Dear Jim,

Just a quick note to say how much I enjoyed being in the great state of North Carolina. The friendly people and the down-home barbeque made me feel so welcome. Thanks for all you did to make the event such a success.

Best wishes to you and Dottie.

Dear Mary:

Rose shared with me the copy of your letter to The Wall Street Journal and your report on the trip to Prague.

Thanks for attempting to set the record straight. However, my experience is the press doesn't want the facts, they just want to present a story that will sell papers. That's the bad news. The good news is the economy is turning around and that should help a lot in the fall.

Bar joins me in sending best wishes to you, Carl and the children.

Dear Rose,

The enclosed is GVI. Sometimes I remind myself of Hargrove.

Prague is a beautiful city. The President's letter had just the right touch. We also played an edited video of the President signing the ADA and his speech. It really is one of his best. They are so excited about ADA and I believe we got our message across - that individual freedom applies to the disabled too.

All three countries stated in their summations that they had to get away from the institutionalization of their disabled. It was really a strange sight to see Gordon Maxfield "sitting in his wheelchair" in Prague Square, filled with thousands of tourists, vendors and natives - yet he was the single wheelchair. Hopefully, we made a difference.

Wish off to Mississippi: for a conference. See you when I get back.

Mr. Norman Pearlstine, Executive Editor
"The Wall Street Journal"
200 Liberty Street
New York, New York 10281

Dear Mr. Pearlstine:

In the April 14 "Politics & Policy" column "The Wall Street Journal's" reporter, John Harwood, wrote the following: "Two years later, he won a House seat, and his father, a former senator from Connecticut, interceded with the Democratic chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, Wilbur Mills, to get the freshman Republican seat on the influential panel. A grateful Mr. Bush "always went with me on everything," recalls Mr. Mills, who is now retired."

Did any member of your editorial staff review this column? Since when do Democratic members choose the Republicans who sit on House committees? George Bush was the candidate for the Ways and Means seat of the House Republican Conference, not the Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee or the Democratic Caucus.

In 1967-1970 Chairman Mills was the most knowledgable Member of the Ways and Means Committee. When Congressman Bush voted with the Chairman, it was because the Chairman presented the most informed case for his position. It is also an error to state that "he went with me on everything". Social security, intangible drilling costs, and the depletion allowance are a few areas that come to mind where Congressman Bush did not agree with the Chairman.

I long ago stopped expecting reporters to understand the individual and geographic nature of specific votes cast by Members, but I do expect a newspaper with the stature of "The Wall Street Journal" to review a reporter's work from the standpoint of logic and fairness. Any high school government student knows that Democrats do not choose the Republican membership on committees.

Sincerely,
MMR

SUBJECT: BLUFFSVIEW ELEMENTARY SCHOOL

On Thursday, April 30, at 2:00 p.m. you will deliver brief remarks (5 minutes/cards) to approximately 500 audience members (430 of which are students, the rest are parents and faculty) at the Bluffsview Elementary School in Worthington, Ohio. After observing students busy at various athletic activities, Arnold Schwarzenegger introduces you for remarks. Your speech emphasizes the importance of both physical and academic fitness.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: ARNOLD SCHWARZENEGGER
WORTHINGTON, OHIO
THURSDAY, APRIL 30, 1992
2:00 P.M.

Governor Voinovich. Principal Donna Kelley. Ted Sanders, State Superintendent of Education. Dr. David Asbury. Faculty, administrators, and friends of this school. Leaders of this wonderful community. / Former Mayor Jim Lerimer. / Honored guests, ladies and gentlemen. / Most of all, today's real stars. A special hello to the students of Bluffsvie Elementary School.

It is a joy to be in Worthington to celebrate the start of Physical Fitness Month. And what better person to help salute that event than our favorite Kindergarten Cop / Arnold Schwarzenegger. /

((This is the 50th State Arnold has visited as part of his mission to say "Hasta la vista, baby" to couch potatoes. / I asked him what he says to people to make so many of them start exercising. / He said: "It's easy. I just use those two magic words -- 'or else.'")) //

Today, Arnold is here to help spread the message: Each of us has a stake in improving America's fitness -- and making exercise a part of each American's day. // No matter what your age -- regardless of your condition -- fitness can enhance the quality and longevity of each American's life. //

I mean the fitness that enriches the mind, and body. Mental fitness. Physical fitness. / I mean the fitness you have shown since Bluffsvview opened last September -- the fitness that includes a balanced and nutritional diet, and draws the line against alcohol, tobacco, and drugs. / Two months ago, this school district joined our America 2000 crusade to help us excel academically. Add to that quality physical excellence, and America will thrive in the classroom and the boardroom / in the back yard and in life. //

Look behind me. Your banner says it best: "Bluffsvview Bears and Worthington Schools support the Youth Fitness Crusade." / Two months ago, your "Jump Rope for Heart" united the community behind this crusade: Raising money for the American Heart Association while showing how fitness can help build longer, healthier, and happier lives -- creating an America that's Number One economically, physically, and scholastically.

((Let's not be like the guy who told his doctor the closest he comes to exercise is watching golf on TV. The doctor told him to try something more strenuous. So now he watches tennis.)) // Instead, let's create a country which is physically and mentally alert -- most of all, a nation that provides opportunity, encourages participation, and thrives on competition. //

Since 1990, Arnold has shown this as Chairman of the President's Council on Physical Fitness -- shown that the more Americans are challenged, the more Americans prevail. / Arnold and I were talking earlier today. He was telling me how he's tried to place emphasis on quality physical education in our schools. / I'm sure Lori Povisil [PAH vih sill] would approve. / Today, only one State -- Illinois -- requires daily physical education for students from K to 12th grade. Let's add Ohio to the list. / Let's also get the elderly involved -- here, I have a special interest -- and remember how exercise can be a truly family affair. //

My late friend Woody Hayes -- the patron saint of Ohio -- knew that. He knew how physical fitness could link mothers and daughters, fathers and sons. / Once he put it this way: "Anyone who will tear down sports will tear down America. Sports and religion made America what it is." /

So let's remember what Woody said. Let's keep America physically fit / let's keep her mentally and spiritually fit / so that we are fit to take on the world. / Thank you for your kindness, and the warmth of this welcome. God bless the United States of America.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

THROUGH: DAVID DEMAREST
FROM: JOSEPH P. DUGGAN
SUBJECT: OHIO ASSOCIATION OF BROADCASTERS

I. SUMMARY

On Thursday, April 30, at 3:15 p.m. in Columbus, Ohio, you will speak to about 200 members of the Ohio Association of Broadcasters. This group, which you addressed twice as Vice President, is composed of radio and TV station owners and managers.

II. DISCUSSION

The remarks (15 minutes, on cards) state your philosophy of what type of government regulation is appropriate, describe the successes of the moratorium, and lay out how the Administration will regulate in the future.

You also discuss the new executive order allowing local governments to privatize their infrastructure.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: OHIO BROADCASTERS ASSOCIATION
COLUMBUS, OHIO
THURSDAY, APRIL 30, 1992
3:15 PM

Thank you, Fred [Cusimano]. Let me begin with a few words about the great man who gave his name to this city. Christopher Columbus dared to explore far beyond the horizons of his continent -- and he discovered a new world. None of us would be here had it not been for his vision.

In the same manner, we wouldn't be attending a broadcasters convention had it not been for the daring of scientific prodigies like DeForest and Marconi, pioneer newsmen like Murrow, and business geniuses like Sarnoff and Paley.

We should keep in mind just how new this thing called broadcasting is. The same year my father was born here in Columbus, just a few blocks away on East Broad Street, Marconi invented radio. And I am sure there are many here who can remember when the first TV broadcasts went on the air.

Yes, telecommunications is still in its infancy. And it is taking its first baby steps hand in hand with another thing that's bright and new in human history: the worldwide spread of freedom and democracy. They are joining a movement in which the United States is the great pioneer and the unsurpassed leader.

Protecting our freedoms -- trusting people with their freedoms -- these form the core of our crusade to make this country stronger. A free economy will be a strong economy, creating more good jobs. We'll keep our society healthy by putting the family first. And by keeping our defenses strong, we'll keep the peace.

I'm working to open world markets. Open trade will create more and better jobs for Americans. It offers our consumers lower prices and more choices. Expanding trade is one of five programs for this country's future that I view as top priorities.

We're working as well to revolutionize -- literally reinvent -- our schools. Parents are leading the way. In community after community, they are standing up to the bureaucratic establishment -- asserting their rights in their children's education. -\\ We're working for fundamental reform of government -- including a balanced budget amendment and term limits to make Congress more accountable. \\ We're working to help the innovations and efficiencies of free markets make quality health care available to all. \\ And we're fighting the explosion of nuisance lawsuits. \\ Let's spend more time helping one another and less time suing each other. \\

We're fighting hard to get the burdens of unreasonable government regulation off the backs of the American people. Regulation imposes a hidden tax on every man, woman and child in this country.

In my State of the Union Address, I lit a fire under my administration's efforts for fundamental reform of government regulation. This week we completed the 90-day moratorium I ordered on new regulations. In just those 90 days, we have completed or set in motion reforms that will save Americans 15 to 20 billion dollars a year. Yesterday, I ordered a 120 day extension of the moratorium -- and I am expecting many more achievements for freedom and common sense.

