Re: Inquiry from Frank Murray.

AT that memorable WH Correspondents dinner, Frank murray asked em what we were doing about 'gangs'.

The attached memo might be useful for you to go over with him. Best not to give it to him. He told me "At the next press conference I will ask you about gangs."

All yours, Marlin.

Office of the Deputy Attorney General

Associate Deputy Attorney General

Washington, D.C. 20530

May 11, 1992

MEMORANDUM

To: William P. Barr
Attorney General

FROM: George J. Terwilliger, III GJT
Deputy Attorney General

SUBJECT: Department of Justice Anti-Gang Initiatives

- * During President Bush's administration, the Department has undertaken an aggressive program to eliminate gang violence in urban areas across the country. Our initiatives have included several successful prosecutions against organized gangs, the establishment of joint federal, state, and local anti-gang investigative task forces in all of our major cities, and studies of gang violence and solutions conducted by the Office of Justice Programs in various cities.

In January, 1992, Attorney General Barr directed the reassignment of 300 FBI foreign counter intelligence agents to anti-gang task forces in 39 cities around the nation. These agents augmented the more than 1,600 FBI agents already assigned to violent crime and the 1,400 ATF agents also assigned to investigate crimes by gangs. In many of the targeted cities, task forces consist of both FBI and ATF agents. In all of the cities, state and local law enforcement is participating in the task forces. Of the new FBI agents, 14 have been specifically assigned to Philadelphia. An additional 85 FBI agents will be reassigned in FY 1993.

- * Also in January, 1992, the Attorney General ordered that 25 additional DEA agents be assigned to 10 cities to establish federal, state, and local drug related homicide task forces.
- * In February, 1992, the Attorney General directed that 150 INS criminal investigators be assigned to criminal alien gang task forces in 36 cities. These agents were assigned on May 1, 1992 and their replacements are currently being hired. Ten of these INS investigators have been assigned to Philadelphia.
- * The FBI and ATF are establishing a national gang analysis center to receive, analyze, and disseminate to law enforcement information on criminal gang activity. Many gangs are present in several areas of the country, and the gang analysis center will be of great assistance in our coordinated efforts to eliminate the violence caused by them.

- * Discretionary Funds. In Fiscal Year (FY) 1991, the Office of Justice Programs (OJP) committed $5.2 million to programs addressing gangs and violence. In addition, $11.1 million in 1991 and $14.2 million in 1992 was committed for community based policing programs. In FY 1992, OJP is committing $6.7 million in addition to $3 million in emergency funds recently targeted for Los Angeles. [Of the $73 million in total discretionary funds, the Administration requested $15 million in Juvenile Justice monies be zeroed out.]
- * Formula Grant Monies. State and local recipients of the $472 million in FY 1991 and $473 million in FY 1992 formula grants from OJP have been permitted and encouraged to earmark funds to anti-gang initiatives. [Of the $473 million in formula grant monies, approximately $50 million has been requested to be zeroed out by the Administration.]
- * OJP is also participating in a partnership with the Ford Foundation and the Pugh Charitable Trust. Over the next four years, BJA will contribute $4 million and the private foundations will contribute $4 million to test specific intervention strategies targeting high risk youths and gangs in an effort to help rescue communities.
- * Examples of OJP funded programs include projects in San Diego, Kansas City, Atlanta, New York City, and Tucson. Each of these cities received a $200,000 in 1990 or 1991.
- * In San Diego, the project was directed at hard core members of the Crips and Bloods involved the trafficking of cocaine and other drugs as well as drug related violent crime. As a result, violence has been reduced, more than 185 arrests have been made, drugs and weapons have been seized and there has been a reduction in number of "open air drug markets".
- * The Kansas City project targeted "Jamaican Posse" and Crips and Bloods. More than 57 arrests have been made and over $1.2 million in drugs, contraband and assets has been seized.
- * In Philadelphia, the violent traffickers project, a task force of federal, state and local law enforcement and prosecutors has successfully freed the Spring Garden Street neighborhood of drug trafficking and other gang activity which had previously overwhelmed the area.
- * The Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Force program (1992 Budget of $340 million) is dedicated to the prosecution of criminal, drug trafficking organizations with a priority on those which are prone to violence. This includes Outlaw Motorcycle gangs, Jamaican Posses, California Street gangs (Bloods and Crips) and organizations concentrated in major cities. Successes include the indictment of 39 individuals in 1990 who were associated with the 17th and Mt. Vernon Street Ramos Cocaine organization. This organization distributed cocaine and crack in Philadelphia between 1987 and 1990.

Re: My Meeting With Pete Domenici

Pete and Bob Dole are convening a group to "set the record straight" on what transpired in the '80s. Pete feels we are taking a terribly unfair hit re: Deficits, jobs etc.

We need a definitive paper on "what the Decade was all about". He points out that on Homeless- I signed the first homeless bill. We asked for more money than Congress gave us.

We are accused of "slashing housing". "Not so", says Pete.

Pete suggests that the above addressees come to a meeting in Dole's office

Pete also told me we should emphasize "values".. He is upset over TV "mayhem".

I think it would be good to get a definitive paper- good for our effort, good for all challengers.

Sam, someone needs to connect with Pete to follow up on this now.

Tuesday, May 12, 1992

Volume 28, Number 72

Today in Congress

House Floor: Abortion-related amendments will highlight House consideration of the Legal Services Corporation (LSC) authorization bill (HR 2039).

The bill would reauthorize, through fiscal 1996, the federal program that provides money to local legal aid organizations.

For more than a decade, Congress has debated appropriate activities for the agency, which was created in 1974. The dispute has left the agency unauthorized since 1980. Since then, Congress has placed restrictions on LSC activities in appropriations bills funding the agency.

Members will first consider an amendment by George W. Gekas, R-Pa., that would bar any local group that receives LSC funds from participating in abortion-related court cases or lobbying efforts. He argues that it is the only way to keep the agency neutral on the issue of abortion.

Barney Frank, D-Mass., will offer a substitute proposal that would eliminate all restrictions on LSC-funded litigation regarding abortion. Frank says that current restrictions impair a poor woman's ability to protect her legal rights.

The bill sets no specific funding level. Congress appropriated $350 million for the agency for fiscal 1992.

Election Holiday. The House will also consider a bill (HR 3681) that would designate Election Day, the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, as a federal unpaid holiday.

Supporters of the measure say the holiday, dubbed "Democracy Day," would give a boost to sagging voter turnout, which has hit record lows.

Senate Floor: The Senate will take up legislation, opposed by many Republicans, that aims to make it easier for people to register to vote.

The so-called motor-voter bill (S 250) would allow citizens to register at the same time they apply for a driver's license or other public certificates. Registration could also be done through the mail.

On May 7, the Senate voted narrowly, 61-38, to cut off a filibuster and proceed to the bill. Backers of the measure were twice unsuccessful in 1991 in attempts to muster the 60 votes needed to invoke cloture.

Democrats say the measure is needed to increase voter turnout.

But Republican opponents say the bill would lead to more cases of voting fraud and may have no real effect on turnout. Opponents also argue that the bill would place burdensome administrative costs on the states.

Bob Kasten, R-Wis., will try to amend the bill with language from legislation (S 640) that would revamp product liability laws.

Those who support the Kasten measure, including manufacturers and the insurance industry, say that huge jury awards in product liability lawsuits place a drag on the economy by imposing higher business costs and discouraging new product development.

The Kasten amendment would es-

Hill News

HILL LEADERS, BUSH to confer on enterprise zones.

Democratic congressional leaders yesterday said they would work quickly to pass legislation creating urban enterprise zones targeted at promoting business investment in blighted parts of the nation's inner cities.

The legislation (S 1032), which would provide tax incentives to businesses that locate in run-down section of cities, has been sought by President Bush.

Democratic leaders are to meet with Bush and congressional Republican leaders today to discuss a response to the Los Angeles riots and other domestic priorities.

Included on the Democrats' list of priorities is enactment of a bill to further extend unemployment benefits (HR 4727), a crime bill (HR 3371), and transportation and housing programs.

At a news conference, Senate Majority Leader George J. Mitchell, D-Maine, and House Majority Leader Richard A. Gephardt, D-Mo., said they support Bush's commitment of $600 million in emergency assistance to rebuild Los Angeles neighborhoods devastated by rioting.

But they said that without passing a supplemental financing bill (HR 5069), the Small Business Administration and the Federal Emergency Management Agency would not be able to provide the disaster relief.

HAWAIIAN WILDLIFE not adequately protected, say senators.

Rare wildlife and foliage in Hawaii is being systematically destroyed and the federal government is doing little to stop it, Hawaii's senators said yesterday.

"There is little doubt that Hawaii's 10,000 endemic species, found nowhere else in the world, are undergoing an extinction crisis," said Daniel K. Akaka, D-Hawaii, chairman of the Senate Governmental Affairs Subcommittee on Consumer and Environmental Affairs.

Hawaii has about 20 percent of the nation's endangered species, including 40 percent of the birds facing extinction.

Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii, and Michael J. Bean of the Environmental Defense Fund lamented the lack of federal funds for species protection.

Bean said that the number of endangered and threatened species had nearly tripled in the past decade but federal funding for protection programs had declined.

James F. Spagnole, deputy assistant secretary of the Interior, said that the government was doing all it could to protect endangered species but it would need more help from state and private organizations.

establish a uniform set of standards under which businesses would be liable for injuries. It also sets a higher burden of proof for plaintiffs suing to receive such awards.

Substance Abuse: Conferees will meet on legislation (S 1306) that would reauthorize federal drug and alcohol abuse and mental health programs for fiscal 1993-94.

Members have already worked out the differences between the two versions of the measure and no disagreement is expected on the package, which would authorize roughly $1.8 billion annually.

According to a House Democratic staffer, House conferees will accept a Senate provision that would transfer federal drug abuse, alcohol abuse and mental health research operations from the Alcohol, Drug Abuse and Mental Health Administration to the National Institutes of Health.

Senate conferees plan to agree to a House provision (HR 3698) that would divide the block grant for mental health and substance abuse programs into separate grants.

The grants were combined under the Reagan administration, giving state and local governments more power over how to disburse the funds.

Proponents say separating the grants will make states more accountable to Congress.

L.A., Chicago Aid: House appropriators will mark up an emergency supplemental spending bill to provide more than $494.7 million in aid to assist the victims of the recent Los Angeles riots and the Chicago flood.

