Rose --

I rec'd this package from Peg Swift in this condition. Since the card states maple products, alcohol, (and belts), these should really be coordinated with USSS if the President intends to keep them. Also, I will have to know exactly the contents in order to value.

Please let me know. Thanks.

BPB HAS SEEN

June 17, 1992

Dear Mr. President and Mrs. Bush -

Thank you for inviting me to the historic, indeed memorable dinner with President Yeltsin.

Please its wonderful. So is our new found friendship with Moscow - and all good hopes for the future.

Gratefully,

Helen Thomas

(Sen. McCain: "Then we really have no choice but to suspend efforts to pass an aide package through this body until every American held captive in Russia is brought home.")

By this afternoon, President Bush was adding his assurances that everything that could be done would be to get to the bottom of that matter but cautioned against unrealistic hopes.

(President Bush: "While we do not have any specific information to make public today, I pledge to keep the American people informed of developments on this issue as we find out more about these latest leads.")

Not only is the White House worried that the emotionally and politically charged issue of POWs could further stall that Russian aid package, it's also worried that the issue could eclipse the only major foreign policy achievement this President has had all year.

(ABC-Lead)

NBC's Stone Phillips: The Presidents of the U.S. and Russia agreed this afternoon to sweeping, unprecedented cuts in nuclear arms -- an agreement so wide-ranging that military experts around the world are stunned.

NBC's John Cochran: That arms deal get Boris Yeltsin's visit off to a fast start as he struggles to win American aid at a time when many Americans think charity begins at home.

(TV coverage of Presidents Bush and Yeltsin on south lawn.)

Yeltsin is trying to persuade Americans that he is in control in his own country and can get things done. George Bush is trying to sell the same message about himself, and today both could point to an agreement of substance.

(President Bush: "We've agreed to eliminate the world's most dangerous weapons -- heavy ICBMs and all other multiple warhead ICBMs and dramatically reduce our total strategic nuclear weapons.")

Only a few years ago American officials were planning a nuclear stockpile with about 13,000 warheads. Now the U.S. and Russia will go down to no more than 3,500 warheads each. The target date for all cuts is the year 2003, earlier if possible.

(Yeltsin: "We shall not fight against each other. This is a solemn undertaking that we are taking today.")

That kind of talk will help Yeltsin when he speaks to Congress tomorrow. But Rep. Foley says Congress will probably vote against more aid because Russia's economy is so shaky. And now a new complication: Yeltsin's revelation that some American POWs captured during the Vietnam War may have been sent to Soviet camps.

(Rep. Dornan: "Get on an airplane Mr. President! And go to the Soviet Union, and get to the bottom of this truth, and maybe you'll have a second term! This is the greatest disgrace in my lifetime!") Bush says Yeltsin should be thanked not punished for trying to learn the fate of Americans.

(President Bush: "He has told that he will go the last mile to find whatever it is exists about a possibility of Americans POWs and MIAs.")

And the President warned American families not to get their hopes up. He said there's no evidence yet that any American prisoners are still alive.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

From: James A. Baker, III

JAB III

1. Japan: Diet Passes Peacekeeping Legislation. In a major victory for Prime Minister Miyazawa, the Diet passed landmark legislation today that will permit Self Defense Forces (SDF) to be sent overseas in UN peacekeeping roles. Although SDF combat troops will not be able to participate without future enabling legislation, the GOJ can now send non-combat troops as UN peacekeepers in support activities, such as logistics, medical, transportation and communications assistance. Under separate legislation, the SDF can participate in international disaster relief as well. Japanese soldiers may be on the ground in Cambodia as UN peacekeepers as early as this fall. (C)

2. Afghanistan: U.S. Delegation Visits. U.S. Special Envoy Peter Tomsen visited Kabul for 30 hours June 14 and 15. He was warmly received by senior officials including Interim Council President Mojaddedi and Defense Minister Masood. He conveyed U.S. support for a political process leading to a stable government, commitment to assist Afghan reconstruction and refugee return, concern about narcotics trafficking, and our desire to see the Soviet POW/MIA issues settled quickly on a humanitarian basis. Ambassador Tomsen reports from New Delhi that the Afghans responded positively on these issues. Mojaddedi passed to him a letter for you, which is now being translated. (C)

3. EC: Macedonia Recognition Deferred. EC Foreign Ministers decided today to postpone a decision on diplomatic recognition of Macedonia after a failed effort by the Portuguese EC Presidency to end the current impasse. Portuguese Foreign Minister Pinheiro suggested that a formula acceptable to Greece permitting EC recognition might be found by the June 26 Lisbon EC Summit. (C)

4. Czechoslovakia: Coalition Talks Update. Former Slovak Prime Minister Meciar postponed the third round of coalition talks, scheduled for June 14, apparently because discussions within his party's governing board had not concluded. With post-election opinion polls still showing a majority of Slovaks favoring a common state, and with Klaus portraying Meciar as pressing for independence, Meciar may have felt the need for consultations before continuing negotiations. Meciar and his delegation are to meet with President Havel today. Meciar has suggested coalition talks resume June 17. (C)

ADDRESS TO U.S.-RUSSIA BUSINESS CONFERENCESCENESETTER

- You and President Yeltsin will address the U.S.-Russia Business Conference on June 17. You will speak first for approximately ten minutes followed by President Yeltsin's ten-minute address. There will not be a question and answer session.
- Your remarks, being prepared separately by Speechwriting and NSC, will emphasize the Administration's efforts to build a level playing field for American businesses which seek to invest in Russia. Specifically, you can point to the Trade, Bilateral Investment and Tax treaties to be concluded at the summit, along with expanded EXIM and OPIC programs, as the foundation of a new U.S. effort to promote vastly increased trade and investment between the U.S. and Russia.
- The U.S.-Russia Business Conference is organized by the Department of Commerce and sponsored by the major American business and trade organizations such as the National Association of Manufacturers, the Business Roundtable, the National Federation of Independent Business and others. We expect that over 150 American business leaders will attend the conference to meet 75-100 Russian businessmen accompanying President Yeltsin on his visit. After your remarks and other morning speakers, participants will break into smaller sectoral groups to discuss investment opportunities.

SIGNING CEREMONY AND JOINT PRESS CONFERENCE

SCENESETTER

You and President Yeltsin will participate in a signing ceremony and joint press conference on Wednesday afternoon, June 17. The signing ceremony will take place first, lasting approximately ten minutes. You and President Yeltsin will sign the following agreements in this order:

- The Washington Charter. This agreement lays out the foundation of our new bilateral relationship and describes the new agenda for our relations: democracy and partnership, international peace and security, and economic freedom.
- A Joint Statement on Strategic Arms Reductions. (Exact text to be negotiated.)
- A Joint Statement on Global Defense. (Exact text to be negotiated.)
- The Agreement on the Destruction and Safeguarding of Weapons and the Prevention of Weapons Proliferation (or SSD Agreement). The agreement provides the legal framework for the provision of Nunn-Lugar assistance to Russia to assist with the transport, safeguarding, and destruction of nuclear, chemical and other weapons.
- The Space Cooperation Agreement. The agreement provides a framework for NASA and the Russian Space Agency to develop new cooperative projects, ranging from science to exploration.
- The Treaty on Double Taxation. The treaty will encourage investment on both sides by adding safeguards for investors in either country in the tax arena. It replaces a less comprehensive treaty we had with the USSR.
- The Bilateral Investment Treaty (BIT). The treaty commits Russia to establish a more attractive investment climate for U.S. investors.

Both you and President Yeltsin will then make statements followed by a joint press conference.

ADDRESS TO THE U.S. AND RUSSIA BUSINESS CONFERENCE
WEDNESDAY, JUNE 17, 1992 \ 9 A.M. \ J.W. MARRIOT

THANK YOU, SECRETARY FRANKLIN FOR THAT KIND INTRODUCTION. PRESIDENT YELTSIN AND MEMBERS OF THE RUSSIAN DELEGATION -- WELCOME TO AMERICA; IT IS GOOD TO HAVE YOU HERE. LET ME SAY HELLO TO SO MANY GOOD FRIENDS HERE TODAY -- ROCKY SCHNABEL FROM COMMERCE, JOHN ROBSON FROM TREASURY, FRED ZEDER FROM OPIC, JOHN MACOMBER FROM EXIM BANK AND ALL MY FRIENDS FROM BUSINESSES AROUND THE COUNTRY.

---

- 2 -

IT IS A PLEASURE FOR ME TO BE HERE FOR THIS HISTORIC U.S.-RUSSIAN BUSINESS CONFERENCE. YOUR TALKS
MARK A SIGNIFICANT STEP FORWARD IN OUR EFFORT TO EXPAND BILATERAL BUSINESS AND TRADE RELATIONS BETWEEN OUR TWO NATIONS. FOR RUSSIA THIS MEANS A GIANT STEP TOWARD FULL REALIZATION OF A MARKET ECONOMY. FOR THE UNITED STATES THIS MEANS JOBS AND ECONOMIC OPPORTUNITY.

FOR THE PAST FOUR MONTHS, THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT HAS BEEN LAYING A SOLID FOUNDATION FOR THE EXPANSION OF OUR TRADE AND INVESTMENT WITH RUSSIA.

LATER TODAY, WE WILL CONCLUDE MAJOR TREATIES AND AGREEMENTS RELATED TO THIS NEW FOUNDATION -- THE TRADE, BILATERAL INVESTMENT AND TAX TREATIES AS WELL AS THE OPIC AND EXIM AGREEMENTS. ALSO EFFECTIVE TODAY, THE UNITED STATES WILL EXTEND "MOST FAVORED NATION" STATUS TO RUSSIA.

I HAVE SUBMITTED TO CONGRESS THE FREEDOM SUPPORT ACT WHICH WILL CLEAR AWAY BARRIERS TO TRADE FROM THE U.S. SIDE AND STIMULATE COMBINED ASSISTANCE EFFORTS WITH OTHER NATIONS.

WE WILL CONTINUE TO PUSH HARD FOR THIS CRITICAL ASSISTANCE PACKAGE AS A KEY PRIORITY. ONCE AGAIN, TODAY I CALL UPON THE CONGRESS TO PASS THIS PACKAGE AS QUICKLY AS POSSIBLE. AND, I ASK EACH U.S. PARTICIPANT IN THIS CONFERENCE TO MAKE YOUR VOICE HEARD ON THE FSA WHICH MEANS SO MUCH FOR THE FUTURE OF TRADE BETWEEN THE U.S. AND RUSSIA. AS OUR ACTIONS CLEARLY INDICATE, WE WANT TO BECOME RUSSIA'S LARGEST AND BEST TRADING PARTNER AND FOREIGN INVESTOR -- A MORE STABLE RUSSIA MEANS A MORE STABLE WORLD.

MY MESSAGE TO THIS CONFERENCE IS SIMPLE -- NEITHER U.S. GOVERNMENT PROGRAMS NOR MULTILATERAL ASSISTANCE WILL BE ENOUGH. PRIVATE SECTOR PARTICIPATION IN THE ECONOMIES OF RUSSIA AND THE OTHER STATES -- ESPECIALLY INVOLVEMENT BY AMERICAN BUSINESS -- IS CRITICAL TO THE SUCCESS OF RUSSIA'S BOLD VENTURE INTO FREE MARKETS. AND, THAT PARTICIPATION MUST BE ON A VAST SCALE -- MEASURED IN BILLIONS OF DOLLARS -- FOR THE CHALLENGE TO BE MET.

TO THAT END, I AM PLEASED TO ANNOUNCE THAT THE OPIC, OVERSEAS PRIVATE INVESTMENT CORPORATION, AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE U.S. AND RUSSIA ENTERS INTO FORCE TODAY. THIS AGREEMENT WILL PERMIT OPIC TO PROVIDE INVESTMENT INSURANCE TO AMERICAN PRIVATE INVESTORS. IT WILL ALSO PROVIDE ADDITIONAL FINANCING AND INVESTOR SERVICES FOR JOINT VENTURES AND OTHER PROJECTS IN THE RUSSIAN FEDERATION.

WITH OPIC AND EXIM, EVERYONE WINS. RUSSIA CAN TAP INTO THE INGENUITY OF AMERICAN BUSINESS MEN AND WOMEN, OUR CAPITAL GOODS, KNOW-HOW AND TECHNOLOGY -- WHICH ARE THE BEST IN THE WORLD. THAT HELP WILL ENABLE RUSSIA TO DEVELOP ITS FOOD AND HEALTH SECTORS, RECOVER ITS ENERGY RESOURCES, PRIVATIZE STATE INDUSTRIES, AND CONVERT MILITARY PLANTS TO CIVILIAN PRODUCTION. AND, AMERICAN BUSINESSES, BY INVESTING AND TRADING WITH RUSSIA, WILL CREATE THOUSANDS OF JOBS HERE AT HOME IN ORDER TO PRODUCE ALL THE AMERICAN GOODS THAT A GROWING ECONOMY WILL DEMAND.

WITH THE OPIC AGREEMENT NOW IN EFFECT, I HAVE ASKED FRED ZEDER, OPIC'S PRESIDENT, TO LEAD A GROUP OF 26 BUSINESS REPRESENTATIVES TO MOSCOW AND OTHER RUSSIAN CITIES FOR ONE-ON-ONE BUSINESS MEETINGS AND SITE VISITS TO DEVELOP PRIVATE SECTOR BUSINESS DEALS. AND, THIS IS JUST THE BEGINNING OF WHAT WILL SURELY BECOME ONE OF THE LARGEST TWO-WAY TRADING RELATIONSHIPS IN THE WORLD. IN 1991, EXPORTS OF AMERICAN MANUFACTURED GOODS TO RUSSIA AND THE OTHER STATES GREW BY ALMOST 40 PERCENT.

FOR THE FIRST TIME, RUSSIA IS PARTICIPATING IN THE COMMUNITY OF FREE MARKET INTERNATIONAL ECONOMIC ORGANIZATIONS -- THE INTERNATIONAL MONETARY FUND, THE WORLD BANK, AND, AT SOME POINT, GATT. THIS WOULD HAVE BEEN UNTHINKABLE JUST A FEW YEARS AGO. AND, WE WILL INVITE RUSSIA AND THE OTHER STATES TO JOIN WITH COCOM MEMBERS IN A NEW INFORMAL COOPERATIVE FORUM TO PROVIDE SIGNIFICANTLY WIDER ACCESS TO HIGH-TECHNOLOGY GOODS PREVIOUSLY DENIED.

AS I SAID EARLIER -- THE HISTORIC TRANSFORMATION OF THE RUSSIAN ECONOMY IS ONE OF THE GREAT CHALLENGES OF OUR TIME. THE HUNDREDS OF BILLIONS OF DOLLARS IN CAPITAL AND TECHNOLOGIES THAT RUSSIA WILL NEED OVER THE NEXT DECADE WILL COME, IN LARGE MEASURE, NOT FROM GOVERNMENTS, BUT FROM PRIVATE BUSINESSES. AS WE ALL KNOW, NEITHER COMMAND ECONOMIES NOR ANY OTHER GOVERNMENT CAN PRODUCE WEALTH -- WEALTH IS PRODUCED BY THE INITIATIVE AND ENERGY OF INDIVIDUAL ENTREPRENEURS.

JUST A FEW MONTHS AGO, IZVESTIA AND HEARST BEGAN PRINTING THE FIRST INDEPENDENT RUSSIAN-AMERICAN NEWSPAPER, "WE." EACH WEEK, MORE THAN 350,000 RUSSIAN LANGUAGE COPIES ARE SOLD AND 50,000 COPIES IN ENGLISH ARE CIRCULATED. THIS ENTERPRISE IS A TRUE JOINT VENTURE -- WITH RUSSIAN AND AMERICAN REPORTERS, EDITORS AND BUSINESS MANAGERS WORKING SIDE-BY-SIDE TO PRODUCE A WEEKLY PAPER.

PRESIDENT YELTSIN, YOUR WISE LEADERSHIP GIVES ME GREAT HOPE FOR THE RUSSIAN ECONOMY. YOUR PEOPLE ARE WORLD-CLASS IN ALL AREAS OF HUMAN ENDEAVOR -- MUSIC, THE ARTS, SPORTS, SCIENCE, AND LITERATURE, TO NAME JUST A FEW. I AM CONFIDENT THAT RUSSIA WILL NOW ALSO PRODUCE FIRST-CLASS ENTREPRENEURS.

I HAVE ASKED SECRETARY FRANKLIN TO TAKE THE LEAD IN ENCOURAGING BILATERAL TRADE AND INVESTMENT AS RAPIDLY AS POSSIBLE.

