Dr. Bennett called my office today asking for an appointment with the President before his departure for L.A. If that cannot happen, he would like to meet with the speechwriters preparing the President's remarks for the various events in L.A. //

There's not much time, but if the President thinks this is important we can certainly fit it in.

Thanks

For Immediate Release

May 5, 1992

The President today recognized the volunteers of Community Outreach of Taylor University of Upland, Indiana, as the 763rd Daily Point of Light for the Nation. Community Outreach volunteers are helping to solve serious social problems in their community by building one-to-one relationships with those in need.

Taylor University student volunteers, led by two student co-directors, run 10 outreach programs which mobilize some 250 students for two to five hours of service on a weekly or biweekly basis. Over 350 other students participate in monthly or yearly special events.

Through the One-On-One program, 125 Taylor students meet weekly as Big Brothers and Sisters for grade school children in the Upland community. They also engage in monthly group activities. Ten students visit patients at the Marion Veterans Administration Medical Center, escorting their patients to chapel services one Sunday a month. Twelve others visit the University Nursing Home and have made a personal commitment to visit a particular "friend" for at least two hours every day. Taylor students also befriend abused or delinquent children at the Delaware County Children's Home in Muncie, visiting them once a week. Students participating in Gas City Outreach meet for two to three hours each week with families in the low-income Gas City neighborhood, tutoring them or simply listening to their everyday problems. Through the Realife program, 30 students meet with inner-city children in Marion each week for two hours. In addition, students often invite the children to spend weekends with them on the Taylor campus.

The Taylor University Community Outreach began in the mid-1970s, and its programs have expanded substantially through the years. Solving community problems by developing one-to-one relationships is a goal of each student outreach activity.

The President salutes the volunteers of Community Outreach of Taylor University for exemplifying his belief that, "From now on in America, any definition of a successful life must include serving others."

The U.S. tax system is broke and cannot be fixed. We should abolish the FICA tax, the corporate tax, and most of the personal income tax, and substitute in lieu thereof a Value Added Tax (VAT) on all goods and services. Treasury Study on the VAT of November 1984 is a good beginning and should be reviewed and updated now for action beginning in your second term. Support is growing in Congress. Only need your leadership.

Bush, Buchanan offer Floridians a choice of conservative brands

"America First" theme that held sway before World War II.

"Every single week, $300 million leaves the United States," Buchanan says. "If I'm elected president, that money won't be going out anymore. We'll bring that money home to help the forgotten Americans right here in the good old U.S.A."

Pushed to acknowledge the need for an economic recovery plan, Bush is trying to rally support behind his proposed blend of tax incentives to spur business expansion and real-estate investment.

The president wants to cut capital gains tax rates, denying it would tend to favor the wealthy.

His plan would allow first-time homebuyers to use savings in Individual Retirement Accounts without penalty. It

"We're going to shut that place [the National Endowment for the Arts] down, padlock it and fumigate it, and then go back to the White House for the rest of the afternoon."

— Patrick Buchanan

would give tax breaks for research and development. And it would restore some deductions for real-estate development.

"These proposals would create in Florida alone an estimated 26,500 additional housing starts and 51,000 new construction jobs," Bush told guests at a fund-raising dinner in Miami on Wednesday night.

Buchanan has spent more time attacking Bush than outlining specific policies of his own.

On Wednesday, the rivalry approached the surreal as Buchanan, who has yet to win a primary, called on Bush to bow out of the race.

To no one's surprise, Bush refused. White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Buchanan's comment showed the challenger had "gone loony tunes."

While on the attack, Buchanan has proposed phasing out foreign aid, cutting federal bureaucracy, freezing the level of federal spending, cutting income taxes, and closing off U.S. markets to "unfair" trading partners.

Buchanan says he would call leaders of mainland China and tell them, "We're taking away most-favored-nation status and putting you in Chapter 11 [bankruptcy], where you belong."

Buchanan generally agrees with most of the president's policies on major issues such as health care reform, education, the environment, crime and abortion.

Both Republicans, for example, want to retain the private medical system rather than create a national health care program to cover everybody. They both want to make private insurance more affordable through deregulation, malpractice reform and tax credits.

They also tend to agree on issues of particular impact on Florida, including limited protection of wetlands and tough enforcement of drug control. Buchanan favors far more restrictive immigration laws to exclude illegal aliens and reduce the number of legal arrivals.

The Republican campaign has turned on social policies hardly ever debated among the Democratic primary contenders.

Buchanan accuses Bush of looking the other way while the National Endowment for the Arts uses public money for what Buchanan calls pornography.

"We're going to shut that place down, padlock it and fumigate it, then go back to the White House for the rest of the afternoon," Buchanan says of the arts endowment.

Buchanan also wants to repeal the Voting Rights Act of 1965. It is "an act of regional discrimination against the South," he says.

The act requires that 16 states, most of them in the South, have their congressional redistricting and election plans approved by the U.S. Justice Department to guard against racial discrimination.

His other causes include abolishing all racial job quotas in federal hiring, making Japan and Germany pay for their own defense, limiting terms for members of Congress and restoring voluntary prayer to public schools.

Some of Buchanan's views have aroused anger from Jewish Americans who fear his isolationism would deprive Israel of support; and from blacks who are disturbed by his fierce opposition to civil rights legislation.

The attack from the right has forced Bush to reassert his conservative credentials. He has been loath, however, to address Buchanan's charges specifically.

Bush, for example, condemns isolationism without mentioning Buchanan by name.

"Some don't want us to lead," Bush said on Wednesday. "They want us to just shut out the rest of the world."

"You know the way to create jobs is not to cut and run, not to pull back into some kind of isolationist sphere of protection," Bush said. "Rather, you open markets for our exports throughout the world."

Buchanan's challenge has called attention to issues that cause internal tension within the conservative coalition, which was put together in the 1980s by former President Ronald Reagan.

Reagan won the support of traditional Republicans, a relatively well-to-do group happy with the established order and unhappy with big government. And he brought into the party middle- and working-class conservatives and evangelical Christians bent on fostering moral values while opposing recent civil rights legislation. Both factions despise taxes.

Bush, who grew up in the moderate Republican tradition, held that coalition together in his 1988 campaign. But many of the more conservative Reaganites have always been suspicious of him.

Buchanan's campaign and economic hard times have exposed a streak of isolationism and a backlash against even limited forms of affirmative action, welfare spending and foreign aid. For many conservatives, it is a question of whether Bush has gone far enough to push their causes.

Florida Republicans, stalwarts for Bush in the past, will have their say when they go to the polls on Tuesday.

HEALTH CARE

- Modify existing private system to make insurance affordable for all.
- Provide tax credits to lower-income people. Allow pooling of insurance for small businesses.
- Negotiate with Congress over how to pay for reforms.

- Change tax laws to allow companies to create medical IRAs to cover workers.
- Provide tax breaks to the uninsured for investing in medical IRAs.
- Deregulate Medicare and eliminate state regulations that increase insurance policy costs.

EDUCATION

- Foster choice in selecting schools by giving aid to lower-income families who wish to send children to private schools.
- Create a nationwide voluntary testing system to encourage higher standards.
- With help from businesses, create school models designed to improve basic skills.

- Provide public money for low-income families to pay for private schooling.
- End forced busing of students to achieve racial balance and oppose affirmative action in hiring educators.
- Be more responsive to parents' concerns about curriculum.

ENVIRONMENT and ENERGY

- Limit definition of wetlands to allow development of some areas.
- Increase offshore oil and gas drilling in the arctic and parts of the Pacific and Gulf coasts to increase fossil fuel production.
- Upgrade national parks.

- Extend a two-year moratorium on new environmental regulations that jeopardize jobs and infringe on business and property rights.

DEATH PENALTY

Both candidates support death penalty.

ABORTION

Both oppose public spending for abortion and seek court ruling to overturn Roe vs. Wade decision, which legalized abortion.

THE WHITE HOUSE

May 5, 1992

Dear Nat:

Thank you so much for your thoughtful letter about a wide range of environmental issues. I share your view that we have received little credit for many of our environmental initiatives and accomplishments.

I learned a long time ago that one should seek to do good rather than seek to get credit for one's actions. But it would be nice if both the press and environmental groups were a little more balanced in their assessment of my Administration's environmental record.

In this respect, you may enjoy reading a copy of "Securing Our Legacy," prepared by EPA, reporting on the last three years. Our environmental record is impressive, and one of which I am proud.

At the heart of most environmental issues is the search for an appropriate balance between competing objectives which cannot all be maximized simultaneously. This is the case whether the issue is clean air, wetlands, or the spotted owl.

There has in fact been a good deal more constructive coordination within the Administration on the spotted owl than is generally recognized or reported in the press. Your suggestion that Forest Service timber and road funds be used to employ former loggers and small timber businesses in rural communities to rebuild and improve recreational facilities on Federal lands is intriguing, and we will look into it.

I share your view that our recreation infrastructure, like our transportation infrastructure, needs improving, and I am also concerned about the loggers and their families who derive their livelihood from public lands.

One of the best ways to assist these communities is to do everything we can in the first instance to minimize job losses. We have been working diligently on an owl protection plan that more appropriately balances the need to protect jobs, families, and communities with our obligation to preserve the owl.

Finally, I like your vision of the link between trade and the environment. Trade has been one of the engines pulling the global economy down the path of prosperity for the past forty years. Now we are poised to take another major step forward through the Uruguay Round, the North American Free Trade Agreement, and the Enterprise for the Americas Initiative.

The economic growth that will follow can help provide additional resources for many worthwhile things, including protecting and enhancing the environment. Moreover, as you point out, tremendous opportunities await our businesses in exporting environmental technology and equipment around the world.

Thanks again for writing. Best wishes.

Sincerely,

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: ROGER B. PORTER RBP
SUBJECT: Letter to Nathaniel Pryor Reed

Nat Reed has written you concerning a wide range of environmental issues. He is a big fan of Bill Reilly, Mike Hayden, and John Turner. He is able to restrain his enthusiasm for some other officials in environmentally sensitive positions in the Administration.

The draft response avoids commenting on personnel or on every specific issue he raises. Instead it seeks to reinforce that you are proud of your environmental record and that the overriding principle guiding your decisions on environmental issues is balancing successfully competing objectives.

His one specific policy suggestion is to use Forest Service timber and road funds to employ loggers and small timber businesses in rebuilding and improving recreational facilities on Federal lands. Your response mentions that we will look into it.

To some extent, we are already implementing his suggestion. The Forest Service already contracts out to small businesses roughly 70-75 percent of their budget for road construction and maintenance. Many of these roads are for access to recreational sites and for fire protection.

In addition, with regard to roads constructed for access to timber, the timber purchasers typically are responsible for building and maintaining these roads, the cost of which are credited against their contract purchase price for the timber.

Recommendation: That you sign the attached draft letter to Nathaniel Pryor Reed.

March 6, 1992

Honorable George Bush
President, The United States
The White House
Washington, D. C. 20500

Dear Mr. President:

I wrote to you on December 19, 1986, on the eve of the last election campaign to encourage you to embrace environmental values as a principal component of your election drive. You did so and achieved considerable success and acclaim as a result.

During the past three years of your administration, you have been accused of faltering on your early commitments. As you become immersed in the coming election cycle, you should face the two basic and related problems that have hobbled your administration's handling of environmental issues effectively.

First, as I am sure you recognize, you have not received credit for many of your environmental accomplishments.

Passage of the Clean Air Act was a major milestone that is universally acknowledged. You have also made many, many major environmental strides in FY 1991 and FY 1992 and your recently proposed FY 1993 budgets in large part due to the unstinting diligence of Bob Grady, but these are rarely credited to your balance sheet.

Your personal support of numerous individual environmental initiatives, ranging from the North American Wetlands Conservation Act and restoration of the Everglades to the 1990 Farm Bill, has been handicapped by the second basic problem. This is your administration's flawed positioning of leadership for environmental issues.

To be blunt, your stage management is backwards. You selected Bill Reilly, Administrator of EPA, to be your maestro for the orchestration of the administration's environmental policies. The positioning of Reilly as ringmaster is fundamentally flawed because it places your chief environmental spokesman in conflict with corporate America.

I wholly applaud the selection of Reilly; he is one of the most astute, committed and articulate environmental leaders in the country and he is a superb choice for Administrator of EPA. Bill is my friend and I am one of his greatest admirers.

You have erred and overstretched Reilly's superb talents by making him the band leader and chief spokesman for the administration's entire environmental portfolio. The Administrator of EPA is primarily a regulator and EPA, as an agency, is daily at odds with much of corporate America. In times of a lagging economy, this situation which, in the best of times exudes friction, becomes exacerbated to extremes. Business leaders chafe against environmental regulation and unfurl arguments pitting jobs against the environment. Senator Seymour's February hosting of a meeting between southern California business leaders with Administrator Reilly is an example of this scenario, which will undoubtedly be replayed again and again in the coming months.

Although Reilly can mount the bully pulpit effectively on many environmental issues, the limitations imposed by his role as our government's chief environmental enforcer precludes his effectiveness as your principal advocate and sole environmental spokesperson. His role needs to be balanced with aggressive leadership, stewardship and advocacy by the Secretaries of Agriculture and Interior. This, in large measure, you have not received.

A more sophisticated strategy would involve using the Secretaries of Agriculture and Interior as outspoken proponents of those traditional, non-regulatory programs involving the conservation of soil, forests, parks, wildlife and outdoor recreation programs.

On many of these public land environmental fronts, particularly programs involving parks, forests and wildlife, the Secretaries of Agriculture and Interior have little interface and hence, little conflict with corporate America. As a result, utilizing these cabinet secretaries in a leadership posture, you provide positive exposure for many of your environmental initiatives that, to date, have received little credit and exposure. At the same time, these cabinet spokesmen provide cover and shelter for Reilly to fulfill his regulatory responsibilities.

The general lack of domestic leadership has abetted the degeneration of environmental controversies into a job versus the environment confrontation, pitting business against the environment in the public mind. The most intractable example of this scenario involves the spotted owl in the Pacific Northwest.

For a decade, lack of federal agency leadership and coordination has permitted the controversy over the owl to evolve into a hopeless state of legal and Congressional gridlock. The issue has been demagogued by both environmentalists and the forest products industry.

The Secretary of Interior has contributed materially to the current impasse by encouraging and supporting BLM to go its separate way, out of step with the Forest Service and Fish and Wildlife Service. Such federal dissonance invites policy chaos which is what has been entertained for the past three years. Meanwhile, little has been done to provide jobs for affected loggers or to initiate economic adjustments for the local communities.

If one was to look for solutions to provide jobs for the 20,000 loggers disenfranchised by the loss of timber sales on national forests and BLM lands, the answer lies under our very noses.

Throughout the Northwest and throughout the country, in fact, the recreation infrastructure of our national forests, BLM lands, national parks and refuges has degenerated to approximately thirty percent of historic capacity. It is a deteriorating situation analogous to the oft-cited structural decline of our bridges, highways and other elements of our transportation infrastructure.

Meanwhile, with declining leisure time nationwide and the relatively swift urban and suburbanization of our western states, easy access to public lands for local recreation opportunities is increasingly a problem and frustration for many. The Commission for Americans Outdoors highlighted the increasing need to provide local access and short-range recreation opportunities.