The bill (HR 5069), introduced by House Appropriations Committee Chairman Jamie L. Whitten, D-Miss., on May 6, would funnel aid through the Small Business Administration (SBA) and the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) to individuals who lost homes or businesses in the Los Angeles riots and the Chicago flood. The money would also be available to other communities hit by disasters.

The bill would provide an additional $169.7 million in fiscal 1992 to the SBA's direct loan program account, which would allow SBA to make an additional $500 million in loans. The loans are aimed largely at helping businesses destroyed by fire and looting in Los Angeles two weeks ago.

A total of $300 million would go to FEMA disaster relief payments to areas of Chicago damaged by last month's flooding of an underground tunnel.

The bill is written so that the new funds would not be subject to budget spending limits but would be considered emergency spending, if the Bush administration agrees.

Under budget rules, appropriators do not have to match emergency spending with dollar-for-dollar cutbacks in other programs.

Defense Authorization: Three House Armed Services subcommittees today will mark up portions of the fiscal 1993 defense authorization bill (HR 5006), paving the way for full committee action tomorrow.

The Procurement, Military Personnel, and Research and Development subcommittees will draft, in closed sessions, major portions of the measure. Full committee Chairman Les Aspin, D-Wis., has vowed to craft a bill that would authorize a total of $7 billion less than the president's $281 billion request.

The panels will put their imprint on the direction of the Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI) and the B-2 stealth bomber programs. Those programs have traditionally taken a beating from the committee, but they are expected to fare bet-

Aid Sought for Laid-off Federal Workers

Lawmakers today are expected to take a small step toward easing the transition into the consumer economy for workers whose jobs have fallen casualty to the end of the Cold War. The transition comes as the United States scales back its defense establishment and hundreds of thousands of former defense workers must enter an already difficult job market.

According to General Accounting Office estimates, base closures and realignments mean that U.S. defense agencies will have to eliminate about 229,000 more civilian positions over the next four fiscal years.

These looming defense layoffs have prodded two subcommittees of the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee to develop legislation (HR 4991) that would force the Department of Defense and other federal agencies to improve the assistance they provide to employees faced with termination because of budget cutbacks.

Today, the Post Office Subcommittee on Human Resources will mark up the bill. While supporters agree that the bill is not the final word on helping laid-off federal workers, they argue that it is a good first step.

The bill would:

- Mandate at least 60 days' notice before a federal employee is laid off. In the case of the Defense Department, the bill would require 120 days' notice to employees.
- Require the Office of Personnel Management to expand their job listings to include all vacant positions and to ensure that displaced employees are given full consideration before any candidate from outside the government is hired.
- Permit the secretary of Defense in certain cases to offer severance packages equal to six months' basic pay as an incentive for voluntary retirement.
- Require the Department of Defense to continue to pay its portion of health insurance for laid off workers for up to 18 months.

In introducing the bill, Post Office Committee Chairman William L. Clay, D-Mo., stressed that the legislation is feasible and would address at least some of the impact of the reduction in defense spending.

"[S]teps must be taken to mitigate the immediate adverse consequences of dislocation on defense workers," Clay said.

Human Resources Subcommittee Chairman Paul E. Kanjorski, D-Pa., sees the legislation as a simple measure that would allow defense workers to be used in other areas of government, which he suggests is the way that private industry handles employee cutbacks.

Rep. James P. Moran Jr., D-Va., agreed with Kanjorski. "It's so unfair to be dumping thousands of people who chose to serve their country on an economy that can't absorb them."

Administration objections to the legislation center around the fact that it would require agencies to spend money at the same time that they are facing cutbacks. For example, the provision calling for health insurance co-payments to continue for 18 months after an individual is laid off, the Department of Defense maintains, would cost approximately $4,000 per employee. The result, said Assistant Secretary Christopher Jehn, is that budgetary problems are compounded.

"To pay this incentive from our current fixed budget, we would have to involuntarily separate more employees," he told the subcommittee during hearings last week.

—Laura Michaelis

ter this go-round.

The president requested $2.7 billion for four new B-2 bombers; the Procurement Subcommittee may endorse most of that, though it will likely require the Defense Department to prove the plane's stealthiness.

For SDI, the administration requested $5.4 billion. The panels are expected to approve less than that, but not by as much as in previous years.

And the Military Personnel Subcommittee will likely authorize $200 million more than the Bush request for manpower. The move would mean smaller cuts for the reserves and National Guard, a high priority for committee members.

Digital Audio Technology: A bill that would pave the way for wide-scale introduction of blank digital audio tapes into the United States will be marked up by the House Energy Subcommittee on Commerce, Consumer Protection and Competitiveness.

The music industry had blocked imports of the tapes, which would allow those with digital recording equipment to make extremely high quality copies of music and other data.

Unlike conventional taping, digital tapes retain their sound quality when additional recordings are made from a taped copy.

The bill (HR 4567) would add a royalty fee to the price of digital tapes and recording equipment that would be used to compensate music publishers, recording companies and artists for copyright infringement. The bill would require modifications to be made to digital tapes and recording equipment to prevent second generation taping. Such tape-to-tape copying had the music industry fearful of losing potential royalties.

Pacific Yew: A bill aimed at preserving a rare tree whose bark is the source of Taxol, a new cancer drug, will be marked up by the House Merchant Marine Subcommittee on Fisheries and Wildlife Conservation.

The bill (HR 3836) would require the Forest Service and the Bureau of Land Management (BLM) to take steps to improve management of the yew, which grows in ancient forests in the Northwest.

Under the bill, the two federal agencies would have to allow drug companies to harvest the yew trees before an area could be made available to commercial loggers.

If the Fish and Wildlife Service prohibited a timber sale for environmental reasons, the Forest Service and BLM would still have to seek permission to permit the harvesting of the yews.

The yew is a slow-growing shrub that was previously destroyed during logging operations.

Taxol has shown significant promise in treating ovarian cancer and has the potential to treat other forms of cancer.

The House Agriculture Committee's Forests Subcommittee will take up the measure tomorrow and the full Merchant Marine Committee will consider it on Thursday.

Marine Sanctuaries: Legislation aimed at beefing up a federal marine sanctuaries program will be jointly marked up by two House Merchant Marine subcommittees.

The Fisheries and Wildlife Conservation and the Oceanography subcommittees will mark up a substitute version of the bill (HR 4310), introduced by Oceanography Chairman Dennis M. Hertel, D-Mich., that strikes a balance with a competing version (HR 4409) introduced by Fisheries and Wildlife Conservation Subcommittee Chairman Gerry E. Studds, D-Mass.

Under the program, marine areas of special value are designated as sanctuaries. A host of environmentally damaging activities are banned or restricted in the sanctuaries.

The sanctuaries program is overseen by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, and current appropriations are $5 million. The new version of the bill would increase the authorization to $15 million for fiscal 1993, rising to $30 million in 1996. There are currently nine such sanctuaries.

The bill would place additional restrictions on environmentally damaging activity in marine sanctuaries and would increase fines for violations of the law.

Election Outlook: An incumbent vs. incumbent battle in West Virginia today is the focus of attention as the congressional primary season continues.

The other state with a primary today is Nebraska, where only one of the three incumbents seeking re-election faces an intraparty challenge.

West Virginia. One House member is destined to lose his job today, as Democrats in the 1st District choose between Reps. Alan B. Mollohan and Harley O. Staggers Jr., who were thrown together by redistricting after West Virginia lost a House seat due to a population decline in the 1980s.

Mollohan appears to have a lead in the primary, although Staggers has had some success in calling attention to Mollohan's 12 overdrafts at the House bank and his vote for a congressional pay raise. Staggers has positioned himself as an outsider, claiming that Mollohan's seat on the Appropriations Committee makes him part of the "old boy" network. But Mollohan counters that his seat on the spending panel brings federal jobs and money to the district.

The winner of the Democratic primary will be home free in November: no Republican filed.

The other incumbents from West Virginia — Democrats Bob Wise and Nick J. Rahall II — have no primary challengers.

Nebraska. In Nebraska's 1st District, Democrats will choose today between Gerry Finnegan, an investment adviser; Martin Pals, a restaurant employee; and Ken L. Michaelis, an author. Both Pals and Michaelis have run before. Finnegan is making his first run for an elected office but has been involved in local fundraising activities. The winner will face Republican Rep. Doug Bereuter, who has served in the House since 1979.

In the 2nd District, two-term Democratic Rep. Peter Hoagland faces Jess M. Pritchett, who gained 13 percent against Hoagland in the 1990 Democratic primary. The winner of the primary will face Republican Ron Staskiewicz, a former Douglas County attorney.

In the 3rd District, neither GOP incumbent Bill Barrett nor Democrat Lowell Fisher has primary opposition. ■

How a Bill Becomes Law

This graphic shows the most typical way in which proposed legislation is enacted into law. There are more complicated, as well as simpler, routes, and most bills never become law. The process is illustrated with two hypothetical bills, House bill No. 1 (HR 1) and Senate bill No. 2

(S 2). Bills must be passed by both houses in identical form before they can be sent to the president. The path of HR 1 is traced by a solid line, that of S 2 by a broken line. In practice, most bills begin as similar proposals in both houses.

Compromise bill approved by both houses is sent to the president, who may sign it into law, allow it to become law without his signature, or veto it and return it to Congress. Congress may override veto by two-thirds majority vote in both houses; bill then becomes law without president's signature.

Dear Jim:

My noble, fearless chairman who goes into harm's way, thus earning the wrath of the billion dollar man----

Here is a note from Clorodo City's ~~V~~erta Hardegree, a grass roots, sometimes lonely Republican out there. She wants to be a delegate.

Any chance? She is sure loyal etc .etc.

Apparently she finished first in the 17th District (not sure what the attached means.)

Hang in, Jim. I am very proud of you. So what's new!

Was thinking of going to work for Ross Perot. *
 until I spoke w/ Bridget today. She assured me leaving was her decision. I was devastated when I called about 2 weeks ago & learned she was no longer w/you.