Fundamental reform of regulation can't be achieved overnight. It's going to take a lot of tough, imaginative, patient effort. But I am totally committed to reforming regulation, because the cost of inaction would be more than we could bear. Think of some of the burdens and contradictions we already face:

Here in Columbus, the city government has projected that over the next decade, its cost of compliance with federal environmental regulations alone will be $1.6 billion. That's $856 per household per year. Now, this is for a community whose entire city budget last year was $591 million. The share of the city's budget to meet these regulations stands to increase from 10 percent to 23 percent. Right now, Columbus is one of the most attractive places in the country for people to work and to live. But I can't say things will stay that way if the cost of meeting government mandates keeps going through the roof.

In Juneau, Alaska, a local charity, the St. Vincent de Paul Society, wanted to build an addition to its shelter for the homeless, also requiring more parking spaces. Unfortunately the building project was delayed for a whole year because bureaucrats declared the site a "wetland." Now get this: The shelter is in the middle of town, surrounded by concrete -- dry concrete, I presume -- on a city block that includes two car dealerships, a plumbing store and a storage business. There's something wrong with this picture. Obviously somebody in this episode was all wet -- but it wasn't the real estate for the homeless shelter.

And back here in Ohio, an unreasonable federal regulation almost forced the closing of the Dayton Area Health Plan -- an innovative managed care program designed to offer high quality care to some 43,000 Medicaid recipients in Dayton. Governor Voinovich led the effort to change this inequity -- and just this week, I signed legislation granting an exemption for this Ohio reform initiative. I have confidence in the new ideas Ohioans are developing on their own -- without mandates from know-it-alls in the Washington bureaucracy. We don't do much for Americans' health when we put HMOs like the one in Dayton on the critical list. \\

It's stories like these that remind us what a visionary Alexis de Tocqueville was. A century and a half ago, he warned that if Americans were not careful, government would "cover the surface of society with a network of small, complicated rules, minute and uniform, through which the most original minds and the most energetic characters cannot penetrate."

Well, we've heard the warning. We're fighting back. Our reform efforts are breathing new life into America's ability to compete, to innovate, to create jobs. Every federal agency I asked has responded with action to ease the burden of unnecessary regulation. From biotechnology to energy to banking -- and, yes, to broadcasting and telecommunications -- we are taking the shackles off of American enterprise.

Let me take this occasion to salute the Federal Communications Commission for its action to relax needless restrictions on ownership of radio stations. The FCC also has taken action to allow competition among international satellite companies. This will help reduce prices Americans now pay on more than a billion telephone calls every year to other countries. These are very welcome reforms. Al Sikes, the FCC chairman, believes in free markets and innovation -- and it's clear to me that is the right direction.

Looking forward, one can't help but see that new telecommunications technologies will revolutionize science, education, and the way we do business. They'll be an important boon to families: The day is coming when mothers and fathers will be able to spend more time at home with their children even as they make ever more productive contributions to our economy.

In the same spirit as regulatory reform is privatization -- selling off government-run facilities that would serve the public far more fairly and efficiently if operated by competitive enterprises. Today, before I came here to Columbus, I signed an Executive Order that will give states more freedom to sell their infrastructure to the private sector if they choose to do so. We hear complaints that America's infrastructure is crumbling, and that states aren't putting enough money into expanding or repairing it. At the same time, private companies are chomping at the bit to invest in these projects.

My Executive Order will enable competitive enterprises to buy infrastructure assets -- including airports, rail facilities, bridges and roads, housing and hospitals. This initiative could generate billions of dollars in new investment and millions of new jobs. American business has the funds to invest in infrastructure and expand it. Through today's action, we will help more people enjoy cheaper and better waste-water treatment service by letting businesses with real market incentives do the job. We will help air travelers get the bigger and better airport facilities we'll need for the 21st century. And the money that states will receive for selling these facilities will be used to build even more new needed infrastructure, or to lower the states' debts -- or to cut your taxes.

Privatizing state enterprises is one of the great hopes for economic growth and rebirth from Mexico City to Moscow. And this great idea presents many chances for positive change right here in our own country -- opportunities we can't afford to overlook.

Of one thing, however, I am certain: The status quo will not yield without a fight. The special-interest crowd won't like our agenda. They think government should own more, not less. Washington is swarming with noisy lobbyists for the old interests of know-it-all government -- people who've never met a regulation they didn't like.

This is springtime, and a young man's thoughts turn -- and his radio dial turns -- to baseball. So I'd like to leave you with a favorite story about the legendary Yogi Berra. In Yogi's hometown of St. Louis, the local people organized a celebration in his honor at the old Sportsman's Park. Yogi quavered with emotion as he stepped up to speak. "First," he said, "from the bottom of my heart, let me thank all the people who have made this day necessary." \\\

The point of the story is this: The freedom-loving people in this country -- people of ingenuity and enterprise, people in leading-edge industries like your own -- are not merely making renewal of limited government possible. \\ They're making it necessary. \\ They're making it inevitable. \\ Technological advance is accelerating so rapidly that the old guard can only hope in vain to keep up. We'll make intrusive and gluttonous government a thing of the past.

We've reached a turning point. \\ We're on the verge of watershed reforms to make government stop stifling people who want to use their freedoms to create, to produce, to serve. \\ The day is coming when enterprisers and innovators like yourselves will lead us to new horizons. The day is coming when dreams not yet imagined will come true.

I am confident about the years ahead: We will keep this nation a champion of ideas and opportunity and justice. We can reform our schools and our courts and our health system -- our very system of government. We can assure that when we reach the new century, America will still be the strongest, the bravest, and the freest nation on the face of the Earth.

Thank you, and may God bless the United States of America.

DESPITE GRIP ON NOMINATION, BUSH STILL GROPE FOR AGENDA

Although President Bush claimed his party's nomination Tuesday night, Administration officials say he has recognized what many Republican strategists concluded long ago: that he has not given the rest of America a good reason why he deserves a second term.

That is why the President has instructed his staff to focus on defining a broad agenda for the next five years, the officials say -- an order that came as Bush shifted his attention to the general election and away from a primary season that had been much meaner than any of his advisers had predicted.

The political urgency of this effort was underscored by the latest New York Times/CBS News poll. Fifty-eight percent of the 1,151 registered voters questioned April 20-23 said the Administration was drifting without clear policies. More than a third said it was moving carefully to develop its plans, a reversal from April 1989, when 61 percent said the Administration was moving carefully.

DEMOCRATS ACCUSE GOP OF ILLEGAL FUND-RAISING

COLUMBUS -- Ohio's Democrats charged Wednesday that Republicans violated state campaign finance laws in the sale of tickets to a fund-raiser featuring President Bush.

State Democratic Chairman Eugene Branstool filed a complaint with the Ohio Elections Commission, objecting to what he called "an illegal money-laundering scheme." Tom Whatman, a spokesman for the Ohio GOP, scoffed at the allegation....

A solicitation letter sent out by Paul Mifsud, Gov. George Voinovich's chief of staff, said two-thirds of an expected $600,000 net from a Thursday dinner would go to Bush's reelection committee and that the rest would be earmarked for the Ohio Republican Victory '92 Committee.

BUSH TO UNVEIL PRIVATIZATION EFFORT

President Bush is expected to unveil Thursday an initiative permitting states and localities to privatize federal assets, a move intended to spur investment and increase tax revenues....

The privatization effort, which Bush will announce in Columbus, marks the first time in his presidency that he has turned to the private sector to lessen federal control....

"The executive order makes a sea of change in federal policy," said John Giraudo, a proponent of privatization and an associate with the Washington law firm Skadden, Arps. "It orders the federal agencies to get out of the way with respect to the selling and leasing of publicly owned items."

(Steven Heilbroner, UPI)

Public Assets May Go Private

BWI Airport and the Chesapeake Bay Bridge could be sold to private companies under a privatization initiative President Bush is expected to unveil Thursday.

In a crackdown on "bureaucratic barons," the President will clear the way for sale of $100 billion in public assets such as airports, roads, bridges and water-treatment plants, according to senior Administration officials....

"It's a way for state and local governments to pick up cash and funding to help build new infrastructure without raising new taxes and spending more money. It doesn't cost us a cent," said a senior Administration official. "State and local governments were reluctant to do this because the federal government had sought to recoup its investment. It wasn't worth the hassle. Now it is."

(Paul Bedard, Washington Times, A1)

BUSH EXTENDS MORATORIUM ON NEW REGULATIONS

President Bush extended for four months a federal moratorium on new regulations Wednesday, proclaiming that his Administration had already saved consumers billions of dollars. But opponents of the move said he was undercutting rules that protected consumer health and safety....

Citizens' organizations were quick to respond to Bush's action. They said the President's earlier 90-day moratorium had already delayed or killed 50 regulations that would have aided the public.

"Despite repeated promises from the Bush Administration that his regulatory moratorium would not affect health and safety initiatives, the Administration had already endangered the public by cutting and delaying many crucial, protective rules," said Public Citizen and OMB Watch.

(John Mashek, Boston Globe)

ROSE GARDEN'S LONE THORN ON DEREGULATION

A carefully orchestrated Rose Garden ceremony Wednesday that had been designed to herald President Bush's new-found theme of reducing government regulation was transformed into a public debate when one of the guests denounced the policy as a Republican giveaway to big business....