JUST YESTERDAY, SHE AND RUSSIAN MINISTER OF FOREIGN ECONOMIC RELATIONS AVEN HELD THE FIRST MEETING OF THE NEW INTERGOVERNMENTAL BUSINESS DEVELOPMENT COMMITTEE. SECRETARY FRANKLIN ALSO OPENED A NEW BUSINESS INFORMATION CENTER TO ADVISE AMERICAN COMPANIES REGARDING OPPORTUNITIES IN RUSSIA. AND, SHE WILL BE LEADING A PRESIDENTIAL TRADE MISSION TO GET U.S. BUSINESS ON ITS WAY.

AS A SIGN OF OUR GROWING BUSINESS TIES, SECRETARY FRANKLIN AND MINISTER AVEN YESTERDAY WITNESSED THE SIGNING OF SEVERAL NEW AMERICAN INVESTMENTS THAT WILL SOLIDIFY OUR POSITION AS A LEADING INVESTOR IN RUSSIA.

THESE INITIATIVES SIGNAL OUR WHOLE-HEARTED COMMITMENT TO MASSIVE U.S. INVESTMENT AND TRADE IN RUSSIA. IN TURN, WE CALL UPON RUSSIA AND THE OTHER NEW STATES TO DEVELOP FAVORABLE INVESTMENT CONDITIONS FOR AMERICAN FIRMS.

THIS CONFERENCE HAS SERIOUS PROBLEMS TO ADDRESS --
DELINEATION OF PROPERTY RIGHTS, SANCTITY OF CONTRACTS, CLARIFICATION OF DECISION-MAKING AUTHORITY, CONSISTENT TAX STRUCTURES AND POLICIES, CURRENCY EXCHANGE AND OTHER ISSUES. WE ALL WANT CLEAR UNDERSTANDINGS ABOUT
THE ISSUES, ABOUT WHICH LAWS APPLY AND ABOUT RECOURSE PROCEDURES FOR ARBITRATING DECISIONS. WE ALL WANT FAIR AND EQUITABLE CONTRACTS AND TAX REGIMES TO BE ESTABLISHED SO THE BUSINESS CAN BEGIN.

LET ME CLOSE BY REMINDING THE RUSSIANS AND AMERICANS HERE TODAY -- ALONG WITH YOUR HEAVY RESPONSIBILITY, YOU HAVE A HISTORY-MAKING OPPORTUNITY.
RUSSIA CAN BE FULLY INTEGRATED INTO THE WESTERN ECONOMIC SYSTEM. DURING YOUR MEETING TODAY, I AM CONFIDENT THAT IDEAS WILL BE GENERATED THAT WILL LEAD TO BILLIONS OF DOLLARS OF BUSINESS THAT WILL BENEFIT
BOTH OF OUR NATIONS BY PROVIDING JOBS AND IMPROVING THE STANDARD OF LIVING FOR ALL OUR PEOPLE.

ONE OF AMERICA'S GREAT HUMORISTS, DANNY KAYE, ONCE SAID, "LIFE IS A GREAT BIG CANVAS; THROW ALL THE PAINT ON IT YOU CAN." BECAUSE OF THE HISTORIC EVENTS IN RUSSIA, THE WORLD TODAY IS A HUGE CANVAS. THOSE OF US IN THIS ROOM HAVE THE RARE PRIVILEGE AND OPPORTUNITY TO "PAINT" THAT CANVAS. IF WE DEVOTE OUR INGENUITY, OUR CREATIVITY AND OUR PERSISTENCE TO THE EFFORT, WE CAN PASS ALONG TO FUTURE GENERATIONS A BRIGHT, SHINING MASTERPIECE OF BROTHERHOOD, PEACE AND PROSPERITY AROUND THE WORLD.

MAY GOD GRANT US SUCCESS IN THAT ENDEAVOR. THANK YOU AND GODSPEED TO YOUR DELIBERATIONS.

WE AGREED TO REDUCE MILITARY COMPETITION -- TO WORK IN COMMON TO END CONFLICT.

AND WE CREATED A NEW FOUNDATION FOR OUR ECONOMIC RELATIONS THAT WILL LEAD TO GREATER TRADE AND A MORE PROSPEROUS FUTURE FOR BOTH OUR NATIONS.

MR. PRESIDENT, THE PROGRESS WE'VE MADE WOULD NOT HAVE BEEN POSSIBLE WITHOUT RUSSIA'S COMMITMENT TO DEMOCRATIC REFORM. FROM THE ROLE AND RIGHTS OF AN ELECTED PARLIAMENT -- TO THE RULE OF LAW -- TO THE RIGHT OF EVERY INDIVIDUAL TO LIVE, WORK AND WORSHIP AS THEY WISH:

UNDER THE LEADERSHIP OF ITS FREELY-ELECTED PRESIDENT, RUSSIA IS MOVING FORWARD IN THE DIFFICULT TASK OF DEMOCRACY-BUILDING.

IN THIS EFFORT, RUSSIA WILL DRAW ITS STRENGTH FROM DEFENDERS OF HERITAGE AND HISTORY LIKE SOLZHENITSYN. FROM CRUSADERS FOR UNIVERSAL HUMAN RIGHTS LIKE SAKHAROV. FROM THE MEN AND WOMEN WITHOUT NUMBER WHO KEPT FAITH WHEN FAITH WAS FORBIDDEN -- WHO SPOKE THE TRUTH, WHEN SPEAKING TRUTH COST LIVES. //

FROM MEN AND WOMEN LIKE THE TENS OF THOUSANDS WHO LAST AUGUST RALLIED TO THE RUSSIAN PARLIAMENT -- TO YOUR WHITE HOUSE, MR. PRESIDENT -- TO LAY CLAIM TO A DEMOCRATIC FUTURE. //

MR. PRESIDENT, THE AMERICAN PEOPLE WANT TO SEE RUSSIA REACH THAT DEMOCRATIC DESTINY. I PLEDGE TO YOU TONIGHT OUR COMMITMENT TO SUPPORT YOU ON YOUR JOURNEY. ACROSS THE BOUNDARIES OF LANGUAGE AND CULTURE, ACROSS THE OLD COLD WAR CHASM OF MISTRUST, WE FEEL THE PULL OF COMMON VALUES.

IN YOUR REVOLUTION, WE SEE ECHOES OF THIS NATION'S PAST. IN YOUR HOPES AND DREAMS -- WE SEE OUR OWN. //

TONIGHT, I RAISE MY GLASS:

TO OUR GRACIOUS HOSTS, PRESIDENT AND MRS. YELTSIN; TO THE PEOPLE OF RUSSIA; TO THE SUCCESS OF THE NEW RUSSIAN REVOLUTION -- AND OUR NEW PARTNERSHIP IN FREEDOM. [I WISH YOU: MNOGAYA, MNOGAYA LETA! -- (MUH-
NO-GUY-YAH, MUH-NO-GUY-YAH LEE-AY-TAH]

FROM: JAN NAYLOR am.
Deputy Director of Presidential Personnel

SUBJECT: Personnel Selection - Council of the Administrative Conference of the United States

I. Background

The Administrative Conference of the United States is an independent federal agency established in 1964. The agency examines the procedures by which the government operates and makes recommendations for improvement.

II. Term

Members serve three year terms.

III. Membership

The Council of the Administrative Conference of the U.S. is composed of ten public members and government representatives.

The current membership of the Board is as follows:

IV. Recommendation

Secretary Skinner and I recommend you approve for appointment the following individual:

A. GOVERNMENT REPRESENTATIVE - Select One.

CONSTANCE HORNER, of the District of Columbia, to be appointed a Government Representative to the Council of the Administrative Conference of the United States, vice James W. Cicconi. In August of 1991, Mrs. Horner was appointed Assistant to the President and Director of Presidential Personnel. Mrs. Horner also served as Deputy Secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services from 1989 to 1991. Prior to her HHS appointment, Mrs. Horner served as director the U.S. Office of Personnel Management. (Part-time PA position serving a three year term.)

APPROVE

1-12

DISAPPROVE

Upon your approval, the appropriate clearances will be initiated. Announcement of your intention to appoint this individual will be made as soon as all necessary clearances are completed.

August 1991

CONSTANCE HORNER
ASSISTANT TO THE PRESIDENT AND DIRECTOR OF PRESIDENTIAL PERSONNEL

In August of 1991, President Bush appointed Constance Horner Assistant to the President and Director of Presidential Personnel. In this capacity, Mrs. Horner is responsible for recommending individuals to serve in some 3,500 presidential appointments. She and her staff also work with Cabinet and agency heads on more than 2,000 other non-career appointments in the federal government.

In May of 1989, President Bush appointed Mrs. Horner to the number two position in the Department of Health and Human Services, where she served until assuming her current assignment. As Deputy Secretary, she assisted the Secretary in broad management and policy assignments, as well as chairing a task force charged with the development of proposals for health care financing reform. She also served as Chairman of the White House Domestic Policy Council Working Group on Health and the Vice-President's Competitiveness Council Working Group on the Drug Approval Process.

Prior to her HHS appointment, Mrs. Horner was appointed by President Reagan to be director of the U.S. Office of Personnel Management, formerly the Civil Service Commission, with responsibility for hiring, training, pay, pension and health benefits for the more than 2 million federal employees. She held that post from August of 1985 through her 1989 appointment by President Bush to HHS.

Other government appointments in which she has served include associate director for economics and government for the Office of Management and Budget; director of VISTA and acting associate director of ACTION, VISTA's parent agency; and deputy assistant director of ACTION for policy and planning. She has also served on the President's Commission on White House Fellowships and the President's Commission on Executive Exchange.

Mrs. Horner is a fellow of the National Academy of Public Administration. She has also been elected to membership in the Cosmos Club and selected by the Jaycees as a Healthy American Leader Awardee.

A native of New Jersey, Mrs. Horner is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania and holds a Master of Arts degree in English literature from the University of Chicago. She has lectured at many of the nation's top public policy and business schools on policy development and management within the federal government. She has also taught at secondary schools in the United States and at universities abroad.

FROM: CONSTANCE HORNER <sup>CH</sup> <sub>my/e.</sub>
SUBJECT: Resignation Letter

Attached for your signature is a letter accepting the resignation of the following individual:

LANNON WALKER, as Ambassador to Nigeria.

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

Dear Mr. Ambassador:

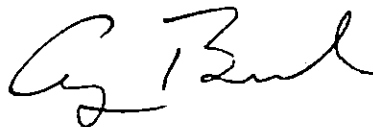

Thank you for your letter of April 21, and I accept your resignation as Ambassador to Nigeria, on a date to be determined.

Your service in Nigeria is a sterling example of the very best that dedicated public servants have to offer. The untiring efforts that you have made to promote the interests of the United States and to strengthen the bonds of friendship that exist between our country and Nigeria have earned you well-deserved accolades as a talented diplomat.

I know that you have had an extremely diverse and challenging portfolio to handle during your tenure. Among other duties, you have promoted the cause of democracy and human rights, protected the welfare of individual American citizens, assisted in the fight against narcotics trafficking, and defended the principles of the free market in order to expand trade and business opportunities in both countries. You can certainly be proud of your record of accomplishment in this important post, and I commend you for a job well done.

Barbara joins me in sending best wishes for every future happiness and for continuing success.

Sincerely,

SUBJECT:

President's Export Council Recommendation

Attached is a letter to you from the President's Export Council (PEC) Chairman Heinz Prechter regarding the Department of Defense's recoupment policy. The PEC recommends recoupment be limited to government-to-government sales of major defense equipment under the Foreign Military Sales program. The PEC letter goes further than present OMB drafts currently being considered by recommending that recoupment be eliminated on all export sales by private U.S. firms.

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

Dear Heinz:

Thank you for transmitting the views of the President's Export Council on the Department of Defense's recoupment policy. I have forwarded your letter to Richard Darman, Director of the Office of Management and Budget (OMB), and Dick Cheney, Secretary of Defense. As you mention in your letter, the Office of Federal Procurement Policy in OMB has been studying this issue and is drafting proposed changes to the present regulations. Your letter comes at a crucial time in OMB's consideration of the recoupment issue, and the Council's recommendation will be an important addition to its deliberations.

I have also sent a copy to the Council on Competitiveness, which has worked to identify regulatory barriers that affect U.S. exporters' competitiveness. Your efforts in researching this issue and bringing it to my attention are greatly appreciated.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature, likely of the President, is written in dark ink. It consists of a stylized, cursive 'C' followed by a long, sweeping horizontal line that extends to the right.

MEMORANDUM FOR The President

SUBJECT: President's Export Council Recommendation

President's Export Council Chairman Heinz Prechter has asked me to send you the attached letter on the policy of levying fees on U.S. exports of products using technology developed for the Department of Defense. This policy of "recoupment" allows the U.S. Government to recover a portion of its outlays on research and development.

The Council recommends recoupment be limited to government-to-government sales of major defense equipment under the Foreign Military Sales program. Currently, recoupment regulations extend to non-major defense equipment, technology licensing and commercial derivatives with as little as 10 percent part commonality with military systems.

The Council contends that recoupment fees raise U.S. firms' costs, which may result in lost contracts, and distort industry's incentive to use defense-related technology for commercial purposes. The members urge the elimination of these obstacles to U.S. competitiveness.

The Office of Management and Budget is considering a proposal to limit the application of recoupment fees. The PEC letter goes further than present OMB drafts by recommending that recoupment be eliminated on all export sales by private U.S. firms.

THE PRESIDENT'S EXPORT COUNCIL

WASHINGTON, D.C. 20230

April 17, 1992

The President
The White House
Washington, D.C. 20500

Dear Mr. President:

Your Export Council is concerned about the policy of levying fees on U.S. exports of products using technology developed for our Department of Defense in order to recoup a portion of its outlays on research and development. We find that the current application of this policy weakens U.S. firms' competitiveness in winning contracts and serves as a barrier to exports.

The 1976 Arms Export Control Act authorized the Department of Defense (DOD) to charge a fee to recoup nonrecurring costs of research, development and production of major defense equipment on transactions under the Foreign Military Sales program. Over time, the policy and implementing regulations have been substantially expanded in scope to include non-major defense equipment, technology licensing and commercial derivative items with as little as 10 percent part commonality with military systems.

We understand that the Office of Federal Procurement Policy in the Office of Management and Budget is drafting a proposal to limit the scope of present recoupment policies, and we strongly support this effort. Specifically, the President's Export Council recommends that the Administration eliminate recoupment on products sold for non-military end use and on transactions between private U.S. firms and foreign buyers. In short, the Council recommends that the Administration limit recoupment to sales of major defense equipment between the U.S. Government and foreign governments, as originally stipulated by the 1976 Arms Export Control Act.

Recoupment fees raise the U.S. firms' costs and, in a crowded and highly competitive international market for goods using military technology, will cause U.S. firms to lose contracts to foreign competitors. Recoupment regulations present an additional, more subtle barrier to competitiveness by distorting industry's incentive to use its technology developed for defense products for commercial purposes.

Letter to The President
Page Two

We urge you to eliminate the obstacles to U.S. competitiveness created by present recoupment policies and, thereby, enhance export opportunities for U.S. firms.

Sincerely,

I. A GIVEN:

- THE PRESIDENT IS THE BEST CANDIDATE IN THE 1992 RACE -- BY FAR.
- NEITHER OF THE OTHER 2 CANDIDATES IS EVEN WELL-QUALIFIED. NEITHER HAS SUFFICIENT EXPERIENCE. NEITHER HAS APPROPRIATE CHARACTER. NEITHER IS PARTICULARLY LIKEABLE.

- IN CLARE AND DRAMATIC CONTRAST, THE PRESIDENT MEETS ALL THESE TESTS THAT THE OTHER 2 CANDIDATES FAIL.

II. A CURIOSITY:

- ~~NO~~ FOREIGN POLICY IS PERCEIVED TO BE IN RELATIVELY GOOD SHAPE. THE ECONOMY IS IN ITS FIFTH (5TH) STRAIGHT QUARTER OF GROWTH -- WITH GROWTH EXPECTED TO STRENGTHEN IN THE QUARTERS AND YEARS AHEAD. THE INCUMBENT IS SUPERIOR TO HIS OPPONENTS. THE ELECTION SHOULD BE A WY-DOWN. AND YET . . .

