Dear Claude,

Thank you so much for your letter of 23 March which was received in Wednesday's mail. It was good to hear from you and to learn that Noel Derbyshire has just been with you. I like Noel a great deal and I am sure you were extremely helpful as you helped him focus on his return to the parish ministry.

What wonderful news you shared with me. Please extend my thanks to your Vestry for earmarking a part of your Easter offering for St. George's College Jerusalem. Your gift will be designed for scholarships for the Palestinian young people coming on the "Youth Course" from Lebanon, Jordan, the West Bank and Israel. This course has become very popular and each year more and more young people are wanting to take advantage of this opportunity.

Three days ago our "Bible and Worship" course began. In contrast to last year when we had only four people on the course, this year we have 37. Needless to say we are thrilled that we have recovered so quickly from the Gulf War last year. When we go to the Church of the Resurrection on Holy Saturday know that I will be lifting you up in my prayers for your faithfulness.

Again my thanks for your letter. I think that the Bush campaign should sign me up. There is not a group to whom I speak that I do not urge the re-election of the President. The Secretary of State has performed a contemporary miracle and he must have another four years to bring forth a peace settlement. From our conversations with the Palestinian delegation we know they are committed to the peace process for the long haul. Please extend my love to Barbara. I remember well the marvelous time I had with you last year. Know that this comes with my warmest regards and best wishes. I remain,

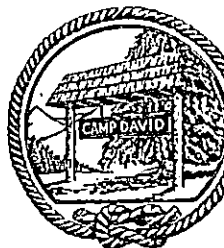

Faithfully yours,

John L. Peterson

Dear George:

I'm looking forward to seeing you at the President's Dinner next Tuesday.

As predicted in my letter to you at Kennebunkport last summer, the U.S. economy is recovering with ever-increasing vigor. Your reply of August 31, 1991 expressed the hope that my Macro-Economic Index would be correct . . . and it has been once again! The Index also foreshadowed the beginning of the recession in 1990 - a forecast that I related to Michael Boskin during a meeting in his office in September of 1989. Significantly, the Macro-Economic Index never issued any false recession forecasts during the 1980's.

My track record and optimistic outlook for 1992 were cited yesterday in a feature article highlighting "The Case for Optimism" on the U.S. economy (copy enclosed). Despite the improving outlook for the economy, however, this is no time for complacency. The brief highlights of my record cited below should confirm that a meeting with you and Clayton Yeutter to discuss important political/economic subjects (including Ross Perot) would be a worthwhile investment of your valuable time:

- In 1980, as you may recall, we first met at a small dinner at "21" in June. Not long thereafter, I sent you my testimony before the Senate Finance Committee which forecast the secular peak in inflation and interest rates at a time when the prime rate was over 20% - testimony which you complimented by letter. Importantly, had the policy recommendations in that testimony been implemented, long term economic growth would have been stronger in the 1980's, and the deficit would be smaller today!

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: ROGER B. PORTER RBP

SUBJECT: Letter to Nathaniel Pryor Reed

Nat Reed has written you concerning a wide range of environmental issues. He is a big fan of Bill Reilly, Mike Hayden, and John Turner. He is able to restrain his enthusiasm for some other officials in environmentally sensitive positions in the Administration.

The draft response avoids commenting on personnel or on every specific issue he raises. Instead it seeks to reinforce that you are proud of your environmental record and that the overriding principle guiding your decisions on environmental issues is balancing successfully competing objectives.

His one specific policy suggestion is to use Forest Service timber and road funds to employ loggers and small timber businesses in rebuilding and improving recreational facilities on Federal lands. Your response mentions that we will look into it.

To some extent, we are already implementing his suggestion. The Forest Service already contracts out to small businesses roughly 70-75 percent of their budget for road construction and maintenance. Many of these roads are for access to recreational sites and for fire protection.

In addition, with regard to roads constructed for access to timber, the timber purchasers typically are responsible for building and maintaining these roads, the cost of which are credited against their contract purchase price for the timber.

Recommendation: That you sign the attached draft letter to Nathaniel Pryor Reed.

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

Dear Nat:

Thank you so much for your thoughtful letter about a wide range of environmental issues. I share your view that we have received little credit for many of our environmental initiatives and accomplishments.

I learned a long time ago that one should seek to do good rather than seek to get credit for one's actions. But it would be nice if both the press and environmental groups were a little more balanced in their assessment of my Administration's environmental record.

In this respect, you may enjoy reading a copy of "Securing Our Legacy," prepared by EPA, reporting on the last three years. Our environmental record is impressive, and one of which I am proud.

At the heart of most environmental issues is the search for an appropriate balance between competing objectives which cannot all be maximized simultaneously. This is the case whether the issue is clean air, wetlands, or the spotted owl.

There has in fact been a good deal more constructive coordination within the Administration on the spotted owl than is generally recognized or reported in the press. Your suggestion that Forest Service timber and road funds be used to employ former loggers and small timber businesses in rural communities to rebuild and improve recreational facilities on Federal lands is intriguing, and we will look into it.

I share your view that our recreation infrastructure, like our transportation infrastructure, needs improving, and I am also concerned about the loggers and their families who derive their livelihood from public lands.

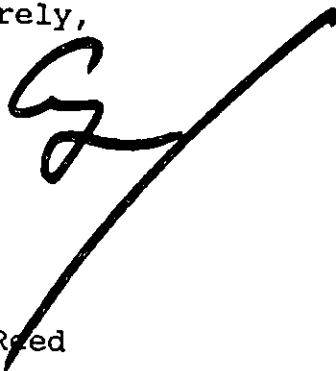

One of the best ways to assist these communities is to do everything we can in the first instance to minimize job losses. We have been working diligently on an owl protection plan that more appropriately balances the need to protect jobs, families, and communities with our obligation to preserve the owl.

Finally, I like your vision of the link between trade and the environment. Trade has been one of the engines pulling the global economy down the path of prosperity for the past forty years. Now we are poised to take another major step forward through the Uruguay Round, the North American Free Trade Agreement, and the Enterprise for the Americas Initiative.

The economic growth that will follow can help provide additional resources for many worthwhile things, including protecting and enhancing the environment. Moreover, as you point out, tremendous opportunities await our businesses in exporting environmental technology and equipment around the world.

Thanks again for writing. Best wishes.

Honorable George Bush
President, The United States
The White House
Washington, D. C. 20500

Dear Mr. President:

I wrote to you on December 19, 1986, on the eve of the last election campaign to encourage you to embrace environmental values as a principal component of your election drive. You did so and achieved considerable success and acclaim as a result.

During the past three years of your administration, you have been accused of faltering on your early commitments. As you become immersed in the coming election cycle, you should face the two basic and related problems that have hobbled your administration's handling of environmental issues effectively.

First, as I am sure you recognize, you have not received credit for many of your environmental accomplishments.

Passage of the Clean Air Act was a major milestone that is universally acknowledged. You have also made many, many major environmental strides in FY 1991 and FY 1992 and your recently proposed FY 1993 budgets in large part due to the unstinting diligence of Bob Grady, but these are rarely credited to your balance sheet.

Your personal support of numerous individual environmental initiatives, ranging from the North American Wetlands Conservation Act and restoration of the Everglades to the 1990 Farm Bill, has been handicapped by the second basic problem. This is your administration's flawed positioning of leadership for environmental issues.

To be blunt, your stage management is backwards. You selected Bill Reilly, Administrator of EPA, to be your maestro for the orchestration of the administration's environmental policies. The positioning of Reilly as ringmaster is fundamentally flawed because it places your chief environmental spokesman in conflict with corporate America.

I wholly applaud the selection of Reilly; he is one of the most astute, committed and articulate environmental leaders in the country and he is a superb choice for Administrator of EPA. Bill is my friend and I am one of his greatest admirers.

You have erred and overstretched Reilly's superb talents by making him the band leader and chief spokesman for the administration's entire environmental portfolio. The Administrator of EPA is primarily a regulator and EPA, as an agency, is daily at odds with much of corporate America. In times of a lagging economy, this situation which, in the best of times exudes friction, becomes exacerbated to extremes. Business leaders chafe against environmental regulation and unfurl arguments pitting jobs against the environment. Senator Seymour's February hosting of a meeting between southern California business leaders with Administrator Reilly is an example of this scenario, which will undoubtedly be replayed again and again in the coming months.

Although Reilly can mount the bully pulpit effectively on many environmental issues, the limitations imposed by his role as our government's chief environmental enforcer precludes his effectiveness as your principal advocate and sole environmental spokesperson. His role needs to be balanced with aggressive leadership, stewardship and advocacy by the Secretaries of Agriculture and Interior. This, in large measure, you have not received.

A more sophisticated strategy would involve using the Secretaries of Agriculture and Interior as outspoken proponents of those traditional, non-regulatory programs involving the conservation of soil, forests, parks, wildlife and outdoor recreation programs.

On many of these public land environmental fronts, particularly programs involving parks, forests and wildlife, the Secretaries of Agriculture and Interior have little interface and hence, little conflict with corporate America. As a result, utilizing these cabinet secretaries in a leadership posture, you provide positive exposure for many of your environmental initiatives that, to date, have received little credit and exposure. At the same time, these cabinet spokesmen provide cover and shelter for Reilly to fulfill his regulatory responsibilities.

The general lack of domestic leadership has abetted the degeneration of environmental controversies into a job versus the environment confrontation, pitting business against the environment in the public mind. The most intractable example of this scenario involves the spotted owl in the Pacific Northwest.

For a decade, lack of federal agency leadership and coordination has permitted the controversy over the owl to evolve into a hopeless state of legal and Congressional gridlock. The issue has been demagogued by both environmentalists and the forest products industry.

The Secretary of Interior has contributed materially to the current impasse by encouraging and supporting BLM to go its separate way, out of step with the Forest Service and Fish and Wildlife Service. Such federal dissonance invites policy chaos which is what has been entertained for the past three years. Meanwhile, little has been done to provide jobs for affected loggers or to initiate economic adjustments for the local communities.

If one was to look for solutions to provide jobs for the 20,000 loggers disenfranchised by the loss of timber sales on national forests and BLM lands, the answer lies under our very noses.

Throughout the Northwest and throughout the country, in fact, the recreation infrastructure of our national forests, BLM lands, national parks and refuges has degenerated to approximately thirty percent of historic capacity. It is a deteriorating situation analogous to the oft-cited structural decline of our bridges, highways and other elements of our transportation infrastructure.

Meanwhile, with declining leisure time nationwide and the relatively swift urban and suburbanization of our western states, easy access to public lands for local recreation opportunities is increasingly a problem and frustration for many. The Commission for Americans Outdoors highlighted the increasing need to provide local access and short-range recreation opportunities.

Here lies an opportunity to kill two birds with one stone. I urge you to consider utilizing Forest Service timber and road funds to implement a broadscale effort to start and create new businesses in rural timber communities by letting contracts for the rehabilitation of our recreation infrastructure on public lands.

The traditional approach would be to reestablish the CCC, but this does not provide the investment opportunities, the multiplier effects of our private enterprise approach. "Conservation and Recreation Contracts" would be let locally on a yearly or multiple year bid basis to rebuild hiking and horseback trails and physical accommodations ranging from johns and picnic tables to huts and shelters.

Former loggers are the natural labor pool and local forest products companies are the natural businesses to bid for these contracts. They already are located on or adjacent to public lands. The employment opportunity involves the same skill and equipment employed in timber sales and processing. In many cases, it would enable loggers to remain in their same communities, work in the same woods and with the same equipment (chain saws, etc.).

This proposal will have a significant multiplier effect to sustain the economies of logging communities affected by mill shutdowns and the cessation of federal sales, not only because the same work force will be employed en situ, but also increased recreation opportunities, instigated by these improvements will flow back to these same communities. Contracts should also specify the use of salvage timber for construction whenever possible to take advantage of the glut of salvage timber across the west.

Finally, federal agencies could designate "Rural Economic Zones" to qualify for contracts on federally supervised loans. By encouraging the formation of private business to bid on "Conservation and Recreation Contracts," you provide a means of bringing paychecks to the rural towns and communities hardest hit by the evolution of the forest products industry and impacted by decisions relating to the spotted owl.

Our national forests today supply only fourteen percent of U.S. wood products but they contain fifty percent of the prime wildlife habitat in the country and fifty percent of the remaining cold-water fisheries habitat in the U.S. The unrealized potential of our public lands for absorbing enhanced recreation opportunities is enormous.

Two indicators of their potential are: the fact that over 75 percent of the U.S. population sixteen years and older enjoy some form of wildlife-related recreation. 46.5 million Americans fished, 16 million hunted and 134.7 million participated in nonconsumptive wildlife recreation. Your administration is neither servicing or reaping the benefits from this constituency. Expenditures generated by this group totaled over $55.5 billion in 1985 (1985 National Survey, USFWS).

Second, the Forest Service, in the last five years, has signed cooperative agreements with 29 nongovernmental organizations interested in recreation and wildlife which have a total membership in excess of 11.5 million members. These challenge grant partnerships are tremendously popular and demonstrate the potential constituent support for broader utilization of public lands for recreation.

The same lack of leadership that has personified the Administration's handling of the spotted owl issue is apparent in numerous other environmental policy areas: two which come readily to mind are the bluefin tuna and the wetlands debate. In both instances, the array of policy options has degenerated to a polarized "jobs versus the environment" slugfest.

In the case of the bluefin tuna, a single sharp operator, Gerald Abrams, who enjoys a near monopoly of the catch of giant bluefins through his purse seine fleet, has orchestrated the jobs versus environment argument as part of the New Hampshire primary debate. Abrams' operation employs a mere 50 to 75 people seasonally, and he is exploiting a drastically declining fishery that sustains over 10,000 charter boats from Florida to Maine. In the case of the bluefin, a modest arithmetic calculation will determine that thousands of jobs could be saved by implementing strict conservation practices to sustain the bluefin tuna fishery for the future.

Similarly, in the wetlands debate, the number of jobs tied to the protection of America's wetlands rarely enters the equation. Two examples spring immediately to mind: commercial marine fisheries and waterfowl and the arms and sporting goods industry.

Nationwide, our marine fisheries are in dramatic decline. NMFS has recently documented declines in 78 stocks of fish. Less well known is the fact that 75 percent of all commercially harvested marine fish and shellfish are estuarine dependent. That means 75 percent of all harvested species grow up in coastal wetlands.

No single factor is more critical to the sustenance of our marine fisheries industry than the maintenance of coastal wetlands. From the shrimpers of Texas, Louisiana and South Carolina to the crab and oystermen of the Chesapeake Bay, their livelihood is in the palm of your administration's hand. Thousands of jobs are at stake across the country and these jobs are dependent on the protection of coastal wetland ecosystems.

Similarly, the sporting goods and arms industry is tied largely to waterfowl harvest. Waterfowl are at historically low levels because of wetlands loss and the numbers of hunters has declined yearly for a decade as a consequence.

As the Economist editorialized, (December 6, 1991) domestic policies, particularly those involving the environment, are "a storm to be endured." However, the proof of leadership is not to seek magical solutions or to succumb to the demagoguery of the left or right but to seek pragmatic solutions and to lead public opinion energetically.

