on the Postal Rate Commission, has replaced James Pierce Myers as a deputy general counsel focusing on postal issues for the committee. Myers left to work for the House Education and Labor Committee.

Kevin Bruns has also been hired as a deputy general counsel, filling a position that was vacant. He will cover health-care and civil service issues. Bruns had served as assistant counsel for the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee.

Mary Weaver has replaced Julie Tagen as a professional staff member for the Human Resources Subcommittee. Weaver, who had worked for the Northeast/Midwest Congressional Coalition, will focus initially on White House personnel matters. Tagen left to be the staff director for the Franking Commission.

Science, Space and Technology

Barry Gold has taken a new position with the Science Subcommittee as a professional staff member. Gold, who comes to the panel from the National Academy of Sciences, is handling general science issues.

Tony Clark has joined the majority staff of the Technology and Competitiveness Subcommittee. Clark, who is focusing on telecommunications issues, had been with Wheat First Securities, a Richmond, Va., consulting firm. This is also a new position.

Small Business

Jay Angello has left his position as the Small Business Committee's minority professional staff member. During his tenure with the committee, Angello focused on international business and exports. Angello has moved from the area. The vacancy will not be filled.

Veterans' Affairs

Winsome Packer is a new professional staff member at the Education Subcommittee. Packer came from the office of Rep. Alan Wheat, D-Mo., where she was an executive assistant.

Ways and Means

Jayne Fitzgerald is a new addition to the Ways and Means Committee's tax staff. She will specialize in taxation issues involving health care. An attorney, she came from the Washington, D.C., office of Kirkland & Ellis. Fitzgerald is a familiar face at the committee, having served on the tax staff from 1980 to 1985.

Ellen Magrini has filled a new position at the Health Subcommittee as a majority staff member focusing on malpractice issues. She comes to the panel after a year of traveling. She had previously been with the Chicago law firm of Hinshaw & Colbertson.

Nancy Carlton, an assistant professional staffer for health policy on the minority staff, has left the Health Subcommittee to join the Washington, D.C., office of Merck & Co., a pharmaceutical firm. She has been replaced by Robert Mercker, who had been a health policy consultant working with hospitals and private physicians in Northern Virginia.

At the Trade Subcommittee, Bruce Wilson has replaced Janet Nuzum as a professional staff member. Wilson, who will handle a variety of international trade issues, comes from the Office of the U.S. Trade Representative. Nuzum left to become a commissioner with the International Trade Commission.

THIS WEEK from p. 1

low lawmakers to eliminate the barriers that separate the three categories of discretionary spending. The full committee will follow suit on Thursday.

Members want to revise the budget deal so that some of the $289 billion in budget authority projected for defense spending can be used for other purposes. The budget pact prohibits a shift in funds through fiscal 1993.

Democrats want to use the "peace dividend" to provide additional money for education and other domestic programs. President Bush has proposed using a portion of the money for a middle-income tax cut.

Cabinet Nominations. The Senate Commerce Committee today will vote on the nominations of Barbara Hackman Franklin to be secretary of Commerce and Andrew Card to be secretary of Transportation. The nominations are not controversial and are expected to be approved easily.

Card will appear before the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee on Wednesday to discuss transportation issues. The committee does not have jurisdiction over the nomination, but Card is appearing there as a courtesy to committee members.

Haitian Repatriation. The House Judiciary Committee will mark up a measure (HR 3844) on Thursday that would suspend for six months the forced repatriation of Haitians, many of whom have been kept at the U.S. Naval Base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.

More than 21,000 Haitians have left their country since the overthrow by the military of Haitian President Jean-Bertrand Aristide last year.

After a Jan. 31 Supreme Court ruling overturned a lower court order prohibiting repatriation of the Haitian refugees, the U.S. government began forcing the Haitians to return to their country.

Under the bill, 2,000 slots in the total annual U.S. refugee quota would be made available for Haitian refugees.

Environment Conference. On Thursday, the House Foreign Affairs Subcommittee on Human Rights and International Organizations will consider legislation (H Con Res 266) urging President Bush to participate in an upcoming U.N. conference set up to explore ways to protect the environment while allowing development. The conference is scheduled for June in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.

A similar bill (H Con Res 263) was approved by the committee's Western Hemisphere Affairs Subcommittee on Feb. 4, but it includes additional provisions saying that the United States should pursue a cooperative strategy on the environment with the nations of Latin America and the Caribbean. ■

National Energy Security Act of 1992 continue consideration

Outlook

The Senate will likely take up S 1150, a bill to reauthorize the Higher Education Act of 1965, after completing work on the Energy bill.

In 1964,
Lyndon B. Johnson
picked up two dogs
by their ears . . .

In 1980,
Jimmy Carter
agreed to debate
Ronald Reagan . . .

In 1991, Emily Banks missed
a CQ legislative seminar.

Errors of judgment needn't be historic to be consequential. That is why, if understanding the legislative process is important to you and your staff, you can't afford to miss these valuable Congressional Quarterly seminars.

Understanding Congress (March 9, April 23) ($225), a half-day orientation given by CQ editors, will introduce you to the legislative process and show you how to follow congressional action. Attend our Research Workshop on Congressional Documents (March 10, April 24) ($225), and you will gain the tools and insights of our own research staff to reduce unnecessary leg-work while improving the quality of information you gather.

Our intermediate level courses will take you one step further . . .

Attend the full-day seminar Congress and the Legislative Process (March 16, April 30, June 8) ($295), and you'll see how legislation is drafted, how members use rules, and how House and Senate procedures differ. You'll discover how committees handle bills during hearing and markup and what's negotiable in House-Senate conferences.

Former members of Congress, experienced staffers and lobbyists conduct the Strategies for Working with Congressional Staff seminar (March 11, June 3) ($225). Learn how to build a good rapport with Hill staffers and how to create effective 5-minute presentations. Know the organization and responsibilities of personal and committee staff and their role in the legislative process. Who but an Emily Banks could resist?

Register no less than one month in advance for any seminar and qualify for a substantial discount.

Call Irene Cuffy CQ Seminar Registrar toll-free at 1 (800) 432-2250, ext 620 (in D.C. call 887-8620), and register now!

--- THE DAILY BRIEFING ON AMERICAN POLITICS ---

Updated Each Morning At 11:50

(c) The American Political Network, Inc.

282 North Washington Street, Falls Church, VA (703) 237-5130

THE LONG AND WINDING ROAD

After their respective NH victory parties, the candidates will all pack up and leave in the morning. (Schedules, #17)

TSONGAS: Looks "north, south, east, and west," MD 3/3 primary next. big test.... Same day WA caucus workable? (#2)

CLINTON: "Retreat" to South firewall? Goes straight to GA, FL, might skip SD 2/25. Kerrey mgr says big NH cash move makes South more competitive. (#3)

KERREY: To hit ME (2/23 caucus) directly post-NH, then SD for Harkin showdown. (#4)

HARKIN: Returns to DC (MD?), then meets Kerrey in SD. (#5)

BROWN: Nabs Maine AG nod, will concentrate there. (#7)

BUSH: "Resigned" to draw-out fight with Buchanan, maybe Duke; will head South. (#12)

BUCHANAN: Looks to GA 3/3, SC 3/7, no matter what happens tonight. (#13)

VIETNAM AS AN ISSUE (#18)

VA: ROBB-WILDER 48-36% (#22)

Dem uncertainty on '94, but Terry near-pick for Gov '93.

SPOTLIGHT

WHO ARE NH'S UNDECIDEDS?

DEMS: KRC's Chervinsky says they give Kerrey the highest FAVs -- although Tsongas and Cuomo also fare well. Also 43% are 50+ -- which could help Clinton, Kerrey more. ARG's Bennett says most are women. The bulk of which are 55+ (more conservative) who have strayed from Clinton. Do they go back or settle on someone more liberal?

GOP: Bennett says they are women dissatisfied with Bush, but can't pull the trigger on Buchanan. KRC sees them as more moderate -- which should help Bush, unless you ask why they're still hedging. More troubling for Bush may be KRC's rating -- his FAV/UNFAV drops from 55/32 full sample to 41/37 among undecideds. Buchanan UNFAV. 7% lower among undecideds.

===== QUOTE OF THE DAY =====

TV MONITOR (#24)

???? OVERLOOKED ???? ?

From the Wet Blanket for Libertarians Department: Fritz Hollings carried Dixville Notch eight years ago.

*1 NEW HAMPSHIRE: DIXVILLE'S NOTCH-BABIES, THE WEATHER, ETC
 DIXVILLE NOTCH -- THE RESULTS ARE IN! Hardly a bellwether, but these are 31 real votes; cast, as always, at midnight: On the GOP side, Bush beat Buchanan 9-3, with 3 GOPers writing in Nader. On the Dem side, it was Clinton over Tsongas 3-2. But Libertarian Andre Marrou led all with 11 votes. Of course, he was the only candidate to attend the voting (BOSTON HERALD, 2/18). Nader had also made the trek up there during the campaign (N.Y. TIMES, 2/18). The polls opened at 6:00a today, most close at 7:00p; but many precincts remain open until 8:00p. Sec/State Wm Gardner expects near-record turnout -- about 265,000, or 47% of the 560,000 registered voters. The record is 51.2%, set in '80. "The wild card is the weather which promises to turn ugly as the day wears on. ... snow and freezing rain is expected to break out in the afternoon (Manchester UNION LEADER, 2/18).

NADER PLAYS EXPECTATIONS GAME: Mr. "None-of-the-Above" said if his write-in effort nets him at least 30,000 votes, it would "set the tone of the campaign" (Manchester UNION LEADER, 2/18).

TV: CNN's Brooks Jackson reports, if the campaigns kept to their buy plans, "almost a hundred" political spots ran on Boston TV alone yesterday. Other media markets: Portland, ME; Burlington, VT; Manchester; and cable systems. On Boston TV, "Bush is the biggest spender ... followed closely by ... Buchanan." Among Dems on Boston TV, Harkin, Clinton, and Kerrey "are closely bunched. And here's the surprise -- trailing far behind in the advertising race ... Tsongas, who's getting on by a shoestring." Brown "bought no Boston TV time" (2/17). EX-NH Dem chair Joe Grandmaison, a Clinton backer: "Tsongas will top the ticket, Gov. Clinton will recover about half of what he had ... giving him a solid second ... [Third] uncertain, if I had to bet I'd bet on Sen. Harkin, but you feel some momentum for Sen. Kerrey. ... Cuomo will probably get about 6 or 7% of the write-in vote" ("Larry King Live," CNN, 2/17). ABC's Jeff Greenfield: "I wouldn't give you a plug nickel for a bet, except unlike all the predictions New Hampshire's primary will not winnow out anybody" (WMUR, 2/17). Dem strategist John Sasso: "The [Dem] Party has never been more together. ... The nominee is going to be picked from this field. ... Once someone starts winning a few primaries it's amazing how much stature and standing they acquire" ("Nightline," ABC, 2/17). ABC's Cokie Roberts: "We're going to see a whole lot of college students voting today ... they really were influenced by MTV, that Rock the Vote" (ABC, 2/18). Roger Ailes: Tsongas 38%, then Clinton, then Kerrey (NBC, 2/18).