THE PRESIDENT HAS SEEN
DAILY
Finished
6/1/8

III. THE PROBLEM

THE RISKS ON THE CURRENT COURSE:

- There is a risk that PEROT will get an artificially long free ride:
  - He has effectively had his convention (one delegate), has nominated and financed himself, and is already running in the general election -- but because he has not officially declared, he is not being targeted. (If he makes a major media buy, the problem will be compounded. . . .)
- There is a risk that if PEROT is allowed to rise too far (on the theory that he will later self-destruct), his very rise -- the act, the phenomenon of passing the President in the polls -- may permanently weaken the President.
- There is a risk that BOTH Perot and Clinton will attack the President and not each other (extending the adverse dynamic that was seen in the primaries).
- There is a risk that if-and-when PEROT fades, his support will shift to Clinton more than to the President (if a combined Perot-Clinton attack has seriously weakened the President).
- There is, at the moment, no evident/effective/operative campaign strategy for dealing with these risks.
- There is, thus, a widespread perception that the current WH/campaign management may LOSE this election.

ELEMENTS OF THE PROBLEM (CONT'D)

(1) PEROT -- HE MUST BE TAKEN SERIOUSLY

BECAUSE:

- BROAD-BASED ALIENATION / POPULIST REACTION
(with a non-populist President)
(with a populist, non-issue based candidate)
- TECHNOLOGICAL INNOVATION / NON-MEDIATED MEDIA
- LIMITLESS MONEY
(throwing conventional planning/procedures out the window)
(meaning: unlike previous independents, PEROT NEED NOT FADE FOR LACK OF $)
- JUDO CAPACITY

(2) ELECTORAL VOTE PLANNING DILEMMA

- Campaign planning models are based on 2-person races
- 3-way w/ Perot opens up states not normally or intuitively available -- but allocating resources to such states may be right if Perot stays in, wrong if he fades.
- CALIFORNIA may be gone regardless
(22nd month of recession; job loss greater than any time since W.W. II.)

(3) "ELITE CULTURE v. POPULAR CULTURE" DILEMMA

- See Gingrich paper.
- But NOTE serious inherent limits.

(4) CAMPAIGN/WHITE HOUSE WEAKNESSES

- No cutting edge, no clarity, no coherence
- Less-than-total dedication in some quarters
- continuing personnel weaknesses
- mechanics still faulty
- No Baker, No Zoellick, No Aites.

ELEMENTS OF THE SOLUTION (START)

(A) GENERAL APPROACH

- INTRODUCTORY NOTE: Steeper's polls suggest:
  - (1) - The public thinks very well of the President's character (decency, trustworthiness, strength, likeability, etc.).
  - (2) - The negative "rap" is: He doesn't get it (about domestic concerns). He doesn't care about domestic concerns.
  - (3) - AN IMPORTANT COUNTERPOINT IS: The public believes: "He could do it (address domestic concerns) if he put his mind to it."

GENERAL CONCLUSION: ADDRESS (2) BY BUILDING ON THE STRENGTHS OF (1) and (3) (latent strength).

• FURTHER NOTE: President's (and First Lady's) strength — CHARACTER — is, fortunately BOTH OPPONENTS' WEAKNESS (Clinton, untrustworthy; Perot, dangerous/scary/"dictator").

• DD'S RULE: ALWAYS — ALWAYS — BE ON YOUR STRENGTH ISSUE OR OPPONENT'S WEAKNESS ISSUE.

-- In this case CHARACTER is simultaneously GB strength and P/C weakness.

• GENERAL FORMULA, THEREFORE, SHOW WINNING

- ⊛ CHARACTER, IN ACTS OF UNDERSTANDING, CARING, APPLYING HIMSELF TO RELEVANT DOMESTIC CONCERNS. (Note: As stated, this is NOT particularly ideological.)
- ⊛ (Also note: Need make BALANCE a strength.)

ELEMENTS OF SOLUTION (CONT'D)

(B) POLICY ISSUES TO EMPHASIZE

(AGAIN, DD RULE: OUR STRENGTHS, THEIR WEAKNESSES -- NOTHING ELSE)

NOTE: POLICY ISSUES MUST BE RELEVANT; BUT AFTER PASSING THAT TEST, EMPHASIS SHOULD MOVE TO CHARACTER IN ACTION (more than details of policy wisdom).

(IN RELEVANCE)

• POLLS SUGGEST TOP FIVE ARE:

- ECONOMY
- EDUCATION (and parental involvement)
- SPENDING
- CRIME/DRUGS
- HEALTH

• FORTUNATELY, WE CAN ADDRESS ALL FIVE:

(1) ECONOMY -- AS IT RECOVERS, GET THE PRESIDENT ASSOCIATED WITH THE RECOVERY (VISUALLY, as well as verbally)

(2) EDUCATION -- THIS IS A Perot/Clinton strength area. But the links with parental involvement interests and B. BUSH could be used to highlight CHARACTER (Bush strength)

(3) SPENDING -- GET THE PRESIDENT INVOLVED IN FIGHTING FOR (a) ENACTMENT (b) RATIFICATION OF Bal. Bgt. Const. Am. (Later add: GOVT/CONG. REORGANIZATION)

(4) CRIME/DRUGS -- THIS IS AN AREA of natural strength (vs. Clinton) -- and it fits with CHARACTER/VALUES emphasis. It should get more visibility.

(5) HEALTH -- THIS IS NOT A natural winner. But it should be used to show UNDERSTANDING, (HE GETS IT) ... (ESPECIALLY REL. Baby Room Allocation ...)

FURTHER:

- POPULIST CULTURAL DIVIDE -- Relevant, but not natural strength
- URBAN STRATEGY -- 1/3 relevant, not natural strength
- FOREIGN POLICY/NAT. SEC. -- Natural strength, NEEDS TO BE MADE RELEVANT: "BEAR II"

ELEMENTS OF SOLUTION (STILL MORE)

(C) "COMMUNICATION"

- (1) Cut down on the number of speeches -- media rarely carry favorable verbal messages.
- (2) For selected, important speeches, get first-quality people engaged.
- (3) Give much greater attention to SYMBOLIC (visual) and METAPHORIC (verbal) communication -- In an overloaded, video age, symbolic communication has far greater weight (and visual communication is far more trusted).

- SHOW the President:

- Acting, engaged

- Caring

- Associated with symbols of

- preferred values

- economic recovery

- problem-solving

- [balanced risk-reduction in areas of Perot potential weaknesses]

- (4) Bring back AILES.

- (5) Have more small group mini-debate preparation.

- (6) Fix WH/Campaign people/management/coord. problem

- (7) Devise appropriate counter for Perot free media/no media strategy . . . .

- (a) for free media / no media

- (b) with main line media (who may turn out to be a potential ally if Clinton is 'dead')

(D) PEOPLE

- (1) Add Zoellick.

- (2) Add Baker (maybe).

KEY TO GOVERNING: LEADERSHIP IN THE CULTURAL CIVIL WAR

by Newt Gingrich

SUMMARY

1. The Bush Presidency is severely weakened by its inability to communicate with, arouse and organize its voters and its activists.
2. Only the President's personal leadership can turn things around.
3. We are in a cultural civil war and we need the President's leadership to decisively champion the popular culture against the elite culture.
4. We must be committed to jobs, economic growth and better take home pay as our key social program to make it possible people develop volunteerism, strong families and healthy communities.
5. The President must define for us the five to seven principles which will shape policy choices for his staff and his allies and which will rally the vast majority of Americans.
6. The President must choose three public policy arenas in which to fight for change and to dramatize the public stake in the outcome of the struggle.
7. The President must reorient his staff to stay on offense in implementing his five to seven principles in a way that arouses the popular culture's 70% plus share of the American people so they join a partnership to help him win the struggles on their behalf.

LEADERSHIP IN THE CULTURAL CIVIL WAR

by Newt Gingrich

1. The Bush Presidency is currently under siege. The Washington media, the cultural elites, the unions, the trial lawyers, the big city machine politicians, Democratic congressional incumbents, and left wing activists all focus on attacking President Bush and his Administration. Now Ross Perot's voice is added to the assault.

This concentrated assault must be matched by a sustained, consistent, and when possible coordinated effort to communicate. We must stay on offense, define our opponents, meet their attacks and launch our own.

We must communicate with, arouse and organize our voters and our activists.

Today we can do more of these things reliably and consistently.

This weakens all of us a great deal, threatens the President's re-election and makes a successful second term very unlikely.

Only a significant improvement in our strategies, communications, and coordination will enable us to win decisively and govern effectively.

2. Only the President can get us out of this situation.

A. The President must do it because the public sees him in their living room. In the age of television, because President Bush is so transparently honest, it is painfully clear when he has delegated decisions, failed to master the details and lack a passionate commitment to his Administration's position.

B. The President must do it because only the President can bring order to his staff (White House, Cabinet and campaign). The President currently has a system of well meaning sub-chiefs. With the best of intent they simply slow down, block and delay activities. Napoleon warned that one mediocre general in command will beat two good generals working as a committee. President Bush has at least seven generals (Skinner, Teeter, Darman, Brady, Veutter, Bond, and Kemp), trying to patch together a domestic political policy. Without his daily direction and his strategic instruction, the current system is hopeless and destined to fail.

The President must immerse himself in domestic policy through April of

The elite culture knows President Bush is their enemy. They know he can't embrace their values (class warfare, tax increases, more litigation, quotas, homosexual rights, unlimited abortions, extreme anti-technology, anti-development environmentalists, compulsory unionism and more pork and fight them and does not threaten their power. The result is, they despise him and treat him with contempt (watch their late night comedians and it is clear how they view President Bush and his Administration).

The Bush Administration failed to build on that clear choice. The Bush Administration has sought to appease the elite culture while placating the popular culture. The result is an extraordinarily dangerous middle.

The 1988 Bush campaign was a classic effort to polarize along the lines of the populist culture — elite culture civil war.

The popular culture represents a broad coalition of middle class and traditional American beliefs. It has many internal contradictions but is broadly agreed on work, family, safety, opportunity, patriotism, and belief in a higher being as unifying values. It is defined in large part by its hostility toward and sense of threat from the elite culture. It is badly organized. Its leaders have few and ineffective networks of power. It is usually dominated on a day to day basis by the news media focus on the elite culture's values. However, the popular culture is supported by over 70% of the American people. Spokesmen routinely ignore or reject the values of the elite culture. They can be mobilized to inflict overwhelming defeats on the elite culture (polling on Grenada, Desert Storm, Clarence Thomas, for example).

The elite culture side dominates the news media, higher education, union leadership, trial lawyers, big city governments, left wing activist groups and the Democratic Party. It represents less than 30% of the American people. It is extremely well organized, has self-conscious networks of information and power (note the Robert Bork and Clarence Thomas fights) and is both militant and self-confident of its moral authority to judge, broadcast and if necessary, destroy threatening members of the popular culture.

left wing elite culture and a basic American values popular culture.

3. The greatest problem the Bush Administration faces is its continuing refusal to take sides in the ongoing cultural civil war. We have been in a cultural civil war since the late 1960's. This is a civil war between a

The President must define for his staff, his allies and his voters where he wants to take America and he must lead the process on a daily basis.

on election day 1992 will be seen as cynical and futile. That is why the communicate sincerity and legitimacy. Any goal which is focused on and ends welfare state. Only by aiming at a 90 day legislative program boldly replacing the activists, and forced through a legislative program boldly replacing the he has articulated a program, assembled a winning coalition of voters and America's renaissance. He must assign projects and approve tactics until next year. The President must decide on his vision and strategies for

The popular culture is desperate for a strong, forceful leader. Most members of the popular culture see their lives threatened by economic stagnation, big government, weird values, rampant crime, drug addiction and failing institutions of education, health, etc....

The popular culture wants law and order to repress looting, is anti-racist, but equally anti-violence, is opposed to its taxes subsidizing blasphemy and obscenity, sees big city mayors not as neutral advocates of the poor but as typical big city machine politicians trying to con more money out of the tax payers.

Members of the popular culture are changing their own lifestyles under tremendous pressure. They are seeing great corporations downsize and eliminate coveted jobs. They are having to learn quality and change their approach to work. They have to study more, work longer, spend more carefully and make do with less.

While going through painful changes and living in fear of a difficult future members of the popular culture are infuriated by arrogant, bloated bureaucracies catering to weird interest groups and protected by out of touch politicians who throw away money and get nothing done.

The popular culture wants a tough leader who forces change, confronts the elite culture, tells the truth and cuts through the baloney.

After Desert Storm the popular culture thought President Bush was its leader. Now it is so frustrated that it is seriously considering a gamble on Ross Perot. He is tough, seems a straight talker, has guts, is a hard charger and is outside Washington.

The Bush Administration now is where a Lincoln would have been if, in the summer of 1861 he had said, "yes the South claims to have seceded, has stopped paying taxes, has organized an army, and just forcibly seized Fort Sumter. But do you really believe they want to leave the Union?"

Accepting the reality that there is a cultural civil war and deciding to lead the popular culture is the key to the rest of the Bush Administration.

No Republican leader could side with the elite culture. Therefore, the elite culture will be our active, continuing, destructive opponent.

Trying to survive in the middle frustrates the popular culture, leaves the Bush Administration with no active allies and leads the elite culture to treat us with contempt.

The only plausible path for a successful Bush Administration is to lead the popular culture in winning the cultural civil war. That will require refocusing and reorienting the entire Administration and in many cases shifting personnel to insure we have advocates of the popular culture who understand this civil war.

4. In addition to being the leader of the popular culture in the cultural civil war, the President must be the leader of the economic growth, greater

A. Genuine reforms to help the poor versus political patronage and pork as usual for the big three possibilities are:

Since people can only follow a limited number of continuing struggles we should limit to three the major areas in which we are ready to replace the welfare state and about which we can confront the elite culture confident that a vast majority is on our side.

People are aroused and mobilized by drama. They need decisions and actions by leaders, which are then followed up and explained by speeches. Symbolic and emotional force to be effective mobilizers of mass support. "This shall not stand" was accompanied by 500,000 troops and a United Nations diplomatic effort.

6. The President should define three major policy zones in which he is prepared to fight for change and to dramatize the public stake in the outcome.

5. The President should choose five to seven key principles from the values of the popular culture on which to focus the American people. This will also give the President's staff and his allies a yardstick by which to measure policy options. It is vital for a President to be a teacher both to the country and to his own staff. Citizens need to know how to orient their own lives and how to measure decisions by government and political leaders. The President's allies and Administration need to know what he expects and what he hopes to achieve. Defining these five to seven principles should define much of the America the President hopes to lead, the Administration he wants to manage and the legacy of his Presidency. These principles should be repeated daily in his speeches and daily guides to his staff's decisions.

We are opposed to bigger government, higher taxes and more centralized bureaucracy because they kill jobs. We have learned the lessons of the failure of communism and socialism. We know that hard working, property owning, prosperous citizens do not loot and riot. We believe in the values and the tax and regulatory structure that promotes work, saving, and investing because we know that those values lead to more and better jobs, higher take home pay and greater economic security. The elite culture is anti-wealth creation, anti-free enterprise and pro-centralized bureaucratic government. The elite culture literally does not realize how economically destructive it is. By contrast, Reagan did understand the need for growth and the cost of the welfare state—class warfare—bureaucratic government model. The economic flight is fully as much a part of the cultural war as is the values flight. We must give it equal emphasis and weave the two together into a consistent coherent theme. The historic fact is that sound values and sound economic principles go together and are mutually reinforcing just as destructive values and destructive economic principles go together to create a negative synergism that kills jobs, kills families, kills neighborhoods and ultimately is killing people. The choice is clear. We simply have to have the power and the discipline to make it clear.

But it wants to know what it will achieve by rallying and what it should expect from him and his team.

The vast majority of the American country want to rally to him.

None of this can be solved by anyone but the President.

Conclusion

In the absence of clearly defined vision and strategies each tactic occurs in isolation. It does not build up on events before it and it does not lead to later events. There is no momentum.

Within this confusion every tactical decision is an exhausting agony that takes too long, arrives too late and achieves too little.

7. Only after the President has taken charge, taken sides in the cultural civil war, refocused on economic growth, outlined his key principles, and chosen his three zones of emphasis can he hope to organize and focus his staff and allies. Today he has very well meaning people operating in a vacuum without a clear definition of vision and strategies. Every decision is written on a blank slate. Are the mayors neutral spokesmen for the poor or the pork barrel and patronage advocates of big city machines? Is the Democratic Congress and leadership our partisan and values opposition with whom we can communicate but not negotiate or are they potentially good guys who share our values? Is the Washington media our elite culture opponent to be discounted or a legitimate decider of national values to be appeased?

