BUSH: DEMOCRATIC CUTS IN PENTAGON BUDGET WOULD SEND 'SHOCK WAVES'

SAN FRANCISCO -- Tailoring his campaign message to California, President Bush charged Tuesday that proposed Democratic cuts in the Pentagon budget would not only weaken the nation's military forces but also send "shock waves" through the state's ailing economy.

Noting that $1 out of every $5 spent on military needs is in California, the President sought to reshape the traditional Republican attack that Democrats are soft on defense, into an argument for tough economic times by saying they would throw people "out of work and onto welfare."...

When the Bushes arrived, they were met by Mayor Frank Jordan. The mayor has been criticized by some local Democratic leaders for ceremoniously greeting Bush. "As if the rest of the world didn't exist," Jordan scoffed, when asked about the criticism. "He is the President of the United States and we owe that courtesy. And maybe we can open some doors for some federal dollars."

(Jerry Roberts, San Francisco Chronicle)

Democrats Would Cripple Defense, Economy At Same Time, Bush Says

LOS ANGELES -- President Bush aimed a new appeal at California voters Tuesday as he warned a state heavily dependent on the defense industry against a "Democratic double play" that he said would "cripple our defense and the economy all at the same time."... He also issued a plan for U.S.-Mexico border cleanup and argued that a free-trade agreement between the two countries would improve, not harm, the environment.

(Douglas Jehl, Los Angeles Times)

BUSH MEETS REAGAN TO SMOOTH OVER DISPARAGING REMARK

BEL AIR -- President Bush met briefly Tuesday with Ronald Reagan in a visit that was hastily announced after a report that Reagan had questioned Bush's electibility in California and complained that Bush "didn't stand for anything."... White House officials said the meeting with Reagan was scheduled before publication of the Washington Post story. However, the visit was only announced hastily to reporters when Bush was in San Francisco.

Bush Dogged By Report Of Reagan Comment

LOS ANGELES -- President Bush took his troubled campaign to California Tuesday, dogged by a report that Ronald Reagan is among those Republicans worried that Bush may lose the key western state this fall, and with it, the general election.... Torie Clarke, campaign spokeswoman, said, "There shouldn't be any doubt in anyone's mind about the support of President Reagan."

(Thomas Ferraro, UPI)

Bush Visits Reagan In Attempt To Grab Political Magic

LOS ANGELES -- President Bush, struggling to strengthen his conservative base amid spreading disaffection among right-wing Republicans, visited Ronald Reagan on Tuesday, attempting to grab some of Reagan's political magic.... Voters "do not perceive George Bush as someone who has a core of beliefs around which he develops policies and then fights for those policies," said David Keene, chairman of the American Conservative Union.

(Charles Green, Knight-Ridder)

Bush Visits His Old Boss In California

LOS ANGELES -- On the day his campaign launched a TV blitz against Patrick Buchanan in Georgia, President Bush was running hard against resurgent Democrats in California. Before mingling with movie stars, a disbelieving President visited privately with Ronald Reagan, who was quoted as questioning Bush's electibility in 1992.

(Frank Murray, Washington Times, A4)

BUSH RUNS INTO TROUBLE IN CALIFORNIA

LOS ANGELES -- George Bush never claimed California as a home state and California Republicans never embraced him. It was Ronald Reagan who held their hearts. Now, with Patrick Buchanan trying to snatch away the Reagan Right and Bush hoping to firm up his reelection campaign, the President has run into more trouble.

Collecting an easy $2 million in campaign contributions Tuesday, Bush breezed through San Francisco and brought aging Republican stars out of the Hollywood firmament. But it was a subdued President who dealt with an embarrassing statement by the nation's premier conservative.

"He doesn't seem to stand for anything," Ronald Reagan reportedly told associates.... However, a Reagan spokeswoman said, "Anyone close to President Reagan knows he has not and would not make that statement."

(Timothy McNulty, Chicago Tribune)

BUSH AND THE PHOTO OP THAT WASN'TVisit With Reagan Produces*No Public Announcement And No Comment

LOS ANGELES -- President Bush, under fire from his party's right, had hoped for a symbolic, telegenic embrace Tuesday from Ronald Reagan, his patron and Republican conservative icon, during the President's 18-hour stop here. It was not meant to be....

The small group of reporters who accompanied the President and the First Lady on their hastily arranged visit were kept at the gate, which was wrapped in plain, brown paper that blocked any public view. Other than a photograph that the White House released, the two men were never seen together. Neither of them spoke to reporters, and White House press aides said there would be no official comment.

(John Yang, Washington Post, A1)

BUSH HEADS WEST; CRITICISM PURSUES

LOS ANGELES -- President Bush carried his reelection campaign west Tuesday, only to run into the same charge voiced by some supporters elsewhere: that he lacks substance and conviction. It was all the more stinging because it appeared to come from a most unlikely source, Ronald Reagan. And Bush's political advisers rushed to rebut it. (Michael Wines, New York Times, A19)

BUSH MINES RICH VEIN IN THE GOLDEN STATE
Rival's Grave Topic Is Confederate Roots

President Bush carried out a lucrative political fund-raising mission in California Tuesday, confidently predicting he would carry the state despite concerns of key Republicans there that he risks losing the state's 54 electoral votes in November....

While Bush was visiting his political patron, Patrick Buchanan was celebrating his heritage in quite a different way Tuesday. Standing in a hard rain in a cemetery in Tupelo, Miss., Buchanan laid flowers at the graves of his Confederate ancestors, a move designed to ensure that every southern conservative planning to vote in the presidential primary in the next two weeks knows that Buchanan's heart belongs in Dixie.

SHOWDOWN LOOMS FOR CALIFORNIA GOP

SACRAMENTO -- California Republicans are headed for a weekend showdown between moderates and conservatives over an extraordinary move to endorse President Bush three months before the June 2 primary and slam the door on Patrick Buchanan.... Buchanan forces lobbied GOP central committee members to oppose a pre-primary endorsement vote. "We are trying to head it off. We don't like the idea of trying to influence the primary process," said Richard Neff, state coordinator for Buchanan. (Chris Crystal, UPI)

SOUTH DAKOTA REVEALS BUSH VULNERABILITY

President Bush's second-rate finish in a one-man race in South Dakota underscores a political vulnerability that goes far beyond the challenge from Patrick Buchanan.

Tuesday's primary delivered another ominous message to the President's reelection hopes while keeping the contest for the Democratic nomination wide open.

Running unopposed on the Republican ballot, Bush was abandoned by nearly a third of his party's voters. He won just 69 percent of the vote. The remaining 31 percent flocked to an uncommitted slate that provided GOP voters a chance to register their dissatisfaction.

"In this case, the uncommitted slate represents an anybody-but-Bush ticket," said Stuart Rothenberg, a political analyst. "Pat Buchanan campaigned day and night in New Hampshire and drew 37 percent. And here, a nonexistent candidate who didn't campaign drew nearly as much of the vote." (Tom Raum, AP)

KERREY KEEPS HEAD ABOVE WATER

Sen. Kerrey's decisive win in South Dakota's presidential primary Tuesday night keeps him in the contest and muddles the murky Democratic field even more.... Sen. Harkin appeared in early returns to be taking second place over Gov. Clinton. Paul Tsongas was posting less than 10 percent. (Adam Nagourney, USA Today, 3A)

BUSH CAMPAIGN SENDS IN MARINES

President Bush's campaign aimed its big guns at its GOP rival Tuesday, airing TV ads in Georgia criticizing Patrick Buchanan's opposition to the Gulf War.... The tactic could work because it "goes to the core of the Buchanan supporter, which is the flag-waving, patriotic conservative, and sure dilutes the credibility of his charges against Bush," says Atlanta pollster Claibourne Darden. GOP CONSERVATIVES SEEK BRADY OUSTER
Legislators Maintain Bush Is Ill-Served By Treasury Secretary

Some conservative congressional Republicans, apparently emboldened by the strong showing of Patrick Buchanan in last week's New Hampshire primary, have launched a coordinated assault on Secretary Brady. They accuse him of giving President Bush bad economic advice and allowing his department to sabotage Administration economic initiatives.

Sen. Mack called for Brady's resignation on the Senate floor Tuesday. Rep. Gingrich pointedly announced Tuesday that Treasury staff members would no longer be allowed to attend House Republican leadership meetings....

The White House dismissed this week's assault.... One official, in some exasperation, said the "Gingrich-Mack wing" of the GOP is "never going to be happy. They're always going to find something to complain about." Virtually no one in the Administration thinks Bush is prepared to move Brady out of his job to assuage conservative Republicans.

According to a Republican source familiar with the effort to oust Brady and one of the President's closest friends, "The formulation is this: President Bush's word was his bond with Republican voters in 1988 and then he broke his word in 1990. Now, when he says in another election year he won't raise taxes, his word is not believed. He needs collateral and that collateral is a treasury secretary who is one of us, who has demonstrated a belief in conservative economic position. Nicholas Brady is not that man." (Ann Devroy & Steven Mufson, Washington Post, A7)

DEADLOCK ON TAX BILL SEEN LIKELY
Neither Party's Plan Given Much Chance Of Passing This Year

Even as the House prepares to vote this week on competing Democratic and Republican proposals to help ease the recession, prospects for enactment of a major tax bill this year are quickly fading....

"People out there are not stupid and don't want the tax package either party is offering," said Rep. Beilenson. "We're being forced by politics on both sides to do something that's not good for the country, and I'm sorry to see that happen..."

"It may be that if the President vetoes the proposal, we will not be able to override that veto," Rep. Foley conceded Tuesday.... That is going to be for his judgment later, and even if he vetoes it, I think we would be better off for having attempted to pass the bill rather than to do nothing."

"Under the current scenario," said an aide to the House Republican leadership, "Congress will not have a bill on the President's desk by March 20, and it's doubtful we'll even get an economic growth bill passed this year."

Sen. Lugar described the Democrats' effort to link tax breaks for the middle class and investment tax incentives to an increase in the top income tax rate and a surtax on millionaires as a "non-starter." "This leads me to believe the odds of enacting an anti-recession package are diminishing as the Democrats move towards a class-warfare idea," Lugar said.

NEW THRIFT AID PLAN MEETS HILL OPPOSITION
Intervention Before Failure Criticized by Banking Committee

Plans to nurse sick financial institutions back to health with the aid of government capital came up against stiff opposition from members of both parties in Congress Tuesday.

The proposals, which are being promoted by Timothy Ryan, the nation's chief thrift regulator, and FDIC Chairman William Taylor, have not yet been embraced by the Treasury. Secretary Brady told a House Banking panel that he would withhold judgment until the proposals are discussed at special hearings next month....

Republicans as well as Democrats sharply criticized the idea Tuesday during a hearing on funding for the RTC. "Propping up sick institutions may look politically appealing in the short term for presidential politics, but in the long term it could too easily result in an increase in taxpayer liabilities and undercut a major pinion of conservative economic philosophy," said Rep. Leach.

CONGRESS ADVISED TO GO SLOW ON FURTHER S&L BAILOUT MONEY

Congress is being urged to reject the Bush Administration's request for a single appropriation large enough to finish the cleanup of the savings and loan industry. Secretary Brady renewed his request for an additional $55 billion.... However, a senior official with the GAO, in testimony prepared for delivery to the committee Wednesday, recommended lawmakers provide only enough money to last until the spring of 1993. Legislators then can reexamine how much the RTC needs to finish, said Richard Fogel, assistant comptroller of the GAO.

CONSUMERS' PESSIMISM DEEPENS
Index Of Confidence Hits 18-Year Low On Job Loss Fears

As job fears and economic uncertainty continued to worry many Americans, consumer confidence plunged this month to its lowest level since 1974, according to a nationwide survey of 5,000 households released Tuesday.

The Conference Board, a business research organization based in New York, said its index of consumer confidence dropped from its already depressed January level from 50.2 to 46.3 this month. In both months, nearly half of those surveyed said business conditions are "bad" and jobs "hard to get," but they became "markedly more pessimistic" in the February survey about what they expect the economy to be like six months down the road.

SALES OF DOMESTIC VEHICLES ADVANCE BY 4%

DETROIT -- Sales of cars and light trucks built in North American rose 4 percent in mid-February, the automakers reported Tuesday. Analysts said the figures provided additional evidence that the sluggish auto industry was slowly gaining strength. "We're seeing a semblance of recovery," said Jack Kirnan, a Kidder, Peabody analyst in New York.

NUCLEAR DISARMAMENT RAISES FEAR ON STORAGE OF 'TRIGGERS'

The Department of Energy said Tuesday that the dismantling of much of the nation's nuclear arsenal would require it to store tons of plutonium at a Texas weapons plant where warheads were once assembled. But critics of the Energy Department, including a prominent nuclear scientist and the Natural Resources Defence Council, contended that the plan could be a danger to the environment and make the plant a target for a terrorist attack.

FCC: LIFT OWNERSHIP LIMITATION Agency Urges Change Of Rules On Stations

The federal agency charged with regulating the nation's broadcasters has recommended doing away with rules limiting the number of radio stations one company can legally own....

The staff recommendations -- which have the strong support of the agency chairman, Alfred Sikes -- are likely to put the agency on a collision course with congressional Democrats, who favor a slower approach to deregulating both radio and TV broadcasting. The FCC is expected to vote on the recommendations at its next meeting on March 12.

DESPITE MEDICARE, ELDERLY HEALTH COSTS UP, STUDY SAYS

The nation's elderly are spending far more of their after-tax incomes on health care costs in 1991 than 30 years ago, even with the rise of Medicare, according to an analysis released Tuesday by Families USA, an advocacy group on health and income issues.

Ron Pollock, the group's executive director, said Tuesday the average elderly household is spending $3,305 on out-of-pocket costs for insurance premiums, Medicare premiums, copayments and deductibles on bills paid by their insurance, and on things like drugs and long-term care in nursing homes that are not covered by Medicare. In 1961, the figure was only $1,589, as measured in 1991 dollars.

HIGH COURT EXTENDS CURB AGAINST BEATING PRISONERSRuling Represents a Rare Victory for Inmates

The Supreme Court ruled Tuesday that beatings of prisoners may constitute cruel and unusual punishment even if the prisoner does not suffer serious injury, prompting dissenting Justice Thomas to accuse the majority of turning the Constitution into "a National Code of Prison Regulation."... The ruling in Hudson v. McMillian represents a rare victory for prisoners at a court that has become increasingly unreceptive to their claims.

BUSH RESOLUTE ON ULTIMATUM TO ISRAELIS

President Bush, conceding that he was taking a political gamble by opposing an ally with many American friends, said he would not be moved from his decision to link loan guarantees to Israel with a freeze on housing in occupied territory.... The President was backed by Sen. Leahy, who said Tuesday he wanted to help Israel deal with immigrants, "but I will not support this assistance unless it is consistent with American policy of opposing further settlement building in the occupied territories prior to a negotiated resolution of the status of those territories."

(Michael Hedges, Washington Times, A1)

SENATORS BLAST BAKER FOR RESTRICTIONS ON ISRAELI LOAN GUARANTEES

Angry senators lashed out at Secretary Baker on Tuesday for saying the U.S. will not guarantee $10 billion in Israeli loans to help resettle Soviet Jewish immigrants unless Israel agrees to stop building settlements in the occupied territories.

The Administration is in danger of infringing "on a nation's fundamental national security," said Sen. Specter. Imposing such conditions, he said, "is just not the right or fair way to treat an ally who absorbed 39 unanswered Scud missile attacks in a joint effort with the U.S. to defeat a common enemy."

Sen. Nickles said, "I really don't like the connections that have been related between the settlements and the loan guarantees."

(Mary Curtius, Boston Globe)

BAKER, LAWMAKERS WEIGH ALTERNATIVE ISRAELI AID PLAN

In an attempt to keep alive the possibility of U.S. loan guarantees for Israel, Secretary Baker and congressional leaders are considering a plan that would let Baker decide whether Israel's future settlements activity entitles it to the U.S. aid, sources familiar with the discussions said Tuesday.

The plan would not prevent the Administration from continuing to exert pressure on Israel to stop building settlements, according to the sources. Instead, they said, it would give Baker flexibility to keep negotiations going in the hope that the dispute can be resolved and the guarantees extended to Israel several weeks or months down the line....

Sources said Sen. Leahy has offered to seek passage of a foreign aid appropriations bill that would approve the loan guarantees if Israel meets specific conditions....

The sources said Baker has asked Leahy to explore the possibility of getting such legislation passed in the next month. A potential problem, the sources added, is uncertainty about whether Sen. Kasten will go along.