*2 TSONGAS: LASHES BACK AT ENVIROS, OPPONENTS

Several NH environmental activists wrote an "open letter" to Tsongas disputing his claim he has been endorsed by "the environmental community of New Hampshire": "There is simply no truth to Senator Tsongas' claim and the voters of [NH] should not be misled." The letter, signed by NH residents, is said to support "the spectrum" of Dem candidates" (release, 2/17). Tsongas tried to "blunt criticism" that he is "too supportive of nuclear energy and that he lacks national appeal." He was aided in his efforts by ex-state Rep. Dudley Dudley, a "staunch opponent" of Seabrook: "Without a doubt, Paul Tsongas is the best environmental candidate we have had running since Morris Udall" (Shogan, L.A. TIMES, 2/18). He was greeted at one stop by Greenpeace activists carrying a large banner that read: "Live Nuke-Free or Die." Others questioned why he did not call for Seabrook's shutdown. Tsongas said he would be willing to change his view on nuclear "if someone could demonstrate that the nation could meet its energy needs without it." BOSTON GLOBE's Pertman & Frisby note, "Judging from the emphasis Tsongas and his supporters put on his environmental background Monday, his campaign saw the potential for some damage during the waning hours" of the primary (2/18).

LAST DITCH EFFORT: A "confident" Tsongas made four stops yesterday, predicting, his victory would mean "a new Democratic Party" that understands economic growth: "I'm going to force the Democratic Party to once and for all take that useless rhetoric and cast it aside" (Shepard/May, COX/ATLANTA CONSTITUTION, 2/18). He lashed back at criticism from Clinton that he has neglected the middle class: "I don't think there's something wrong with me because I believe in elemental tax fairness. ... I say what I believe and I say things that are unpopular." He "dismissed" the economic policies of Clinton and others as "too anti-business" that have "done harm to the country" (Hanson, SEATTLE POST-INTELLIGENCER, 2/18). L.A. TIMES' Ronald Brownstein notes, while Dems are attacking him on economic issues, GOPers, "contemplating for the first time the possibility of facing him in a general election, believe they could do the most damage on social issues and foreign policy, such as his strong support for gay rights" and opposition to the Gulf War. But that potential vulnerability "could also become a liability in the primaries" (2/18). BOSTON GLOBE's Walter Robinson writes Tsongas "stands on the verge of a possible victory that could throw the nomination contest into turmoil and perhaps set the stage for a Washington-based effort to enlist an eleventh-hour entrant into the [Dem] contest" (2/18). W. TIMES' Garrett & Moss note a victory margin of 10 or 15 points over Clinton "could vault Mr. Tsongas into the national spotlight and muffle naysayers who consider him a regional phenomenon" (2/18). Tsongas: "They say I cannot take this beyond [NH]. Yes, I am a regional candidate -- north, south, east and west" (mult., 2/18). Kerrey on why Tsongas has done so well in NH: "He's got an excellent message: economic growth" (Pertman/Frisby, BOSTON GLOBE, 2/18).

BEYOND THE GRANITE GRIND: He became the first to hit the airwaves in MD debuting his "Swim" ad 2/16. It is the same ad he started with in NH (Michael Hill, Balto. SUN, 2/18). The 3/3 MD primary will be "the single most important" step in establishing nationally "the political credibility it took him months to achieve" in NH (Germond, Balto. SUN). Since MD and GA are the only 3/3 primary states in the Eastern time zone, the TV networks, "the most important factor in determining the conventional wisdom, will pay them disproportionate attention." With Clinton having a "pronounced advantage" in the South, MD becomes more important for Tsongas. Tsongas MD manager Dennis Kanin: "He's already in a close race for first place in Maryland" (2/17). Balto. SUN's John Fairhall notes, MD provides "a key opportunity to quiet doubts that he cannot win in the South." Tsongas plans to make his first campaign to MD tomorrow (2/18). He visits SD on Thursday where he has also begun advertising. One SD official said interest in Tsongas has been "picking up" in recent days, following his ads (W. POST, 2/18). Tsongas' "also gives a high priority to" WA, 3/3, as he has some "valued local backing there." Also, the delegates are chosen by caucus, not primary, thus the "universe of voters to be worked is more manageable." Kanin said they will also make "a serious effort" in CO 3/3 "because they are convinced the electorate there may be hospitable to Mr. Tsongas' message on the economy." In ME, Tsongas has offices in Portland and Bangor and already has TV ads running -- "aimed as much at [NHers] as Maine caucus participants." Tsongas also has "paid staffers and [TV] advertising" in SD (Germond, Balto. SUN, 2/17).

TV: CNN's Gene Randall: "Based on the polls ... Tsongas ... seemed well positioned for a Tuesday victory." Tsongas to reporter: "You're gonna play the expectations game, not me." Randall: "The Clinton campaign appears prepared for a Paul Tsongas victory here on Tuesday but challenges to downplay its importance. To that end, Clinton campaign adviser James Carville today is saying that 'geography is a factor here.' He suggests that 'New Hampshire is no more a defining step for Bill Clinton than Tennessee would be a test for Paul Tsongas'" ("Inside Politics," 2/17). NBC's Andrea Mitchell: "No one could have predicted this finish a few weeks ago, a field of better-known Democrats in hot pursuit of Paul Tsongas" (2/17). NBC's Lisa Myers: "The improbable frontrunner calls the whole situation 'bizarre.' ... If someone had predicted months ago that Paul Tsongas would be the favorite, they would have been accused of using an illegal substance. ... The beneficiary of Clinton's troubles was the man who never attacked anyone, the man who made being uncharismatic politically chic." Bob Squier on what Tsongas should say if he wins: "He talks about his message. The only mistake I've ever seen Tsongas make, [last night talking about] money is the mother's milk of politics, and 'I've got the Big Mo' and all this political stuff. It's a danger. ... He's gotta come out of there with the same theme" (NBC, 2/18)

*3 CLINTON: WHAT WOULD 2ND PLACE IN NH MEAN?

At Clinton NH HQ, "the mood was decidedly better than it had been during the past month. The feeling was that the candidate has overcome negative publicity over allegations of marital infidelity and draft dodging" (DiStaso, Manchester UNION LEADER). Clinton spokesperson Mary Ellen Glynn said he "turned the corner" 2/13, the night where he held the first of two 30-minute Q-and-A sessions with undecided voters on WMUR (2/18). Clinton spent the day "zestfully collaring voters anywhere he could find them ... After weeks of biting winds and freezing rains and plunging temperatures and assorted scandals, the sunshine and some encouraging polls made Clinton just happy to be alive" (Von Drehle/Maraniss, W. POST, 2/18). "In an almost frantic attempt" to catch Tsongas, Clinton "made a dozen stops before a final rally attended by more than 2,000 people in Manchester. ... At one point, in Hudson, Clinton bolted from his entourage to work a line of traffic" (Shepard/May, COX/ATLANTA CONSTITUTION, 2/18). W. POST' Balz/Dionne compare Clinton's performance to the "Energizer Bunny" (2/18). USA TODAY's Nagourney notes at one point Clinton unknowingly shook the hand of "SNL's" Al Franken, and when told, said, "I know him. I'm a big fan!" (2/18). Clinton "made a ritualistic stop" at Nashua City Hall where JFK began his '60 campaign. His camp "was trying to play down expectations" with Clinton "asserting that there was a 'world of primaries to go'" (Robin Toner, N.Y. TIMES, 2/18). BOSTON GLOBE notes the Clinton motorcade was ticketed during the Nashua stop (2/18). UNION LEADER's Anthony Padovano compares Clinton's appearance in Derry to a "Hollywood movie": "More questions came from voters, not the media" (2/18). Clinton "and his aides are relieved they will leave the state in better shape than many expected 10 days ago" (Garrett/Moss, W. TIMES). Clinton: "I had more dumped on me in less time -- in a very organized, articulated way -- than any politician in living history. ... Look, when I came up here all you media folks who set the expectations said if I could crawl my way to third place, I could still win, given my base in the South and West" (2/18).

SURVIVAL FACTORS: Germond & Witcover write he has "staked his chances for recovery on one basic strategy: painting not only himself but also the voters as the victims of negative and diversionary issues" (Balto. EVENING SUN, 2/17). Clinton "has fought back with determination and energy" (Perry, W.S. JOURNAL, 2/18). Balto. SUN's Paul West: "Solid second would be great after what he's been through" (2/18). "Only a torrid schedule of one-on-one campaigning, plus two half-hour live television programs and distribution of thousands of campaign videotapes, have helped Clinton bounce back into what appears now to be a likely second-place finish" (Oman, ARKANSAS DEMOCRAT-GAZETTE, 2/18). Clinton adviser James Carville, noting no one has ever won the presidency without NH: "I'd rather be on the side that makes history instead of following history." Asked about his unshaven face, Carville responded: "I don't want to get near my throat with a razor" (Benson, NEWHOUSE NEWS, 2/18). W. POST's Richard Cohen: "No matter what happens here today, Bill Clinton is going to go on" (2/18). The "test" in NH "is particularly important" for Clinton, "giving the first verdict from the voters to the extent of the damage ... after three weeks largely dominated by reports" of his draft status and an alleged extramarital affair (Toner, N.Y. TIMES, 2/18). Germond: If Clinton "wins after all, it will be taken as an extraordinary vindication that defies the conventional wisdom." But third-place "would be curtains for his campaign" (Balto. SUN, 2/18).

TAKING TSHOTS: Clinton "worked to distinguish himself" from Tsongas: "The real issue you have to decide in [NH] is not who has the best plan, although I think I do. [The country] must have a leader who can energize and mobilize the American people" (Lilleston, ARKANSAS DEMOCRAT-GAZETTE, 2/18). "As he has for the last several days, Clinton focused his attention on" Bush: "Washington has the monument, Lincoln has the memorial and George Bush has every unemployment office in the country." But Clinton also forced a "rare shot" at Tsongas' opposition to a middle-calls tax cut: "I don't feel morally inferior because I feel the middle class has been kicked around long enough" (Shogan, L.A. TIMES, 2/18). Clinton reacted "to Tsongas' assertions that he alone is offering hard economic truths": "The implication is that the rest of us took a poll. ... I don't believe the only job of the president is to create economic opportunity. ... [It is also important] to see that we live up to our god-given potential" (Pertman/Frisby, BOSTON GLOBE, 2/18). SEATTLE POST-INTELLIGENCER's Hanson writes Clinton "laid into" Tsongas -- "hammered away" at Tsongas' electability -- saying he "had the strongest national base of any Democrat" (2/18). Clinton: "I'm the only candidate tough enough to take on the President and strong enough to lead" (COPLEY/S.D. UNION-TRIBUNE, 2/18). GLOBE's Robinson notes numbers from KRC's NH tracking. Last week, 31% cited Clinton as the "strongest candidate" for the Dems in Nov., with 18% for Tsongas. This weekend, 42% Tsongas, 9% Kerrey and 8% Clinton. Among national "party figures," a "new conventional wisdom has been born: A third Democrat will leave [NH], anointed as the potential alternative to Tsongas and Clinton" (2/18). "Clinton would be badly wounded by a second-place finish" (Crawford, ORLANDO SENTINEL). Clinton advisers "once said they had to win [NH] to put concerns about his credibility behind them" (2/18). "Clinton, whose free-falling campaign appears to have stabilized, needs to finish close to Tsongas and take his hopes to his base of support in the South" (Mathis, HOUSTON CHRONICLE, 2/18). W. POST's McGrory: "If only Tsongas had Clinton's vitality, if Clinton had Tsongas' integrity, it would have been so much easier" (2/18).