Minutes after the President concluded his speech and went back to the Oval Office, Fred Krupp, executive director of the Environmental Defense Fund, who was invited as a member of a presidential commission on environmental policy, moved to the microphone to deliver a much different message.

Bush, he said, was "holding hostage to politics" the protection of public health and the environment and making government regulation a scapegoat for his inability to lead the nation out of recession.

Senior Bush aides, including Michael Boskin and Boyden Gray, stood by fuming as Krupp continued for 20 minutes to make the case that public health and environmental protection are compatible with economic growth and that Bush's new emphasis on deregulation was politically motivated.

(Ann Devroy, Washington Post, A24)

HOUSE COMMITTEE APPROVES BUDGET CUTS TO MATCH BUSH'S PROPOSALS

The House Appropriations Committee agreed Wednesday to slash federal spending by $5.8 billion, more than matching cuts proposed by President Bush but swinging its axe at some different targets.

The committee measure, approved on a voice vote, would rescue one of two Seawolf submarines Bush had proposed eliminating, while cutting defense research more deeply than the President prefers. On the domestic side, the lawmakers accepted cuts in several projects but rescued others from Bush's hit list and proposed some new ones....

"This was a very cosmetic effort on the President's part to once again take another cheap shot at Congress," Rep. Fazio said after the meeting. Committee Republicans supported the measure as well. "It's obvious the mood of the country is to cut spending," said Rep. Myers. "We have little choice." (Alan Fram, AP)

PLAN GAINS TO BALANCE U.S. BUDGETDeficit 'Desperation' Increases Pressure To Amend Constitution

Powerful pressure is building in Congress for passage of a constitutional amendment to require a balanced budget, fueled by frustration over the government's inability to control runaway deficits, the House check-bouncing debacle and public outrage over political gridlock in Washington.

A week after Speaker Foley said he thought both houses would approve such an amendment this year, key lawmakers agreed Wednesday that chances for approval of the amendment -- which has failed narrowly in both houses in recent weeks -- have never been greater.

"It has become a political safe harbor" for lawmakers who are searching for ways to shield themselves from voters' anger over inaction and stalemate in Washington, said Sen. Domenici....

Approval "would appear inevitable," said Rep. Panetta as the House Budget Committee began hearings on the issue Wednesday. The challenge is to "design it in such a way that it does the least harm," said Panetta, who questioned whether a balanced-budget amendment would work and whether control of deficits could be achieved without one.

MARTIN, SENATORS DEBATE JOBLESS AID EXTENSION

Secretary Martin told the Senate Finance Committee Wednesday that she is prepared to open negotiations with Congress immediately on an extension of the temporary unemployment benefits program for jobless workers who exhaust their regular benefits.

But to the obvious vexation of Sens. Bentsen and Riegle, she refused to say how the $4 billion to $5 billion cost should be financed, except not through a tax increase, and said the extension should last only through the end of 1992 "when economic recovery will be well underway."

Bentsen, who favors extending the program into 1993, said hotly, "I want to see some leadership out of the Administration on how we should pay for this." Bentsen made clear he thinks the Administration wants to dump the responsibility for finding the money onto Congress. (Spencer Rich, Washington Post, A21)

REPORT FAULTS HUD ESTIMATE FOR FUNDING

HUD underestimated its needs by $407 million for fiscal 1992 at the same time a $1.2 billion surplus was discovered in the accounts of its two largest rental assistance programs, an inspector general's report shows.

The report, dated April 21, also found that HUD's requests for part of its Section 8 housing program for fiscal 1993 were about $580 million too high.

In another rental assistance program, HUD underestimated its needs by $56.8 million for 1993, the IG said. It added that funding requests for these other programs were "based on questionable data." (Ann Mariano, Washington Post, A21)

A BUSH POINT OF LIGHT IS LEARNING NO GOOD DEED GOES UNPUNISHED

When President Bush honors his annual Points of Light winners in a scheduled White House ceremony Friday, he may find that one of the lights is a bit too pointed.

Among the 21 winners is the employee volunteer corps of once-failed Columbia Savings of Englewood, Colo. Columbia is the successor to the now-defunct Silverado Banking S&L.... "I'm sure whoever put this together didn't pay much attention to the political impact something could have," says GOP consultant Ed Rollins. "Anytime negatives get raised, it's obviously a gaffe." (Jonathan Weil, Wall Street Journal, B1)

HOUSE BOWS TO DEMANDS FROM SPECIAL COUNSEL

Unwilling to risk further political damage from its bank scandal, the House voted Wednesday to release all bank records sought by a Justice Department special counsel.... A resolution to withhold the records until a federal court decided if Malcolm Wilkey's demands were appropriate was rejected 284-131. The House then passed a second resolution 347-64 authorizing release of the records. (Robert Shepard, UPI)

WARNER BUMPED FROM ARMED SERVICES POST

Sen. Warner, who has long touted his ability to look after his state's huge defense industry, is losing a key source of his clout: He is being ousted as top Republican on the Senate Armed Services Committee. Sen. Thurmond announced Wednesday that he will take over the GOP's ranking spot on the committee beginning next year. Warner appears to have lost the job because Thurmond is concerned about his home state's economy.

HOUSE VOTES TO CONTINUE SPACE STATION FUNDING

The planned U.S. space station Freedom survived an attempt to kill it Wednesday when the House defeated a move to cut the $2.25 billion needed to keep the program on track. The 254-159 vote to continue funding marked the fourth time the House has voted on the costly and ambitious program in recent weeks.

HIGH TECH VS. NATIONAL SECURITY

Top computer and telecommunications executives are fighting attempts by the FBI and the nation's intelligence community to ensure that the government can continue to tap into personal and business communications lines as new technology is introduced.

The debate flared Wednesday at a House Judiciary subcommittee hearing on foreign intelligence agencies' attempts to gather U.S. companies' secrets. Rep. Brooks called the hearing to complain that the FBI and the NSA are hurting companies' attempts to protect their communications.

OFFICERS ACQUITTED ON ALL BUT ONE COUNT

SIMI VALLEY, California -- A jury of 11 whites and one Asian American acquitted three white Los Angeles police officers Wednesday in the beating of black motorist Rodney King and failed to reach a verdict on a single count involving a fourth officer....

In Washington, Justice Department officials said the verdict puts the department under pressure to proceed with a civil rights investigation of the beating. The FBI completed such an inquiry last year, but the department withheld a decision on bringing charges in deference to state prosecutors, department officials said.

Four Officers Not Guilty In King Beating

SIMI VALLEY, California -- ...At a state dinner Wednesday night, President Bush appealed for calm in Los Angeles' black communities. "The only thing I would say about that (verdict) is an appeal for calm and reason in the country," he said. "The court system has worked and what's needed now is calm and respect for the law. Citizens of goodwill have the same view."

FEDERAL GRAZING FEES FOUND TOO LOW

The federal government is losing up to $52 million a year by charging ranchers too little to graze their cattle on government land, according to a new report to be submitted to Congress Wednesday. The report also found that the gap between what ranchers pay to graze their cattle, horses and sheep on private land and what they pay the U.S. government for grazing rights on land owned by the taxpayers is growing.

BUSH SAYS GERMAN REUNIFICATION 'ONE OF MIRACLES IN OUR LIFETIME'

President Bush hosted a state dinner in honor of President Weizsaecker Wednesday evening and declared German reunification "was just one of the miracles we've seen in our lifetime."... Bush also singled out for a special salute retiring Foreign Minister Hans Dietrich-Genscher.... Weizsaecker heaped praise on Bush and the U.S. and laughed uproariously when Bush presented him with a German translation of "Millie's Book."

GERMANY'S PRESIDENT CAUTIONS U.S. AGAINST MILITARY DISENGAGEMENT

President Weizsaecker Wednesday urged Congress to resist the temptation to disengage the U.S. from Europe now that the Cold War is over. "We may no longer find agreement on everything as easily as we used to during the Cold War," Weizsaecker said in a speech prepared for a joint meeting of the House and Senate.

He said Germany is "well aware" of U.S. budget constraints that are fueling talk among lawmakers of drastic cuts in the American military presence in Europe. But he said Germany, the U.S. and other developed countries have a strong common interest in dealing with nuclear proliferation problems, and with social and political instability.

FOREIGN-AID BILL FOR FORMER U.S.S.R. ENCOUNTERS ELECTION-YEAR OPPOSITION

As Washington correspondence goes, the letter is unusually blunt and succinct: Before Congress considers aid for Russia, "jobs for Americans must come first."

The letter, addressed to President Bush, is being circulated for congressional signatures by Rep. Bonior.... It declares that Congress must first pass bills revamping unemployment benefits and creating domestic jobs before moving on to aid for the former Soviet Union.

"I'm going to use my position, every influence I have here, to stop any Soviet aid package until these two things are accomplished," declares Bonior, who says he has collected about 100 signatures....

"Passing the authorization for the Soviet aid package is going to be an uphill battle," says Rep. Gephardt, who says he supports the aid legislation but also backs Bonior's effort. And Sen. Lugar says that while "a fairly large majority of senators support the legislation," there will be "tougher sledding" in the House.