Seriously - as you can see from list above - I am diligently trying to make it as a delegate to the National Convention this year (at least I came in as #1 nominee for 17th cong. district this time - I may have a chance). Since you got me into this political "circus,"
 I would dearly love to be there when your name is placed into nomination for a second term. Looks like we are all going to have to work extra hard - But we can and will - Best wishes in hard days ahead - Verta

May 12, 1992

Dear Verta,

I have checked in with Jim Oberwetter, after receiving your note. I hope my letter to Jim will help on the delegate matter. Tough times, old friend, but I intend to win in the fall:

Love to all (in haste)

PRESS BRIEFING
BY
HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT SECRETARY JACK KEMP;
U.S. ATTORNEY GENERAL WILLIAM BARR;
EDUCATION SECRETARY LAMAR ALEXANDER;
SMALL BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION ADMINISTRATOR PAT SAIKI; AND
DIRECTOR OF OFFICE OF MANAGEMENT AND BUDGET RICHARD DARMAN

The Briefing Room

11:16 A.M. EDT

MR. FITZWATER: Let me go ahead with introductions while Senator Dole is talking outside. Just to say that we have with us this morning to take any questions you have on the proposals we set forth this morning Jack Kemp, Secretary of Housing and Urban Development; William Barr, Attorney General; Lamar Alexander, Secretary of Education; Pat Saiki, Administrator to the Small Business Administration; and Richard Darman, Director of the Office of Management and Budget.

We'll ask Jack to lead off in just a minute or two with a brief statement, and then we'll go to your questions. Or maybe we can just go to questions with this group and the ones outside can join us as they come in here. That's the easy way to do it.

If you all want to join us up here, maybe we'll just start it that way and let this group ask any questions they have. Why don't we go ahead and begin, and the rest will join us as they can.

SECRETARY KEMP: Well, I would just characterize very quickly the meeting from the perspective of the domestic agenda of the President. As Maxine Waters said just now, she was extremely encouraged. Senator Mitchell suggested that he appreciated not only the spirit of the President's comments, but the substance as well.

Unity, as Tom Foley said, does not require uniformity. The President outlined six proposals that he said were, if not on an emergency basis, certainly on the extreme sense of urgency about what's happening in urban America in several areas.

One of which he talked about was his overall growth package, and made the point that you cannot have a recovering economy without some incentives in the Tax Code, and that we've got to do something that would create more jobs in the macroeconomy to help create more revenues for cities and states. And that should be a self-evident truth.

He went on to outline his six goals which, as you know, were Weed and Seed, the program that has been developed by the Justice Department to provide help to inner city communities to deal with both crime and gangs as well as to seed them with social services and targeted job opportunities.

Secondly, the President talked about urban enterprise zones to eliminate the capital gain tax on any man or woman who works, saves, invests and lives in the inner city, with special emphasis on the fact that the jobs would go to the residents of this newly green-lined area of the inner city. He said he wanted to broaden and deepen the incentives and he wanted to make sure that more cities would be able to qualify. That also received a very positive response from the members of the Congress.

The President went on to suggest that the HOPE proposal to give public- and HUD-assisted housing residents a chance to own and manage and control their own housing communities should be fully funded at $1 billion. It's no secret it's been cut significantly. He'd like to see that fully funded. And he went on to talk about education reform that Lamar Alexander -- of which Lamar Alexander is the architect -- welfare reform to give people who are now on welfare and aid to families with dependent children a chance to move, save and work their way out of welfare and not be punished by both losing welfare benefits and facing a high tax on their payroll.

Finally, the Youth Jobs Initiative, Job Training 2000 for America clearly received a warm response from the Democratic leadership. They had their ideas, but as I think you heard out on the press conference outside, that there seems to be a sense of both urgency and emergency about this tragedy, not only in the city of Los Angeles, but throughout the country and throughout urban American communities.

My hope is that we can begin to work on this and make progress by the time the Congress at the end of June is required to pass low-income housing tax credit extension and other tax issues that have to be extended throughout the rest of 1992 and into '93.

SECRETARY ALEXANDER: Yesterday I spent most of the day in Compton, which is a city outside the city of Los Angeles. I guess what I might add to what Jack said is that we talked in the meeting about the importance of including education as a part of this response. I talked with the citizens of Compton about what might be lasting, rather than just something that might just happen for a week or two while the attention moves on in another direction. And here are some of the things they said: They want the Weed and Seed program. It's a city of 93,000 people, and 6,000 to 7,000 gang members in that city and a police force of 130. They want the Weed and Seed program. They can't make the schools better until they clean that up.

They'd like to have the Head Start increase. The President and Congress probably agree on that. They'd like to have the job training opportunity provided by the President's proposal that would permit a student to use a Pell grant who only can take one course at a time. That's for a working person who is trying to get on in the job market.

They would like to have the opportunity to try some of what the President calls New American Schools. They'd like for the schools to be open on Saturday in the afternoon in the summer, with lots of activities, from music lessons to sports to counseling for people who otherwise would be on the street because nobody is home. They're ready to do that.

They can't understand why they don't have more flexibility in the spending of federal money, which the President has strongly proposed. That's very important; the teachers who have a way to spend it that's different than all these federal rules and regulations.

They're very interested in the standard-setting, a national examination system that we've been talking about, because they want the students there to learn those standards.

We also talked about the importance of giving poor families some of the same choices of schools that wealthy people already have.

Basically, what we all hope is that the citizens of Compton have a little bigger share of the American dream. And it will take a longer time to do that, and education is an important part of it.

ADMINISTRATOR SAIKI: After joining the President in Los Angeles, there was absolutely no question that he felt the trauma of what the riots did to the people within Los Angeles who were affected directly. We at the Small Business Administration, of course, were early on the spot. And I was glad to see today around the table, there was absolutely no disagreement that we're going to need extra monies to provide for the emergency loans that are going to be needed to help people to reestablish their businesses in downtown Los Angeles.

The other thing that I sensed this morning is that, another point of total agreement is that job creation is a centerpiece of the President's package. And certainly we, at the SBA, have the kinds of programs that could assist with fulfilling the enterprise zone concept, with fulfilling the education needs, working through job training. And so we, I feel, at the SBA, will be very helpful in implementing the concepts that were expressed today. I felt very encouraged after the meeting this morning.

SECRETARY KEMP: Questions?

Q This is for Secretary Kemp or for Director Darman. If there is any kind of overall total estimate of what the President's programs would cost or what the Democratic suggestions as you understand them would cost? And from the President's point of view -- and this may be Director Darman -- he said that the funding was complicated and that you would have to explain it to us. I'm asking if you could explain where the money would come from on the President's side? That's what he said.

DIRECTOR DARMAN: I apologize. I didn't hear the President's comment. Was it related to anything in particular?

Q How his programs would be funded.

DIRECTOR DARMAN: Well, let's try elements of it. And you've got to -- and I don't want to take too much time. It's very boring.

Q Oh.

DIRECTOR DARMAN: Okay. Let's take, first of all, the issue of the supplemental appropriation to deal with the immediate problem in L.A. The most immediate, that is, from a federal perspective, replenishing the SBA funds and the FEMA funds. That's being marked up as we sit here today on the House side. And we have indicated today a willingness to designate the replenishment of the FEMA and SBA accounts as emergency funding.

Under the budget agreement, the President and the Congress, when they agreed to designate something as an emergency, it does not have to be offset.

So that, in the case of FEMA, $300 million declared as an emergency is a direct $300-million addition to the deficit. In the case of the SBA loans, it's slightly more complicated. We estimate that the face value of the loans will be about $300 million. We've said we'd be willing to designate that as emergency. There's some difference between us on the estimate as to whether it may higher than that. So we've said in addition -- so far we're up to $600 million -- in addition, we would be willing to accept what's called a contingency of $200 million, which is $200 million in addition written into law so that if the ultimate SBA draw becomes larger than the $300 million -- it could be as high as $500 million -- that the President would as necessary make additional emergency designations. But the law would already have provided the authority to spend and not be offset if he did the emergency designation. That is something we've done before. We did it already, actually, for L.A. and used $146 million worth of that kind of contingent emergency authority.

So it's $300 million, plus $300 million face value the loans, plus what could be another $200 million, depending upon the actual loan, all of which would be declared emergency.

Q So the maximum total addition to the deficit from those two things are $500 million?

DIRECTOR DARMAN: No. The face value of the loans -- you really don't want to get into this; you should write it, if you're going to, the way I said it, if you wouldn't mind -- because the face value of the loans -- (Laughter.) Let me tell you why. Let me tell you why. Because the face value of the loans doesn't translate dollar for dollar into the deficit; it depends how much of it is paid back.

The rate that normally happens with these programs is they have a default rate in such situations of about one-third, about 33 percent. So about a third of whatever turns out to be the face value of the loans in the range of $300 million to $500 million, a third of that would translate into the deficit.

Q UDAG, HOPE, those programs?

DIRECTOR DARMAN: HOPE -- we have requested an --

Q Sorry. Sixties programs.

DIRECTOR DARMAN: HOPE, we've requested an increase for Fiscal Year '93 to $1.010 billion from currently $361 million, which the current amount is well below the President's request for Fiscal Year '92. That amount would be subject to the ordinary appropriations process, although we are, as Secretary Kemp said, looking at ways with the leadership to see if there's some procedure by which we could expedite all of this.

There was a positive interest in doing that in the meeting, but the mechanism for so doing has not been decided upon. In other words, if there's a question whether it would have to wait for the ordinary Fiscal Year '93 appropriation or not. Now, the same is true for Weed and Seed, which is going from $9 million up to half a billion dollars, and so on down the list of other programs.

On unemployment insurance, which, as you will recall, was in the letter from Senator Mitchell and Speaker Foley to the President but which was not on the President's list of six, the President did note in the meeting with the leaders that he had this morning reached agreement with the Republican leaders of the House and the Senate on a joint approach to unemployment insurance which would extend the unemployment insurance benefits of the emergency benefits of an additional 20 in 13 weeks through January 1st and then phase them down on through March 1st.

That would cost about $2.5 billion, and the set of offsets -- we're putting out a press release on this -- the set of offsets on that will all come from the President's budget and are mutually agreed among the Republican House, Senate and administration.

The Democrats, of course, have a somewhat different approach for the longer term. I think we should be able to reach agreement on the emergency component through March 1. Where we start to diverge is on the approach to the long-term reform of the program. It's our judgment that the best course would be, let's try to move with the things we can agree on quickly, and for the others that may get bogged down in larger-scale disagreements, let's put them aside and deal with them in the more ordinary way.

Q Mr. Darman, Mr. Gephardt said outside that everything is on the table, including the possibility of higher taxes on the wealthiest Americans. Is that your view? Is everything on the table?

DIRECTOR DARMAN: I did not hear that issue come up in the meeting. I don't know if anyone else here who was in the meeting heard that issue come up.

Q Was that a deal-buster, or what?

Q How are you going to answer that if you didn't hear it come up?