These may not be the right three zones but they are examples of serious public policy reform areas which would rally a majority to, energize the President's supporters and put the Democrats at a severe (McGovern-Mondale-Dukakis) disadvantage.

A. We should emphasize economic growth, jobs, and higher take home pay and lower taxes as the party of free enterprise and economic opportunity versus economic stagnation, higher taxes, more regulations, red tape and bureaucracy and more unemployment from the welfare state policies of the left.

B. Legal reforms to create jobs and lower the cost of health care versus trial lawyers self-interest at the expense of the rest of us.

C. We should emphasize economic growth, jobs, and higher take home pay and lower taxes as the party of free enterprise and economic opportunity versus economic stagnation, higher taxes, more regulations, red tape and bureaucracy and more unemployment from the welfare state policies of the left.

A NEW U.S.-RUSSIA PARTNERSHIP

Mr. President, distinguished members of the Russian delegation, and distinguished guests. This has been a historic summit meeting that brings us to the threshold of a new world -- a world of hope and opportunity. The collapse of the USSR and the emergence of a democratic Russia provides us with the greatest opportunity in our lifetimes to win the permanent, democratic peace that had eluded us through two world wars and the long Cold War that followed.

President Yeltsin, as a result of this first-ever U.S.-Russia summit, we have indeed formed a truly new relationship -- one of peace, friendship, trust and growing partnership. I am confident that this new relationship and our historic agreements at this summit will lead to a safer, more stable and peaceful world into the next century.

Let me just say to the American people: our support for Russia is unshakable because it is in our interest. Success for Russian democracy will enhance the security of every American. Think for just a minute about what that means -- not for presidents, nor for heads of state or historians, but for parents and their children. It means a future free from fear. // That is why I call upon the Congress to act quickly on the Freedom Support Act, so that American support reaches Russia when it is needed most -- now.

During the past two days, the United States and Russia have defined a new military and security relationship. It is a new era. President Yeltsin and I have just signed a statement that will lead to the greatest arms reductions of the nuclear age -- reductions far deeper than we could have hoped for even six months ago.

At this summit, we have also opened a new chapter in our economic relationship. The economic agreements we signed today will pave the way for trade and investment in Russia, as will Most Favored Nation status which takes effect today. We support the landmark and courageous economic reforms President Yeltsin has put into place. We hope very much that Russia and the International Monetary Fund can reach a standby agreement soon in order to unlock the G-7's economic support package. The United States will continue its humanitarian food and medical assistance to Russia, and the longer-term effort to provide badly-needed technical assistance.

Finally, President Yeltsin and I signed the Washington Charter -- which states formally our mutual commitment to a peaceful future together as democratic partners. This document, along with the many agreements we signed from Open Lands to Peace Corps, will help to put behind us for good the sad and too often tragic legacy of the Cold War. President Yeltsin's commitment to me to uncover all facts pertaining to American POW and MIAs is yet another symbol of our changed relationship. And his commitment to also investigate the KAL 007 tragedy, in which 61 American citizens lost their lives nearly nine years ago, speaks to our mutual willingness to face some of the unpleasant truths of the past together.

During these two days, we embarked on a new partnership. It is now within our power to alter forever our relationship so that it becomes the greatest force for peace -- a democratic peace -- the world has ever known. Let that be our vision for the future. And today, Mr. President, I pledge to you my commitment to make that vision a reality.

VELTSIN VISIT (Reuter) -- President Yeltsin gave an applauding Congress his personal pledge that any American prisoner of war held in Russia will be found and returned to his family. "I promise that every document, every archive will be inspected to clarify the fate of every American gone missing," Yeltsin said in an ad-libbed, emotional high point of his historic address. "I, as president, pledge to you: If we had detained a single American, he can be found and I will find him and return him to his family." Hundreds of senators and congressmen rose for a long, sustained ovation -- one of the longest of a heavily applauded speech.

(AP) -- President Yeltsin promised Congress that communism is dead and declared that "we shall not let it rise again in our land." "History must not be allowed to repeat itself," Yeltsin said. "That is why economy and political reforms are the primary task for Russia today. We are facing challenges no one has ever faced before." And seeking to ease the fears of lawmakers skittish about voting new foreign aid for Russia, he added, "Today, I am telling you what I tell my fellow countrymen: I will not go back on the reforms."

(Reuter) -- President Bush pledged U.S. support for Russia's efforts to transform its economy and called on Congress and U.S. businessmen to do their part. Declaring that helping Russia was also in America's interest, Bush urged Congress to pass a Freedom Support Act that would unlock help for U.S. investment in Russia. "The Freedom Support Act will benefit the United States of America and will benefit world peace," Bush told a U.S.-Russia business conference. Bush called private-sector participation in Russia "critical to the country's success in adopting a market economy."

VIETNAM/POW (AP) -- Vietnamese officials rejected as "not at all credible" statements by President Yeltsin that some Americans were taken prisoner by Soviet authorities in the Vietnam War and may still be alive. The officials denied that Soviet authorities removed any American prisoners from Vietnam to the Soviet Union, and said the Vietnamese returned all American POWs to the U.S. after the 1973 Paris Agreements ended the war. "Frankly, we don't believe at all the recent statements by Boris Yeltsin," said Nguyen Ngoc Dinh, a diplomat at Vietnam's mission to the U.N.

ECONOMY/FED (AP) -- The Fed said the economy continued to improve early this month, with manufacturing strengthening nationwide. The Fed's survey of regional economic activity, compiled by its 12 regional banks, also found increases in consumer spending everywhere except the Northeast and the West Coast. Housing construction activity remains well above last year's levels in most areas and demand for bank loans also is increasing, it said.

WORKER PRODUCTIVITY (AP) -- Productivity of American workers jumped 2.7 percent during the first quarter of 1992, the largest increase in nearly two years, the Labor Department said. Labor said the increase matched a 2.7 percent advance in the second quarter of 1990 as the economy was sliding into recession.

NAFTA/ENVIRONMENT (AP) -- Actions by U.S. negotiators working on NAFTA "do not inspire confidence" that the pact will contain adequate safeguards to protect the environment, the Natural Resources Defense Council said. "A fundamental shift in direction will be necessary for the trade agreement to merit environmental support for congressional approval," the coalition said in a report.

PANAMA/1989 INVASION (Richmond/AP) -- The U.S. is not liable for damages to businesses in Panama that were looted during the U.S. invasion in 1989, a federal appeals court ruled. The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said the U.S. was protected by sovereign immunity, meaning it cannot be sued without its permission.

IRAQ/OVERFLIGHTS (U.N./Reuters) -- Iraq charged that U.S. aircraft on overflights had dropped bombs on Iraqi agricultural areas, causing fires and hampering harvests. In a letter to Secretary General Boutros-Ghali, Iraqi U.N. representative Abdul Amir al-Anbary listed three occasions this month when he said such bombing had occurred: June 7, 9 and 10. Anbary said these "cowardly attacks" were a flagrant violation of the Persian Gulf War cease-fire and revealed the falseness of U.S. assertions that the aircraft in question were carrying out observation missions.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: MARLIN FITZWATER

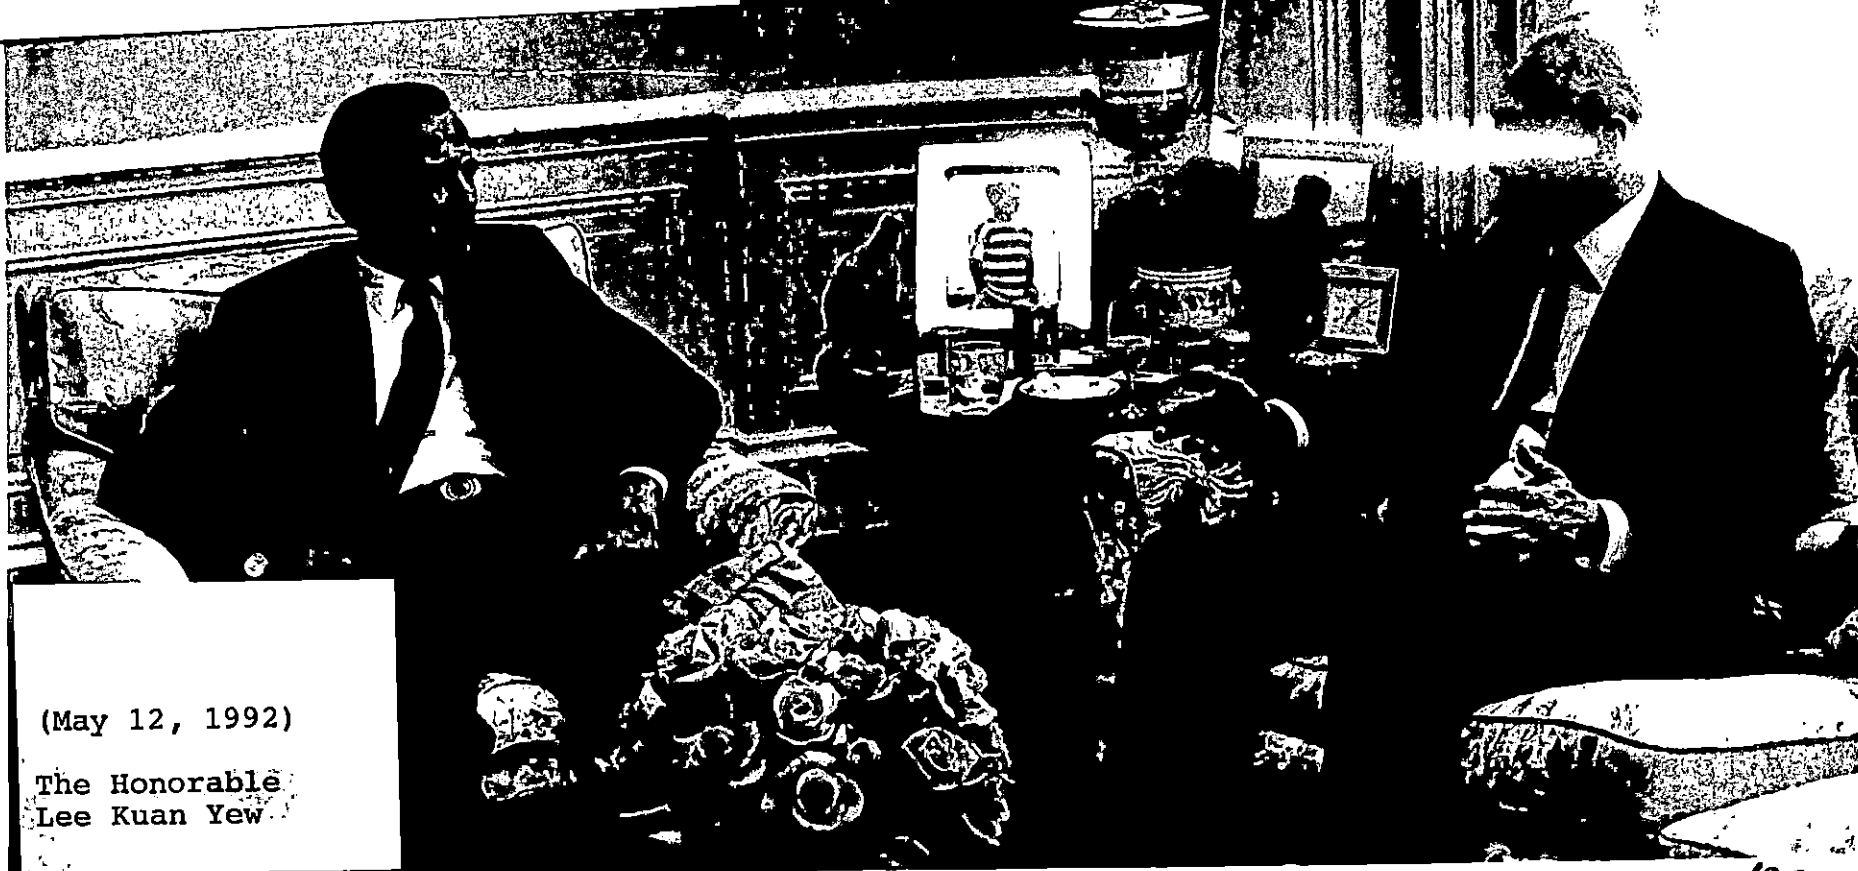

SUBJECT: Governor Schaefer

Marlin

*I called
Don - him

Yesterday Frank Tranor from Governor Schaefer's office called to inform me that the Governor, at a briefing on his latest trip overseas, blasted the press corps for criticizing you on your environmental policies. Governor Schaefer also pointed out to the press that you have been working very hard on the environment and have a very good record. Frank Tranor wanted to pass this along in light of your visit to Chesapeake Bay today.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: BRENT SCOWCROFT

SUBJECT: Letter from Singaporean Senior Minister Lee Kuan Yew Concerning China and Human Rights

Purpose

To respond to Singaporean Senior Minister Lee Kuan Yew's June 4th letter.

Background

Following his May <sup>12</sup>26 dinner with you, Lee raised the subject of U.S.-China relations with the Chinese Ambassador in Singapore to convey a personal message from Lee to Chinese President Yang Shangkun. Lee suggested that a prisoner release timed to coincide with MFN deliberations here would be a welcome gesture. The Chinese responded to Lee on June 4th with what appeared to Lee to be initiatives on a number of human rights cases. In fact, all of the cases the Chinese reported to Lee were individuals who had been released or granted permission to depart China much earlier, well before Lee's request for Chinese action. (A status report on each of the cases is attached at Tab B.)

The response at Tab A expresses respect and gratitude to Lee for his serious efforts to improve U.S.-Chinese relations, but also makes clear our perception that the Chinese have not undertaken substantial human rights initiatives since Secretary Baker's November, 1991 visit to Beijing. On the contrary, the Chinese have not yet implemented all that they promised during the Baker trip; they beat and detained Western journalists on June 3; they detained labor leader Han Dongfang on June 4 for at least a day, possibly to prevent him from speaking out on the anniversary of Tiananmen; and they refused entry to one of the members of the Commission on Broadcasting in Asia (Stephen Mosner, who has a long and bitter history with the Chinese), prompting the Commission to cancel what might have been a constructive fact-finding trip to China.

RECOMMENDATION

That you sign the response to Lee at Tab A.

Status Report of Individuals Mentioned by Lee

Han Dongfang

Former worker and labor leader Han Dongfang was reported to have been detained on June 4th. It is our impression that he was only detained temporarily, perhaps to prevent him from speaking out on the anniversary of Tiananmen. The Chinese have informed us that he will receive permission to leave China. Han has vacillated on the question of whether he wants to leave.

Wang Ruowang

Wang was notified in mid-May that his application to leave China was approved. The Chinese promised Secretary Baker in November 1991 that individuals with no criminal charges pending, like Wang, would be allowed to leave China without obstruction.

Wen Yuankai

Like Wang, Wen was notified in mid-May that his application to leave China was approved.

Liu Qing

The Chinese promised Under Secretary Kanter in early May that an exit permit would be issued to Liu. We have not yet confirmed that Liu has permission to depart China.

Li Peicheng and Li Longqing

After being detained since February 1991, Li Peicheng and Li Longqing left China in July 1991 and are now resident in Hong Kong.

Jin Dechen, Liu Guandong, and Wang Yijun

We were informed May 22 that these three elderly priests had been released.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: BRENT SCOWCROFT BS

SUBJECT: Japanese Growth Package Announcement During Miyazawa Visit

Purpose

To ask Prime Minister Miyazawa to announce a growth package during his summit with you.

Background

Part of the Tokyo Declaration signed by you and Prime Minister Miyazawa in January was a "Strategy for World Growth" (Tab B). The Government of Japan (GOJ) is reported to be preparing a substantial growth package. Kanemaru alluded to this during his visit with you. We remain concerned, however, that the Finance Ministry may wish to hold off on announcing this as long as possible and may also be trying to downsize the package.

Larry Eagleburger will be travelling to Japan this weekend to participate in the Cambodia aid conference. This would be a good opportunity to make our desires for an announcement of a substantial growth package known to him. While your letter (Tab A) does not mention a number, Larry will tell Miyazawa that our expectation is for a package of eight trillion yen (about $60 billion). This is consistent with indications we've received from GOJ.

RECOMMENDATION

That you sign the letter to Prime Minister Miyazawa at Tab A.

Dear Mr. Speaker:

As you are aware, I am strongly committed to continue construction of the Superconducting Super Collider. It is a crucial investment in our Nation's scientific, technological, and economic future.