Here lies an opportunity to kill two birds with one stone. I urge you to consider utilizing Forest Service timber and road funds to implement a broadscale effort to start and create new businesses in rural timber communities by letting contracts for the rehabilitation of our recreation infrastructure on public lands.

The traditional approach would be to reestablish the CCC, but this does not provide the investment opportunities, the multiplier effects of our private enterprise approach. "Conservation and Recreation Contracts" would be let locally on a yearly or multiple year bid basis to rebuild hiking and horseback trails and physical accommodations ranging from johns and picnic tables to huts and shelters.

Former loggers are the natural labor pool and local forest products companies are the natural businesses to bid for these contracts. They already are located on or adjacent to public lands. The employment opportunity involves the same skill and equipment employed in timber sales and processing. In many cases, it would enable loggers to remain in their same communities, work in the same woods and with the same equipment (chain saws, etc.).

This proposal will have a significant multiplier effect to sustain the economies of logging communities affected by mill shutdowns and the cessation of federal sales, not only because the same work force will be employed en situ, but also increased recreation opportunities instigated by these improvements will flow back to these same communities. Contracts should also specify the use of salvage timber for construction whenever possible to take advantage of the glut of salvage timber across the west.

Finally, federal agencies could designate "Rural Economic Zones" to qualify for contracts on federally supervised loans. By encouraging the formation of private business to bid on "Conservation and Recreation Contracts," you provide a means of bringing paychecks to the rural towns and communities hardest hit by the evolution of the forest products industry and impacted by decisions relating to the spotted owl.

Our national forests today supply only fourteen percent of U.S. wood products but they contain fifty percent of the prime wildlife habitat in the country and fifty percent of the remaining cold-water fisheries habitat in the U.S. The unrealized potential of our public lands for absorbing enhanced recreation opportunities is enormous.

Two indicators of their potential are: the fact that over 75 percent of the U.S. population sixteen years and older enjoy some form of wildlife-related recreation. 46.5 million Americans fished, 16 million hunted and 134.7 million participated in nonconsumptive wildlife recreation. Your administration is neither servicing or reaping the benefits from this constituency. Expenditures generated by this group totaled over $55.5 billion in 1985 (1985 National Survey, USFWS).

Second, the Forest Service, in the last five years, has signed cooperative agreements with 29 nongovernmental organizations interested in recreation and wildlife which have a total membership in excess of 11.5 million members. These challenge grant partnerships are tremendously popular and demonstrate the potential constituent support for broader utilization of public lands for recreation.

The same lack of leadership that has personified the Administration's handling of the spotted owl issue is apparent in numerous other environmental policy areas: two which come readily to mind are the bluefin tuna and the wetlands debate. In both instances, the array of policy options has degenerated to a polarized "jobs versus the environment" slugfest.

In the case of the bluefin tuna, a single sharp operator, Gerald Abrams, who enjoys a near monopoly of the catch of giant bluefins through his purse seine fleet, has orchestrated the jobs versus environment argument as part of the New Hampshire primary debate. Abrams' operation employs a mere 50 to 75 people seasonally, and he is exploiting a drastically declining fishery that sustains over 10,000 charter boats from Florida to Maine. In the case of the bluefin, a modest arithmetic calculation will determine that thousands of jobs could be saved by implementing strict conservation practices to sustain the bluefin tuna fishery for the future.

Similarly, in the wetlands debate, the number of jobs tied to the protection of America's wetlands rarely enters the equation. Two examples spring immediately to mind: commercial marine fisheries and waterfowl and the arms and sporting goods industry.

Nationwide, our marine fisheries are in dramatic decline. NMFS has recently documented declines in 78 stocks of fish. Less well known is the fact that 75 percent of all commercially harvested marine fish and shellfish are estuarine dependent. That means 75 percent of all harvested species grow up in coastal wetlands.

No single factor is more critical to the sustenance of our marine fisheries industry than the maintenance of coastal wetlands. From the shrimpers of Texas, Louisiana and South Carolina to the crab and oystermen of the Chesapeake Bay, their livelihood is in the palm of your administration's hand. Thousands of jobs are at stake across the country and these jobs are dependent on the protection of coastal wetland ecosystems.

Similarly, the sporting goods and arms industry is tied largely to waterfowl harvest. Waterfowl are at historically low levels because of wetlands loss and the numbers of hunters has declined yearly for a decade as a consequence.

As the Economist editorialized, (December 6, 1991) domestic policies, particularly those involving the environment, are "a storm to be endured." However, the proof of leadership is not to seek magical solutions or to succumb to the demagoguery of the left or right but to seek pragmatic solutions and to lead public opinion energetically.

I want to close on an optimist note. In my 1986 letter, I stated that "a linkage exists between international trade issues and international environmental and natural resources issues." Lost in the huzzahs of the domestic environmental debate are the tremendous opportunities that await U.S. businesses through the export of environmental technology to the world at large, but particularly Eastern Europe and Latin America.

An article in the Wall Street Journal (February 10, 1992) recently highlighted the opportunities presented by the free trade agreement with Mexico and that country's desperate need of environmental technologies. Only three private labs in Mexico City are capable of determining the content of a plant's toxic effluent.

The article predicts the expansion of Mexico's environmental service industry from its current level of $100 million to $5 to $7 billion in sales in five years. We should be taking the high road on the export of American environmental technologies to the world and, needless to say, this means jobs for Americans.

Mr. President, you face two challenges: the first is to provide leadership through good government and the second is to be reelected.

There is no point in winning reelection if you don't want to govern. To govern wisely and effectively, you must be surrounded by intelligent men and women who have ideas, understand government and, above all, have energy.

You desperately need new leadership in Interior, which is in sad condition at the top. In Governor Hayden and John Turner, you have two of the best in the business, but their leadership is currently neutralized by the Secretary.

The options and alternatives are yours.

Sincerely,

Nathaniel P. Reed

The President today recognized the volunteers of Community Outreach of Taylor University of Upland, Indiana, as the 763rd Daily Point of Light for the Nation. Community Outreach volunteers are helping to solve serious social problems in their community by building one-to-one relationships with those in need.

Taylor University student volunteers, led by two student co-directors, run 10 outreach programs which mobilize some 250 students for two to five hours of service on a weekly or biweekly basis. Over 350 other students participate in monthly or yearly special events.

Through the One-On-One program, 125 Taylor students meet weekly as Big Brothers and Sisters for grade school children in the Upland community. They also engage in monthly group activities. Ten students visit patients at the Marion Veterans Administration Medical Center, escorting their patients to chapel services one Sunday a month. Twelve others visit the University Nursing Home and have made a personal commitment to visit a particular "friend" for at least two hours every day. Taylor students also befriend abused or delinquent children at the Delaware County Children's Home in Muncie, visiting them once a week. Students participating in Gas City Outreach meet for two to three hours each week with families in the low-income Gas City neighborhood, tutoring them or simply listening to their everyday problems. Through the Realife program, 30 students meet with inner-city children in Marion each week for two hours. In addition, students often invite the children to spend weekends with them on the Taylor campus.

The Taylor University Community Outreach began in the mid-1970s, and its programs have expanded substantially through the years. Solving community problems by developing one-to-one relationships is a goal of each student outreach activity.

The President salutes the volunteers of Community Outreach of Taylor University for exemplifying his belief that, "From now on in America, any definition of a successful life must include serving others."

2 April 1992

Excellency,

In token of my appreciation for your participation in the Security Council Summit Meeting of 31 January 1992, I wish to present you with this commemorative folio recording its proceedings.

This Summit was a singular moment for the United Nations and for the world, one to which your presence and your thoughtful words added immeasurably. Your support of the Summit Declaration was a splendid act of faith in the United Nations, and an encouragement to the peoples of the world who have put their hopes in the Charter and this Organization. We at the United Nations are profoundly heartened by your confidence. I am presently engaged in the preparation of the report which I will present to Member States containing my analysis and recommendations on ways of strengthening and making more efficient the capacity of the United Nations for preventive diplomacy, for peace-making and for peace-keeping, as requested in the Summit Declaration.

Let me also take this occasion, Mr. President, to thank you personally for the support you have given me in my three months as Secretary-General. I am honoured and encouraged by your trust.

Please accept, Excellency, the assurances of my highest consideration.

Dear Carlos,

I have just returned from the Mexican Cultural Institute's Cinco de Mayo Celebration. I was proud to have attended the celebration and saw many old friends there, including many deputies from both Chambers.

Ambassador Petricoli gave me your warm note of greeting and presented the lovely porcelain -- a spectacular gift that I will always treasure. I want to thank you for both the letter and the wonderful present. Unfortunately, Barbara was in Boston so, she could not attend that warm and friendly event.

I pledged again to press for a successful prompt conclusion of NAFTA.

Please don't reply to this. It is simply a "thank you" from a grateful friend on a special day.

Sincerely,

His Excellency
Carlos Salinas de Gortari,
President of the United Mexican States,

Dear Gordy:

I saw your note about the mix-up with the letter to Alan Fisherman. Thanks so much for bringing this to our attention. We've sent him a response about the article regarding alleged comments by Jim Baker, which was, by the way, just plain wrong. You're a good friend.

Barbara joins me in sending best wishes.

Dear Dr. Fisherman:

Through the thoughtfulness of Gordon Zacks, the White House learned of the inappropriate response that you received to your letter to President Bush regarding alleged remarks by Secretary of State James Baker. I deeply regret the error. We try very hard to be as responsive as possible in helping the President to answer his mail, but with the large number of letters that the White House receives -- currently averaging over 50,000 pieces a week -- mistakes inevitably occur.

In response to your concerns, you may now know that the remarks have been categorically denied by Secretary Baker. Nothing could be further from the truth than the story in which those alleged remarks were reported, and nothing could be further from the beliefs and values of Secretary Baker and of the President himself.

I am sure you are aware of the key role that Secretary Baker has played in helping to bring about the historic, direct negotiations between Israel and her Arab neighbors, which are aimed at achieving real peace and reconciliation. The Administration's efforts in that regard are ongoing, and while the President was not able to attend the United Jewish Appeal's Young Leadership Conference, I assure you that the Administration remains in close contact with the American Jewish leadership.

With best wishes,

Sincerely,

REMARKS BY THE PRESIDENT
AT CINCO DE MAYO CEREMONIES

Mexican Cultural Institute
Washington, D.C.

2:17 P.M. EDT

THE PRESIDENT: If I might be informal, Gus, thank you very much for the warm introduction and the warm welcome. And I just can't tell you how pleased I am to be in this beautiful place. There are many familiar faces out there -- so many members of both chambers from Mexico -- we salute you and we welcome you all. I had a chance to greet the members a second ago. Members of the Hispanic America -- Mexican American business community, we're very pleased to have you all here. I see Senator Gramm and Representative Colby and Gilman and Talon, all here to salute this show of force and show of friendship for the delegates from south of the Rio Grande.

The interparliamentary union, the Mexican-American interparliamentary relationship is a good one, and I can tell some of you older member of this delegation that I was a member of that interparliamentary action back in 1968 and 1969 and 1970. So I welcome you all once again.

I was pleased earlier to see Jose Nino and Raul Yzaguirre, two American leaders who do so much for strong relations between Mexico and the United States.

And, of course, I want to take this opportunity to congratulate President Carlos Salinas for preserving this remarkable historical landmark and for creating the institute to strengthen the ties of friendship between our two nations.

Relations between the United States and Mexico are tremendously important to both our countries -- and it's exciting to note -- and I would note, and I'd say with some pride, that relations between Mexico and the United States have never been better than they are now.

And I take great pride in that, as I say, but I commend especially Carlos Salinas for the role that he's played in strengthening the special friendship that benefits both our peoples. The Mexican President has done an awful lot to hold out his hand to us, to emphasize the importance to Mexico of the U.S.-Mexican relationship. And he's done a wonderful job.

I want to thank all of you for letting me share this special day -- a day made even more meaningful because 1992 marks 500 years of Hispanic heritage in this hemisphere. And this heritage is a wonderful, rich tapestry that Barbara and I -- that our kids, Barbara and I, were lucky enough to first experience during our West Texas years. I remember our Cinco de Mayo festivities out there, exploring the ties between our countries, ties of family, friendship and faith. So my exposure to Cinco de Mayo started in the year 1949 out in West Texas and it's been a part of us ever since.

The Bushes are very lucky to be able to keep that celebration alive. Our daughter-in-law, as some of you know, was from Mexico, now an American citizen, and we take great pride in that. Three of our grandchildren are Hispanic American, and they bring the wonder of this dual heritage into our family. I have only one complaint with them -- all four of them; my daughter-in-law and the three grandchildren -- none of them has been able to teach their grandfather to speak Spanish. (Laughter.) When things calm down a little, maybe I can make a little more headway.

I remember being so proud when Noelle, our granddaughter and her mariachi group sang at Barbara's First Ladies luncheon during our inauguration. I heard the mariachi group upstairs, and I'm kind of glad there wasn't a comparison between Noelle's mariachi group and this group of wonderful musicians that enlivened the festivities here. (Laughter.) But I was delighted to hear the music today.

We all know the facts of Cinco de Mayo; that long-ago May 5th when General Zaragoza and his outnumbered troops stood up to the empire of Napoleon III. Stirring facts. But what's most important is the spirit of that day, the spirit of those few poorly-armed men who turned the battle into a glorious symbol. Cinco de Mayo is a symbol of the struggle for self-determination against astounding odds. And it's the symbol of a brave people's unbeatable determination to fight for their own destiny.

It's a day like the downing of the Berlin Wall, the vote against apartheid, the defeat of Iraq's aggression -- events that transform our world and the way we see each other. It's also, of course, a national holiday, a day of pride in Mexican culture, a day of pride in Mexican heritage.

And the Los Angeles Unified School District sponsors an annual Cinco de Mayo essay contest, and I just want to share with you a couple of the quotes. A senior high school student wrote that this day -- and here's the quote -- "instilled within me pride and appreciation for the beauty of my people and the richness of my roots." And a middle school student wrote, "The real significance of Cinco de Mayo is the pride Mexicans everywhere have in their heritage."

And that's a glorious thing to celebrate. And when I think of the Hispanic community in our country, the first words to come to mind are faith, family and freedom. These values have been interwoven into the strong, bright fabric of the Hispanic tradition for generations and they're also the very values that this nation was founded on.

Cinco de Mayo shows that we all have debts to our ancestors who took risks and made sacrifices for us, whether on the battlefield or out in the farm field. And we must honor these men and women who ached to pass on a richer life, a freer life, a better life; who sacrificed all they had in order to guarantee opportunity, freedom and hope for their children and their children's children.

One essay winner in this Los Angeles contest wrote, "Celebrating the deeds of our ancestors helps us keep in touch with our history and reminds us of past suffering and hardship that brought about the comfort we have today." Cinco de Mayo -- it does not belong solely to another land; it's a celebration of ideals that know no border.

And today we rejoice at the men and women who came to this country from across the world, brought their finest strengths, their rich culture, their proudest tradition and sift them into the vibrant mosaic that is America.