GOIN' SOUTH: After NH, Clinton heads straight to GA, with its 3/3 primary. Clinton adviser Paul Begala: "That's our firewall" (W. TIMES, 2/18). N.Y. POST's Debra Orin reports "signs" that Clinton "is retreating to the South." Asked when Clinton will go to SD, spokesperson Dee Dee Myers replied, "It's not clear whether we'll go at all." Clinton "was expected to make a big push in [SD], where he could present himself as the one true national candidate if he could defeat" Harkin and Kerrey. "Instead, word from the South is that Clinton is planning to make his big stand in [GA] ... and will head there tomorrow" (2/18). ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH's Lambrecht reports Clinton's "shifted about $500,000 in spending" to NH -- including $350K for late advertising. Kerrey manager Tad Devine "asserted that Clinton's shift in money would make Southern states more competitive" (2/18). CNN's Gene Randall: "Clinton reminded reporters Monday he once had been considered a long shot here. Campaign spin translation, why should a second place finish be upsetting?" (2/17).

*4 KERREY: UPBEAT AND LOCKED IN FIGHT FOR THIRD

He refused to make a prediction as to where he would finish today. "All he would say is that he wouldn't finish fifth" (Kotok, OMAHA WORLD-HERALD, 2/18). Kerrey to a reporter who suggested he will finish fifth in NH primary: "[Laughing] Fifth? I'm not gonna take fifth. Next question" (CNN, 2/17). Kerrey "insisted that he intended to continue his campaign no matter how he fared today": "If I walk out of here and get run over by a car, I end my campaign" (Lambrecht, ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH, 2/18). For Kerrey, "the word of the day ... was 'confident'": "I'm very confident we are going to do well here. I'm very confident we will take this beyond. I'm very confident I'll secure the nomination of my party, very confident I'll defeat my third Republican incumbent in November '92." WORLD-HERALD's Kotok notes a "noticeably upbeat, if sometimes worried, mood" in the Kerrey camp since 2/14. Kerrey aide Bill Shore called Kerrey a "changed candidate over the past few days": "Now he thinks he will the nominee of the party. ... It's perfect timing. Well, maybe he could have done it a day or two earlier" (2/18). Kerrey NH backer Joe Keefe, citing positive reviews of Kerrey's performance in the 2/16 debate: "I really feel that this campaign is peaking at the right time" (Manchester UNION LEADER, 2/18). Kerrey "has shown courage and self-deprecating humor in the final days of the campaign" (Perry, W.S. JOURNAL, 2/18). Kerrey "seemed genuinely upbeat" (Toner, N.Y. TIMES, 2/18). "Kerrey used the final day ... to rebut criticism that his preoccupation with national health insurance made him a one-note candidate" (Condon/Barabak, COPLEY/S.D. UNION-TRIBUNE, 2/18). "Admitting he has been hurt by the perception that he is a one-issue candidate, Kerrey said his national health plan would be "just the beginning of change." Kerrey "also conceded that Tsongas' emphasis on economic growth is a 'terrific message,' but pointed out that he has more practical business experience" than Tsongas: "Though I admire the plan, what counts is execution" (Shogan, L.A. TIMES, 2/18). BOSTON GLOBE's Pertman/Frisby report Kerrey "sounded every bit as confident" as Harkin in their battle for 3rd (2/18). Both Kerrey and Harkin "scrambled to remain" in the race. Kerrey "said Harkin's recent criticism of his fellow Democrats may have hurt his candidacy": "He's become Hulk Hogan in this campaign and I hope it's backfired" (Shepard/May, COX/ATLANTA CONSTITUTION, 2/18). BOSTON GLOBE's Walter Robinson, examining KRC's tracking, notes Harkin and Clinton's negative ratings "have increased markedly. Kerrey's popularity remained high" (2/18). Chants heard from Kerrey backers on Manchester's Elm St. -- At Tsongas backers: "Regional, regional." At Draft Cuomo-ites: "Don't waste your vote!" (GLOBE, 2/18). Harkin and Kerrey "sought to portray their campaigns as surging despite recent polls that show them locked in a race for a distant third place." Kerrey, who "looked visibly tired as he stumped in Manchester": "I just have to do well enough to get out of the state. We're already there" (Woodlief, BOSTON HERALD, 2/18).

WHERE FROM HERE? Regardless of the NH outcome, Kerrey is planning to go to ME and then SD tomorrow. His schedule beyond that "depends somewhat on how he fares" in NH. Trips to GA, CO and back to ME "are being considered" (WORLD-HERALD, 2/18). Kerrey "signaled his intention ... to quickly challenge" Clinton in the South; the 3/3 GA primary "is the target" (Walton, LINCOLN STAR). At a press conference with GA Sec/State Max Cleland and a group of GA supporters flown to NH, Kerrey: "I'm going to carry this all the way to the convention" (2/17).

MEDAL TALK: Speaking on his Medal of Honor at a health care forum, Kerrey said those who win medals "often just happen to have been in the right place at the right time -- and happen to have witnesses who can attest to their acts of bravery. In large part, he says, it boils to down to coincidence" (BOSTON GLOBE, 2/18). "One has to wonder how all this, even if it was some strange sort of banter, will go over" with the VFW, American Legion "and other warrior societies" (Elvin, W. TIMES, 2/18).

TV: NBC's Lisa Myers: "[Kerrey] set his sights even lower." Kerrey: "I think we just have to do well enough to get out of the state. ... One of the surprises of this campaign was Bob Kerrey for whom there were high expectation. For much of the campaign he talked of nothing but national health care, then his mantra became 'jobs, jobs, jobs.' Finally he preached 'electability'. ... He helped himself with a strong showing in the final debate but it was probably too little too late." Squier on a bad NH finish: "You so we're going to go back ... for the Midwest quarter finals. We've done okay in the East ... basically try to get the race over to the next election. The problem for them is going to be money" (2/18). Kerrey: "We'll do well here." Reporter: "What do you mean by that?" Kerrey: "I don't know what I mean, well enough." ABC's Mike Von Fremd on GOTV tactics: "Kerrey campaign has volunteers offering to babysit ... they're going to get you there come hell or high water" (ABC, 2/18)

*5 HARKIN: WILL KEEP MOVING 3RD PLACE OR NOT

At a Concord rally, he "spoke confidently" of sending "shock waves" across the country with a "strong" showing (Lambrecht, ST.

LOUIS POST-DISPATCH, 2/18). "Plagued by anemic" poll ratings, he "raised expectations by predicting an upset victory": "Tomorrow is the day we send a shock wave around this state and this country. We are going Bush-wacking and Quayle-hunting this year" (Condon/Barabak, COPLEY/S.D. UNION-TRIBUNE, 2/18). Harkin said he was confident that his two weeks worth of "stressing traditional [Dem] themes, and criticizing his opponents for 'sounding like Republicans,' has secured him a liberal base of support": "I'm going to make us all proud to be Democrats, and like a magnet pull in people who didn't vote in 1988" (Pertman/Frisby, BOSTON GLOBE). After "firing up" his workers with the "optimistic forecast of victory," he "assured" the media he would "continue regardless of where he finishes (2/18). Harkin: "We have a national campaign ready to roll" (Toner, N.Y. TIMES, 2/18). Harkin: "I can feel it. I can sense it. When we come out of here, ... we are going to Maine and South Dakota and then we'll have it in the bag." He then "touted" his 2nd place finish in the FL straw poll and his IA win. He declined to answer about finishing in the top three (Kotok/Goodsell, OMAHA WORLD-HERALD, 2/18). Balto. SUN's West writes, "No worse than third, or it's all over for Kerrey," and "ditto" for Harkin (2/18). Many analysts think that the one who loses the battle for third place is likely to be wounded beyond repair" for '92 (Hansen, Seattle POST-INTELLIGENCER, 2/18). But, "with misgivings about Tsongas and Clinton," the 3rd-place finisher could leave NH "with an argument for continuing" on, which could be "vital" in the search for money and "fatal for the candidate who comes in fourth" (Crawford, ORLANDO SENTINEL, 2/18). NBC's Lisa Myers: "[Harkin] appealed labor and liberals to carry him a respectable third. ... While Tsongas took the high road, Harkin took the opposite approach. Harkin claimed to be the only real Democrat in this race. He certainly was the only pushing a new New Deal" (2/18).

*6 CUOMO: COUNTING HIS KISSES

He said he regarded every write-in vote he gets today as "an embrace and a kiss from a stranger," but predicted he wouldn't do well "because voters might think he was being 'cute'" (Toner, N.Y. TIMES). He also said "he regretted not being able to run, 'particularly now because there is ambiguity'" (2/18). W.S. JOURNAL's Perry: "Vote counters warned that tonight's returns, even ... exit polls, might not accurately reflect his vote, which ... will take time to figure out" (2/18). Balto. SUN's Paul West: "After egging on write-in campaign ... the yolk's on him unless he gets over 15 percent" (2/18). Dem consultant Ann Lewis: "If Mario Cuomo ends up in double digits, it is a message from a significant portion of the primary electorate that they want another choice" (B. GLOBE, 2/18). Draft Cuomo organizer Don Rose: "Double digits, I'd be ecstatic. Fifteen percent, I'd be orgasmic" (S.F. EXAMINER, 2/18). Rose: "If he were on the ballot here, he would have 50% cold." N.Y. DAILY NEWS' Nelson writes NH Cuomo backers "are hoping they get 12%." But support for Cuomo "has slipped, one telephone solicitor said, as Clinton has regained strength" (2/18). UNH's Kelly Meyers: "I don't see a big draft movement for Cuomo here. Cuomo has dragged his feet for too long" (C.S. MONITOR, 2/18). ORLANDO SENTINEL's Crawford: "Late polls showed he could challenge those in the field for a third-place showing" (2/18). USA TODAY's Wolf: "Some analysts wouldn't be surprised by a third-place finish" (2/18). COX NEWS' Shepard/Malone's "Great Expector": Under 6% -- "write him off as a dud." 20% -- "automatic Time and Newsweek covers" (ATLANTA CONSTITUTION, 2/18). Cuomo Biographer Robert McElwane: "I expect him to be in the race within the next several weeks" (UNION LEADER, 2/18).

7 BROWN: CLAIMS HE'S THE ONLY DEM WHO CAN WIN THE WHITE HOUSE

At NH College, declaring his "insurgent" campaign is the "only one" that can win the WH, because his rivals are "patty-cake Democrats" who "cannot unseat" Bush, Brown "delivered a blanket denunciation on the electability issue," naming Kerrey, Tsongas and Clinton by name in a "sardonic" speech (Milne, BOSTON GLOBE). Brown: "If the American people want a pro-business candidate, they're going to pick Bush, not Tsongas. If they want a Southern conservative, they're not going to pick one from Arkansas, they're going to take Bush from Texas. If they want a war hero, they're not going to pick Kerrey, they're going to take Bush. ... All those images that feel so good in February are going to be empty and meaningless by the time we get to November" (2/15). S.F. CHRONICLE's Roberts recounts Brown, working his way through an "enthusiastic" crowd after a speech, was approached by a middle-aged woman who wanted to know about his health care program. "These medical costs are killing us -- I have to use an anti-histamine and each bottle costs me $87 a month." Brown: "Try this nasal spray," reaching into his denim jacket and "whipping out" an over-the-counter remedy. Roberts writes, "The vignette spoke volumes about the quixotic nature" of his campaign (2/15). Brown, arriving at Manchester West High School, was greeted by the entire student council, who ditched their usual coat and tie attire for meeting the candidates, in favor of turtlenecks (Milne, BOSTON GLOBE, 2/15). Brown scoffed at Sunday night's debate: "It's like this self-contained bubble, some kind of Gong Show. You sit there and they pop these little questions." His staff patched together clips from both appearances into a 30-minute ad that aired on WMUR-TV last night. L.A. TIMES' Robert Shogan notes Brown is "last, roughly tied with support for a write-in movement" for Cuomo (2/18). Brown reiterated he would not bow out no matter how he does in NH: "To expect everything to be resolved by New Hampshire is silly. No one believes that whoever wins [NH] is going to get the nomination. They're expecting Cuomo. They're expecting other things to happen" (Shepard/Malone, ATLANTA CONSTITUTION, 2/18).