OFFICIAL SAYS WESTERN AID CRUCIAL TO FUTURE OF NEW SOVIET STATES

A Bush Administration official on Wednesday said Western aid to the former Soviet Union is urgently needed to prevent economic turmoil from triggering political chaos.

Treasury Undersecretary David Mulford, in congressional hearings, praised the reforms initiated by President Yeltsin, but warned that the former Soviet Union was experiencing an economic collapse of "gigantic proportions."...

Mulford tried to reassure skeptical members of Congress. He said Yeltsin and his economic team have "put together an impressive program and have taken courageous measures particularly since the first of the year."

RUSSIA'S ECONOMY SHOULD TURN AROUND BY 2000 -- STRAUSS

Amb. Robert Strauss said he believed Russia could have "a positive economy" by 2000. JUSTICE DEPARTMENT ORDERED TO RELEASE WALDHEIM FILES

The Justice Department is under court order to release documents related to its decision barring President Waldheim from the U.S. because of alleged involvement in World War II persecution of Jews.... DATA SOUGHT ON THOMPSON DEALS WITH LIBYA, IRAQ

U.S. officials, reviewing the purchase of a major U.S. defense firm by France's electronics giant, Thomson CSF, have pressed Thomson for details of its sale of radars, missile defense systems and communications equipment to Libya and Iraq in the 1980s.

A Thomson official in the U.S. said that the requests for the information came from the Bush Administration and Congress, which are studying the implications of the sale of LTV Corp.'s missile division.

CONGRESSIONAL AGENCY INVESTIGATES POSSIBILITY OF MILITARY AID TO JORDAN

A congressional agency is investigating the possibility that the Bush Administration sent military aid to Jordan during the Gulf War despite an announced cutoff to punish Jordan for siding with Iraq, congressional sources said Wednesday. The probe by the GAO was launched earlier this month at the request of Rep. Obey.

In his letter to the GAO, Obey said the House panel in charge of appropriating foreign aid had learned that the Administration issued a letter containing the cutoff order only after the war with Iraq ended. But the Administration made its decision to suspend the military aid six months earlier, he added.

ISRAEL SAYS PALESTINIAN EXILES CAN JOIN TALKS

Israel offered Wednesday to allow Palestinians living in Arab countries to attend multilateral Arab-Israeli talks, backing off from a refusal to allow Palestinians from outside the occupied territories to take part in the negotiations, officials said.

Israel, appearing to bow to U.S. demands, made the proposal to the U.S. as Arab and Israeli negotiators met during their fifth round of peace talks. Israeli diplomats informed Edward Djerejian, assistant secretary of State, of their new proposal.

MIDEAST TALKS END ON HOPEFUL NOTE

The latest round of Middle East peace talks ends Wednesday amid signs that Israel and the Palestinians have found a way to put aside procedural wrangling and start the arduous process of negotiating an accord on limited self-government for Palestinians in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip....

Palestinian spokeswoman Hanan Ashrawi denounced the Israeli "pilot municipal election plan" Wednesday as "irrelevant, inadequate, extraneous" and unresponsive to requirements of the peace process....

But she also said the Palestinians have not rejected the Israeli proposal. Instead, Ashrawi argued, the offer demonstrated that Israel agrees there should be elections in the territories.

TURKISH LEADER FORESEES EXTENSION OF AIR BASE PACT

President Ozal said Wednesday there is a "high probability" that his nation's parliament will extend the year-old agreement allowing U.S., British and French planes to fly from Turkish bases over northern Iraq, now set to expire on June 28....

Ozal told editors and reporters of the Washington Post that he favors extending the arrangement and that if the U.S. requested an extension, "there is a high probability" of parliamentary approval.

U.S. EASING VIETNAM TRADE EMBARGO

The State Department for the second time this month announced new moves Wednesday to ease the 17-year U.S. trade embargo against Vietnam. Officials said the moves recognize increased Vietnamese cooperation in resolving the cases of Americans still listed as missing in action from the Vietnam War....

Under the new regulations, the embargo will be lifted for commercial sales of food, medicine and agricultural supplies to meet basic human needs. In another exemption, restrictions will be lifted on the activities of U.S. nongovernmental and nonprofit organizations doing humanitarian work in Vietnam.

TAIWAN ADDED TO LIST OF WORST PATENT VIOLATORS

The Bush Administration added Taiwan to the list of countries it says are doing the most harm to U.S. owners of patents, copyrights and other intellectual property. U.S. OPPOSITION TO GREENHOUSE REDUCTION COULD DOOM EARTH SUMMIT

U.N. -- The Bush Administration's steadfast opposition to limits on greenhouse gas emissions could prompt other nations to walk out of the Earth Summit, leading to the collapse of other conservation accords, environmentalists say.

U.S. officials have "been acting like they just want to get out with the cheapest deal possible, and that's just the wrong approach," said Michael Oppenheimer, senior scientist with the Environmental Defense Fund in New York....

Oppenheimer said Wednesday that this week will show whether the Bush Administration is willing to "torpedo" chances for a significant treaty being signed in Rio....

Michael Zammit Cutajar, the secretary of the U.N. negotiating committee, said in a news briefing Wednesday that the U.S. has shown some willingness to compromise but still rejects a European proposal to reduce emissions to 1990 levels by the year 2000.

U.S. TURNS DOWN PROPOSAL TO ADD ENVIRONMENTAL FUND

KUALA LUMPUR -- The U.S. Wednesday rejected a proposal by Third World environmental ministers for a new environmental project fund, saying it preferred to strengthen existing mechanisms. CUBA'S BID TO EXTRADITE SUSPECTS GIVEN LITTLE CHANCE OF SUCCESS

MIAMI -- A Cuban government effort to pressure the U.S. into extraditing two exiles it says blew up a Cuban plane in 1976 is unlikely to succeed, government officials and terrorism analysts said Wednesday....

State Department officials Wednesday interpreted Cuba's gesture as a jab at an old adversary and an attempt to divert internal attention from the island's deteriorating economy. "It's a cynical, political ploy," a State official said....

U.N. officials say the Cuban request is unlikely to go anywhere. Security Council President Mumbengegwi has asked for more information on the matter from both Cuba and Venezuela.

COLOMBIA NABS MAJOR HEROIN-COCAINE SUSPECT

Colombian police have arrested one of South America's major and most violent drug traffickers, believed to be the leader of the growing heroin trade that is expanding through the hemisphere, according to U.S. and Colombian officials. U.S., SEEKING AFRICAN FRIENDS, TURNS TO BOTSWANA

GABORONE, Botswana -- The U.S., having lost many of its traditional allies in sub-Saharan Africa in a wave of political turmoil sweeping this continent, is turning to this relatively stable, democratic southern African nation in its search for new political friends and military partners....

"Our bilateral relationship is excellent," remarked Amb. David Passage. "There are no differences between us, on bilateral or even regional issues."... But a senior U.S. official denied the U.S. "wants to single out Botswana for a special relationship."

ECONOMIC ESPIONAGE ON THE RISE

Nearly 20 foreign governments are carrying out economic intelligence-gathering that harms U.S. interests, CIA Director Gates told a congressional subcommittee Wednesday. But he said there was no firm evidence of a rise in such operations by industrialized countries.

Gates said that, with the end of the Cold War, some spy agencies of the former Soviet Bloc were putting increasing emphasis on ferreting out foreign commercial secrets.

"The economic distress that former communist countries are experiencing in some cases gives impetus to intelligence efforts to acquire information and advanced technology of commercial value to them," he said in a written statement to the House subcommittee on economic and commercial law.

RODNEY KING TRIAL

NBC's Tom Brokaw: After seven days of deliberation, the jury in the L.A. police beating of black motorist Rodney King returned verdicts late today: not guilty on all but one count. And the jurors were unable to reach a verdict on that one [Officer Lawrence Powell's use of excessive force]. (All Nets Lead)

CLINTON

Jennings reports Bill Clinton was on Capitol Hill today.

ABC's Chris Bury says this afternoon Clinton captured 31 previously uncommitted super delegates, and he came away with the picture he wanted -- the Democratic leadership crowding in to declare him the next nominee. (ABC-2)

PRESIDENT'S FUNDRAISER

Jennings: The tone was slightly different for Republicans in the last couple of days. Any one Republican who wanted to be on the inside in Washington last night was in the city's convention center. President Bush and 4,300 invited guests set about the business of raising money -- a lot of money -- which has raised a lot of questions.

ABC's Brit Hume: Receiving the president of Germany in the Oval Office this morning, the President was not eager to discuss last night's Republican extravaganza.

(President Bush: "No, no, not at all about it. Just very successful.")

But the President didn't want the dinner to become an argument for public financing of congressional campaigns, which he opposes though he's been happy to accept matching public funds for his presidential race. So he defended the dinner further.

(Bush: "And I think it's a big success. Everything complied with the law. Don't buy into that old theory about liberals that are trying ram through government financing on everything.")

This city has seen some gaudy fundraisers but none to equal last night, which brought in a record $9.3 million for Republican congressional candidates. The more you paid the closer you got to the Party's big shots, led by the President and Vice President. Thus a businessman named Michael Kogima, who kicked in $400,000, landed at the head table even though almost nobody in Republican circles had ever heard of him. And no one seems quite sure who he is or exactly what he does for a living.

(Fred Wertheimer, Common Cause: "We have not seen contributions like that since Watergate. The laws were designed to put those contributions out of business.")