DIRECTOR DARMAN: Let me report what I think was the constructive spirit of the meeting. And I can't speak for the Democratic leadership, but I think a neutral observer in the meeting would have said that the spirit of the meeting was very positive and that people were trying to find the areas that they could come together on.

There was, of course, reference to the fact that compromise means both sides have to give a little. But the phrase was, give a little, not give on absolutely fundamental issues that have never been likely to be a point of convergence in the past.

Q Let me clarify. Are you ruling it out, or are you saying it's just unclear?

DIRECTOR DARMAN: I am saying that I -- let me try a different way of not answering for this reason: (Laughter.) Today's the day when it would be useful if we would be positive and try to be constructive and look for areas of agreement. You have picked an issue which did not come up in the meeting, and one of the reasons I suspect it didn't come up in the meeting is that all the parties there want to focus on things that you're likely to -- or seem to want to focus on things which have some reasonable chance of agreement. I believe the one you have mentioned, which I did not hear mentioned in the meeting, does not have a reasonable chance of agreement.

Q Are you going to require offsets for all the other parts of this the way you have? But don't you need offsets --

DIRECTOR DARMAN: Yes. That would be our intention. There was some discussion of that, that didn't reach a resolution as to whether we would all be able to agree. I would think -- there is a desire, I would say, for example -- even Chairman Rostenkowski said, look -- I shouldn't say "even" -- Chairman Rostenkowski said, we've got to be responsible, we have to have reasonable limits on what we're going to do and so on.

Q We were told that he actually suggested that you'd put caps on all these items -- but you don't get into a bidding war on this. Is that right?

DIRECTOR DARMAN: He raised the question of whether -- I wouldn't like to attribute to him a formal proposal. He raised the question as to whether it might not be desirable and constructive to do that, but he didn't make a specific proposal.

Q Does the White House think that would be a good idea?

DIRECTOR DARMAN: Well, at this stage we have a whole series of specific proposals. We have their letter. I think what we need to do now is find out what are the details that go with their letter. I'm not trying to put pressure on them, I'm just saying we need to know the details and see how far apart we are. Some of it looks like you're close together because it's at an abstract level. We have to see how far apart or close we really are. Only when we see what that looks like will we have a feel for how much more we need to do.

I don't wish -- I'm the most minor --

Q I know, but you've got the answers to the questions we happen to be asking at the moment, if you don't mind standing there and answering them.

Q Are there more price tags on the President's programs that you can tell us about on enterprise zones or youth jobs or -- give us more numbers on --

DIRECTOR DARMAN: Yes. Okay, in the case of enterprise zones, the proposal we had in the budget over five years is for about $1.8 billion.

Q Total?

DIRECTOR DARMAN: Yes. Now, there is an issue as to how those should be priced. And there has been a divergence of you between us and the joint committee in the Congress. They've said that the price for our proposal in the budget is over $3 billion.

Now, let me complicate this slightly further because you asked -- I'm sorry -- we have decided that we not only badly want our enterprise zone proposal as we have for years and years, but that because it's now evident that Mayor Bradley and a number of the other mayors in the area and mayors across the country all are getting a chance to be seen publicly arguing for enterprise zones -- we have an opportunity perhaps to get an even stronger enterprise zone proposal. So we are modifying our enterprise zone proposal, or at least have suggested we wish to do so.

To make its incentives even stronger, among its incentives now, for example, as proposed in the budget, was a zero capital gains rate for enterprises in the designated areas. But it was only for tangible property. We're now proposing to expand that to be not just tangible, but also intangible property and stock on the investment in the area, subject to some limits so that it's not abused.

In addition, the way it was set up in our budget proposal, in the first year would have been limited to ten zones. We would like to discuss with the Congress a different way of limiting it. Instead of an arbitrary limit of ten zones, is saying --

Q Ten zones per --

DIRECTOR DARMAN: -- ten zones for the country in the first year, and then it was growing to 50 over four years, as we had originally proposed. We're now saying we'd like to try a different way. Rather than be in a position of picking 10 and only 10, changing it so that it has some criteria -- such as having a very high unemployment rate, a very high pattern of violent crime and drug abuse, perhaps a declining tax base. We're working now on these criteria at Treasury -- a set of criteria which, in effect, define an area of distress --

Q An entitlement program.

DIRECTOR DARMAN: -- but it's a geographic area of distress, and it would be paid for. It would be paid for.

Q It's a new entitlement program.

Q What does that leave a price tag, then, if you're talking about vastly expanding it?

DIRECTOR DARMAN: It isn't necessarily vastly expanding. It depends on what the analysis shows as to what different criteria would do in terms of qualifying the numbers of areas. We don't have that. But we have indicated that we want to explore broadening and deepening enterprise zones, and so that could affect the price estimate.

Q Does it affect the number of enterprise zones?

DIRECTOR DARMAN: Yes, it would increase the number.

Q In the first year?

DIRECTOR DARMAN: In all probability, the intent would be to allow a broader base of inclusion of enterprise zones.

Q Mr. Darman, does anybody really have any confidence in the cost estimates of these enterprise zone proposals? I mean, they are extremely iffy, are they not? I mean, I don't know --

DIRECTOR DARMAN: That's correct. And the reason is simply this: You have to make a judgmental estimate about --

Q Things that will happen that are not now happening?

DIRECTOR DARMAN: Correct. And there are two kinds of things that can happen. One is that a business which would never have formed anywhere forms in the enterprise zone. If it does, any amount of tax revenue you get is by definition a net gain, not a loss. So that's one estimate you have to make.

The other is, if a business would have located and grown in a non-enterprise zone, but simply switches from there to the zone, and you assume it would have been earning income someplace else, now it's earning it and being taxed at a lower rate, that's a loss. So you have to net how much movement do you think will take place because of the incentive and how much net new business formation. And it's judgmental, and that's why you get the difference in the estimates.

Q But you must have had criteria before, when you were going to choose those 10 and then expanding to 50.

DIRECTOR DARMAN: Yes.

Q How are the criteria changing?

DIRECTOR DARMAN: Those criteria were written into law, but so was an arbitrary limit.

Q What about the --

Q Is it the same criteria?

DIRECTOR DARMAN: The criteria weren't so specific. You've got to do that for me.

MS. SMITH: One more question. They just put out some Rio information.

Q Youth jobs?

MS. SMITH: We'll take a few more.

Q What are the offsets, Director Darman, for unemployment insurance?

Q Youth jobs?

DIRECTOR DARMAN: The offsets are all in our budget.

Q Does it include mark to market?

DIRECTOR DARMAN: What the press release on unemployment says is that it's offsets from our budget, which, as you know, do include mark to market. Leader Michel has testified in favor of mark to market. But whether that's what will be mutually agreed, we can't say yet.

MS. SMITH: Let me just interrupt for a second. Do any of you have any more questions for our two Cabinet officials before they leave? Do you have any questions?

Q Mr. Barr.

Q What's being done concerning the enforcement of the immigration laws with Hispanics who were undocumented and arrested with the gang activity there and with the civil rights? Can you bring us up to date on the three areas of investigation?

ATTORNEY GENERAL BARR: You mean those who were members of gangs that were arrested as part of the riots?

Q Well, no, the underlying gang activity, if you're doing anything about that? But the immigrant status and the Grand Jury investigation of the civil rights file --

ATTORNEY GENERAL BARR: Well, I can't say anything about the Grand Jury investigation of the civil rights investigation, except to say that it's moving forward expeditiously; in fact, Wayne Budd is going out there again today to make sure that it's going forward as quickly as we can press it forward. On the enforcement against illegal aliens who participate in gangs, we --

Q I'm sorry -- illegal aliens who were arrested there during the rioting activity and others whom you may come across.

ATTORNEY GENERAL BARR: I think the first third -- of the first 6,000 arrested for rioting or looting, about a third of them were illegal aliens. Normally, what we do is we make a judgment as to whether or not their offenses were sufficiently serious to prosecute them and incarcerate them or whether we're better off in particular cases deporting them immediately. That process will go forward in conjunction with state law enforcement.

Q And is there any view being given, sir, to the overall gang activity that got so large as a federal violation?

ATTORNEY GENERAL BARR: Well, a while back I added 200 criminal investigators and allocated them countrywide to pursue illegal aliens who were involved in gang activity and those are being deployed and some of them are right now in Los Angeles working on this.

Q I wasn't defining it just to illegal aliens. We're talking about Cripps and the Bloods and similar type gangs who are allied with each other across state lines in some cases.

ATTORNEY GENERAL BARR: We have reallocated FBI resources, as you know, DEA resources. In Los Angeles alone, we have added above and beyond the initial allocation that was made a few months ago 20 additional FBI agents, 20 ATF agents, and I expect that to be expanded in the next few weeks.

Q Could you give us a status report on the investigation launched before your tenure began on allegations of alleged police brutality around the country? Is it complete, and when will it be released?

ATTORNEY GENERAL BARR: The report isn't; the studies are not completed. The input from the civil rights division was sent over to the National Institute of Justice to be integrated with two studies being done by NIJ, and the data from civil rights is being married with the data that the National Institute of Justice has to get a comprehensive picture of allegations relating to police brutality. Two comprehensive --

Q Secretary Alexander, may I ask you a question?

Q Wait, wait, Secretary Alexander.

Q We need to ask the --

Q Can you give us a preliminary --

ATTORNEY GENERAL BARR: Two studies have been contracted out and are underway, and I expect them to be completed within several months.

Q Can you give us a preliminary read on the findings that were sent over, you know, prior to integration with the other two reports?

ATTORNEY GENERAL BARR: Nothing's been sent over. What do you mean, "sent over"?

Q You said that they were sent over to NIJ for integration with the --

ATTORNEY GENERAL BARR: Oh, the civil rights data?

Q Yes.

ATTORNEY GENERAL BARR: That's so incomplete and imperfect that we really couldn't draw any conclusions from it.

Q Sir, you said you would hesitate in making a judgement as to whether to report these people who are illegal who are residents. Why would you hesitate on that -- because of political reasons at home, or what could be your thinking?

ATTORNEY GENERAL BARR: No. The two choices are prosecute them and incarcerate them -- that is, punish them here and make them serve a sentence before deportation, or deport them immediately. And our general policy is that if crimes are sufficiently serious, we want them to serve a sentence before deportation. Otherwise, we're essentially decriminalizing all acts committed by illegal aliens. So we have to sort out who we think merits prosecution here versus who merits immediate deportation.

Q A question on job training.

MS. SMITH: Does anybody else have any questions for Secretary Alexander or -- Weed and Seed questions? We're going to take two more and we're going to end the briefing.