I want to close on an optimistic note. In my 1986 letter, I stated that "a linkage exists between international trade issues and international environmental and natural resources issues." Lost in the huzzahs of the domestic environmental debate are the tremendous opportunities that await U.S. businesses through the export of environmental technology to the world at large, but particularly Eastern Europe and Latin America.

An article in the Wall Street Journal (February 10, 1992) recently highlighted the opportunities presented by the free trade agreement with Mexico and that country's desperate need of environmental technologies. Only three private labs in Mexico City are capable of determining the content of a plant's toxic effluent.

The article predicts the expansion of Mexico's environmental service industry from its current level of $100 million to $5 to $7 billion in sales in five years. We should be taking the high road on the export of American environmental technologies to the world and, needless to say, this means jobs for Americans.

Mr. President, you face two challenges: the first is to provide leadership through good government and the second is to be reelected.

There is no point in winning reelection if you don't want to govern. To govern wisely and effectively, you must be surrounded by intelligent men and women who have ideas, understand government and, above all, have energy.

You desperately need new leadership in Interior, which is in sad condition at the top. In Governor Hayden and John Turner, you have two of the best in the business, but their leadership is currently neutralized by the Secretary.

The options and alternatives are yours.

Sincerely,

CONGRESSIONAL MONITOR

Monday, May 4, 1992

Volume 28, Number 66

This Week In Congress

Congress will soon be focusing on the fiscal 1993 budget, but this week both the House and Senate will consider bills to cancel some funding for fiscal 1992 approved last year.

Under pressure from President Bush, appropriators last week put together a package of fiscal 1992 rescissions, but both the House and Senate Appropriations committees made deeper cuts than those proposed by Bush.

Other highlights of the week will include Senate Environment Committee work on a solid waste measure, and action in the House Ways and Means Committee to craft legislation to extend unemployment benefits.

In political news, North Carolina and Indiana hold presidential and congressional primaries. (See story, p. 2)

House Floor Action

Budget Cuts. Legislation (HR 4990) that would make about $5.8 billion in fiscal 1992 budget cuts is slated for House floor action on Thursday.

President Bush has requested $5.6 billion in rescissions, $2.6 billion of which House appropriators approved. Lawmakers also added $3.2 billion in cuts they considered unnecessary spending.

The bulk of the cuts, about $5 billion, would be in military programs. Appropriators voted to cancel the production of one Seawolf submarine, not two, as Bush proposed.

Legal Services. The House on Wednesday will consider a bill (HR 2039) that would reauthorize for five years the Legal Services Corporation, an agency that provides legal aid to the poor.

The agency, created in 1974, was frequently targeted for termination by President Reagan. It has been without an authorization since 1980, although it has been funded annually through appropriations. The bill does not specify funding levels. For fiscal 1992, Congress appropriated $350 million.

NASA. The House may resume work on Tuesday on legislation (HR 4364) that would set spending priorities for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) through fiscal 1995.

The House last week rejected an attempt to cut fiscal 1993 funding authority for the space station Freedom. But members have yet to consider provisions dealing with major science projects, such as satellite observation of the Earth.

Senate Floor Action

Budget Cuts. The Senate will take up its own fiscal 1992 rescission bill (S 2403), which would make $8.3 billion in cuts. The Senate version cuts much deeper into military programs than the House's measure by proposing $7.2 billion in rescissions, including a 5 percent across-the-board reduction in upper management positions at the Defense Department.

Conference Action

Defense Procurement. House and Senate conferees will meet on Thursday on legislation (S 347) that would reauthorize the Defense Production Act, a 1950 law that aims to ensure that the United States has the industrial capacity to provide the Pentagon with vital military supplies in a national emergency.

A major difference between the two versions is that the Senate would allow federal regulators to punish banks from countries that do not allow U.S. banks operating within their borders the same business opportunities they permit for their own banks. The House version does not include the provision.

Committee Action

Solid Waste. The Senate Environment Committee will try to complete work this week on legislation (S 976) that would overhaul the nation's policies on

Last Week

The Senate last week cleared a large campaign finance bill, and the House passed a measure that would lift the administration's ban on abortion counseling at federally funded family planning clinics.

House members also agreed to comply with a special counsel's subpoena for records of members' accounts at the House bank.

A slew of House committees marked up parts of a wide-ranging energy bill, readying it for floor action.

The House and Senate Appropriations committees approved separate bills to rescind billions of dollars in previously approved spending for a variety of projects.

And the retirement list continued to grow as Reps. Bob Traxler, D-Mich., and Larry J. Smith, D-Fla., announced they would not seek re-election, bringing to 52 the number of House members opting to retire voluntarily.

Democratic Rep. Joe Kolter was soundly defeated in the Pennsylvania primary.

Details on major action taken last week follow.

Senate Floor Action

Campaign Finance. The Senate cleared, 58-42, the conference report on legislation (S 3) that would institute voluntary spending limits on House and Senate campaigns.

The bill would provide incentives, such as matching funds and reduced postal and advertising rates to candidates who abide by the spending caps.

Limits on Senate campaigns would range from $950,000 to $5.5 million in the general election, depending on state size. A $600,000 cap would be imposed on House races in the general election.

Contributions from political action committees also would be limited under the bill.

The president, who opposes public financing, is expected to veto the bill.

Coin Bill. The Senate cleared, 75-22, a commemorative coin bill (HR 3337) after rebuffing an effort by Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., to require a redesign of the back sides of circulating coins.

The House has opposed any changes to the existing design of the nation's coins. And House members on April 8 stripped the Senate redesign language from the bill.

As cleared, the legislation authorizes the Mint to strike collector coins to commemorate the White House, James Madison, Christopher Columbus, the World Cup Soccer Games and American soldiers who served in the Persian Gulf War.

House Floor Action

Generic Drugs. The House cleared legislation (HR 2454) to deter fraud by generic drug companies.

The measure would allow the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) to impose up to $1 million in fines and bar from the approval process generic drug manufacturers convicted of fraud or bribery in drug approval cases.

House members approved Senate amendments that would expand the FDA's authority to penalize fraudulent activity.

Abortion Counseling. The House voted 268-150 to pass legislation (HR 3090) that would overturn a Bush administration ban on abortion counseling at family planning clinics that receive federal support.

But backers fell 11 votes short of the two-thirds majority needed to override a promised presidential veto.

The counseling ban is scheduled to

Indiana, North Carolina Primary Balloting Set for Tomorrow

If any House incumbent loses in tomorrow's primary balloting in Indiana and North Carolina, it would be considered a major upset.

Despite the anti-incumbent mood that has swept the nation, nine of the 10 House members running for re-election in North Carolina face no primary challenge. And only six of the 10 Indiana House members have an intraparty opponent.

And those who do face challenges are expected to win.

North Carolina. Contests in North Carolina's two open seats, created as black-majority districts, have shaped up as the most competitive races. Reapportionment added a 12th District for the state and the area of retiring Democratic Rep. Walter B. Jones was carved up to create a new 1st District that is 57 percent black.

Democratic State Rep. Mickey Michaux is the favorite in the 12th District, which includes predominantly black sections of Durham, Greensboro, Winston-Salem and Charlotte. Michaux, of Durham, will face former state Sen. Melvin Watt of Charlotte, Greensboro City Councilman Earl Jones and former Winston-Salem Alderman Larry D. Little in the primary.

Several Republicans are vying for the nomination, but none are given much of a chance in November in this solidly Democratic district.

Although the 1st was reconfigured to include a majority of blacks, white Democrat Walter B. Jones Jr., the son of the incumbent, is a leading contender in a crowded primary. Four blacks and two other whites are running, including state Rep. Thomas C. Hardaway, Warren County Commission aide Willie D. Riddick and Staccato Powell, a pastor.

Although the winner of the primary will face a Republican opponent — Ted Tyler — in the fall, the district's black majority makes it a safe seat for Democrats.

Among incumbents, only W. G. "Bill" Hefner, D, faces a primary, in the 8th District. State Rep. Don Dawkins says Hefner should be ousted because he has become a Washington insider uninterested in the state's problems.

Democrat Terry Sanford faces no primary challenge in his bid for a second Senate term, but he is expected to face a tough race in the fall. Former state Commerce Secretary D.M. "Lauch" Faircloth is seeking the GOP nomination, along with former U.S. Rep. Eugene Johnston and former Charlotte Mayor Sue Myrick.

Indiana. For Republicans to reduce the Democrats' 8-to-2 advantage in the House they will have to upset some incumbents, all 10 of whom are seeking re-election.

Although first-term Rep. Tim Roemer should easily win the 3rd District Democratic primary, he is expected to face a tough fall race against the GOP nominee. Carl H. Baxmeyer, a South Bend city planner, and businessman Doug Allen Bernacchi are the leading GOP contenders for that spot.

A Senate seat is also up for grabs. The race is already set, with incumbent Republican Daniel R. Coats taking on Indiana Secretary of State Joe Hogsett.

The following chart shows all the upcoming congressional primaries. States listed in bold are those in which the filing deadline has not yet passed.

go into effect this month.

The bill would authorize the Title X family planning program through fiscal 1996, including $180 million for fiscal 1992.

Members approved an amendment that would allow health professionals at the clinics to decline to provide information on abortion if they felt it violated their religious or moral beliefs.

NASA Authorization. House members considered but did not complete work on legislation (HR 4364) that would authorize the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) through fiscal 1995.

The House rejected, 159-254, an amendment that would have cut the $2.3 billion fiscal 1993 spending authority for the space station Freedom project.

Bank Subpoena. The House approved, 347-64, a resolution (H Res 441) to comply with a subpoena issued by Special Counsel Malcolm R. Wilkey for records from the House bank.

Wilkey is investigating whether any laws against check kiting were broken when members overdrew their accounts.

The House voted to hand over the voluminous records after rejecting, 131-284, a resolution (H Res 440) that would have directed a federal judge to decide whether the subpoena was appropriate.

A handful of Democrats filed suit in federal court to prevent release of information on their House bank accounts.

Panel Funding. The House approved, 312-86, a stop-gap measure (H Res 429) authorizing spending for House committees through the end of May at 1991 levels.

The House funds its panels from April to April but has not taken up a long-term bill because GOP members have balked at a Democratic proposal to increase committee funding by 4.9 percent. Republicans want to hold spending to 4.2 percent.

Committee Action

Energy Bill. Six House committees weighed in on a sweeping national energy strategy bill (HR 776) last week. Later this month, the House Rules Committee will assemble the various provisions into a single package for floor consideration and decide which amendments will be considered.

The Ways and Means Committee took the most significant action last week as it rewrote the revenue portions of the bill and added tax breaks for the energy industry. And the Merchant Marine panel approved a sweeping offshore oil and gas leasing moratorium that is strongly opposed by the administration.

In other action:

- The Government Operations Committee approved provisions aimed at increasing the energy efficiency in public buildings.

- The Public Works Committee approved sections on the Tennessee Valley Authority and oil pipeline rate regulations.

- The Judiciary Committee stripped from the bill a provision giving the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission additional authority over matters within the jurisdiction of the Justice Department.

- The Foreign Affairs Committee approved portions to promote the export of coal and renewable energy technologies.

The Energy and Commerce Committee approved the bill on March 11; eight other committees were given jurisdiction over parts of the measure.

Budget Rescissions. The House Appropriations Committee approved legislation (HR 4990) that would rescind $5.8 billion in previously approved fiscal 1992 funding, $142 million more than President Bush requested.

Of the cuts, $2.6 billion were those proposed by Bush. Panel members declined to approve Bush's other proposals, instead adding $3.2 billion of their own. Nearly $5 billion of the cuts would be in spending for military programs, $734 million in domestic initiatives and $124 million in foreign aid.

Also, the Senate Appropriations Committee approved, 19-9, legislation (S 2403) that would make $8.3 billion in budget rescissions.

The lion's share of the cuts would be in military spending.

The panel rejected a Bush administration proposal to cancel funding for two Seawolf submarines. The House Appropriations Committee decided to cancel funding for one of the submarines.

Solid Waste. The Senate Environment and Public Works Committee began marking up legislation (S 976) that would overhaul the nation's solid waste law, but the panel did not complete action on a number of complex provisions, putting off work on the measure until this week.

The bill would reauthorize the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act, which regulates the disposal of solid and hazardous waste.

The measure proposes changes to the act to boost recycling and regulate the operations of municipal landfills and incinerators.

Members approved, 13-4, an amendment that would nearly double the number of chemical pollutants for which companies must report emission rates to the federal government.

Health Centers. The House Judiciary Committee approved legislation (HR 3591) that would grant workers at federally supported health-care centers immunity from certain malpractice suits.

The clinics, which primarily offer health services to the poor, are often unable to acquire or afford malpractice insurance.

Clinic workers would be given the same immunity from malpractice suits now provided federal employees under the Federal Tort Claims Act.

Copyright Protections. The House Judiciary Committee approved a bill (HR 4412) that would allow journalists and scholars to publish portions of copyrighted material without permission from the author.

Panel members said decisions by a federal appeals court raised questions as to whether a news organization can legally publish portions of a leaked transcript of a book before another news organization that held the copyright had published a story on it.

The measure would allow the publication of portions of unreleased works under the "fair use" doctrine, which allows the unauthorized use of a work if it is in the public interest.

FAA Authorization. The House Ways and Means Committee approved a measure (HR 4691) to reauthorize Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) programs for two years.

The bill would authorize $2 billion in fiscal 1993 and $2.1 billion in fiscal 1994 for the FAA's Airport Improvement Program. It would also authorize $4.6 billion in fiscal 1993 and $5 billion in fiscal 1994 for FAA operations.

The measure would require the FAA administrator to hire additional air traffic controllers.

Water Projects. The Senate Environment Committee approved, 16-1, a draft bill that would authorize 22 new Army Corps of Engineers water projects.

The federal government's share of the tab would be $1.7 billion; state and local governments would pay $1.3 billion.

Members approved, 13-4, an amendment that would authorize $500 million per year through fiscal 1998 for a grant program for environmental projects in small communities.

American Indian Health. Legislation (HR 3724) that aims to create minimum health standards for American Indians and to promote their recruitment into the health professions was approved by the House Interior Committee.

The measure would establish a set of health goals for the country's Indian community and reauthorize a number of American Indian health-care programs through fiscal 2000.

Whaling Ban. The House Merchant Marine Committee approved a measure (H Con Res 177) that calls for continuing indefinitely the International Whaling Commission's 1986 moratorium on the commercial killing of whales.

The bill calls for the United States to promote the protection of whale, dolphin and porpoise populations. ■

solid and hazardous waste.

The rewrite of the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act seeks to promote recycling and bolster state and local government management of solid waste disposal.

Unemployment Benefits. Legislation (HR 4727) that would further extend unemployment benefits for an estimated 1.5 million out-of-work Americans will be marked up on Tuesday and Wednesday by the House Ways and Means Subcommittee on Human Resources.

The bill would provide an additional 20 weeks of coverage per individual. The extended benefits would be made available through the end of the year or until one month after the national unemployment rate falls below 6.5 percent.

The Bush administration has endorsed the idea of providing more benefits but opposes a provision in the bill that would make changes in the compensation program permanent.