That's true, but as protesters outside the dinner last evening noted, all the cash raised is what's called soft money -- given to the Party, not directly to candidates and thus not subject to the usual legal limits. The paying guests didn't seem to care about any of that, and some didn't seem too particular about where the money went.

(reporter: "Did you know that the money was not for George Bush -- not for his campaign?")

(Jim Knight: "No, I didn't know that, but it doesn't make that much difference to me.")

The President doesn't want to appear to be selling access to him and his team even socially to the highest contributor. But his party needs the money, and the White House doesn't want public financing of congressional elections because it thinks that would help the Democrats more. (ABC-3)

REGULATION BAN

(Brokaw: President Bush did some campaigning of his own today from the Rose Garden just outside his office. But the President seemed to be running against himself.

(NBC's John Cochran: Today the kinder, gentler President met the ruthless, red tape cutting President, and the ruthless one carried the day. Announcing he would extend his ban on new government regulations through the summer, Bush said health and safety rules should not be permitted to hamper economic recovery, and some safety rules, he said, are actually dangerous. Listen closely to this.

(President Bush: "If government mandates make ladders more and more costly to consumers, just for example, more people will turn to cheaper substitutes, and they'll climb up on chairs or step stools, which are far less safe.")

The invited audience, mostly business executives, may have been baffled by the warning about killer chairs, but Bush's attack on rules and regulations went down well with one big exception. An environmentalist who was invited by mistake condemned Bush's deregulation campaign.

(Fred Krupp, Environmental Defense Fund, stakeout: "What this represents is clearly a wholesale handout to the American business community instead of an effort to make sure that regulations protect the environment and stimulate economic growth and new businesses.")

Privately, senior Bush aides were enraged that someone fouled up by inviting Krupp. Publicly, a top aide compared Krupp's criticism to communism.

(Michael Boskin: "The statements that were made represent an old-style approach that has been obsolete. The collapse of communism in Eastern Europe is a good example of what command and control systems generate.")

Environmentalists would have been even unhappier if they had known what senior aides had told NBC News. Sources say Bush's environmental administrator, Bill Reilly, is losing a bitter fight with Vice President Quayle over clean air regulations. Senior aides believe Bush agrees with Quayle that no public notice is required before companies raise pollution levels. (NBC-3)

ROSS PEROT

NBC's Jim Cummins reports the President's campaign manager in Texas promises no more free rides for Ross Perot.

(Jim Oberwetter: "We're not going to be good boys and be quiet because he doesn't want us to tell what his record has been up to date. We're going to talk about it.") (NBC-4)

PERSONAL INCOME AND SPENDING

Jennings reports personal income was up last month by 0.6%. It's the second gain in a row, not quite as strong as in February. Same thing for personal spending -- it was up more at the beginning of the year than it was last month. (CBS-5, ABC-5)

FOREIGN POLICY

Bush Gets Bad Rap For 'Visionless' Foreign Policy -- "George Bush has often been a target for his alleged lack of vision in foreign policy.... In many respects, these criticisms [from Nixon, other Republicans and Clinton] are misplaced. The White House has advanced a number of clear goals, ranging from broad themes like a 'New World Order' to more specific formulations such as 'Europe: Whole, Prosperous, and Free.' A close reading of presidential speeches reveals careful and meticulous attention to enunciating principles that will guide U.S. policy. Nor do criticisms about President Bush's 'prudence' on issues such as aid to the Soviet Union hold up when placed in context. The White House revealed its major assistance package for the CIS less than 100 days after Yeltsin's government took power -- a period roughly comparable to the 15 weeks it took Harry Truman to launch the Truman Doctrine and the Marshall Plan."

(Robert Beschel, Christian Science Monitor, 4/27)

CAMPAIGN REFORM

A Chance For A Bill In The Public Interest -- "President Bush's opposition to the campaign reform bill is neither in his own political interest nor, notably, in the interests of Republican office seekers who need matching funds and campaign limits if they are to dislodge entrenched congressional Democrats. This bill may be as important a political reform as President Bush will see. It could free the country from blatant influence buyers and their dirty money. By opposing it, the President, whatever his intent, places loyalty to wealthy contributors above assistance to Republican as well as Democrat challengers. For the good of both parties and the great good of the country, he should sign this crucial reform into law."

(Los Angeles Times, 4/29)

ENVIRONMENT

Run Scenic, Run Long -- "This week...President Bush signed a bill designating three segments of the Allegheny River as 'recreational.' The President's signature added 85 miles of the Allegheny to the federal Wild and Scenic Rivers system, culminating a 15-year effort to guard the scenic and natural beauty of the upper portions of the stream.... Fifteen years after the first study of the area was authorized by Congress, we hail the much-desired conclusion."

(Pittsburgh Press, 4/25)

Who's Greener? -- "The President's Earth Day statement, issued last Wednesday, proclaimed that 'sound policies do not force us to choose between' the environment and economic growth. So why not some examples of sound policy from the President and the governor [Clinton]? Bush should join the 70 or so other national leaders gathering in Rio and come up with agreements on sharing the costs of cutting pollution in order to secure long-term benefits for mankind.... Between now and November, the two chief executives still have time to bolster kind words about the environment with a little action."

LOCATION: Oval Office
TIME: 8:20 A.M.
FROM: EDE HOLIDAY GH

I. PURPOSE

To participate in a photo opportunity with the Vice President as you sign the Executive order on privatization.

II. BACKGROUND

As part of the regulatory reform initiative, the Administration has been working to remove barriers to the privatization of Federally financed state and local infrastructure assets. This Executive order asks agency heads to provide greater financial flexibility, such as approving certain exceptions to asset disposition requirements, to state and local governments wishing to sell or lease local infrastructure obtained with Federal assistance.

In your address to the Ohio Association of Broadcasters tomorrow afternoon, you will discuss the privatization initiative in greater detail.

PRESENTATION OF THE AMERICAN CANCER SOCIETY'S
1992 CANCER COURAGE AWARD

DATE: Thursday, April 30, 1992
TIME: 10:45 a.m.
LOCATION: Oval Office
THROUGH: SHERRIE ROLDINS
FROM: CECE KREMER

I. PURPOSE

To present the American Cancer Society's 1992 Cancer Courage Award to Senator and Mrs. Connie Mack.

II. BACKGROUND

The American Cancer Society's Cancer Courage Award traditionally is presented by the President. The ceremony is held annually in April in conjunction with Cancer Control Month, the American Cancer Society's annual education and fundraising campaign. Recipients are selected based on their display of courage and determination in fighting this disease.

This year, the American Cancer Society has selected Senator and Mrs. Connie Mack as the recipients of the 1992 Cancer Courage Award. The Senator is a survivor of malignant melanoma, and Priscilla Mack recently underwent surgery for breast cancer. She has since undergone 6 months of chemotherapy treatments. Mrs. Mack is the fifth immediate member of their family to be diagnosed with cancer.

The Senator and his wife are committed to increasing the public's awareness that early detection saves lives. Both are alive today because of early detection at a treatable stage.

Last year, you presented the award to Robert Polhill, a former hostage in the Middle East. Other recent recipients include baseball pitcher Dave Dravecky (1990), entertainer Steve Allen (1989), actress Jill Ireland (1988) and entertainer Minnie Pearl (1987).

III. PARTICIPANTS

PRIVATE PHYSICAL FITNESS MEETING WITH ARNOLD SCHWARZENEGGER

DATE: April 30, 1992
TIME: 1:20 P.M.
LOCATION: Media Center, Bluffsvew Elementary School
THROUGH: SHERRIE ROLLINS
FROM: CECE KREMER
CLAYTON FONG

I. PURPOSE

To participate in a private meeting with Arnold Schwarzenegger, Chairman, President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports.

II. BACKGROUND

Since his appointment in 1990, Chairman Schwarzenegger has visited all 50 states to promote his "Youth Fitness Crusade". During this period, he has met with nearly every state governor and coordinated youth fitness summits in each state bringing together fitness and community organizations involved in youth. The goal of these summits has been to encourage quality physical education in each state and to underscore the importance of the family in promoting physical activity throughout life.

Chairman Schwarzenegger's commitment to a 50 state tour resulted in the following states forming Governor's Councils on Physical Fitness and Sports:

1990 Virginia
1990 Delaware
1991 New Hampshire
1991 Wyoming
1991 South Dakota
1992 North Dakota
1992 Maine

In this meeting Chairman Schwarzenegger plans to review his accomplishments to date using Ohio, the last of his 50 state tour, as an example and to discuss plans for May as National Physical Fitness and Sports Month.

III. PARTICIPANTS

The President

DATE: April 30, 1992
TIME: 1:45 P.M.
LOCATION: Cafetorium, Bluffsvie Elementary School
THROUGH: SHERRIE ROLLINS
FROM: CECE KREMER
CLAYTON FONG

I. PURPOSE

To observe a student demonstration of the exercises included in the President's Challenge.

II. BACKGROUND

Established in 1966, The President's Challenge is an awards program which recognizes and motivates students, ages 6-17, to meet challenging levels of fitness. At this event you observe and participate in some of the exercises included in the President's Challenge. Beginning the week of May 4, students from Bluffsvie Elementary School will participate in that program. Students will see how physically fit they are by testing themselves at the following six stations:

1. Sit-ups and push-ups
2. Shuttle Run
3. Sit Reach
4. Jump Rope
5. Pulse Check
6. Juggling

Five students at a time will work at each exercise station. Each station is 40 seconds long and students will have 10 seconds to move from one station to the next.