8 MAINE: BROWN ENDORSED BY ATTORNEY GENERAL

Hoping to make inroads where Jesse Jackson finished second in '88, Brown won the backing of AG Michael Carpenter (D): "Over the past weeks, I have spoken to a number of Democrats who fundamentally agree with Governor Brown's positions. I urge them to speak their conscience" (Brown release, 2/18). Clinton's key ME backer is Portland Mayor Tom Allen. Kerrey's top ME backers are Sec/State Bill Diamond and Senate pres. Charlie Pray.

9 SOUTH DAKOTA: CLINTON TO SKIP APPEARANCES

Harkin, Kerrey and Tsongas will go to SD this week, in and around Sunday's SD Dem forum 2/23. Since neither is expected to win NH, "experts" say neighbors Harkin and Kerrey "are not guaranteed to win." Jack Germond: "If Kerrey and Harkin both get enough to survive [in NH], I think there's going to be a lot of attention given to [SD] for some type of showdown for these two farmer Democrats." Though write-in candidates aren't allowed in SD, there is a Cuomo organizer named Bill Walsh (Walker, ARGUS LEADER, 2/17). SD "could turn into a two-man contest between Kerrey and Harkin, with the loser seriously, if not fatally, damaged" (Orin, N.Y. POST, 2/18). Tsongas has his father-in-law, Russ Sauvage, an ex-USD football "star," campaigning for him (Germond, Balto. SUN, 2/17). ARGUS LEADER's Matt Cecil notes SD Dems will be watching the NH results closely as they focus on their primary this week (2/18).

*10 UPCOMING STATES

IL (3/17): CHICAGO TRIBUNE's Thomas Hardy notes different scenarios. Clinton "recognized early" that winning IL "was an important first step for him beyond the South, and so he wired it" better than the others. If he emerges from NH and the South unscathed, IL "can propel him onward to" OH, NY, PA, and CA. But if Super Tuesday can't "resuscitate" Clinton, IL "could become a duel between Tsongas and the survivor of the intramural battle" between Harkin and Kerrey. But "if Clinton fades from the picture and Tsongas proves to be a one-vote wonder, the pivotal Harkin-Kerrey dustup could come in Illinois, where only those two men and Clinton managed to file complete delegate slates." Cuomo write-in chair Don Rose, a Chicago consultant: "If [Clinton's] still bleeding, it becomes more important for Mario Cuomo and the others" (2/16).

NY (4/7): Though candidates can challenge the names of those who petitioned, it is a "cumbersome, nasty process, and this year all parties attempted to forge a nonaggression pact, insuring that nobody would make any challenges." NY Dem chair John Marino "said the agreement unraveled" because Clinton's campaign -- "about whom the Cuomo camp has rarely said a kind word -- went back on its word." But Clinton NY chief Harold Ickes "denies it": "Our position has always been that we would not make technical challenges. But people need to have 10,000 signatures. That's the law." Marino: "It's a primary. The voters should get to decide who's in it and who wins it." Signature count: Clinton -- 48,281; Harkin -- 38,803; Kerrey -- 20,685; Brown -- 19,413; Tsongas 13,952 (N.Y. TIMES, 2/16).

*11 VULTURE WATCH: 48 HOURS STARTS TONIGHT

USA TODAY's Richard Wolf looks at 3 scenarios. 1) Cuomo, "buoyed by write-in efforts in several states, could be sought by party leaders as the most eloquent messenger." Rep. Tom Downey (D-NY): "The governor would have the home-field advantage if it comes down to [NY]." 2) Gephardt, "whose 1988 emphasis on jobs and fair trade would fit well this year, may be urged to take an earlier leap." House Dems meet tomorrow to discuss superdelegate rules; "many would be eager to pay Gephardt back for years of campaigning in their districts." 3) Bentsen "would get support from state party leaders who view him as most electable, regardless of ideology." TX Dem chair Bob Slagle: "The perception among a lot of party people is that you need a centrist. Something that could be put in the field quite rapidly" (2/18).

GEPHARDT: After an AFL-CIO meeting, Gephardt gave a "stem-winding" speech indicating "to many in his audience that he was ready to seek the [Dem] nomination should the current ... candidates falter" (Swoboda, W. POST, 2/18). House Speaker Tom Foley (D-WA) said "it would be valuable to the party" for Cuomo to run but also said he'd support Gephardt if he got in. Sen. Maj. Ldr George Mitchell (D-ME): "Democracy is best served by competition, the more candidates, the better" (AP/W. TIMES,

2/18).. Local MO officials "expect to go uncommitted -- and stay that way until such time Gephardt himself endorses a candidate." MO Dem chair Eugene Bushmann says he hears "an awful lot of talk in party circles about people going to the [3/10] caucuses uncommitted" (Schlinkmann, ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH, 2/15).

JACKSON: Speaking to a group of black elected Dems in Albany: "There is obviously a lot of pressure on me to reconsider. Public service is always an option. I have not made that decision." Jackson, who has not endorsed any of the candidates and sees "a gap between the candidates' focus and the country's needs": "A lot of people do not feel a kinship with anybody ... running" (AP/N.Y. POST, 2/18).

TV: Ailes: "Mario's going to stay out of this thing now" (NBC, 2/18). Squier on Gephardt, Gore, Bentsen, etc: "All of them are being called by an awful lot of people ... [they're all] giving it some thought." Ailes: "Bentsen doesn't want to give up his country club memberships again, he already did it once" (NBC, 2/18)

*12 BUSH: "EXPECTED TO TAKE SOME LICKS," MAYBE MORE

With today's vote, "the nation will learn whether President Bush faces a serious renomination fight" (Connolly, BOSTON HERALD, 2/18). "What the voters ... have already done, however, is remind Mr. Bush of the short tether of elective office" (Toner, N.Y. TIMES). NH GOPers "will essentially decide whether he gets to turn his sights to [Dems] or leaves here limping and embarrassed, forced to contend with Mr. Buchanan in states down the road" (2/18). Bush "is expected to take some licks today in a ... primary that has become a sounding board for his critics and a referendum on his leadership" (Page, N.Y. NEWSDAY, 2/18). "In the end, Mr. Bush almost seemed to be begging for sympathy" (Perry, W.S. JOURNAL, 2/18). W. POST's Balz/Dionne: "Partisans of both Bush and Buchanan were themselves unsure about what benchmark to use as a measure of Buchanan's success ... The Bush [WH] is now as worried about journalists' interpretations ... as it is about what the voters here will actually do." CoS Sam Skinner "urged reporters to focus on Bush's expected victory, and not the margin. ... One imponderable is the behavior of [GOP] moderates who are unhappy with Bush but despise Buchanan's right-wing views. If a fair share of Republicans do the same," NH Bush adviser Tom Rath and others "predict that up to 10 percent" might go to write-ins or one of 23 other GOPers on the ballot (2/18). Bush: "I don't know how to sort it out. I am content that people in the final analysis will say look, we're not looking for a ... quick political fix. ... I think that message has gotten across" (WFEA radio, 2/18). Bush: "I've been encouraged that the margins look pretty good. [But] I'm not going to set the bar over which I have to leap" (WOKQ radio, 2/18). His early morning calls to many NH radio stations "were a sign of the unease with which his strategists view" NH (Hines, HOUSTON CHRONICLE, 2/18). L.A. TIMES' Decker notes Bush only once referred to Buchanan directly, calling him "this guy" (2/18). Campaign chair Bob Teeter in a widely quoted comment: "It doesn't matter what [NH] does. Pat Buchanan is not going to win the [GOP] nomination." Bush aides "are working hard to defeat a presumption" that if Buchanan gets 35-40% "that will signal deep vulnerability for Bush" in the fall (Shanahan, NEWHOUSE NEWS, 2/18).

MORE EXPECTATIONS: Jack Germond writes if Buchanan gets 35% or more it's a "slap" at Bush. If he gets over 40%, the WH "will be severely enough embarrassed to set off a round of serious hand-wringing and demands for a new strategy." But if Bush gets over 60% with Buchanan under 35%, the Bush camp "will be able to dismiss the challenge as more of a nuisance than a serious threat" (Balto. SUN, 2/18). KNIGHT-RIDDER's Fiedler/Boyd: "Could deliver a major embarrassment to President Bush ... Most analysts agree that if Bush fails to defeat Buchanan by a 2-1 ratio ... [he] could be vulnerable in the fall" (2/18). COX NEWS' Shepard/Malone cite "Great Expectator" pick of 2-1 as well (ATLANTA CONSTITUTION, 2/18). NEWSDAY's Page agrees, "as a rough rule of thumb" (2/18). NH Bush adviser Tom Rath: "Getting to 60 percent for us will be a reach" (Manchester UNION LEADER, 2/18). Rath "feared that Buchanan will do better than" 30 percent (W. POST, 2/18). Balto. SUN's Paul West: "Nothing less than a 2-to-1 landslide will do" (2/18). Skinner: "We'll do well ... but this is [NH] and [NH] has a record of talking practically" (W. TIMES, 2/18). SEATTLE POST-INTELLIGENCER's Hanson: "Most analysts agree a Buchanan vote of 40 percent or higher would be humiliating for Bush, but few expect it." Ex-NH Dem chair Joe Grandmaison "expected Bush to win by a 2-to-1 ratio" (2/18). Bush is "struggling to keep Buchanan at the roughly 30% level" (Decker, L.A. TIMES, 2/18).