Old-Growth Forests. The House Agriculture and Interior committees on Wednesday will begin work on legislation (HR 4899) that would establish a forest reserve in the Pacific Northwest and California to protect the old-growth forests as well as fish and wildlife that inhabit the areas.

The bill will be taken up by the full Interior panel and the Agriculture Subcommittee on Forests.

At issue is how the forests should be managed and what aid should be given to communities to offset jobs losses.

Russian Aid. The Senate Foreign Relations Committee on Thursday will take up draft legislation to authorize assistance to Russia and other former republics of the Soviet Union.

The bill is expected to roughly follow the Bush administration's request for a $12 billion boost in the U.S. contribution to the International Monetary Fund. The administration also wants to repeal a number of laws to ease roadblocks to U.S. assistance to and private investment in the newly independent states.

Intelligence Authorization. Two House Intelligence subcommittees will mark up draft legislation to authorize fiscal 1993 intelligence activities.

With the collapse of the Soviet Union, Congress is eyeing an overhaul of intelligence services. The current funding level is classified, but it is believed to be about $30 billion.

Coast Guard. The House Merchant Marine panel's Coast Guard Subcommittee on Wednesday will take up draft legislation to authorize funding for the U.S. Coast Guard for fiscal 1993. The measure was still being drafted on Friday, but was expected to authorize about $3.6 billion, including $2.6 billion for operating expenses. ■

CQ's Legislative and Lobbying programs set them both straight.

Anyone can make mistakes. But attend CQ's legislative and lobbying programs and it's unlikely you'll ever make such glaring faux pas as Ms. Brandermill or Mr. Peake.

Congress and the Legislative Process on April 30, May 11, June 8, or August 13 ($295), will immerse you in the differing processes and procedures of the House and Senate — how legislation is drafted, introduced and referred to committee, how bills are handled at the committee stage and how legislation is reported to the floor.

CQ's Advanced Legislative Series on August 19-21 ($810), will take you that extra step — you'll be able to read and understand House and Senate rules, know when legislation can and cannot be debated, anticipate whether your bill will go to conference, and be familiar with the conference committee bargaining process.

Attend Strategies for Working with Congressional Staff on June 3 or August 12 ($225), and in no time you'll be building rapports with Hill staffers and creating effective five-minute presentations. Moreover, you'll know the organization and responsibilities of personal and committee staff and their role in the legislative process.

Finally, Lobbying for the '90s on June 30, ($345) will round out your knowledge. You'll know how to capitalize on the changing face of lobbying with new ideas on strategic planning, coalition building, grassroots mobilization, and more.

When so much rides on knowing the legislative process, working with congressional staff and establishing winning lobbying strategies, can you afford to make mistakes like Mr. Peake and Ms. Brandermill?

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: W. HENSON MOORE
DEPUTY CHIEF OF STAFF

SUBJECT: Alternative Minimum Tax Modifications

On April 26th, you sent me a memo with an enclosure from Martin Allday about changes in the Alternative Minimum Tax. I, in turn, inquired from Treasury and Energy what they thought of those suggestions.

Energy feels that the changes made in the House Ways and Means Committee are what we need. Treasury is doing more in-depth study on the additional suggestions; but are inclined to feel as Energy, that all that needs to be done has already been done.

In your video or statement to the IPAA Convention, reference will be made to your efforts which made the AMT change possible.

Ask President Bush

Dear President Bush:

Our country was built on a strong family unit with a belief in a Supreme Being — men of their word, and men who gave a day's work for a day's pay. I guess that's what the upcoming election in November is all about. When is it going to be "government by the people, for the people" again!

Raymond Clark
Canton, Michigan

The American people — not some government bureaucrat — should be free to make important decisions affecting their lives. That's why I'm fighting for reform in education, health care, and child care based on a family's freedom of choice. That's why I'm fighting to reform our judicial system and our federal government. We need to streamline the oversized beast called "the government" and put responsibility back where it belongs — in the hands of the American people.

Americans have not forgotten the values of faith, family, and freedom that are the foundation of our nation. These bedrock beliefs do not fade with age. They will continue to guide our nation. If we preserve them by protecting the family unit and by promoting individual responsibility, we will never lose our bearings.

Dear President Bush:

What actions will your administration take to improve the health and education of America's children?

Jill Grazia
American University
Washington, D.C.

Children are America's most precious resource. That's why reform of our health care system and our schools are two of my top priorities. We must start our children off on the road to safe, secure, and successful lives.

My "healthy start" initiative will reduce infant mortality rates by up to one-half in five years. My immunization initiative will assure that, by the year 2000, 90 percent of our children under the age of two are immunized.

We have developed strategic plans to eliminate lead poisoning, advocate AIDS education, and streamline and improve programs for both children and families.

I've proposed a 27-percent increase for Head Start and Early Childhood Development. That's good news for both the education and the health of our children.

Our children's education is key to our country's future. America 2000 is my plan to reform and, indeed, to reinvent our nation's schools — to achieve educational excellence. We are continuing the fight to ensure that every child is prepared to succeed in this increasingly complex and technological world.

Dear President Bush:

Does the United States still rank first economically and technologically?

Isa Isidro
Union Gap, Washington

American workers and American technology are the best in the world. That's why we should not shy away from the competitive free trade. America is the world's leading exporter. United States exports account for 70 percent of America's economic growth, generating new jobs at the rate of 1.8 million every year.

For America's success at home, America must lead abroad. This means opening more markets overseas for American goods, which creates more jobs and allows American workers to compete with our trading partners.

Some suggest that we can hide in a cocoon of protectionism and pretend to benefit from competition. We just can't have it both ways. Open trade is vital to the United States — every bit as vital as my administration's efforts to reform education, health care, government, and the administration of justice.

Dear President and Mrs. Bush,

Thank you for your generous (and exciting) hospitality last week. Thank you even more for being so sweet to my mother; your kindness means a lot to her and to all of us.

I thoroughly enjoyed my stay in the "Amy Carter Bedroom." Although I never heard the ghost from the Lincoln Bedroom, I swear I heard a child's voice at night whispering "nuclear proliferation." Maybe it was just the dogs; Amy doesn't seem like legend material.

I agree wholeheartedly with the White House curator, and all the Ushers we talked to -- you all are the best inhabitants of the second floor in recent memory. I look forward to doing my little part to help keep you there.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: CONSTANCE HORNER
ASSISTANT TO THE PRESIDENT AND DIRECTOR OF PRESIDENTIAL PERSONNEL

SUBJECT: Postmaster General

The Postal Board of Governors will announce today that it has selected Marvin Runyon as the next Postmaster General. Runyon looks like an excellent choice.

He is a sixty-eight year-old political independent originally from Texas. Currently, he heads up the Tennessee Valley Authority (TVA). He was recruited by Howard Baker and appointed by President Reagan in 1988 to a nine-year term. Before that, he put the Nissan New Smyrna Tennessee operation together and served as its CEO, after a career with Ford.

Runyon gave up millions of dollars in compensation at Nissan to take on the TVA. He apparently really likes extraordinary management challenges. At TVA, he is credited with a significant turn-around. After twenty-two years of rate increases averaging ten percent per year, TVA has not raised rates at all for the last five years and has about thirty-five percent fewer people than it did in the late 1980's.

I talked to Runyon this morning and to Norma Pace, the Chairman of the Postal Board of Governors. Runyon wants to speed up the automation of the Postal Service, get costs down, and especially figure out why, with automation underway, the number of postal employees is not decreasing. He has a record of being concerned about cost increases to the public, which bodes very well for his tenure at the Postal Service. I have attached his biography.

AFRICANS SAY RIOTS TAINT IMAGE OF U.S.

NAIROBI -- The riots that erupted in Los Angeles have cast a shadow over the reputation of the U.S. as a champion of human rights in Kenya and across much of black Africa.... While American diplomats have been "active in selling their brand of democracy in the host countries through blackmail," said an editorial in Saturday's Kenya Times, "Bush has failed to develop a racism-free system and integrate minorities into enjoying the fruits of the wealthy America. The black people, for example, live in appalling conditions and have some of the highest illiteracy rates in the world."
(Keith Richburg, Washington Post, A10)

STUDENTS PROTEST, SAY U.S. FAILED TO PROTECT KOREAN-AMERICANS

SEOUL -- About 60 students protested in front of the U.S. embassy on Monday, accusing Washington of failing to protect Korean-Americans in last week's riots.... The students demanded compensation for Korean-Americans and an apology. They also demanded an immediate withdrawal of 39,000 U.S. troops stationed in South Korea.

IRAQ ASKS U.N. TO STUDY RIOTS

U.N. -- Seeking to turn the tables on the U.S., Iraq asked Monday for an emergency Security Council meeting to condemn human rights violations in the Los Angeles riots.... The request is unlikely to go very far. Austria, chairing the Security Council in May, is supposed to prevent frivolous or doomed resolutions from reaching the council.
(AP, Washington Post, A8)

BUSH TAKES A STEP TOWARD RIO

The White House endorsed Monday an emerging U.N. treaty aimed at arresting global warming, virtually assuring that President Bush will attend the Earth Summit. "It certainly was a very positive step," Clayton Yeutter said of U.N. plans to set a goal of reducing carbon dioxide emissions.... Bush advisers view developments as so encouraging they're trying to decide not if he should go to Rio, but when he should arrive.
(Jessica Lee, USA Today, 5A)

U.N. SCRAMBLES TO SALVAGE GLOBAL WARMING TREATY

U.N. -- U.N. negotiators are scrambling to salvage a global warming treaty after a Bush Administration refusal to limit emissions prompted developing countries to seek less stringent regulations for themselves.... Monday, developing nations, encouraged by the U.S. resistance, proposed softening the treaty language, said a negotiations official.... Environmentalists called on Chancellor Kohl to make a personal appeal to President Bush. "A direct intervention by you with...President Bush in particular could provide the essential breakthrough to achieving an agreement," Climate Action Network said.
(Paul Raeburn, AP)

BOTH PARTIES FACE POSSIBLE FALLOUT FROM RIOTING

It was probably inevitable that the causes for the Los Angeles riots would be injected smack dab into the midst of the 1992 presidential campaign....

White House sources said that after years of refusing to give high visibility to proposals from officials like Secretary Kemp for conservative, self-help proposals for the inner city, the President may adopt them as his solution to the nation's urban ills.

"It would certainly be better to do it now than to wait for more riots and seem to be rewarding cities after they have trouble in the middle of an election year," said one official.

Kevin Phillips, a conservative critic of the President, dismissed the Administration attack on Democratic programs as being a tired, outdated criticism with no relevance to the 1990s.

"I don't think people want to look at ancient history," Phillips said. "The Great Society programs did fail, but what is happening in Los Angeles is proof of the rolling failures of two Reagan Administrations and Bush's presidency."

(Miles Benson & Michael Shanahan, Newhouse)

BUCHANAN ISSUES HIS VERDICT ON LOS ANGELES RIOTS IN HOPES OF LEADING CONSERVATIVE PARADE IN 1996

Patrick Buchanan is winding down his 1992 presidential campaign the way he launched it, with his finger firmly on the hottest of hot buttons in U.S. politics.

While other politicians talk of national reconciliation and healing after last week's riots, Buchanan is in Southern California to reinforce his own unflinching message. He praised the jury, accused President Bush of "appeasing the mob" by making "weak and equivocal" statements and staunchly opposed any social programs to ameliorate inner-city problems....

Bush-Quayle campaign officials are dismissive of Buchanan's continuing efforts. "It's just not a factor," says Mary Matalin. Yet other GOP strategists say the continuing challenge can't help but stir the right's ambivalence, if not outright anger, toward the President.

(John Harwood, Wall Street Journal, A22)

D.C. AREA SHOWS ITS DISCONTENT

About 14,000 District employees didn't show up for work Monday, absent on a day the mayor encouraged a silent protest against the verdict that virtually exonerated four Los Angeles police officers.

Hundreds more vocal protesters took to the streets to take their case to the federal government. At the Justice Department, at the White House, from the Washington Monument down Pennsylvania Avenue NW and near the 14th Street bridge, people chanted and marched, vowing to renew the fight for equality.

(Christine Spolar, Washington Post, A1)

BUSH WORKING ON 'HEALING STRATEGIES'

President Bush and key Cabinet members brainstorm Tuesday for long-term strategies to answer what Secretary Kemp has called "a hard cry for help" from hard-pressed urban communities....

Secretaries Sullivan, Martin and Kemp were said to have urged Bush to capitalize on what they see as an opportunity for the President to put a GOP signature on urban programs.

They laid out three goals central to any evolving long-term strategy: Local leaders must be consulted at every stage; federal government must be a partner, not director; viable businesses must be established to provide jobs for community residents.

(Jessica Lee, USA Today, 3A)

WHITE HOUSE BLAMES LIBERAL PROGRAMS FOR UNREST

The White House Monday blamed liberal social programs launched in the 1960s for creating the conditions that produced last week's Los Angeles riots and pledged new activism for conservative solutions proposed but rarely pushed by President Bush....

The White House criticism of the programs begun in the Johnson era came as a new poll showed Bush losing his lead and locked in a virtual three-way tie with Gov. Clinton and Ross Perot. The decline in support for Bush was attributed to public focus on the civil disturbances and a lack of confidence in the President's leadership on urban and racial problems.

The nationwide survey of 1,301 voters by the Times-Mirror Center for People and the Press, taken over the last four days, found 33 percent of the respondents saying they would vote for Bush if the election were held today; 30 percent for Clinton; and 30 percent for Perot. A GOP official said the poll illuminates the peril the President faces when the public's attention is riveted on domestic social problems.

The official noted that the White House campaign against liberal solutions to social problems "would work a little better if we were running against a Great Society liberal."

(Ann Devroy, Washington Post, A8)

White House Blames Racial Tension On Liberal Programs From '60s

Recognizing that the charred streets of Los Angeles are becoming a symbol of the nation's domestic problems, White House officials on Monday tried to preempt criticism of the Reagan-Bush Administrations' social policies by blaming racial tension and inner-city despair on failed liberal programs of earlier decades....

On Monday night, Bush dispatched a team of top White House aides, including Henson Moore, to set up meetings with community leaders and others in Los Angeles when Bush travels there Thursday.

The President, aides said, is now planning to make some dramatic appearances and to propose a serious campaign to work with Congress to pass legislation to go to root problems.

MITTERRAND PRAISES BUSH'S HANDLING OF RIOTS
PARIS, May 5, Reuter - French President Francois Mitterrand, who had blamed the Los Angeles riots on the U.S. government's social policies, has praised President George Bush for his handling of the crisis.

"Bush displayed wisdom and decisiveness by first taking the advice of black leaders, then sending in forces able to restore order without provocation," he said in an interview to be published in the French magazine Paris Match on Wednesday.

In the interview, made available in advance of publication, he expressed confidence that Bush would be able to calm passions and restore good social relations.

Fifty-eight people were killed in the riots, which began last Wednesday after the acquittal of four white policemen accused of beating a black motorist.

Softening his earlier condemnation of Bush's social policies, Mitterrand said he had inherited a delicate situation.

"Flagrant inequalities and the lack of social protection have for too long deteriorated relations between social groups. George Bush has to deal with a difficult heritage going back a long way," he said.