LOCATION: Media Center, Bluffsview Elementary School
THROUGH: SHERRIE ROLLINS
FROM: CECE KREMER
CLAYTON FONG

I. PURPOSE

To address the students and teachers of Bluffsview Elementary School.

II. BACKGROUND

This event allows you to emphasize your commitment to helping children and adults become physically fit and to thank Arnold Schwarzenegger for his efforts as chairman of the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports.

Your visit to Bluffsview Elementary School marks the final stop on Chairman Schwarzenegger's 50 state "Youth Fitness Crusade" in which he promoted quality physical education nationwide.

Bluffsview Elementary School opened on September 4, 1991. It has an excellent physical education program which helps students learn to enjoy exercise both at school and at home. The school's physical education classes are taught twice a week to students in kindergarten through second grade and once a week to students in third through sixth grades. Many Bluffsview students participate in an intramural physical education program which is held every day after school from October through March.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

THROUGH: SHERRIE ROLLINS

FROM: BOBBIE KILBERG BX
CLIFF ALDERMAN CA

SUBJECT: OHIO

I. Recent Correspondence

Mayor Richard Church, Miamisburg, wrote opposing the potential closing of the Mound Nuclear Weapons Facility and asked to meet with you to express his community's support of the Mound Facility.

Mayor Dwight Tillery, Cincinnati, wrote requesting HUD assistance in implementing proposed improvements for the Ridgewood housing development in Cincinnati.

The Ashtabula County Board of Commissioners forwarded a resolution opposing the closing of the Ohio National Guard Armory 3rd Squadron 107th Armored Cavalry Troop K stationed in Ashtabula, Ohio.

II. Discussion

A. Fiscal

Ohio is feeling the effects of the recent recession. While personal income tax receipts are being received according to estimates, sales tax revenues are below what had been expected.

Ohio recently passed a budget reconciliation bill to eliminate its $457 million FY 1992 deficit. Enactment of the bill has prompted the following: emptying the state's "rainy day" fund, using unanticipated debt service lapsed funds and unaccounted for monies in departmental rotary accounts, and requiring direct payors of the state sales tax to pay on a monthly basis as opposed to quarterly. Combined with $200 million in executive order cuts, this bill will eliminate most of the 1992 shortfall. If tax revenues continue to fall below projections, Ohio could face as much as a half-billion dollar problem in FY 1993.

B. Columbus '92 Celebration

Columbus, Ohio, is the largest city in the world named for Christopher Columbus. The Columbus '92 Celebration is the Nation's largest community-wide celebration commemorating the 500th anniversary of Christopher Columbus' first voyage to the Americas in 1492. Columbus '92 is a year-long event, from October 1991 to October 1992, which will feature dozens of special events. The celebration theme is "Columbus '92, A World to Discover."

The centerpiece attraction of the Columbus '92 Celebration is AmeriFlora '92, the Nation's largest single-site Quincentennial event. On April 20, 1992, you participated in the opening ceremonies of AmeriFlora '92.

AmeriFlora, a $94 million project, is the first sanctioned international floral exposition ever held in the United States. Set amidst 88 acres of lavish gardens in historic Franklin Park, AmeriFlora '92 will feature international and domestic exhibits, film and multi-media productions, performance and entertainment, international cuisine and shopping opportunities. AmeriFlora '92 opened on April 20, 1992 and runs through October 12, 1992. More than four million visitors are expected to attend.

C. Mound Nuclear Weapons Facility

The Mound Nuclear Weapons Facility located in Miamisburg, Ohio, is being considered for consolidation by the Department of Energy (DOE). Under DOE planned consolidation of nonnuclear facilities associated with the nuclear weapons complex, the preferred option is to move production work from Mound and other DOE sites to Kansas City in order to reduce overhead costs. At present, no decision has been made on this option. The DOE decision, expected later this year, will take into account public comments and findings from an environmental assessment.

Mayor Richard C. Church of Miamisburg opposes the possible closing and has requested to meet with you on this topic. Also, earlier this month, Secretary Watkins met with Lt. Governor DeWine to discuss the environmental assessment.

D. Education Summit

Ohio's elected officials expressed support for education reform at an Education Summit held in Columbus on February 19, 1992. Governor Voinovich and State Superintendent of Public Instruction Ted Sanders brought leaders together to discuss critical education issues and to begin building a shared vision for education. Participants were members of the Ohio 2000 Committee of 100 and other key education, business and state political leaders.

Small-group discussions centered on a performance-based education system, the six national education goals, and a public policy agenda from The Business Roundtable. Prior to these discussions, in-depth information was provided to participants on Governor Voinovich's Gap Analysis. The Gap Analysis is a state plan to identify what Ohio is doing right, and what it needs to do if Ohio is to achieve the six national education goals and be an education leader and innovator.

A second summit will be held in October, 1992, to share the Gap Analysis findings. The completion of the report is expected to give a strong impetus to the Ohio 2000 effort.

E. Unemployment

Ohio's unemployment rate for March, 1992, stood at 7.2 percent, an increase of .2 percent over the same period in 1991.

The most recent unemployment figures for Columbus show an unemployment rate of 5.6 percent in February, 1992, an increase of .4 percent over the same period in 1991.

F. Term Limits

The term limitation movement has been the subject of much debate in Ohio. Governor Voinovich has publicly stated his support for term limitations for legislators. This has, in turn, led several legislators to introduce bills addressing term limitations as well as several other related campaign reform issues.

Proposals under consideration include limiting state and federal legislators to twelve consecutive years in office, allowing the governor to serve twelve years in office as opposed to the current eight, and determining whether to include local officeholders in such term limitation legislation. Bills addressing each of these issues have been introduced, although the hearing process is expected to continue throughout 1992.

Additionally, two citizens' groups are circulating petitions in an effort to place a term limit proposal on the statewide ballot next November.

The Ohio Legislature has become a full-time operation. Critics of term limit proposals question the effectiveness of limiting years in office for state legislators while no such limitations are placed on staff members or lobbyists. They are concerned that staff and lobbyists are playing an increasingly important role in the legislative arena and that term limitations will increase their power.

G. Clean Air Act

Ohio is a major producer and user of high-sulfur coal and therefore is a major source of sulfur dioxide and acid rain. The Clean Air Act Amendments impose strict new requirements on the coal and utilities industries. This will cause affected utilities in Ohio to install scrubbers, switch to low-sulfur coal, or purchase allowances from other sources that have cleaned up beyond requirements. Ohio coal miners fear the loss of hundreds of jobs. Phase I of the Act requires 15 Ohio power plants to reduce their cumulative sulfur dioxide emissions by 50 percent by 1995.

The Clear Air Act Amendments also require auto emissions testing programs to be established in several metropolitan areas, including Dayton, Toledo and Cincinnati, but not in Columbus. This program had been previously established in Cleveland. Voinovich, as mayor, opposed the imposition of the program on the city. The Act requires states and urban areas having similar air pollution problems to treat them in a consistent manner relative to auto emissions testing.

H. Interstate Waste Transport

Waste importation is one of the major environmental concerns in Ohio and is an issue of particular interest to Governor Voinovich.

Ohio is both a major generator and importer of garbage and hazardous waste. In 1989, the State imported a net of over 130,000 tons of garbage and hazardous waste. In 1990, the State imported 12 percent of its total solid waste landfill disposal.

Federal Courts have ruled the restrictions on interstate waste movement are unconstitutional infringements on interstate commerce. Congress is examining this issue in the context of reauthorizing the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act. EPA's position is to oppose any restrictions. Governor Voinovich is pressing EPA for a more forthcoming position in support of state initiatives to curb imports of waste.

I. Welfare: General Assistance Cuts

Under a new Ohio law that went into effect on October 1, 1991, an Ohio resident can receive General Assistance welfare for only six months in a 12-month period. Consequently, those 106,000 Ohioans on General Assistance as of October 1, 1991, were cut off on April 1, 1992. Benefits were $148 a month until reduced last summer to $100 a month. Recipients also receive medical coverage.

Despite large protests against the cuts, Governor Voinovich has stated that the State is bankrupt and has no money to restore benefits. Restoration of the benefits would cost $118 million. On April 1, Governor Voinovich held a press conference to discuss the benefit cutoff and had to leave the podium when he was overcome by emotion in discussing his concern for those cut from the rolls.

Ohio has reallocated money cut from General Assistance to various state budget areas including adding 130,000 pregnant women and infants to the Healthy Start program, expanding Aid to Families with Dependent Children by 12 percent, and providing more money for inoculations for children, the Headstart pre-school program and the PASSPORT health care program for senior citizens. Additionally, new emergency rules will allow more people to qualify for the Disability Assistance program which provides up to $115 a month to people with chronic medical conditions who need daily prescription medications.

J. Columbus Panda Permit

On April 20, 1992 the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service issued a permit, under the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Flora and Fauna (CITES)/Endangered Species Act, to the Columbus Zoo allowing the importation of two pre-breeding age, captive-born male pandas from the People's Republic of China. The City of Columbus had requested them for exhibition as part of the Quincentennial celebration. The pandas will be on loan for a period of time not to exceed seven months, and will return to China's breeding program well before they are old enough to reproduce.