TV: CNN's Charles Bierbauer: "The sense here is that there's not a lot more that can be done ... The Bush campaign seems anxious to get it over. ... counting on a shift away from [NH's] press-the-flesh politics and into the dimension of big money media campaigning to allow the president to distance himself from his challenger" ("Inside Politics," 2/17). CBS' Eric Engberg: "At times, [Bush] seemed to be preparing the ground for an embarrassment, portraying [NH] as somehow untypical of the nation because of its economic hard times" (2/17). Bush on WMUR-TV: "Don't worry about trying to send some message ... I'm staying out of these numbers games. ... They [NH voters] don't want to turn this country over to those five Democrats who are carping and criticizing." Barbara Bush on criticism of George Bush: "I don't listen" (2/17). Barbara Bush [in NH]: "George Bush wants me to thank you all... remind you to get out and please vote for him and remember you're voting for president, you're not voting to send a message" (ABC, 2/18). NBC's Jim Miklaszewski: "For George Bush this wasn't even supposed to be a contest, [but Buchanan] has made it a bare-knuckles political street fight. ... [NH] primaries always seem to bring out the worst in Republicans. Look what happened Monday when Bush and Buchanan volunteers played 'High Noon' on the streets of Manchester." Video of Bush supporters and Buchanan supporters in a rumble. Miklaszewski: "Negative TV ads helped Bush win the nomination, and the White House. Buchanan learned the lesson well." MANCHESTER UNION LEADER's Joe McQuaid: "Bush has a choice ... He can either repudiate his record or run on it. Neither one is that good an idea." Miklaszewski: "The Democrats are loving it. ... Anything over 30% for Buchanan would embarrass the president and embolden the Democrats. ... Bush will know he's been roughed up. ... In some ways Buchanan has already embarrassed Bush" (NBC, 2/18). Is there a "bottom line number" Bush needs to "express lack of concern?" Ailes: "Whatever it is the media will spin higher than that so it won't matter." Will the WH spin lower?" Ailes: "Absolutely" (NBC, 2/18). ABC's Ann Compton: "The president is facing far rougher sledding than he ever expected. ... The polls show he'll get at least 50% of the vote but the president hardly considers that a big psychological victory." Bush: "I don't think I've tried to predict ... I've tried to stay out of this ghastly, overnight polling projection thing ... all I want to do is win, hopefully convincingly." Compton: "Buchanan stumped through [NH] predicting tonight's results will be a rude awakening for the political establishment." Compton: "If Buchanan does get ... 30% ... he can do two things. ... Pressure the Bush campaign to move farther to the right ... or two ... keep up the momentum as we move to Super Tuesday" ABC's Cokie Roberts on Buchanan's "threshold" of success: "Anything over 30% gives him momentum ... anything over 33-34% ... he does seriously hurt the president" (ABC, 2/18) CBS' Eric Enberg: "President Bush ... actually had to face a formidable challenge here. ... Should Buchanan roll up a substantial percentage of the vote, Republicans all across American will start to ask, 'Is George Bush's time passed?' Mr. Bush, who put only four days into this state and was outspent 3-1 in advertising, was still appealing for votes from Washington by telephone last night." Bush: "Don't worry about trying to send some message ... let's put the person in who has the proven leadership worldwide" (CBS, 2/18).

SOME GOOD NEWS: ABC's Jeff Greenfield last night: "Bush's greatest strength in 1992 is that he gets to run against the Democrats" ("Nightline," 2/17). U-WI's Charles Jones, writing in C.S. MONITOR, and N.Y. DAILY NEWS' Bob Herbert agree (2/18). W. POST's Stuart Auerbach writes "key corporate executives who deal with Japan are viewing" Bush's recent trip there "as a success that could produce expanded business and create the jobs for American workers [Bush] said he was aiming for" (2/18).

MORE: Barbara Bush, campaigning in NH, told voters "George wishes he were here, but he has a job. He works for a living" (UNION LEADER, 2/18). Header over W. POST's David Broder: "The Schwarzenegger Effect." The actor's recent appearance, like Reagan for Nixon '60, "overshadowed" Bush "in personality and presence. ... Bush normally looks and sounds like a vigorous leader, but ... [he] seemed a shrimp. And his message at the moment is notably limp" (2/18). N.Y. TIMES profiles WH physician Burton Lee (2/18). W. POST's Jim Hoagland: "To misinterpret [a good Bush win] as an important statement about isolationism would send shock waves throughout Europe" (2/18). Ex-DE Gov. Pete DuPont on Bush's denial of taking the NH tax pledge: "There's no question that no new taxes was the centerpiece of his campaign. It's just plain wrong to argue now that it was never his position" (W.S. JOURNAL, 2/18). W. POST's Thomas Edsall writes SC GOP voters "repeatedly voice concerns that [Bush] has not lived up to the standards of their conservatism. But their loyalty ... suggests that Bush's challengers face uphill battles here" (2/18). BOSTON GLOBE's Black/Kranish note Bush stayed in DC yesterday "partly" to meet with GOP leaders on the econ. bill, "though there were no events on his public schedule." On WBZ-TV Boston last night, he "again denied" Buchanan's charge he dropped his $500/child tax credit from the package, saying he "put it in a second bill that he has sent to Congress and that he wants passed this year" (2/18).

HMMMM: NH weather forecasts indicate snow likely this afternoon -- "a prospect that troubles [WH] strategists and elates Buchanan." Sister Bay Buchanan: "If it snows, George Bush's people may just stay home" (S.D. UNION-TRIBUNE, 2/18).

*13 BUCHANAN: HISTORY AND CAMPAIGN, MADE OR BROKEN

Claiming "tremendous momentum," (Lambrecht, ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH, 2/18), the "ebullient, boasting, even gleeful,"

Buchanan, ran roughshod across the countryside like a bull on the loose," (Decker, L.A. TIMES, 2/18), retracing the "worn threads of the campaign trail one last time, calling on party voters to make history" (Black/Kranish, BOSTON GLOBE, 2/18), winding up his "slash-and-burn campaign" with a prediction that he'll "embarrass" Bush (Dahl, ST. PETE. TIMES, 2/18). At a driving range, holding a golf ball with "Bush" printed on it, Buchanan said, "There's a chance this could be the pistol shot that really is heard around the world" (L.A. TIMES, 2/18). He also continued his "assault" on Bush, switching from the $500 per child tax credit to charging Bush's proposed tax cuts are too small, telling Boston's WBZ-TV, "He imposed $165-billion in new taxes, which got us in the recession, and now he's got these pathetic little tax cuts that he says that are going to get us out" (ST. PETE. TIMES, 2/18). He appeared on WBZ-TV immediately after Bush was interviewed by the station and WH officials are "concerned" it has "made an impact" with NH voters. "Whether the charge is fair," the interview "indicated" it is an issue that "put Bush on the defensive on election eve, not a scenario that the Bush campaign wanted" (B. GLOBE, 2/18). He also aired a new ad featuring the "bitter" testimonial of a man "rejecting" Bush's claim that he understands the "suffering" of NH. MAN: "By going to J.C. PENNEY's and buying socks?" (West, Balto. SUN, 2/18). GLOBE's Walter Robinson, writing on the latest poll, says it suggests Buchanan's weekend attack on Bush, has "damaged" Bush with voters. Bush NH adviser Tom Rath said Buchanan's "latest attack" on the tax credit, "may have cost" Bush the undecided vote and is "likely" to produce a result that will "force" Bush to battle Buchanan in the GA primary (2/18). "To the dismay of [WH] strategists," Buchanan's effort has "generated enough support and raised enough money that it almost assuredly will continue on" to GA 3/3 and Super Tuesday 3/10 (Page, NEWSDAY, 2/18). Bush "aides" have said if Buchanan gets over 35%, "Bush would be embarrassed, enabling Buchanan to go on to wage a serious campaign for primary support in the South (B. GLOBE, 2/18). "What really matters is whether Buchanan's showing ... is perceived as a victory. That would allow him to cast himself as a serious alternative, rather than a vehicle for sending Bush a message" (Groer, ORLANDO SENTINEL, 2/18). The key to Buchanan's performance will be turnout with a high one expected to benefit Bush, whose supporters "tend to be less enthusiastic," than Buchanan's (L.A. TIMES, 2/18). Raft: "The big thing for us is turnout" (DiStaso, Manchester UNION LEADER, 2/18). ABC's Brit Hume: "The White House is worried that a low turnout would help Buchanan whose exuberant supporters are considered certain to vote, but getting people out to help an incumbent president who's expected to win anyway just to enlarge his margin of victory is another matter" (2/17). His effort has "also exposed the ineptitude of the [WH] political operation, at least in the eyes of political professionals of both parties" (Apple, N.Y. TIMES, 2/18). USA TODAY's Nagourney writes "it's uncertain" whether he can repeat his feat in the South. He "hasn't invested a fraction of [the] time, energy or money" in other states that he did in NH, and his treasury has been "almost depleted by a saturation buy" of NH TV ads (2/18).

E-GAME ROUND-UP: UNION LEADER editorial: "Buchanan wins whatever the outcome" (2/18). "Most analysts agree a Buchanan vote of 40 percent or higher would be humiliating for Bush, but few expect it" (Hansen, Seattle P-I, 2/18). S.F EXAMINER's Jacobs: "If he gets 38 percent or more, Bush is wounded, perhaps badly" (2/18). Buchanan aide Paul Erickson, "If we break 30%, we'll be delighted" (Benedetto, USA TODAY, 2/18). Bush supporter, Rep. Bill Zeliff (R-NH): "It's a political hit if he (Buchanan) gets over 40." Buchanan finance chair Brent Bozel: "Anything less than 2-1 ... would be frighteningly embarrassing for Bush" (ORLANDO SENTINEL, 2/18). NEW YORK magazine's Joe Klein: "Buchanan's 40% was set by Gene McCarthy" (Rosenstiel, L.A. TIMES, 2/18). Bay Buchanan: "The chairman of the party says if George Bush doesn't get 75 percent, he's embarrassed. We're looking to embarrass him" (ST. PETE TIMES, 2/18). Balto. SUN's PAUL WEST: "35% boosts him into the next primaries" (2/18). Rath "feared" Buchanan will "do better than the near 30 percent" he gets now (Balz/Dionne, WASH POST, 2/18). Buchanan "refused" to predict his showing, saying only that he would "remain" in the race until the 8/92 Houston convention (Toner, N.Y. TIMES, 2/18), and "If the president's campaign is as clean, fair and tough as ours is, and he beats me, then I'll support" the GOP nominee (Hallow/Bedard, WASH. TIMES, 2/18). Balto. SUN editorial, "One should never underestimate the penchant of [NH] voters to embarrass [WH] residents" (2/18). A BOSTON HERALD editorial urges voters to pick Buchanan to let Bush know "just how deeply he has failed those who trusted him" (2/17).

LAST-MINUTE FLAK: Bush chair Bob Teeter: "It doesn't matter what New Hampshire does. Pat Buchanan is not going to win the nomination" (NEWHOUSE/B. GLOBE, 2/18). Bay Buchanan called Teeter's comment, "insulting and arrogant" Teeter denies making the quote (B. HERALD, 2/18).

CAMPAIGN: He was followed around 2/17 by NY Rabbi Avi Weiss, carrying a sign reading: "Pat = Duke without sheets (Orin, N.Y. POST, 2/18). N.Y. TIMES' Rosenthal takes issue with the "America First" theme (2/18). Sign in Cedar Rapids, NH: "CEDAR WATERS NUDIST PARK -- Sail, Sun, Swim, Camping lots." Underneath, in red, white & blue: "Buchanan for President." Bush "isn't laughing" (Trounstine, S.J. MERCURY NEWS, 2/16).

TV: NBC's John Cochran: "They're predicting here he [Buchanan] may get 38 to 42%, but they don't believe it. If he gets that high George Bush is seriously embarrassed and may be in trouble on Super Tuesday down South" (2/17). Manchester UNION LEADER's Joe McQuaid: "Probably 60/30. If Buchanan does 35 to 40 it will knock everything on it's head. ... Buchanan may have already won by coming up here. ... If Pat Buchanan got 40% tomorrow all bets are off" ("Larry King Live," CNN, 2/17). ABC's Jeff Greenfield: "Going strictly on gut, I think Pat Buchanan's going to do well up here. ... At 35% you hear murmurs and at 40% you hear roars" (WMUR-TV Manchester, 2/17). Ex-Reagan adviser Mitch Daniels: "The president's ... decision ... to decline ... to become negative against Buchanan probably cost him a few points" ("Nightline," ABC, 2/17). CNN's Candy Crowley: "Despite the upbeat mood on the Buchanan bus, probably not even Pat Buchanan believes he will win these primaries tomorrow, but he would like to take a substantial chunk out of George Bush. Win or lose Buchanan says he will go on to the convention. There the measure of success for Buchanan may not be whether he comes out on top but rather how far he has pushed George Bush to the right" ("Inside Politics," 2/17). WMUR's Matt Nesto: "Regardless of how he fares in the polls tomorrow Patrick J. Buchanan has definitely left a mark on the Granite state" (WMUR, 2/17).