This program is well managed and has made significant technical progress. It has attracted many of the finest scientific and technical minds in our country. Our national laboratories, over 100 universities, and our Nation's most advanced high-tech industries are actively engaged in this important endeavor.

We have come far with this vital program, and now is not the time to falter. Any slowing down will result in an eventual increase in the cost. In addition, any reduction in our commitment to the Super Collider would not only jeopardize ongoing negotiations with potential international participants just as those negotiations are yielding positive results, but would also undermine the United States' reputation as a reliable international partner.

We cannot afford to relinquish our leadership in science and technology. Our Nation's economic competitiveness and standard of living rests on it. Therefore, I urge the House to reject any amendment to H.R. 5373, the Energy and Water Development Appropriations Bill, that would eliminate funding for the Super Collider.

Sincerely,

The Honorable Thomas S. Foley
Speaker of the House of Representatives

Dear Jacques:

Just a quick note to you now that I am back in Washington. Thanks so much for attending the luncheon discussion in Rio last Friday. I learned from all the presentations.

In particular, I enjoyed our candid conversation during lunch and appreciate the leadership role you played in the wider discussion which followed.

I applaud your tireless commitment to the protection of our global environment. You have raised the consciousness of millions and for that we -- and generations to come -- owe you a great deal. Thank you!

Best wishes.

Dear Mr. President,

I wrote you in February 1989 and asked if the Yale Club might do your portrait. You generously consented, and after three years it has been completed.

The portrait is absolutely striking and I believe that you and Bar will agree. We are ready to hang it in our most prominent place, but before doing so I would like to ask you a question.

Is there a remote possibility that you and Bar, or Bar, could come to a very private unveiling with the artist and officers and trustees of the Club? There would be no publicity about the event and it could be done on very short notice, whenever convenient to you.

The portrait is so good that I think it would make an ideal cover for one of your campaign documents.

We all support you in your election campaign and wish you all the best.

Please say hello to Bar and I look forward to hearing from you.

God bless,

The U.S. government, in the midst of a budget crisis, is eager to have Japan shoulder much of the financial load of reconstruction efforts there.

Japan had hoped that the dismantling of the Soviet government last year would soften Moscow's views on the islands, but to date there has been no significant public change.

The 77-year-old Kanemaru, the leader of the largest faction in the ruling Liberal Democratic Party, is often called the most powerful man in Japanese politics. He is known for forthright praise of the United States at a time when other Japanese leaders have appeared more circumspect. Earlier this year, he scolded Japanese politicians who caused a furor by publicly questioning American work habits.

"Japan arrived where it is today thanks to the United States," Kanemaru said in the interview, citing U.S. aid for his country's postwar reconstruction. "I believe that the majority of the Japanese people would share my views."

Kanemaru said his country's military alliance with the United States must continue. Asked whether the demise of the Soviet threat might pull the two countries apart, he said they should reaffirm their ties. "No one can say with confidence that there will emerge a world with no conflict," he added.

Kanemaru alluded to continuing Japanese mistrust of Russia, referring to it as "the northern threat." He contrasted Russia's refusal to give up the disputed islands with the United States' return to Japan of Okinawa island in 1972.

Kanemaru said he told Bush that Japan would work to pump up its economy, which like the United States' has slowed.

The United States is urging Japan to accelerate government spending by passing a supplemental budget this fall. Washington officials have expressed hope that such a move would spur the Japanese economy as a whole and would draw more U.S. imports.

Kanemaru offered less assurance on another American request—that Tokyo side with Washington in stalled negotiations to change the basic rules of world trade. Underway since 1987, the talks are organized under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

The United States wants to phase down government subsidies to agriculture worldwide. But Japan, heeding a vocal and politically powerful farm lobby, has opposed many of the U.S. initiatives. "This is a very difficult issue," Kanemaru said.

Asked about the U.S. presidential election, Kanemaru predicted that undeclared independent candidate Ross Perot would make it a "tough" three-sided race. "I just wonder what will become of the two major parties," he said.

He responded to a question about whether there was fear in Japan that Bush, widely regarded there as a friend, would lose the election by noting that he considered himself a personal friend of the U.S. president. Saying he was speaking only for himself, Kanemaru said he hopes Bush wins.

HOW TO CUT AND PEEL A KOREAN PEAR

You will find that the Korean pear more closely resembles the shape of an apple than, for example, the oval shape of a Bartlett pear. In fact, the most common method of cutting and peeling a Korean pear is very similar to cutting wedges of apple.

The pear is cut through its core into quarters or eighths. The tough skin and seeds are cut from each wedge. The resulting portion of fruit is quite juicy and may be eaten with a knife and fork.

Dear Mr. President:

What a pleasure to receive your warm greetings and to have the opportunity to respond to your kind words of support. I, too, believe that our meetings have amplified the friendly alliance between our two countries, and I appreciate your message of encouragement regarding world peace. Be assured that I shall continue to do everything possible to promote global tranquility.

The carton of Korean pears arrived in perfect condition, and if I may take exception to your words in this instance, it is no "small gift." They are not only a beautiful expression of goodwill but also a delicious treat that enhanced our special celebration.

Dear Mr. President,

On this happy occasion of your sixty-eighth birthday Mrs. Roh and I offer you and Mrs. Bush our warmest congratulations.

I also would like to take this opportunity to express our admiration for the efforts you have exerted to maintain peace and promote democracy in the world and congratulate you that your efforts are bearing fruitful results. We join all your supporters and admirers in hoping that your courageous and far-sighted leadership will continue to lead America and the world in bringing peace, freedom and well-being to all mankind in the years ahead.

I believe that the six meetings we have had thus far have significantly strengthened the friendship and alliance between our two countries and that our relations built on mutual trust will continue to prosper.

May God bless you with continued good health and happiness.

Dear Ben:

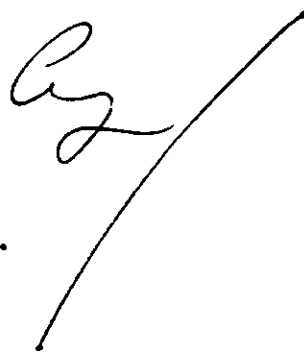

Thank you for your letter about health care. Thank you, as well, for the encouraging words that you shared. Knowing that Barbara and I are in your prayers is a great comfort to both of us. I agree with your advice, and I will continue to stand for what I believe.

Having your support for the tax credit component of our health plan is gratifying. We believe that if we make tough choices about costs in current programs, we can pay for tax credits without having to raise taxes.

Cost containment is certainly the most challenging part of health care reform. Our plan relies on market forces. Some people object, saying the current situation shows that markets do not work. Our answer is that the market approach has not been tried. The plan that we have advanced calls for making information available so that consumers can choose the best value for their health care dollar.

Keep up the good work at St. Luke's and in all the many activities of the Diocese.

The Honorable George H. W. Bush
President of the United States
The White House
Washington, D.C. 20500

Dear George,

I am overdue in writing to you, but I wish to express my strong support for you as you campaign for President. I know that this has been a very unusual campaign, and, in fact, an extremely difficult one, for a host of reasons. However, I believe you have conducted yourself magnificently and come across as not simply another candidate scrambling for office, but as a fine President and a good man, seeking an opportunity to continue your good leadership of this nation and of the world.

I have never been asked to be anyone's political consultant, but my advice to you is to continue being who you are and to stand for the things that you stand for. Do the things that you do because they are the right and good thing to do, and don't succumb to that political temptation to try to be all things to all people. George, the people who don't like you in this country are not going to vote for you anyway, and, if this economy in the nation will improve, you are a "shoe-in!"

I do have one item on my agenda, which is the situation of health care in this country. As you know, I am the Chairman of the Board of Directors of St. Luke's Episcopal Hospital, a fine institution that offers top quality health care. We are continually trying to address the problems of health care and project the future of our hospital, especially with the growing health care crisis in which we are living. We bring in top consultants in the field and wrestle with these problems as best we can.

As everyone knows, there are two main aspects to the problem. The first part of the problem is that there is a large segment of persons in our society who do not have health insurance, cannot afford it at today's prices, and are thereby unable to have what we would call adequate health care. The second part of the problem is finding some way of containing the skyrocketing costs of health care, which is the major inflationary problem that businesses are struggling with, in trying to offer health care insurance to their employees. I suppose the third facet of the problem is that we, the American people, demand top flight health care, including the freedom to choose our physicians and see specialists for anything that afflicts us, while we are ready to sue anyone in sight if we don't get perfect health care. At the same time, no one, neither employers nor employees, neither doctors nor hospitals, nor insurance companies, nor tax payers, nor legislators, is willing to pay for it.

The Hon. George H. W. Bush
May 8, 1992

Of the proposals being considered, your voucher plan is probably the best, with one exception, which is that there is not adequate funding provided for it. I wrote to you earlier asking that you consider the idea of asking those of us who receive health insurance from our employer to pay income tax on the value of the premium of that free health insurance that we receive, with the new revenues devoted to paying for the vouchers and health insurance for those who have none. Yes, it is a proposed new tax, which no one, especially one running for political office, wants to propose during an election year, but, if we don't do something, the whole health care mess is going to explode in our faces. Then there will be those wanting more drastic solutions that would all but destroy the health care system for everyone. The proposal I have suggested, which could alternately be used to beef up the Medicaid Program instead of going for the voucher program, would not make a perfect system, but it would improve what we have and provide some basic health care for many persons who now have none.

The second part of the problem is to me even more difficult, and that is how to provide some cost containment in our health care system. I really don't know the answer. However, as bad as it might sound, and although I would be the last one to propose the price control system, which has been disastrous in every other area in the past, maybe some kind of limitation of increases in hospital room costs and doctor's charges, to, something like five per cent increase per year, would be one way to go. In any case, a reform of our health care system which does not allow for cost containment will, in a few years, be back in trouble.

Please know that you and Barbara are in my daily prayers, even as there are many, many more like me who are pulling for you.

With warmest regards to both of you,

Dear Lew,

Thanks so much for the beautiful flowers and your kind letter, which I just received. I have passed on your invitation to my scheduler to see if it can be worked out.

Barbara and I really enjoyed the gala at Ford's Theater last Sunday and especially enjoyed having you and your family over at the White House.

Please send them my warmest regards.

Sincerely,

Re: April Merchandise Trade and
Weekly Initial Unemployment Claims

First, the good news. Initial claims for state unemployment insurance declined very slightly in the week ended June 6. At 407,000, this is the fifth straight week initial claims have been between 400,000 and 410,000. Earlier this year, they were running 450,000. When initial claims get down to 350,000 to 375,000 range, the economy is usually adding a substantial number of jobs.

Second, the not so good news. The April merchandise trade deficit increased to $7.0 billion from about $5.6 billion. Exports declined about $0.7 billion and imports rose about $0.7 billion, mostly from higher oil imports. Most economists have expected the trade balance to deteriorate a little as growth picked up in the U. S. as it was slowing abroad. The April increase was larger than expected. The larger trade deficit will reduce second quarter GDP growth.

Congratulations on your fabulous Arms Control success. Have a great trip to my home state.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: MICHAEL J. BOSKIN mb

SUBJECT: Merchandise Exports and Imports in April, Commerce Department Release, Tomorrow, 8:30 a.m.

The merchandise trade deficit increased in April to $7.0 billion, the highest monthly deficit in nearly a year and a half. In March, the deficit was $5.6 billion. Private analysts had expected the trade deficit to narrow in April to $5.5 billion.

Merchandise exports fell 1.9 percent in April. Export performance was mixed across the principal end-use categories. The largest decline occurred for nonautomotive capital goods and the largest increase occurred for foods, feeds, and beverages.

Merchandise imports rose 1.6 percent in April. Import performance also was mixed, with imports of industrial supplies and materials rising strongly, and imports of "other" merchandise showing a significant decline.

The graph below shows that the merchandise trade deficit has been on an upswing in recent months, after hitting a nine-year low in February. If the larger deficit continues, it would have a significant negative effect on real GDP in the second quarter.

Re: May Housing Starts and Industrial Production

Good news. First, as expected, industrial production increased in May, up 0.6 percent over April. This was slightly more than private analysts predicted. Capacity utilization also rose, to 79.0 percent.

Better yet, housing starts rebounded substantially in May, following a sharp decline in April. Starts increased 11 percent. Private analysts were all over the place in their forecast, but averaged a 4.9 percent predicted increase.

Finally, domestic auto sales for the first 10 days of June were at a quite respectable 6.5 million annual pace.

Most of the concerns I hear in the business community are in the non-auto retail sector, which has flattened out after its strong performance early in the year.

SUBJECT: Housing Starts in May, Commerce Department
Release, Tomorrow Morning, 8:30 a.m.

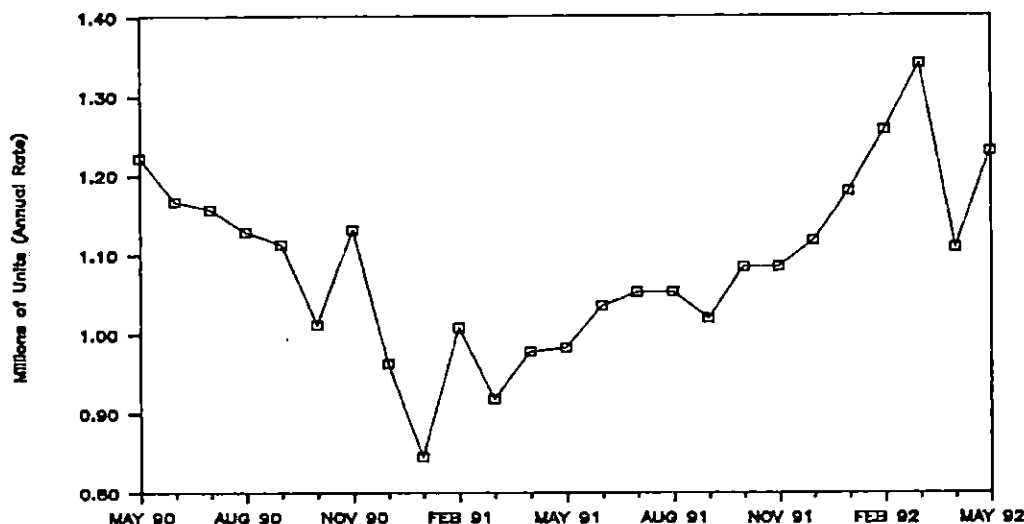

Housing starts rose 11 percent in May to an annual rate of 1.230 million. Private analysts had expected a smaller increase of 4.9 percent. The larger-than-expected increase in starts in May followed the surprisingly large decline of over 17 percent in April. In May, starts rose in all regions of the country.

Single-family starts rose 9.8 percent in May. Multi-unit starts, which can be volatile, rose 18.6 percent in May, after falling nearly 43 percent in April.

Building permits--often an indicator of future housing starts--fell slightly in May. Permits rose for single-family houses, but fell for multi-unit housing.

The graph below shows that housing starts recovered strongly in May from the sharp decline in April, reaffirming the upward trend from January of last year. Starts have increased 25 percent over the past year.

SUBJECT: Industrial Production and Capacity Utilization in May, Federal Reserve Release, Tomorrow, 9:15 a.m.

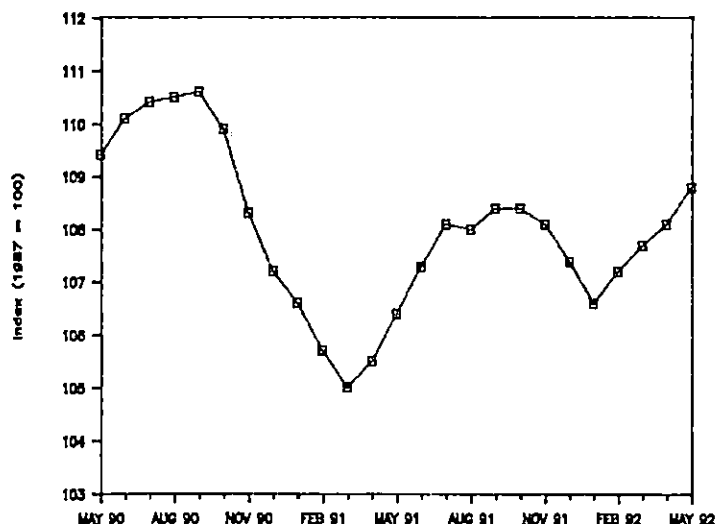

Industrial production--the output of the Nation's factories, mines, and utilities--increased 0.6 percent in May, the fourth consecutive monthly increase. Private analysts had expected a 0.5 percent increase in May.