April 29, 1992

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

THROUGH: RONALD C. KAUFMAN
DEPUTY ASSISTANT TO THE PRESIDENT FOR POLITICAL AFFAIRS

FROM: ANDREW B. FOSTER
ASSOCIATE DIRECTOR
OFFICE OF POLITICAL AFFAIRS

SUBJECT: OHIO POLITICAL BRIEFING

1992 POLITICAL UPDATE - PRESIDENTIAL

Ohio will be a key political battleground in 1992, as it was in 1988. Ohio has supported the Republican Presidential nominee in the past three elections (1980 - 1988), but Democrats have indicated that they will work hard to break that tradition in 1992. Democrat Governor Bill Clinton has made a number of campaign stops in Ohio, most recently on April 16th to address the United Transportation Union convention and participate in two fundraisers. One of the fundraisers ($1,000 per plate) was held at the home of Democrat Joel Hyatt, owner of Hyatt Legal Services and son-in-law of U.S. Senator Howard Metzenbaum.

Governor Voinovich serves as General Chairman of the Ohio BUSH-QUAYLE campaign effort, with W.R. "Tim" Timken as Finance Chairman. The BUSH-QUAYLE Ohio Steering Committee is composed of the following individuals: Keith McNamara, Paul Mifsud, Tally Krumm, Bob Bennett, Martha Moore, Mike Colley, Alex Arshinkoff, Jim Tilling, Bruce Johnson, Joe Deters, Jim Brennan, Senator Grace Drake, and Melanie Mitchell. RNC Chairman Rich Bond officially opened the Ohio BUSH-QUAYLE '92 headquarters in Columbus on Monday April 20th. Doug Preisse will serve as Executive Director.

The Ohio Presidential primary, originally scheduled for May 5, 1992, was moved to June 2, 1992. The main reason for the change was the continuing reapportionment battle -- which has since been settled. You and Pat Buchanan will appear on the GOP ballot, with Bill Clinton, Jerry Brown, and Paul Tsongas on the Democrat slate. Your Ohio organization is solid, and your margin of victory should be large. Buchanan has little or no representation in the Buckeye state.

Ohio will have 21 electoral votes in the 1992 Presidential contest. The BUSH-QUAYLE ticket carried Ohio in the 1988 election with a 55% to 44% margin.

OHIO POLITICAL BRIEFING

In addition to the Presidential and U.S. Senate races, the Ohio Republican Party is aiming to take control of the Ohio General Assembly in 1992. Currently, Republicans control the State Senate 21-12, and trail in the Assembly 38-61. While it is a formidable task, the state GOP is confident that it can make major gains --if not capturing the Assembly, because Republicans control the reapportionment process. State Chairman Bob Bennett and Governor Voinovich have aggressively recruited candidates, and are hopeful that their efforts will allow the Governor to further gains he has made in the past year -- with a Republican controlled Assembly.

1992 POLITICAL OUTLOOK - U.S. SENATE

On Monday, February 3, 1992, Lt. Governor Mike DeWine announced his candidacy for the United States Senate -- challenging Democrat incumbent Senator John Glenn. DeWine is a popular Ohio figure and expects an uphill battle, but is considered an aggressive campaigner. His strategy will be to portray Glenn as out of touch with mainstream Ohio, and ineffective as a legislator. DeWine hopes to tap into the current anti-incumbent mood, and suggest that Ohio needs a new face in Washington. DeWine is 49 years old, Glenn is 70. DeWine is a conservative, Glenn a liberal. DeWine endorses term limitations, Glenn has served in the U.S. Senate for 18 years. The contrasts between the two candidates could not be sharper.

DeWine must raise over $3 million to mount an effective challenge to the nationally known and popular John Glenn. Governor Voinovich (who will serve as DeWine's campaign Chairman) and the Ohio Republican Party have pledged their full support to DeWine, and he has requested your participation in an Ohio fundraising event. To date, DeWine has raised nearly $500,000 and Glenn has raised about $1 million.

Despite his involvement in the Savings and Loan "Keating Five" scandal, Glenn remains a popular elected figure in Ohio. Glenn's longstanding career in public service has given him tremendous credibility with voters, and most Ohioans are willing to look past his obvious mistakes. DeWine will be careful not to attack Glenn's hero image, but will rather stress the need for change. Most experts agree that Ohio's two Democrat U.S. Senators (Glenn and Howard Metzenbaum) are far too liberal for a state with a Republican Governor, Lt. Governor, and Secretary of State.

OHIO GOP UPDATE

The Ohio Republican Party continues to strengthen its position under the leadership of Chairman Bob Bennett. The Ohio GOP is arguably one of the best run state party organizations in the nation. Bennett is backed up by National Committeeman Mike Colley and National Committeewoman Martha Moore, as well as a top notch political staff.

REAPPORTIONMENT UPDATE

Ohio will lose two Congressional seats in 1992 as a result of reapportionment. Republicans control the Reapportionment Board 3-2 (Governor, Secretary of State, Senate President). Ohio Republicans fared well in Congressional redistricting, but GOP Congressmen Bob McEwen and Clarence Miller are forced into a primary situation. Democrat incumbents Edward Feighan, Donald Pease, and Dennis Eckart will all retire in 1993. Republican Congressman Chalmers Wylie recently announced his retirement, as well. Wylie was elected to the House in 1966, and has been thinking about retirement for some time. In addition, Wylie was revealed as a major offender in the Congressional check kiting scandal.

The state legislative redistricting battle escalated from the state legislature to the U.S. Supreme Court. Fortunately, the Court upheld the GOP plan, and the legislative primary will be held in conjunction with the Presidential and Congressional primary on June 2nd.

Opposition scores, not listed here are the inverse of the support score; i.e., the opposition score is equal to 100 percent minus the individual's support score.

* Sen. Harris Wofford, D-Pa., was sworn in May 9, 1991, to succeed John Heinz. R who died in a plane crash April 6, 1991. Heinz was eligible for 19 presidential support votes in 1991. His presidential support score was 79 percent; his opposition score was 21 percent and his support score, adjusted for absences, was 79 percent in 1991. Wofford was eligible for 60 of the 81 presidential support votes in 1991.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

THOUGH: DAVE DEMAREST DD
FROM: JENNIFER GROSSMAN JAG
SUBJECT: COLUMBUS FUNDRAISER

On Thursday, April 30th, at 7:45 p.m., you will deliver remarks (14 minutes/teleprompted) at a Bush-Quayle fundraising dinner at the state fairgrounds to approximately 700 supporters. You address the economy -- discussing freer trade and fewer regulations as paths towards prosperity. You emphasize the need for fundamental reform: in our legal system, in education, in health care, and in government. You close by saying that our country, at its core, is good; and you ask for support in making it better.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: BUSH-QUAYLE FUNDRAISER
COLUMBUS, OHIO
THURSDAY, APRIL 30, 1992
7:45 p.m.

Governor Voinovich, thank you for that introduction.
[Acknowledgements]. I was just here a week ago. Barbara's the Honorary Patron of AmeriFlora and asked me to give a speech.
(pause) Then she said I have to keep coming back till I get it right. \\ Of course, I was here to help commemorate a voyage 500 years old. \ The Democrats aren't impressed with such antiquity. \ Heck, most of their policies are older than that. \\

But while the Democrats build their agenda on time-worn policies, we've built the Republican agenda on timeless legacies:
good jobs, strong families, and world peace. Yes, it's campaign season -- I've seen these seasons come and go. I've watched soundbites compete with sound policy; the battles of the bumperstickers and the war of words. But I believe democracy is more than that. During one political season in Great Britain, Margaret Thatcher remarked: "We were told that our campaign wasn't sufficiently slick. We regard that as a compliment." You see, I believe that elections are about more than winning people's votes, they're about winning the people's trust.

I've watched candidates try to convince people that the sky is falling -- just so they can promise the moon. But our national symbol isn't Chicken Little -- it's the American Eagle.
And our national spirit isn't self-doubt -- it's self-confidence, self-reliance. What's the American dream? It's a dream we struggled to make come true.

When we thought of the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe, we dreamed of free people with freer markets and fewer bombs -- and then we worked to make it come true. I take great pride that it was American leadership that has diminished for our children the threat of nuclear war. \

For our neighbors in South America, we envisioned peace and democracy -- now we are on the threshold of an entirely free and democratic hemisphere. And when the Iraqi nightmare threatened to engulf the Middle East, America protected the people of Israel and Turkey and Saudi Arabia; and helped liberate the small country of Kuwait. And in the process we turned what had been the mirage of 44 years into an oasis of hope: we brought Arab neighbors face to face with Israel for the first time -- for the first step towards peace.

There were those that said that the defeat of communism, the liberation of the oppressed, the triumph of democracy -- that all these things were nothing but a dream. They were right. It was an American dream.

America helped create a world of freer people and freer markets. That has brought greater prosperity -- but it's also brought greater competition. There's good news: all around the world, more and more people are buying American. Our exports shot up 7% in February to a record high of almost $38 billion dollars. That's bad news for Chicken Little. But that's good news for America. And it sums up words that will help chart a new American destiny: if we are to succeed economically at home, we have to lead economically abroad.