We must also look toward the future to prepare the legacy we will leave our children. I believe of all the gifts that we could give them, the three most important are jobs, family, and peace. And the America we will leave to our country will be a better land and more just land if we make progress here on five key areas. I'm thinking of our health care system, our legal system, our education system, our system of government and, of course, we must expand world trade. And these are the keys to thriving in the future.

And so much depends upon trade. Mexico and the United States share a great deal. President Salinas, as I say, is a dear friend. He also is a bold and imaginative leader, and the deep and enduring relationship we're forging between our countries is based on cooperation, mutual respect, and open trade. And I will fight to tear down economic barriers with Mexico.

I notice the portrait of Juarez watching us. And seeing him reminds me of that great fresco I saw upstairs, "The Liberators of the American Continent." For those who haven't seen it, it's a symbol of the friendship and union that we share. It shows the great leaders of our lands and a picture of North America and Latin America shaking hands.

This idealized portrait shows what we're going to achieve in trade, because I am absolutely committed -- put the politics aside -- I am absolutely committed to signing a sound North American Free Trade Agreement just as soon as possible. (Applause.)

The time of opportunity is now. I've told our negotiators to accelerate their work. I believe we can conclude a sound and sensible deal before this United States election, and I will sign it just as soon as it's ready.

A great lesson of our age is that trade and enterprise can build jobs and certainly can preserve freedom. NAFTA, the North American Free Trade Agreement, will be the key to higher standards of living for the peoples of our continent. I hope it helps, and I'm sure it will, the standard of living in Mexico. I know it will do the same for the United States. And then I believe the benefits will flow south where it will open the door for other such free trade agreements.

It will liberate our markets and it will increase trade, investment and jobs -- yes, jobs. In Mexico, in Canada, and right here in the United States of America.

I must say, as I look over here I have a little guilt complex because I see Bernie Aronson who is working so very hard and in such effectiveness to bring forth a trade agreement, and he's done a wonderful job in our relationship. Bernie, I should have mentioned you earlier, but I'm just delighted you're here. (Applause.)

But as he knows and all of us, I think, know, a free trade market made up of these three nations -- Mexico, Canada, and the United States -- would be the stuff of dreams -- one of the largest markets in the world; 360 million consumers in a $6 trillion economy.

Now, Mexico is among the fastest-growing national markets for U.S. exports, and they've increased by two-thirds just over the past three years. And our exports of auto parts and telecommunications equipment have doubled. Imagine what will happen under a free trade agreement. And it will create thousands more jobs on both sides of the border. And all of us will be winners.

And in that spirit of vital cooperation, I know that we will grow together. But all communities within the United States need to pause right now in the wake of tragic events in Los Angeles. We must rethink and reaffirm the bonds that knit all nationalities together.

The violence brought much suffering to the Los Angeles Hispanic community. And I am certain that many of you, as did I, shared in their pain. And even as my heart, too, goes out to them, I found in the midst of the devastation, there were signs of promise -- neighbor helping neighbor, regardless of race or cultural background. Converging in Los Angeles were three fundamental issues of a civilized society -- justice, order and tolerance. And these must remain our goals as we mend the wounds of Los Angeles.

From New York to San Antonio to as we mend the wounds of Los Angeles.

From New York to San Antonio to San Jose, we must redouble our efforts to build on our strengths -- the same strengths of character that are at the heart of the Hispanic community here in the United States and in Mexico as well.

My friends, I look forward to spending future Cinco de Mayo days with you. I loved the music, as I said. I can't wait to hear it again. And thank you very much, Gus, for including me in this wonderful day. And here's something my eight-year-old grandson, Jebby, did teach me -- "Vayan con Dios."

Thank you very, very much. (Applause.)

FACT SHEET ON TRUCK, RAIL & OCEAN SHIPPING REFORMS

As part of the President's regulatory relief initiative, the Administration today announced several actions to reduce the economic burdens created by federal regulation of surface freight transportation.

Because transportation generally accounts for 20 percent of the delivered cost of manufactured products, regulation acts as a "hidden tax" that makes almost all consumer goods more expensive. This hidden tax also makes all American goods and services less competitive in the world marketplace.

By reducing regulatory costs, the following actions will reduce prices to American consumers, make American goods and services more competitive, and help create jobs.

1. Reducing The Costs Of Truck Transportation By Clarifying The Definition Of "Interstate" Movement. Although the Federal government has removed most economic regulation of interstate trucking, many States continue to impose economic regulation on truck movements within their borders. This regulation artificially stifles competition, leads shippers and trucking companies to use inefficient, circuitous routes, and skews plant and warehouse siting decisions. The Administration estimates that inefficient State regulation costs consumers and workers $3 to $8 billion per year, and it has proposed legislation that would end State economic regulation of all interstate carriers.

Today, however, the Administration is acting under existing statutory authority to eliminate one of the most serious regulatory abuses: attempts by state regulators to regulate rates on "intrastate" portions of interstate trucking movements. The Administration estimates that this practice alone imposes unnecessary regulatory costs of $600 million to $2.8 billion annually. The Administration's strategy has two parts:

- o First, the Interstate Commerce Commission today announced a new policy statement on the definition of "interstate" shipments. This statement clarifies that a truck shipment that continues an interstate or foreign movement is "interstate" in character and therefore under ICC jurisdiction, even if, prior to delivery, the shipment temporarily rests in a warehouse located in the destination state.

- The ICC policy statement makes clear that state economic regulation of these movements is preempted. The statement will provide greater certainty to shippers, trucking companies, and state regulatory bodies regarding the scope of federal authority.
- Under its new policy statement, the ICC will, upon request, expeditiously issue a ruling determining whether the activities of a particular freight carrier are part of interstate commerce and, therefore, subject to the ICC's jurisdiction.
- o The second part of the Administration's strategy is a new enforcement policy by the Department of Justice. Specifically, the Department today announced that, once the ICC has determined that a freight carrier's activities are subject to the ICC's jurisdiction, the Department will bring suit where necessary to enforce that determination. This could include seeking an injunction prohibiting a state regulatory body from taking any action against the carrier that is inconsistent with the ICC's ruling.
- o Shippers and consumers will benefit substantially from the enhanced competition and lower freight rates that these efforts will produce.

2. Reducing the Costs Of Rail Transportation. Rail transportation also plays an important role in our Nation's economy. The ICC announced the following steps to reduce rail transportation costs:

- o Modernized Rail Carrier Classifications. The ICC has recently issued a proposed rule that would increase the existing annual revenue thresholds for rail carrier classifications. This step will substantially reduce reporting costs for mid-sized railroads.
- o Facilitating New Railroad Construction. In addition, the ICC is actively considering, and intends to act next week upon, a proposed rule that would make it easier for rail carriers to build new access lines to new and existing customers. This will help utilities and other rail customers to diversify supply sources (e.g., by obtaining cleaner coal) and reduce costs, without sacrificing environmental protection.

3. Reducing the Costs of Ocean Shipping. Importers and exporters spend more than $30 billion per year to transport U.S. goods to foreign markets and to bring foreign goods to U.S. consumers. The cost of ocean shipping adds a significant percentage to the delivered cost of these goods. The Federal Maritime Commission (FMC) has launched two rulemaking proceedings in an effort to reduce these costs:

- o Examination of Conference Practices. The FMC has initiated a proceeding to examine a number of practices by rate "conferences" -- i.e., rate-setting bodies made up of regulated carriers. These practices are believed to obstruct conference members' statutory right to take "independent action" by offering discounted rates to shippers.
  - For example, the FMC is examining whether to ban a practice under which conferences can, in effect, reduce the minimum volume that a conference member can require for volume discounts. This practice tends to make volume discounting less attractive to carriers.
  - Relaxation of current restrictions on the freedom to offer discounts will enhance the competitiveness of U.S. export industries and reduce prices to U.S. consumers.
- o Examination of NVOCCs. The FMC has also initiated a proceeding to consider certain tariff filing exemptions for non-vessel operating common carriers (NVOCCs). NVOCCs are intermediaries that consolidate shipments to take advantage of volume discounts.
  - One possibility under consideration is to exempt small NVOCCs from all tariff filing.
  - Another proposal would ease tariff filing requirements on less-than-containerload (LCL) traffic for all NVOCCs. Elimination of tariff filing would save each of the Nation's one thousand plus NVOCCs some $15,000 per year.

Dear Mrs. Murphy,

Barbara and I are so sorry to learn of the loss of your husband, George. This is a difficult time for you and the family, but I hope it helps a little to know that we Bushes are thinking of you.

OBITUARIES

George L. Murphy, 89, Dies; Former U.S. Senator, Actor

By Bart Barnes
Washington Post Staff Writer

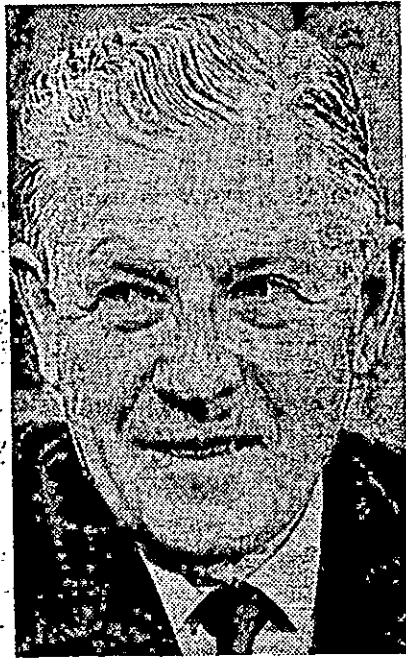

George L. Murphy, 89, a former nightclub dancer and stage and screen actor who served as a Republican senator from California from 1965 to 1971, died of leukemia May 3 at his home in Palm Beach, Fla.

Mr. Murphy's acting career included five Broadway plays and 55 motion pictures, but he retired from acting in 1952 to specialize in public relations for the motion picture industry. In 1950 he received a special Academy Award for "interpreting the motion picture industry correctly to the public at large."

In politics he was known as a skilled and tireless fund-raiser, and he served in 1966 as chairman of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee, raising $2.25 million for the party, a considerable sum for that period. He was chairman of entertainment for the 1953 and 1957 inaugurations of Dwight D. Eisenhower and served as program chairman for the 1956 and 1960 Republican national conventions.

Attractive, well-tailored and gracious, Mr. Murphy fit the stereotypical image of a senator. He appeared restrained and modest, and he spoke in a quiet voice, but he made his points forcefully. His formula for a political speech, he once said, was to scan the newspaper and make a few notes, then: "You point with pride and you view with alarm. You can say all sorts of things if you say them with a smile and you say them kindly."

Mr. Murphy won his Senate seat in his first bid for elective office in November 1964, defeating Democrat Pierre Salinger, the former press secretary to President Kennedy. Salinger had been appointed to fill out the term of Sen. Clair Engle (D-Calif.), who died July 30, 1964. In the 1970 election, Mr. Murphy lost his seat to Democrat

GEORGE L. MURPHY

1964. In the 1970 election, Mr. Murphy lost his seat to Democrat John Tunney.

As a senator, Mr. Murphy served on the Labor and Public Welfare, Public Works and Armed Services committees. He argued for bigger defense budgets and worked on solutions to problems involving migrant farm labor for California's fruit and vegetable growers. He was author of a widely publicized and controversial amendment that would have given governors veto powers over activities of lawyers in the Office of Economic Opportunity's Legal Services Program. The amendment passed the Senate but never became law.

Mr. Murphy was born in New Haven, Conn., and he attended Yale University. While in college he worked summers in a coal mine in Portage, Pa., and he joined the United Mine Workers union. Later he was a messenger on Wall Street, and in the early 1920s he formed a dancing partnership with Juliette Henkel. They performed in cabarets on the nightclub circuit and at debutante parties. They were married in 1926. She died about 20 years ago.

In 1927 Mr. Murphy made his stage debut on Broadway in the musical comedy "Good News." Best known of his five plays was "Roberta," in which he starred with Bob Hope and Fred MacMurray. His movies included "This is the Army," with Ronald Reagan and Irving Berlin; "Little Miss Broadway," with Shirley Temple; "For Me and My Gal," with Judy Garland and Gene Kelly; and "Little Nelly Kelly."

Mr. Murphy was a founder and former president of the Screen Actors Guild, a vice president of Desilu Studios and later vice president of Technicolor Corp.

After his 1970 defeat for reelection to the Senate, Mr. Murphy was a business and political consultant in Washington. Taiwan was one of his clients. He also operated a speakers bureau for such well-known talent as Bob Hope and Gen. William C. Westmoreland, and he helped promote an organization called American Cause, a conservative-leaning answer to Common Cause. He moved to Florida about 10 years ago.

Mr. Murphy was a longtime supporter of the Boy Scouts and a recipient of the organization's highest adult award, the Silver Buffalo.

Survivors include his wife, the former Betty Bland of Palm Beach, and two children from his first marriage, Dennis Murphy and Melissa Brown, both of California.

Thanks for your note but, you see, the pleasure was all ours. Sea Island after November could be almost as refreshing as an April weekend at Camp David with good friends.

Barbara and I are so glad you came, and we both send our best to you and Mary.

Dear Mr. President:

Just a word to thank you for a memorable weekend at Camp David. Everything was fun and relaxing, but I must say that in my wildest imagination, I never would have dreamed of having Arnold Palmer as a teacher and the President of the United States as a fellow pupil. The green and sand trap and pitching area at Camp David are superb and I am anxious to see if I can remember what Arnie taught us.

I arrived back in Atlanta during the middle of the afternoon and found that the weather was cool here, almost as cool as Camp David. Apparently the cool weather prevailed all over the eastern seaboard.

Mary joins me in sending warm wishes to you and Mrs. Bush and I hope that you will thank her for putting up with me without having Mary present to assist. We are looking forward to seeing the two of you at Sea Island during the fall. Sea Island will be a perfect place for you to relax after your victory in November.

Sincerely,

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: BRENT SCOWCROFT BS

SUBJECT: Response to AT&T Chairman of the Board Robert Allen on Trade and Investment with the former Soviet Union

Purpose

To respond to a letter from AT&T Chairman Robert Allen by describing Administration efforts to promote expanded trade and investment with the former Soviet Union.

Background

AT&T Chairman of the Board, Robert Allen, wrote to you to regret he could not attend your April 21 meeting with American CEOs on our business ties with Russia and the other new independent states, and to make some recommendations for U.S. policy.

The attached draft response reviews our efforts to create a better economic relationship with the new states, to reduce barriers to trade on both sides, and requests his support with Congress for quick passage of the FREEDOM Support Act. Your letter also encloses for his information a copy of the statement you made before the meeting in the Rose Garden pledging a vigorous Administration commitment to help the American business community broaden their opportunities in the former Soviet Union.

RECOMMENDATION

That you sign the letter at Tab A

WASHINGTON

Dear Mr. Allen:

Thank you very much for your letter concerning my meeting with senior American business executives on April 21 and our efforts to promote expanded trade and investment with the new states that have replaced the former Soviet Union. I regret you could not be with us for the meeting, but appreciate very much your thoughts and recommendations.