(John Goshko, Washington Post, A22)

ARABS DELIVER THEIR OWN DEMAND

The Palestinians served notice Tuesday that they will not negotiate autonomy plans for the Israeli-occupied territories until Israel stops its crash program to build Jewish settlements there.... "The government cannot budge and will not budge over the principle of the right of Jews to settle in the territories," Yosef Olmert, director of the Israeli government press office and a close adviser to Prime Minister Shamir, told editors of The Washington Times.
(Martin Sieff, Washington Times, A1)

JEWISH SUPPORT FOR BUSH WANES

The Bush Administration may be losing support of Jewish voters over its stand on loan guarantees to Israel despite its slap at Patrick Buchanan as anti-Semitic, Jewish leaders said Tuesday.

"Clearly the Bush Administration has decided that is in the international interest and the interest of his own election not to let the peace process collapse," said Henry Seigman, president of the American Jewish Committee.

While Jewish leaders were reluctant to say the loan policy is motivated by reelection politics, they noted most Americans want less foreign spending in a recession.

CNN SAYS U.S. MONITORED IRANIANS UNTIL JUST BEFORE KUWAIT INVASION

The U.S. was supplying Iraq with satellite images of Iranian troop deployment as recently as one month before the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, CNN reported Tuesday night. The information may have freed up Iraqi troops so they could mass along the border with Kuwait, the report suggested. It did not elaborate....

The network cited documents indicating the U.S. turned a blind eye to Iraq's extremism. Among the documents, it said, was a classified CIA report from November 1989 saying Iraq was trying to acquire nuclear and chemical weapons in Western Europe and elsewhere.

BUSH 'PROUD' OF EARLY AID TO IRAQ

President Bush, amid new reports about U.S. aid to Iraq before the Gulf War, said Tuesday that he was "proud to support" Baghdad when he was vice president.... Bush said the Reagan Administration's backing of Saddam Hussein was "a balance to a much more aggressive Iran" led by Ayatollah Khomeini.

(Lee Michael Katz & Laurence Jolidon, USA Today, 5A)

IRAQ OFFERS PLAN TO COMPLY WITH U.N. RESOLUTION

U.N. -- Iraq has said it will offer "substantial" compliance with U.N. resolutions on the elimination of its weapons of mass destruction if the Security Council agrees to partially lift sanctions against Baghdad.... A U.N. official said the letter appeared to be an attempt to establish a "conciliatory" tone prior to the arrival here next month of a high-level Iraqi delegation, expected to be led by Deputy Prime Minister Tariq Aziz. The letter said the delegation "will convey Iraq's position on resolutions 707 and 715."

WITH JORDAN'S HELP, IRAQ CIRCUMVENTS U.N. SANCTIONS

Iraq is using a Jordanian-supported network of jet transports and heavy trucks to beat economic sanction, according to U.S. officials. The officials said the reliability of this back-channel delivery system has given Saddam Hussein the confidence to buck U.N. cease-fire resolutions. The jets -- Boeing 707s and 727s and Soviet An-26s -- were flown to Jordan before the Persian gulf War and repainted to appear Jordanian, said officials.

WANTS TO SELL 72 F-15s TO SAUDIS

Eager to keep American defense workers employed in an election year, the Bush Administration is considering going ahead with a sale of 72 advanced F-15 fighter planes to Saudi Arabia.... Administration officials say opposition in Congress may be weakened this year by countervailing concerns about the recession and unemployment, possibly giving the White House an opportunity to proceed with the sale,

SENATE BACKS CHINA TRADE CONDITIONS
Reports of Arms Sales To Middle East Debated

After a rare closed session to debate reports about Chinese arms sales to the Middle East, the Senate voted Tuesday to attach stringent conditions to renewal of preferential trade status for the Beijing government. The measure failed, however, to obtain the two-thirds majority necessary to override an expected presidential veto.

Republicans suggested that the Democratic leadership was trying to use the Chinese trade measure to embarrass President Bush in an election year. The debate, said Sen. Lugar, has "potential on the part of the Democrats to try to undermine the President's foreign policy."

By a 59-39 vote, the Senate approved extending MFN trade status to China, but conditioned future renewals on how the Chinese government proceeds in the areas of human rights, trade practices and sale of missile and weapons technology to non-nuclear nations.

"As long as they (the Chinese government) have a friend in the White House, they can do whatever they want," said Sen. Mitchell. "The President's policy has had more than two years to achieve its stated goal. It has failed. It is time to change the policy."

(Guy Gugliotta, Washington Post, A19)

U.S. SAYS NO BREAKTHROUGHS IN TRADE TALKS

BEIJING -- Assistant Trade Representative Joseph Massey said Wednesday that substantial differences remain in negotiations over Chinese import barriers, and he denied China's claim that breakthroughs occurred. "Our talks were as usual frank and friendly. We did not clarify a number of points and issues but I wouldn't say that there had been any breakthroughs yet," Massey told a news conference. N. KOREA, U.N. AGENCY SEEN NEAR AGREEMENT
ON EARLY CHECKS OF NUCLEAR SITES

VIENNA -- The International Atomic Energy Agency is close to agreement with North Korea on sending a team of experts to visit the communist nation's nuclear facilities before Pyongyang ratifies an accord allowing inspections by the U.N. agency, a senior IAEA official said Tuesday....

Representatives of several countries told the IAEA's board of governors Tuesday that it is imperative that the inspections begin before June. Washington's representative, Richard Kennedy, urged North Korea to submit an inventory of all its nuclear materials and designs of its facilities to the IAEA before the safeguards accord is ratified so inspections can begin as soon as possible.

GATES PREDICTS YELTSIN WILL REMAIN IN POWER

CIA Director Gates said Tuesday that President Yeltsin has become "almost indispensable" to economic and political reform in Russia and predicted that the Russian leader would be able to make enough compromises to stay in office.

Despite growing opposition in Russia to the scope and pace of his economic reforms, Yeltsin is "by far the most skillful politician in the country today" and probably has enough savvy to stay in power for the foreseeable future," Gates said....

Reviewing other international developments in his prepared remarks and an open question-and-answer session, Gates said that U.S. intelligence has picked up information suggesting North Korea has developed "a deception plan for hiding their nuclear capabilities."...

Recently returned from the Middle East, Gates also said Saddam Hussein will be deposed perhaps soon.... Under questioning, Gates said Saddam's successor would likely be "another military figure or strongman type," but substantially weaker than Saddam and under strong pressure to accede to Western demands.

(George Lardner, Washington Post, A20)

LITTLE OPTIMISM ABOUT FUTURE OF CIS

CIA Director Gates has joined the growing ranks of U.S. experts who think the prospects are poor that the Commonwealth of Independent States will survive. In testimony Tuesday before a House subcommittee, Gates said the 11 former Soviet republics "all believe the CIS should control the strategic nuclear weapon." But beyond that, he said, "there appears to little agreement."

BUSH USING DRUG SUMMIT TO 'SHARPEN STRATEGY' IN DRUG WAR

SAN ANTONIO -- President Bush is claiming dramatic progress in the war against drugs as he convenes a summit with Latin leaders hoping to "sharpen our strategy to beat this scourge."

But critics in Congress say Bush has little to show for the multibillion-dollar war, with cocaine still pouring into this country as drug traffickers find new ways to protect their deadly markets....

Ecuadoran President Borja said Tuesday he hopes the summit will yield "decision which will respond to an international need to fight an international crime. It's time to combine our efforts, share our experiences and information and make a concerted effort among consumer and producer nations." (Eduardo Montes, AP)

DRUG WAR OR REAL WAR?

LIMA -- President Fujimoro warned on the eve of an anti-drug summit that a U.S. military presence in the fight against drugs in Peru was "extremely dangerous" and could lead to another Vietnam War.... Fujimoro said in an interview Monday night that he will insist at the summit on a strategy of developing alternative crops to the coca leaf as a way of reducing the supply of the drug. "There seems to be a tendency (by U.S. officials) toward a repressive slant in the drug war.... This is a setback from the progress we have made," he said. (Reuter, Washington Times, A7)

COLOMBIA PREPARING NEW CASE AGAINST JAILED DRUG KINGPIN

The Colombian government is preparing to file 50 new charges against imprisoned Medellin cartel kingpin Pablo Escobar -- including allegations of political assassinations and massacres -- based in part on evidence to be turned over by the U.S. Justice Department, Colombia's justice minister said Tuesday.

Speaking here on the eve of a seven-nation drug summit in San Antonio, Justice Minister Fernando Carrillo said that at a recent meeting in Bogota, Colombia, Assistant Attorney General Robert Mueller pledged to assist Colombia by sharing key evidence and possibly witnesses against Escobar after completion of the trial of Manual Noriega. NEW AGREEMENT CLEARS WAY FOR ARISTIDE RETURN TO HAITI Exiled President Aristide and the country's new prime minister-designate, Rene Theodore, agreed Tuesday to appoint a new interim government to prepare for Aristide's eventual return to the island nation, but no date was set for that event.

Under the agreement, Theodore, head of the country's Communist Party, "would work towards creating the conditions for (Aristide's) return." The two men also agreed to meet "every two weeks, to assess the progress of the government and the conditions for the return." (Al Kamen, Washington Post, A21)

DEBATE OVER MILITARY'S FUTURE ESCALATES INTO A WAR OF SCENARIOS

The defense spending debate, once focused all but exclusively on Soviet capabilities and intentions, is beginning to crystalize around rival Pentagon and congressional versions of what amounts to a U.S. enemies list for the 1990s.

Defense planners and critics are working through their most basic reassessment in decades of where and why the United States might again send troops into combat....

Rep. Aspin Tuesday proposed four options for U.S. military forces, the largest of which would cut the Bush Administration's defense budget by $38 billion over five years and the smallest of which would cut $231 billion....

"I would contend that the only way you can put some kind of stability into (the defense budget) and some kind of floor under that defense number is if people can relate it to things that they're worried about," said Aspin. "That's what people buy military forces for, because they're worried about something."...

Sen. Warner agreed it was "highly unlikely" that the U.S. would send ground troops to fight North Korea or Russia. Before designing a military budget, he said, "maybe somebody up in the executive branch or Capitol Hill ought to say, 'What's the likelihood of our ever using the troops in such threats?'"

TRIP/PRIMARIES

ABC's Peter Jennings: We begin tonight with politics in the West, still a few hours to go before the polls close in South Dakota -- the second presidential primary election. South Dakota has been the scene of some very pointed battles between two Democrats from neighboring farm states: Tom Harkin of Iowa and Bob Kerrey of Nebraska, who need to do well in their home base. How well will President Bush do today? He's alone on the ballot on the Republican side, but he's not unopposed. The President began six days on the road today and used a particularly sharp television commercial to attack his opponent, Pat Buchanan.

ABC's Brit Hume: On the early morning flight to California for some fund raising, the President looked weary but said he was confident of his prospects in the coming round of southern primaries.

(President Bush: "I feel good about it. We've got good people working. I think people down there understand my message, and I think as people compare the two candidates, why, we'll be fine.") And to help people make that comparison, starting tonight in Georgia, whose primary is a week away, this Bush campaign commercial:

(Gen. P.X. Kelley on campaign commercial: "When Pat Buchanan opposed desert storm it was a disappointment to all military people; a disappointment to all Americans who supported the Gulf War. And I took it personally.")

The ad reflects the White House decision to have others take on Buchanan while the President aims his fire at the Democrats. Buchanan, campaigning in Tennessee, showed once again that when he's hit he hits back.

(Buchanan: "But I say this to Mr. Bush and his friends who are calling us names, who refuse to debate but run attack ads: If you folks try to drive us out of this party, you're going to lose its heart and soul, my friend.")

In fact, the Bush camp is hoping all conservative Republicans, including those now backing Buchanan, will support the President eventually. But there was further evidence in Washington today of just how much discontent there is on the Republican right. Staunchly conservative Sen. Mack wrote the President demanding Secretary Brady be fired.

(Sen. Mack: "It is clear to me that the President has gotten bad advice from the Secretary. The economic team has failed.")

What's important about the Mack letter is not that he can get the President's old friend Brady fired. He can't. What's important is that it suggests that things down South may not be as good for the President, either politically or economically, as the White House thinks.

ABC's Jeff Greenfield reports on exit polls in South Dakota, which showed a rumbling of discontent with President Bush among South Dakota Republicans. Even though he's the only candidate on the ballot, Republicans did have the option of voting for an uncommitted slate of delegates. And of those who did, almost two-thirds said if Bush were the GOP nominee in November they wouldn't vote for him. (ABC-Lead)

CBS's Dan Rather: President Bush flew today to California where he faces a much tougher fight [than he found in the South Dakota primary].

CBS's Susan Spencer: Republicans have carried California in the last six presidential elections. But Mr. Bush arrived today amid warnings that the state with the biggest electoral prize of all could well thumb its nose at him. The problem, California's devastated economy. Today the president accused unnamed Democrats of being out to destroy one more hurting California industry: defense.

(President Bush: "And say no to those Democrats who want to recklessly cut the muscle out of the national defense of this country.")

But California's problems happened on the President's watch, and even in '88 when defense and aerospace industries were booming, he barely eked out a win here. Today California's unemployment rate is over eight percent.

(Ed Rollins: "The recession's probably a little deeper and it'll take longer to come out of it. So I would say economically it is as bad as New Hampshire was.")

Problem 2, image. In short, George Bush is no Ronald Reagan. Wherever he's from, Maine or Texas or Washington, it's not California.

[TV coverage of the President playing golf with President Reagan] And then there's Buchanan with conservative appeal on immigration, abortion and taxes.

(Stu Spencer, GOP strategist: "If Pat Buchanan gains momentum in the next 60 to 90 days, then George Bush is going to have a real fight on his hands in California.")

Mr. Bush wants a knockout well before then, preferably next week in Georgia where a tough new TV ad recalls Buchanan's initial opposition to the war.

(Talking head of Gen. P.X. Kelley on ad: "When Pat Buchanan opposed Desert Storm it was a disappointment to all military people.")

Further stepping up the attack, Chief of Staff Skinner has suggested now that Buchanan may be anti-Semitic, saying, "I think the Jewish community believes he is."

(Buchanan: "They cannot debate me on the issues, so they've taken to calling me names first and running attack ads against me. I think it's a sign we're making progress.")

The Bush nightmare is that Buchanan makes enough progress to stick around, softening up the President here for the Democrats. But while it's not impossible to win the White House without California, it's almost impossible. (CBS-3)

NBC's Tom Brokaw: In the Republican campaign, conservative Pat Buchanan was not on the ballot in today's South Dakota primary, but dealing with Buchanan is on the minds of the Bush campaign. Before the New Hampshire primary last week the President took the high road above negative campaigning.

(President Bush on Feb. 15: "The people of New Hampshire are a little bit tired of all the negative advertisements and all the attack-dog tactics coming from the left and coming from the right. And let me tell you what I am for: I'm going to continue with a positive campaign. It's not about who can trash another person's candidacy in some 30-second spot.")

That was then, this is now: a Bush ad out today attacking Buchanan, saying that he opposed the Persian Gulf war. The President's spokesman, Gen. P.X. Kelley, retired Marine Corps commandant.

(Kelley on ad: "I served with many of the Marines who fought in Desert Storm. The last thing we need in the White House is an isolationist like Pat Buchanan. If he doesn't think America should lead the world, how can we trust him to lead America?") (NBC-4)

ECONOMY

Rather: We lead with two important stories about business, jobs and the economy. The S&L scandal, it turns out, is going to cost you, the American taxpayer, more than you were told previously, maybe a lot more. And an unrelated new report out this evening indicates Americans have less confidence in their country's economic future than at any time since the recession of 1974.

CBS's Ray Brady reports that after a wild ride in the 1980s, the authoritative Conference Board survey of consumer confidence out today hit a 17-year low, plunging in a one-way roller coaster ride downward. Even Fed Chairman Greenspan mentioned the survey in congressional testimony today.

(Greenspan: "Yeah, I agree with them. I find it quite disturbing.")

Unidentified senator: "You find it quite disturbing?"

Greenspan: "I do indeed, yes.")

It will take consumer spending -- a lot of it -- to bring on an economic recovery, possibly why Greenspan seemed cautious.

(Greenspan: "The prospective incipient recovery could peter out as indeed the much more vigorous recovery of last spring petered out.")

Also reacting, the stock market, dropping almost 25 points in heavy trading. A vigorous economic recovery could be a way off, because even when the confidence index takes a big leap upward it still takes about three months to see and feel the results.