Q I'd like to ask Secretary Alexander how much pressure and how much backing is there to the idea of allowing parents the freedom of choosing the schools to which their children are going to go? Is this being discussed right now -- an actual possibility? Is this in the package?

SECRETARY ALEXANDER: In where?

Q The freedom of allowing parents to choose the school to which their children is going to go?

SECRETARY ALEXANDER: What about it? We're strongly for it.

Q Is this an idea that's actually being proposed within in the package? How much pressure is behind that idea now?

SECRETARY ALEXANDER: Well, a good deal of pressure's behind it. The President mentioned it this morning, I mentioned it this morning in my comments. We believe that if we're going to give people who do not now have a share of the American dream a larger slice of it, that that includes making the streets safe, giving them a chance to own their own homes, giving them a chance to have better jobs, giving them a chance to have the best schools in the world for their kids and to choose among those schools just as wealthy people do.

So that's a very important part of the President's proposal to Congress. It's a very controversial part, but it's one we strongly support. And there's a good deal of interest in it across the country, and many local jurisdictions are trying it.

Q How is that going to actually be implemented? Will there be school vouchers? Who is going to be eligible? Will there be a cutoff limit according to incomes?

SECRETARY ALEXANDER: In the President's budget, submitted earlier this year, he included a half-billion dollars for what he called a state G.I. bill for kids, which would give jurisdictions that wanted to participate a chance to give children from families that make less than $40,000 a year a $1,000 scholarship which they could then spend at any lawfully operated school. In other words, it would do for elementary and secondary education what we already do with the Pell grant and did with the G.I. bill for students at colleges and universities and what the Congress authorized doing for day care centers a couple of years ago.

MS. SMITH: Final question.

Q Judy, I'm just wondering about the price tag on this youth job thing. Is this something that -- I don't know whether -- Secretary Alexander, it's probably not your area. But do we have a price tag on it? I assume it was in the budget before.

MS. SMITH: I can get that information for you.

Q Or is it like enterprise zones, something that you want to expand? Are there any other provisions that were already in the budget?

MS. SMITH: No. I think that the job training and the youth enterprise is taking already existing funds, and I'll give you that exact number, and refunnelling them to job training. But I'll give you that exact figure.

Q What I'm asking is, you know, enterprise zones was also in the budget with a specific dollar figure on it, and Darman just said that this was something that you'd like to broaden out; that'll change the price tag. Is there any other of those six elements that falls into that category of something that post-L.A. you now feels deserves to be a bigger --

MS. SMITH: I don't think so. I didn't attend the meeting, but I will check with you and see if it came up.

Q -- trying to get more money -- the original money that you asked for, right?

Q It seems to me, talking to the leaders, that your program -- no offense -- is the one there seems to be the least consensus on, particularly the choice part.

SECRETARY ALEXANDER: Well, no, I don't agree -- let's go back over -- what we talked about was Weed and Seed. I mean, that's Goal #6. That's the first thing the Compton School Board wants funded by the Justice Department, Head Start funding. There's agreement between the President and the Congress on that, I think.

There's agreement on job training and the one course at a time for the Pell grant. We'd like to see agreement on the break-the-mold new American schools. They would like to have that in Compton. We would like to see more agreement on giving teachers and schools more flexibility in the spending of Chapter I money. We would like to see more agreement on high standards in the national examination system. And then on choice, there is a good deal of disagreement. But on all those other things, I don't know why there should be any disagreement.

Q Well, but there is. There appears to be --

SECRETARY ALEXANDER: Well, there is. But now's a good time to get over that. There is not out in the country -- I mean, when you sit down in Compton where the unemployment rate is the highest in California -- where half of the black and the Latino males don't have a job, where the test scores are low and 75 percent of the kids drop out of school after the 9th grade, they'd like to have the Weed and Seed.

They'd like to have the Head Start. They'd like to have the New American Schools. They'd like to have flexibility for Chapter I. They'd like to have the help with setting high standards. And you can get into an argument about choice. So they like it. And I think maybe now is a good time for Congress to reassess this and pass it.

Q I give up. I surrender.

SECRETARY ALEXANDER: You ought to be for it, too.

THE PRESS: Thank you very much.

PRESS BRIEFING
BY
HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT SECRETARY JACK KEMP;
U.S. ATTORNEY GENERAL WILLIAM BARR;
EDUCATION SECRETARY LAMAR ALEXANDER;
SMALL BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION ADMINISTRATOR PAT SAIKI; AND
DIRECTOR OF OFFICE OF MANAGEMENT AND BUDGET RICHARD DARMAN

The Briefing Room

11:16 A.M. EDT

MR. FITZWATER: Let me go ahead with introductions while Senator Dole is talking outside. Just to say that we have with us this morning to take any questions you have on the proposals we set forth this morning Jack Kemp, Secretary of Housing and Urban Development; William Barr, Attorney General; Lamar Alexander, Secretary of Education; Pat Saiki, Administrator to the Small Business Administration; and Richard Darman, Director of the Office of Management and Budget.

We'll ask Jack to lead off in just a minute or two with a brief statement, and then we'll go to your questions. Or maybe we can just go to questions with this group and the ones outside can join us as they come in here. That's the easy way to do it.

If you all want to join us up here, maybe we'll just start it that way and let this group ask any questions they have. Why don't we go ahead and begin, and the rest will join us as they can.

SECRETARY KEMP: Well, I would just characterize very quickly the meeting from the perspective of the domestic agenda of the President. As Maxine Waters said just now, she was extremely encouraged. Senator Mitchell suggested that he appreciated not only the spirit of the President's comments, but the substance as well.

Unity, as Tom Foley said, does not require uniformity. The President outlined six proposals that he said were, if not on an emergency basis, certainly on the extreme sense of urgency about what's happening in urban America in several areas.

One of which he talked about was his overall growth package, and made the point that you cannot have a recovering economy without some incentives in the Tax Code, and that we've got to do something that would create more jobs in the macroeconomy to help create more revenues for cities and states. And that should be a self-evident truth.

He went on to outline his six goals which, as you know, were Weed and Seed, the program that has been developed by the Justice Department to provide help to inner city communities to deal with both crime and gangs as well as to seed them with social services and targeted job opportunities.

Secondly, the President talked about urban enterprise zones to eliminate the capital gain tax on any man or woman who works, saves, invests and lives in the inner city, with special emphasis on the fact that the jobs would go to the residents of this newly green-lined area of the inner city. He said he wanted to broaden and deepen the incentives and he wanted to make sure that more cities would be able to qualify. That also received a very positive response from the members of the Congress.

The President went on to suggest that the HOPE proposal to give public- and HUD-assisted housing residents a chance to own and manage and control their own housing communities should be fully funded at $1 billion. It's no secret it's been cut significantly. He'd like to see that fully funded. And he went on to talk about education reform that Lamar Alexander -- of which Lamar Alexander is the architect -- welfare reform to give people who are now on welfare and aid to families with dependent children a chance to move, save and work their way out of welfare and not be punished by both losing welfare benefits and facing a high tax on their payroll.

Finally, the Youth Jobs Initiative, Job Training 2000 for America clearly received a warm response from the Democratic leadership. They had their ideas, but as I think you heard out on the press conference outside, that there seems to be a sense of both urgency and emergency about this tragedy, not only in the city of Los Angeles, but throughout the country and throughout urban American communities.

My hope is that we can begin to work on this and make progress by the time the Congress at the end of June is required to pass low-income housing tax credit extension and other tax issues that have to be extended throughout the rest of 1992 and into '93.

SECRETARY ALEXANDER: Yesterday I spent most of the day in Compton, which is a city outside the city of Los Angeles. I guess what I might add to what Jack said is that we talked in the meeting about the importance of including education as a part of this response. I talked with the citizens of Compton about what might be lasting, rather than just something that might just happen for a week or two while the attention moves on in another direction. And here are some of the things they said: They want the Weed and Seed program. It's a city of 93,000 people, and 6,000 to 7,000 gang members in that city and a police force of 130. They want the Weed and Seed program. They can't make the schools better until they clean that up.

They'd like to have the Head Start increase. The President and Congress probably agree on that. They'd like to have the job training opportunity provided by the President's proposal that would permit a student to use a Pell grant who only can take one course at a time. That's for a working person who is trying to get on in the job market.

They would like to have the opportunity to try some of what the President calls New American Schools. They'd like for the schools to be open on Saturday in the afternoon in the summer, with lots of activities, from music lessons to sports to counseling for people who otherwise would be on the street because nobody is home. They're ready to do that.

They can't understand why they don't have more flexibility in the spending of federal money, which the President has strongly proposed. That's very important; the teachers who have a way to spend it that's different than all these federal rules and regulations.

They're very interested in the standard-setting, a national examination system that we've been talking about, because they want the students there to learn those standards.

We also talked about the importance of giving poor families some of the same choices of schools that wealthy people already have.

Basically, what we all hope is that the citizens of Compton have a little bigger share of the American dream. And it will take a longer time to do that, and education is an important part of it.

ADMINISTRATOR SAIKI: After joining the President in Los Angeles, there was absolutely no question that he felt the trauma of what the riots did to the people within Los Angeles who were affected directly. We at the Small Business Administration, of course, were early on the spot. And I was glad to see today around the table, there was absolutely no disagreement that we're going to need extra monies to provide for the emergency loans that are going to be needed to help people to reestablish their businesses in downtown Los Angeles.

The other thing that I sensed this morning is that, another point of total agreement is that job creation is a centerpiece of the President's package. And certainly we, at the SBA, have the kinds of programs that could assist with fulfilling the enterprise zone concept, with fulfilling the education needs, working through job training. And so we, I feel, at the SBA, will be very helpful in implementing the concepts that were expressed today. I felt very encouraged after the meeting this morning.

SECRETARY KEMP: Questions?

Q This is for Secretary Kemp or for Director Darman. If there is any kind of overall total estimate of what the President's programs would cost or what the Democratic suggestions as you understand them would cost? And from the President's point of view -- and this may be Director Darman -- he said that the funding was complicated and that you would have to explain it to us. I'm asking if you could explain where the money would come from on the President's side? That's what he said.

DIRECTOR DARMAN: I apologize. I didn't hear the President's comment. Was it related to anything in particular?

Q How his programs would be funded.

DIRECTOR DARMAN: Well, let's try elements of it. And you've got to -- and I don't want to take too much time. It's very boring.

Q Oh.