"Concluding that Duke supporters "had not collected enough nominating signatures," the IL Board of Elections voted 8-0 to remove Duke's name from the 3/17 ballot (Karwath, CHICAGO TRIBUNE). Supporters who appeared at the hearing "acknowledged" they didn't collect the required 3,000 signatures, but "argued" Duke should be on the ballot anyway "because he is a viable presidential candidate." Duke supporter Dawn Larson: "There's not an adult in this country who doesn't know that David Duke is running for president and what he stands for." But the board agreed with four other groups, including one headed by state Rep. Clem Balanoff (D), that Duke had, "at best," 2,778 "legitimate" signatures. Larson said supporters had "contacted" the IL ACLU about an appeal, but IL ACLU exec. dir. Jay Miller said, "If they got kicked off legitimately for not having enough signatures, I don't see that there is that much we can do" (2/15). HOUSTON CHRONICLE's Freemantle writes, Duke "has yet to mount a campaign that puts him nearer than the outermost fringes of the contest," and, according to observers, is "unlikely to be much of a factor" in Super Tuesday. While he "opted to forgo" IA and NH and "concentrate" on the South, where he "felt he had a better chance," according to N.O. consultant Jim Carvin, "He hasn't been much of a factor" (2/13). Appearing on the ballot for the first time in SC 3/7, Duke faces strong opposition there. Gov Carroll Campbell (R), a "leader of Bush's Southern campaign," hopes to "deal a mortal blow" to Duke in SC. U. of SC's Earl Black says GOPers "wanted" Duke's campaign in SC, a Bush "stronghold, while denying him" state's like GA and FL: "The [SC GOP] created no barriers to Duke's entrance, feeling this would be the best state in the South to take David Duke head on." Duke SC chair Wm Carter agrees, "It was part of the Bush strategy to lure Duke" into SC, but says Duke will return twice before 3/7 and will buy time for a 30-minute video. Campbell, for his part, has already "launched a hard-ball campaign against Duke, saying, "David Duke is a charlatan." Yet, the "personal attacks on Duke by leaders of Bush's re-election campaign may represent a recognition of the difficulty of attacking him on issues." Campbell has said his problem is "with the messenger, not his message" (Ota, Portland OREGONIAN, 2/13). Other states Duke is eyeing include TX and MS, both of which "could be fertile ground for a crusade against affirmative action, the welfare system, illegal immigration and most programs that benefit minority systems." Duke natl coordinator Howie Farrell said Duke will "concentrate" on TX and "predicted" Duke also carrying MS and LA. Farrell: "I think he can lead the pack in Texas. Bush positioned himself as a Duke-type candidate in 1988 and has since reneged on those promises. The guy said he was an apple tree and his fruit turned out to be persimmon." GOP consultant Karl Rove: "His chances in Texas are slim and none. I don't think there are that many unreconstructed Klansmen and Nazi sympathizers who vote in the Republican primary" (HOUSTON CHRONICLE, 2/13). The FEC ruled Duke can accept speaking fees, as long as he doesn't use the appearance to "seek support" for his bid (N.O. TIMES-PICAYUNE, 2/14).

Analyst Charles Cook writes one "likely" question to be asked tomorrow is "Where is David Duke?" While he has been "out of the limelight" for the past few months, "many suspect" it's been intentional, not wanting to "distract" anything from Buchanan's efforts. "It is clearly in Duke's interest for Buchanan to score high, bloody the President and make GOP primary voters think it's okay to vote" against the pres. The issues agenda in NH is also different. "Interestingly," Duke and Buchanan's success may be "inversely related to the perceived chance" Dems have of taking the WH. Cook explains that, as long as Dems seem to pose no threat of capturing the WH, GOPers can "feel comfortable" holding Bush's "feet to the fire." If Dems get their act together, Bush then "looks a great deal better" (ROLL CALL, 2/18).

*15 POTPOURRI

AUDIO DISCLAIMERS: The FCC revised a key regulation that is put in place 12/91: Beginning 4/1, campaigns no longer must use audio disclaimers in ads. According to People for the American Way and the Media Access Project, who petitioned the FCC for such regulations, the new decision is a "dramatic departure" for the FCC and "in response to collaborative requests filed" by the DNC and RNC (PFAW release, 2/14). The FCC did rule that visual disclaimer occupy 4% of the screen for at least 4 seconds. The two parties argued that the audio disclaimer infringed unfairly on shorter ads, of the 10-second or so variety (W. POST, 2/17).

SOFT MONEY: Common Cause hailed the commitment made to the organization by the Dems pres. campaigns not to use soft money in the presidential election "as long as" the GOP doesn't. Brown's campaign went further, stating they would use it under any circumstances. But neither Bush nor Buchanan's campaign responded to Common Cause (Release, 2/14).

NETWORK NEWS: For the week of 2/10-14, according to analyst Andrew Tyndall's "Campaign Countdown," of the big three networks, ABC had the most political coverage with 28 minutes, followed by NBC at 24 and CBS at 13. For the same week four years ago, it was CBS and NBC tied at 46 minutes, followed by ABC at 38 (Release, 2/16).

CNN DEBATE REVIEWS: N.Y. TIMES editorial states the debate "fell short" as question asked were "often basic and repetitive, posed as though the candidates had not been put through virtually the same hoops only 16 days ago" (2/18). PHILA. INQUIRER editorial applauds the candidates: "When it was over, CNN's guest analysts came on to tell us that the candidates had blown another big opportunity, that no one had leapt from the pack or drawn blood from the front-running Mr. Tsongas. If Sunday's debate is what passes for failure in today's politics, then we say: Hail to the losers" (2/18).

*18 VIETNAM: BABY BOOMER'S ALBATROSS?

Under subhead, "Vietnam, the draft, sex and drugs: as the baby-boom generation moves into presidential politics, how vulnerable will the candidates be?" NEWSWEEK's Bill Tueque writes, "An emerging generation of presidential contenders who came of age in the 1960s are finding the crosscurrents of character politics more treacherous than ever. ... Their personal histories are testaments to the cleaving passions of that decade. ... The generational sword cuts across party lines. Quayle bled; he's likely to do so again if he runs for president in 1996. Yet the '60s -- and Vietnam in particular -- remain a predominantly Democratic dilemma." Clinton, in an interview with NEWSWEEK: "I've always honored the military and the soldiers ... I just have to hope that people will judge me as a prospective commander in chief in the way they judge [Sec/Defense] Dick Cheney, who had a [draft] deferment ... I just have to hope that [my part] will all be seen in context" (2/24 issue). ST. LOUIS POST DISPATCH editorial: "Voters pondering who their next president will be should not consider [Clinton's] letter a strike against him. ... [His stance] was consistent, conscientious, compassionate and courageous. He had a right to be proud of it then -- and now as well" (2/14). TIME's Lance Morrow writes, "The Clinton letter had a certain amount of turbulent historical context. If the letter had any importance, it needed to be judged in terms of the agitated time in which Clinton wrote. ... [It] had hard clarity: a ring of truth and pain of conscience" (2/24 issue). Rep. Tom Downey (D-NY): The Clinton episode "raises questions of whether anyone of my generation will ever be president" (Pruden, W. TIMES, 2/16). NEWSWEEK's David Hackworth asserts had Clinton been "eager" to serve, "I would question his credentials as presidential material. ... It would be refreshing for a leader to tell the truth. 'I did it, and I'm proud' would probably win more voters than the best damage control could ever do." Hackworth notes Robert Kennedy and LBJ Sec/Defense Robert McNamara "went down the same road" Clinton did (2/24 issue). Kerrey: "Let me say this campaign should focus on the economic war we are in today now that the cold War is over. Let me say in regards to my friend Gov. Clinton, the Vietnam War is over and we should not refight that war again" (Michael Cousineau, Manchester UNION LEADER, 2/15). Even Kerrey "often finds his war record is more of a burden than a blessing": "I've sometimes had to explain why I was willing to fight at all" (Tueque, NEWSWEEK, 2/24 issue). Balto. SUN header: "Clinton just one in army of war avoiders" (2/16). NATION's Andrew Kopkind notes, "Twenty years ago, Clinton could have been a hero of either kind. Now he is not even viable" (2/14). U.S. NEWS' Steven Roberts writes, "The choices made by all five Democrats -- and by millions of other people -- can be defended morally. What is harder to defend is a lack of candor about such choices. This year, Americans want a straight shooter, even if that man had never held a rifle" (2/24 issue).

*19 COLORADO: SMALL SAMPLE POLL HAS CONSIDINE W/WIDE GOP LEAD
 A KUSA-TV poll, conducted 2/11-13 by Ciruli Associates, surveyed 202 registered voters; margin of error +/- 6.9% (Ciruli release, 2/14). Primary 8/11. Dem: Sen. Tim Wirth. GOP: Ex-state Sen. Terry Considine (R), ex-Amb. to Bahrain Sam Zakhem, state Rep. Ken Chlouber, Doug Fain, John Donley.

Considine	45%	Chlouber	3%
Zakhem	7	Fain	2
Donley	6	Don't know	37

*20 PENNSYLVANIA: A SPECTER OF HOPE FOR THE DEMS?

PHILA. INQUIRER header: "3 Democrats gear up in race for Senate bid." LG Mark Singel (D), Allegheny Co. DA Bob Colville (D) and activist Lynn Yeakel (D) all say their bids for Sen. Arlen Specter's (R) seat "will be about jobs, economic growth and affordable health care." Singel, "considered" the front-runner, is hurting in $-raising because Gov. Bob Casey (D) "actively discouraged" a Singel run. His $500,000 is "half of what is considered the minimum" for a TV ad campaign. Colville, who has $90,000, is "depending" on the support of "powerful" Allegheny Co. Commis. Tom Foerster and the Western PA bias for local candidates. Yeakel, who has $300,000 and has never run for office, is targeting voters "frustrated by the business of politics." She is also approaching DC women's orgs for money (Gorenstein, 2/17). INQUIRER's Melissa Dribben on state Rep. Steve Freind (R) calling himself "Mainstream? ... What tributary could he possibly be thinking of?" (2/17). TIME writes Specter has been "running into some mighty irritated women voters ... many are still miffed over his treatment of Anita Hill" (2/24 issue). Primary: 4/28.

*21 UTAH: RUMOR HAS GARN LEAVING SENATE EARLY FOR NASA

"Rumors are launching again," that retiring Sen. Jake Garn (R) "could become" the next NASA head. And, "if he somehow did get the job, it would send Utah politics into a spin" (Lee Davidson, DESERET NEWS). Setting off the speculation was Garn's inclusion in a list of possible replacements to NASA head Richard Truly published by the WASH. POST 2/14. If Garn was appointed, he would have to resign early from his seat, allowing Gov. Norm Bangerter (R) to appoint a successor, possibly one of the GOPers now running for Garn's seat. "That may or may not give" ex-Geneva Steel exec. Joe Cannon, ex-US Atty Brent Ward, Public Services commissioner Ted Stewart and businessman Brent Ward an "edge in their battle" to keep the seat against Rep. Wayne Owens (D-02). But Garn spokesperson Mimi Harrison: "[Garn] is leaving Washington for personal and family reasons. If he had a desire to stay in Washington, he would run for the Senate again." Most published reports say Garn has only an "outside shot" at the office, and, "in what would likely hurt his chances," Garn "criticized" Bush for "ousting" Truly from the position (2/15).