Rather: News of the great S&L bailout is not likely to help boost consumer spirits. President Bush is now pushing for billions more taxpayer dollars to pay for the S&L debacle.

CBS's Bob Schieffer reports that Congress got another shock today when the Administration conceded cleaning up the S&L mess could go even higher than its own estimate of $160 billion, because, as Secretary Brady warned:

Schieffer continues:

(Brady: "The final cost of this unprecedented effort will depend on many unpredictable variables, including the level of interest rates and the state of the economy, and of regional real estate markets.")

In fact, some experts believe the cost could top a half-trillion dollars if the economy really goes sour. One problem: property the government took over when hundreds of S&Ls collapsed. Much of the property has been auctioned off, but the government is still stuck with $130 billion worth of bad loans, hard-to-sell mortgages and depressed real estate that cost billions annually just to maintain. How deep the problem runs and how many people have been affected was underscored today as the government outlined what it has already done. Nationwide more than 19 million deposit accounts have already been paid off by the government. As Secretary Brady was explaining the S&L situation, one Republican senator said the entire economic picture has become so tangled that he urged the President to fire Brady.

(Sen. Mack: "I'm convinced that new leadership at the Treasury would be good for the country, good for my state, and good for your presidency.")

Brady is not expected to leave soon, but if the S&L mess does wind up costing a half-trillion dollars the political fallout will only get worse. After all, that amounts to $2,000 apiece in costs for every man, woman and child in the country. (CBS-Lead)

ABC's Sheilah Kast reports that in testimony on Capitol Hill today, Chairman Greenspan brought the same message he gave to Congress six days ago: that there's no need for the Fed to lower interest rates again now. But in those six days there has been more bad news about the economy. GM announced the first in a series of plant closings. The Conference Board today reported consumer confidence is at its lowest level since 1974.

(Sen. Riegle: "People in the country are trying to tell us something, and that is that there is a deep economic sickness in the country. Jobs are disappearing. These are not temporary layoffs. These are permanent layoffs.")

(Greenspan: "The economy will start to quicken sometime in the second quarter. We will be coming out of this particular period with perhaps a degree of momentum, which while scarcely adequate to bring the unemployment rate down this year, at least puts us on a path where we'll get some reasonably solid growth.")

Democrats said the Fed should do more.

(Sen. Sasser: "What this country needs is not an anemic recovery. We need to come out of this recession with a slingshot recovery.") Greenspan acknowledged the recovery he expects could fizzle, and he implied that if it does the Fed is prepared to lower interest rates again.

Jennings: In the does-it-ever-end category, Secretary Brady was on Capitol Hill today asking for another $55 billion to bail out more S&L institutions in trouble. More than $100 billion has been spent since August of 1989. (ABC-2, NBC-5)

DRUG WAR

Brokaw: President Bush meets tomorrow in San Antonio with six Latin American leaders. He's made the anti-drug fight a key part of his presidency. There have been successes, but not where they matter the most.

NBC's Lisa Myers:

(President Bush on Jan. 20, 1989: "But take my word for it: This scourge will stop." [applause])

(President Bush on May 9, 1990: "Block by block we will take back the streets.")

(President Bush on Jan. 27, 1992: "We've made real progress in this fight against drug abuse.")

There has been some progress. In 1989 the Administration declared war on casual drug users, threatening to seize their cars and throw them in jail. Three years later, casual drug use is down 13 percent. Casual cocaine use, down 35 percent. An even bigger success story, teenagers.... In the last three years teenage drug use dropped 26 percent. Teenage cocaine use plummeted 63 percent. One reason, this generation has been bombarded with anti-drug ads.... Another, the death of Len Bias, which exploded the myth that cocaine was risk-free. But George Bush also deserves some credit for doubling funds for drug education and driving home the anti-drug message.

(Herbert Kleber, Columbia University: "The decline in drug use is partially a function of a change in societal attitudes and partially a function of leadership and resources the Administration has put in.")

That's the good news. Unfortunately, nothing in the last three years has diminished the plague of hard-core cocaine addiction.

(Peter Bensinger, former FDA commissioner: "The hard-core group, the crack and cocaine users on a daily, weekly basis, causing a lot of violence, is going in a dangerous and unhappy direction up.")

That's one reason our cities still look like war zones, which brings us to what many consider the Administration's biggest failing in the drug war: the continued shortage of drug treatment. The Administration doubled money for treatment, but:

(Dr. Mitch Rosenthal, Phoenix House President: "We simply don't have the beginning of a treatment network to take care of these people.")

Now to the supply of drugs. The Administration gets high marks for helping put the Medellin cocaine cartel out of business and for increasing the costs and risks of drug trafficking. But three years and billions of dollars later, the bottom line is this:

(Lee Brown, N.Y. City Police Commissioner: "The crack cocaine, the cocaine, it's readily available, and we have not seen a diminishing of the supply.")

The only success on the supply side, marijuana. But that is overshadowed by a resurgence of heroin and LSD. Some critics believe the drug war no longer is a top Bush priority. Evidence, his appointment of former Florida Gov. Martinez, a man so ineffective some call him the stealth drug czar.

[TV coverage of President Bush and Gov. Martinez addressing a crowd]

Myers continues:

(Rosenthal: "Since the departure of Bill Bennett, there has been no coherent, forceful policy.")

Every president since Richard Nixon has declared war on drugs. George Bush is the first to make it a priority. He has won a few skirmishes but is not close to winning the war. And of late he seems to have lost interest in the fight. (NBC-6)

CHINA/MFN

Brokaw: There's a serious showdown developing between the President and Congress over what to do about China. The Senate tonight voted to tell China that if it wants normal trade with the U.S. it must cut back on missile sales and make real progress on human rights. The President's not going to like this.

NBC's John Dancy reports: No he isn't. The vote means that both the House and the Senate have now rejected the centerpiece of the President's China policy, the idea that trade concessions will make China reform. Intelligence sources say China has sold missiles and nuclear technology to Iran, Syria and Pakistan, and Libya is awaiting deliveries. China also has long-term contracts for future sales to those countries despite promises to the U.S. it would stop future sales. Many senators are worried that Chinese technology is fueling a dangerous situation in the Mideast.

(Sen. Mitchell: "They can do whatever they want in human rights, in violating trade laws and in selling weapons abroad, and they know the Administration won't do anything about it.")

The Bush Administration argues that capitalism has flourished in China, even under the repressive regime, precisely because of the trade concessions and American investment. On Capitol Hill today, Secretary Baker pleaded the Administration's case for MFN status.

(Baker: "And who's hurt when you cut off MFN? The reformers in China are hurt, the hard-liners are strengthened, Hong Kong is killed; not to mention the effect on United States businesses across this country.")

The 59-39 Senate vote was not enough to override a Bush veto, which is expected. But the vote was a major embarrassment for the President. Nine GOP senators voted against him.

(NBC-2, ABC-6, CBS-6)

LOAN GUARANTEES

ABC's John McWethy reports that before Secretary Baker was even given a chance to speak in Hill testimony today, nearly every senator in the room -- Democrat and Republican alike -- took him to task for being too hard on Israel.

(Sen. Kasten: "Somewhere along the way we've gotten lost. The loan guarantees to Israel are humanitarian assistance at no cost to American taxpayers.")

(Sen. DeConcini: "I was very disappointed Mr. Secretary, I must say, of your take-it-or-leave-it statement.")

(Sen. Lautenberg: "Seeing us tie the issue of settlements into the loan guarantees I find disconcerting. It's my view that we owe Israel an awful lot.")

McWethy continues: Baker did not give an inch, repeating that the Administration would be happy to provide loan guarantees so Israel could build housing for Soviet immigrants, but not unless Israel stops building settlements on land the Arabs claim is theirs.

(Baker: "We have a right to know, and frankly we have an obligation to the American taxpayer to know, that we're not going to be financing something directly or indirectly that American policy has opposed for over 25 years.")

The senators accused Baker of interfering in Israeli internal politics and of trying to placate the Arabs to keep them from walking out of the peace talks. Baker flatly denied both charges. Administration officials claim their tough new policy has more support in Congress than it might appear from today's rough hearing. And they add this is one on which President Bush is not likely to change his mind. (ABC-5)

CIS/GATES

Rather: CIA Director Gates says the indispensable key to peaceful change in Russia is Boris Yeltsin. Gates told Congress today he's optimistic that the Russian president has the skill to hang onto power, but he said instability in the former Soviet Union is still the number one threat to U.S. security. (CBS-7)

UNITED WAY

Brokaw: The United Way is the largest network of charities on America raising billions every year. But tonight United Way chapters in six metropolitan areas are delaying paying their dues through national headquarters while lawyers look into the high pay, benefits, and hiring practices of the national president.

News From the Hill

SENATE FLOOR: China trade restriction bill passes, 59-39.

A divided Senate yesterday cleared, 59-39, the conference report on legislation (HR 2212) that would place strict conditions on continued normal trade with China, but supporters fell well short of the two-thirds vote needed to override a promised veto.

Specifically, the bill would require the president to certify that China has made gains in curtailing its human rights abuses, unfair trade practices and nuclear weapons proliferation before renewing most-favored-nation (MFN) trade status, which provides for normal low tariffs.

The House approved the final version of the bill last fall by a whopping 409-21.

Debate in the Senate became heated at points. Majority Leader George J. Mitchell, D-Maine, urged Senate colleagues to back the bill, saying President Bush has done little to recognize what he said was a brutal regime in China.

Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., and others, including some Democrats, spoke against the legislation, saying that lack of favorable trade relations will only further isolate China and block off a potentially massive U.S. export market.

Earlier in the day, the Senate went into a secret, executive session in the old Senate chamber, which is usually frequented only by tourists, to discuss intelligence reports on China's arms trading relationship with Iran and Syria.

The last time the Senate used the old Senate chamber for an executive session was on March 29, 1988, to discuss a nuclear forces treaty.

Joint Ventures. The Senate also voted 98-0 to limit debate and proceed to legislation (S 479) that would broaden protections from antitrust laws for companies engaged in certain joint ventures.

Ohio Democrat Howard M. Metzenbaum headed up the opposition to the bill, saying it would lead to less competition in the marketplace and would hurt the consumer.

HOUSE FLOOR: Pay-per-call services would face more scrutiny.

House lawmakers yesterday voted 384-31 to pass legislation (HR 3490) that aims to protect consumers from unscrupulous 900-number phone services.

The measure would authorize the Federal Communications Commission to regulate the pay-per-call industry, which offers services ranging from the latest stock quotes and sports scores to contests, horoscopes and sex chat lines.

Lawmakers said the legislation was driven by complaints by consumers, who said they often were unaware of the price of 900-number calls.

HR 3490 would require that 900-service providers include a "preamble" before each call that discloses the name of the company offering the service, the price of the call and the nature of the service. Callers could then hang up without incurring any charges.

Other Action. The House passed, 412-0, a measure (HR 2152) that would require the Bush administration to impose sanctions on countries that defy an international ban on drift net fishing, which is blamed for the indiscriminate killing of sea life other than fish.

Lawmakers also passed, by voice vote, a bill (HR 3519) to cap spending authority for the Steamtown National Historic Site at $66 million.

The measure resolves a dispute over funding for the project, built to showcase the age of steam locomotives. Joseph M. McDade, R-Pa., who is pushing the site, had wanted $73 million. But the project had drawn the ire of some lawmakers who said the site was a waste of government money, so McDade agreed to a lower authorization level.

Today

House Floor: House lawmakers will begin debate today on competing Democratic and Republican tax proposals.

Lawmakers are expected to complete general debate on the measure (HR 4210) but will hold off until tomorrow on votes on substitute amendments being offered by each party.

Democrats are pushing a plan that would provide middle-income workers with a $200 tax credit ($400 for joint returns) paid for in part by higher taxes for the wealthy.

A new income tax bracket of 35 percent would be established for individuals with taxable income of over $85,000. In addition, a 10 percent surtax would be imposed on individuals with taxable income over $1 million.

Republicans are pitching a narrow proposal that would provide tax breaks to encourage personal and corporate investment and home buying. It would lower the effective capital gains tax rate from 28 percent to 15.4 percent for assets held longer than three years.

The House will also consider a measure (HR 3844) that would bar for six months the forced return of Haitian refugees to their country.

The Bush administration began the repatriation earlier this month of some of the thousands of refugees who fled Haiti for the United States after a military coup last year.

The Supreme Court on Monday rejected a legal attempt to block the Haitians' forced return.

Senate Floor: The Senate will begin consideration of legislation (S 479) that would broaden existing protections from antitrust laws for corporations engaged in certain joint ventures.

The bill, which backers say would help U.S. corporations compete better with foreign companies, would expand the antitrust liability exemptions already on the books for joint ventures in research and development to also include manufacturing or production ventures.

Greenspan Nomination: The Senate Banking Committee will vote on the nomination of Alan Greenspan for a second four-year term as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board of Governors.

Despite recent pressure from Hill lawmakers for the Fed to lower interest rates, Greenspan remains respected in Congress and is likely to be confirmed.

Yesterday, some Democratic panel members, worried over indications that consumer confidence in the economy is sinking even lower, urged Greenspan to do more to address the nation's financial difficulties, with panel Chairman Donald W. Riegle Jr., D-Mich., calling for a more aggressive monetary strategy.

In the last several months, Greenspan has cautioned Congress against using tax cuts as a centerpiece of any economic recovery package. The Fed chief has maintained that such cuts may create more economic problems in the future because of their impact on the federal deficit.

The committee will also vote on several other nominations, including that of J. Carter Beese to be a member of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Aid to El Salvador: Legislation that would shift aid originally intended for the El Salvadoran military to a fund to aid El Salvador in its transition from war to peace will be marked up by the House Foreign Affairs Subcommittee on Western Hemisphere Affairs.

Congress last year, in an attempt to pressure the El Salvadoran army to accept a negotiated settlement with the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front (FMLN) rebels, withheld half of the $42.5 million in military aid appropriated for El Salvador for the first half of 1992.

The El Salvadoran government and the FMLN signed an accord ending that nation's long civil war on Jan. 16.

This draft bill would allocate the funds withheld in the first half of fiscal 1992 — $21 million — and the entire amount appropriated for the second half of fiscal 1992 — $42.5 million — to a Demobilization and Transition Fund (DTF).

The measure would allow the administration to use a portion — informally set by the White House and Congress at $17 million — of the DTF fund to provide non-lethal aid to the Salvadoran military, such as retraining, helicopter spare parts and food.

According to a Democratic staffer, the administration and subcommittee members agreed on the $17 million allocation and its use before the bill was drafted.

Subcommittee Republicans will probably support the bill, and the measure is expected to pass.

Foreign-Flag Ships: Legislation (HR 1126) that would extend U.S. labor laws to some foreign-flag ships will be marked up by the House Education and Labor Subcommittee on Labor Standards.

Under the measure, U.S. labor laws would apply to foreign-flag passenger ships that regularly transport people to and from U.S. ports, to U.S.-owned foreign-flag ships that transport liquid or dry goods and to offshore fish processing vessels that operate in U.S. territorial waters.

These ships would be subject to both the Fair Labor Standards Act, which guarantees a minimum wage and overtime pay for workers and regulates child labor practices, and the National Labor Relations Act, which governs collective bargaining.

While the measure is expected to win subcommittee approval, Republican members of the panel oppose the bill and plan to vote against it. One reason for this opposition is the belief among many Republicans that the National Labor Relations Act would be impossible to enforce among the affected owners and workers.

FEC Reauthorization: The Elections Subcommittee of the House Committee on House Administration will mark up legislation (HR 4116) to authorize fiscal 1993 funding for the Federal Election Commission (FEC).

The measure would authorize $21 million for fiscal 1993, about $2 million more than was appropriated for fiscal 1992.

The last time an FEC authorization bill cleared Congress was in 1981, although the commission has continued to be funded through appropriations bills.

This year's authorization bill probably will never come to the House floor, according to key staffers.

Republican panel members have agreed, for now, to allow straight funding measures to clear the committee and not to oppose the Democrats' moves to avoid floor consideration.

The FEC, established in 1975, is an independent body created to oversee administration of the 1972 Federal Election Campaign Act. Among other things, it is responsible for collecting and monitoring campaign finance reports for candidates for federal elections, and for supervising public financing of presidential primary and general election candidates. ■

NEWS from p. 1

U.N. PEACEKEEPING funds slated for increase.

The House Foreign Affairs Subcommittee on International Operations approved, by voice vote, a measure (HR 4231) that would provide additional funds for U.N. peacekeeping operations in fiscal years 1992 and 1993.