DIRECTOR DARMAN: Okay. Let's take, first of all, the issue of the supplemental appropriation to deal with the immediate problem in L.A. The most immediate, that is, from a federal perspective, replenishing the SBA funds and the FEMA funds. That's being marked up as we sit here today on the House side. And we have indicated today a willingness to designate the replenishment of the FEMA and SBA accounts as emergency funding.

Under the budget agreement, the President and the Congress, when they agreed to designate something as an emergency, it does not have to be offset.

So that, in the case of FEMA, $300 million declared as an emergency is a direct $300-million addition to the deficit. In the case of the SBA loans, it's slightly more complicated. We estimate that the face value of the loans will be about $300 million. We've said we'd be willing to designate that as emergency. There's some difference between us on the estimate as to whether it may higher than that. So we've said in addition -- so far we're up to $600 million -- in addition, we would be willing to accept what's called a contingency of $200 million, which is $200 million in addition written into law so that if the ultimate SBA draw becomes larger than the $300 million -- it could be as high as $500 million -- that the President would as necessary make additional emergency designations. But the law would already have provided the authority to spend and not be offset if he did the emergency designation. That is something we've done before. We did it already, actually, for L.A. and used $146 million worth of that kind of contingent emergency authority.

So it's $300 million, plus $300 million face value the loans, plus what could be another $200 million, depending upon the actual loan, all of which would be declared emergency.

Q So the maximum total addition to the deficit from those two things are $500 million?

DIRECTOR DARMAN: No. The face value of the loans -- you really don't want to get into this; you should write it, if you're going to, the way I said it, if you wouldn't mind -- because the face value of the loans -- (Laughter.) Let me tell you why. Let me tell you why. Because the face value of the loans doesn't translate dollar for dollar into the deficit; it depends how much of it is paid back.

The rate that normally happens with these programs is they have a default rate in such situations of about one-third, about 33 percent. So about a third of whatever turns out to be the face value of the loans in the range of $300 million to $500 million, a third of that would translate into the deficit.

Q UDAG, HOPE, those programs?

DIRECTOR DARMAN: HOPE -- we have requested an --

Q Sorry. Sixties programs.

DIRECTOR DARMAN: HOPE, we've requested an increase for Fiscal Year '93 to $1.010 billion from currently $361 million, which the current amount is well below the President's request for Fiscal Year '92. That amount would be subject to the ordinary appropriations process, although we are, as Secretary Kemp said, looking at ways with the leadership to see if there's some procedure by which we could expedite all of this.

There was a positive interest in doing that in the meeting, but the mechanism for so doing has not been decided upon. In other words, if there's a question whether it would have to wait for the ordinary Fiscal Year '93 appropriation or not. Now, the same is true for Weed and Seed, which is going from $9 million up to half a billion dollars, and so on down the list of other programs.

On unemployment insurance, which, as you will recall, was in the letter from Senator Mitchell and Speaker Foley to the President but which was not on the President's list of six, the President did note in the meeting with the leaders that he had this morning reached agreement with the Republican leaders of the House and the Senate on a joint approach to unemployment insurance which would extend the unemployment insurance benefits of the emergency benefits of an additional 20 in 13 weeks through January 1st and then phase them down on through March 1st.

That would cost about $2.5 billion, and the set of offsets -- we're putting out a press release on this -- the set of offsets on that will all come from the President's budget and are mutually agreed among the Republican House, Senate and administration.

The Democrats, of course, have a somewhat different approach for the longer term. I think we should be able to reach agreement on the emergency component through March 1. Where we start to diverge is on the approach to the long-term reform of the program. It's our judgment that the best course would be, let's try to move with the things we can agree on quickly, and for the others that may get bogged down in larger-scale disagreements, let's put them aside and deal with them in the more ordinary way.

Q Mr. Darman, Mr. Gephardt said outside that everything is on the table, including the possibility of higher taxes on the wealthiest Americans. Is that your view? Is everything on the table?

DIRECTOR DARMAN: I did not hear that issue come up in the meeting. I don't know if anyone else here who was in the meeting heard that issue come up.

Q Was that a deal-buster, or what?

Q How are you going to answer that if you didn't hear it come up?

DIRECTOR DARMAN: Let me report what I think was the constructive spirit of the meeting. And I can't speak for the Democratic leadership, but I think a neutral observer in the meeting would have said that the spirit of the meeting was very positive and that people were trying to find the areas that they could come together on.

There was, of course, reference to the fact that compromise means both sides have to give a little. But the phrase was, give a little, not give on absolutely fundamental issues that have never been likely to be a point of convergence in the past.

Q Let me clarify. Are you ruling it out, or are you saying it's just unclear?

DIRECTOR DARMAN: I am saying that I -- let me try a different way of not answering for this reason: (Laughter.) Today's the day when it would be useful if we would be positive and try to be constructive and look for areas of agreement. You have picked an issue which did not come up in the meeting, and one of the reasons I suspect it didn't come up in the meeting is that all the parties there want to focus on things that you're likely to -- or seem to want to focus on things which have some reasonable chance of agreement. I believe the one you have mentioned, which I did not hear mentioned in the meeting, does not have a reasonable chance of agreement.

Q Are you going to require offsets for all the other parts of this the way you have? But don't you need offsets --

DIRECTOR DARMAN: Yes. That would be our intention. There was some discussion of that, that didn't reach a resolution as to whether we would all be able to agree. I would think -- there is a desire, I would say, for example -- even Chairman Rostenkowski said, look -- I shouldn't say "even" -- Chairman Rostenkowski said, we've got to be responsible, we have to have reasonable limits on what we're going to do and so on.

Q We were told that he actually suggested that you'd put caps on all these items -- but you don't get into a bidding war on this. Is that right?

DIRECTOR DARMAN: He raised the question of whether -- I wouldn't like to attribute to him a formal proposal. He raised the question as to whether it might not be desirable and constructive to do that, but he didn't make a specific proposal.

Q Does the White House think that would be a good idea?

DIRECTOR DARMAN: Well, at this stage we have a whole series of specific proposals. We have their letter. I think what we need to do now is find out what are the details that go with their letter. I'm not trying to put pressure on them, I'm just saying we need to know the details and see how far apart we are. Some of it looks like you're close together because it's at an abstract level. We have to see how far apart or close we really are. Only when we see what that looks like will we have a feel for how much more we need to do.

I don't wish -- I'm the most minor --

Q I know, but you've got the answers to the questions we happen to be asking at the moment, if you don't mind standing there and answering them.

Q Are there more price tags on the President's programs that you can tell us about on enterprise zones or youth jobs or -- give us more numbers on --

DIRECTOR DARMAN: Yes. Okay, in the case of enterprise zones, the proposal we had in the budget over five years is for about $1.8 billion.

Q Total?

DIRECTOR DARMAN: Yes. Now, there is an issue as to how those should be priced. And there has been a divergence of you between us and the joint committee in the Congress. They've said that the price for our proposal in the budget is over $3 billion.

Now, let me complicate this slightly further because you asked -- I'm sorry -- we have decided that we not only badly want our enterprise zone proposal as we have for years and years, but that because it's now evident that Mayor Bradley and a number of the other mayors in the area and mayors across the country all are getting a chance to be seen publicly arguing for enterprise zones -- we have an opportunity perhaps to get an even stronger enterprise zone proposal. So we are modifying our enterprise zone proposal, or at least have suggested we wish to do so.

To make its incentives even stronger, among its incentives now, for example, as proposed in the budget, was a zero capital gains rate for enterprises in the designated areas. But it was only for tangible property. We're now proposing to expand that to be not just tangible, but also intangible property and stock on the investment in the area, subject to some limits so that it's not abused.

In addition, the way it was set up in our budget proposal, in the first year would have been limited to ten zones. We would like to discuss with the Congress a different way of limiting it. Instead of an arbitrary limit of ten zones, is saying --

Q Ten zones per --

DIRECTOR DARMAN: -- ten zones for the country in the first year, and then it was growing to 50 over four years, as we had originally proposed. We're now saying we'd like to try a different way. Rather than be in a position of picking 10 and only 10, changing it so that it has some criteria -- such as having a very high unemployment rate, a very high pattern of violent crime and drug abuse, perhaps a declining tax base. We're working now on these criteria at Treasury -- a set of criteria which, in effect, define an area of distress --

Q An entitlement program.

DIRECTOR DARMAN: -- but it's a geographic area of distress, and it would be paid for. It would be paid for.

Q It's a new entitlement program.

Q What does that leave a price tag, then, if you're talking about vastly expanding it?

DIRECTOR DARMAN: It isn't necessarily vastly expanding. It depends on what the analysis shows as to what different criteria would do in terms of qualifying the numbers of areas. We don't have that. But we have indicated that we want to explore broadening and deepening enterprise zones, and so that could affect the price estimate.

Q Does it affect the number of enterprise zones?

DIRECTOR DARMAN: Yes, it would increase the number.

Q In the first year?

DIRECTOR DARMAN: In all probability, the intent would be to allow a broader base of inclusion of enterprise zones.

Q Mr. Darman, does anybody really have any confidence in the cost estimates of these enterprise zone proposals? I mean, they are extremely iffy, are they not? I mean, I don't know --

DIRECTOR DARMAN: That's correct. And the reason is simply this: You have to make a judgmental estimate about --

Q Things that will happen that are not now happening?

DIRECTOR DARMAN: Correct. And there are two kinds of things that can happen. One is that a business which would never have formed anywhere forms in the enterprise zone. If it does, any amount of tax revenue you get is by definition a net gain, not a loss. So that's one estimate you have to make.

The other is, if a business would have located and grown in a non-enterprise zone, but simply switches from there to the zone, and you assume it would have been earning income someplace else, now it's earning it and being taxed at a lower rate, that's a loss. So you have to net how much movement do you think will take place because of the incentive and how much net new business formation. And it's judgmental, and that's why you get the difference in the estimates.

Q But you must have had criteria before, when you were going to choose those 10 and then expanding to 50.

DIRECTOR DARMAN: Yes.

Q How are the criteria changing?

DIRECTOR DARMAN: Those criteria were written into law, but so was an arbitrary limit.

Q What about the --

Q Is it the same criteria?

DIRECTOR DARMAN: The criteria weren't so specific. You've got to do that for me.

MS. SMITH: One more question. They just put out some Rio information.

Q Youth jobs?

MS. SMITH: We'll take a few more.

Q What are the offsets, Director Darman, for unemployment insurance?

Q Youth jobs?

DIRECTOR DARMAN: The offsets are all in our budget.

Q Does it include mark to market?