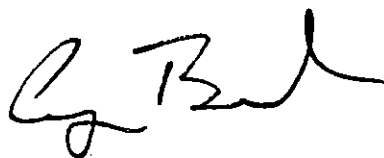

We had an excellent meeting on April 21. I described for the senior executives the critical role of the private sector in helping to meet one of the most important foreign policy challenges of our time -- the economic transformation of formerly command economies in the new states to free market economies. I told them that the Administration was expediting trade, bilateral investment and tax negotiations with all the new states to provide a sounder framework for trade and investment. I mentioned that OPIC and the Export-Import Bank will expand their operations in these new countries to promote American exports.

We also had a very good discussion of the most significant barriers to trade and investment. I asked for their support, and would appreciate yours, with Congress for passage of the FREEDOM Support Act before President Yeltsin's State Visit to Washington in June. This legislation will remove the Cold War restrictions that have impeded American investment for decades. I also announced that Secretary of Commerce Barbara Franklin will create new Business Development Committees, comprised of Administration and American private sector representatives, to work with Russia, Ukraine and the other states on reducing their barriers to foreign investment. I would encourage you to be in touch with Secretary Franklin about your participation on these committees.

The most useful part of the meeting for me was to hear the perspective of the American business community. I am determined to maintain close communication with our firms so that, together, we might meet the historic challenge of opening these new markets to American goods and services.

Sincerely,

The President

Washington, D.C. 20500

Dear Mr. President:

Regrettably, I will not be able to join you tomorrow to discuss the important U.S. business/government partnership to assist the former Soviet Union in its transition to a democratic society. I believe, as you do, that U.S. business must play a major role in assisting the new republics achieve the economic reforms critical to that transition. I hope tomorrow's session will be only the first in a series of collaborative meetings that will explore what government and business can do to realize our common goal.

Telecommunications is a vital catalyst for democratic reform and economic revitalization. In today's information age, telecommunications links are as critical to economic growth as railways and highways were in the industrial age. Fewer than 10% of domestic long-distance calls are successfully completed in the former Soviet Union, and the substandard telecommunications infrastructure remains a serious barrier to attracting private investment. AT&T is taking a leading role in the reconstruction of the telecommunications network, with major projects already underway in Russia, Ukraine, Armenia, and Kazakhstan.

I applaud your leadership in offering the "FREEDOM Support Act of 1992" and lend my support to your initiative. AT&T believes a few steps can be taken to implement the new policies outlined in the bill, and we offer the following specific suggestions:

- 1) Establish a Business Advisory Council which will partner with the U.S. Government in creating and directing programs to encourage U.S. private investment in the newly independent states.
- 2) Relax export control regulations on telecommunications equipment so that the newly independent states can at least buy the same level of technology that can be sold in China today under COCOM rules.

- 3) In addition to the Citizens Democracy Corps and other new institutions, consider using U.S. companies as vehicles to provide U.S. technical assistance to the newly independent states.
- 4) Provide a coordinated system of support which, in addition to macroeconomic aid, directs some of the U.S. assistance to economic infrastructure projects such as telecommunications, energy, transportation, and others.
- 5) Implement programs to minimize risk to U.S. companies doing business in the newly independent states, such as expanded political risk insurance and guarantee facilities.

Thank you for the invitation to participate in tomorrow's meeting. I hope these suggestions are useful, and look forward to working cooperatively with your Administration on this and other trade initiatives.

Sincerely,

RELATIONS BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND MEXICO ARE TREMENDOUSLY IMPORTANT TO BOTH OF OUR LANDS -- AND IT'S EXCITING TO NOTE THAT THESE RELATIONS HAVE NEVER BEEN BETTER THAN THEY ARE RIGHT NOW.

I TAKE GREAT PRIDE IN THAT -- AND I COMMEND MY FRIEND
PRESIDENT SALINAS FOR THE ROLE HE'S PLAYED IN STRENGTHENING THIS SPECIAL FRIENDSHIP THAT BENEFITS
BOTH OUR PEOPLES. \\\

I WANT TO THANK ALL OF YOU FOR LETTING ME SHARE IN THIS VERY SPECIAL DAY -- A DAY MADE EVEN MORE MEANINGFUL BECAUSE 1992 MARKS 500 YEARS OF HISPANIC
HERITAGE IN THIS HEMISPHERE.

THIS HERITAGE IS A WONDERFUL, RICH TAPESTRY THAT BARBARA, OUR KIDS AND I WERE LUCKY ENOUGH TO FIRST EXPERIENCE DURING OUR WEST TEXAS YEARS. I REMEMBER OUR CINCO DE MAYO FESTIVITIES, EXPLORING THE TIES BETWEEN OUR COUNTRIES -- TIES OF FAMILY, FRIENDSHIP, FAITH.

THE BUSHES ARE LUCKY TO BE ABLE TO KEEP THAT CELEBRATION ALIVE -- OUR DAUGHTER-IN-LAW AND THREE OF OUR GRANDKIDS ARE HISPANIC-AMERICAN, AND THEY BRING THE WONDER OF THIS DUAL HERITAGE INTO OUR FAMILY.

I REMEMBER BEING SO PROUD WHEN LITTLE NOELLE AND HER MARIACHI GROUP SANG AT BARBARA'S FIRST LADY'S LUNCHEON DURING OUR INAUGURATION. \\\

WE ALL KNOW THE FACTS OF CINCO DE MAYO -- THAT LONG-AGO MAY 5TH WHEN GENERAL ZARAGOZA AND HIS OUTNUMBERED TROOPS STOOD UP TO THE EMPIRE OF NAPOLEON III. STIRRING FACTS.

BUT WHAT'S MOST IMPORTANT IS THE SPIRIT OF THAT DAY -- THE SPIRIT OF THOSE FEW POORLY-ARMED MEN WHO TURNED THE BATTLE INTO A GLORIOUS SYMBOL. CINCO DE MAYO IS A SYMBOL OF THE STRUGGLE FOR SELF-DETERMINATION AGAINST ASTOUNDING ODDS. IT'S THE SYMBOL OF A BRAVE PEOPLE'S UNBEATABLE DETERMINATION TO FIGHT FOR THEIR OWN DESTINY.

IT'S A DAY LIKE THE DOWNING OF THE BERLIN WALL --
THE VOTE AGAINST APARTHEID -- THE DEFEAT OF IRAQ'S AGGRESSION -- EVENTS THAT TRANSFORM OUR WORLD AND THE WAY WE SEE EACH OTHER. \\\

IT'S ALSO, OF COURSE, A NATIONAL HOLIDAY -- A DAY OF PRIDE IN MEXICAN CULTURE AND HERITAGE. THE LOS ANGELES UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT SPONSORS AN ANNUAL CINCO DE MAYO ESSAY CONTEST, AND I WANT TO SHARE WITH YOU A COUPLE OF QUOTES.

A SENIOR HIGH STUDENT WROTE THAT THIS DAY "INSTILLED WITHIN ME PRIDE AND APPRECIATION FOR THE BEAUTY OF MY PEOPLE AND THE RICHNESS OF MY ROOTS." \\
A MIDDLE SCHOOL STUDENT WROTE: "THE REAL SIGNIFICANCE OF CINCO DE MAYO IS THE PRIDE MEXICANS EVERYWHERE HAVE IN THEIR HERITAGE." \\

THAT'S A GLORIOUS THING TO CELEBRATE. WHEN I THINK OF THE HISPANIC COMMUNITY THE FIRST WORDS TO COME TO MIND ARE -- FAITH, FAMILY, AND FREEDOM.

THESE VALUES HAVE BEEN INTERWOVEN INTO THE STRONG,
BRIGHT FABRIC OF THE HISPANIC TRADITION FOR GENERATIONS
-- AND THEY'RE ALSO THE VERY VALUES THIS NATION WAS FOUNDED ON. \\\

CINCO DE MAYO SHOWS THAT WE ALL HAVE DEBTS TO OUR ANCESTORS WHO TOOK RISKS AND MADE SACRIFICES FOR US --
WHETHER ON THE BATTLEFIELD OR THE FARM FIELD.

WE MUST HONOR THESE MEN AND WOMEN WHO ACHED TO PASS ON A RICHER LIFE, A FREER LIFE, A BETTER LIFE -- WHO SACRIFICED ALL THEY HAD IN ORDER TO GUARANTEE OPPORTUNITY, FREEDOM AND HOPE FOR THEIR CHILDREN AND THEIR CHILDREN'S CHILDREN.

ONE ESSAY WINNER WROTE: "CELEBRATING THE DEEDS OF OUR ANCESTORS HELPS US KEEP IN TOUCH WITH OUR HISTORY
-- AND REMINDS US OF PAST SUFFERING AND HARDSHIP THAT BROUGHT ABOUT THE COMFORT WE HAVE TODAY." \\\

CINCO DE MAYO DOESN'T BELONG SOLELY TO ANOTHER LAND
-- IT'S A CELEBRATION OF IDEALS THAT KNOW NO BORDER.
TODAY WE REJOICE THAT THE MEN AND WOMEN WHO CAME TO THIS COUNTRY FROM ACROSS THE WORLD BROUGHT THEIR FINEST
STRENGTHS, THEIR RICH CULTURE, THEIR PROUDEST
TRADITIONS, AND FIT THEM INTO THE VIBRANT MOSAIC THAT IS AMERICA. \\\

WE MUST ALSO LOOK TOWARD THE FUTURE, TO PREPARE THE LEGACY WE WILL LEAVE OUR CHILDREN. I BELIEVE OF ALL THE GIFTS WE COULD GIVE THEM, THE THREE MOST IMPORTANT
ARE -- JOBS, FAMILY AND PEACE. \\\

THE AMERICA WE WILL LEAVE TO OUR CHILDREN WILL BE A BETTER LAND AND A MORE JUST LAND, IF WE MAKE PROGRESS IN FIVE KEY AREAS.

WE MUST REFORM OUR HEALTH CARE SYSTEM -- OUR LEGAL SYSTEM -- OUR EDUCATION SYSTEM -- AND OUR SYSTEM OF GOVERNMENT. AND WE MUST EXPAND WORLD TRADE. THESE ARE THE KEYS TO THRIVING IN THE FUTURE. \\\

AND SO MUCH DEPENDS UPON TRADE. MEXICO AND THE UNITED STATES SHARE A GREAT DEAL. PRESIDENT SALINAS IS A DEAR FRIEND -- A BOLD AND IMAGINATIVE LEADER.

THE DEEP AND ENDURING RELATIONSHIP WE'RE FORGING BETWEEN OUR COUNTRIES IS BASED ON COOPERATION, MUTUAL RESPECT -- AND OPEN TRADE. I WILL FIGHT TO TEAR DOWN ECONOMIC BARRIERS WITH MEXICO. \\\

I NOTICE THE PORTRAIT OF BENITO JUAREZ WATCHING US RIGHT NOW -- SEEING HIM REMINDS ME OF THAT GREAT FRESCO I SAW UPSTAIRS -- "THE LIBERATORS OF THE AMERICAN CONTINENT."

FOR THOSE WHO HAVEN'T SEEN IT, IT'S A SYMBOL OF THE FRIENDSHIP AND UNION WE SHARE -- IT SHOWS THE GREAT LEADERS OF OUR LANDS, AND A PICTURE OF NORTH AMERICA AND LATIN AMERICA SHAKING HANDS.

THIS IDEALIZED PORTRAIT SHOWS WHAT WE'RE GOING TO ACHIEVE IN TRADE -- BECAUSE I AM ABSOLUTELY COMMITTED TO SIGNING A SOUND NORTH AMERICAN FREE TRADE AGREEMENT AS SOON AS POSSIBLE. \\\

THE TIME OF OPPORTUNITY IS NOW. I'VE TOLD OUR NEGOTIATORS TO ACCELERATE THEIR WORK. I BELIEVE WE CAN CONCLUDE A SOUND, SENSIBLE DEAL BEFORE THE ELECTION -- AND I WILL SIGN IT AS SOON AS IT'S READY. \\\

A GREAT LESSON OF OUR AGE IS THAT TRADE AND ENTERPRISE CAN BUILD JOBS AND PRESERVE FREEDOM. NAFTA WILL BE THE KEY TO HIGHER STANDARDS OF LIVING FOR THE PEOPLES OF OUR CONTINENT. \\\

IT WILL LIBERATE OUR MARKETS.

AND IT WILL INCREASE TRADE, INVESTMENT, AND JOBS
-- YES, JOBS -- IN MEXICO, IN CANADA, AND RIGHT HERE IN THE UNITED STATES. \\\

A FREE TRADE MARKET MADE UP OF THESE THREE NATIONS
WOULD BE THE STUFF OF DREAMS -- ONE OF THE LARGEST MARKETS IN THE WORLD -- 360 MILLION CONSUMERS IN A $6
TRILLION ECONOMY.

MEXICO IS AMONG THE FASTEST GROWING NATIONAL
MARKETS FOR US EXPORTS -- THEY HAVE INCREASED BY 2/3
OVER THE PAST 3 YEARS -- AND OUR EXPORTS OF AUTO PARTS
AND TELECOMMUNICATIONS EQUIPMENT HAVE DOUBLED. IMAGINE
WHAT WILL HAPPEN UNDER NAFTA.

IT WILL CREATE THOUSANDS MORE JOBS ON BOTH SIDES OF THE BORDER -- AND ALL OF US WILL BE WINNERS. \\\

IN THAT SPIRIT OF VITAL COOPERATION, I KNOW WE'LL GROW TOGETHER.

BUT ALL COMMUNITIES WITHIN THESE UNITED STATES NEED TO PAUSE RIGHT NOW, IN THE WAKE OF THE TRAGIC EVENTS IN LOS ANGELES.

WE MUST RE-THINK AND RE-AFFIRM THE BONDS THAT KNIT ALL NATIONALITIES TOGETHER. THE VIOLENCE BROUGHT MUCH SUFFERING TO THE LOS ANGELES HISPANIC COMMUNITY. I AM CERTAIN MANY OF YOU SHARED IN THEIR PAIN.

AND EVEN AS MY HEART TOO GOES OUT TO THEM, I FOUND IN THE MIDST OF THE DEVASTATION, THERE WERE SIGNS OF PROMISE -- NEIGHBOR HELPING NEIGHBOR, REGARDLESS OF RACE.

CONVERGING IN LOS ANGELES WERE THREE FUNDAMENTAL ISSUES OF A CIVILIZED SOCIETY -- JUSTICE, ORDER AND TOLERANCE. THESE MUST REMAIN OUR GOALS AS WE MEND THE WOUNDS OF LOS ANGELES.

- 21 -

FROM NEW YORK TO SAN ANTONIO TO SAN JOSE, WE MUST REDOUBLE OUR EFFORTS TO BUILD ON OUR STRENGTHS -- THE SAME STRENGTHS OF CHARACTER AT THE HEART OF THE HISPANIC COMMUNITY. \\\

MY FRIENDS, I LOOK FORWARD TO SPENDING FUTURE CINCO
DE MAYO DAYS WITH YOU -- I LOVED THE MARIACHI MUSIC, AND I CAN'T WAIT TO HEAR IT AGAIN.

- 22 -

THANKS AGAIN FOR INCLUDING ME IN YOUR DAY -- HERE'S SOMETHING MY 8-YEAR-OLD GRANDSON JEBBY TAUGHT ME TO SAY
-- "VAYAN CON DIOS!"