*22 VIRGINIA: WARNER LEADS TERRY; ROBB UNDER 50% VERSUS WILDER
 A RICHMOND TIMES-DISPATCH poll, conducted 2/6-11, surveyed 672 registered voters; MOE +/- 4% (2/17). Dems tested: Gov. Doug Wilder, Sen. Chuck Robb, AG Mary Sue Terry, LG Don Beyer. GOP: Sen. John Warner, Rep. George Allen (R-07), Del. Clinton Miller, businessman Earle Williams.

63% said they "thought more of Wilder for abandoning his presidential bid." Beyer is "widely expected to defer" the gov run to Terry, much as she did for Wilder in '89. Warner "says he won't disclose his intentions until after the 1992 elections" (Schapiro, 2/17).

*23 MISSOURI: WEBSTER TOUTS STRENGTH OVER RIVALS

The three GOP candidates "belittled rivals and previewed the campaign that will continue to intensify" until the 8/4 primary at the annual Lincoln Day gathering. AG Wm Webster "stressed" a 12/91 poll showing him at 39% over Sec/State Roy Blunt (27%) and Treasurer Wendell Bailey (10%). Blunt and Bailey called the poll "outdated and slanted." Blunt "scored a publicity coup" with a "blistering attack" against the St. Louis Election Board. Rivals called it "grandstanding." Webster said his organization enlisted more than 8,000 GOP activists which "neither Blunt nor Bailey could match." Bailey said he's found "Webster's support steadily dwindling." Gov. John Ashcroft (R), who can not seek a third term, "publicly warned" against a divisive primary (Hood, K.C. STAR, 2/16). On the Dem side, LG Mel Carnahan (D) is getting "contributions courtesy of an unusual source." Two MO residents who received checks from AG Wm Webster's office "represent[ing]" a recently settled price-fixing case and signed over them over to Carnahan's campaign (Mannies, ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH, 2/15). Also running: St. Louis Mayor Vincent Schoemehl.

*24 THIS MORNING: ABC's "GMA" focused on UNH students and hosted Annenberg School of Comm. Dean Kathleen Hall Jamieson on TV's role in the NH campaign. NBC's "Today" hosted Dem consultant Bob Squier and GOP analyst Roger Ailes. "CBS This Morning" continued its Olympic coverage.

A.M. QUOTABLES: Jamieson on how TV is changing the electorate: "We've finally transformed the voter from a passive object to someone who's an active information seeker, and that's good for the system" (ABC). Spinmeister Bob Squier: "I'm dizzy from all this spin" (NBC, 2/18).

LAST NIGHT: ABC and NBC led with pre-NH primary updates and analysis. CBS, PBS' "MacNeil/Lehrer" and CNN led with the sentencing of Jeffrey Dahmer. "M/L" focused on Dems in NH. CNN: "Crossfire" focused on workers' leisure time; "Larry King Live" hosted ex-NH Dem chair Joe Grandmason and Manchester UNION LEADER editor Joseph McQuaid on the NH primary. ABC's "Nightline" also focused on the NH primary with KRC's pollster Gerry Chervinsky, ex-Reagan adviser Mitch Daniels and Dem consultant John Sasso (2/17).

NH PRIMARY: ABC's Jeff Greenfield: "So here's what New Hampshire may offer the nation if the expected happens tomorrow. A strong Buchanan showing means sustained primary challenge to an incumbent Republican president. A Tsongas victory by any substantial margin means a wide open race for the nomination and further calls for a new candidate." Greenfield also noted that Independents are the second largest block of voters in NH, behind GOPers, and they can vote in either primary. They could swing the election because they are rarely detected in polls ("Nightline," 2/17).

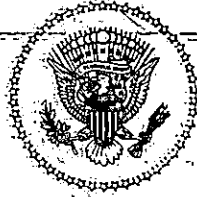

JOKES R' US -- NOT!: Dennis Miller: "I missed the Democratic debate last night. From what I heard so did the Democratic candidates. ... Governor Mario Cuomo of New York says he has nothing to do with the write-in campaign being organized on his behalf in New Hampshire. He said, 'I have nothing to do with this or my name isn't M-A-R-I-O C-U-O-M-O.' ... Bush refuses to refer to Buchanan by his name. Never uses his name. I think it's a little rude when he keeps calling him that Fred Flintstone guy" ("Dennis Miller Show," 2/17).

===== TV SOUNDBITE =====

"I want you, too."

Clift: Bush is going up there acting presidential. He cuts commercials in the Oval Office. I mean it's mud wrestling up there. They don't want a guy who's going to look presidential. That's the last thing they want.

Gigot: The other problem is Bush's message -- it's kind of Bush vs. Bush. It's just not Bush vs. Buchanan. He's saying, look, I may have lied in the tax thing, but I won't do it again. And he's saying that 'Look, despite what you know about three years of my compromising with Congress, now I'm going to fight them.' And Pat is coming right at that and at Bush's credibility.

[A campaign ad from each candidate is run.]

McLaughlin: Don't you just love the way Pat, who is inbred in this environment, was born here, says, 'I'm going to go down to Washington'? Come on Pat, give us a break!

Barnes: Pat's ad is better than Bush's ad. It's direct, it's appealing....

Germond: ...One of the great advantages of being 600 miles from here,...one of the things that's interesting about this is I don't think the advertising is as important as it would be in another situation, because the campaign is so pre-media intensive.... People are getting their information from so many sources, I don't think the commercials matter as much as they ordinarily do....

McLaughlin: What percentage of the New Hampshire Republican primary vote will Buchanan get and Bush get?

Germond: I think Buchanan's now going to get 40. Barnes: I think Bush 58, Buchanan 38, change for a write-in. Clift: I'm in the 40-degree range for Buchanan, too. Page: I was going to say 35 coming in here, but I'm persuaded to say 40 now. Gigot: I'm going to go 58-35. McLaughlin: I'm saying 35 and I'll go with your 58.

Predictions:

Germond: Assuming that Tsongas and Clinton finish here in that order, the next big test will be -- the most attention getting will be in Maryland and Georgia March 3. Barnes: The economy will roar back in the second quarter, maybe only for the second quarter, but it will grow by more than 4 percent.... Gigot: If Buchanan is still campaigning in the South, the Bush campaign will go negative on him for his opposition to Desert Storm. McLaughlin: I predict that housing prices are going to skyrocket.

STATEMENT BY THE PRESIDENT

First, let me say I am delighted to have won the New Hampshire primary.

*we have big disappointment
A plus*

Mindful of New Hampshire's proud history in selecting Presidents, I am indebted to all those in the State who voted for me, and my special thanks go to our able campaign leaders and to the volunteers who worked so hard.

This election was far closer than many had predicted. I think the opponents on both sides reaped the harvest of discontent with the pace of New Hampshire's economy. Certainly, I have no disagreement with those who felt dissatisfied.

In retrospect, maybe I should have spent more time in the State to win a bigger victory, but my most immediate goal has been to get Congress to enact some very sensible, ~~sound~~ ^{economic growth} proposals that will help get this nation's economy going forward. I will continue to do just that.

I will campaign vigorously in those States whose primaries lie ahead. I am confident of winning our party's nomination and the election.

Once again, I am pleased to have finished first in New Hampshire. Now, on to the South.

STATEMENT BY THE PRESIDENT

The news media projections are that I've won the New Hampshire primary -- for which I'm thankful -- although the small margin of victory makes a strong statement. I got the message. I know that America's economy must be turned around if I am to help the people of New Hampshire and all Americans. I am committed with every fiber of my being to do just that.

We are now engaged in a great debate about the future of our nation. It pits one party against another. It rides on opposing political philosophies. One is to tax people more and provide more government programs. That's the Democrat philosophy.

The other is to tax people less and help them build more. That's the Republican philosophy. This struggle between opposing views is being played out in the hallways of Congress, in the streets of New Hampshire, and in the headquarters of every Presidential candidate. I believe that we can turn this country around, if the Congress will just give us the tools to do it. And tonight's message tolls for Congress as well. The time has come to pass an economic program that will build more, not tax more.

I am going to win the nomination of my party, by winning every primary in this country. I am going to beat Pat Buchanan and any other rival who tries to move me off the path of economic growth.

That includes Mr. Tsongas, Mr. Clinton, Mr. Kerry, Mr. Buchanan, or anybody else. I have fought many battles for the American people in the last 4 years and the scars are deep to prove it.

There is no hiding the wound that I took to keep the lid on spending in last year's budget agreement. And the vote in New Hampshire tonight carries with it a sting I will feel throughout the rest of this campaign.

But my victory tonight is all the more meaningful, for it says to me that something must be done. My economic plan must be implemented. The Congress must be made to listen. And the anguish of the people of New Hampshire must be etched in the soul of every American, until we have set this country straight.

I am dedicated to that task and I am going to the Southern primaries with a renewed effort to fight for my party, for my beliefs, and for our country.

On to Super Tuesday.

STATEMENT BY THE PRESIDENT

I am delighted tonight to have won the New Hampshire primary.

Mindful of New Hampshire's proud history in selecting Presidents, I am indebted to all those in the State who voted for me, and my special thanks go to our able campaign leaders and to the volunteers who worked so hard.

This election was far closer than many had predicted. I think the opponents on both sides reaped the harvest of discontent with the pace of New Hampshire's economy. I understand the message of dissatisfaction.

My most immediate task has been to get Congress to enact some very sensible, sound proposals that will help get this nation's economy going forward. The message of tonight is that Americans are concerned about the future. I have the right answers and I will take my case to the voters in the next eight-and-a-half months. The goal of my campaign is to win re-election in November.

I will campaign vigorously in those States whose primaries lie ahead. I am confident of winning our party's nomination and the election.

I want to thank the voters of New Hampshire, as well as Governor Gregg, Senators Rudman and Smith, Congressman Zeliff, Hugh Gregg, Gordon Humphrey, and the rest of my leadership team.

Once again, I am pleased to have finished first in New Hampshire. Now, on to the South.

Re: Consumer Prices and Housing
Starts for January

Good!

Two pieces of good news on the economy. First, housing starts rose 5.5 percent in January from December, somewhat more than had been expected. Better yet, building permit authorizations, which are a precursor of future housing starts, rose 6 percent.

Second, the consumer price index rose just 0.1 percent in January, as inflation remains down and declining. This is both good news per se and also provides the Federal Reserve elbow room to lower interest rates further.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: MICHAEL J. BOSKIN MJB

SUBJECT: Consumer Price Indexes for January, Labor Department Release, Tomorrow Morning, 8:30 a.m.

Consumer prices rose 0.1 percent in January, following a 0.2 percent increase in December. Private analysts had expected a 0.2 percent increase in January. Consumer prices were up 2.6 percent from January 1991, the lowest 12-month rise since February 1987.

Food prices fell 0.4 percent in January. Energy prices fell 1.5 percent, with gasoline prices falling 1.9 percent. Consumer prices excluding food and energy items--core inflation--rose 0.3 percent. Core inflation was 3.9 percent over the past year.