DIRECTOR DARMAN: What the press release on unemployment says is that it's offsets from our budget, which, as you know, do include mark to market. Leader Michel has testified in favor of mark to market. But whether that's what will be mutually agreed, we can't say yet.

MS. SMITH: Let me just interrupt for a second. Do any of you have any more questions for our two Cabinet officials before they leave? Do you have any questions?

Q Mr. Barr.

Q What's being done concerning the enforcement of the immigration laws with Hispanics who were undocumented and arrested with the gang activity there and with the civil rights? Can you bring us up to date on the three areas of investigation?

ATTORNEY GENERAL BARR: You mean those who were members of gangs that were arrested as part of the riots?

Q Well, no, the underlying gang activity, if you're doing anything about that? But the immigrant status and the Grand Jury investigation of the civil rights file --

ATTORNEY GENERAL BARR: Well, I can't say anything about the Grand Jury investigation of the civil rights investigation, except to say that it's moving forward expeditiously; in fact, Wayne Budd is going out there again today to make sure that it's going forward as quickly as we can press it forward. On the enforcement against illegal aliens who participate in gangs, we --

Q I'm sorry -- illegal aliens who were arrested there during the rioting activity and others whom you may come across.

ATTORNEY GENERAL BARR: I think the first third -- of the first 6,000 arrested for rioting or looting, about a third of them were illegal aliens. Normally, what we do is we make a judgment as to whether or not their offenses were sufficiently serious to prosecute them and incarcerate them or whether we're better off in particular cases deporting them immediately. That process will go forward in conjunction with state law enforcement.

Q And is there any view being given, sir, to the overall gang activity that got so large as a federal violation?

ATTORNEY GENERAL BARR: Well, a while back I added 200 criminal investigators and allocated them countrywide to pursue illegal aliens who were involved in gang activity and those are being deployed and some of them are right now in Los Angeles working on this.

Q I wasn't defining it just to illegal aliens. We're talking about Cripps and the Bloods and similar type gangs who are allied with each other across state lines in some cases.

ATTORNEY GENERAL BARR: We have reallocated FBI resources, as you know, DEA resources. In Los Angeles alone, we have added above and beyond the initial allocation that was made a few months ago 20 additional FBI agents, 20 ATF agents, and I expect that to be expanded in the next few weeks.

Q Could you give us a status report on the investigation launched before your tenure began on allegations of alleged police brutality around the country? Is it complete, and when will it be released?

ATTORNEY GENERAL BARR: The report isn't; the studies are not completed. The input from the civil rights division was sent over to the National Institute of Justice to be integrated with two studies being done by NIJ, and the data from civil rights is being married with the data that the National Institute of Justice has to get a comprehensive picture of allegations relating to police brutality. Two comprehensive --

Q Secretary Alexander, may I ask you a question?

Q Wait, wait, Secretary Alexander.

Q We need to ask the --

Q Can you give us a preliminary --

ATTORNEY GENERAL BARR: Two studies have been contracted out and are underway, and I expect them to be completed within several months.

Q Can you give us a preliminary read on the findings that were sent over, you know, prior to integration with the other two reports?

ATTORNEY GENERAL BARR: Nothing's been sent over. What do you mean, "sent over"?

Q You said that they were sent over to NIJ for integration with the --

ATTORNEY GENERAL BARR: Oh, the civil rights data?

Q Yes.

ATTORNEY GENERAL BARR: That's so incomplete and imperfect that we really couldn't draw any conclusions from it.

Q Sir, you said you would hesitate in making a judgement as to whether to report these people who are illegal who are residents. Why would you hesitate on that -- because of political reasons at home, or what could be your thinking?

ATTORNEY GENERAL BARR: No. The two choices are prosecute them and incarcerate them -- that is, punish them here and make them serve a sentence before deportation, or deport them immediately. And our general policy is that if crimes are sufficiently serious, we want them to serve a sentence before deportation. Otherwise, we're essentially decriminalizing all acts committed by illegal aliens. So we have to sort out who we think merits prosecution here versus who merits immediate deportation.

Q A question on job training.

MS. SMITH: Does anybody else have any questions for Secretary Alexander or -- Weed and Seed questions? We're going to take two more and we're going to end the briefing.

Q I'd like to ask Secretary Alexander how much pressure and how much backing is there to the idea of allowing parents the freedom of choosing the schools to which their children are going to go? Is this being discussed right now -- an actual possibility? Is this in the package?

SECRETARY ALEXANDER: In where?

Q The freedom of allowing parents to choose the school to which their children is going to go?

SECRETARY ALEXANDER: What about it? We're strongly for it.

Q Is this an idea that's actually being proposed within in the package? How much pressure is behind that idea now?

SECRETARY ALEXANDER: Well, a good deal of pressure's behind it. The President mentioned it this morning, I mentioned it this morning in my comments. We believe that if we're going to give people who do not now have a share of the American dream a larger slice of it, that that includes making the streets safe, giving them a chance to own their own homes, giving them a chance to have better jobs, giving them a chance to have the best schools in the world for their kids and to choose among those schools just as wealthy people do.

So that's a very important part of the President's proposal to Congress. It's a very controversial part, but it's one we strongly support. And there's a good deal of interest in it across the country, and many local jurisdictions are trying it.

Q How is that going to actually be implemented? Will there be school vouchers? Who is going to be eligible? Will there be a cutoff limit according to incomes?

SECRETARY ALEXANDER: In the President's budget, submitted earlier this year, he included a half-billion dollars for what he called a state G.I. bill for kids, which would give jurisdictions that wanted to participate a chance to give children from families that make less than $40,000 a year a $1,000 scholarship which they could then spend at any lawfully operated school. In other words, it would do for elementary and secondary education what we already do with the Pell grant and did with the G.I. bill for students at colleges and universities and what the Congress authorized doing for day care centers a couple of years ago.

MS. SMITH: Final question.

Q Judy, I'm just wondering about the price tag on this youth job thing. Is this something that -- I don't know whether -- Secretary Alexander, it's probably not your area. But do we have a price tag on it? I assume it was in the budget before.

MS. SMITH: I can get that information for you.

Q Or is it like enterprise zones, something that you want to expand? Are there any other provisions that were already in the budget?

MS. SMITH: No. I think that the job training and the youth enterprise is taking already existing funds, and I'll give you that exact number, and refunnelling them to job training. But I'll give you that exact figure.

Q What I'm asking is, you know, enterprise zones was also in the budget with a specific dollar figure on it, and Darman just said that this was something that you'd like to broaden out; that'll change the price tag. Is there any other of those six elements that falls into that category of something that post-L.A. you now feels deserves to be a bigger --

MS. SMITH: I don't think so. I didn't attend the meeting, but I will check with you and see if it came up.

Q -- trying to get more money -- the original money that you asked for, right?

Q It seems to me, talking to the leaders, that your program -- no offense -- is the one there seems to be the least consensus on, particularly the choice part.

SECRETARY ALEXANDER: Well, no, I don't agree -- let's go back over -- what we talked about was Weed and Seed. I mean, that's Goal #6. That's the first thing the Compton School Board wants funded by the Justice Department, Head Start funding. There's agreement between the President and the Congress on that, I think.

There's agreement on job training and the one course at a time for the Pell grant. We'd like to see agreement on the break-the-mold new American schools. They would like to have that in Compton. We would like to see more agreement on giving teachers and schools more flexibility in the spending of Chapter I money. We would like to see more agreement on high standards in the national examination system. And then on choice, there is a good deal of disagreement. But on all those other things, I don't know why there should be any disagreement.

Q Well, but there is. There appears to be --

SECRETARY ALEXANDER: Well, there is. But now's a good time to get over that. There is not out in the country -- I mean, when you sit down in Compton where the unemployment rate is the highest in California -- where half of the black and the Latino males don't have a job, where the test scores are low and 75 percent of the kids drop out of school after the 9th grade, they'd like to have the Weed and Seed.

They'd like to have the Head Start. They'd like to have the New American Schools. They'd like to have flexibility for Chapter I. They'd like to have the help with setting high standards. And you can get into an argument about choice. So they like it. And I think maybe now is a good time for Congress to reassess this and pass it.

Q I give up. I surrender.

SECRETARY ALEXANDER: You ought to be for it, too.

THE PRESS: Thank you very much.

Dear President Bush:

You recently bestowed upon me the greatest honor of my life when you appointed me as your United States Attorney for the Northern District of Alabama. I am writing to thank you for this privilege, and to pledge to you that I will devote all my energies to faithfully and effectively discharging the duties of this Office.

My formal swearing-in ceremony took place on April 7, 1992. It was a wonderful day for the gathering of family and friends. Although my family is quite close, this was the first occasion since my mother's death of four years ago that the entire Selden family had been together.

I have already had the opportunity to meet with William Barr, George Terwilliger and Wayne Budd, along with other Department of Justice officials. I am extremely impressed with the professionalism and dedication of those in leadership positions at the Department of Justice and, as a former federal prosecutor, I am excited to again be a member of the Department of Justice team.

I so often heard my parents speak with fondness and admiration for both you and Mrs. Bush. My father deeply valued your friendship, and I know how proud and appreciative of this appointment he would have been.

I will always endeavor to be worthy of the trust that you have placed in me by this appointment.

Very truly yours,

JACK W. SELDEN

May 12, 1992

Dear Mark:

It is with deep regret that I accept your resignation as Executive Secretary of the National Space Council.

It has been over three years since I established the Space Council. Under the leadership of Vice President Quayle, the Council has played a critical role in achieving the goals I have set for America's space program.

It has been my hope that the Council could help me focus America's space program around a set of long-term goals, embark America on a new round of manned and unmanned space exploration, and build a foundation that would enable us to keep America first in space.

The Council has done all I had hoped it would, and more. America's space program is stronger, more sharply focused, better coordinated, and more coherent. Our Nation has set a challenging and vitally important set of goals for the future -- to study the Earth, the planets, and the solar system.

Your talent and dedication both to me and to the Vice President were crucial in bringing all of these remarkable achievements to fruition.

One day, human beings -- Americans -- will land on Mars for the first time. When they do, I hope you'll tell your grandchildren where you were on July 20, 1989, and in the weeks and months preceding that hot summer day when we began the great journey. They'll be proud to know that you were among the happy few whose vision was so critical to that historic decision.

For your service to me and to our Nation, Barbara joins me in extending our thanks to you, Kathe, and your family.

Best wishes.