MEETING WITH SENATE REPUBLICAN CONFERENCE

- First, I want to thank you again for the support you have given me this year and throughout my presidency. We have had some tough battles and there are many more ahead. But when we have stuck together we have won. And we are going to win this year too.
- Let me say a few words about the events of the past week in Los Angeles. As you know, since I first learned of the riots in Los Angeles I've been meeting with people both inside and outside the Administration on how we can help the citizens of L.A.

Card 2

- On Monday morning and then again today, I met with members of my Cabinet with key responsibilities for domestic programs that affect the lives of urban residents. I've asked them to work with me to develop both short-term and long-term responses to help restore the damage done by the riots.
- I've also asked two of my Deputy Cabinet Secretaries -- David Kearns at Education and Al Dellibovi at HUD -- to lead a small team of Executive Branch officials to Los Angeles. Their mission is to ensure that federal programs that can bring relief of any sort to Los Angeles residents are put into action as quickly as possible.

- This group will be working closely with people from the Mayor's office and the Governor's staff to make sure that we are providing the type of assistance they need.

I know you are beginning work on my rescission package this week. When we sent the package to the Hill, we selected items that were neither needed nor budgeted for national defense. Unfortunately, the Democrats on the Appropriations Committee have decided to turn this into a political ploy by cutting our strategic defense initiative and procurement funds for the B-2 bomber.

- The B-2 and SDI are both important to our security needs. I don't want to have to veto a rescission bill. I hope you will rally behind Ted Stevens and give us a solid vote of support.

- I also wanted to mention our Soviet Aid Package which the Foreign Relations Committee will be marking up soon. Bob Dole, Dick Lugar, Pete Domenici and all of the members of Bob's task force have supported our efforts here. I think we can achieve a bipartisan consensus on this bill...and I'd like to get it through the Senate prior to Boris Yeltsin's visit in mid-June. Getting our aid package through the Senate will help with the even more difficult hurdles we face in the House.

- One more item I'll mention before taking your questions and comments...the issue of the balanced budget amendment. Dick Darman will be testifying in the House on Wednesday outlining our support. Bob Kasten, Strom Thurmond, Orrin Hatch and others have been out front on this one. I want to reaffirm my support for a balanced budget amendment as well as my strong support for a 3/5 vote on any tax-raising measures.

- Now, I better stop and hear from you.

MEETING WITH HOUSE MEMBERS ON SOVIET AID

DATE: Tuesday, May 5, 1992
LOCATION: Cabinet Room
TIME: 1:00 p.m. (30 minutes)
FROM: Nicholas E. Calio NEC

I. PURPOSE

To organize a bi-partisan core group in the House for passage of the aid package to the former Soviet Republics.

II. BACKGROUND

On April 3, 1992, you transmitted a legislative proposal entitled the "Freedom for Russia and Emerging Eurasian Democracies and Open Markets Support Act of 1992." Secretary Baker testified before the House Foreign Affairs Committee last Thursday, where the initiative was well received. Later that day, the Secretary met with a bi-partisan leadership group, where some Democrats stated that while they agreed the initiative was important, it would be difficult to pass in the current atmosphere. Congressman David Bonior (D-MI) is leading the charge against any Soviet aid until there is action on the domestic front in the form of an accelerated public works program and an unemployment benefits extension. The House Foreign Affairs Committee mark up has not been scheduled to date.

III. PARTICIPANTS

See Attachment A.

IV. PRESS PLAN

White House photographer only.

V. SEQUENCE OF EVENTS

Members will be met in the West Lobby and escorted to the Cabinet Room for their meeting with you.

MEETING WITH BIPARTISAN GROUP OF HOUSE MEMBERS

- Thank you all for coming down.
- I wanted to compare notes on where we are with the Soviet Aid package. For this group, I don't need to dwell on the importance of this initiative.
- The transformation of the former Soviet Union from a totalitarian enemy to fifteen free, democratic partners is one of the great challenges of this century.

Card 2

- As I said when the package was introduced, I hope we can get it approved quickly. Timing is critical, the sooner the better. Yeltsin will be here in mid-June. It would be an enormous positive statement for the Administration and Congress, jointly, to present him with some tangible support for the courageous reforms he and his people are undertaking.
- I am personally committed to making that happen - including rounding up the votes.
- I know it will not be easy so I appreciate your willingness to be part of this core group and to work with us. I hope we can make sure we get all the basic authority and flexibility in the bill I sent up last month.

Card 3

- Now, I'd like to get your views on where we are on this issue and what needs to be done...what the potential pitfalls and the major obstacles are.
- Before turning it over to you all, Jim (Baker) is there anything you want to add?

THE SEATING CHART FOR THIS CONGRESSIONAL MEETING WILL BE FORWARDED IN THE MORNING.

II. BACKGROUND:

Cinco de Mayo commemorates the day in 1862 when a small Mexican army defeated an invading French force at Puebla, Mexico. That victory is still celebrated by Mexicans and Mexican Americans.

The Mexican Cultural Institute is housed in the building which previously had been the Mexican Embassy for 68 years. The purpose of the Institute is to enhance the understanding and knowledge of Mexican art and culture to those in this country.

Ambassador Petricioli will invite you to see a mural painted along the wall of the staircase. The mural painted in 1933, depicts one scene which is referenced in your remarks. Titled "Liberators of the Americas," this scene features the great leaders in the history of the Americas.

4:00 P.M. NEWS UPDATE

RIOTERS/PRESIDENT (Terence Hunt, AP) -- President Bush said the government plans to pursue and prosecute people who murdered, burned and looted in riot-torn Los Angeles and is reviewing videotapes to identify suspects, Sen. Seymour said. Bush consulted with Republican senators on Capitol Hill about the riots and also met for a second straight day with Cabinet advisers on the subject. In his two-day trip to Los Angeles, Bush plans to inspect neighborhoods ripped by violence and burnings on his visit to the city.

MITTERRAND/L.A. RIOTS (Paris/Reuter) -- President Mitterrand, who initially blamed the Los Angeles riots on the U.S. government's social policies, has praised President Bush for his handling of the crisis. "Bush displayed wisdom and decisiveness by first taking the advice of black leaders, then sending in forces able to restore order without provocation," he said in an interview to be published Wednesday in the magazine Paris Match. In the interview he expressed confidence that Bush would be able to calm passions and restore good social relations.

POLICE BRUTALITY/REP. EDWARDS (AP) -- Rep. Don Edwards (D-Calif.) endorsed a federal judge's proposal to allow victims of police brutality to collect punitive damages from city governments that employ the officers.

BOSNIA/U.S. (AP) -- The Bush Administration ruled out sending U.S. military forces to embattled Bosnia-Herzegovina even as government leaders in the former Yugoslav republic got ready to appeal for foreign military assistance. "We should not commit American forces to this conflict," Margaret Tutwiler said.

AID TO REPUBLICS/GERMANY (U.N./AP) -- Chancellor Kohl urged the U.S. and Japan to give more economic aid to the former Soviet republics and eastern Europe. He said Germany could not afford to do more. In a speech to the American Newspaper Publishers Association, Kohl warned that failure of democratic reforms could threaten global stability and unleash a refugee exodus not seen since World War II.

RUSSIAN ROCKET ENGINES/U.S. (Reuter) -- The U.S. is still considering trade penalties against Russia if it goes ahead with a $250 million deal to sell rocket engines to India, officials said. Margaret Tutwiler said Washington had not officially been told the deal was going forward.

RUBLE (Moscow/Reuter) -- Russia will let the ruble trade freely against other currencies starting July 1, the first stage in efforts to make its unloved money convertible on world markets. Konstantin Kagalovsky, in charge of Russia's relations with international organizations, said the government would use an initial period of floating exchange rates to force the ruble up from current levels of around 120 to the dollar.

CUBA (Havana/Reuter) -- The official Cuban newspaper Granma condemned the U.S. for holding major military exercises in the Caribbean, saying they revealed hostile U.S. intentions toward the island.

TODAY'S PRIMARIES

Low turnout expected, but there are some races to watch:

NC SEN: Braun/Yeakel effect for pro-life Myrick? Runoff likely; 3 GOPers kick up little dust on Tobacco Road. (#15)

NC GOV: Hunt-Gardner race looms after today's vote. (#22)

NC HOUSE: Will state have 2 black Reps. in the fall? (#19)

IN GOV: Down to the wire for GOP shot at popular Bayh. (#21)

GREAT SOCIETY'S GHOST (#2-5)

White House finger-pointing on L.A. touches off renewed debate on LBJ programs.

CLINTON subdued on L.A. tour, but hits "desperate" WH line.

BUSH dusts off "enterprise zones" from Kemp playbook. The HUD QB, still benched, denies he's Administration "waterboy."

65 "GOTTA GET OUT OF THE HOUSE"

MI delegation firms up its retirements lead with Davis (R) self-bouncing; head Bank prober McHugh (D-NY) also quits. (#17)

ALSO: Pro-choice woman has "B-1 Bob" Dornan in GOP primary sights; more House races. (#20)

SPOTLIGHT

POST-L.A. POLLING

Many assumed the riots might strengthen President Bush with the voters. But the first signs are just the opposite.

TIMES-MIRROR (#24) shows Bush leads a three way race 33%-30%-30%. Voters find that Clinton would do the best job in handling the racial situation -- and in improving conditions for the poor AND for the middle class. (In a two-way race Bush leads only 46%-43%.)

| By region: | NE | MW | SO | WEST |
|------------|----|----|----|------|

| CLINTON    | 30 | 33 | 30 | 27   |
| PEROT      | 32 | 29 | 24 | 38   |

If you pull out a map, give each state to somebody, add up the electoral votes and read the 12th Amendment -- you will see how important each new House retirement is to the parties. (#17)

The House Appropriations Cmte, that bastion of seniority known as the "College of Cardinals" which oversees all spending bills, is facing massive turnover. Not only have 13 of its members announced retirements (9D, 4R), but Cmte Chair Jamie Whitten (D-MS) is extremely ill and ranking GOPer Joe McDade (R-PA) expects to face federal RICO charges.

*1 VOTING TODAY: DC, IN, NC

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA polls close at 8:00p (EDT). On the Dem ballot are Clinton, Brown, Tsongas and "uncommitted." Clinton is the "runaway favorite" to win DC. Turnout is expected to be low. DC, "more than any other [primary] this year, offers Mr. Clinton a clear-cut opportunity to demonstrate his strength with black voters" (Ayres, N.Y. TIMES, 5/5). At DC polling places, Perot supporters will collect signatures to get Perot on the fall ballot. Perot DC coordinator Gloria Borland: "It's a way to get Mr. Perot to commit to the race" (W. TIMES, 5/5).

INDIANA: Polls close at 7:00p (EDT). The GOP gov. primary will likely boost what is expected to be a 20% turnout.

NORTH CAROLINA: Polls close at 7:30p (EDT). There are gov. primaries in both parties and a hotly contested GOP Senate primary which may lead to a 6/2 runoff. Also, NC has primaries in two new majority-black CDs which will likely lead to the election of at least NC's first black Member since 1902.

*2 CLINTON: TIP-TOEING THROUGH THE RUBBLE

He "toured the burned-out blocks of Koreatown and South Central Los Angeles ... and said the key to recovery would be 'empowering' residents through grassroots development that he characterized as a 'third way' between traditional Democratic social programs and Republican 'neglect.'" Clinton, accompanied at different points by L.A. City Councilman Michael Woo and Rep. Maxine Waters, met with African-American and other community leaders, and held a brief private meeting with Mayor Tom Bradley. "Several of those who met with Clinton said they were impressed, but it was clear through the day that he continues to walk a fine line," seeking to understand "the despair in the black community, without condoning the riots" (Brownstein, L.A. TIMES, 5/5). Clinton said "his trip was not motivated by politics but because 'the real issue is whether Americans can make something good come out of Los Angeles'" (USA TODAY, 5/5). W. POST's Von Drehle reports Clinton's remarks to the media "were guarded"; he "gave no bold speeches"; and he "listened more than he spoke, and when he spoke, spoke quietly, in the dry, detailed terms of a policy paper" (5/5). S.F. CHRONICLE's Yoachum reports Clinton walked a "careful line between campaigning and complaining," as he "called for increased federal investment in cities" while "blasting White House comments that blamed devastating riots on liberal programs of the '60s and '70s." Clinton called WH press sec. Marlin Fitzwater's comments on the Great Society (see #4) "the last refuge of a desperate person": "The Republicans have been running against the liberal Democratic programs of the '60s for 25 years -- and they abolished those programs in 1981. I frankly think it's a bum rap." Yoachum writes Clinton's L.A. trip "contrasted sharply to the chilly reception received" by Brown last week (5/5). L.A. TIMES' Stall reports riot area residents viewed Clinton's trip "with a little curiosity, some skepticism and a lot of indifference" (5/5). "Not everyone who saw Mr. Clinton was happy about his presence or his often flowery rhetoric" (McQueen/ Birnbaum, W.S. JOURNAL, 5/5).

TV: Balto. EVENING SUN's Jack Germond: "It's going to be difficult for Bill Clinton to seem to be reassuring to black America about the cities without losing blue-collar white Democrats" (CNN, 5/4). CNN's Gene Randall: "The unrest in Los Angeles clearly could elevate the urban agenda in this year's political campaign. Bill Clinton is convinced he has the advantage, a notion President Bush will try to dispel when he comes here later this week" (CNN, 5/4). NBC's John Cochran: "Bill Clinton is already there [L.A.], walking a fine line, saying he wants to heal racial divisions but only advocating modest financial assistance, mostly loans. Clinton does not want to sound like an unelectable bleeding heart liberal. Racial tension usually helps conservative Republican candidates, but maybe not this time" (5/4). ABC's Judy Muller reporting from L.A.: "Clinton said his visit was political in the best sense of the word" (5/4). CBS' Bill Lagattuta over video of Clinton in L.A. and Jackson in a hospital: "The politicians began parachuting into the war zones today for their photo opportunities. The President arriving this week. Jesse Jackson and Arsenio Hall visited the wounded in a hospital" (5/4).

*3 CLINTON: MA SUPERDELEGATES "A COLLECTION OF DOUBTERS"

BOSTON GLOBE's Renee Loth surveyed MA's 22 superdelegates, and found just 10 committed to Clinton (including Sens. Kennedy, Kerry; Reps. Kennedy, Neal, Studds, Donnelly, Frank). 6 are backing Tsongas, including Reps. Atkins, Markey, and Mavroules. Tsongas "is not actively pursuing delegate votes. But he has said 'it would be nice' if his name were placed in nomination" at the Dem Convention. Clinton did not make the 15% threshold for pledged delegates in the 3/10 primary; Loth estimates Clinton has collected 330 superdelegates nationally (5/5).

HILLARY QUILTS BOARDS: Hillary Clinton 5/4 resigned from the boards of Wal-Mart Inc., yogurt franchise TCBY, and cement company Lafarge Corp., in order to devote herself "full-time" to her husband's campaign. ARKANSAS DEMOCRAT-GAZETTE's Harter notes an OH-based subsidiary of Lafarge has come under fire from activists for burning hazardous waste. Mrs. Clinton is expected to remain with the Rose Law Firm, which the DEM-GAZETTE estimates has made $41,450 from government-related litigation since 1989. Twenty other AR law firms did more government business than Rose (5/5). W. POST reports Mrs. Clinton drew $60,700 from the three boards last year, and $110K from Rose (5/5).