Mitterrand originally blamed the riots on a neglect of social issues by the U.S. administration.

MESSAGE: urgent!

Proposal: President holds meetings with community leaders in the 10 largest cities.

Purpose: To facilitate frank discussion among these individuals on the steps which can be taken at the community level to foster understanding and just and decent relations among people of all races, nationalities and religions. It would not be the President's purpose to preach, but rather to help community leaders to talk with each other through the President.

When: As quickly as is possible. The events of the past few days have had a profound impact on the vast majority of our population. The President needs to move with speed and decisiveness during this period when his actions will produce the best results. He should announce his intention to hold these meetings immediately and then take no more than a week to begin the process.

Why the 10 largest cities? Because the President must necessarily prioritize his own personal involvement and the problems of race and class are most severe in our major urban centers.

What kind of format? Absolutely essential that these meetings be closed. The objective is frank and serious discussion - impossible to obtain in meetings open to the press or the general public. To accommodate the proper mix of participants and to achieve the necessary outreach it may be that more than one meeting be held in each city.

Should the President include other Administration officials?

Probably yes, but that participation should be carefully limited, so as not to dilute the unique power and influence wielded by the President. It might make sense to have Mrs Bush participate.

She is very effective in direct personal contacts and her participation will underline the importance of the family institution as a bedrock essential in building healthy communities.
 Officers who could assist the President and often excellent people skills
 are: Kemp, Sullivan,
 Alexander and Martin

Does this free the President into accepting new program demands?
 Absolutely not! He announces up front
 that his prime objective is to use his office to facilitate constructive discussion among local community leaders. He believes that such discussions can open up new channels and new approaches to making better use of all our resources - businesses, schools, churches, etc.!

However, he should not take a doctrinaire

posture to new ideas for Federal involvement.
He, too, must enter these discussions with a desire to listen and to learn.

Addendum: The idea of an urban policy which Clinton and many Democrats are already beginning to talk about is not new, nor is it necessarily simply more social planning supported by liberals. In fact, the idea of an explicit urban policy was first given White House endorsement by the Nixon administration when I chaired a sub-committee on Housing and Urban Development. Your domestic policy people might find it useful to review some of those proposals and proceedings; they had considerable support among Congressional Republicans as well as from Nixon himself.

My thought is that the guts and bolts of any urban policy, and the basic decision making, are matters for state and local governments. But the federal establishment, representing the national interest, has its role as a standard setter, facilitator, and - with limited resources - co-investor in urban America. In short, we do have an urban policy - low profile and more implicit than explicit - for several decades. It should be reviewed, updated, and given new definition by President Bush. Your Commission on Regulatory Barriers to Affordable Housing developed a number of recommendations that could be included. Other innovative elements can be provided from other federal departments and agencies.) The basic point here is that Los Angeles provided a stunning revelation of the state of our urban society, leaving citizens everywhere shocked and uncertain. In this circumstance they look to their leaders - and to the President in particular - for responses that can begin to restore public confidence.

Another thought, also not new, has to do with urban employment. Basically, private sector jobs are a function of the market economy while public sector jobs reflect priorities, resources and decision making by state and local governments. Even if it were a good idea, federal funds aren't available to boost either private or public sector employment. But this might be a good time to consider further phased ~~down~~ de-centralization of federal government operations to urban centers where chronic joblessness is high. With today's technology and communications, the need no longer exists for federal functions to be as centralized as they are, even given the considerable regionalization that has taken place. My thought is that over time and through attrition, some portion of the federal employment currently centered in D.C. can be dispersed to urban centers throughout the country.

Interestingly, central government decentralization took place in France in the 1960's, years before your pal Mitterand came on the scene. Then the effort was to control surging population growth in the Paris region while the rest of France was suffering from no growth and in some places actual population loss. The effort was successful and the effect was both to bring government closer to the people and to downsize the central establishment. Personally, I can think of a lot of reasons for the Departments of HUD, Transportation, Labor, Education and Social Services to get more of their operations out where the problems are.

BUSH WORKING ON 'HEALING STRATEGIES'

President Bush and key Cabinet members brainstorm Tuesday for long-term strategies to answer what Secretary Kemp has called "a hard cry for help" from hard-pressed urban communities....

Secretaries Sullivan, Martin and Kemp were said to have urged Bush to capitalize on what they see as an opportunity for the President to put a GOP signature on urban programs.

They laid out three goals central to any evolving long-term strategy: Local leaders must be consulted at every stage; federal government must be a partner, not director; viable businesses must be established to provide jobs for community residents.

(Jessica Lee, USA Today, 3A)

WHITE HOUSE BLAMES LIBERAL PROGRAMS FOR UNREST

The White House Monday blamed liberal social programs launched in the 1960s for creating the conditions that produced last week's Los Angeles riots and pledged new activism for conservative solutions proposed but rarely pushed by President Bush....

The White House criticism of the programs begun in the Johnson era came as a new poll showed Bush losing his lead and locked in a virtual three-way tie with Gov. Clinton and Ross Perot. The decline in support for Bush was attributed to public focus on the civil disturbances and a lack of confidence in the President's leadership on urban and racial problems.

The nationwide survey of 1,301 voters by the Times-Mirror Center for People and the Press, taken over the last four days, found 33 percent of the respondents saying they would vote for Bush if the election were held today; 30 percent for Clinton; and 30 percent for Perot. A GOP official said the poll illuminates the peril the President faces when the public's attention is riveted on domestic social problems.

The official noted that the White House campaign against liberal solutions to social problems "would work a little better if we were running against a Great Society liberal."

(Ann Devroy, Washington Post, A8)

White House Blames Racial Tension On Liberal Programs From '60s

Recognizing that the charred streets of Los Angeles are becoming a symbol of the nation's domestic problems, White House officials on Monday tried to preempt criticism of the Reagan-Bush Administrations' social policies by blaming racial tension and inner-city despair on failed liberal programs of earlier decades....

On Monday night, Bush dispatched a team of top White House aides, including Henson Moore, to set up meetings with community leaders and others in Los Angeles when Bush travels there Thursday.

The President, aides said, is now planning to make some dramatic appearances and to propose a serious campaign to work with Congress to pass legislation to go to root problems.

Administration Blames Poverty On Congress, Democratic Programs

The Bush Administration, under new criticism for failing to curtail urban poverty after 11 years of Republican control of the White House, blamed the problem Monday on faulty Democratic programs and the current Democratic-led Congress.

But behind the public laying of blame at the Democrats' door, the Administration remained deeply divided over how to address the broad problems of poverty, racial division and urban blight. Indeed, some Administration officials lamented that President Bush had not made poverty a top item on his agenda until now.

According to two Administration sources, Bush on Friday rejected an appeal by some of his aides to deliver a nationwide address that focused on healing divisions between the races and instead gave an alternate speech that said the riots were "not about civil rights," a view that some critics said pandered to white voters and did not address disaffected blacks. A White House official said Bush might dwell more on race relations when he visits Los Angeles Thursday and Friday.

White House Blames Riots On 'Liberal Social Programs'

The White House, racing to put its own political cast to an issue that is sure to influence the November election, blamed "liberal social programs" for the violence in Los Angeles last week.... Mrs. Bush also denounced Congress and "welfare policies" which she said "lock people into poverty," indicating the White House attack on the policies of the 1960s and 1970s is well orchestrated.

BUSH RELEASES $600 MILLION FOR L.A.

The Bush Administration released $600 million Monday to help Los Angeles recover from the nation's worst urban rioting in 129 years, but President Bush said conservative solutions would have prevented the uprising if Congress had enacted them.... Speaking at Lafayette Square, Jerry Brown called Bush's response "completely inadequate" and urged support for a $30 billion urban renewal program suggested by U.S. mayors.

IN RIOTS' WAKE, NEW CALLS FOR DOMESTIC SPENDING

The riots in Los Angeles will spawn new calls for domestic spending in Washington this week, with repercussions felt all the way to Moscow.... But the sparks that will fly between the White House and Capitol Hill aren't likely to produce many dollars from a deficit-riddled federal treasury.... "I expect a lot of rhetoric...as to who can lay the blame where," said Rep. Schroeder. "There is not a lot of flexibility in the budget."

EXECUTIVES ASK CONGRESS' HELP TO REBUILD L.A.

A delegation of leading Los Angeles business executives pressed California congressmen and Bush Administration officials Monday to coordinate federal, state and local government efforts to rebuild riot-torn Los Angeles so that the most can be gleaned from the limited resources.... What is needed, said Chamber of Commerce president Ray Remy, is a "coordinated package" that would include SBA loans, Commerce Department grants to spur tourism, and housing aid from HUD. CLINTON TOURS RIOT AREAS, URGES 'EMPOWERING' THE POOR

LOS ANGELES -- Treading on politically sensitive ground as he toured riot-ravaged streets, Gov. Clinton on Monday called for putting resources into America's cities and giving urban residents a far greater role in rebuilding them....

In response to a reporter's question, Clinton also acknowledged that there was a political aspect to his trip. He said he wanted to symbolize his concern for the plight of cities and to lay the groundwork for helping them if he wins the White House....

Secretary Kemp has accused Clinton of having "stooped to partisan demagoguery" and of reaching "a new low." Clinton said he did not know what Kemp had been talking about.

"I think maybe Jack just got a little heat for all the criticism he has given to President Bush and was trying to make up a little ground on the home court," Clinton said. "That's about all I can figure." (Adam Pertman, Boston Globe)

Clinton Tours L.A. Riot Sites

...Clinton strategists debated whether to make the hastily arranged visit and concluded Republicans would accuse Clinton of trying to make political hay from the riots no matter what he did. "The White House is going to say these things because they're embarrassed about the failure of their policies," said Mickey Kantor, Clinton's national campaign chairman.

CLINTON CALLS WHITE HOUSE DEFENSE OF RIOTS A 'BUM RAP'

LOS ANGELES -- Last week's urban battleground became this week's national political debate, as Gov. Clinton engaged in a long-distance dispute with the White House over who is to blame and who is best suited to help this city rebuild its burned and looted neighborhoods.... Clinton's aides privately acknowledged that his appearance in Los Angeles was timed to beat President Bush to the riot-torn city and thereby force the President to respond to him on urban policy. (Brandon Bailey, Knight-Ridder)

BOTH PARTIES FACE POSSIBLE FALLOUT FROM RIOTING

It was probably inevitable that the causes for the Los Angeles riots would be injected smack dab into the midst of the 1992 presidential campaign....

White House sources said that after years of refusing to give high visibility to proposals from officials like Secretary Kemp for conservative, self-help proposals for the inner city, the President may adopt them as his solution to the nation's urban ills.

"It would certainly be better to do it now than to wait for more riots and seem to be rewarding cities after they have trouble in the middle of an election year," said one official.

Kevin Phillips, a conservative critic of the President, dismissed the Administration attack on Democratic programs as being a tired, outdated criticism with no relevance to the 1990s.

"I don't think people want to look at ancient history," Phillips said. "The Great Society programs did fail, but what is happening in Los Angeles is proof of the rolling failures of two Reagan Administrations and Bush's presidency."

BUCHANAN ISSUES HIS VERDICT ON LOS ANGELES RIOTS IN HOPES OF LEADING CONSERVATIVE PARADE IN 1996

Patrick Buchanan is winding down his 1992 presidential campaign the way he launched it, with his finger firmly on the hottest of hot buttons in U.S. politics.

While other politicians talk of national reconciliation and healing after last week's riots, Buchanan is in Southern California to reinforce his own unflinching message. He praised the jury, accused President Bush of "appeasing the mob" by making "weak and equivocal" statements and staunchly opposed any social programs to ameliorate inner-city problems....

Bush-Quayle campaign officials are dismissive of Buchanan's continuing efforts. "It's just not a factor," says Mary Matalin. Yet other GOP strategists say the continuing challenge can't help but stir the right's ambivalence, if not outright anger, toward the President.

D.C. AREA SHOWS ITS DISCONTENT

About 14,000 District employees didn't show up for work Monday, absent on a day the mayor encouraged a silent protest against the verdict that virtually exonerated four Los Angeles police officers.

Hundreds more vocal protesters took to the streets to take their case to the federal government. At the Justice Department, at the White House, from the Washington Monument down Pennsylvania Avenue NW and near the 14th Street bridge, people chanted and marched, vowing to renew the fight for equality.

Protest Over King Verdict Arrives At White House

...Several people who joined the crowd in front of the White House urged demonstrators to scale the White House fence. "There's our man," said one insurgent, pointing to the White House in reference to President Bush. No one made the attempt....

Several people who took control of microphones at the White House rally seemed to prefer violence, as they moved to the gate to taunt police officers. But many in the crowd dispersed. The police stood erect, standing at the foot of the gate.

FOR KEMP, A MOMENT TO SEIZE

It took an explosion of violence in the nation's second-largest city to make it happen, but in the past few days, Secretary Kemp has been thrust into the spotlight as the Bush Administration's expert on the plight of inner cities. Finally....

He is talking on CNN, talking to a myriad of newspaper reporters, and Monday at a Cabinet meeting chaired by President Bush to respond to the rioting in Los Angeles last week.

There is a note of vindication in his voice. "I'm impatient, and I'm an activist. I would always feel a sense of frustration that things don't move faster and more dramatically," he said in an interview Monday. Following the White House meeting, he predicted that Bush "wants to take action. I'm very upbeat now."

RACISM REACHES FAR BEYOND LOS ANGELES, POWELL SAYS

NASHVILLE -- Racism in America reaches far beyond the Los Angeles riots and has frustrated blacks who find themselves unable to share in the American dream, Gen. Powell said Monday.... "Those scenes tell us vividly that we still have a long way to go before our dreams become reality," said Powell in a commencement address at Fisk University. "Violence by the police and by the mob is not the answer. It shouldn't be. We've come too far for this." (AP)

SHERIFF SAYS RIGHTS OF ASIANS VIOLATED

The Los Angeles County sheriff has asked the Justice Department to investigate and prosecute looters under federal civil rights laws for targeted violence against the Koreatown section of Los Angeles.

Sheriff Sherman Block told federal authorities that the burning and looting of Korean businesses "clearly constitute attacks on people and property simply because of their race."...

Senior Justice officials here said they would have no immediate comment on the request, perhaps reflecting Bush Administration reluctance to risk further bruising racial sensitivities.

L.A. CURFEW LIFTED; TROOPS STAY ON PATROL

LOS ANGELES -- Mayor Tom Bradley lifted the nighttime curfew Monday and schools reopened, but this riot-torn city kept its guard up throughout the night, with troops and police patrolling in looted and burned neighborhoods. "All of the signs of normalcy have returned," said Bradley, who nevertheless said troops would remain here indefinitely.... The death toll rose to 58.