Manufacturing production increased 0.7 percent in May, with production of motor vehicles and parts rising 3.8 percent. Mining and utilities production fell 0.3 percent.

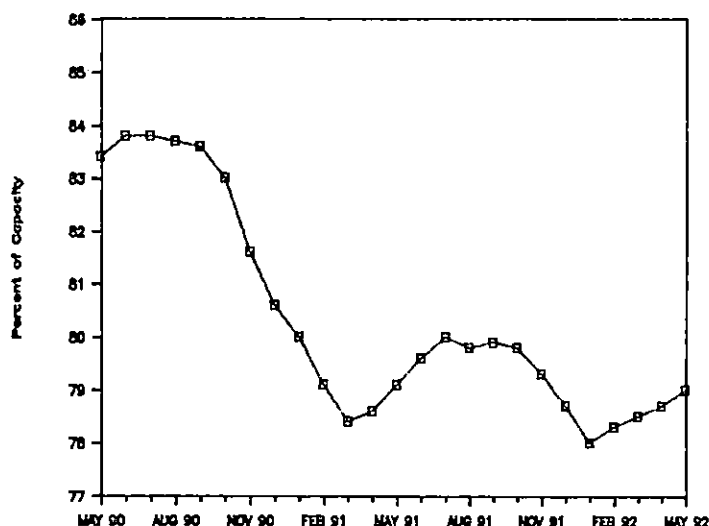

For all industry, capacity utilization rose to 79.0 percent in May from 78.7 percent in April. In manufacturing, capacity utilization rose to 78.1 percent in May.

The first graph below shows that, over the past 4 months, industrial production has more than regained the loss that occurred between October and January. In May, industrial production was 2.2 percent above its year-ago level. The second graph shows that capacity utilization has increased recently, but remains below the levels of last fall.

KEY TO GOVERNING: PRESIDENTIAL LEADERSHIP AT THE PERSONAL LEVEL

by Newt Gingrich

SUMMARY

1. The Bush Presidency is severely weakened by its inability to communicate with, arouse and organize its voters and its activists.
2. Only the President's personal leadership can turn things around.
3. The President must define for us the five to seven principles which will shape policy choices for his staff and his allies and which will rally the vast majority of Americans.
4. The President must choose three public policy arenas in which to fight for change and to dramatize the public stake in the outcome of the struggle.
5. The President must reorient his staff to stay on offense in implementing his five to seven principles in a way that arouses the popular culture's 70% plus share of the American people so they join a partnership to help him win the struggles on their behalf.

May 20, 1992

LEADERSHIP IN THE CULTURAL CIVIL WAR

by Newt Gingrich

1. The Bush Presidency is currently under siege. The Washington media, the cultural elites, the unions, the trial lawyers, the big city machine politicians, Democratic congressional incumbents, and left wing activists all focus on attacking President Bush and his Administration. Now Ross Perot's voice is added to the assault.

This concentrated assault must be matched by a sustained, consistent, and when possible coordinated effort to communicate. We must stay on offense, define our opponents, meet their attacks and launch our own.

We must communicate with, arouse and organize our voters and our activists.

Today we can do more of these things reliably and consistently.

This weakens all of us a great deal, threatens the President's re-election and makes a successful second term very unlikely.

Only a significant improvement in our strategies, communications, and coordination will enable us to win decisively and govern effectively.

2. Only the President can get us out of this situation.

A. The President must do it because the public sees him in their living room. In the age of television, because President Bush is so transparently honest, it is painfully clear when he has delegated decisions, failed to master the details and lack a passionate commitment to his Administration's position.

B. The President must do it because only the President can bring order to his staff (White House, Cabinet and campaign). The President currently has a system of well meaning sub-chiefs. With the best of intent they simply slow down, block and delay activities. Napoleon warned that one mediocre general in command will beat two good generals working as a committee. President Bush has at least seven generals (Skinner, Teeter, Darman, Brady, Yeutter, Bond, and Kemp), trying to patch together a domestic political policy. Without his daily direction and his strategic instruction, the current system is hopeless and destined to fail.

The President must immerse himself in domestic policy through April of next year. The President must decide on his vision and strategies for America's renaissance. He must assign projects and approve tactics until he has articulated a program, assembled a winning coalition of voters and activists, and forced through a legislative program boldly replacing the welfare state. Only by aiming at a 90 day legislative sweep in 1993 can you communicate sincerity and legitimacy. Any goal which is focused on and ends on election day 1992 will be seen as cynical and futile. That is why the President's program must be implemented in 1993.

The President must define for his staff, his allies and his voters where he wants to take America and he must lead the process on a daily basis.

3. The President should choose five to seven key principles from the values of the popular culture on which to focus the American people. This will also give the President's staff and his allies a yardstick by which to measure policy options. It is vital for a President to be a teacher both to the country and to his own staff. Citizens need to know how to orient their own lives and how to measure decisions by government and political leaders. The President's allies and Administration need to know what he expects and what he hopes to achieve. Defining these five to seven principles should define much of the America the President hopes to lead, the Administration he wants to manage and the legacy of his Presidency. These principles should be repeated daily in his speeches and daily guides to his staff's decisions.

4. The President should define three major policy zones in which he is prepared to fight for change and to dramatize the public stake in the outcome.

People are aroused and mobilized by drama. They need decisions and actions by leaders, which are then followed up and explained by speeches. Speeches by themselves do not attract enough attention or convey enough symbolic and emotional force to be effective mobilizers of mass support. "This shall not stand" was accompanied by 500,000 troops and a United Nations diplomatic effort.

Since people can only follow a limited number of continuing struggles we should limit to three the major areas in which we are ready to replace the welfare state and about which we can confront the elite culture confident that a vast majority is on our side.

Three possibilities are:

- A. Genuine reforms to help the poor versus political patronage and pork as usual for the big city machines, bigger bureaucracy, over regulation.
- B. Legal reforms to create jobs and lower the cost of health care versus trial lawyers self-interest at the expense of the rest of us.
- C. We should emphasize economic growth, jobs, and higher take home pay and lower taxes as the party of free enterprise and economic opportunity versus economic stagnation, higher taxes, more regulations, red tape and bureaucracy and more unemployment from the welfare state policies of the left.

These may not be the right three zones but they are examples of serious public policy reform areas which would rally a majority to , energize the President's supporters and put the Democrats at a severe (McGovern-Mondale-Dukakis) disadvantage.

5. Only after the President has taken charge, outlined his key principles, and chosen his three zones of emphasis can he hope to organize and focus his staff and allies. Today he has very well meaning people operating in a vacuum without a clear definition of vision and strategies. Every decision is written on a blank slate. Are the mayors neutral spokesmen for the poor or the pork barrel and patronage advocates of big city machines? Is the Democratic Congress and leadership our partisan and values opposition with whom we can communicate but not negotiate or are they potentially good guys who share our values? Is the Washington media our elite culture opponent to be discounted or a legitimate decider of national values to be appeased?

Within this confusion every tactical decision is an exhausting agony that takes too long, arrives too late and achieves too little.

In the absence of clearly defined vision and strategies each tactic occurs in isolation. It does not build up on events before it and it does not lead to later events. There is no momentum.

Conclusion

None of this can be solved by anyone but the President.

The vast majority of the American country want to rally to him.

But it wants to know what it will achieve by rallying and what it should expect from him and his team.

THE CHALLENGE OF THE 1990's

George Bush, Bob Michel and Bob Dole are used to challenges. In World War II, they fought for their country. George Bush was the youngest Naval carrier pilot in the Pacific campaign. Shot down by the Japanese, he voluntarily kept flying combat missions. Bob Michel was a combat infantry sergeant who fought from Normandy to Victory in Europe Day. Wounded three times, Michel returned to combat and won a Bronze Star. At one point he talked 75 German soldiers into surrendering. Bob Dole fought courageously in the Italian campaign, was severely wounded, was hospitalized for 36 months and spent years recovering.

In their lifetime, these men helped America as we defeated Germany, Japan, and Italy, did not colonize a single country but instead taught them free enterprise and free self government. America pressured the old colonial empires into decolonizing the Third World, helped convince Latin America to turn from dictatorship to democracy and ended the system of legal segregation. For nearly fifty years they helped contain the Soviet Empire in the most successful grand strategy in history. When the Soviets collapsed, America did not colonize a single acre. Instead we used the Peace Corps, the Friendship Force, volunteer efforts and government leadership to teach the former Soviet states free enterprise, the rule of law and self government.

Now after an amazing half century of achievement, Bush, Michel and Dole face a new and equally vital challenge. Yet where their lifetime has been a set of foreign challenges, this new undertaking is right here at home in America.

While we have been extending freedom across the planet, we have also been gradually losing the values of freedom here at home. Illiteracy, ignorance, drug addiction, a welfare system that undermined both the work ethic and the family, welfare and divorce laws that undermine male responsibility, bureaucracies that are getting more rigid, more expensive and less effective, a growing underclass culture of violence and crime, and an elite culture that despises and undermines the core values of the middle class and of the Judean Christian tradition.

Left to continue growing, these problems will destroy America's capacity to lead in the 21st century.

An illiterate, drug addicted, violent America would simply lack the economic and cultural strength to lead the world.

If the United States collapses, there will be no one to replace us. Germany and Japan are both too small and too ethnically homogenous. There is no other racially, culturally and ethnically diverse nation large enough to replace the United States.

If the United States fails, the 21st century will become a dark and bloody time of violence, hatred and brutality. Yugoslavia is a warning that all races and cultures are vulnerable to violence when leadership collapses.

It is literally true that the fate of the human race rests on American shoulders. If we reestablish our values, rebuild our cities, reinvigorate our economy and renew our economic capacity, we can lead the human race to a world of freedom, prosperity, self government, and safety by the middle of the 20th century.

With the leadership of George Bush, Bob Michel, and Bob Dole, combat veterans of World War II and political veterans of the Cold War, we have to apply here at home the same courage, the same tenacity, the same stubborn, unyielding determination that we applied to the world in the last half century.

Together we helped spread freedom abroad.

Together we can rebuild freedom here at home.

Together, for our children's sake, our country's sake, and the future of people everywhere, we must meet the challenge of the 1990's and insist on a renewed America for a new century.

News

- According to yesterday's Los Angeles Times, Perot once considered "a strategy to 'nuke' General Motors by shutting down its computer system and thereby paralyzing its auto production." In 1988, two years after Perot sold EDS to GM, Perot was involved in a power struggle with GM chairman Roger Smith (Perot was still in charge of EDS after the acquisition). According to the article, "One radical option Perot proposed in his dispute with GM was to 'pull the plug' on its vast computer systems, virtually all of which were operated by EDS, according to meeting participants. GM's auto assembly operations would be crippled as EDS technicians walked out of GM offices and plants across the country. Perot, a GM board member would then take his fight to GM's shareholders and the public. Smith would have no choice but to accede to Perot's wishes." (6/15)
- This morning's Washington Post writes of Perot's Navy days. While Perot was widely respected by his peers, he had a difficult time with his commanding officer during ship duty. Included in the article was an analysis of his attempt to leave the Navy: "Because the Navy involved so much moving, it was not a proper job for a family man, he wrote [in his letter asking to be released]. And because he intended to leave anyway at the end of four years, training him for two more years would be a waste of money. Over the years since, Perot has emphasized first one, and then another, of these explanations for his decision to abandon a military career. Once he blamed it on slow career advancement. More recently, he blamed it on a bad commander." (6/16)
- Jim Hoagland: "But his status [Perot's] as an independent who has never run for office lets him float above the 'positions' that suffocate George Bill Bush-Clinton, the single, unlikable establishment candidate that the pollsters and campaign coverage have cuisinarted into being." (The Washington Post, 6/16)
- AP reports that Northwest Georgia conservatives who supported Buchanan in the Georgia primary are now supporting Perot. And now, the same voters the ones who carried Gilmer County for Buchanan in the Georgia primary are not coming back to Bush. They're going to Perot, a move that dramatizes the increasingly odd coalition that Perot, who favors abortion rights, is putting together." (6/16)
- Documents at the Ford Presidential Library in Ann Arbor, Michigan show that Perot offered to help evacuate orphans from Vietnam and sought the Ford administration's help in getting two military officers out of the country. Perot contacted the administration several times on Vietnam issues, the documents show. "The man who portrays himself as a political outsider ... felt close enough to White House officials to sign his letters to them simply, 'Ross.'" (AP, 6/16)

- Two lawmakers in Arizona have proposed legislation that would make it easier for Perot to qualify for the ballot in that state. Currently, state law gives independent candidates only 10 days after the September primary to circulate nominating petitions. For Perot, that would mean collecting 10,555 signatures in that 10 day period. However, none of the voters who signed the petitions could have voted in the primary. The proposed new legislation would allow people who vote in the primary to sign an independent candidate's petitions. (AP, 6/16)
- National Poll: The Times Mirror Center for the People & The Press conducted a survey of 2,512 adults between May 28-June 10:

|         |     |
|---------|-----|
| Perot   | 36% |
| Bush    | 31% |
| Clinton | 27% |

The poll has a margin of error of +/-2%. (AP, 6/16)

- Supporters in Hartford, Connecticut expect to deliver more than 50,000 signatures to the secretary of state's office on June 25. Perot will attend the rally.... The head of New York state's Liberal Party says that if the Democrats fail to produce [an acceptable] national ticket, the group will not rule out supporting Perot. (AP, 6/16)

it, I'd been intended recipients. I found that local big time book stores don't stock it. So I ordered by means of the little order blank in the back of the book. Few people other than TBM pilots who enlisted in 1942 or a young age, would find Flights of Passage enjoyable interesting maybe for most people it would be a sure cure for insomnia. That maybe why the publisher has copies to sell.

I have a nagging feeling, like the one son of a gun who never gets the word, that even if you had already read the book. This presents you with problems. How do you unload the book, and what do you tell old Lou.
This book is yours to keep!

11 JUNE 92

JUST HEARD THAT PEROT'S PEOPLE ARE PLANNING MORE ACTIVITIES ON JUNE 30. THEY PLAN A HUGE RALLY OUTSIDE THE SENATE; POW FAMILIES, VETERANS, FORMER POW'S. . . THOUSANDS, THE VIETNAM VETERANS COALITION IS PUTTING THIS TOGETHER. THE PLAN IS FOR PEROT TO TESTIFY AND THEN GO OUTSIDE AND SPEAK TO THIS RALLY.

PEROT'S PEOPLE ARE ALSO GOING TO PACK THE HEARING ROOM.

ALL OF THIS DESIGNED TO TRASH BUSH, TRASH WASHINGTON, TRASH THE "LACK OF CARING" AND LAUNCH PEROT.

ALSO, I HEAR THAT ALL OF WASHINGTON'S MEDIA PLANS ON BEING THERE IN THE SENATE HEARING ROOM. AS THE WALL STREET JOURNAL SAYS, "IT'S OUR FIRST GLIMPSE OF ROSS PEROT."

PLEASE TAKE NOTE OF THIS SIDE-BAR ARTICLE ABOUT HOW THE POW ISSUE IS THE CAUSE OF PEROT'S CANDIDACY.

INDEED, "BUSH'S PASSIVITY ON MIA'S" IS WHY BUSH HAS LOST THIS ISSUE -- AND, THUS, MANY FLAG-WAVING FORMER REAGAN/BUSH VOTERS - -TO PEROT.

HAVING THE PRESIDENT MERELY MENTION THIS ISSUE AS HIS "HIGHEST NATIONAL PRIORITY" ONCE IN A WHILE ISN'T ENOUGH. WE NEED A NEW STRATEGY TO TAKE THIS ISSUE (AND THOSE FLAG-WAVERS) AWAY FROM PEROT.

THOUGHT YOU SHOULD READ THIS NEW NEW YORK MAGAZINE PIECE ON PEROT.

IT MAKES THE ARGUMENT THAT PEROT HAS CORNERED THE MARKET ON PATRIOTISM AND THAT HIS WELL-KNOWN EMPATHY FOR THE POW'S AND MIA'S IS THE METAPHOR FOR RESCUING AN AMERICA HELP PRISONER BY LOBBYISTS AND PROFESSIONAL POLITICIANS.

ONCE WE PUNCTURE HIS HOLD ON THE POW ISSUE, WE BEGIN TO PUNCTURE THE MYTH OF ROSS PEROT.

Perot vs. Bush: Campaign or Vendetta?