The legislation would reallocate $350 million in fiscal 1992 and $366 million in fiscal 1993 from military assistance accounts to augment the U.S. share of a projected U.N. peacekeeping budget that has substantially expanded in the last year as a number of international conflicts have been settled.

Currently, the United States shoulders 30 percent of the cost of U.N. peacekeeping activities.

The subcommittee approved a substitute amendment offered by Chairman Howard L. Berman, D-Calif., that would allow the administration to spend more than $366 million authorized in fiscal 1993 as long as Congress was notified of each additional expenditure.

The United Nations' peacekeeping responsibilities have grown as civil wars in a number of nations have subsided or ended. Cambodia and Yugoslavia, where thousands of U.N. personnel are expected to be sent to monitor recent cease fires, would receive the bulk of the money. Resources would also be allocated to El Salvador and Angola, which have also settled internal conflicts.

While the United Nations receives all contributions for peacekeeping, the money is funneled to the nations that are actually providing the personnel in the affected countries.

The measure now goes to the full committee, where it has broad bipartisan support and is expected to win easy approval.

SULLIVAN DEFENDS budget request and health-care package.

Health and Human Services Secretary Louis W. Sullivan told the House Budget Committee yesterday that the president's $585 billion fiscal 1993 budget request for the department "demonstrates this administration's commitment to providing for the health, income security and human service needs of the American people."

But some panel members were skeptical. Committee Chairman Leon E. Panetta, D-Calif., said the president's budget request represented a "mixed bag." Panetta said the president is "kinder and gentler to some areas of the budget while being harsh and insensitive in others."

Although the president proposed an increase in funds for childhood immunizations, he also proposed cuts in Medicare that have been rejected in the past by both Democrats and Republicans in Congress, Panetta said.

One major topic of discussion at the hearing was the Bush administration's proposed health-care reform package. Under the plan, low- and moderate-income families would be eligible for a tax credit or a tax deduction to cover a portion of health insurance costs. Low-income families who do not earn enough to pay taxes could collect their credit in a voucher they could use to buy health insurance.

Panetta said he was concerned with how the administration plans to pay for the $100 billion, five-year proposal. "We shouldn't kid the American public," Panetta said. "It is going to cost more" to provide better health coverage.

His concerns were echoed by Martin Olav Sabo, D-Minn., who said the question of how to pay is the crucial issue in providing access to health insurance. "Promises abound on improving health coverage, but none of them deal with paying the bills," Sabo said.

Sullivan said the administration will look for wasteful spending in the health-care system and redirect the savings to provide better health coverage.

S&L BAILOUT end in sight, Brady tells Banking panel.

Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady told House Banking Committee members yesterday that the $55 billion the Bush administration is requesting to close down failing savings and loans should finish the job.

Panel members, who have been saddled with the S&L funding issue since 1989, were in agreement on one point: The $55 billion had better be the end of it. "If more money [than $55 billion] is needed, this is the time to ask for it, because I doubt that future congresses will have much patience for pouring more funds into this agency," said Frank Annunzio, D-Ill.

Brady urged Congress to avoid the piecemeal approach sometimes employed by lawmakers in the past and to provide the full funding amount. Providing funds for the S&L bailout is one of the least popular actions taken by Congress, and last fall lawmakers allocated just $25 billion of the $80 billion requested by the administration.

Congressional delays in providing S&L money have already cost the government between $400 million and $500 million, Brady said.

The panel's Financial Institutions Supervision Subcommittee will mark up a bill (HR 4241) on Thursday that would provide the full $55 billion. But some lawmakers said that the amount might be lowered.

MARTIN STRESSES training as best Labor response to recession.

Calling training and re-training of the nation's work force "the most important thing that this department can do," Labor Secretary Lynn Martin yesterday told a House Appropriations subcommittee that her department had begun working on preliminary responses to the more than 16,000 layoffs outlined Monday by General Motors Corp.

"This morning... we set to work putting together an immediate task force to see what we can do for those... workers," Martin told Iowa Democrat Neal Smith.

She said the department should not only address the re-training needs of individuals in the auto industry, but it should help private industry and government train workers unemployed because of airline industry bankruptcies, cutbacks in the military and the country's dim economic picture.

"[Today's unemployment numbers] are totally unacceptable," Martin told the Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education Subcommittee, plugging President Bush's economic stimulus package. "It is my belief that we have to have pro-growth packages.... The Congress must act with the president."

BAKER JUSTIFIES tying Israeli loans to a halt in settlements.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III yesterday returned to Capitol Hill to defend the administration's decision, revealed on Monday, to block $10 billion in loan guarantees requested by Israel unless that country halts the construction of new settlements in the occupied territories.

Baker, testifying before the Senate Foreign Operations Appropriations Subcommittee, rejected criticism that U.S. policy jeopardized Jews in the former Soviet Union seeking to emigrate to Israel. Israel, he said, can ensure the success of the emigration by forswearing new settlements.

Bob Kasten, R-Wis., said the administration was making a "serious mistake" by linking the humanitarian loan assistance program to the settlements issue when anti-Semitism was on the rise in the former Soviet Union.

Baker said he was still seeking to work out a compromise with the Israelis.

Subcommittee Chairman Patrick J. Leahy, D-Vt., backed Baker's general proposal, telling the secretary that he would not support loan guarantees if they ran counter to long-standing U.S. policy, which requires a freeze on settlements in the disputed territories before a negotiated resolution of conflict.

Absent a solution to the guarantees and settlements issue, Leahy said he would not go forward with a foreign aid reauthorization bill (HR 2508), which includes aid to the former Soviet Union.

"I see no reason to force my colleagues to vote on something as unpopular as foreign aid if the only outcome is a veto," Leahy said.

FOOD SAFETY procedures need reform, says Madigan.

Agriculture Secretary Edward Madigan admitted yesterday that his department's food inspection efforts need improvement. "I think the department has a credibility problem with food safety," he told the Senate Agriculture Appropriations Subcommittee.

Reports of tainted meat and inadequate inspections of poultry have dogged the Food Safety and Inspection Service for years. Madigan highlighted the $11.7 million increase for new food inspection technologies in the president's budget.

He also noted that he had just named a new administrator and assistant administrator — H. Russell Cross and Donald L. White, respectively — to head up the inspection service. The appointment of the two men, who both have some background in health policy, would help the agency redefine its goals, he said.

Christopher S. Bond, R-Mo., agreed that the food safety service needs improvement. It is "vitaly important," he said, "for FSIS [Food Safety and Inspection Service] to be a reliable body."

ENERGY SECRETARY Watkins defends DOE budget.

Members of a House Energy subcommittee yesterday pledged to work cooperatively with Energy Secretary James D. Watkins on an energy strategy bill (HR 776), but they gave his fiscal 1993 budget mixed reviews.

The Energy and Power Subcommittee marked up the bill last year, and full committee Chairman John D. Dingell, D-Mich., yesterday said the committee would mark up the measure at "an early time and in expeditious fashion."

Watkins gave the subcommittee's effort a lukewarm endorsement. "HR 776 is a workable bill," he said. "There are features in it that we disagree with."

Watkins' performance as Energy secretary and the administration's budget request for the Department of Energy (DOE) were also discussed.

Subcommittee members said Watkins had made some progress in boosting federal research on energy, but they said DOE, which has authority over nuclear weapons production, was moving too slowly in adjusting to the end of the Cold War.

"One would expect a clear shift away from spending on nuclear weapons to greater support for secure domestic energy sources," said subcommittee Chairman Philip R. Sharp, D-Ind.

And Mike Synar, D-Okla., complained that the department is spending too much on nuclear power research and not enough on new technologies to boost oil extraction from existing wells.

Still, Watkins — who has had some rocky encounters on the Hill — received a generally warm reception from the subcommittee. "I have watched your efforts with growing respect," said Dingell.

DEFENSE CUTS and their effect on Pentagon detailed by Aspin.

House Armed Services Committee Chairman Les Aspin, D-Wis., went before the House Budget Committee yesterday to outline his views on how to cut defense spending now that the Cold War has ended. The House Budget Committee is trying to draft a fiscal 1993 budget resolution that details congressional Democrats views on how to fund government programs, and panel members want to factor in how much to shift from defense to domestic programs.

Aspin gave them four different scenarios on how much could be saved from the defense budget over the five-year period of fiscal 1993-97. Under plan A, $208 billion would be cut; under plan B, $164 billion; under plan C, $91 billion, and under plan D, $15 billion.

Aspin's reductions were based on levels of defense readiness; therefore, plan A would essentially guarantee an almost stripped down national defense.

Although he never said outright which scenario he favored, Aspin appeared to be leaning toward plan C. That would be about double what President Bush proposed in his fiscal 1993 budget request. Bush asked for a $50 billion defense cut over five years, but he called for certain funding rescissions in fiscal 1992. For fiscal years 1993-97, Bush's cuts would equal about $43 billion.

House Democrats are expected to caucus today to choose a final defense funding level. Members whose districts are dependent on defense-related jobs are expected to argue for fewer cuts in military spending.

COLLEGE LOANS not tied to financial need under Senate bill.

The Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee took a look yesterday at draft legislation to establish a new federal college loan program to be repaid at a rate that depends on the former student's income.

Under the bill, undergraduate students would be eligible for loans of up to $5,000 per year and graduate students could get up to $15,000 per year. The loans would not be based on financial need, allowing anyone to apply for them. The bill would provide for 300 colleges and universities to initially participate in the program.

Backed by committee Chairman Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.; Bill Bradley, D-N.J.; Paul Simon, D-Ill.; and Dave Durenberger, R-Minn., the plan would target interest rates on the loans to changes in the Treasury bill rate, but the borrower would not repay at a rate of more than 7 percent of his or her income in any one year. The measure would also require the Internal Revenue Service to collect the loans.

In testimony before the committee, Bradley said the measure "will fill the gap for students who cannot afford college on their own and are not eligible for enough aid to attend the college of their choice."

But panel members Nancy Landon Kassebaum, R-Kan., and Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., objected to the bill, particularly because it would create a new entitlement program. "To do something for well-off families at the expense of needy and deserving families would be, to my mind, a mistake," Pell said.

Bill sponsors said they intend to attach the proposal to the tax bill to be marked up on March 3 by the Senate Finance Committee.

SCIENCE RESEARCH funding unbalanced, panel hears.

Science scholars from academia and industry yesterday criticized the administration's $3 billion fiscal 1993 budget request for the National Science Foundation (NSF), telling a House Science subcommittee that the administration's plan would give priority funding to just a handful of special research initiatives at the expense of important core research.

The president's budget emphasizes four basic research missions that would be funded through NSF next year: projects on advanced materials and processing ($319 million), biotechnology ($206 million), high-performance computing ($262 million) and global climate change ($163 million).

Sherwood Rowland, president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, said nearly 40 percent of the agency's total research budget would be consumed by those four projects.

Rowland was among a number of scientists to caution the Science Subcommittee against abandoning traditional research programs in such areas as astronomy, chemistry and geology.

The fiscal 1993 budget request represents an increase of $454 million over fiscal 1992 appropriations for the foundation, which sponsors scientific and engineering research and promotes international cooperation on scientific projects.

NORTH KOREA nearing deployment of nuclear bomb, Gates says.

North Korea could be a nuclear power in as little as two months, CIA Director Robert M. Gates warned the House Foreign Affairs Committee yesterday.

Gates expressed doubt that North Korea would honor an international agreement to open their nuclear facilities to inspectors. "We are skeptical of their intentions," he said.

In a wide-ranging hearing that covered hot spots around the world, Gates also sounded a warning about political instability in the former Soviet Union. In particular, he pointed to opposition to economic initiatives being undertaken by Russian leader Boris N. Yeltsin and potential ethnic conflicts.

He questioned whether the republics will be able to maintain unified control over the commonwealth's nuclear arsenal. "The military is being subjected to unprecedented stresses that the control system was not designed to absorb," said Gates.

NEW EMBASSIES would be established in former Soviet republics.

A senior State Department official told members of the House Foreign Affairs Subcommittee on International Operations that the department will be able to establish new embassies in the former republics of the Soviet Union without new funding.

John Rogers, under secretary of State for management, said the State Department could pay for the new embassies by deferring equipment purchases and spending $22 million left over from an earlier appropriations bill.

Rogers put the cost of operating new embassies in the former republics at $28 million in fiscal 1992 and $48.7 million in fiscal 1993. In addition, the cost of building and leasing facilities over the next two years is expected to be $114 million.

Embassies in Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania have already been established, and the administration plans to place embassies in 11 of the other 12 former Soviet republics. The other former republic, Georgia, is considered too volatile for the establishment of diplomatic relations, he said.

Subcommittee Chairman Howard L. Berman, D-Calif., questioned the wisdom of using existing funds to implement the program. Berman went on to predict that the State Department might "hollow out" important programs in order to pay for the new embassies.

RENT INCREASE would finance public building improvements.

The General Services Administration (GSA) yesterday submitted to the House Appropriations Subcommittee on Treasury, Postal Service and General Government a budget request of $216.5 million.

The request is about $270 million less than the $485.9 million provided GSA for fiscal 1992 because Administrator Richard G. Austin requested no appropriations for the Federal Buildings Fund. In addition to appropriated money, the fund, which is used for capital improvements to federal buildings administered by GSA, is supplied by rent, which is expected to total $1.7 billion in fiscal 1992.

Austin said the GSA will be able to finance $1.5 billion in capital improvements in fiscal 1993 even without an appropriation for the building fund. The improvements will be funded by increased rent charged to agencies that occupy federal buildings.

LEHMAN TO RETIRE; cites declining health.

Saying his poor health had diminished his ability to perform his job, Rep. William Lehman, D-Fla., announced that he would retire at the end of the year.

"I was determined to run for re-election," said Lehman. "But... I cannot meet the standards that I set for myself in how I wanted to perform in this body. I am no longer sufficiently capable." Lehman, who suffered a stroke last year, is the chairman of the Transportation Appropriations Subcommittee. He has a reputation as a savvy horse-trader well versed in the power politicking within the House.

The 78-year-old Lehman is the second member of the "College of Cardinals" — the 13 Appropriations subcommittee chairmen — and the 19th House member to announce his retirement.

Edward R. Roybal, D-Calif., chairman of the Treasury-Postal Service Appropriations Subcommittee, has also announced his departure.

Lehman's retirement puts Bob Carr, D-Mich., in line for the top Transportation spending panel spot. ■

Kerrey "convincingly won" and did it "with a vanilla message and a campaign organization that overpowered all rivals in a state that was barely contested until the past week" (Mercer, ABERDEEN AMERICAN NEWS). Kerrey: "Tonight, we've struck gold in the Black Hills of South Dakota" (mult., 2/26). But SEATTLE POST-INTELLIGENCER's Connelly notes, "Kerrey has yet to find many veins of support elsewhere" (2/26). "The margin of victory ... was in the message and the organization. He presented himself as a moderate, common-sense listener who could speak to a number of issues, including health care, the economy and agriculture" (Kranz, ARGUS LEADER). Kerrey "felt at home here, hitting a stride and a political flexibility that was lacking" in NH (2/26). AMERICAN NEWS' Mercer notes Kerrey "had the most political muscle," with help from the staff of Sen. Daschle, '90 Sen. candidate Muenster and former top SD Dem officials (2/26). SD Dems "delivered a breath-of-life victory" to Kerrey's "sagging presidential hopes" (Raasch, GANNETT/ARGUS LEADER, 2/26). ARGUS LEADER editorial: "We'd like to see Bush and Kerrey face each other. But that's a long shot" (2/26). His campaign "has been buoyed by the recent performance of their candidate, who seems to have found his rhythm after an awkward, unfocused campaign" in NH (Karaim, KNIGHT-RIDDER, 2/26). Kerrey "dealt himself into the scramble" (Witcover, Balto. SUN, 2/26). NBC's Lisa Myers: "What this means is the Kerrey campaign won't have to resort to bake sales. Bob Kerrey needed to win big in [SD] and he did" (2/26). CBS' Threkeld: "[SD] was all about 'who's the alternative' in case something goes wrong with Tsongas ... or Clinton ... [SD] made Bob Kerrey the alternative" (2/26). ABC's Mike Schneider, on Kerrey and Harkin: "For the two who came out on top, the stakes were very high. They both faced elimination and were both understandably pleased with the results" (2/26). Kerrey appeared live on "CBS This Morning" (2/26).