DEATH PENALTY: N.Y. NEWSDAY's Jordan examines Clinton's record on the death penalty, noting the scheduled execution 5/7 of Steven Douglas Hill, who shot and killed a state trooper in 1984. Clinton allowed the execution of Ricky Ray Rector three months ago; a sidebar story repeats earlier questions as to his mental competence. Rector also killed a police officer. Clinton "zealously defends his record on crime issues," saying Dems "should no longer feel guilty about protecting the innocent." A third story notes research on Clinton's record by conservative activist Floyd Brown and his PAC. Possible subjects for independent expenditure TV spots: escaped furlougher Charles Lloyd Patterson -- still at large -- and Larry Dean Robertson, who was released in '87 to ease jail overcrowding, and murdered a woman the next day. Both men are white (5/4).

AR PROTESTS: About a dozen state employees, some of whom represented state worker unions, "angered by having to take a 20 percent pay cut" to cover the AR deficit picketed outside Little Rock state offices. Many "blamed the state's budget crisis on the absent [Clinton]." But both Clinton and LG Jim Guy Tucker "reviewed and agreed with the cuts." Clinton spokesperson Mike Gauldin said he "would have made the same decision had he been in [AR] every day" (Walker, DEMOCRAT-GAZETTE, 5/5).

*4 BUSH: FITZWATER PLACES BLAME ON "GREAT SOCIETY"

President Bush "dispatched his spokesman to declare the root causes of the worst urban riot in modern American history are 'the destructive forces of the social welfare programs of the '60s and '70s (that) did not work'" (Maureen Santini, N.Y. DAILY NEWS, 5/5). While Bush said, "We have some very good ideas that we have out there that would have been extraordinarily helpful if they'd been put into effect," WH press sec. Marlin Fitzwater argued that the Great Society programs "failed to prevent a recurrence of the 1965 Watts riots because they ignored the need for community pride, well-paying jobs and property ownership that provides a stake in the community." Fitzwater: "We've been pushing the liberal Democratic Congress to pass these others and we couldn't get them" (Murray, W. TIMES, 5/5). Pressed for examples of failed programs: "I don't have a list with me" (Wines, N.Y. TIMES, 5/5). COX NEWS' Malone writes, "Despite Bush's lack of focus on such issues in the past, Fitzwater defended the effort to put a political spin on them: "This is a political year, and there's no doubt about it that everybody is going to have their own solutions ... it's time to hit it head on" (ATLANTA CONSTITUTION, 5/5). Balto. SUN's Hosler: The WH "took a sharply partisan line," and called the enterprise zone proposal a "decade-old plan" (5/5). N.Y. POST's Orin writes, "The sharp partisan attack marked yet another shift" (5/5).

REVIEWS: W. POST editorial criticizes Bush for his decision to "revert to the bunker. ... The administration's response to [racial and economic] divisions is to hunker down and consider the political implications" (5/5). N.Y. TIMES editorial criticizes Fitzwater's "pinched, ideological response to a national tragedy," and states it would be "silly and wrong for Mr. Bush to continue that line" (5/5). W. POST's Broder examines the character question in terms of Bush's attitude towards race: "There is no more important test of character for an American president than what he does to heal the scars that slavery and racism have left on this society." Calling LBJ the "last president who acted on this conviction," he adds, "We cannot wait another 25 years for such a president. We just can't" (5/5). W. POST's Cohen: "These awful riots have defined George Bush. ... with Bush we get the muddle" (5/5). Broder on blaming the failed policies of the '60s: It "shows how quickly ... and how callously the Republicans are prepared to exploit this familiar issue." Jack Germond: "To have the situation polarized politically this soon, suggests that the Republicans and conservatives think they have the iron side on this thing. And I suspect they're correct" (CNN, 5/4). ABC's Brit Hume on enterprise zones: "The plan, which has been before Congress for 10 years has never been a major Bush priority" (5/4).

ADVANCE TEAM: Bush heads to L.A. on 5/7. L.A. TIMES' Gerstenzang reports a group of "high-level" WH officials went to L.A. "to beef up the advance team already there, reflecting the high degree of importance what originally had been planned as a routine trip." Bush "is almost certain to visit an area where rioting took place." One aide said Bush's schedule is "being adjusted to give him as much 'face time with the actual folks there' as possible." Bush appointed Deputy Educ. Sec. David Kearns, former Xerox chair, to head up federal relief efforts in L.A. Kearns will coordinate with Peter Ueberroth, appointed by L.A. Mayor Tom Bradley to head "Rebuild L.A." (5/5). Joining Kearns are deputies from HUD, Labor, Commerce and HHS (USA TODAY, 5/5). Bush, asked if he was planning to visit riot areas, said it was being discussed and added, "As you know, I planned a trip out there for some time, so it fits in very nicely" (W. TIMES, 5/5). The Bush admin. "signaled its intention to send a broader response by sending the Kearns delegation with instructions to evaluate needs including housing, health, education and food" (McQueen/Birnbaum W.S. JOURNAL, 5/5).

*5 KEMP: FROM THE RIGHT ... BUT NOT BUSH'S RIGHT HAND MAN

Following Bush statements that the Admin. is considering "some very good ideas that we have out there," NBC's John Cochran reported "the only idea Bush mentioned was a housing proposal aimed at making it easier for people in public housing to own their own homes. That plan is credited to Housing Sec. Jack Kemp, who, though present today, is in the president's dog house." Bush was shown at briefing session flanked by HHS Sec. Louis Sullivan on his right and Kemp on the left. Cochran continued: "This weekend, Kemp publicly called on Bush to move faster on urban problems. Ignoring the unpredictable Kemp, Bush chose today a reliable team player, Deputy Education Sec. David Kearns, to be Bush's point man in Los Angeles" (5/4). HOUSTON CHRONICLE's McDonald writes Bush's mention of home ownership and enterprise zones "only served to underscore the fact that ... Kemp has been unable to gain support within the administration for a strong urban policy" (5/5). W. POST's Devroy reports WH press sec. Fitzwater outlined a "conservative urban manifesto that echoed almost exactly statements" by Kemp. Yesterday's WH cabinet meeting "was dominated by Kemp" (5/5). BOSTON GLOBE's Kranish writes the decision to send Kearns was a "slap" at Kemp, according to some admin. officials. One unidentified Kemp associate "said Bush did not push for either" the HOPE or enterprise zone plans "as strongly ... as Kemp had sought" (5/5). CNN's Charles Bierbauer on Bush's idea to make homeowners out of tenants: "That is very much the idea of Housing Secretary Jack Kemp, though it has scarcely gotten the Bush administration's closest attention" (5/4). Header over W. POST business section piece: "For Kemp, A Moment To Seize" (5/5). N.Y. TIMES editorial examines the "struggle for [Bush's] mind" between Kemp and "cost conscious budgeteers" like OMB Dir. Darman and some political advisers. Half of Bush's urban agenda "consists of initiatives from Mr. Kemp. ... Kemp recognizes the crisis in urban America. He deserves credit for his principled effort to bring conservative ideas to bear on the central problems: jobs and poverty" (5/5).

TO JACK, FROM BILL: Clinton, touring the riot areas, aimed his "only direct political sparring" towards criticism from Kemp that Clinton was "playing politics" with the crisis: "Jack Kemp has been the most critical member of the cabinet, of President Bush's inaction, and my guess is he got a little heat for it and was just trying to make up some political ground on the home court" (PHILA. INQUIRER, 5/5). N.Y. TIMES reports Clinton noted he and Kemp "have much in common" in terms of government's role in solving "deep-rooted social problems" (5/5).

QUARTERBACK OR WATERBOY? CNN's "Crossfire" hosted Kemp and Boston Mayor Ray Flynn (D). Kemp: "The welfare system is designed to treat people who form a family or start a family or come together. It punishes them and it absolutely subsidizes the family that breaks up. That's what Marlin [Fitzwater] was talking about." Flynn to Sununu and Kemp: "Look, I understand what you guys are up to. You're out there trying to put a little spin control on what took place in Los Angeles. Let me tell you something. It's not going to work." Kemp: "You're starting to sound like Jesse Jackson. ... We had a good dialogue over the past three years. ... [Congress] took out our ability [for public housing.]" Flynn: "I don't have to carry water for anybody." Kemp: "I don't either. I'm the most outspoken member ... you accused me of being a spin-control artist and I'm no spin-control artist. Everybody knows that." Flynn: "Jack Kemp is not the President of the United States, he can speak for himself." Kemp, later on enterprise zones: "I don't think the President of the United States should take the blame for joblessness if the Congress doesn't act on the president's agenda to try to put some private enterprise, entrepreneurial capital into the inner cites" (5/4). Kemp also appeared on "Moneyline" (CNN, 5/4).

*6 BUSH: WRANGLING OVER WHETHER TO GO TO RIO

USA TODAY reports the WH endorsement of a U.N. enviro treaty "virtually assur[es]" Bush will attend the U.N. Conference on Environment and Development in Rio. Bush domestic policy "point man" Clayton Yeutter called the U.N. plan "to set a goal -- but not fixed targets required by treaty" of CO2 emissions reduction a "very positive step." Sierra Club spokesperson Daniel Becker called the U.N. language "a meaningless, loophole-ridden mass of gobbledygook" (5/5). World Resource Institute's Jessica Matthews writes: "It won't be the end of the world if George Bush doesn't go to the Rio Earth Summit. If he has little to say and no leadership to offer ... by all means he should save the airfare" (WASH. POST, 5/5). BUSINESS WEEK editorial: "The Rio Conference is the start of a very long, but ultimately worthy process. As the richest country in the world, the U.S. has a major role to play. And an obligation" (5/11 issue). NEWSWEEK: "Rarely have so many agonized so much over a simple invitation. ... How Bush himself feels isn't clear. But a top [WH] aide says he wants to sign a climate treaty ... and he'll probably attend the summit for at least a day so he can put his pen to something. ... Does it matter whether Bush attends? ... He won ['88] pledging to be 'the environmental president.' In this election year, it's a promise he'd like to be able to say he kept" (5/11 issue).

IRAQ AND ROLE OF THE WH: N.Y. TIMES' Leslie Gelb recounts the chronology of Bush's dealings with Saddam Hussein -- "a tale of deception and self-deception, of realism gone awry and/or of gross carelessness." On an investigation "into possible Administration criminality and cover-up," a Washington "petrified by scandal and politics gazes on indifferently" (5/4).

FL ADDRESS: MIAMI HERALD's Tom Fiedler reviews Bush's Florida International Univ. commencement speech: "It was, I thought, an apt metaphor for Bush's presidency, full of cliché and half-baked thought, and lacking in focus or inspiration. ... There were nuggets of thought sprinkled throughout. Thought-lettes, you could say" (5/3).

DINNER REVIEWS: N.Y. DAILY NEWS editorial on the President's Dinner: "A President who attends a $9 million fundraiser, then vetoes a bill to outlaw such obscene money-grubbing has a lot to explain to the public. This should be a major campaign issue" (5/3). The dinner "seemed the source of a rather wide-spread outbreak of indigestions" (Demick, PHILA. INQUIRER, 5/3). WASH. POST's David Broder, noting "chicanery" on both sides of campaign finance reform: "The bottom line is this: Campaign finance reform will not precede the creation of a Republican or Democratic government in Washington. Until we end split control of Congress and the executive branch, both sides will continue to play ... avoidance games" (5/3).

*7 PEROT: WEEKEND COMMENTS ON L.A. UNDER SCOPE

NBC's John Cochran on Perot's claim he would have gone to L.A. and made a quicker, bolder response were he president: "Perot's inexperience is showing. During the rioting it would have put an additional strain on security to try to protect the president and ordinary citizens. Also, the government cannot file charges until a grand jury gives the green light" (5/4). Balto. SUN editorial: "If voters see this as a law-and-order issue or a black-white issue, the Democrats will be hurt. If voters decide that the party in power has to accept responsibility for breakdown in the social order, the Republicans will be hurt. It is conceivable that in both cases, the beneficiary will be Ross Perot. As an independent and non-politician, he carries no baggage of failure" (5/5).

*8 PEROT: '60s MEDICARE ALLEGATIONS REVISITED

N.Y. TIMES' Steven Holmes, in a front-page story, examines Perot's Medicare contract with the federal government in the 1960s. "Questions were raised then ... that belie the image Mr. Perot likes to promote of himself as a businessman who 'plays in the middle of the field, and not along the sidelines." Holmes repeats early 1970s allegations about the Medicare contract raised by a congressional subcmte (later dropped), and a dispute between Perot and the LBJ admin. over Perot's relationship with the Social Security Admin. The dispute was settled in Perot's favor after Nixon became president. Although investigators "did not suggest Mr. Perot broke any laws, they did say he was overly secretive, skirted Federal rules, and engaged in what could be viewed as conflicts of interest." When he won the federal contract, Perot worked part time for TX Blue Cross/Blue Shield. Merrill Lynch analyst Stephen McClellan says the tie to BC/BS was "the basic early foundation and underpinnings" of Perot's newly-formed company, EDS. There were unproven charges at the time that EDS overcharged Medicare for its services; Perot maintained then "he was actually saving money for the government and that how much profit he made was not the government's business" (5/5).

ALSO: BOSTON GLOBE's Robinson examines efforts by both parties to sabotage Perot petition efforts in various states (5/4). Addressing a convention of money managers in San Antonio, Perot stressed "first-class" education as a priority for him, singling out early childhood development centers as "the most cost-effective thing you can do" (Hayes, N.Y. TIMES, 5/5). W. POST's Balz highlights Perot's refusal to "get down to specifics." Balz also notes Buchanan pollster Frank Luntz was recently in Dallas "offering additional advice." Perot on the poll he commissioned from pollster Mark Penn: "Friends of mine ... just couldn't breathe without one, so I said get one. Spent 10 minutes looking at his results. Everybody says I paid him too much for it" (5/5). W. POST's Kurtz looks at media frustration with Perot, quoting CNN's Larry King: "I was at a party with [ABC's] Sam Donaldson. Sam says, 'Once I get Perot, I'll destroy him.' I said, 'Sam, if you destroy him, he'll go up 20 points.'" Donaldson played down the comment, but conceded: "It's kind of hard to lay a glove on him. It's like Ronald Reagan in 1981" (5/5). CBS' Charles Osgood cites an AP story surveying consultant advice to Perot. Ann Lewis (D) suggests Perot get a woman in his inner circle; David Garth suggests he buy good TV time now to get ahead of Bush and Clinton, and David Keene (R) says he shouldn't rush his announcement of candidacy: "There are tigers in the Bushes just waiting for Perot" (CBS radio, 5/5).

STATELINES: CA -- Perot backers opened their office in S.F. 5/4. S.F. CHRONICLE reports the TX-based Petition cmte advanced the funds to open the office (5/5). NJ -- Perot backers will file a petition this week to get him on the NJ ballot. Only 800 signatures are needed by 7/27, but NJ spokesperson Stephen Maynard says the cmte will file 2000 this week "to create a little excitement" (PHILA. INQUIRER, 5/5). TX -- Bush TX chair Jim Oberwetter: "We're going to ask questions day after day after day of Ross Perot until we hear his answers. ... I am going to see [in TX] that Mr. Perot gets asked as many questions as the President." TX GOP chair Fred Meyer called on Perot to release his tax returns (CNN, 5/4).