BUSHES GUESTS AT FUND-RAISER FOR HOSPITAL WHERE DAUGHTER WORKS

POTOMAC -- President and Mrs. Bush were guests of honor Monday at a fund-raiser for a hospital where their daughter works. The Bushes flew by helicopter to the Avenal Tournament Players Championship course, where the National Rehabilitation Hospital staged a tournament that raised "a little over $150,000 for charity care," according to hospital president Ed Eccenhoff. BUSH SALUTES BOB MICHEL

President Bush joined congressional leaders Monday in saluting Rep. Michel as the Republican House leader's portrait was unveiled in statuary hall in the Capitol.... Speaker Foley took a crack at the President's stand on two-term limitations, saying Michel is the "living, breathing, surviving best argument against term limits." (UPI)

SCHOOLS AS SYMBOLS: WHERE POLICYMAKERS SENT THEIR CHILDREN

In this city, where symbols can be so important that a foreign car in the driveway can kill a politician in the polls, the personal choices officials make increasingly are being scrutinized.

Now, as a key Bush Administration plan is seen by many as pitting private schools against public ones, some are asking whether there is a connection between the schools politicians personally patronize and those they publicly champion. Absolutely, say some. Absolutely not, say just as many....

A Washington Post survey of the personal choices of the 67 key education policymakers in the capital -- President Bush, Vice President Quayle, the 13 top Education Department officials and the 52 congressional education committee members -- shows that Administration officials favor private schools more than do members of Congress, and that not a single official has sent his or her child to a public school. FEDERAL PANEL RECOMMENDS BAN ON EXECUTION OF MENTALLY RETARDED

The Bush Administration is reviewing a presidential panel's recommendation that the federal government prohibit states from executing the mentally retarded. A companion recommendation calls for a nationwide system for pretrial mental health evaluations for persons accused of capital murder.... Some aren't optimistic the recommendations will survive. "This is an election year," observed an Administration official. "Who knows what can happen about the recommendations. No doubt they've caused concern that they might cost the President votes." (John Bennett, Scripps Howard)

2 RULINGS PLACE BURDENS ON CRIMINAL DEFENDANTS

The Supreme Court issues a pair of 5-4 rulings Monday that underscored conservative control of the high court and demonstrated the difficulty criminal defendants face in forging a five-justice majority even if they manage to persuade one or two generally conservative justices to vote their way.

In one case, the court ruled that grand juries do not have to be told of evidence favorable to defendants. In the other, a different majority placed new restrictions on state prisoners' ability to challenge their convictions in federal court.

BANK GROUPS OPPOSE INTERSTATE THRIFTS

Leaders of two banking groups said Monday a federal rule scheduled to take effect later this month could increase instability in the thrift industry and should be blocked.

The rule, issued by the Office of Thrift Supervision, would create "a grossly inequitable situation between banks and thrifts," since banks are not permitted to engage in interstate branching, said Margie Muller, Maryland Bank Commissioner and head of the Conference of State Bank Supervisors. Robert Hawkins, president of the Independent Bankers Association of America, said communities could suffer because "out-of-state institutions don't have any commitment to local communities from which they take their deposits."

LABOR BOARD TO ADDRESS DUES ISSUE

In a move that some say could determine the future of compulsory union membership in 29 states, the NLRB Monday voted to engage in substantive rulemaking for only the second time in its history to determine how much financial information labor organizations must provide members about their activities. At issue are the rules for compliance with a 1988 Supreme Court decision that requires unions to disclose how they spend members' dues.

DOW SURGES 42 AS CALM IN CITIES CHEERS INVESTORS

NEW YORK -- Blue-chip stocks soared to a record high close Monday as investors cheered the restoration of peace to Los Angeles and other cities. The Dow Jones rose 42.04 points, or 1.3 percent, to close at a record 3378.13. It was the 18th record close for the Dow this year.

CHALLENGE TO HOUSE BANK SUBPOENAS REJECTED; DATA TURNED OVER

The House turned over 41 rolls of microfilm from the House Bank Monday, shortly after a federal judge rejected a challenge to grand jury subpoenas for copies of records of all checks and deposits processed by the bank. U.S. District Judge John Garrett Penn ruled that five House members could not legally oppose the subpoenas and that the grand jury was within its authority in asking for copies of the more than 500,000 checks processed by the bank.

HOUSE BANK PROBE LEADER TO LEAVE

The turmoil in the House claimed an ironic victim Monday when Rep. McHugh, a member of the 1974 Watergate class who led the ethics investigation into the House Bank scandal, announced he would not seek reelection in his upstate district.

McHugh's unexpected announcement came on the same day that Rep. Davis, whom the ethics committee identified as one of the top 22 "abusers" of the House Bank, said he would not run either. Their decision increased to 54 the post-World War II record for voluntary House retirements in a single year.

GOP CANDIDATES WEAK AS SENATE DEMOCRATS LEAVE

Three unexpected Democratic retirements and one primary defeat have opened a window of opportunity for Republicans to pick up new Senate seats in November.... But some strategists say Republicans will be unable to capitalize on these openings because the GOP has been unable to attract strong, big-name candidates to run in several key Senate races....

"The Republicans failed miserably in recruitment," said Don Foley, the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee's political director. "Frankly, we lucked out in some of our races" where some of the GOP's strongest names "decided not to run."

REPUBLICANS HORRIFIED WITH ENDORSEMENT

Republicans are horrified that a top GOP check bouncer, Rep. Goodling, got a public vote of confidence from President Bush when the White House last week moved to fire HUD aide Mary Brunette because she plans to run the campaign of a Goodling opponent.

AFRICANS SAY RIOTS TAINT IMAGE OF U.S.

NAIROBI -- The riots that erupted in Los Angeles have cast a shadow over the reputation of the U.S. as a champion of human rights in Kenya and across much of black Africa.... NETWORK NEWS

(Monday evening, May 4, 1992)

L.A./TODAY

ABC's Peter Jennings: In Los Angeles tonight if people want to go the movies or go shopping or visit a friend or go to church or just wander around to see what violence they've done to themselves and each other, it will be easier for them to do so because there will not be a curfew for the first time since last Thursday. If, on the other hand, they wish to cause trouble they still have to contend with a very heavy police and continuing military presence on their streets. After all, 58 people have now been killed since the Rodney King verdict last Wednesday. (ABC-Lead)

NBC's Tom Brokaw: First there was rage, violence and fear. Then there was shock and grief. Now Los Angeles faces the hard exhausting chore of rebuilding physically, economically and emotionally after the deadliest urban riots in American history. Today the curfew was lifted, but as NBC's George Lewis tells us now, the troops will remain, and we're a long way from normal in southern California.

Lewis reports the latest count shows 58 people dead and almost 2,400 injured. Arrests passed the 11,000 mark. At 103rd Street Elementary School kids wrote letters to Mayor Bradley and President Bush asking them to help put the city back together. (NBC-Lead)

CBS's Dan Rather: For the first time since violence erupted in L.A., the all-night curfew is being lifted. Troops are still patrolling the streets. Another person has been shot and killed. But schools are open again, and so are some of the stores that survived. (CBS-Lead)

L.A./PRESIDENT

Jennings: From the moment the jury returned its verdict in the King case last week, the Bush Administration has been faced with a series of policy decisions and political ones as well. For the last several days the President and Governor Bill Clinton as well, have been trying to shape and reshape their positions.

ABC's Brit Hume: The President was told by his senior military and law enforcement advisers this morning that the violence in L.A. had subsided.

That led to the question posed by reporters during Mr. Bush's next meeting with senior domestic policy advisers. What long-range measures did he have in mind for L.A. and other cities?

(President Bush: "We have some very good proposals out on the table right now -- proposals who clearly have come of age.") For today though, the President said he would be dealing mostly with Los Angeles' immediate needs. He dispatched Deputy Education Secretary Kerns, who left for L.A. late today with a team of officials from various agencies to see what the Administration can do. Meanwhile, the anger stirred by the Rodney King verdict reached the White House gates today as several hundred angry but peaceful protesters, nearly all of them black, rallied to cries of no justice, no peace. The President, who already had a two-day visit to California set for later this week, will now use it to visit the riot-damaged areas. No major new assault on urban problems is expected. Indeed, the L.A. trip will be the most intensive and conspicuous concern the President has yet shown for such issues. (ABC-4)

Brokaw: This is an election year of course, and as George Bush, Bill Clinton and Ross Perot know all too well, the racial explosion in L.A. and other cities will have political fallout. Taking the measure of all of this tonight is NBC's John Cochran.

Cochran: The President and all those who want his job deny they're trying to score political points out of a tragedy. But they all want to make sure the other guys don't score any points either. President Bush said he will go to Los Angeles this week to focus on problems of the ghetto. Does that mean he doesn't know what the problems are?

(President Bush: "I don't know how you could conclude that from what I just said. We have some very good ideas that we have out there that would have been extraordinarily helpful if they'd been put into effect.")

But the only idea Bush mentioned was a housing proposal aimed at making it easier for people in public housing to own their own homes. That plan is credited to Housing Secretary Jack Kemp, who, though present today, is in the President's dog house. This weekend Kemp publicly called on Bush to move faster on urban problems. Ignoring the unpredictable Kemp, Bush today chose a reliable team player -- Deputy Education Secretary David Kerns -- to be Bush's point man in Los Angeles. Bill Clinton is already there walking a fine line, saying he wants to heal racial divisions but advocating only modest financial assistance -- mostly loans. Clinton does not want to sound like an unelectable bleeding heart liberal.

(Clinton: "I have a good law and order record, and I've condemned the violence along with the verdict.")

Racial tension usually helps conservative Republican candidates, but maybe not this time. In a new Times-Mirror poll, 31% said Clinton would do the best job of dealing with the racial situation. Twenty-four percent chose Bush. Thirteen percent went for Ross Perot. Perot says he would have responded more boldly than Bush did after the L.A. cops were acquitted.

(Perot on "Meet The Press": "If I were on watch and that happened, number one, I'd head for the airport. And on the way to the airport I'd call the attorney general and tell him to file a federal case.")

But Perot's inexperience is showing. During the rioting it would have put an additional strain on security forces to try to protect a president and ordinary citizens. Also, the government cannot file charges until a grand jury gives the green light. Meanwhile, for establishment politicians, Los Angeles may have made urban problems a real election-year issue. (NBC-3)

CBS's Susan Spencer: Plotting strategy this morning, Mr. Bush made it clear that part of it will be to blame Democrats and Congress for the problems in the cities.

(President Bush: "We have some very good ideas that we have out there that would have been extraordinarily helpful if they'd been put into effect. If people would listen to some of our Cabinet departments up on the Hill we might be a little further along.") Mr. Bush, until now, has given short shrift to urban problems. He does not now see the answer in more federal spending even though aid to cities since 1980 has been cut from $49 billion a year to less than half that. The White House approach emphasizes private investment and local control.

(Secretary Kemp: "We've spent $2.6 trillion on the war on poverty and the Great Society since 1965, and, frankly, poverty is up not down. Unemployment is up not down. And despair is growing, not contracting.")

Many Democrats argue though that Mr. Bush should relent and spend some of the peace dividend at home.

(Sen. Sasser: "At the very least the federal government ought to be flowing more funding back to local governments. We have a program that could put people to work.")

The President today dispatched a team to L.A. to recommend action. It is somewhat ironic that Mr. Bush, once thought ready to coast to reelection on foreign policy successes, now may be judged more on how he handles a domestic crisis. (CBS-4)

L.A./CLINTON

Jennings reports Clinton was in L.A. to see for himself what the city has done to itself. He said the real challenge for the country was to make some good out of what has happened. (ABC-5)

PRESIDENTIAL POLL

Rather reports a new Times-Mirror poll finds that if the election were held today it might be a virtual three-way tie. A survey of registered voters indicates President Bush might get about 33% of the popular vote to about 30% for Bill Clinton and about 30% for Ross Perot. (CBS-5)

EFFECT OF REAGAN-BUSH YEARS ON MINORITIES

Jennings: A little earlier in the broadcast you heard President Bush and his likely challenger this fall, Bill Clinton, circling the issue we're all going to hear a lot more about during the summer and fall presidential campaign. What effect did the Reagan-Bush and then the Bush years have on the lives of black Americans and other minorities? It won't be easy for the Democrats to argue that it's simply a matter of spending the right amount of money. And it won't be easy for the Republicans to get beyond the fact that they have been in power for more than a decade.

ABC's Rebecca Chase reports the relative prosperity of the 1980s did not reach the inner-cities. As higher paying jobs continued to move to the suburbs, so did the middle class. The poor and unemployed, mostly minorities, were left behind. Nearly one-third of all black families now live below the poverty line. Unemployment among blacks has gone up and is now twice as high as for whites. In the inner-cities a majority of children were raised by a single parent in the 1980s, and most of them live below the poverty line and on welfare. While the numbers on welfare increase, the value of the assistance fell by more than 30%. During the same time, other federal spending in the cities also dropped. Subsidized housing fell 82%, job training -- 63%, and programs to develop new business down 40%.

(William Julius Wilson, urban sociologist: "The response of the federal government to the growing problems in urban areas in general and inner-city in particular has been somewhat pathetic.")

Jennings: On the issue of health care there's no question that by and large, black Americans do not have the access to the same quality of health care as white Americans.

ABC's George Strait reports in the last 10 years federal and state budget cuts have caused the whole medical infrastructure in America's inner-cities to become unraveled. There are fewer dollars for immunization, fewer hospitals, fewer clinics, fewer doctors and fewer blacks have health insurance. There's no reason to believe that conditions for black Americans have improved.

Jennings: In education it is rather the same story. For the past decade America's inner-city schools have been steadily deteriorating.

ABC's Bill Blakemore reports America's poor urban children get the poorest schools. In a recent study, 44% of urban school buildings were judged simply too old, and many of those have had virtually no maintenance since 1981. And it's not only decent buildings inner-city students know they don't have; they hardly have any of the exciting new learning programs. Most inner-city schools are too poor even for the proven new apprenticeship program which would get kids into the adult world of work. Federal funding for the job training act in these schools has dropped since 1981 from $190 million to $30 million. The total federal support for public schools has dropped by more than a third in the past 12 years to about 6%. Over the same 12 years poor urban schools have watched overall spending per pupil in America increase by a third -- most of that in suburban and other middle class schools.

L.A./AMERICA'S RESPONSE

NBC's Lisa Myers reports that Robert Woodson, President of the National Center for Neighborhood Enterprises, expects a backlash at first but believes Americans ultimately will agree to help blacks help themselves.

(Woodson: "No more social programs. We need to invest in capital in those neighborhoods. We need to make low-income people owners of their property. You don't burn what you own, and people are rioting against things that they don't own.")

Others argue that pouring resources into the cities is in everyone's best interest.

(Sen. Bradley: "We have to generate jobs in urban America. We have to confront and reduce violence and crime, and we have to strengthen America's families. And you have to put that in an overall context of economic growth.") (NBC-6)

L.A./VICTIM RESPONSE

Brokaw says that besides the 58 dead, there were so many victims in the L.A. riots -- most of them black. Some of them refused to be defeated.

NBC's Keith Morrison reports on a victim that is rebuilding.
(Arthur Washington, victim of looting: "It's really bad that it takes something like this to get the President in action, to get the government in action. It takes something like this, and it's bad.") (NBC-13)

L.A./INTERNATIONAL RESPONSE

Rather reports the verdict and the violence in L.A. is sparking criticism all over the world. To no ones surprise, Saddam Hussein seized the opportunity today. He called for an urgent meeting of the U.N. Security Council to discuss "the persecution and oppression of the people in Los Angeles."