KERREY BOUNCE TO THE SOUTH: He heads straight to GA, "where he hopes to damage Clinton's southern strategy" (Ratcliffe, HOUSTON CHRONICLE). Kerrey media adviser David Doak: "We're going to try to use Georgia as a way to speak to the rest of Super Tuesday, go in and make Bill Clinton the issue. If we can deny him the inevitability coming out of Super Tuesday, his best days are behind him." Doak said the campaign "plans to make an issue out of whether Clinton is 'shooting straight' with voters about how he kept from being drafted for service in Vietnam": "More than the draft, it's the truth question" (2/26). Kerrey adviser Mike McCurry: "We won't be able to outspend Clinton, but we think we can bleed him as he looks for a win somewhere" (KNIGHT-RIDDER, 2/26). Kerrey's first stop today will be a veterans' event in GA, with GA Sec/State Max Cleland, a Vietnam vet and triple-amputee, "at his side" (Orin, N.Y. POST, 2/26). Kerrey finance dir. Ron Fried said fund-raisers in GA, FL, NY, CO and CA "should prove much more lucrative" after SD, adding that a "number of potential contributors and financial backers had been holding off ... to see what happened" in SD. In addition, Kerrey senior adviser Larry Harrington "confirmed that he and other campaign aides would meet today with labor leaders who have been backing Harkin" (Kotok, OMAHA WORLD-HERALD, 2/26). For Kerrey: "a much-needed moment in the sun after weeks of his own frustrations" (Rogers, W.S. JOURNAL). In recent days, Kerrey "has courted" Rainbow Coalition leaders "wary of Mr. Clinton because of his position on labor issues and the recent execution of a black inmate" in AR (2/26).

TSONGAS: "A clear loser ... In his first contested venture outside his native New England, Tsongas flopped, a performance that is certain to renew questions about his potential national political appeal" (Walsh/Schwartz, W. POST, 2/26). "surprisingly weak" 4th place finish (Frisby, BOSTON GLOBE). Analysts said Tsongas "lost popularity because of his proposal to impose a yearly 5-cent gas tax increase for 10 years and his lack of understanding of agricultural issues." Tsongas SD dir. Pat Halley: "We knew the gas tax thing was not thrilling, but we never thought we would carry [SD]. ... It was important to bring the message here and to get it out and see how it plays" (2/26). Tsongas "fell far short of shaking the label of regional candidate" (Kranz, ARGUS LEADER, 2/26). Tsongas press sec. Peggy Connolly: "Historically, [SD] is not the bellwether of the nation" (L.A. TIMES, 2/26). Tsongas, like Bush, "suffered embarrassment" in SD (Woodlief, BOSTON HERALD, 2/26). Tsongas "was hardly expected to rack up the kind of tally he did" in NH. But as the NH winner, he "was expected to display some momentum" (Gosselin, BOSTON GLOBE, 2/26). NBC's Myers: "Tsongas vowed that admitting you don't know beans about agriculture isn't a winning strategy in the farm belt" (2/26). CBS' Threlkeld: "Tsongas never expected much here and in fact finished a distant fourth" (2/26).

CLINTON: He "held his own in the race, but remains the most publicized candidate without a victory" (Kranz, ARGUS LEADER, 2/26). Clinton SD organizer Ross Heupel called 3rd place a "victory, not a loss": "We did not have a partial staff of full-time people until six days ago. We knew it would be tough to go in the backyard of two popular farm senators so overall we are happy with our results" (ARGUS LEADER, 2/26). His "relatively good showing provided more evidence that the allegations of personal misconduct that plagued him in [NH] were not proving to be politically fatal" (Witcover, Balto. SUN, 2/26). But AP's Karen Ball and N.Y. POST's Orin note exit polls which showed 32% questioning Clinton's character. Ball writes he "was apparently hurt ... by publicity about alleged extramarital affairs and draft avoidance" (PHILA. INQUIRER, 2/26); Orin writes voters' "questions ... hurt Clinton more seriously" than in NH (N.Y. POST, 2/26). Clinton, "still winless, remains the powerhouse" (Goldwyn, PHILA. DAILY NEWS, 2/26). NBC's Myers: "Once again, Bill Clinton got most of his votes based on electability, even though he's yet to win a primary" (2/26). CBS' Threlkeld: "Clinton finished a respectable third and finally he can head home for the Southern primaries the next two weeks" (2/26).

HARKIN: He "might have done better than his 25 percent had times been worse in the state. ... But Harkin's farm-state brand of give 'em hell liberalism and retaliatory trade policy didn't find enough of a receptive to overcome Kerrey's no-mistakes campaign." Harkin "had turned to an aggressive ad campaign in the closing days, criticizing Kerrey's record on farm and trade issues. That may have helped him emerge from the middle of the second pack" (Mercer, AMERICAN NEWS, 2/26). "The other clear loser" (Walsh/Schwartz, W. POST). Harkin "refused to acknowledge a setback" in SD. In a released statement, "he said he was pleased by his 'strong second-place showing' and said the race 'is more wide open than ever'" (2/26). Harkin: "I will have won one, Tsongas won one and Kerrey has won one. And where's that fellow from Arkansas?" (WORLD-HERALD, 2/26). His SD showing "may be strong enough to allow him to limp into [MN] next week. A defeat there could drive him from the race" (Frisby, GLOBE, 2/26). But ARGUS LEADER's Cecil writes "a change in strategy, not his [SD] finish, is keeping Harkin in the race." Harkin SD coord. Kip Scott expects Harkin "to embark on a post-[SD] strategy that will concentrate on getting delegates rather than competing in every state. He said details could become clearer [2/27] when Harkin announces his revised strategy" (2/26). DES MOINES REGISTER's Yepsen reports Harkin aides said "they were not scheduling any travel for Harkin later in the week. Opposition camps said that was an indication Harkin might pull out of the race, but Harkin operatives said the campaign was taking time to evaluate which of the next contests would be best for Harkin. Hurting for cash and needing a quick kill, Harkin likely will focus next week on easier-to-organize caucuses instead of costlier primaries," such as MD. Look for him to go to WA, ID and MN, "where he's trying to capitalize on his union support, ties to the party activists and skills at grass-roots organizing" (2/26). SD "could be the political death knell" for Harkin (Karaim, KNIGHT-RIDDER, 2/26). ARGUS LEADER editorial: "Kerrey's victory sets back Harkin's presidential aspirations" (2/26). "Harkin -- beaten cleanly by Kerrey ... and only marginally ahead of Clinton on [his] own Midwestern turf -- appears finished for 1992" (Woodlief, HERALD, 2/26). Harkin is "by far the best organized" in MN, "and word is that no matter what, he intends to compete there" (Orin, N.Y. POST, 2/26). NBC's Myers: "Harkin's severe money problems weren't solved by coming in a distant second, but he vowed to fight on" (2/26). CBS' Threlkeld said his "campaign appears to be doomed" (2/26).

BROWN: While his "anti-politician candidacy saw a groundswell in Maine, not even a frost heave was visible in South Dakota" (Connelly, POST-INTELLIGENCER, 2/26). ABC's Schneider notes his under-10% showing kills his FEC matching funds (2/26).

DEM TV TALK: Al Hunt: "It was a real defeat for Tom Harkin. Bob Kerrey now has 15 minutes in the sun and we'll see if he's better prepared to take advantage of it that Paul Tsongas has been the last week." Andrea Mitchell on Harkin: "He's going to limp along ... He trailed badly in a neighboring state. He's going to rely on labor support but I'm not sure he can hold out 'til [MI] and [IL]." Tim Russert: "Tsongas is going to put all of his marbles in [MD]. [He] frankly needs a victory to bounce back from [SD] and be one of the three frontrunners in this thing -- Clinton, Tsongas, and Kerrey" ("Today," NBC, 2/26).

BUSH: ARGUS LEADER reports, "A week after [NH] voters delivered a wake up call to President George Bush," SD GOPers "sent him another message of dissatisfaction." SD GOP leaders

"said they expected Bush to do better, but that he didn't is understandable given the glut of attention the [Dems] have received." Gov. George Mickelson (R): "I'm going to be very honest. I wish the president would have had 80 percent" (2/26). Bush spokeswoman Torie Clarke: "It's not as though we had a full-court press going on. It's a little bit of a protest feeling you sense in a place hard hit by recession. We won. We'll take those wins" (mult., 2/26). Bush won "easily, but encountered a larger protest vote than his camp had predicted, in what amounted to a referendum on his administration" (Rogers, W.S. JOURNAL, 2/26). The 31% who voted uncommitted "tarnished" Bush's victory (Leshner, L.A. TIMES). Buchanan press sec. Greg Mueller: "That's our vote, even without a campaign" (2/26). SUN's Witcover calls the results "an indication of GOP unrest with the incumbent," and writes Buchanan "may have missed an opportunity ... to repeat his embarrassment" of Bush in NH (2/26). For Bush, a "less than resounding victory" (Kotok, WORLD-HERALD, 2/26). AMERICAN NEWS' Mercer calls SD a "repeat of the protest message in [NH], suggesting there's more to his woes than just a struggling Northeast economy" (2/26). Bush's "second shock in two weeks" (Ratcliffe, HOUSTON CHRONICLE, 2/26). "Buchanan delegates were kept off the ballot because he failed to file slates ... in December, but Bush supporters acknowledged the move may have created a backlash against the president, as some Republicans have accused the state party of working on Bush's behalf" (Frisby, GLOBE, 2/26). Following a weekend poll which showed Bush with 54%, the Bush campaign "reportedly flooded" the state with over 25,000 phone calls to supporters on 2/24 (KNIGHT-RIDDER, 2/26). "Bush lost nearly one-third of the GOP vote to no one" (Minzesheimer, USA TODAY, 2/26). ARGUS LEADER editorial calls the results "another national indicator that the president will not be a shoo-in for re-election" (2/26). W. POST's Walsh/Schwartz: "another ominous warning of political turbulence for President Bush" (2/26). Analyst Stu Rothenberg: "In this case, the uncommitted slate represents an anybody-but-Bush ticket" (AP/PHILA. INQUIRER, 2/26). N.Y. POST's Orin notes a "whopping two-thirds" of the GOP uncommitteds said they wouldn't vote for Bush in the fall (2/26). ABC's Jeff Greenfield: "We've got a protracted fight in both parties. Among the Democrats we've got no clue who the nominee will be and among the Republicans the question is 'How long will Pat Buchanan keep hammering that right flank?'" ("Nightline," ABC, 2/25). CBS' Paula Zahn said SD "turned out to be an embarrassment for President Bush. ... When asked about the [SD] results, his spokeswoman said, 'We have to work harder'" ("CBS This Morning," 2/26). ABC's Hal Bruno: "When you're running unopposed and uncommitted gets almost a third of the vote and when almost 40% of Republican voters say they'd prefer somebody else ... that's gotta be a warning you've got some serious political trouble" (2/26).

*2 JUNIOR TUESDAY: GEORGIA -- HARKIN BLASTS CLINTON ON RADIO

In a radio ad "aimed at black audiences," Harkin hits Clinton's support for the death penalty, "accusing him of using 'a black man's death to boost his campaign'" (Cummings, ATLANTA CONSTITUTION). The ad says Clinton "made a big deal of going home to oversee the execution of Ricky Ray Rector, a brain-damaged man who didn't even know he was being executed." Clinton countered with a radio spot on black stations featuring Rep. John Lewis (D-GA) "warmly" endorsing him. A second Harkin ad begins: "Clinton never got sprayed with Agent Orange in Vietnam, but residents of Jacksonville, Arkansas have been." Clinton GA dir. Bernard Craighead: "It's the desperate act of a desperate, losing campaign" (2/26). For more on Jacksonville, see #7. Kerrey and Tsongas will be in Atlanta today -- Kerrey speaking at Spelman College, Tsongas touring with MLK III and Sen. David Boren (D-OK). Tsongas will also address the Gen. Assembly. Harkin is expected 2/28; Brown 3/1. Clinton will not return until 3/1. His is the only Dem campaign "sufficiently large and organized to make large-scale use" of GOTV phone banks. The rest "will be heavily dependent" on TV and radio (2/26). W. POST's Kurtz on Tsongas' new TV spot -- running in GA & MD -- hitting "some candidates" (read: Clinton, Kerrey) for their support of the middle-class tax cut: "In accusing his rivals of increasing the deficit, Tsongas fails to mention that [they] would pay for the tax cut by raising taxes on upper-income Americans" (2/26).

GOP: Reacting to Bush's ad using Gen. P.X. Kelley's criticism of Buchanan on the Gulf War, Buchanan pointed out that JCS chair Gen. Colin Powell "also expressed doubts": "I supported the war effort from the moment the first shot was fired. I did have disagreements with the policy before the first shot was fired." The 30-second spot will become the "dominant" Bush spot as Bush ad men "ordered the commercial run in two out of every three [TV] ad slots already bought" by Bush. They "rushed" the spot, which will be used in other Southern states, to GA as Bush strategists "nervously gauged" Buchanan's appeal. Bush said he "expected his campaign to begin 'ads that define the differences'" in their positions: "But I'll try to keep it on a high plane" (Hines, HOUSTON CHRONICLE, 2/26). One "high ranking" Bush aide: "We're going for a knockout punch in Georgia. We don't want Pat around by Super Tuesday" (KNIGHT-RIDDER, 2/26). B. GLOBE's Renee Loth notes, "Other than a small message at the bottom of the screen, there is no mention in the ad of President Bush or his campaign" (2/26). In his other GA spot, Bush promises to "make America more competitive ... change welfare ... end fraudulent lawsuits ... and rebuild our education system" (Kurtz, W. POST, 2/26). NBC's Tim Russert: "It's only February and they're playing the race card. ... He didn't mention health care, he didn't mention the environment, drugs, the unemployed. You know what he mentioned. Welfare" (2/26).

BUCHANAN: He "has already spent twice as much as Mr. Bush on Atlanta TV stations for the final weekend," as he released "yet another acerbic" ad in which he explains his "America First" message and "revives a nagging issue" from '88: "The wimp factor." Buchanan in the 60-second ad: "Nobody wants a trade war. But we can't be trade wimps." Bush dep. mgr Mary Matalin: "It's more negative nonsense" (Cummings, CONSTITUTION, 2/26). Buchanan pol. dir. Paul Erickson "promised a new series of hard-hitting Buchanan ads beginning today" that would "scramble the eggs in the frying pan." He described one as a "'graphic portrayal' of controversial art that has been funded under Bush's tenure" through NEA (Loth, GLOBE, 2/26).

*3 JUNIOR TUESDAY: CO, MD, MN, WA

COLORADO: The DENVER POST/News 4 tracking poll, conducted by Talmey-Drake, surveys "slightly more" than 300 Dem and GOP registered voters over 3 nights; margin of error +/- 5.7% (2/24).

Brown to about 500 students at CU: "[CO] is ... totally congruent with my record, my values and [my] vision." Brown reiterated his choice of Jesse Jackson as running mate: "We need the passions and commitment of the most activist people in this nation." But Rainbow Coalition spokesperson Lavonia Perryman said Jackson "has no response right now. There's never been a formal approach that we are aware of" (Robey, DENVER POST, 2/25). ROCKY MOUNTAIN NEWS's Coe writes Brown "told an audience of perhaps 4,000": "I'm hopeful what happened in Maine can happen in Colorado" (2/25). ROCKY MOUNTAIN NEWS editorial notes Brown's message is "more appealing, bold, and intellectually honest than his competitors. The problem is Brown himself ... [he] has undergone so many political incarnations he could practically staff a cabinet with his own personas. ... You want to take the fellow at his word but that doesn't mean you'd immediately trust him with a set of keys to the local bank" (2/25).

MARYLAND: Tsongas was endorsed 2/25 by Gov. Wm Donald Schaefer (D-MD), as well as MD's "leading environmentalists," including state Sen. Gerald Winegrad (D) (Balto. SUN, 2/26). But the endorsement by Schaefer, who did not attend the Tsongas rally, is "something of a two-edged sword," as Schaefer's popularity rating has "slipped into the 20s" but "retains a large and active cadre of supporters." Tsongas, at the Annapolis rally: "You've got a lot of people hurting out there, with the GM layoffs. I grew up in that situation" (Tapscott, W. POST, 2/26). Tsongas also "warned his rivals" he would "counterattack" on TV with his "growing treasury if they repeat the negative ads that battered him" in SD: "What I have tried to do is keep the focus on George Bush. but there is a limit to my patience" (Farrell, BOSTON GLOBE, 2/26). Meanwhile, Clinton spokesperson Marc Ginsberg, denying Clinton "down-graded" MD, said Clinton "wants to win": "We're not in a position to make Maryland a line-in-the-stand state" (Tapscott, W. POST, 2/26). Also, Clinton's "good showing" in some recent polls "and the support he has won from the state's political establishment, may tempt [him] into a showdown here yet" (Farrell, GLOBE, 2/26). But SUN's Theo Lippman notes if Clinton doesn't have strong black support, he "might not even come in second" (2/26). Harkin, addressing a steelworkers union in Baltimore, said SD shows "that neither [Clinton] nor [Tsongas] is the clear front-runner" for the nomination and that he has "the edge in delegates won": "The name of the game is delegates. When the votes are counted (in South Dakota), I will have more pledged delegates than any other candidate" (Goodsell, OMAHA WORLD-HERALD, 2/26).