By expanding trade with other countries, we expand opportunity within our own. Sure the competition's tough -- but the answer isn't to build up our trade barriers; it's to get other countries to tear down theirs. Last week I met with the heads of Europe's common market to talk about the world trade negotiations. If these negotiations succeed, an agreement could pump five trillion dollars into the global economy over the next ten years -- with the U.S. share topping $1 trillion. We're also working on our southern trade front -- with negotiations on the North American Free Trade Agreement -- an agreement that would increase trade with Mexico by billions of dollars and create good American jobs right here. This agreement isn't about good politics -- it's about good policy and good American jobs. I have faith in open trade because I have faith in the American worker. When trade is free and fair, Americans can beat the competition fair and square.

But fair competition doesn't just mean playing by the same rules -- it means competing with the same tools. I'm talking about the cost of capital. Tough competition from Germany? No capital gains tax. Japan? An entrepreneur who sells the company he's built from scratch pays a tax of one percent. A low capital gains tax rate encourages investment \ that means business expansion \ and that means new jobs. When I listen to the Democrats rail against capital gains -- then turn around and complain about foreign competition -- it makes me think of someone who would price eggs at $100 a carton, then complain that no one makes omelettes anymore. A lower capital gains rate wouldn't just benefit someone who runs a business, it would help people who own homes, or farms, or simply seek better jobs. It's time to quit playing politics with this issue, and cut the tax on capital gains.

And if America is to remain truly competitive, we've got to stop regulating our business out of business. Washington doesn't understand the deadly process that can turn red tape into pink slips. Here in Columbus, the city government has projected that over the next decade, the cost of complying with federal environmental regulations alone would be one billion dollars -- that's for a community whose entire city budget last year was $592 million. It's time to put a stop to costly, counter-productive regulations.

In January I announced a 90-day moratorium on federal regulations. We blocked regulations that hurt growth -- and speeded up regulations that help growth. Our efforts have paid off: just since January, the reforms we've set in motion will save consumers from $15 billion to $20 billion a year -- that's a savings of 225 to 300 dollars per year for the average American household. And that's just the beginning.

Wednesday, I ordered a 120 day extension of the moratorium on new regulation. \\ And I put Congress on notice: I will veto any bill that attempts to put excessive new burdens of regulation on the backs of our families, our consumers, our workers, and our businesses. \\ There will be no -- I repeat, no -- return to business as usual. \\

There's been a lot of talk about change this election year. Most of it's been just that -- talk. But that's not good enough if we're going to build a better America.

I've called for reform. More importantly -- I've acted: with far-reaching proposals for reform, in education, in health care, in our courts and in our campaigns. We've won our battles, but we've not yet won the war: too often, in too many ways, Congress, and an army of special interests have stood in the way of change. \ They are not interested in reform. They stand squarely behind the status quo. They may be powerful. They may be influential. They may be well-connected. But let me tell you this: they are wrong, and they're not going to stand in our way.

First: our legal system. Volunteers are afraid to volunteer, doctors are afraid to deliver babies, parents are afraid to coach Little League -- all because of the fear of lawsuits. That's wrong. People should spend more time helping each other and less time suing each other. That's why we've introduced proposals to reform our legal system. Sure, the system's complicated; and yes, peoples' rights must be protected. But the system needs reform -- and we're not going to let some lawyers' lobby stand in the way. \\

In education, our America 2000 reforms are gaining steam. Break-the mold schools -- national standards and testing, community by community. And whether it's among public schools, or private, or religious, parents deserve the right to choose their children's schools. It's a giant undertaking to change the nation's education system -- but we are going to do it with or without a note from the NEA -- or the Congress.

In health care -- No one should have to go broke just to get better -- that's wrong and it's got to change. And while our health care is still the finest quality in the world, too many people can't qualify for health insurance or can't afford it. Some say the answer is Nationalized Health Care. Ask the Canadian waiting for months for critical surgery -- ask him what he thinks of that idea. Our health care proposal is comprehensive -- it opens access and it lowers cost -- but it does not and will not lower quality. Bottom line: national health care is a prescription for national disaster. \\ And I won't let that happen on my watch.

In these and so many areas that demand reform, our government can play a positive role. Half my life has been in government, half in the private sector. I've seen this country change -- sometimes for the better, sometimes for the worse. You need to know what needs to be changed. "Change for change's sake" is meaningless. It takes more than happy talk. More than lip service to reform -- and then full service to special interests.

The Democratic Party will always revert to form -- attacking problems by creating programs. They don't understand that people want a return to some old-fashioned values like responsibility and accountability. And when it comes to government, the American people know -- as government tries to do more and more, it ends up delivering less and less. Next year, the federal government will spend $1.5 trillion dollars of your money. There's just no question about it. The federal government is too big and spends too much.

Major reforms are in order. First it's time for the Congress to govern itself by the laws it imposes on others. No more special treatment. And it's time for sweeping campaign finance reform -- but real reform is not saddling the taxpayer with the cost of congressional campaigns. It's time for real spending reform; time for the President to have what 43 governors have -- the line item veto. \\ Finally, it's time to make Congress a citizen assembly, not a club for careerists -- time to limit the terms of Members of Congress. I'm limited to two terms and I want to serve both -- is it too much to ask to limit Senate terms to two and House terms to six? I believe this would keep government more active, more vital, and closer to the people.

Thomas Jefferson knew that "[the people] are the only sure reliance of our liberty." That's why you're here today. You are not among the cynics -- because you know you can make a difference. Think of a littered park -- you clean it up one piece at a time. Then think of our government -- we can reform it, one vote at a time. It makes a difference.

Why should we care? Because this government, just like a public park, isn't just something we inherited from our parents - - it's something we borrow from our children. \\\

I know this country, as you do. America's got a heart of gold and a will of steel. It's honest. It's generous. It's good. With your help, it's about to become even better. God bless you and God bless the United States of America.

Dear David:

Thank you for your heartfelt letter. I was pleased to learn that your teacher asked each class member to bring to school a picture of an individual whom he or she admires and hopes to be like one day. Such an assignment encourages students to identify their heroes and heroines and to aim to live up to their examples.

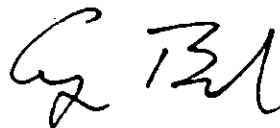

Without knowing "the other side of the story," as they say, I cannot comment on the fact that you were not permitted to name Jesus as your favorite role model. However, I do understand your deep sense of disappointment.

In my view, the unsung heroes of our day are men and women who honor this Nation's commitment to freedom and tolerance, while at the same time reaffirming America's timeless moral and spiritual heritage. As President, I am firmly committed to upholding our Constitution and Bill of Rights -- including the First Amendment, which prohibits government establishment of religion. Nevertheless, I remain fully convinced that our Nation should permit voluntary prayer and the teaching of values in the classroom.

Your letter tells me a lot about you and your beliefs, David, and I hope that you will continue to seek and to set examples of goodness in your life.

Mrs. Bush joins me in sending best wishes. God bless you.

Sincerely,

David D. Messer

Dear Mr. Bush

I want to know why we kids can't bring Christianity in to our schools anymore like we did a while ago. The reason I'm writing this letter is because yesterday me and my class ~~made~~ had to take a picture of ~~someone~~ as usual like to be like when we grow up, and so I took a picture of Jesus. Read for my activity in school, and when when I got to school I asked my teacher ~~was a picture of Jesus~~ read for story and she said that we was not allowed to bring stuff like that into school or something like that but anyway when she said that she hurt my feelings really bad because I love Jesus with all my heart and more, but yet she said that's not allowed, and then I took a picture of Charlie Daniels out of my magazine and she said it was better than the picture of Jesus, and

Re: March Leading Indicators and Latest
Initial Claims for Unemployment

The index of leading indicators increased 0.2 percent in March, slightly below what had been expected. As I tell you every month, most of the information contained in the index is already publicly available.

More important, initial claims for state unemployment insurance in the week ended April 18 stayed at the 404,000 level of the previous week. The last several weeks have been well below the January through late March levels.

I received excellent, appreciative and supportive feedback from the attendees at the Regulatory Reform event and from the business community. Unfortunately, someone invited the head of the Environmental Defense Fund to the event, and he, apparently after two days of phone calls to reporters informing them of his intentions, went to the press stakeout and trashed the Regulatory Reform effort. I believe that Boyden and I, plus Drew Lewis, et al got the appropriate message out, and I am sure that is what will eventually resonate in the business community and outside the beltway.

SUBJECT: March Index of Leading Indicators, Commerce
Department Release, Tomorrow Morning, 8:30 a.m.

The index of leading indicators increased 0.2 percent in March, following a total increase of 1.7 percent over the first 2 months of the year. Private analysts had expected a 0.3 percent increase in March.

Four of the 11 components contributed to the increase in the index in March. Consumer expectations and sensitive materials prices made the largest positive contributions. Six components had negative effects, with declines in the real money supply and building permits having the largest negative effects.

The index of coincident indicators--a monthly measure of current aggregate economic activity--was unchanged in March, following a 0.5 percent increase in February. All of the available components of the index made small positive contributions to the index in March, but a negative statistical adjustment offset the increases.

The graph below shows that the recent increases in the leading index follow a flattening of the index in the second half of 1991. However, the coincident index flattened out in March, after increasing in February.