CBS's Barry Peterson says President Mitterand called the Rodney King verdict scandalous. An Israeli newspaper compared the L.A. riots to the Intifada. In Britain, one columnist said of America, "After the rioting it's finished." Many Europeans say America has now lost its right to tell the rest of the world how to behave. For Europeans dealing with their own racial problems, the saddest thing about what happened in the streets of L.A. was losing the sense of help that America could somehow do it right. (CBS-16)

L.A./JOBS

Jennings says that in general today L.A. went back to work. But the L.A. Chamber of Commerce said that in the south-central part of the city 14,000 jobs have been lost to the violence. (ABC-2)

L.A./COST

Brokaw reports the best estimates now put structural damage alone at $717 million. That does not count lost jobs and lost businesses.

NBC's Mike Jensen reports an estimated 10,000 businesses were looted, burned or destroyed.

(Hal Postal [phonetic], Farmers' Insurance Company: "I would say that it [cost of rioting] is $1.5 billion, including all the lost jobs, your lost tourism, the cost of your protection -- the police protection, National Guard -- and merchandise and buildings.")

(NBC-2)

L.A./NATIONAL GUARD

Jennings reports there was one incident overnight in L.A. involving National Guard troops. They shot and killed a motorist who they say tried to run them down at a barricade. (ABC-6)

RODNEY KING'S PASSENGER ALSO BEATEN

Rather reports a passenger in Rodney King's car went on TV today to say that he too was beaten by police mostly not entirely out of camera range. Bryant Allen is now suing the police. (CBS-6)

L.A./GENERAL POWELL

Rather reports General Powell gave his reaction to the trouble in L.A. It came during a speech to students at predominantly black Fisk University.

(Powell: "Our hearts hurt because of that violence. And our hearts hurt because as we watched the tragic events in Los Angeles unfold we were thinking: No, not again. We can't let this happen again. It shouldn't be. We've come too far for this. But it did happen. And we see, once again, what a long way we still have to go because the problem goes beyond Rodney King. The problem goes beyond Los Angeles. It goes beyond the trial of those four officers. The problem goes to the despair that still exists in the black community over the inability of black Americans to freely share in the American dream.") (CBS-8)

CHECK SCANDAL

Brokaw reports a federal judge today upheld a subpoena for the release of records in the House banking check scandal. He said the five lawmakers who challenged that subpoena in this case have no rights of privacy. The House later gave all the records to the Justice Department. (CBS-10, NBC-7)

ROCKET SALES/RUSSIA-INDIA

Jennings reports there was a warning from the U.S. to Russia and India. Russia wants to sell $200 million worth of rocket technology to India for use in building rocket boosters for the Indian space program. The U.S. is threatening economic sanctions if the deal goes through because according to the State Department the technology could also be used to deliver nuclear weapons. (ABC-9)

EARTHQUAKE

Rather reports a moderate earthquake shook southern California today. No damage or injuries were reported. This quake was centered in the desert areas near Palm Springs. Technically it was another aftershock to the quake that hit the same area two weeks ago. (CBS-9)

CONGRESSMEN RETIRING

Jennings reports two congressmen have announced they will not run for reelection: Republican Robert Davis from Michigan and Democrat Matt McHugh of New York. (CBS-11, ABC-8)

GORBACHEV

Jennings reports Mikhail Gorbachev and his wife spent the day at the Reagan presidential library where Mr. Gorbachev was given the Ronald Reagan freedom award. (CBS-13, NBC-12, ABC-10)

EDITORIALS/COLUMNISTS

LOS ANGELES

Beyond Rage -- "President George Bush's brief prime-time remarks Friday expressed his shock and revulsion at the Rodney King verdict. The sentiment seemed heartfelt.... Yet most of what he said was Oval Office boilerplate. Bush's stress on restoring order is important in the short term.... Too bad Bush's remarks ducked the seminal but haunting question Rodney King posed on Friday: 'Can we all get along? Can we get along?'... King's question should refocus this nation's attention on the American Dilemma -- race.... Unless this nation confronts its inherent racism, the rage that burst into such destruction in Los Angeles will be kindled again and again -- no matter how many troops are sent, no matter how many jail cells are built, no matter how heartfelt the President's rhetoric. Bush squandered a chance to talk about race Friday. Instead, he faintheartedly promised to discuss 'underlying causes' after order is restored." (New York Newsday, 5/3)

When Leaders Don't Lead -- "In his speech Friday night, President Bush made a reference to the 'underlying causes' of the unrest and then drifted into platitudes about bigotry. Whether he is willing to move aggressively to secure economic, political and social justice for minorities remains to be seen. Though he said he was stunned by the verdict and reminded the nation that most residents of the riot-torn areas were law-abiding citizens, Mr. Bush was mainly interested in portraying himself as the resolute commander-in-chief, ready to send in the troops to retake Los Angeles, that domestic Kuwait seized and trashed by society's outsiders. Law and order must be restored, of course, but Mr. Bush doesn't seem to understand that using force to do so is necessary only when people have no stake in society, when they know for certain that tomorrow will not be a better day. Until the nation's leaders make a commitment to changing that, they will have to keep the troops ready." (St. Louis Post-Dispatch, 5/3)

Back To Future: The Nation's Cities -- "This urban crisis should prompt President Bush and the leadership of Congress to rise above party loyalties and approve without delay legislation that restores the health and vitality of this and other cities.... President Bush has given short shrift to domestic problems during his first term. He has concentrated quite successfully on global concerns -- to the detriment of concerns much closer at home. In his national address Friday on the violence that is polarizing L.A., the President seems to have shifted his attention to a situation that is capturing the world's attention." (Los Angeles Times, 5/3)

Preventing 'The Fire Next Time' -- "Today's unrest has been aggravated by a generation of shameful neglect of America's cities, by the only force that can address such a nationwide crisis: the federal government. Washington in the 1980s simply walked away from its responsibilities to urban America. Instead of helping design creative new ways to solve urban problems, Washington's ignore-the-cities policy has let chronic problems fester for at least a dozen years." (Cleveland Plain Dealer, 5/3)

FOREIGN MEDIA REACTION

LOS ANGELES

"The American dream has once and for all turned out to be an illusion.... While the President celebrated the downfall of Communism in his State of the Nation address just a few months ago, he is turning a blind eye to the excesses of a capitalist system lacking a social sense of proportion."

(Nuernberger Nachrichten, Germany)

"President Bush is now facing a fiasco in domestic politics.... America must now prove its integrational impetus to live up to the promise of being the melting pot for all peoples and races."

(Rheinische Post, Germany)

"While he [President Bush] is issuing condemnations, he actually belongs in the dock himself. By dismissing the helplessness of the poorest of poor as criminal actions, he is trying to appeal to the white middle class whose insecurities and fears are bound to further grow after seeing the pictures of violence in their immediate neighborhood.... George Bush reacted like an election campaigner and not like a President.... The riots of the past few days also raise the question of what this country will look like and how governable it will be when the colored minorities slowly become the majority, as it is already the case in some parts of the U.S. today. And it raises questions regarding this superpower's role and its international engagement for the New World Order conjured up by George Bush."

(Tagesspiegel, Germany)

"George Bush has managed the dramatic explosion in Los Angeles with remarkable skill. First of all, he showed determination by sending the troops.... But at the same time, he managed to get to the black American community the message of true emotion he had felt when he learned about the iniquitous verdict of a court.... He must now strive for the most difficult achievement, to find solutions to the problems of the U.S.... But may the President...whose stance during the Los Angeles riots will probably help his re-election, never forget that the world does not end in Los Angeles."

(Le Quotidien, France)

"Bush's speech combined firmness and solidarity, order and justice, and tried for a minute to reconcile the forces which continue to split the American nation.... But the impression is that not only the President, but the whole political class, including black leaders summoned by the White House last Friday, do not know where to start. They seem paralyzed by the dimension of the problem and by the lack of funds."

(Corriere della Sera, Italy)

"If Bush does not engage in a war on poverty, peace, for which he is spending billions all over the world, will escape him in his own country."

(Het Volk, Belgium)

"In this election year President Bush, who was elected in 1988 with the help of a racist TV spot about the fear of black crime, is presented with the bill for his policy which was little more than a continuation of Ronald Reagan's notorious Reaganomics and has considerably widened the gap between the poor and rich in the U.S. The poor, the underprivileged, the minorities have been shamelessly neglected in the U.S. during the past 10 years."

(Het Belang van Limburg, Belgium)

"These events are the product of the Bush Administration, which tries to be the sole world leader, and has pushed aside the problems of people and social policies. These events indicate that the American leader, who came forward with the claim of establishing a New World Order, cannot put his own house in order.... The U.S. President is as in deep trouble as Yeltsin."

(Hurriyet, Turkey)

"The largest-scale violence protests against racial discrimination in the U.S. since the 1960s have broken out, making a mockery of those who wave the big stick of human rights to interfere in other countries' internal affairs."

(People's Daily, China)

"The facts have proved that American society is definitely not as equal and free as it has been...portrayed by some American human rights watchdogs. Harsh reality has exposed the false picture of peace and prosperity that they have presented. The massive racial conflict in Los Angeles shook the whole world, and people have seen that human rights violations in the U.S. are even more serious than people have imagined."

(People's Daily, China)

"The most powerful and immediate effect of the Rodney King case and its terrible aftermath will be political. In this presidential election year, race was always going to be an issue. Now, suddenly, it has changed the nature of the race to the White House.... President Bush's greatest advantage so far has been the weakness of the potential Democrat candidates. Now he has a much larger and more elusive opponent -- his own poor record on race relations."

(Sydney Morning Herald, Australia)

"Such incidents fuel the anger of those elsewhere in the world grown tired of globetrotting American politicians lecturing them on democracy and human rights. They will say: 'Look to your own back yard, America!'"

(Times, Britain)

"Here is the challenge that the politicians -- above all George Bush -- have run from. He has preached fear to his own constituencies. He has paraded on the global stage. But he has barely addressed the enemy within America: which is not its black population (or other struggling minorities) by the plight of those people, and underclass without political clout, stuck in the cesspit of the system."

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

THROUGH: DAVID DEMAREST DD

FROM: BETH HINCHLIFFE BH

SUBJECT: PROPOSED REMARKS FOR THE CINCO DE MAYO CEREMONIES

I. SUMMARY

On Tuesday, May 5, 1992 at 2:00 p.m. you will address participants at the Mexican Cultural Institute in celebration of Cinco de Mayo ceremonies. The audience of approximately 150 people comprise Hispanic business and community leaders and business executives from The Business Roundtable who support NAFTA.

II. DISCUSSION

Your remarks (approximately 8 minutes / cards) discuss the background of Cinco de Mayo, its significance to the Mexican community, and its emphasis on faith, family and freedom. Your remarks include reference to "The Liberators of the American Continent" mural; this mural emphasizes the abiding friendship the United States has with Mexico, and how crucial the North American Free Trade Agreement is to the economies of both countries.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: CINCO DE MAYO CEREMONIES
MEXICAN CULTURAL INSTITUTE
MAY 5, 1992

Thank you for that warm welcome into this beautiful place. I want to congratulate President Salinas for preserving this remarkable historical landmark; and for creating this Institute to strengthen the ties of friendship between our nations. And most of all, thank you for letting me share in this very special day -- made even more meaningful because 1992 marks 500 years of Hispanic heritage in this hemisphere.

This heritage is a wonderful, rich tapestry that Barbara, our kids and I were lucky enough to experience during our West Texas years. I remember our Cinco de Mayo festivities, exploring the ties between our countries -- ties of family, friendship, faith. The Bushes are lucky to be able to keep that celebration alive: our daughter-in-law and some of our grandkids are Hispanic-American, and they bring the wonder of this dual heritage into our family. I was so proud when Noelle and her mariachi group sang at Barbara's First Lady's luncheon during our Inauguration.

We all know the facts of Cinco de Mayo: that long-ago May 5th when General Zaragoza and his outnumbered troops stood up to the empire of Napoleon III. Stirring facts. But what's most important is the spirit of that day: the spirit of those few poorly-armed men who turned the battle into a glorious symbol. Cinco de Mayo is a symbol of the struggle for self-determination against astounding odds. It's the symbol of a brave people's unbeatable determination to fight for their own destiny. It's a day like the downing of the Berlin Wall; the vote against apartheid; the defeat of Iraq's aggression -- events that transform our world and the way we see each other.

It's also, of course, a national holiday -- a day of pride in Mexican culture and heritage. The Los Angeles Unified School District sponsors an annual Cinco de Mayo essay contest, and I want to share with you a couple of quotes. A senior high student wrote that this day "instilled within me pride and appreciation for the beauty of my people and the richness of my roots." A middle school student wrote: "The real significance of Cinco de Mayo is the pride Mexicans everywhere have in their heritage."

That's a glorious thing to celebrate. When I think of the Hispanic community the first words to come to mind are -- faith, family, and freedom. These values have been interwoven into the strong, bright fabric of the Hispanic tradition for generations - - and they're also the very values this nation was founded on.

Cinco de Mayo shows we all have debts to our ancestors who took risks and made sacrifices for us: whether on the battlefield or the farm field. We must honor these men and women who ached to pass on a richer life, a freer life, a better life; who sacrificed all they had in order to guarantee opportunity, freedom and hope for their children and their children's children. One essay winner wrote: "Celebrating the deeds of our ancestors helps us keep in touch with our history; and reminds us of past suffering and hardship that brought about the comfort we have today."

Cinco de Mayo doesn't belong solely to another land: it's a celebration of ideals that know no border. Today we rejoice that the men and women who came to this country from across the world brought their finest strengths, their rich culture, their ethnic tradition, and fit them into the vibrant mosaic that is America.

We must also look toward the future, to prepare the legacy we will leave our children. I believe of all the gifts we could give them, the three most important are: jobs, family and peace.

The America we will leave them will be a better land and a more just land, if we make progress in five key areas. We must reform our health care system; our legal system; our education system; and our system of government. And we must expand world trade. These are the keys to thriving in the future.

Mexico and the United States share so much. President Salinas is a dear friend -- a bold and imaginative leader. The deep and enduring relationship we're forging between our countries is based on cooperation, mutual respect -- and open trade. I will fight to tear down economic barriers with Mexico.

I notice Benito Juarez watching us -- seeing him reminds me of that great fresco I saw upstairs -- "The Liberators of the American Continent." For those who haven't seen it, it's a symbol of the friendship and union we share: it shows our great leaders, and a picture of North America and Latin America holding hands. This idealized portrait shows exactly what we're going to achieve in trade -- because I am absolutely committed to signing a sound North American Free Trade Agreement as soon as possible. The time of opportunity is now. I've told our negotiators to accelerate their work. I believe we can conclude a sound, sensible deal before the election -- and I will sign it as soon as it's ready.

A great lesson of our age is that trade and enterprise can build jobs and preserve freedom. NAFTA will be the key to higher standards of living for the peoples of our continent. It will liberate our markets; and increase trade, investment, and jobs -- yes, jobs -- in Mexico, in Canada, and in the United States.

A free trade market made up of these nations would be the stuff of dreams -- one of the largest markets in the world, 360 million consumers in a $6 trillion economy. Mexico is among the fastest growing national markets for US exports -- they have increased by 2/3 over the past 3 years; and our exports of auto parts and telecommunications equipment have doubled. Imagine what will happen under NAFTA. It will create thousands more jobs on both sides of the border. All of us will be winners.