Sincerely,

NATIONAL SPACE COUNCIL
EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT
WASHINGTON, D.C. 20500

May 11, 1992

The President
The White House
Washington D.C. 20500

Dear Mr. President:

Just over three years ago, you appointed me Executive Secretary of a soon-to-be-reestablished National Space Council. When you signed the executive order establishing the Council, you said, "...the Space Council will bring coherence and continuity and commitment to our efforts to explore, study and develop space." And, you said it was our job "...to keep America first in space..."

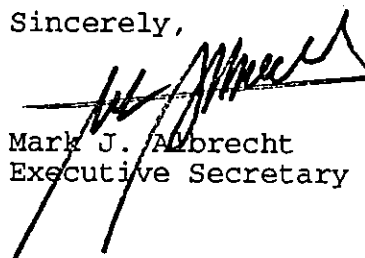

I am happy to report to you that under the leadership of our Chairman, Vice President Quayle, and following the courageous and visionary course you have charted, and guided by the important decisions you have made, America's space program is stronger, more focused, and better able to serve and inspire our nation today than it has been in more than twenty years.

I have had the opportunity to personally communicate your vision for space exploration to thousands of Americans who share your confidence in the future. And, Mr. President, they do share your vision for the future -- of an America constantly seeking and exploring new frontiers, new horizons, and new opportunities. For them, this is not a goal, but an expectation.

In giving me this opportunity to serve you and our nation, you not only accorded me a high honor, but you invested in me a deep responsibility. To the very best of my ability, I sought to fulfill my duties with the high level of integrity and competence that you have so ably demonstrated in your conduct as our leader.

Being part of the new beginning that you have given America's space program has been an extraordinarily rewarding and gratifying experience. It is one I will never forget. Nevertheless, it is time for me to seek new challenges and opportunities, and to meet new responsibilities. Therefore, I request that you accept my resignation effective June 1, 1992.

Sincerely,

Mark J. Abbrecht
Executive Secretary

REMARKS BY THE PRESIDENT
IN PRESS AVAILABILITY

The Oval Office

9:35 A.M. EDT

THE PRESIDENT: I will be talking to the leadership in a few minutes and we will be proposing these initiatives, all of them designed to increase personal responsibility, offer hope to these communities. And it's a good program.

I think most are familiar with Weed and Seed -- to weed out the criminals and then seed the neighborhoods. We talked about this up in Philadelphia yesterday and in Los Angeles last week. And I think there's strong support for this program.

HOPE is a homeownership program. And we believe that owning the home is the best way to strengthen the family and to give the community stability.

On enterprise zones, that almost is universally accepted now. It's a proposal that will bring businesses -- act like a magnet to bring businesses into these communities. And we are going to increase the attractiveness of this proposal that we've had up there; but, in any event, it's going to be -- I think it will be accepted by the Congress. We're going to push hard for it, as we will for the others.

I think most are familiar in the country now with our America 2000; but again, we believe that educational choice will help. This is a little longer-range proposal, but it fits in. Without education, we are not going to restore hope to our cities.

Welfare reform is important. We're going to go forward not just with waivers that encourage work and learning fare, but we're going to try to broaden out the amount of monies that a family can keep before they have to go off of welfare. I believe the limit now is $1,000 and I think we're talking now about $10,000, which would say to a person if you save anything, you're not going to be thrown off of welfare right away.

And then on a youth job program, we have a program of $683 million, I believe it is. But with our apprentice program and our job opportunity program that I've announced and that we talked about down there in terms of job training, we want to go forward with some new legislation on that.

All of these are designed to restore hope and to bring some cohesion to these communities and offer these young people some opportunities. So I will be taking this to the leadership; in the spirit of working together, I hope we can get it done.

Q Is there anything new and does it require --

THE PRESIDENT: These are all new. Most of these -- well, Weed and Seed is in operation now a little bit. There are some model grants right now -- Philadelphia is working on one -- but all of these need to be tried. They're all new in a way, yes.

MORE

Q New monies?

THE PRESIDENT: Yes. Well, we'll be asking for some.

Q Price tag, please?

THE PRESIDENT: On what?

Q On this whole program, on your agenda.

THE PRESIDENT: I don't know that I can give you the price tag on the whole program; I've written down some numbers. On the Weed and Seed, for example, with going up from the model demonstrations of nine to, I believe, half a billion dollars, that's new.

Q That's the same figure though that was announced in February -- the $500 million.

THE PRESIDENT: We haven't gotten it yet. It's new. It has not been enacted. This has not been done. A proposal that hasn't been tried is new. We need to try these new ideas; that's the figure.

Q And where --

Q Sir, did I understand you to say you were going to give the families going off of welfare $10,000?

THE PRESIDENT: No. I think what it is now is that if you save more than $1000 you're off of welfare. We're talking about making $10,000 so people can at least save a little bit of money while they're on welfare. HOPE -- one billion dollars in '93 -- that's what we're asking for.

Enterprise zones -- it's hard to put a price on that because we are trying to make it more attractive in terms of how the tax structure will treat these investors, but there's no price tag on that one -- it is a very, very important part of it.

Education, you know the numbers there, I think. We're not asking for anything different than we've proposed on that one.

Welfare reform, I've told you the difference there. And on youth jobs, there's -- I think $683 million for the summer and now we're going up for new authorization on youth apprenticeship and Job Training 2000.

Q Mr. President, where would this money come from? The Democrats say that if you're serious about this program that you would agree to either a tax increase or reducing even further the Pentagon budget.

THE PRESIDENT: I don't think the American people need to pay more taxes right now. I think this is a good program. It is coming from within the budget. Some of it, as I say, is asked for new authority in Fiscal '93, but the idea that you have to raise taxes at this time when the economy is just starting to recover, I'm sorry, I will not support that.

Q But then where would the money come from specifically?

THE PRESIDENT: You will have to ask Dick Darman to tell you because it's all in the very complicated budget proposal.

Q Would you give us a little more detail about that welfare, going off of welfare?

THE PRESIDENT: Well, you know, I think --

Q You think people can save up to $10,000 before they go off of welfare?

THE PRESIDENT: No, I just think that that's a good thing for them to be able to do. That's not going to get them off of welfare. What's going to get them off of welfare is jobs. And that's what all this is designed to do is to create jobs in the private sector. Now there are summer job programs, but we are trying to work to bring hope to the cities.

You know, it's very interesting to me that the community workers in both Los Angeles and Philadelphia, heavily impacted areas, are saying now is the time to try enterprise zones. We think they'll act like a magnet to bring private business into these areas of despair. And it ought to be tried. It is new and it has not been tried at the federal level.

Q Did it take riots to do all this for all of you?

THE PRESIDENT: No, because as you know and have been pointing out to me some of these things have been proposed before. But we're going to now fight for them to get them passed. And I'm going in there in a couple of minutes in the spirit of cooperation, holding out my hand to Congress and saying: Look, let's not try to get credit, let's try to get something done for this country. Get it back to work, help these cities. And I think this is a good program and the fact that some of these ideas have been proposed before and have not been enacted does not mean that they're not new. They are new.

Q Mr. President, how are you going to address the racial divisions and racial misunderstandings in this country?

THE PRESIDENT: Speak out against it as I've been doing and continue to. And I think that's the best thing a President can do -- speak out against bigotry and racial hatred. And I believe I've been doing that over and over again, and I'll keep doing it.

Q The Secretary General of the U.N. is here today. Have you decided to go to Rio? Are you going to tell him that you're going to Rio?

THE PRESIDENT: Stay tuned, we'll talk about that when I see him.

Q Sir, will you be listening to the Democratic proposals as well? I know some match, but --

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, some match. And certainly what we want to do is find common ground and move this country forward. And I think we've got to do that, Helen.

Q Can you give us a little more detail on number two?

THE PRESIDENT: Homeownership?

Q Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, it's just simply a question of encouraging people to own their own homes instead of building more projects. You know, some accuse us of pulling back on housing funds. That is not correct. Now, we don't believe that building these projects is the answer. We want to see the money going into tenant management and homeownership.

Thank you all very much. We've got to get ready for the meeting.

Q How did you like Philadelphia? Pretty bad, huh?

THE PRESIDENT: Interesting though. Golly. I like the spirit of the people; but, yes, the last part was more desolate than the first part. But the first part showed that the police getting involved like that made a tremendous difference on the drug fight. The message was very, very encouraging and upbeat. We would go out into these satellite precinct stations, and it was wonderful.

Incidentally, in here I have not talked about the things we have done in terms of dollars for Los Angeles up to now -- some $600 million-plus, not counting the law enforcement part of that. So there's a substantial amount of money going into L.A. that I --

Q Do you think, though, that the riots are going to at least make it more possible for these programs to be accepted?

THE PRESIDENT: I hope so -- I think so, yes, I do. Because I think people are saying we've got to do something new. And I hear that from both sides of the aisle so we'll see.

Q Are you willing to meet the Democrats halfway, sir, compromise?

THE PRESIDENT: I don't know what that means. I'm willing to try to get some new programs going, and these are the ones I'm going to push. So I don't know what halfway is on a proposal like that.

Q Is this a new, new you?

THE PRESIDENT: No, same me. (Laughter.) Actually, it's not a bad way to do it.

Q You like being conciliatory, don't you?

THE PRESIDENT: I've always been that way, Helen, you've known that for years.

THE PRESS: Thank you.

Dear Matt:

Bob Teeter filled me in on his visit with you, and I'm glad to hear both of your willingness to help and your positive assessment of the campaign in the Asian community. I also enjoyed seeing the piece you submitted to the Wall Street Journal.

I have also written Mr. and Mrs. Yi. I was very moved by my visit with the Korean community and shocked at the violence and bigotry so many of them faced. For its part, the Federal Government is moving aggressively to help affected businesses and persons rebuild their lives and livelihoods.

Best wishes.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Yi:

Matthew Fong of the State Board of Equalization gave me the petition for which you and your children collected signatures.

During my visit to Los Angeles, I had a welcome opportunity to listen to the concerns of the Korean community. I was very moved by my visit and shocked to see the violence and bigotry so many in the community faced. Rioting and wanton destruction are never acceptable in a civilized society; it is especially tragic that so many innocent people suffered solely because of their race or ethnicity.

Now is a time to begin rebuilding, both to restore the vision of the American dream to those in your community affected by the riots and to restore harmony in the relations among all Americans, no matter what their race. For its part, the Federal Government is moving aggressively to help affected businesses and persons rebuild their lives and livelihoods.

Best wishes to you, your family, and the Korean community of Los Angeles.

Sincerely,