Of the major expenditure categories, the largest increase occurred in medical care which rose 0.7 percent in January, following a similar increase in December. Medical care costs were up 7.8 percent since January 1991.

The graph below shows that consumer price inflation over 6-month periods has fallen significantly since the fall of 1990, and core inflation remains at a low level in comparison to the past 2 years.

THE CHAIRMAN

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: MICHAEL J. BOSKIN MJB

SUBJECT: January Housing Starts, Commerce Department
Release, Tomorrow, 8:30 a.m.

Housing starts rose 5.5 percent in January to an annual rate of 1.167 million. Private analysts had expected a 2.4 percent increase. Starts were up 38 percent from January 1991.

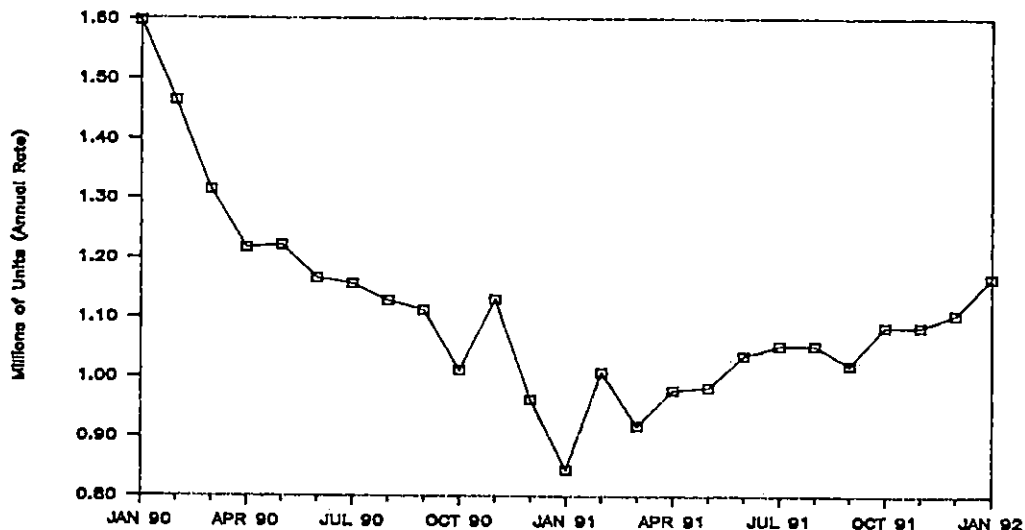

Single-family starts rose 0.9 percent in January, after rising an upwardly revised 6.4 percent in December. Multi-unit starts surged 37 percent in January from a record low in December.

The increase in total housing starts in January resulted from a 34 percent increase in the Midwest; starts fell in the other regions.

Building permits--often an indicator of future housing starts--rose 6 percent in January, following a 6.2 percent increase in December. Permits rose 7.6 percent for single-family housing, but fell slightly for multi-unit housing. Permits rose in all regions of the country, except for the West where they were essentially unchanged.

The graph below shows that housing starts have been on a steady upward trend since January 1991 with starts falling in only 2 of the past 12 months.

Memo to the President
From Charley Bartlett

One thought: no matter what the percentages in New Hampshire tonight, I would suggest that the leaderlike reaction in the White House will be: steady as she goes. The most damaging reaction would be any move conveying a sense of concern, of strategy meetings to change direction, etc. There should be no flash reaction, even by aides, like the one that came after the Pa. election.

It seems to me that you have handled the situation very well in your candid comments of uncertainty about the prospects and whatever the count, that same calm, unruffled candor will be the most appealing response. You have made no mistakes in New Hampshire and you did your best in a very tough situation and the campaign will go on from this point.

✓ How about this: "Pat Buchanan reaped the harvest of New Hampshire's discontent with the pace of the recovery and I have no disagreement with those who feel dissatisfied. My role is to work at getting Congress to enact a program that will revive optimism and economic activity. I'm going to keep working at it and I look for support from those Americans who want to join in building a stronger base for the future."

This election was far closer than many had predicted. I think the opponents on both sides reaped the harvest of discontent with the pace of New Hampshire's economy. Certainly I have no disagreement with those who felt dissatisfied.

In retrospect maybe I should have spent more time in the state to win a bigger victory, but my most immediate goal has been to get Congress to enact some very sensible sound proposals that will help get this nation's economy going forward. I will continue to do just that.

I will campaign vigorously the States whose primaries lie ahead. I am confident of winning our party's nomination and the election. Once again I am pleased to have finished first in New Hampshire- now on to the south.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: C. BOYDEN GRAV only

SUBJECT: Historically Black Colleges and Universities

Attached is a resolution by your Board of Advisors on Historically Black Colleges and Universities, commending you for the support you gave when they objected to the brief that DOJ had filed in the Supreme Court. (Also attached is a cover letter from the Chairman, Dr. Cheek.)

This is an unusual step for a Presidential advisory board to take, and I doubt that you should comment on it in writing. I was fairly sure, though, that you would enjoy seeing the resolution.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
THE SECRETARY

WHEREAS, President George Herbert Walker Bush has steadfastly given attention to the entreaties of the President's Board of Advisors on Historically Black Colleges and Universities concerning the Ayers v Mabus case, currently before the U.S. Supreme Court, and

WHEREAS, President Bush listened intently to this Advisory Board's view that this case has the most significant prospective impact on Historically Black Colleges and Universities since Brown v the Board of Education, and

WHEREAS, the President took unprecedented action by prevailing upon the Solicitor General to reverse the initial position of the U.S. Department of Justice as set forth in its brief filed before the U.S. Supreme Court,

BE IT NOW, THEREFORE, RESOLVED that this Presidential Advisory Board highly commends the Honorable George Herbert Walker Bush, President of the United States of America, for the clear indication of his unqualified support for HBCUs as evidenced by his support for our position in the Ayers v Mabus case.

I think it is great you didn't go negative in New Hampshire. I see the high road as a smoother ride, particularly against Tsongas, and it is clear that Buchanan is going to be a small bump on a long road.

I hadn't seen this until this weekend. Is it possible Bobby doesn't have the judgment to be the spokesman for your campaign?

Mosbacher's Bomb

White Crillon club members carved up a sumptuous five-course dinner including lobster soufflé, cream of chantrelle on croûtes and peppered lamb at their cozy winter dinner last December. In the end, the main course was a kassoe of Georgette thanks to her husband, Robert Mosbacher.

Mosbacher was one of the speakers at the dinner, along with Robert Strauss, Governor Douglas Wilder and Senator Lloyd Bentsen. Mosbacher bombed. Club members are still troubled that two reporters were so offended by Mosbacher's remarks that they broke club rules and reported on the choice bloopers. Intrigued by their dilemma, M obtained a copy of Mosbacher's speech, which went something like this:

"You've been printing unfair stories about my wife. I've come here tonight to defend her, retaliate honor against your outrageously scurrilous stories, true as they might be.

"My wife of course is Georgette Mosbacher. This rather noisy-looking woman here, I ask you, does this plain, homespun woman who just the other day at Le Cirque was mistaken for Mother Teresa, does this woman look like an excess of the 1980s to you?

"Georgette is not one of the rich, Oh no. She actively spends and consumes. What I'm about to tell you is the absolute truth. I was in the Forbes 400 list until the very year I married Georgette.

"There's a lot of speculation in the press about how much Georgette actually spends. She makes Nancy Reagan look like a third-world country. Take that dress. That dress is the equivalent of the gross national product of Burundi. Is that excessive? I don't think so. Burundi is a small country.

"The other night we were going out, and I said, 'If the stock market plunges as low as your neckline, this country is in big trouble.' She said, 'Don't worry, I know what's holding up my gown, which is more than I can say for the stock market.' This woman is single-handedly keeping the U.S. economy afloat. If you factor out Georgette, we're actually in a depression.

"I love this woman and she's made a lot more money than I have these last few years. This woman knows everything about America, its strengths, its vibrancy, the Bank of America."

Noting that Georgette spends a lot more time in New York, Mosbacher added that he wished she'd spend time in Washington. In reply, he quoted her as saying, "I will if the president will."

"I think I have already done a bit of good at my wife's expense, and I look forward to doing as much to the president."

Dear Ms. Horner:

In further response to our phone conversation, I am writing to give you additional background information on Mrs. Craig and myself which I hope may be helpful.

Regarding our keen interest in serving in the United Kingdom, we have had close ties there either personally or educationally since our youth. I first visited the United Kingdom in 1936 with my parents when I was twelve years old. I was privileged to see King Edward VIII ride by on horseback on the occasion of his official birthday, and also saw the present Queen Elizabeth and Princess Margaret drive by with their grandmother, the Dowager Queen Mary. I was so impressed and interested that, upon returning home, I immediately read Charles Dickens' A Child's History of England.

In the meantime, Mrs. Craig and I have visited the United Kingdom almost every year since 1966, and we have taken our children with us on a number of occasions. We customarily begin our visits at the Connaught Hotel in London, and then proceed to other parts of Great Britain. For the last eleven years I have shot driven pheasant in Scotland each November, and during this time Mrs. Craig and I have developed many good friendships in England, Scotland, and Northern Ireland. For convenience during our stays in the United Kingdom, I have established a checking account at Coutts & Co. in London.

We believe that the trips and times we have spent abroad are of benefit to our interest in international affairs. In 1969, 1970, and 1971, we spent our summers in Switzerland at Villars-sur-Ollon with our children. We also traveled in the late 1960's and early 1970's with the People-to-People Program on tennis tours to cities in France, Germany, Austria, Belgium, Holland, Switzerland, Portugal, Italy, Sicily, Yugoslavia, Greece, and Turkey. Through sports and social events, the face-to-face contacts with so many people in so many countries were fascinating and educational.

Lately we have visited the South Seas, New Zealand, and Australia, and have spent three weeks in the Peoples' Republic of China with a Chinese-American tour director. On the other side of the world I (we) have been to Kenya, Tanzania, Zimbabwe, Botswana, the Republic of South Africa, the Seychelles Islands, Mauritius, and Reunion Island.

For people who assert that they are not seeking any position, all this, including the enclosed resumes, may be a little more information than you had in mind with your initial phone call (!); but in the event an investigation into our background becomes warranted, perhaps it could be useful.

In conclusion, I am reminded of a young Texas politician, campaigning for the United States Senate, who returned to his former home in Midland, Texas, and addressed a group of faithful friends at the Midland airport. He made a point of saying that when aspiring for office, it is very difficult for those of us who were taught that modesty is a virtue to state strongly one's best qualifications as one sees them. The young man was George Bush.

Sincerely yours,

EMCjr/lre

Dear Mr. President:

Last week while in Washington for the Bush Finance meeting, Sally had a visit with Connie Horner, during which Connie asked Sally if I would be interested in serving the administration in an Ambassadorial capacity. When Sally responded yes, Connie asked that I immediately send my resume and an expression of desire. Following the conversation on Monday and after receiving my resume, Connie called me on Friday and discussed with me various possibilities, with the full understanding that she was only investigating and exploring possibilities.

I wanted you to know of Connie's discussion with Sally and with me and I also wanted you to know that there is nothing that I would rather do than to serve you and your administration as your personal representative to a foreign state. I do not mean to be presumptuous in any way, but such a position would be the fulfillment of my greatest dream and ambition and I would be honored, pleased and privileged to serve you in such a capacity.

With best wishes to you and Barbara and with thanks and appreciation for all that you do, I am