DOONESBURY: NPR radio host Mark Slackmeyer on the phone with Perot, "on our best behavior." Mark: "Sir, let's talk positions." Perot: "Let's not! People don't want positions! They want action! They want someone who can, pardon my French, kick butt!" Mark: "Yes sir, but doesn't being a successful leader have to know which butts to kick, how hard, and in what direction?" Perot: "Details! The individual butts don't matter!" Mark: "So you won't be taking names?" (5/5).

*9 BROWN: TAKES MESSAGE ON URBAN WOES TO WHITE HOUSE

He called on Bush and Congress "to revitalize the nation's cities wit at least $30 billion 'to create jobs, stop the layoffs and stimulate economic recovery." Meeting reporters in Lafayette Park in front of the White House, Brown "declared that 'unless we wake up to these needs, what happened in Los Angeles will happen again and again in America" (Jackson, L.A. TIMES, 5/5).

*10 BUCHANAN: ANOTHER L.A. VISITOR

He also was in L.A. yesterday, where he toured Koreatown. Buchanan "said the welfare system had created 'a climate in which this kind of irresponsibility is bred': "I think what we saw in the smoking ruins of Los Angeles this last week is the abject and total failure of Great Society liberalism" (S.F. CHRONICLE, 5/5). W.S. JOURNAL's John Harwood examines Buchanan's statements on the riots in the context of his positioning for '96 (5/5).

*12 URBAN POLICY: NETWORK NEWS SHOWS TURN TO THE CITIES

ABC: ABC's Rebecca Chase reported on economic disparity in cities: "The relative prosperity of the 1980s did not reach the inner cities. As higher paying jobs continued to move to the suburbs, so did the middle class. The poor and unemployed, mostly minorities, were left behind. Nearly one third of all black families now live below the poverty line." (5/4). ABC's George Strait outlined racial inequities involving health care: "Even when there are vaccines to prevent an illness, African Americans are four times more likely to get that disease than Whites. Inner city black children are only half as likely to be immunized against measles, mumps and polio than America's white children" (5/4). ABC's Bill Blakemore outlined the plight of urban schools: "Federal funding for the job training act has in these schools has dropped since 1981 from [$190M to $30M]. The total federal support for public schools has dropped by more than a third in the past 12 years to about 6 percent ... Over the same 12 years, poor urban schools have watched overall spending per pupil in America increase by a third; most of that in suburban and other middle class schools" (5/4).

CBS: Boston Mayor Raymond Flynn on blaming '60s policy for the riots: "The key person, the key partner, on an urban agenda, immediately, short term-long term, has to be the President of the United States." CBS' Susan Spencer: "Bush, until now, has given short shrift to urban problems. He does not now see the answer in more federal spending, even though aid to cities since 1980 has been cut from [$49B] a year to less than half that" (5/4).

NBC: NBC's Lisa Myers raised the question of the effect of the aftermath of the riots on affirmative action. Sen. Bill Bradley (D-NJ): "We have to generate jobs in urban America, we have to confront and reduce violence and crime and we have to strengthen America's families. And you have to put that into an overall context of economic growth" (5/4).

CNN: "Crossfire" hosted HUD Sec. Jack Kemp and U.S. Conference of Mayors pres./Boston Mayor Ray Flynn (5/4). Gov. Douglas Wilder (D-VA) appeared on "Larry King Live": "We're going to have to come to the realization that our nation is not being run properly. It's not well managed" (CNN, 5/4).

PBS: "MacNeil/Lehrer" hosted several U.S. mayors. S.F. Mayor Frank Jordan: "[Bush] said absolutely nothing about the cities themselves ... he has to listen to the mayors." Omaha Mayor P.J. Morgan: "The federal government, with their own budget problems aren't going to be able to solve this problems for us." Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson: "There is no comprehensive national urban policy in America. There's no road map that will tell us how to go from point A to point B." Madison Mayor Paul Sogin: "White House and Congress can point fingers at one another, but the bottom line is they have been ineffective, and they haven't determined the will for us to move forward" ("MacNeil/Lehrer," PBS, 5/4).

*14 NEVADA: JUST THE FAX NOT GOOD ENOUGH FOR THE FEC

Rancher Demar Dahl (R) has been notified by the FEC that his campaign finance report is unacceptable because it was sent by fax and therefore did not include an original signature. Dahl coordinator Amy Alley said post office officials told her the report had been delivered although officials at the FEC said they don't have it. The unofficial faxed report showed Dahl raised $6,776 through 3/31 and had $32,491 on hand. GOP primary rival/Las Vegas atty Bob Gore raised $20,981 during the period and had $8,842 on hand. Sen. Harry Reid (D) raised more than $170,000 in the period and had $1.6 million on hand (Batt, LAS VEGAS REVIEW-JOURNAL, 5/3).

*15 NORTH CAROLINA: RUNOFF PROBABLE IN TODAY'S PRIMARY

CHARLOTTE OBSERVER's Jim Morrill writes, "Anger. Apathy. Confusion. Those are the ingredients figuring" into today's primary with some officials predicting a 25% turnout (5/4). Ex-Commerce Sec. Lauch Faircloth (R) has enjoyed "front-runner" status, presenting himself as having the "best shot" to take on Sen. Terry Sanford (D). Faircloth said his background as a former Dem "can attract the conservative Democrats that Republicans need to win. ... But will longtime Republicans vote for someone who only recently joined their ranks?" Ex-Charlotte Mayor Sue Myrick (R) has been "nipping" at Faircloth's heels all along. Lacking Faircloth's financial resources, she has worked "feverishly to put together a strong network of supporters." Watching "quietly from the sidelines" has been ex-Rep. Gene Johnston (R), as Faircloth and Myrick "have gone after each other like children in a schoolyard fight." He has tried to appeal to mainstream GOPers and has a "strong following among many of the party's mainstays, which could prove to be critical if voter turnout is as low as expected." Overall, "many [GOP] activists expect the race to end up in a runoff. ... But ask them which two candidates will be in a runoff, and they balk" (Krueger, Raleigh NEWS & OBSERVER, 5/3). To avoid a runoff, the primary victor must win with 40% or more.

*16 OKLAHOMA: ROBERTS SAYS NO THANKS TO NICKLES BID

Saying "it is not in the best interests of my family," Sen. Maj. Leader Darryl Roberts (D) said he would not oppose ex-House Speaker Steve Lewis (D) for the chance to challenge Sen. Don Nickles (R). Roberts: "After many months of serious consideration, I have decided it is not in the best interests of my family to be a candidate at this time" (Roberts release, 4/30). The announcement was expected as Roberts had not begun raising money nor had he filed with the FEC. Lewis ran unsuccessfully for gov. in the '90 Dem primary.

*17 RETIREMENTS: DAVIS AND MCHUGH MAKE 65 LEAVING HOUSE

MI 11: Rep. Bob Davis (R) announced his retirement yesterday, becoming the 6th of MI's 18-member delegation to do so (reapportionment leaves MI with 16 seats). Davis conceded the "political fallout" from the 878 bad checks, totalling more than $344,000 -- 3rd worst "abuser" -- "led to his decision to bow out." He had hesitated leaving for several weeks, "then opted to quit after an agonizing apology tour" through his massive northern MI CD (Hornback/Cain, DETROIT NEWS, 5/5). Davis said a recent polling showed he could win the primary by a "comfortable margin." But a victory in the fall "would inevitably involve an extremely large fund-raising effort, constant campaigning and a great deal of negativism." Davis: "Ultimately I decided that I was not interested in that kind of campaign" (Davis release, 5/4). Davis' retirement gives MI the most retirements nationwide (NEWS, 5/5). Filing deadline 5/12. Primary 8/4.

NY 28: "In a protest against the public's anger toward Congress," Rep. Matt McHugh (D) who headed the House investigation into the checking scandal, said he was tired of being reviled" for serving in Congress and would not seek re-election. McHugh: "I will admit to some pain and frustration when I find myself frequently put in the position of defending my character simply for being a member of Congress." McHugh had been "criticized for his handling" of the probe by some who "said he failed to provide them sufficient time to appeal their cases to prevent leaks." He had also discovered "near the end of the six-month investigation" that he himself had one overdraft. But McHugh "insisted the investigation did not play a part," saying he had considered stepping down "for some time" (Gruson, N.Y. TIMES, 5/5). McHugh is the 36th Dem to retire. Davis is the 18th GOPer (Rogers, W.S. JOURNAL, 5/5). Besides the 54 Members who are retiring or seeking higher office, 5 Members will lose in remap races against fellow members; 6 Members have already lost primaries.

*18 HOUSE BANK: JUDGE REJECTS EFFORT TO BLOCK RECORDS SUBPOENA

A federal judge upheld a subpoena for the House bank records yesterday, "rejecting the request" of 5 Dem Members "who sought to have it blocked." Reps. Henry B. Gonzales (D-TX), Sidney Yates (D-IL), Ted Weiss (D-NY), Jolene Unsoeld (D-WA) and Craig Washington (D-TX) had asserted the probe of the bank "violated the lawmakers' rights of privacy, was motivated by politics and would impinge on the ability of the House to investigate and work with the executive branch." The records were delivered to the FBI immediately after the ruling. The DoJ "intends to investigate the House bank for possible criminal violations, including intentional overdrafts." It also plans to "clear the names of those lawmakers who did nothing wrong" (Labaton, N.Y. TIMES, 5/5). Yates atty Clifford Sloan "quickly notified the U.S. Court of Appeals that he would challenge" the decision (Balto. SUN, 5/5).

*19 NORTH CAROLINA: PRIMARY TODAY

NC 01: State Rep. Thomas Hardaway (D) is one of four black candidates in a 7-way primary in this new majority black CD. Hardaway is running a radio ad against retiring Rep. Walter Jones' (D-01) son Walter Jr. and Jones aide Willie Riddick.

Jones Jr., a state Rep., is the only serious white candidate. The announcer speaks with a British accent: "If we were in England, Congressman Walter Jones could merely anoint his son, Walter Jr, or his aide, Sir William Riddick, to replace him in Congress. Here in America, it doesn't work that way. We don't let the congressman choose his replacement. We the people elect the best qualified person." Warren Co. Commis. Eva Clayton: "We are all aiming at Jones. We are not ignoring the very strong presence that his father's name has. We have to make a distinction that his father is not running." Jones Jr.: "Whatever the other people do is fine with me. I run positive campaigns because I don't need to worry about anybody else" (Raleigh NEWS & OBSERVER, 5/4). Jones is running a campaign "carefully designed to avoid alienating anyone, black or white" and is "the candidate likely to benefit" from the recently-added rule "to boost black chances" which allows a candidate with 40% of the vote to win without a runoff (Edsall, W. POST, 5/5). Other Dems: Rev. Staccato Powell, Williamston Mayor Thomas Brandon and Don Smith.

NC 12: Raleigh NEWS & OBSERVER's Ruffin profiles state Rep. Mickey Michaux (D) and ex-state Sen. Mel Watt (D). UNC's Thad Beyle: "Michaux was part of a black political machine in Durham and has been at the forefront of a lot of black challenges to white power" while Watt is "the new person on the block. A lot of the time the new person on the block can excite people." Watt has raised more money than Michaux and has gotten more endorsements from papers and political groups than Michaux (5/3). Greensboro Councilmember Earl Jones (D) has started calling himself "Congressman Jones": "I'm going to win the race. I just have to go through the preliminaries" (Greensboro NEWS & RECORD, 5/4). The fourth black Dem is atty Larry Little.

*20 HOUSE RACE BRIEFINGS

AR 01: Rep. Bill Alexander (D) said if his ex-aide, Blanche Lambert (D), "has any evidence of any wrongdoing on his part, the public should demand she either present that evidence or admit her charges are politically motivated." Lambert, who has accused Alexander using campaign money for personal use, said she filed complaints last week with the FEC and the House Ethics Cmte. A Lambert spokesperson said the complaints "were based on news reports and campaign filings" by the Alexander Campaign Cmte. Alexander "said if the charges were made without evidence, 'then it is the cheapest of political tricks. ... to call a person's honesty and integrity into question without any foundation whatsoever.'" Lambert insisted the complaints "were not a political ploy since any resolution would take place after the November elections." The complaint will take about 4 to 8 months to investigate (Young/Gotlier, ARKANSAS DEMOCRAT-GAZETTE, 5/1). The AR primary is 5/26.

AR 03: Numerous candidates are vying for retiring Rep. John Paul Hammerschmidt's (R) CD. Dems: Car dealer Don Nelms, who is the most organized; Judge John Van Winkle, who is backed by labor; atty Dan Ivy; and Dr. William Harrison. GOPers: State Reps. Tim Hutchinson and Dick Barclay, who are vying for the lead, and investment banker Dryden Pence.

AR 04: Rep. Beryl Anthony (D) faces a tough primary challenge from Sec/State Bill McEwen (D) and CPA Pat Pappas (D) in the primary. Goper: Atty Jay Dickey (R).

CA 25: The two GOP "front-runners" in the new 25th, Assemblyman Philip Wyman and ex-Santa Clara Mayor "Buck" McKeon, "have taken to splitting hairs" over who has the least amount of public service. "Nonetheless, both are known primarily for their political careers." Wyman has served 14 years in the Assembly; McKeon has served almost as long on local school boards and in City Hall. The third "major" GOPer is ex-Rep./ex-John Birch official John Rousselot, trying for a "political comeback." GOPers outnumber Dems in the CD, 131,000-94,000 and "conventional political wisdom" says with that edge, the GOP nominee will take the seat over atty James Gilmartin (D) who is running unopposed for the Dem nod. But, he has already put in $100,000 of his own money into the campaign and "may emerge as a serious challenger." Other GOPers: ex-L.A. Co. Assessor John Lynch, teacher Larry Logsdon and CA highway estimator Tom McVarish (L.A. TIMES, 5/3).

CA 38: GOP women with "economic power" gathered recently to show "steel-willed support" for ex-Superior Ct. judge Judith Ryan (R), "who had defied the men" in charge Orange County GOP to challenge "the president's man" -- Rep. Bob Dornan (R). Orange GOP chair Tom Fuentes "warned" Ryan her candidacy would "damage the national party." According to press accounts, Dornan also barged into a reception of GOP women in DC "and threatened intra-party war if they endorsed Ryan." His "threats worked"; the new pro-choice GOP women's group, WISH List, "changed their rules to prohibit pre-primary endorsements." But Ryan has the support of a "growing number" of nat'l women's groups, the UAW and AFL-CIO COPE (S.F. EXAMINER, 5/4).