MINNESOTA: A Political/Media Research poll, conducted 2/21-24, surveyed 218 Dem likely caucus voters; 203 likely GOP caucus voters; margins for both +/- 7% (2/25).

*4 JUNIOR TUESDAY: DEM DEBATES

Three debates hoped for this weekend.

2/29: CO Dem/ROCKY MOUNTAIN NEWS/KUSA-TV 90-min. debate, tape delay on C-SPAN, 9:30 EST. CO Dems say Harkin is the only unconfirmed attendee.

3/1: ATLANTA JOURNAL-CONSTITUTION/WSB-TV 60-min. debate, 12:00 pm EST. Tape delay 6:30 pm to all GA stations. C-SPAN plans to cover, time uncertain. Clinton only confirmed candidate; other Dems asked to confirm by today. Format: Moderator, 2 GA reporters.

3/1: MD Dem/U-MD 90-min. debate, 6:00 pm EST, live on MD public TV, offered to national PBS, NPR. C-SPAN rebroadcast 9:30 pm, 12:30 am 3/2. MD Dems say Kerrey only unconfirmed attendee. Format: Moderator Bob Beckel, with audience questions.

*5 SOUTH CAROLINA: GOV. CAMPBELL REBUILDS BUSH FIREWALL

Quayle will visit Bob Jones U. 2/28 as part of what school pres. Bob Jones III called a "'fence-mending effort' by the Bush administration to regain the support of conservative Christians" (Hoover, GREENVILLE NEWS). Jones, "clearly telegraphing disenchantment" with Bush: "The confidence that conservatives in America had in the Bush administration is deteriorating due to unfulfilled campaign promises. ... The best part of the administration is Dan Quayle and we welcome him to the campus and respect his office." But Quayle's trip is part "of a larger campaign effort for [him] to act as ambassador to those evangelicals and fundamentalists who embraced the ticket in 1988 but have since suffered disenchantment." Univ. officials said Jones was "most recently disappointed by a meeting" between Mosbacher and lesbian and homosexual activists at the Charleston meeting (2/26). COPLEY's Stern notes, "Perhaps's Bush's greatest advantage in his effort to sweep the South is the legacy of the late Lee Atwater," a SC native (S.D. UNION-TRIBUNE, 2/26). NEWHOUSE's Ota writes Gov. Carroll Campbell (R-SC), Bush SC chair, said they "would not try to recruit black voters but would appeal to them by stressing Bush's hiring record and his signing of the civil rights bill." But most blacks "express strong misgivings or mixed feelings about Bush. While they like parts of his record, many object to the GOP's past use of race-tinged symbols" (2/25).

*6 SUPER TUESDAY: FL, MS, TX, TN

FLORIDA: Tsongas began airing his first "bio" TV ad in Orlando, West Palm Beach, Miami, Jacksonville, and Tampa Bay 2/25 (Mitchell, ORLANDO SENTINEL). He is the first Dem on the air in FL; Clinton plans to go up 2/28. Clinton FL dir. Jeff Eller "said Tsongas has not bought enough air time to reach many of the state's voters": "If you want to come to Florida, you better bring your checkbook. Paul Tsongas brought his piggy bank." Decisions from Harkin and Kerrey on FL TV are pending; Brown "is not planning any conventional [TV] spots," but may buy a half-hour block as he has in past states (2/26). WPLG-TV (Miami) sales mgr Ron Collins on the Tsongas buy: "A very extensive schedule" (MIAMI HERALD, 2/26). GOP: Buchanan, on the steps of the state capital, accused the GOP "establishment of trying to obscure his candidacy": "Do they think I'll ... lead all those hairy-chested southern [GOPers] off to my camp?" (HERALD, 2/25).

TEXAS: Duke began his TX campaign "by remembering the Alamo," as he attacked Bush for his "'free trade' policy and for signing 'Ted Kennedy's massive quota bill'" (Attlessey, DALLAS MORNING NEWS). On "the flow of illegal immigration": "It seems that what the men died at the Alamo for will go for naught." He then added TX will be "reclaimed by Mexico." In Lubbock, he "predicted that he would receive at least one-third of the 121" TX GOP delegates. But "key" Dems and GOPers say he's "wasting his time." TX Dem exec. dir. Ed Martin: "Buchanan seems to be the Republican conservatives' cause du jour these days just like Duke used to be." But Duke countered that TX is "'full of rock-ribbed, God-fearing conservatives' who like his message of 'equal rights for all'": "Texas is a very important state for us, and certainly it will affect my campaign greatly in the future how well I do here." Duke, who "vowed" to stay in the race through June, said he has "no plans to run as a third-party candidate" in the general election. But he did say: "I will leave that option open" (2/26). Duke: "I think if George Bush is nominated he will lose" (Lenz, HOUSTON POST, 2/26).

MISSISSIPPI: Buchanan "trudged a muddy campaign trail" from Nashville to New Orleans, "invoking ancestral Civil War spirits and seeking to claim the mantle of a Southern -- and segregationist -- heritage in his quest for votes." This had been seen as "fertile ground" for Duke's run, but Buchanan "staked his claim here instead." At rallies in MS and TN, his speeches were "laced with Civil War imagery and references to his family's involvement with the Confederacy. He even made a pilgrimage" to MS's Oddfellow Cemetery where a dozen Buchanan's are buried: "This time we're going to settle accounts for our ancestors in dealing with the Yankees in Washington, D.C." Buchanan also "bristled at suggestions that he is courting any racist vote, and warned away voters who thought so": "If you think Pat Buchanan is going to grind down into the dirt the faces of those who've had it a lot rougher than the folks I've grown up with, you're voting for the wrong man" (Smith, ATLANTA CONSTITUTION, 2/26).

TENNESSEE: Buchanan "turned up the volume" by saying Bush's "'Washington Republican establishment' is terrified of dissent and 'needs desperately to be overturned.'" To 500 students at Vanderbilt U. on insults from Bush surrogates: "Personal insults is the last recourse of an exhausted mind -- and I'm just surprised all those great minds are exhausted this early in the campaign." He also "fielded questions" on a radio talk show and "blasted Bush for refusing to debate him and for declining to say he will support the party's nominee in the fall, regardless of who it is" (Locker, Memphis COMMERCIAL APPEAL, 2/26).

SOUTHERN STRATEGIES: ORLANDO SENTINEL's Craig Crawford notes candidates "who self-consciously invoke Southern symbols often don't know what they are talking about or don't really mean it anyway. But expect them to swarm over Dixie during the next few weeks, eating stuff they think we like and attacking what they think we hate. ... For the uninitiated presidential campaigner, here's a new idea with Southern appeal: eat dirt." That could even "evoke another hot campaign issue: health care. Dirt is rich in nutrients" (2/26). Columnist Molly Ivins: "The president is supposed to have a lock on the Southern White Male Vote, but I'll put money on the proposition that Bubba is going to like Buchanan" (BOSTON HERALD, 2/26).

*7 CLINTON: AR ENVIROS BURN CLINTON ON INCINERATOR

During his second day in AR for the special Leg. session, AR enviro leaders "blasted" Clinton's record, "focusing on the newly revealed release of dioxin from an incinerator in Jacksonville" (Ridle-Hoover, ARKANSAS DEMOCRAT-GAZETTE). During the protest at the State Capitol, they said Clinton is "not the environmental candidate, but an incinerator candidate." While atty Gregory Ferguson "threatened to file suit" if the incinerator, which was temporarily shutdown, is allowed to resume burning hazardous wastes, activist Brian Hunt said enviros "from all over the South are poised to dog Clinton on the campaign trail if he does not halt his support for hazardous waste incineration." Clinton: "I still feel if you can have safe incineration, it's better than waiting forever and a day and continually re-barreling the waste in a community that is obviously in a region that has been hit by a lot of tornadoes in the last ten years. ... we're going into uncharted areas. Let's look at the facts. The EPA clearly wants us to burn (the wastes). They're clearly not going to let us move (them)." Though Clinton "maintained that a 'referendum' in Jacksonville had shown that the people most affected by the burn agreed with his policy," Jacksonville residents "voted overwhelmingly against incineration in a ballot vote, an informal poll and at public meetings." Clinton conservation dir. Ken Smith explained he was referring to his "majority support in all the precincts" around the plant in '90 and the fact that all the Jacksonville City Council members supporting the burn were re-elected." Jacksonville Mayor Tommy Swain: "I feel like the burn should have proceeded. None of the levels of dioxin detected were above the EPA's action level." Before the protest, activist Patty Frase "said complete information from the previous Jacksonville burn will be delayed until after" Super Tuesday "to help Clinton politically." But EPA's Roger Meacham rebutted: "That's just coincidental" (2/26).

SOUTHERN SABBATICAL: Supporters said the AR Leg.'s special session on child welfare "held some small risk but far more potential for political benefit." Clinton to Leg.: "I'm glad to be home not only where the reception is warm, but where we are back to some era of political reality and where we are judged not only by what we say but what we do." But adviser James Carville said he should be campaigning in GA: "If I had been consulted I would have asked if there was some other way to do this, but I understand that being a Governor is a little different from being a Senator" (Smothers, N.Y. TIMES, 2/26). KNIGHT-RIDDER'S Katharine Seelye notes, "Few here seem to mind that he broke his vow, that his office has been empty or that the state's problems have received little attention," as he "received a hero's welcome" (2/26). W. TIMES' Taylor looks at the effects of the draft issue on his southern support (2/26).

KS: He was endorsed by a host of KS lawmakers, including Reps. Jim Slattery (D-02) and Dan Glickman (D-04) and state Treas. Sally Thompson. Gov. Joan Finney, who supported Cuomo, has not endorsed (Myers, TOPEKA CAPITAL-JOURNAL, 2/23).

*8 TSONGAS: NY GOP VOWS TO FIGHT DEM PLAN FOR BALLOT RESCUE

The Dem-controlled NY Assembly plans to pass a bill that would allow the political party cmtes to decide which candidates qualify for primary ballots, a move designed to aid Tsongas and Brown. Both candidates are facing a challenge to their petitions. Tsongas' collected only 13,952 signatures and it is unlikely that 10,000 are valid. The issue is awaiting a decision from the NY Board of Elections. Although the bill would easily pass the Assembly, the GOP-controlled state Senate has vowed to fight it and "without Senate action it will die." NY GOP chair Bill Powers said election rules changes shouldn't be made "all of a sudden in the middle of the game for someone (Tsongas) because he didn't qualify, and he's a front-runner" (Benenson/Lombardi, N.Y. DAILY NEWS, 2/26).

ENDORSED BY BOREN: Sen. David Boren (D-OK) announced he was backing Tsongas: "He may not speak with a Southern accent, but when it comes to his plans to rebuild the economy, he speaks our language" (N.Y. TIMES, 2/26).

GAS TAX INVITES PUMMELING: With yesterday's SD results, "it looked as if one of the premier examples of sacrifice that Paul Tsongas says Americans must make to revive their economy, a 5-cent-a-gallon gas tax, was exacting its first price: some of Tsongas' political momentum. ... [SD] results were hinting at what some Tsongas supporters most fear about their candidate, that he may be on the right side of more issues than voters." Tsongas manager Dennis Kanin: "The gas tax issue hurt us in a lot of rural areas in [SD]." GOP pollster Bill McInturff: "Can tax hikes ever be a political winner? Almost never, and certainly not this time around" (Gosselin, BOSTON GLOBE, 2/26).

GROWING PAINS: N.Y. TIMES' Karen De Witt reports in the week after NH, the campaign doubled in size and now has about 80 staffers. The candidate and staff vets are dealing with a "loss of control" in daily events. Dem consultant Gerald Austin, who managed Jesse Jackson's '88 campaign, recently signed on "in an as-yet undefined role" (2/26).

*9 KERREY: IS HE THE 'SOMEBODY ELSE'

BOSTON GLOBE's Thomas Oliphant writes, "For now, at least through next Tuesday, Kerrey gets a shot at embodying Somebody Else, requiring a deft dose of tactical feints and a bold jolt of rhetorical message. The goal can't be unachievable big victories; Don Quixote is not needed, but Kerrey might keep the Bee Gees in mind and remember that Stayin' alive is enough." In GA, the goal for Kerrey "is not to beat Clinton, but to beat the media's expectations. He has an opening, thanks to Tsongas' problems so far, but to be credible and to keep Kerrey in cash, a decent showing there would have to be accompanied at a minimum by victories in Tuesday's Idaho and Utah caucuses, as well as strong showings" at the WA and MN caucuses. But this requires the "mid-February Kerrey to get even better and more consistent, and it assumes no return of the January Kerrey" (2/26).

*10 HARKIN: DOUBTS ABOUT TSONGAS STRENGTH

He jetted from SD yesterday to find "little good news" in MD. He was told during a live TV interview that Gov. William Donald Schaefer had endorsed Tsongas, who is still leading in the state. Harkin insisted states with upcoming primaries "have little idea where candidates stand": "Don't kid me that Paul Tsongas is now leading in the polls in Colorado because the people of Colorado know what is program is. It's all the hype that's going on" (Jane Norman, DES MOINES REGISTER, 2/26). He told a crowd of U of MD law students he would do "darn well" in MD's 3/3 primary: "We're going to keep piling up the delegates." He devoted most of his speech to attacks on Bush, but also took jabs at Tsongas, deriding his policies as Republican. He referred to the other Dems as "passing fancies": "It seems to me there's always the flavor of the month, one after the other, and when they get through tasting all the flavors, they'll come home to the basic values of the Democratic Party, which is what I represent" (John Fairhall, Balto. SUN, 2/26). Although Jackson insists he won't make an endorsement, he will tour his home state of SC on Monday with Harkin, just days before the 3/7 primary. Harkin "is pinning his hopes on successfully courting former Jackson supporters," who handed Jackson an overwhelming win in the state's '88 caucus. Jackson spokesman Frank Watkins insists "it's no endorsement," and adds, "Jackson plans to give equal time on the campaign trail to all the Democrats" (USA TODAY, 2/26).

*11 BROWN: LOSES MATCHING FUND ELIGIBILITY

By finishing below 10% in two consecutive primaries (he received 8% in NH), Brown is no longer eligible to receive federal matching funds, except for debt service and winding down costs. The only way to reverse this status is by getting 20% of the vote in a future primary. Brown received 29% in ME, but caucuses don't count.

TAKES IT OUT WEST: To about 500 CO students: "Colorado is ... totally congruent with my record, my values and [my] vision." He reiterated his choice of Jesse Jackson as running mâte: "We need the passions and commitment of the most activist people in this nation." But Rainbow Coalition spokesperson Lavonia Perryman said Jackson "has no response right now. There's never been a formal approach that we are aware of" (Robey, DENVER POST, 2/25). Brown: "I'm hopeful what happened in Maine can happen in Colorado" (ROCKY MOUNTAIN NEWS, 2/25). R.M. NEWS editorial: Brown's message is "more appealing, bold, and intellectually honest than his competitors." The problem is Brown himself ... [He] has undergone so many political incarnations he could practically staff a cabinet with his own personas. ... You want to take the fellow at his word but that doesn't mean you'd immediately trust him with a set of keys to the local bank" (2/25). BOSTON GLOBE's Adam Pertman reports in getting from ME to SD recently, Brown used a private plane paid for by his father, ex-Gov. Pat Brown (D-CA). One campaign source, noting that FEC laws do not limit contributions from family members, also exempted the event from Brown's personal rules: "The $100 limit didn't apply" (2/25).

*12 VULTURE: STILL CIRCLING ...

"With each new set of primary and election returns, a conflict underlying the [Dem] presidential race grows sharper.