In that spirit of vital cooperation, we'll grow together. And all communities within this United States need to pause right now, in the wake of the tragic events in Los Angeles. We need to re-think and re-affirm the bonds that knit all nationalities together. For even in the midst of the devastation, there were signs of promise -- neighbor helping neighbor, regardless of race. From New York to San Antonio to San Jose, we must redouble our efforts to build on our strengths -- the same strengths of character at the heart of the Hispanic community.

My friends, I look forward to spending future Cinco de Mayo days with you -- I loved the mariachi band on the stairs, and I can't wait to hear them again. Thanks again for including me in your day -- here's something my 8-year-old grandson Jebby taught me to say: "Vaya con Dios!"

MEETING WITH SENATE REPUBLICAN CONFERENCE

REVISED

First, I want to thank you again for the support you have given me this year and throughout my presidency. We have had some tough battles and there are many more ahead. But when we have stuck together we have won. And we are going to win this year too.

— Let me say a few words about the events of the past week in Los Angeles. As you know, since I first learned of the riots in Los Angeles I've been meeting with people both inside and outside the Administration on how we can help the citizens of L.A.

Card 2

— On Monday morning and then again today, I met with members of my Cabinet with key responsibilities for domestic programs that affect the lives of urban residents. I've asked them to work with me to develop both short-term and long-term responses to help restore the damage done by the riots.

I've also asked two of my Deputy Cabinet Secretaries -- David Kearns at Education and Al Dellibovi at HUD -- to lead a small team of Executive Branch officials to Los Angeles. Their mission is to ensure that federal programs that can bring relief of any sort to Los Angeles residents are put into action as quickly as possible.

Card 3

- This group will be working closely with people from the Mayor's office and the Governor's staff to make sure that we are providing the type of assistance they need.
- The budget I sent up includes many programs designed to address the underlying economic and social problems that contributed to the volatility of the situation in Los Angeles. Almost all of those proposals are still sitting in Congress, bottled up by the Democratic leadership.

Card 4

- I know you are beginning work on my rescission package this week. When we sent the package to the Hill, we selected items that were neither needed nor budgeted for national defense. Unfortunately, the Democrats on the Appropriations Committee have decided to turn this into a political ploy by cutting our strategic defense initiative and procurement funds for the B-2 bomber.
- The B-2 and SDI are both important to our security needs. I don't want to have to veto a rescission bill. I hope you will rally behind Ted Stevens and give us a solid vote of support.

I also wanted to mention our Soviet Aid Package which the Foreign Relations Committee will be marking up soon. Bob Dole, Dick Lugar, Pete Domenici and all of the members of Bob's task force have supported our efforts here. I think we can achieve a bipartisan consensus on this bill...and I'd like to get it through the Senate prior to Boris Yeltsin's visit in mid-June. Getting our aid package through the Senate will help with the even more difficult hurdles we face in the House.

- One more item I'll mention before taking your questions and comments...the issue of the balanced budget amendment. Dick Darman will be testifying in the House on Wednesday outlining our support. Bob Kasten, Strom Thurmond, Orrin Hatch and others have been out front on this one. I want to reaffirm my support for a balanced budget amendment as well as my strong support for a 3/5 vote on any tax-raising measures.
- Now, I better stop and hear from you.

Bush, Buchanan do battle for Florida's primary votes

GOP rivals offer choice of 2 conservative brands

Patrick Buchanan's caustic challenge of George Bush for the party's 1992 presidential nomination gives Florida Republicans a choice on Tuesday between two brands of conservatism.

Buchanan's appeal is largely a protest against Bush. But the two Republicans differ sharply on several issues, splitting the conservative movement that has dominated national politics and kept the White House in Republican hands for 12 years.

President Bush takes an internationalist view that the nation must assert its role as world leader. On domestic policy, he has been content to tinker with the current ways of doing things, based on the strong belief that a free-market economy and a private medical system work best when left alone.

Addressing a wildly cheering crowd of more than 2,000 supporters in Hialeah on Wednesday, Bush portrayed U.S. world leadership as a salvation, not a distraction to domestic economic recovery.

"The people I am running against for president of the United States do not share this vision of free and fair trade," Bush said. "They want to barricade our borders against job-creating trade. And they're the same kind of people who said to Columbus, the Earth is flat, don't go."

"As for me, I'm going to keep working to increase the flow of foreign trade and investment, which is the lifeblood of modern Miami," Bush said. "We will not go back to the sorry, sad, pessimistic days of protectionism."

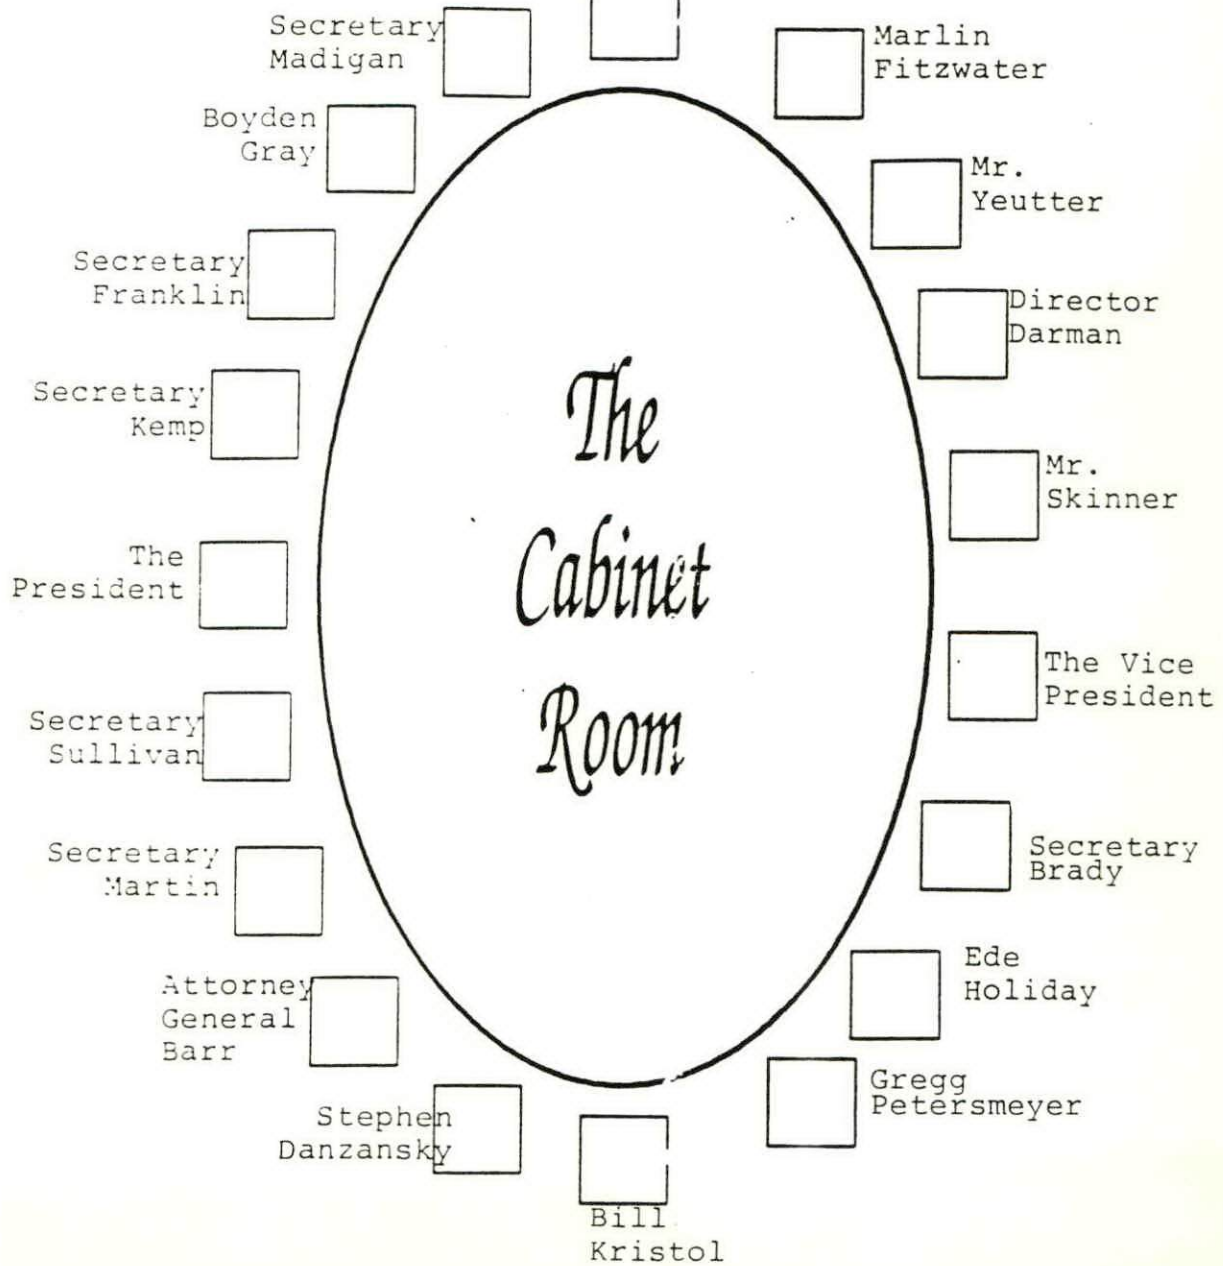

While Bush represents the status quo, Buchanan sounds the clarion call of right-wing crusaders who want to change American society or revert to past policies. Buchanan espouses isolationism, reviving the

Dear Jim,

Connie Horner has shown me your letter about the Corporation for Public Broadcasting.

I understand and respect your decision. I realize that the demands of your radio program and the demands placed on you by your leadership of Focus on the Family complicates things enormously. I also understand what you mentioned about disclosure. At times, I think we inhibit good people from serving because of the intrusive nature of the disclosure requirements.

My sincere best wishes.

PRESS BRIEFING

BY

THE PRESIDENT'S GENERAL COUNSEL BOYDEN GRAY;
INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION CHAIRMAN ED PHILBIN;
FEDERAL MARITIME COMMISSION CHAIRMAN MING HSU;
AND ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL FOR ANTITRUST DIVISION JAMES RILL

The Briefing Room

11:30 A.M. EDT

MR. FOSTER: Our briefing this morning is going to be regular briefing rules, which is ON THE RECORD, not for sound or camera. The briefing participants will be Boyden Gray, the President's General Counsel; Ed Philbin, Chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission; Ming Hsu, Commissioner of the Federal Maritime Commission; Jim Rill, Assistant Attorney General for Antitrust Division.

Boyden.

MR. GRAY: Thank you. This is another in a series of announcements of regulatory reform initiatives taken pursuant to the President's State of the Union message and the moratorium which he extended last week. This is not the first transportation announcement, but it is an important one. and I just want to thank Ed Philbin for his help on this, as well as, of course, the Federal Maritime Commission, Ming Hsu, who is here substituting for her Chairman; and Jim Rill.

And I'm going to introduce Ed Philbin first, who will describe all of this. But I do want to give a special word, not that this is of critical concern to those who don't cover perhaps the Department of Justice, but Jim Rill is leaving not too long from now, and he has been absolutely indispensable in this effort to clean up some of these issues.

What Ed Philbin is going to announce is a model of interagency cooperation, which I think is very innovative and has not really happened prior to your chairmanship.

So with that, will you take over.

MR. PHILBIN: Good morning, ladies and gentlemen. The regulated interstate motor carrier cargo shipments in the United States, by federal law, must move by Interstate Commerce Commission-regulated carriers, which charge applicable and usually lower interstate rates. Intrastate traffic -- that is, cargo that moves wholly within a single state -- moves under applicable state law and usually higher intrastate rates.

Various state regulatory bodies are narrowly construing or ignoring factors which mark transportation as interstate in nature and subject interstate movements to higher intrastate rates. These state regulatory bodies prosecute and they threaten to prosecute to enforce their views which are contrary to a long, unbroken string of decisions by the Interstate Commerce Commission, the lower federal courts and the Supreme Court of the United States. And these cases describe the difference between interstate transportation and trucking services provided wholly within a single state.

To assist carriers and shippers facing challenges of this nature by state regulatory bodies, the ICC has issued a policy statement which restates the controlling criteria which determine whether a shipment is interstate or wholly within a single state and discusses the factors that affect that determination.

Also in response to a petition by some Texas warehousemen in a very similar situation threatened with prosecution by the Railroad Commission of Texas, the ICC has issued an order declaring that cargo transportation from points outside Texas temporarily stored in Texas and then shipped to other points in Texas by interstate motor carriers is cargo in interstate commerce and not subject to economic regulation by the state of Texas.

The basis for this decision was the shippers fixed and persisting intent that the shipment continue in interstate commerce throughout the entire movement from origin via warehouse to ultimate destination. Although this order of the Commission is not enforceable per se against the state regulatory body, the declaration may be used in appropriate actions in the courts by affected parties.

Now, for this group of Texas warehousemen alone, the estimated annual savings from this decision fall between $21 million and $27 million per year. The Department of Transportation estimates the burden imposed on interstate commerce by state regulatory bodies at $600 million to $2.8 billion annually.

Mr. Rill will have a statement on behalf of the Department of Justice on this issue.

MR. RILL: Thanks very much, Ed.

The ICC policy statement issued today establishes that the Commission will move quickly on whether activities of a particular carrier and shippers using those carriers are interstate or intrastate, and if they're interstate, they're subject to federal not state supervision.

My announcement today is that the Department of Justice is fully prepared where appropriate and consistent with ICC rulings to enforce these ICC determinations. Participation in lawsuits would be based on the supremacy clause of the Constitution which requires preemption of state legislation and regulation where Congress intended to occupy the field of activity or where the state regulation constitutes an obstacle to achieving the full purposes and objectives of federal legislation or regulation. And in this case, the ICC has taken a strong stand towards open free flow of commerce among the states. Forty-two states have some form of economic regulation of trucking, many including regulation of rates, regulation of entry.

The action today by the ICC with the support of the Department of Justice will help remove regulatory disincentives for carriers to achieve the full efficiencies of scale and scope of warehouse distribution. As a consequence of this action within the economic parameters described by Chairman Philbin, shippers and consumers will substantially benefit from increased efficiencies and both interstate and intrastate customers, consumers of carriers, will benefit.

I want to assure you, of course, that legitimate state regulation of what is truly intrastate character will remain in effect. But the Department of Justice is honored to support the ICC in the initiative that it is announcing today.

MR. PHILBIN: I'd like to mention some other initiatives of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

In response to President Bush's suggestion to conduct a comprehensive review of regulations, I've formed a Motor Carrier Task Force of senior Commission staff to conduct a top-to-bottom review of all interstate motor carrier regulations. That task force has now submitted its recommendations for commission action.

I have now also formed a Railroad Task Force to conduct a top-to-bottom review of all interstate railroad regulations. The Railroad Task Force has already submitted an initial list of recommendations which is now being reviewed by the Commission for implementation. The regulatory review process has not been terminated by the submission of these task force reports, but will continue indefinitely. As a matter of fact, the process has now become institutionalized at the Commission.