IA 03: Rep. Jim Ross Lightfoot (R-05) blasted likely rival, Sec/State Elaine Baxter (D) calling her "an ego-driven, self-promoting, career politician who's never actually tasted the real world. Perhaps her cavalier, elitist attitude comes from being very rich and privileged." Lightfoot said his remarks were a "response to Baxter's name calling": "She threw the glove down and I'm going to pick it up." Baxter delivered a speech earlier in the day to Dem delegates and said, "Lightfoot is not part of the cure. He's part of the problem" (Burlington HAWK EYE, 3/3). Lightfoot also called the DES MOINES REGISTER "femi-Nazi"; said JFK "turned the White House into a place for young starlets to perfect their bedroom techniques"; and called Clinton, "Slick Willie Horton, make that Slick Willie Clinton who allegedly has seen more sex than Masters and Johnson." Lightfoot also announced he hired Reagan consultant Ed Rollins (Howard, DES MOINES REGISTER, 5/3). REGISTER's David Yepsen: "Lightfoot's campaign is becoming a joke. ... [He] is acting like a loser." Yepsen calls Baxter a "well-regarded and well-financed campaigner who is looking for a job with some substance to it." Some GOPers say Lightfoot is "packing his parachute. The official line says he's in the race to win, but the Democrats are getting a big chuckle out of it all" (5/4).

IN 09: Ardent pro-lifer Michael "For Life For Congress" Bailey's (R) use of "graphic anti-abortion" material in his TV ads "have provided strong name recognition," but whether the recognition will "help or hinder" his bid against ex-IN Auditor Charles Roos (R) "remains unclear." Rep. Lee Hamilton (D-09) is unopposed and "isn't expected to be affected by Bailey's ads." Also, the ads' "controversy" may take "some of the heat" off IN incumbents who are now in the spotlight as bouncers (AP, 5/2).

MA 11: In the "still-unsettled" 11th CD, state Sen. Paul Harold (D) "who has operated like a diplomatic maverick for 14 years" in the Leg., became the first to announce his bid for the seat of retiring Rep. Brian Donnelly (D). He has already raised about $35,000 and plans to spend $300,000 (BOSTON GLOBE, 5/4). Ex-state employee Eleanor LeCain (D) will also run, if the seat stays (BOSTON HERALD, 5/3). Dems considering: Sec/State Michael Connolly, Norfolk DA Wm. Delahunt, Boston City Councilor Tom Menino, Boston Councilor Charles Yancey, ex-Brockton City Councilor Jack Shields, ex-state Rep. Robert Creedon and atty Deval Patrick. GOPers: Whitman selectman Robert Stone, Whitman Finance Cmte. member/MA GOP cmte. member Penny Reid and Patrick Wals, an ex-aide to Ambassador Margaret Heckler (B. GLOBE, 5/4).

MD 02: Rep. Helen Delich Bentley (R) "privately irritated" some state GOPers because she made numerous fund-raising phone calls on behalf of Rep. Beverly Byron (D-06) who was later defeated. But Bentley said she's not worried: "Beverly voted more Republican than some Republicans I know" (Balto. SUN, 5/3).

NJ 06: NARAL endorsed Rep. Frank Pallone (D-03) over Assemblyman Bob Smith (D) despite Pallone's previous self-described "anti-choice" position. Pallone switched in '89: "I felt that the time had come for me, even though I was not personally in favor of abortion" (New Brunswick HOME NEWS, 5/2). NARAL exec. dir. Kate Michelman: "It's very important for NARAL to stand behind someone who has taken such a bold and impassioned step. ... He is pro-choice and has been there for us 100%" (ASBURY PARK PRESS, 5/2). Smith is also pro-choice. Other Dems: Jeffrey Gorman (D) and Barbara Jensen (D). Primary 6/2.

OH 10: Rep. Louis Stokes (D-21) "urged voters" to re-elect Rep. Mary Rose Oakar (D-20). During a 5/1 Oakar rally, Stokes noted the retirement of four OH Reps. and insisted OH couldn't "afford to lose" her seniority. Oakar, in "an apparent reference" to Cuyahoga Co. Commis. Tim Hagan (D), who was born in Youngstown: "Unlike some of my opponents, I'm a lifelong resident of the 10th district" (Cleveland PLAIN DEALER, 5/2). Primary 6/2.

PA 10: "Exactly one week after locking up" the GOP nod (and Dem nomination as a write-in), Rep. Joseph McDade (R) said he expects to be indicted on racketeering and other charges. In a 5-page statement McDade "asserted that he had done no wrong and vowed not to give up his seat" (Roche/Cusick, PHILA. INQUIRER, 5/5). The inquiry by the Phila. U.S. Atty's office and the FBI focuses on McDade's "efforts to steer Navy business to a now defunct minority-owned business, United Chem-Con Corp." Several of the company's top officials pleaded guilty to participating in a conspiracy to defraud the Defense Dept. of more than $12M. Ex-McDade aide Raymond Wittig pleaded guilty 11/90 to "providing illegal gratuities to Mr. McDade and a second government official." But McDade maintains his efforts were "intended to provide jobs" for his district. McDade accepted more than $45,000 in campaign gifts and speaking fees from officials of United Chem-Con and others affiliated with the company. During the investigation, McDade returned nearly $20,000 of campaign donations and reimbursed the company for the use of its beach house. If McDade is prosecuted, it will be the first time the DoJ has used the anti-racketeering law against a sitting member of Congress (Pound/Pasztor, W.S. JOURNAL, 5/5).

VA 06: In the race to succeed retiring Rep. Jim Olin (D), John Fishwick got a surprise from Olin as he pledged to support him at the 5/9 district convention. Fishwick "hailed" the endorsement, "but the tone of Olin's commitment left some [Dems] wondering whether it would have any effect at all. Olin called no news conferences, issued no formal statement." Olin's decision puts the first-ballot roll call at 125 delegates for "front-runner" Steve Musselwhite, 114 for Fishwick and 64 for John Edwards. 153 votes are needed for the Dem nod, "so the key will be whether Olin's endorsement leads delegates to vote for Fishwick on a second-ballot -- when all delegates are freed." The Musselwhite and Edwards camps were "perplexed" because Olin has "led them to believe" he wouldn't be getting involved (Yancey, Roanoke TIMES-WORLD, 5/1).

VA 11: No. VA Community College prof. Perry Mitchell jumped into the race for the new 11th CD as an Independent. He calls himself a "Perot-type" candidate with a pro-business platform (WASH. TIMES, 5/3). He said he had originally thought about running as a Dem, but decided the nomination was "locked up" by Del. Leslie Byrne (D) (WASH. POST, 5/3).

*21 INDIANA: GOP RACE DOWN TO WIRE; PRIMARY TODAY

A Political/Media Research poll, conducted 4/27-29, surveyed 827 likely voters; margin of error +/- 3.5%. GOP subsample: 381 LVs; +/- 5.2% (WISH-TV, 5/1). Tested: Gov. Evan Bayh (D), AG Linley Pearson (R), Education Supt. Dean Evans (R), businessman John Johnson (R). Primary today.

INDIANAPOLIS STAR's Mary Beth Schneider writes, "don't expect citizen anger over government to translate into a stampede to the ballot box. ... All predictions point to a low voter turnout." Statewide predictions run 25-30%. "It's not that there aren't choices to be made" -- the gov. race is "one of the most hotly contested races ever." While most observers predict either Pearson or Evans, some say "not to count Johnson out." IN GOP chair Rex Early said, depending on turnout, Johnson "may have a shot ... Johnson still has the air of being the non-political candidate." A key factor could be the candidates' ads. Pearson opened with a negative "slam" against Evans, Johnson and Bayh; Evans and Johnson responded in kind. Lake Co. GOP chair Roger Chiabi said the ads have "created some distaste" among GOPers. IN Dem exec. dir. Ann Delaney said Pearson will be helped by low turnout, as more party regulars vote. Pearson has the backing of the Marion Co. slating convention. Delaney also said it "could become the kind of close contest people point to when they talk about the value of voting" (5/4). "The only thing that seems relatively certain is that the winner will likely emerge with less than a majority of the votes, a paucity of campaign cash, and a pretty lousy shot at winning in the Fall" (IN LEGISLATIVE INSIGHT, 5/4 issue). INDIANAPOLIS NEWS header: "Bayh can relax -- for now." Press sec. Fred Nation said Bayh at times "has found it difficult to watch from the sidelines": "The governor hasn't enjoyed the distortion of his record" (4/30).

*22 NORTH CAROLINA: HUNT-GARDNER RACE LOOMS; PRIMARY TODAY

A Mason-Dixon PMR poll, conducted 4/26-28, surveyed 832

likely voters; margin of error +/- 3.5%. Subsamples: 469 Dem LVs, +/- 5%; 237 GOP LVs, +/- 6% (Greensboro NEWS & RECORD, 5/2). Candidates: Ex-Gov. Jim Hunt (D), AG Lacy Thornburg (D), atty Marcus Williams (D), LG Jim Gardner (R), Ruby Hooper (R). Ex-Dem House Speaker Joe Mavretic, has said he will run as an Ind.

Raleigh NEWS & OBSERVER's Rob Christensen calls the '92 gov. race a "referendum" on ex-Gov. Jim Hunt (D). Unless AG Lacy Thornburgh (D) "can work some Merlin-like political magic, Hunt seems poised to capture" the Dem nomination. A "buoyant" Hunt has predicted a "large victory" and "has already devised plans to bring Thornburg supporters into his camp." Last year some Dems thought Thornburgh "would provide a still test for Hunt" but the primary became "lopsided" and now resembles a "competition between General Motors and Big Al's Neighborhood Car Lot." For the GOPers LG Jim Gardner is also "mapping out his post-primary strategy." He has "ignored" ex-dep. state sec. of Human Resources Ruby Cooper and businessman Gary Dunn and instead has spent his time raising money -- he is expected to have a $1 million war chest for the general election. Gardner said the general election is "going to start" 5/6: "It's a campaign we are going to take to [Hunt] right from the start. ... We are not going to let some retread phony" become governor (5/4).

CHARLOTTE OBSERVER endorses Hunt: "Hunt's candidacy gives [NC] an opportunity, at a difficult and challenging moment, to tap the experience and wisdom of a senior statesman who ... is still young enough to bring renewed vigor and vision to the task." His "most serious" challenger, Thornburg, "has earned wide respect for his integrity and ability," but "cannot match" Hunt. Thornburg "would be a clear choice, however, over the all-but-certain" GOP nominee, Gardner. Gardner is a "slick, shallow wind-up toy of a candidate who predictably recites the latest right-wing buzzwords and demonstrates little understanding of the real issues" (5/3). Also running: Atty Marcus Williams (D), Security consultant Jim Hatcher (D) and Wendell Briggs (D).

===== HOTSPOTS =====

*23 VIRGINIA: FIRST GOPer ANNOUNCES FOR '93 GOV. RACE

Northern VA businessman Earle Williams (R), a "self-described political rookie," 5/1 announced his candidacy for next year's governor race. Williams, ex-pres. of defense firm BDM International, "promised to bring his business acumen and can-do record to the enterprise of state government." He said his first priority would be "economic development and job creation. ... I have spent all of my life creating jobs in the private sector." Williams, "wealthy and well-connected ... is viewed by some in the [GOP] as having the right stuff to end the [VA] party's losing streak. ... Williams also seems to be charting a moderate course." Williams, Bush-Quayle VA finance chair, said he would not refuse to raise taxes: "I'm not going to say 'Read my lips'" (RICHMOND TIMES-DISPATCH, 5/2). Other GOPers considering: Rep. George Allen (R-07), who is losing his CD in redistricting; state

Del. Clinton Miller; state Sen. Mark Earley. AG Mary Sue Terry (D) is expected to be the Dem nominee; Gov. Doug Wilder (D) cannot succeed himself. W. POST's Harris writes Williams "is hoping to avoid having the abortion issue monopolize the debate": "The pro-choice people consider me pro-life with exceptions, and the pro-life people consider me pro-choice with restrictions" (5/2).

VOTE TODAY: There are over 200 local elections in VA today, including a special election for the General Assembly seat of Richmond Del. Roland Ealey, who died 3/92. Lawrence D. Wilder, Jr., son of Gov. Doug Wilder (D), narrowly won the Dem nomination with help from his father and local Dem leaders. National Republicans, including the White House, Marilyn Quayle, and GOP fund-raising fixture Ollie North, are backing community activist Lynda Owens, who became a Republican after being recruited to run against Wilder. Owens and Wilder are both black (RICHMOND TIMES-DISPATCH, 5/3).

COVERAGE: N.Y. POST front page screams "DEAD HEAT." POST's Orin writes, "A stunning new poll shows the Los Angeles riots have rocked President Bush's support among voters nationwide and thrown him into a three-way dead heat" (5/5). USA TODAY: "Support for President Bush dropped sharply following the Los Angeles riots ..." (5/5). L. A. TIMES' Jack Nelson: "The poll, which found that the public followed the riots and the Rodney G. King case verdict even more closely than they did the Persian Gulf War, generally was bad news for Bush" (5/5). BOSTON GLOBE's Walter Robinson reports the poll "also measured substantial public doubt about Bush's ability to deal with the problems of race and poverty" (5/5).

*25 THIS MORNING: ABC's "GMA" hosted Gorbachev, HUD Sec Jack Kemp (R), CA state Sen. Diane Watson on the L.A. riots, Goodyear CEO Stanley Gault and actress Drew Barrymore. NBC's "Today" hosted Rep. Ron Dellums (D-CA), Sen. Phil Gramm (R-TX), ex-Sec/HEW Joseph Califano, Sec/Labor Lynn Martin, Reagan's daughter Patti Davis, VA death row inmate Roger Keith Coleman, minister/atty Jim McCloskey, original prosecutor Thomas Scott, author Gail Sheehy and talkshow host Geraldo Rivera. "CBS This Morning" hosted HUD Sec. Jack Kemp, Rep. Maxine Waters (D-CA), actress Donna Mills, author Michael Lewis and actor Kevin Costner, two L.A. teachers and two students. "FOX Morning News" hosted MD Senate candidate Alan Keyes (R).

A.M. QUOTABLES: Joseph Califano on WH logic to deal with inner city problems: "The problem is the inability to look at ourselves." Lynn Martin on solutions: "We have to look at what will work in 1992, not 1939" ("Today," NBC, 5/5).

LAST NIGHT: All nets and PBS' "MacNeil/Lehrer" led with L.A. recovery. "M/L" focused on urban policy with HUD Sec. Jack Kemp and five mayors. Doug Wilder (D), columnist Walter Williams and Black Panther Michael McGee. ABC's "Nightline" focused on the L.A. riots. Ted Koppel met with gang members in South Central L.A. (5/4).

A.M. TV: Rep. Maxine Waters (D-CA) on barriers to overcome: "It will be opposition by the president and the leadership because they don't believe there should be investment in these urban areas and they're going to resist it. ... They have no policies of their own. They have no willingness to invest in these areas. He still does not have a domestic agenda. ... I lay the blame squarely at the feet of Bush and Reagan" ("CBS This Morning," 5/5). Sen. Phil Gramm (R-TX): "We have to have security ... by starting vigorously, prosecuting those people who violated the law during the riots. ... I don't believe having more social programs is the answer. ... Only private investment will work in the inner cities" ("Today," NBC, 5/5).

LAUGHS: Dennis Miller on riots: "A small earthquake hit Los Angeles today. I guess that means the plague of the locusts is next." On Bush admin. On Clinton's trip to L.A. to examine damage firsthand: "From the plane Clinton said, 'It's much worse than I thought, I've never seen such devastation.' The pilot said, 'Mr. Clinton, we're still over Arkansas'" ("Show," 5/4).