Ross Perot denies any personal animosity toward George Bush. "Nice man, nice family," he chirps, with all the enthusiasm he might use to compliment the cut of Bush's golf pants. Privately, Perot has told friends that Bush is "whiny and hand-wringing." Perot, an expert needler, knows how to get the president's goat. At a rally last month in Little Rock, Ark., Perot declared, "I don't have to prove my manhood by sending anybody to war." The remark, predictably, set off a seismic reaction in the White House. "The president is ready to deck him," says a campaign aide. "Where does this guy get off?"

Political opponents rarely end up liking each other, but the enmity between Perot and Bush runs deep, and it started long before the 1992 presidential campaign. Indeed, the ferocity of Perot's assault makes some White House aides wonder whether they're dealing with a campaign or a vendetta.

Culture clash: Part of the clash is cultural. Bush and Perot both like to race Cigarette boats, not exactly a workingman's sport. But there the similarity ends. Bush is Andover, old money and oil. Perot is Texarkana High, swaggering and self-made. Perot has drawn his best and brightest from public universities and the military. He doesn't have much respect for third-generation wealth, especially the kind that was originally amassed on Wall Street. Perot regards himself as real Texas, Bush as bogus Texas. There is no doubt that in Perot's eyes, Bush symbolizes all that is wrong with government today. Bush is the ultimate bureaucrat, too accepting of the status quo. Perot is impatient, happy to run roughshod over the bureaucracy.

Bush and Perot first ran afoul over Perot's belief that the Reagan and Bush administrations have been party to a cover-up of MIAs in Vietnam. In 1986, as vice president, Bush allowed Perot to see U.S. intelligence files dealing with the MIA issue. Bush may have hoped to co-opt Perot by bringing him on the administration team, but Perot only became more inflamed. He was convinced that Richard Armitage, the Defense Department official negotiating with Vietnam, had been "compromised" by his relationship with a Vietnamese woman. Perot confronted the White House with his evidence: a photograph of the woman, bare-chested in her bedroom, with a picture of Armitage on the night stand. After investigating the charges, Bush backed Armitage. Perot was furious. He keeps the photo locked away, like an amulet, showing it to selected visitors. "A man who carries dirty little pictures in his safe, I've got problems with," says a former national-security official who dealt with Perot at the time.

Political foes: Perot was so disgusted with what he saw as Bush's passivity on MIAs that he decided to help out the veep's political foes. In 1988, NEWSWEEK has learned, he contacted Michael Dukakis's campaign, offering to share his negative critique of the GOP candidate. A Dukakis aide flew to Dallas, where Perot outlined why Bush would not make a good president because he was "weak" and didn't stand up on issues. It was the kind of whispering campaign Perot loves to criticize the GOP for today. (Perot says he has no recollection of such an event.)

And it may not be the last. Perot has already turned his investigators on Bush. Earlier this year he sent the general counsel of his company and two expert pilots to interview a Missouri state-prison inmate who complained that he was unjustly imprisoned. The inmate claimed that he had flown Bush, then the GOP vice presidential candidate, to Paris in 1980 as part of the so-called October Surprise scheme. Conspiracy theorists have charged that the Reagan campaign arranged to delay the release of the U.S. hostages in Iran until after the 1980 election. Perot says his team was at first stymied by "guys in dark suits" who reported back to "dirty-tricksters." One of Perot's men finally managed to pose a single question that tested the inmate's technical knowledge of the SR-71 Blackbird spy plane that had allegedly carried Bush to this rendezvous. When the prisoner ducked the question, Perot backed off. But the incident showed how far Perot is willing to go to defrock Bush.

Bush is said to be hurt and confounded by Perot's attacks. But a politician who was elected partly on the strength of Willie Horton ads is not likely to be shy about shooting back. Perot and Bush do share something besides a love of speedboats: both men have shown a willingness to do whatever it takes to get what they want.

PEROT STORMS
THE THEME GAP

Commando- In-Chief

BY JOHN TAYLOR

"The country is the prisoner, held hostage by lobbyists and professional politicians": The "town meeting" in Topeka.

WE GOT A VIETNAM VETERAN DOWN HERE WITH a POW-MIA flag," Ross Perot told the crowd, some 7,000 people who had driven through the blast-furnace heat of central Florida in cars with bumper stickers saying things like CONGRESS STINKS and NO MORE BS, then trudged across a rain-sodden fairground outside Orlando to a huge, sweltering cattle shed in the hope that this tiny man with the raspy, piney-woods voice was going to infuse them with the sense of direction and purpose that had vanished who could say exactly when. And so far, he was doing just that.

"Raise it up again, will you please, sir?" Perot said to the veteran with the flag. As the man obliged, the crowd applauded, and Perot asked, "Can we all agree, can we all agree, that if and when this country goes to war—first commit the nation, then commit the troops!"

The audience cheered vigorously.

"Very specifically," Perot continued, "can we agree that when we send these wonderful people out on the battlefield, everybody in this country goes with them in spirit?"

The cheering intensified. "And can we finally agree," Perot went on, "you . . . never . . . leave . . . one . . . behind. . ."

The rest of what Perot was saying was drowned out by a thunderous roar of approval. A man with a short ponytail standing behind Perot began to swing a large American flag back and forth. The fabric slowly furled and unfurled, the red and white stripes sliding up and down one another in a vivid tableau as Perot leaned down to shake the outstretched hands at the foot of the stage.

A third man on the stage began to chant, "Ross is boss! Ross is boss!" and the crowd took it up.

"Ross is boss!"

"Ross is boss!"

AT THAT MOMENT, IT BECAME quite clear just how thoroughly Perot has cornered the market on patriotism in this campaign. Every presidential campaign is, on a fundamental level, an appeal to patriotism in one form or another. It fails or succeeds to the extent that the candidate can define the state of the nation and engage the voters in his attitude toward it. Since the definition is always metaphoric, the pageantry and symbols used to create it are an essential part of this process. They create the emotional bond between him and the voters. Jack Kennedy forged this bond with his appeal to idealism and youthful vigor. Jimmy Carter did the same in 1976, in the aftermath of Watergate, with his appeals to moral purity and asceticism. Ronald Reagan's themes, "Make America Great Again," in 1980 (during the hostage crisis), and "Morning in America," in 1984 (after he pumped up the economy with deficit spending), both wallowed in patriotism. Michael Dukakis's defeat in 1988 was due in no small part to his inability to find a theme that would ignite patriotic emotions.

This year, both Bill Clinton and George Bush have had similar difficulties creating the impression that a vote for them is a vote for the country. Their campaigns lack emotional logic. As a result, suitable symbols elude them. Clinton's most appropriate backdrop is a black church. Whenever he appears in front of a flag, he merely reminds voters of his still not entirely explained efforts to evade the draft; he seemed almost out of place with his hand over his heart at a Memorial Day ceremony in a cemetery. Bush's exploitation of patriotic imagery in 1988 was so cynical, so orchestrated and calculated, that it would probably backfire if he served up the same material again. "He went to one too many flag factories," jokes Clinton's adviser James Carville. Furthermore, if Bush invokes his role as commander in chief during the Gulf War, he will remind people that Saddam ("Worse than Hitler") Hussein is still in power and that his own administration was funneling money to Iraq just before the invasion of Kuwait.

In short, Bush and Clinton are caught in a theme gap. And it is into this gap that Perot has stormed. Not only that, he has seized it and is now occupying it as if it were some sort of strategic pass into the very heart of the country—which in a sense it is. Perot, from the rescue of his employees in Iran to his assault on the GM bureaucracy to his comment that the United States should have assassinated Saddam Hussein, has always favored commando tactics. It's this existential stance, his pugnacious defiance, and not his fortune that is responsible for his mythic stature. And the campaign he has constructed is similarly self-mythologizing: The country is the prisoner, held hostage by lobbyists and professional politicians, and he and the American people together will create a commando team to rescue it. "It's patriotic to be for him, because he has the true interests of Americans at heart," Amy Hines, a Perot volunteer from Orlando, told me after the rally was over. "He wants the people involved," her friend Judy Caldwell said. Added a third friend, Ginny England, "We've lost America."

If the country has been lost by politicians, it requires an anti-political man to recover it. He becomes the true patriot. This is Perot's central metaphor. The ultimate anti-politician, Perot not only has no political experience, he also professes to have no political ambition and to abhor the very idea of holding political office. The presidency, Perot told Barbara Walters, is a "brutal, dirty, thankless job." All in all, he would rather not leave Dallas and be "stuck" in Washington, as he frequently characterizes the prospect of four years as the most powerful leader in the world. This pose, the Reluctant Warrior, is an American archetype as old as George Washington. It has always had particularly strong roots in Texas, as witness Robert Caro's depiction of Coke Stevenson, the Texas governor who would rather have been out on his ranch but was needed, time and again, by the people to save them from bad politicians. The Reluctant Warrior is the only man who can do the job, and his reluctance is the badge of his own purity of motive.

In a further variation on anti-politics, Perot, as part of his rhetorical strategy, campaigns by telling people he doesn't want them to vote for him and gives them reasons why they shouldn't. "Not everybody ought to vote for me," he told the crowd in Orlando when explaining his position on the Gulf War. "If you don't have the stomach for it, then let's not try," he said when discussing his plan to pay off the debt.

But nothing more clearly illustrates Perot's anti-political wizardry than his ability to explain as an act of patriotic self-sacrifice his willingness to spend upwards of $100 million to get himself elected. "At the highest levels, they are now saying that I am going to buy the election and that that's obscene," he told the crowd in Orlando, which heartily booed this insidious characterization. "I responded to the national press yesterday, and I said that's the deal I made with you [the people], that if you wanted me to run as your servant, I would run a world-class, properly financed campaign, and then finally, with a burst of lack of finesse and tact since I don't have any handlers, I said, 'You know, just put it down this way: I'm buying it for the American people.' That's it."

WITH HIS FLAPPING EARS AND Gogolesque nose, his brisk, military bearing, his rounded and starched Warren Harding collars and gold collar bars, Perot is easy to caricature. But he's a complex person, by far the most complex of the three candidates, and it is hard not to have a complicated reaction to him. He is, in part, goofy, to use a word he likes to employ. He presents an almost unbelievably contradictory mixture of innovation (electronic town halls), naïveté (ambassadors abroad serve no purpose), paranoia (then-Assistant Secretary of Defense Richard Armitage was part of a Vietnamese conspiracy that concealed information about MIAs), shrewdness (persuading the federal government to build the $200-million Fort Worth airport), and puritanical intolerance (forbidding adultery among his employees).

But despite a certain capacity for devious behavior, Perot is not essentially a cynical person—if anything, he's messianic. He has an empathetic side that Bush clearly lacks and that Clinton, who shares it, too often buries in dry policy disquisitions. Perot's concern for MIAs and POWs is the most obvious example of his emotional empathy, but, as his work on behalf of the Texas school system indicates, it extends to the underprivileged as well. "He has genuine compassion for people who are not well off," says Felix Rohatyn, who once served on the board of EDS, the computer company Perot sold to GM, and has been proposed by Texas Monthly as a potential Treasury Secretary for Perot.

A few years ago, Rohatyn recalls, the Municipal Assistance Corporation had a surplus of $600-million that he was thinking of using to build new schools. "One day I got a call from Ross," he says. Perot suggested that if Rohatyn was going to build schools, he should make them small, because children feel insignificant and alienated in large, impersonal buildings. "I had gotten a lot of calls about the politics of spending this money," Rohatyn says. "But Ross was the only one thinking about what would be good for the kids."

It's Perot's ability to connect emotionally that is responsible for the very powerful bond between him and his supporters. Because of it, Perot rallies have a genuine exuberance that, together with their ragged spontaneity, sets them apart. In Orlando, it was hard not to be moved when the horrible band broke into an energetic rendition of "America the Beautiful" and the veterans thrust their flags aloft. "I cried, absolutely, and I've never done that before," Cindy Sitka, a Perot volunteer, said afterward.

Also, in a year when voters commonly complain that Clinton is driven by personal ambition and that Bush wants to keep his job because it's fun being a world leader, Perot knows how to make his supporters feel that his campaign is about them. When cornered after the rally by reporters, Perot climbed back up on the stage and said he would answer the questions in front of the entire crowd so it would be of some use to his supporters. He leaned down to the roiling group of journalists and cameras off to one side of the stage, cupped a hand behind one of his huge ears to listen to the shouted questions, then returned to the microphone. "The question is 'What should we do about Haiti?'" Perot told the crowd, which shouted back all sorts of answers. Several people urged sending in U.N. troops. "See," Perot told the reporters, "isn't it interesting, see, they have the answer." And the crowd, feeling that Perot was quite literally giving it a voice, roared.

Only connect: There is a powerful bond with his supporters.

Virtually all of Perot's supporters use the word straightforward to distinguish their man from the other candidates. Bush, many of them feel, is politically evasive, denying the recession ("Everyone blames Bush for the recession, and that's unfair," Jay Leno said recently. "He wasn't even in the country when it happened") and responding to the L.A. riots with a quick tour of slums that one aide was quoted in the Washington Post as having called "a ghetto du jour photo op." Although it's unfair, Clinton has come to be seen as personally evasive—about the draft, about marijuana, about the issue of marital infidelity, which he will discuss only with coded references to "problems" and the fact that he's "not perfect." Perot, his supporters insist, does not evade. "I'm so excited because he seems so honest. He has no reason to lie to us; he's already got his billions," said Sandra Walters, a receptionist from Jacksonville who had traveled in a caravan down to Orlando for the Perot rally. "What people are looking for is someone to give them an honest answer," said John Franks, a Vietnam veteran who voted for Bush in 1988. "Perot tells you what he thinks."

So far, most Perot supporters are not bothered by the revelations that he asked his father to arrange an early discharge from the Navy because it was a "Godless organization" but later explained that he wanted to get out because the military was too bureaucratic. Then, in a recent Newsweek interview, he said it was because a superior officer had asked him to behave unethically. After all, they say, the Korean War was over in 1955, when Perot began to agitate for a discharge. He wasn't, they say, merely trying to stay out of a war—to save his hide—as they believe Clinton was when he evaded the draft by joining the ROTC. “He wasn't trying to avoid going to war or to escape from personal danger,” said Jonathan Cender, a former graduate student who is unemployed and was wearing a CROSS TO ROSS T-shirt.

Nor do many Perot supporters seem fazed by his attempt to use political influence to pressure the Federal Aviation Administration to build the mammoth Fort Worth airport that is surrounded by the land his family owns. To them, his various deals and projects merely testify to his ability to get things done. “He's a businessman,” Sandra Walters explained somewhat impatiently. “Businessmen are going to do what it takes, without being a crook, to get the job done.”

Convinced that he is right, Perot rarely apologizes, retreats, or backs down. This, as has been said, may make him a dictatorial leader, but it is also the source of his charisma. Unlike the Democrats who have tried to downplay their initial opposition to the Gulf War, Perot has remained unapologetically opposed to that adventure. Not only that, but he portrays his opposition as a patriotic gesture, belittling Bush, and skillfully invoking the old wimp issue, for having committed troops unnecessarily. “I will not go to war to prove my manhood at the expense of the young people in our country,” he told the crowd, adding a little later, “We want to be strong as a horse as far as anybody touching us. If and when we have to respond, we want to be able to respond. But to just try to do up an occasional Super Bowl with smart bombs going down airshafts like we saw on cable news, forget it.”

He was similarly unapologetic about the view, expressed to Barbara Walters, that he wouldn't want avowed homosexuals in his Cabinet. But, as he cannily explained it to the crowd in Orlando, this was out of concern for the abuse to which homosexuals would be subjected by homophobes during confirmation. “The Clarence Thomas-Anita Hill hearings went through my head,” he said. “The hearings of John Tower for Secretary of Defense went through my head. And I realized if we ever did anything like that, the people over there at the confirmation process would destroy that person forever, and it would be a huge point of controversy in a government where we all need to work. That's the reason I said it.” A person's sexual orientation, he said, is not an issue for him: “I have never gotten involved and never asked a prospective employee in my life whether or not they were homosexual. . . . Whereas if I had wanted to know, I would have asked.”

Perot's rhetorical style, unabashed patriotism, net worth and private jets and business background have together led many people to assume that he's a staunch conservative. And he does have right-wing supporters, such as the supply-side economist Jude Wanniski. But while Perot hasn't worked out all his positions, and while he has contradicted himself over the years on issues like raising taxes, he does (contrary to the popular impression) have positions. And many of those positions are classically liberal. To start with, he's in favor of a woman's right to choose abortion and has been quoted favoring certain types of gun control and limits on entitlements for those who can pay their own way—issues that even many Democrats are afraid to tackle.