... The failure of any clear frontrunner to emerge adds to anxiety of party officials" while "the obstacles to any last minute candidacy are becoming more formidable" (Shogan, L.A. TIMES). A candidate entering the race today could file in only 8 states, DC and Puerto Rico; 14 caucuses "for a combined total of 1,222 delegates." Dem consultant Mark Siegel, noting "numbers aren't everything," points to the 6/2 CA and NJ primaries with April filing deadlines. Winning these two states on opposite coasts would provide "dramatic show of strength." Brookings' Tom Mann on the "legitimacy" of a late candidate: "He would have to explain why he decided to run at this late stage ... He would have to answer the question, 'What's so special about you?'" Shogan names Gephardt and Bentsen as the "most frequently mentioned" late candidates (2/26).

CUOMO: LG James Francisco (D-KS) is helping lead a KS draft campaign. KS voters can choose "none of the above" in the 4/7 primary but can not write in a name until the 11/92 election. Francisco: "We're just now getting started. ... We're hoping to see Cuomo get in. I'm just convinced he is more in tune with my fellow Kansans than anyone I've witnessed." Gov. Joan Finney has said Cuomo is her choice but she doesn't think he is likely to enter the race (AP/TOPEKA CAPITAL JOURNAL, 2/24). NEWSDAY asks, "But what did it mean when he said he's not a candidate and shouldn't be treated like one? ... Does it mean he will stop treating himself like one?" (2/25)

*13 BUSH: MESSAGES FROM THE BIG STATES -- CA, FL, MI

On the same day the Bush campaign upped its ad rhetoric against Pat Buchanan in GA, "sending in the Marines" with an ad by Gen. P.X. Kelley criticizing Buchanan's opposition to Desert Storm (mult., USA TODAY, 2/26; see TV Monitor #99), it was receiving some disquieting messages from three key states.

CALIFORNIA: Speaking at fund-raisers in S.F. and L.A., the President "touched powerful state concerns about the environment, free trade and defense industry layoffs ... Bush seemed confident and forceful ... a stark contrast to his campaign appearances earlier this month in New Hampshire" (Jacobs, S.F. EXAMINER 2/26). S.F. CHRONICLE's Roberts notes Bush also plugged Gov.

Pete Wilson's welfare reform proposal "which would slash benefits and impose new work and education requirements on recipients" (2/26). But CBS' Susan Spencer: "Bush arrived today amid warnings that the state with the biggest electoral prize of all could well thumb it's nose at him. ... Problem two, image. In short George Bush is no Ronald Reagan. Where ever he is from, Maine or Texas or Washington, it's not California. ... The Bush nightmare is if Buchanan makes enough progress to stick around, softening up the president here for the Democrats. But while it's not impossible to win the White House without [CA], it's almost impossible" (2/25). And print coverage of the trip seemed to focus on fall-out from a 2/25 WASH. POST story citing unnamed associates of the ex-president saying that Ronald Reagan believes Bush "doesn't seem to stand for anything." The report, filed for the POST by Lou Cannon, who the N.Y. TIMES calls Reagan's "unofficial biographer" (2/26), was widely repeated in the Bush CA coverage (e.g., W. TIMES, PHILA. INQUIRER, S.F. CHRONICLE, L.A. TIMES, HOUSTON CHRONICLE, BOSTON GLOBE, NEWSDAY, SAN JOSE MERCURY NEWS, etc. 2/26). The president said he didn't believe it, and Reagan spokesperson Cathy Goldberg said, "Anyone close to President Reagan knows that he has not and would not make that statement" (Green, PHILA. INQUIRER, 2/26). But White House temperatures may be driven higher by front page WASH. POST treatment of a private Bush/Reagan meeting yesterday under the headlines: "Bush and the Photo Op That Wasn't -- Visit With Reagan Produces No Public Appearance and No Comment." Many papers reported that the meeting had been suggested by the Reagans because a previous commitment caused them to decline attendance at the Bush fund-raisers, but POST's Yang reports that "the small group of reporters who accompanied the president and First Lady Barbara Bush on their hastily arranged visit to the Reagans' Bel Air home were kept at the gate, which was wrapped in plain, brown paper that blocked any public view. Other than a photograph that the White House released, the two men were never seen together. Neither of them spoke to reporters, and White House press aides said there would be no official comment" (2/26). Coverage also includes many CA experts warning of Bush problems there. Pollster Mervin Field: "For the first time, there's a mood of deep pessimism, and any chief executive takes it on the chin" (KNIGHT-RIDDER 2/26). Field associate Mark DiCamillo: "He just doesn't speak the language of Californians. Maybe it's the Northeast prep school background or the Southern base in Texas" (BOSTON GLOBE 2/26). GOP strategist, long-time CA Reagan adviser and '88 Bush consultant Stu Spencer: "If Pat Buchanan gains momentum in the next 60, 90 days then George Bush is gonna have a real fight on his hands in [CA]" (CBS, 2/25). Long-time Reagan CA consultant Lyn Nofziger: The admin. is not spelling out what it wants to do in the future ("Nightline," ABC, 2/25); Bush campaign is "floundering" (N.Y. NEWSDAY, 2/26).

AM TV ON REAGAN VISIT: NBC's Miklaszewski: "Bush is in big trouble in [CA] so his campaign pulled out all stops and old stars for a Los Angeles fundraiser. Noticeably absent, Ronald Reagan. Reagan reportedly has doubts Bush can win [CA] in November. The best Bush could get was a private meeting at Reagan's Bel Air home. At Reagan's request, no media allowed. Bush barely beat Dukakis here four years ago" (2/26). CBS' Pinkston said Reagan's "active support is critical to any success can expect here. But Reagan did not attend the Los Angeles fundraiser and even after Bush traveled to see him, there were no television pictures recording the event; the press was left at the gate." ABC's Compton: "The president said it's premature to expect his former boss to be out there campaigning yet" (2/26).

FLORIDA: "Sending an economic warning from a key March 10 Super Tuesday primary state to a president whose conservative base is eroding," Sen. Connie Mack (R-FL) yesterday called on Bush to ask for the resignation of Treasury Secretary Brady (W. TIMES, 2/26). Mack: "My constituents are in pain. They are looking to Washington for swift action to get our economy moving again ... The fault rests on the shoulders of your economic advisers, and the head of that team is Secretary Brady" (TAMPA TRIBUNE, 2/26). ST. PETE TIMES called it "a remarkable break with the administration" (2/26). WASH. POST adds that Rep. Newt Gingrich (R-GA) while not joining Mack, announced that Treasury staff members will not be welcome at House GOP leader meetings (2/26). ABC's Brit Hume: "What's important about the Mack letter is not that he can get the president's old friend Brady fired -- he can't. What's important is that it suggests things down South may not be as good for the president either politically or economically as the White House thinks" (2/25). And other GOP conservatives are restive. Evans/Novak reports on a post-NH meeting in former Ed/Sec Bill Bennett's office, attended by Pete duPont ("session's guiding force"), Ed Rollins, Paul Weyrich, Quayle chief-of-staff Wm Kristol (but not Gingrich) -- with only Kristol voicing "a full-throated appeal for the president." There was a presumption that Bennett and duPont felt they had "missed the boat" by not getting into the race before Buchanan -- and a strong feeling that duPont "is on the verge of endorsing the insurgent" Buchanan (W. POST, 2/26). Meanwhile, Sen. Chas. Grassley (R-IA) publicly said that Bush would be helped by an "acknowledgement that breaking his pledge on taxes was wrong" (WATERLOO COURIER, 2/24).

MICHIGAN: CNN reported on the MI UAW accusing Bush of intervening on Arlington, TX GM plant's behalf for political reasons to save it from being closed because TX is Bush's "home state" (2/25) -- at the same time analyst Stuart Rothenberg told them that MI is "a state Pat Buchanan thinks he can do well in" ("Inside Politics," CNN, 2/25). WH press sec. Marlin Fitzwater denied charges of collusion: "The White House made no attempt whatsoever to influence General Motors' decision" (DALLAS MORNING NEWS, 2/26). DETROIT NEWS cites a spokesman saying Bush did not "even learn" of GM's decision until GM CEO Robt Stempel announced it (2/26). But NEWS also cites long ties between Bush and TX (from the First Son owning the Rangers, to the Houston hotel residence, to Sec/State Jim Baker, to campaign chair/ex-Sec/Comm. Mosbacher, to San Antonio's international drug summit attended by Bush today). Sen. Riegle (D-MI) has joined the UAW in speculating about Bush's intervention with GM on behalf of TX. GM has refused Riegle's call to release internal corporate analyses of the decision (2/26).

*14 BUCHANAN: KY WRITE-IN EFFORT PROHIBITED IF HE MISSES BALLOT

Buchanan spokesperson Vince Heuser said there will be "no write-in campaign" for Buchanan in KY's 5/26 primary if he fails to get on that state's ballot: "We've learned that state law forbids this, so we will work harder to win our suit." Heuser filed suit 2/24 in Franklin Co. Circuit Court, "asking for an injunction that would prohibit the printing of official ballots that omit Buchanan's name." He alleges Sec/State Bob Babbage "acted improperly by failing to officially enter" Buchanan in the primary and that "state law that sets the deadlines is not clear." Babbage: "We think the law is pretty clear and if he'd followed the law, he'd have made it a lot easier for everybody." Deadlines were 1/7, when all those who qualified for matching funds were let on the ballot, and late January, when petitions with signatures of 5,000 registered voters were due (AP/Louisville COURIER-JOURNAL, 2/26). Buchanan "could do well" in CA, "because he embodies the conservative profile of the high-propensity" CA GOP voter, writes analyst Sherry Bebitch Jeffe in an L.A. TIMES' op-ed. "This is not good news for [Gov. Pete] Wilson." Buchanan's candidacy will likely "energize right-wingers," who have been struggling with Wilson's moderate policies (2/26). Clarence Page ponders how Buchanan might be different had he been born black (Balto. SUN, 2/26).

*16 KANSAS: DEMS MULL DOLE CHALLENGE

Rep. Dan Glickman's (D-04) decision to forego a challenge to Sen. Bob Dole (R), for now, (see HOTLINE 2/21) has other Dems "considering." Discussions among state Rep. Kathleen Sebelius and KS Assn of Public Employees exec. dir. Charles Dodson so far, are "low key, more in the range of trial balloons." Sebelius: "People want to change Congress and Dole is the quintessential powerful status-quo type Senator." KS Dem chair John Bird: "The candidate is here somewhere. I just don't know his or her name for sure yet" (TOPEKA CAPITAL-JOURNAL, 2/24).

*17 MARYLAND: KEYES MAINTAINS WIDE LEAD FOR TUESDAY PRIMARY

A Mason-Dixon Political/Media Research poll, conducted 2/21-23, surveyed 819 likely voters; margin of error +/- 3.5%. Dem subsample: 464 LVs; +/- 4.9%. GOP subsample: 236 LVs; +/- 7% (WJLA-TV, 2/25). Candidates: Sen. Barbara Mikulski (D). GOPers: Conservative activist Alan Keyes, Harford Co. State's Atty Joe Cassilly, Del. John Bishop, Del. Martha Klima, Ross Pierpont, Gene Zarwell. Primary 3/3.

*18 CHECK KILTERS: LIST OF NAMES TO BE DISCLOSED TO ETHICS PANEL
In a move that could "jeopardize" the re-election chances of a number of members, a House ethics subcmte has decided to release a list of Reps. who overdrew large sums from the House bank. One GOP Rep. said it could include as many as 30 to 60 names. The list is expected to be delivered to the full ethics cmte by the end of the week where the prospect of public disclosure will be determined (Krauss, N.Y. TIMES, 2/26).

*19 MA 06: MAVROULES FOCUS OF GRAND JURY PROBE

Rep. Nicholas Mavroules (D-06) is under investigation by a fed. grand jury in Boston for allegations of bribery and influence peddling. The probe, launched last month by the FBI and U.S. Atty Wayne Budd, involves accusations Mavroules used his influence to transfer an inmate to a more comfortable prison and that he accepted bribes and gratuities in exchange for favors (Murphy/Meyers, BOSTON HERALD, 2/22). Mavroules, who became aware of the investigation after being contacted by reporters, denied wrongdoing and blamed his estranged son-in-law, Andrew Gerakaris, for starting "rumors" that prompted the investigation: "If, indeed, there are allegations being made, I would bet my life the allegations are being made by him because he had threatened my daughter. You are talking about an individual, who in my judgment, is a pathological con artist" (McGrory, BOSTON GLOBE, 2/22). Sources confirmed Gerakaris, who was convicted of insurance fraud, tax evasion and larceny in '89, "has made a number of allegations against Mavroules." But his allegations account for only a portion of the evidence gathered to date (HERALD, 2/22). Mavroules has acknowledged having free use of a car from a dealership under investigation for extending discounts to a number of MA lawmakers. The auto was not reported on his financial disclosure forms (Armstrong/Meyers, HERALD, 2/26). Mavroules underwent a similar probe in '79, but the grand jury failed to find evidence to support allegations he had accepted bribes (Ranalli, HERALD, 2/22). GLOBE's McGrory/Brelis also report Mavroules was a "longtime partner" with a group of MA businessmen who were the principal winners in a $2 million fed. grant to develop property. West Lynn Creamery pres. Arthur Pappathanasi, denied Mavroules' influence was used (2/25).

*20 HOUSE RACE BRIEFING

CA 22: The GOP primary race between Rep. Robert Lagomarsino (R-19) and Reagan dep. asst. Sec/Defense Michael Huffington promises to be "one of the thorniest intraparty battles" in CA this year. When Lagomarsino was tossed into the same CD as Rep. Elton Gallegly (R-21), Gov. Wilson urged him to move and run in the new 22nd. "But neither Lagomarsino nor GOP strategists realized that Huffington," one of the GOP's "wealthiest donors," would also run for the seat. Huffington released a "barrage" of ads that aired during the Olympics (Weiss, L.A. TIMES, 2/19).

FL 17: Rep. William Lehman (D) announced last week he would retire because of poor health (W. POST, 2/26).

IL 08: Rep. Philip Crane (R) and ex-Gov. Thompson appointee Gary Skoein (R) faced off in a GOP debate last week. Skoein went on the attack "saying the public was fed up" and criticizing Crane's voting record, which he said reflected his absence in 1 out of every 6 votes between 1970-90. Crane rebutted, saying he had voted on more than 10,000 bills and had received consistently high marks from the Nat'l Taxpayers Union for his anti-tax stance (Kuczka, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, 2/22).

MD 04: Eleven of the 12 Dems vying for the new majority-black CD participated in a two-hour forum sponsored by the Montgomery Co. League of Women Voters. It is scheduled to be broadcast throughout the week on community cable TV channels in Montgomery and PG counties (W. POST, 2/24). The Nat'l Assoc. of Letter Carriers broke with the State Fed. of the AFL-CIO and endorsed PG Co. State's Atty Alex Williams (D) (release, 2/21). The Balto. SUN is also backing him (2/23). Ex-PG Co. Commis. Francis Aluisi, ex-state Sen. Tommie Broadwater and Del. Dana Lee Dembrow "could play the role as spoilers" in the 3/3 Dem primary by siphoning votes from candidates who have run "broad-scale" campaigns, such as Williams, state Sen. Albert Wynn and PG Co. Councilmember Hilda Pemberton (Norris, W. POST, 2/25).

MA 10: Airline pilot Jon Bryan, who challenged Rep. Gerry Studds (D) in '88 and '90, plans to defect from the GOP and run again as an independent. His decision could "jeopardize Republican prospects, particularly if he and the GOP nominee split the more conservative vote." GOPers: Gov. Weld admin. official Dan Daly, atty Michael Crossen. Bryan's decision came after Weld endorsed Daly (Connolly, BOSTON HERALD, 2/25).

OR 01: Treas. Tony Meeker's (R) primary opponent, Rick Rolf, accused him of "abusing his office" by making political calls from the office and called for his resignation "if he continued running for Congress." An OREGONIAN review of invoices for 10/91-2/92 corroborates the charge. The cost of the calls only came to $17.53, "but there is no record that Meeker has reimbursed the state." Among the calls: 6 to the OR GOP and 4 to the NRCC (MacKenzie, Portland OREGONIAN, 2/25).

PA 02: State Sen. Chaka Fattah (D), one of several who ran in the '91 special election won by Rep. Lucien Blackwell (D), announced 2/24 he would not attempt another bid. His decision came after his aides advised him against it, citing a lack of funds, a delay in the remap and the prospective candidacy of ex-PA Sec/Commonwealth Delores Tucker (D). Tucker is expected to announce today (Burton, N.Y. DAILY NEWS, 2/25).