Current railroad regulations define Class I railroads as those having annual operating revenues of $50 million or more. Class I railroads are subject to very heavy reporting requirements to the ICC. Annual operating revenues have increased since the Staggers Act of 1980 was passed, substantially deregulating the railroad industry, and now many Class II railroads will become subjected to there reporting requirements, although the current reports are deemed sufficient by the Commission.

The Commission is now concluding the rule making to raise the defined revenue threshold, and thereby avoiding the imposition of unnecessary reporting on current Class II railroads. The annual savings by this procedure are not presently quantifiable, but the Commission believes that they are substantial.

Current law also requires railroads to obtain a certificate of public convenience and necessity authorizing construction, acquisition or operation of railroad lines. The Commission is concluding the rule-making to simplify and expedite the rail carriers' ability to create their own access to new customers and to minimize burdens on companies seeking to enter the railroad business. The economic impact of this initiative is also not quantifiable at the present time, but it's also believed to be substantial.

I'd like to introduce now Commissioner Ming Hsu from the Federal Maritime Commission.

COMMISSIONER HSU: I would just like to review briefly what the FMC has done in the past 90 days in response to the President's memo urging all transportation agencies to streamline the regulatory process and eliminate duplicative, inconsistent or unnecessary regulations.

During the past 90 days, the Commission has taken action in the following areas: One is port and marine terminals. The Commission issued a final rule that substantially deregulates regulatory filing requirements covering agreements between ocean carriers and terminal operators, covering certain terminal services and stevedoring services. We've also already been informed by the National Association of Stevedores that they welcome this rule and they estimate that it will save them $1 billion a year in unnecessary costs.

Another area concerns the passenger cruise vessels. Here, the Commission has issued a proposed rule that would allow cruise vessel operators to meet their financial responsibility in a more flexible manner.

Another area concerns the rate competition in ocean conferences. The Commission has initiated a proceeding to ensure that ocean rule-setting conferences do not impede individual carriers' ability to price their services independently. For those of you in the industry, I'm now referring to IA independent action.

Although the effect of this rule will be difficult to quantify, obviously it's designed to ensure a continued high degree of rate competition among carriers.

Another area involves increasing commercial flexibility in ocean transportation contracts. And here we are talking about service contracts, the Commission is looking into ways where parties who service contracts could amend their essential terms of the service contracts, and at the same time perhaps the Commission could take a look and be involved in service contracts of a worldwide scope.

Another area that we've been involved with, of course, has a lot to do with something that is pretty well known in the trade, and that is the NVOCC. Recently the Commission had a meeting where we have issued advance notices for two proposed rule-making; one involving giving exemption to small businesses, small NVOCCs -- and we're looking into the definition of what constitutes a small business, whether we're -- concerning either using the SBA definition or perhaps just identifying all those NVOCCs who do not ship over 100 loads per year as small businesses and will fall under the exemption.

Another thing we're looking at has to do with the cargo consolidators, LCLs, those who ship less than full container, and we're trying to think of a way to give them some flexibility, perhaps to just require that they file a min-max rate or file the rate with the FMC after the cargo has been shipped.

At the same time, the Commission, at a recent meeting also adopted many of the recommendations that were made by a working group, which was appointed by Chairman Cook, to review all regulations and to see how they impact adversely on business opportunities and competitiveness for the segments of the maritime industry. The working group identified 27 areas where the Commission could either eliminate or modify certain regulations to make the industry more competitive. And the Commission has voted to seek a proposed rule or advanced notice for proposed rule-making in 25 of these 27 instances.

I would like to say there is one area where we have not changed, have not looked into any possible changes in regulation, and that concerns the authority given to us to combat foreign restrictive trade practices against our U.S. carriers. We have -- the Commission has been successful, in the last few years especially, in combating discriminatory practices against our carriers in Japan, in Taiwan, in Korea, and in the People's Republic of China, as well as many areas in Latin America. We have been very successful in opening doors and breaking down barriers for our U.S. carriers, and we intend to continue to utilize those authorities to help our carriers.

Just a word about the process that we've used. We have a full working, ongoing, working committee that's constantly reviewing regulations. And our efforts will not stop here, obviously, and so we're going to be continuing to identify areas where we can really take some administrative action and not necessarily wait for Congress to change the '84 Shipping Act.

At the same time, another group has been formed to review every proposed legislation that may come before the Commission for a vote. And this group, headed by a senior economist, will brief every commissioner before a Commission meeting on the impact of these regulations and how they might impact or place additional burden on the private sector.

In conclusion I would just like to say that we are very cognizant that every effort should be made to make our industry, our business more competitive. And we will continue to review these regulations and make sure that they are eliminated whenever necessary, or modified. And we're pleased to cooperate with the President in this effort because we do realize it's very important for the survival of our businesses, especially in the maritime industry, and for us to be competitive and for us to be able to continue to have jobs and create economic growth in this country.

Thank you.

MR. GRAY: We're here to answer any question you might have. But first, I want to, before you ask, just ask Ed to come up and describe -- I think my staff will have a copy of a recent article describing some of the dislocations caused by the interstate problem that the Chairman was describing. If you could just give a couple of examples of the silliness of all this, which we hope will be solved through the actions taken today.

MR. PHILBIN: This morning in a public meeting, a representative of the Coors Brewing Company indicated that that company, among many others, was having problems with this state regulation which is essentially covered by the policy statement that the Commission has just issued.

As pointed out in the White House press release this morning, there are at least three major consequences of this unnecessary regulation. Number one, it increases the price to consumers in the United States. Number two, it harms our international competitive position. And also, it leads to the warping of distribution logistic systems within the United States.

For example, in order to avoid intrastate rates, which are much higher than federal rates within a state, a company would not want to ship their product from the southern part of a state to the northern part of a state because it would be totally within the state. So in order to avoid that state regulation, they will develop a distribution system just over the state border and ship from the north to their distribution center outside the state and then back into the state in order to take advantage of substantially lower interstate rates, federal rates.

This is the type of thing that in my estimation, my staff's estimation, this economy can no longer afford and it doesn't make any sense. But as Mr. Rill pointed out, where the states have a legal right to regulate, there is no intention to preempt that.

Q What you're announcing isn't going to do anything about the example you just cited, is it?

MR. PHILBIN: The fact that the Justice Department will enforce --

Q Anyone who is going to ship from a warehouse in the southern part of the state to a distribution point in the northern part of the state -- what you're doing today isn't going to do anything --

MR. PHILBIN: That's unrelated. It's an example of the type of thing that is being done. Federal Express, for example, is having problems because in what appears to be an interstate movement from one end of the country to another, when it gets to the state and is then distributed by truck within the state, the states are trying to regulate that trucking aspect of it. And Federal Express, I understand, is now going to come before the ICC with complaints about this.

Q Don't you anticipate some objections from state regulatory agencies which are heavily dependent on trucking fees to meet hard-pressed state budgets? Have you coordinated with the states at all? What kind of opposition do you anticipate?

MR. PHILBIN: Those objections are already coming in. They are anticipated; we could even write them before they're written, we know what they're going to say. The real question is whether this comes within the interstate commerce clause, which under the supremacy clause of the Constitution is a federal matter. If it's a federal matter, it has to move under federal regulations.

Q Mr. Chairman, how does the policy statement you're issuing today differ from policy statements and actions taken in this area by the Commission in the past?

MR. PHILBIN: It doesn't differ at all. These cases, this law, these regulations go back to 1824, when Chief Justice Marshall in Ogden versus Gibbons, started laying down these rules. The problem is that the states are not adhering to established federal law.

MR. RILL: May I just amplify that to some extent. The commitment -- an announcement made by the Department of Justice today, the civil division and the antitrust division have been cooperating in this area, establishes that the department is going to focus very substantially on the policies and decisions of the ICC. And where the ICC has made a determination that shipments are in interstate commerce and the flow of commerce, notwithstanding a stop-off in a state, we are going to take appropriate action on the basis of those ICC rules that will preempt -- will support the preemption of state regulation that interferes with the flow of commerce that's appropriately regulated under federal standards as determined by the ICC.

This is a major cooperative effort between the ICC and the Department of Justice that's going to benefit shippers, carriers and consumers.

Q What are you going to tell the states when they complain that you are taking a major source of funds from them?

MR. RILL: First of all, let me point out as I did in my opening remarks that where there is truly intrastate carriage, that's going to continue to be regulated under state law and state regulation. Where there's truly interstate carriage, where the shipment is in the flow of commerce as determined by the ICC, that is a matter of sound law and, in accordance with ICC determination -- sound economics -- appropriate for federal regulation.

Q With your estimates, how much is it going to cost the state? You have estimates on how much it can save the consumer. What is it going to cost the states?

MR. RILL: I don't have any estimates of what it will cost the states. It will undoubtedly be substantially less. The fact of the matter is there are enormous estimates of consumer savings through efficiencies. The realization of those efficiencies, which, as I understand it, underlies the DOT estimation, shouldn't cost the states anything.

MR. GRAY: The states don't -- I suppose if there's a reduction in income because of more efficient operation, it's not the state that's losing the money. It's a protected trucking company located in the state. I suppose that level of profit that that trucking company gets might get taxed by the state, so indirectly there could be some very indirect -- but what we're saying is the greater efficiency and flow of capital interstate commerce is going to make everybody better off without these economic dislocations.

MR. RILL: This will expand output which should benefit the states as well as consumers.

Q The example cited where the trucking company would leave this across the state line and then come back in the state line to avoid what is unnecessary route -- that will be unaffected by these new regulations? They'll still have to do that?

MR. PHILBIN: It was perhaps a poor example. I used it because it's very simplistic. The point of the example is that these are the types of distribution warpings that are going on because companies are trying to avoid these much heavier state regulations. You see, you must remember that on average every product that's sold has 20 percent transportation costs involved in it. So wherever a company can reduce its transportation costs substantially, they have to do that in order to remain competitive. These are large components of the products that we're all buying.

Q But under today's actions a lot of these companies will still end up doing the same thing -- crossing the line, or not?

MR. PHILBIN: No. What this policy is aimed at is to get the state regulatory bodies to adhere to existing federal law.

Q Congressman Clement has proposed a bill that would cover, I think, the express carriers, lift them from the state regulation. Does your policy statement sort of mean that we no longer need the Clement bill?

MR. PHILBIN: No, I wouldn't say that. Our policy statement certainly encompasses the problem that Fed Ex is having. And I understand that Federal Express may, in fact, file an action before the ICC for determination. But I do not at this point have any information that would lead me to believe that the Clement bill is not required.

Q So if I might follow up, would an appropriate example be if a package express carrier flies a package into Pennsylvania, then warehouses it and moves it within Pennsylvania, is that going to be considered an interstate or a intrastate movement?

MR. PHILBIN: I really don't want to prejudge that case because that may, in fact, be the case coming before us.

Q Mr. Rill, if I could, for well over a decade many businesses have urged the federal government to, as they say, complete the job of truck deregulation that began in 1980. I know you were very familiar with that whole effort at the time. And the basic thing here they say is their concern is the antitrust immunity given to conferences to set interstate rates over here. And they say that that has been their biggest concern for many, many years here. They say that that is the biggest component of additional, what they claim is, needless costs. Are there any plans to examine that or support various bills which are again in Congress?

MR. RILL: There is a pending proceeding before the ICC on which the Department of Justice and the Department of Transportation have taken a position to review the antitrust immunity, the residual antitrust immunity that's applicable under the Motor Carrier Act, primarily, a general rate increase conferences. I don't want to put the ICC in a difficult position because we are a party before the ICC and that proceeding, but it's a matter that the department -- both the Department of Justice and the Department of Commerce have been pressing very hard.

I want to say that the action taken a couple of weeks ago by the ICC to very much liberalize the provisions of contract carriage will have, we hope and we anticipate, a very substantial salutary effect towards moving more in that direction to liberalize and open up more deregulated carriage and carriage that's not subject to or under the umbrella of any antitrust immunity. But we are still pressing our position in that area and I do want to particularly bring your attention to and applaud the effort of the ICC on the liberalization of contract carriage.

Q I'm curious about a couple of things. One, I'm curious how much litigation you all figure that this is going to trigger, whether a substantial amount or none at all. And second, what I'm trying to -- I'm trying to understand what your policy is saying. If a carrier transports something, whatever it may be, from out of state into a state, therefore, coming under interstate control, the regulations you've described so far, puts in a warehouse, is there some sort of rule-making or regulation that you're going to set up that says it has to be there for a certain period of time before moving it from there to somewhere else is intrastate? Or is this just going to be a system that says anything that you bring in from out of state and put in a warehouse, no matter how long you leave it there, when it continues on somewhere else in the state it's still interstate commerce?

MR. PHILBIN: A specific decision will be made on the specific evidence in a case. If anything occurs, as shown by the evidence in the case, which would have terminated an interstate movement, even though it looks similar to something that we have called an interstate movement, we would then say that the second portion of that trip within the state would be intrastate. It all depends on what the evidence shows.

What is the crux in every one of these cases is the persisting intent of the shipper at the time they launch the shipment to keep it in interstate commerce. If the evidence shows that that intent was there at the beginning and continued until final delivery, it would be an interstate shipment.

Now, as to the first part of your question, the increase in the litigation, I think that because of the strong stance of the Department of Justice in enforcing the federal laws with regard to this matter that we may see some increase in the cases people will be encouraged to come to the Commission and the Department of Justice for protection where they are being subjected to prosecutions by state regulatory bodies. I can't estimate how much that increase would be.

Q If you're going to be working this on what's virtually a case-by-case basis it would seem like you're going to trigger a whole slew of complaints from people who say, no, no, no, the second half of the trip was clearly intrastate.

MR. RILL: I think that the position taken today by ICC and supported by the Department will not necessarily lead to increased litigation, it could result in limited litigation, as those who would regulate what the ICC determines to be interstate shipment, realize that the federal government is going to step in where interstate shipments are involved. The application of generalized principles from specific cases are not going to be lost on us, on shippers, on carriers and, we hope, on state regulators.

MR. GRAY: We hope that maybe there might even be a reduction in the regulatory budgets of some of these state agencies.

Q Mr. Gray, can I follow up on something you said earlier when you were trying to give us a picture of the economic impact? Exactly wherein lies the savings of the $600 million to $2.8

billion? Who will not be receiving those funds? Is it not state government or is it someone else?

MR. GRAY: No, it's not the state governments. It's a shipper, or shipping company -- the carrier, in a state that is being protected from competition. And presumably, the ultimate, the beneficiaries of that protection are the shareholders of that company who may or may not reside in the state or may or may not reside in the country.

Q Mr. Philbin, has there been any working arrangements between the Commission and the Justice Department in regard to allegations that criminal elements have been buying up trucking companies throughout the United States in a systematic fashion?

MR. PHILBIN: Our Office of Compliance and Consumer Affairs, which is the investigative enforcement arm of the Commission, when they develop a case that has overtones of the nature that you have mentioned, we do, in fact, immediately notify the Department of Justice for any action that they may take.

THE PRESS: Thank you.