SD (AL): State Rep. John Timmer (R) took out official papers to challenge Rep. Tim Johnson (D). SD GOP chair Don Peterson plans to accompany Timmer to DC to seek the maximum $63,000 from the RNC (Mercer, ABERDEEN AMERICAN NEWS, 2/21).

VA 11: State Del. Jack Rollison (R) announced his bid yesterday. He positioned himself as the "common sense" GOP moderate, criticizing "the hard right and the lunatic left. His comments "appeared directed at" law prof. Henry Butler (R) and ex-MI Rep. Mark Siljander (R) (W. POST, 2/25).

*21 THIS MORNING: ABC's "GMA" hosted Rep. Charles Schumer (D-NY) and DEA administrator Robert Bonner on the drug war. NBC's "Today" hosted its political panel of WSJ's Al Hunt and NBC's Andrea Mitchell and Tim Russert; health correspondent Robert Bazell explored the type of bone marrow transplant Tsongas used to combat cancer. "CBS This Morning" hosted Kerrey (2/26).

A.M. QUOTABLES: Kerrey: "I sure can go head to head with [Bush] and I can come out on top. I have nothing to apologize for in a general election against George Bush, and I'm going to take it to the good Democratic delegates and say 'I'm on the hunt for you.'" On how he'd be as president: "I'll tell you the truth if I know it, and if I don't know it, I'll tell you that as well" (CBS, 2/26). Rep. Schumer on drugs: "Usage is down among middle class, among teenagers, among casual users. That's not because of what we're doing out there in Colombia and Peru; it's because we've effectively launched a good education program" (ABC, 2/26).

LAST NIGHT: ABC led with the SD primary. CBS, PBS' "MacNeil/Lehrer" and CNN led with the drop in consumer confidence. NBC led with impropriety allegations against United Way pres. William Aramony. "M/L" focused on tax proposals with House Maj. Whip Rep. David Bonior (D-MI) and Rep. Bill Archer (R-TX). CNN: "Crossfire" hosted ex-Sec/State Al Haig and ex-Sen Wm Proxmire (D-WI) on Bush being out of touch with the common man; "Larry King Live" focused on silicone facial injections. ABC's "Nightline" hosted Clinton adviser Frank Greer and ex-Reagan adviser Lyn Nofziger on negative campaign ads (2/25).

BUSH/NEGATIVE ADS: ABC's Ann Compton: "In his first even remotely negative ad, Bush sends in the Marines" (2/26). CNN reported on Bush ad using Ret. Marine Corp Gen. P.X. Kelley to attack Buchanan as an isolationist who opposed the Gulf War ("Inside Politics," 2/25). ABC reported on Buchanan reax to the ad (2/25). NBC reported on Bush's change of heart using three video clips of the president condemning negative ads in NH and attacking Buchanan with negative ad in GA (2/25). ABC's Ted Koppel also reported on the ad. Koppel: "This is what might be called keeping the president above the fray by throwing a surrogate at Pat Buchanan. Incidentally, note the subtle Marshall music in the background." Clinton advisor James Carville: "The things that cause people to lose faith in politicians are midnight pay raises, Watergate, Iran-Contra. The 30-second negative commercial are so far down ... it's not even worth mentioning." Ex-Reagan adviser Lyn Nofziger: "I agree with Carville. ... The object is to win. ... Pointing to an opponent's record is fine ... going beyond that is unfair." On the Bush ad: "The ad may be a little bit unfair, but as far as spots go it's not that bad. ... The war is gone. ... The war isn't a good issue for the president. ... The Bush campaign doesn't have an idea yet what works. ... They're paying too much attention to Pat. ... Clinton media adviser Frank Greer: "It is the reason voters are turned off. ... Bush got elected on Willie Horton ... [Bush] had no agenda to govern. ... The American voters ... sort this out" (Nightline, 2/25).

HARKIN: CNN's Richard Roth over video of Harkin speaking: "Harkin saw his polling visit photo opportunity disrupted by 'ACT-UP' AIDS activists." Harkin: "Gonna have a good showing today." Activist: "No you won't because you're anti-gay. They didn't buy your anti-gay crap in [NH] and they won't buy it here." Roth: "Harkin survived in [SD] to fight another day" ("Inside Politics," 2/25).

DEMS MID-WESTERN PRIMARY PREVIEW: Political analyst Stuart Rothenberg on issues: "Each candidate thinks he's got the answer to what the voters want. Bill Clinton thinks it's a middle-class tax cut. Tsongas thinks capital-gains, economic growth. Tom Harkin thinks he's going to pound on traditional redmeat, Democratic issues, and Kerrey is still trying to find his themes" ("Inside Politics," CNN, 2/25).

LATE NIGHT: Dennis Miller: "Brown said after his win in [ME] he should be considered the sleeper. Of course Bill Clinton is still considered the sleeper-around" ("Dennis Miller Show," 2/25). NBC's Jay Leno on Tsongas: "Tsongas was turned down for Secret Service protection. It was on the basis nobody could pick him out of a crowd anyway." On Bush: "In Tennessee said he was going to 'redouble' his efforts. What does that mean, he's gonna play thirty-six holes of golf now?" On Buchanan: "... And some sad news. Gamma, the oldest ape in captivity died yesterday at the age of sixty. But the good news is Pat Buchanan moves up a notch" ("Tonight," 2/26).

Vice President Quayle's Remarks

10:15AM, Wednesday, February 26, 1992

Savannah, Georgia

- o Stakes are high in Georgia -- Pat Buchanan's people are saying this is a "must win."
- o The people of Georgia will make their views known on Tuesday.
- o Let me say a word about our opponent.
- o He is masquerading as a leader of the conservative movement.
- o A true conservative would have supported the President in Desert Storm.
- o A true conservative would not advocate isolationism.
- o A true conservative would not advocate hiding behind protectionism.
- o Let's be very clear about Pat Buchanan's policies. Pat Buchanan has embraced:
 - the foreign policy of George McGovern;
 - the Middle East policy of Jesse Jackson;
 - and the trade policy of Dick Gephardt.
- o This is not what conservatives stand for. This is not what Republicans stand for. And this is why the conservative Republicans of Georgia should support President George Bush next Tuesday.

MEMORANDUM FROM THE PRESIDENT

TO: CRAIG FULLER

Jerry Weintraub would like to advise on the convention. He is producing a new movie in Houston starring George Strait, country music's hottest talent.

Let's get Jerry's ideas on how to make our convention come alive.

Please call or have someone call him, show him the Astrodome when he is there, etc.

Maybe get him to a planning meeting or ask him to submit some ideas. As you know, he used to stage tours for the stars (Elvis, John Denver, etc.)

Please have someone follow-up.

Thanks.

Pressing for Principle in Israel

President Bush, target of repeated primary campaign criticism for convenient flips and flops, deserves respect for sticking to principle on loan guarantees to Israel. "I'm not going to shift the foreign policy of this country because of political expediency," he said yesterday, and the terms that Secretary of State Baker has now spelled out demonstrate his conviction:

The Administration won't support $10 billion in guarantees for loans to aid absorption of Jews from the former Soviet Union unless Israel agrees to freeze its vigorous construction of new Jewish settlements on the West Bank and in Gaza.

This allays fear that President Bush might, for political reasons, yield to Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's refusal to halt new settlements. But a different fear endures. With Israel heading into a June election, is Mr. Baker impermissibly using loan guarantees to influence the outcome?

Linkage — of American aid and foreign behavior — has often caused heartburn. But foreign aid, weapons sales, loans and trade are legitimate ways for the United States to promote its values and interests. With the full concurrence of Congress, successive Presidents have used these carrots to promote human rights, free elections, economic reforms and the emigration of Soviet Jews and other dissidents.

South Africa's mistreatment of its black majority led to boycotts, an arms embargo and punitive sanctions. In once-Communist Europe, even humanitarian aid has been conditioned on economic reforms. In the case of Pakistan, aid was automatically terminated when Islamabad failed to curb its nuclear weapons program, as required by U.S. law.

Israel, to be sure, is deservedly a special case, for reasons of history, Holocaust and geopolitics. Nowhere else has a democratic nation been threatened with extinction by bigger, well-armed neighbors. America has long rendered generous and indispensable security assistance. No one disputes this broad commitment.

Beyond that continuing aid, Prime Minister Shamir now asks $10 billion in loan guarantees meaning that, in straitened times, the U.S. Treasury would have to set aside hundreds of millions as a reserve against default.

Even so, the guarantees would be readily offered except for the dispute over settlements in the Israeli-occupied territories. Though originally justified as providing security, new settlements have sprung up for a political purpose: to tighten Israel's hold on contested territory.

Israelis themselves are deeply divided by this far-reaching and costly building drive, which has diverted money from providing jobs and homes to new immigrants. Yitzhak Rabin, the new leader of the opposition Labor Party, vows an end to what he calls "political settlements."

In these circumstances, what are Mr. Bush's options? To remain silent or defer decision would advance Mr. Shamir's partisan interests. He could declare that America was willing to wink at more settlements after all. To speak out, as Mr. Baker has done, risks seeming to favor the Israeli opposition, giving Mr. Shamir a chance to cry foul. Risk for risk, America's interests — and Israel's — are better served by firmness.

Since 1967, when Israel conquered the West Bank and Gaza, every U.S. President has spoken out against settlements as either illegal or an obstacle to peace. To back away from that conviction now would betray more than principle and policy. It would undermine hopes for a compromise in the American-brokered peace talks that have just resumed in Washington.

The President and his Secretary of State are right to hold firm.

THE RACE FOR PRESIDENT

A Daily Digest

Bush Mines Rich Vein In the Golden State

Rival's Grave Topic Is Confederate Roots

By John E. Yang
and E. J. Dionne Jr.
Washington Post Staff Writers

President Bush carried out a lucrative political fund-raising mission in California yesterday, confidently predicting he would carry the state despite concerns of key Republicans there that he risks losing the state's 54 electoral votes in November.

In an apparent effort to shore up the president's prospects, a hastily arranged meeting with former president Ronald Reagan was added to Bush's schedule yesterday. The meeting, which had been sought by Bush, came the same day as sources close to Reagan were quoted in The Washington Post as saying he was concerned Bush could lose a state that has voted Republican in nine of the past 10 presidential elections.

The president and First Lady Barbara Bush visited the Reagans at their Bel Air home in an afternoon meeting closed to reporters. Reagan did not attend a fund-raising dinner in Los Angeles last night, citing a previous commitment.

The dinner and another $1,000-a-person event, a luncheon in San Francisco, raised more than $1.5 million for Bush's reelection campaign. The Bush-Quayle campaign had already raised $14.3 million for the primary campaign.

"We'll be all right in California," Bush told reporters aboard Air Force One before leaving Washington yesterday morning. Asked about a report in The Post that Reagan had told friends Bush would face reelection difficulties because "he doesn't seem to stand for anything," Bush told reporters: "I don't believe that."

While Bush was visiting his political patron, his conservative challenger Patrick J. Buchanan was celebrating his heritage in quite a different way yesterday.

Standing in a hard rain in a cemetery in Tupelo, Miss., Buchanan laid flowers at the graves of his Confederate ancestors, a move designed to ensure that every southern conservative planning to vote in a presidential primary in the next two weeks knows that Buchanan's heart belongs in Dixie.

William M. Buchanan, his great-grandfather and a Confederate veteran who was captured by forces of Gen. William T. Sherman at the battle of Jonesboro, near Atlanta, is buried in the cemetery. Buried with him is his wife Bessie, whose father Cyrus, Buchanan noted, was a Confederate soldier who "died on the way to Vicksburg," another martyr to the cause of the South—and thus, presumably, conservatism.

"They were rebels, that's right," Buchanan, the insurgent, said with a broad grin.

In what is already one of the most peculiar primary campaigns on record, this was surely a first: a campaign rally and a family reunion held in a graveyard. As cameras jostled for position in the mud and Buchanan greeted distant cousins, Venita Buchanan Alexander, his fourth cousin, instructed reporters—and, at times, the candidate—on the intricacies of family history.

On Monday night in Atlanta, Buchanan told the story of William Buchanan's capture, and said his showing in next week's Georgia primary would represent his "revenge" upon the general who sacked Georgia during his march to the sea.

"The message is: If you don't like what you've had the last three years up there in Washington, D.C., from the establishment of both parties, you've got an authentic conservative Republican who's got some distant roots right down here in Mississippi and you really ought to give him a good hard look."

While Buchanan presumably has the endorsement of his ancestors, Bush has Reagan, who himself mounted a conservative challenge to a sitting president in 1976 much as Buchanan is doing this year. Reagan endorsed Bush in a videotaped message shown at a dinner held by a conservative New Hampshire political action committee.

In San Francisco yesterday, Bush acknowledged Reagan by name—something he has rarely done in his young campaign. Bush praised his patron and predecessor in a falteringly delivered speech pressing for greater military spending.

Dionne from Tupelo.*

OFFICE OF RONALD REAGAN

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

February 26, 1992

STATEMENT BY PRESIDENT RONALD REAGAN

Los Angeles -- As I said yesterday, the quote attributed to me in the Washington Post is incorrect. Anyone close to me knows that I would not say that and have never made any such statement. Press reports to the contrary are absolutely fallacious.

President Bush and I had an excellent conversation yesterday. He and I share the same view that we must turn the American economy around and that the economic challenges in this country can best be met with Republican leadership. Last week, Nancy and I invited the President and Mrs. Bush for a private visit to our home. It was wonderful to catch up on our many friends in Washington and the White House.

I support President Bush's candidacy to the fullest and will do everything I can to see that he is re-elected as President.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

SUBJECT: DRUG SUMMIT DINNER TOAST

I. SUMMARY

On Wednesday, February 26, at 7:25 p.m. in San Antonio, Texas, you will give the only toast at the state dinner for the drug summit.

II. DISCUSSION

The toast (5 minutes, on cards) presents the successes and challenges of the fight against drugs.

Draft Three
Summit

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: DRUG SUMMIT DINNER TOAST
SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS
WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 26, 1992
7:25 P.M.

Excellencies, ladies and gentlemen: Barbara and I are honored to have you join us here tonight. It is a particular pleasure to welcome to the United States our good friends and neighbors from Mexico, Colombia, Peru, Ecuador, Bolivia and Venezuela. I am delighted that we have gathered in my home state of Texas and in this gracious city of San Antonio. For centuries, San Antonio has stood as an important cultural crossroads of the Americas. \\

We meet at a time of great hope for all the people of the Americas. \ In almost every nation in the hemisphere, people enjoy self-government and respect for human rights. \ We're making steady progress to improve our peoples' quality of life through more open trade and investment, by creating more jobs. That is why I am committed more strongly than ever to completing the North American Free Trade Agreement linking the economies of Mexico, Canada and the United States. And building upon that, we will realize the vision I call the Enterprise for the Americas Initiative -- for robust trade and investment from the Arctic Ocean to the Straits of Magellan. \\

During our meetings this week in San Antonio, we will refine and intensify our common efforts against the menace of drugs. Each of our nations is making progress: Bolivia has successfully intensified its law enforcement efforts against cocaine traffickers. Peru has taken important steps to control airstrips used by traffickers to move cocaine to Colombia. Ecuador is moving against money launderers and traffickers on its territory. Colombia has jailed some of its most violent drug traffickers and is seizing record quantities of drugs. Venezuela is clamping down on those attempting to use its territory to ship drugs to Europe and America. Mexico has reduced cultivation of both opium poppies and marijuana by unprecedented amounts, while seizing record amounts of cocaine through Operation Halcon [ahl-CONE].

For each of our nations, the battle against drugs is truly a war. The ultimate stakes are the same: the minds, bodies and souls of our young people, so many of whom have been hurt or destroyed by the violent world of the drug dealers. \ In the United States, we're stepping up treatment, prevention and research programs -- and we're toughening our prosecution and punishment of drug kingpins. \\\

We're seeing results on the demand side as well. \ In the United States over the past six years, we've reduced the number of current regular users of cocaine by two-thirds. Adolescent use of all types of illegal drugs is down. The number of high school seniors using illegal drugs is the lowest since we began measuring their drug use. \\\

We must do more. \ Drug abuse and drug violence -- particularly in our inner cities -- threaten to destroy our children and everything else we hold dear. \ At risk is the civilization we share: \ our common inheritance and our common future. \\\

Let us renew our resolve. \ Let us strengthen our commitment to guarantee all people drug-free communities. \ As we work to advance the quality of life in our hemisphere in so many ways, let us win a lasting victory in the war against drugs. \\\

May God bless you and all the peoples of the Americas. And may I raise a glass in honor of our distinguished guests and the important mission all of us share.