And while Perot may not have issued the sort of multiple-point white-paper policy statements that Clinton's staff likes to crank out, he has made comments that indicate he has firm views on important topics—many of which are similar to Jerry Brown's. Perot believes in cutting the defense budget substantially by eliminating the virtually free military protection America provides Japan and Germany. He wants to increase funding for education. He believes in a national industrial strategy that would use, among other things, occasional governmental subsidies to promote industries like consumer electronics and products like high-definition television. He also believes in certain forms of protectionism to prevent American corporations from relocating factories to Mexico. He's opposed to junk bonds, leveraged buy-outs, hostile takeovers, and the Reaganomic policies that allowed the rich to amass so much more of the national wealth in the past twelve years. “I'm a Democrat, and at least as of now I'll support the Democratic nominee,” says Rohatyn, who nonetheless thinks Perot might not make such a terrible president. “Ross would be a gamble but a gamble worth taking if the main parties can't convince the voters they ought to be elected. It's interesting. I think it could work.”

THE CONVENTIONAL WISDOM THESE DAYS IS THAT Perot is going to self-destruct; his act will wear thin, people will tire of him just as they did of Brown and Pat Buchanan and Paul Tsongas. That may be true. The polls after last week's California primary showed his negative ratings rising. If Perot wants to sustain his all-but-declared candidacy, he will have to avoid the mistake George Bush made in the primaries in 1980, when, after a surprisingly good showing that indicated he had got the attention of voters, he failed to address the issues and sank to defeat.

But the current wisdom on Perot may also simply represent wishful thinking on the part of the major parties and the established media. The hostility toward Perot on the part of so many Washington journalists is amazingly vehement, considering the reasonableness of many of Perot's ideas and the paralysis of government. They seem to feel almost personally threatened. But after all, for years their persistent complaint has been that the primary process is degrading, that the photo-op campaign hop is meaningless, and that politicians spend years running for president and are scandalously beholden to the interest groups that fund them. Since Perot promises to change all that, he is, for the media priests who hate him, the fulfillment of the old Chinese curse “May your fondest wish come true.”

Perot's candidacy promises to be different from that of any other independent. His support, for one thing, is much more broadly based. Former Carter adviser Hamilton Jordan and former Reagan adviser Ed Rollins will help build on the bipartisan coalition that is forming around him and manage the grass-roots revolt he has inspired. Which, at the moment, is nothing short of astonishing.

“Was this one of those slick political events where you pay a thousand bucks to get your picture taken with the man?” Perot asked the crowd in Orlando as the rally was drawing to a close.

“No!”

“Was it phony?”

“No!”

“Was it real?”

“Yes!”

“Why did I bring it up? We've got to keep it real till November. Right?”

The audience erupted. For while the persona Perot projects may or may not be real, the desperate yearning for salvation is.

Dear Jaime,

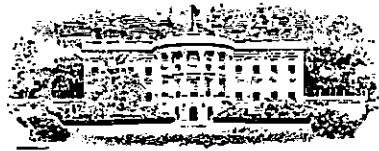

This picture brings back great memories of the time Artie and I spent on the Yale baseball team. Another piece of trivia you can add with this photo is that Barbara used to go out to Yale field for baseball games and keep the score card for every inning of every home game. I hope everyone attending the celebration enjoys this piece of history.

Barbara joins in sending best wishes to you, Heidi, and the whole Moher clan gathered in Maine for the reunion.

*P.S. I probably won't

JB
Dear President Bush:

Colado to do 5-25-92

My name is Jaime Ramirez. I am a pediatrician in Austin, Texas. I am the son of Dr. Mario Ramirez from Roma Texas whom you met at the University of Texas graduation ceremony 2 years ago (dad is a Regent at U.T.), and I am also married to Hilary Moher who is the daughter of your old classmate at Andover and Yale, Mr. Arthur Moher.

Each summer, we spend the week around July 4th at Drakes Island, Maine which is just up the road from Kennebunkport, with Mr. and Mrs. Moher and their family. A few years ago, I started a tradition where each of the families or children try to bring a unique gift or surprise to the reunion. Items have ranged from sheet music for sing-alongs to humorous pictures of family members from days past.

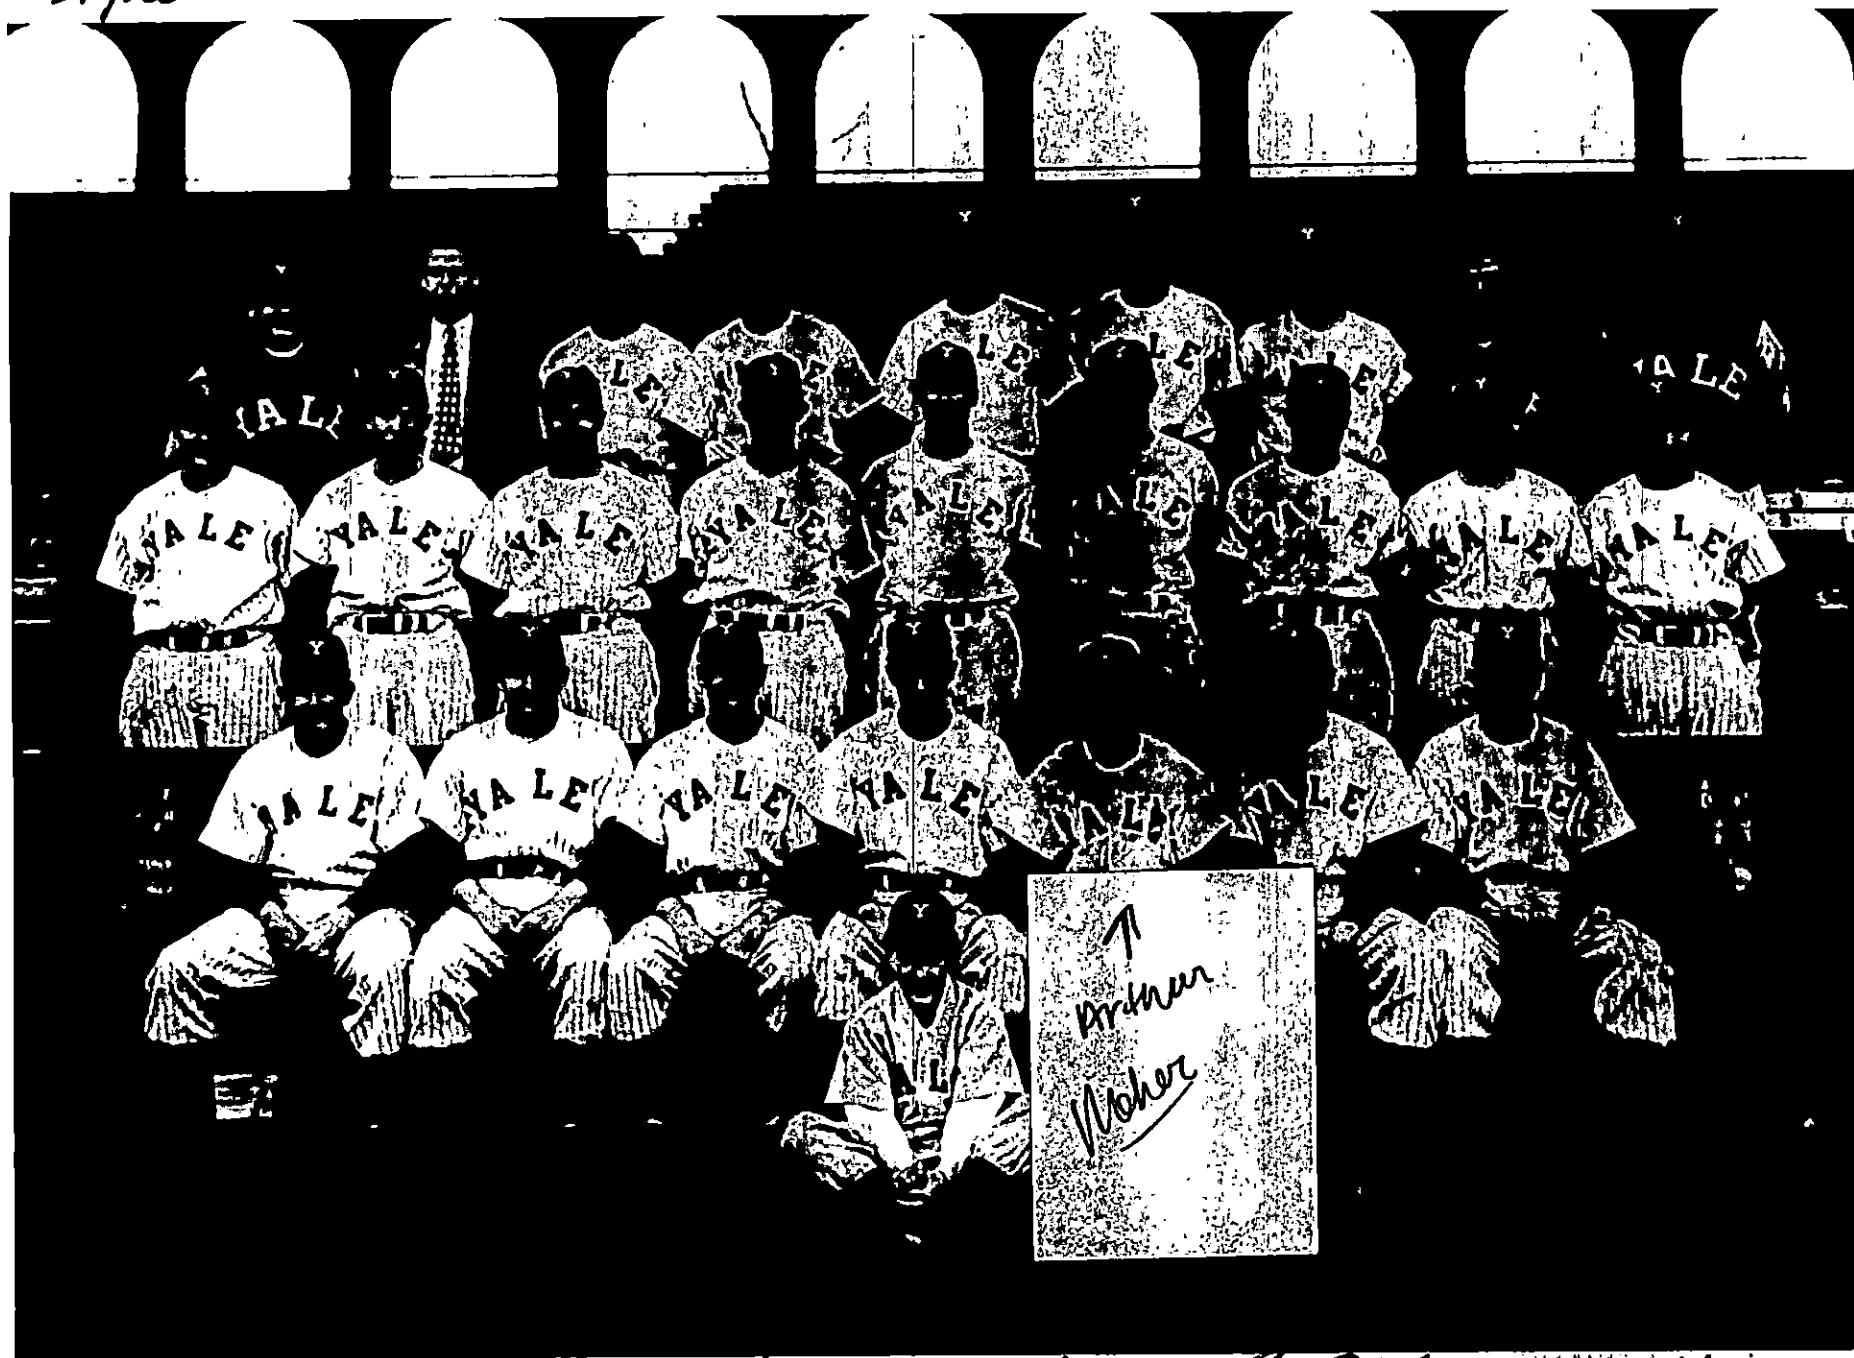

I was trying to think up a good idea for this year and thought I would drop you a note to see if you might have some old team photos or old pictures with you and Mr. Moher that you could autograph for me as well as Mrs. Bush's autograph, or maybe just a funny note I could display. Or better yet, we would love to have you and Mrs. Bush over for a quick lunch or dinner or just to spend a few moments chit-chatting and laughing about old times. You never know--it could be a good, light-hearted break from the serious business you do; and I can assure you Artie and Cornelia would be quite surprised since they do not know I am writing this letter. We will be there from June 27 through July 4th. Thanks for your time, and keep up the good work.

Sincerely,

Jaime
Jaime E. Ramirez, M.D.

P.S. We did almost get to speak with you 2 yrs ago on July 4th when you teed off just ahead of my brother-in-laws and I at Arrundel golf course, but you play too fast. And being a Notre Dame graduate, I enjoyed your speech at the graduation ceremony this year.

Today: No schedule available from published or electronic sources.

Tomorrow: Appears on NBC's Today show during the 7:00 A.M. (first) hour. This appearance is a viewer call in segment. The telephone number for questions is 1-800-542-2786.

News

- This morning's New York Times reports that some minorities are voicing doubts about a Perot presidency. "Although they support him in substantial numbers, voters who are black, Hispanic, Jewish or female stand out in a variety of state and national polls as being less comfortable with the Texas businessman than others.... Although analysts say it would be possible for Mr. Perot to win a general election against President Bush and Mr. Clinton without strong support from minority voters, a victory would be difficult if he lost those groups and could not hang onto wide backing among other voters." (6/10)
- The Clinton campaign has stepped up attacks on Perot by referring to him as a fad and someone that voters know little about. Appearing on yesterday's Today show, Clinton said Perot's only record in government was "largely lobbying the Congress and the White House for various things over the last 20 years.... I've seen this country go through fads before.... We'll just have to wait and see what he says his positions are and see how they square with the positions he's taken over the last several years.... I think they [American people] like what they've heard, but they don't have any idea what he's going to do yet." (The New York Times, 6/10)
- Georgie Anne Geyer: "Implicitly and sometimes explicitly, Ross Perot, a very smart maverick, knows how to cut through all this nonsense that is smothering us. He doesn't buy the fashionable solutions to poverty and to crime, because he's a man of common sense. That is Mr. Perot's appeal" (The Washington Times, 6/10)
- This morning's Washington Post reviews Perot's roll in the Texas War on Drugs Committee in the 1980's. "Perot focused much of his efforts on stamping out use of marijuana, branding it a dangerous 'gateway' drug. Pamphlets distributed by the committee urged parents to listen in on their children's telephone conversations and search their rooms for any signs of drugs. One critic dubbed his war on drugs panel 'the Reefer Madness Committee.'" On an appearance on the Today show in 1989, Perot said: "You can simply declare civil war, and the drug dealer is the enemy.... At this point, there ain't no bail. You go to POW camp. You can deal with this problem in straight military terms.... We don't have to have military troops do all this, but we can apply the rules of war." (6/10)

- Germond & Whitcover: "In the end money alone will not be enough to elect the independent candidate. Like any other challenger to an incumbent President, including Clinton, Perot will have to prove to the voters that he is a safe alternative in the White House. There is always the danger that he may compromise himself by popping off with the wrong words at the wrong time. This happens even to experienced politicians. But the $100 million gives Ross Perot the opportunity to run the mechanically flawless campaign. To the pros, that's scary." (AP, 6/10)
- Perot was upset at the treatment he received in a meeting with Pentagon officials back in 1963 and complained to Vice President Johnson, according to a memo obtained by AP. Perot "didn't like his treatment and felt he should have seen someone higher," LBJ aide George Lusk said in the memo. Perot presented defense officials with an idea on how to cope if computers operated by the military were destroyed by an enemy attack. (6/10)
- This morning's Washington Post ran a profile on Perot spokesman, Jim Squires. On leaving the media (he was the editor of The Chicago Tribune) and taking a job with Perot, he said: "It's almost impossible for me to talk about what's going on because everything I say is interpreted as part of a master strategy to deceive and manipulate the media and the voters. I have been in the middle of manipulation for 29 years; I was on the other side. I really know how it works. No matter what I say or do, the very position I now have makes me suspect. It's very frustrating, to be trying to tell the honest version of something and be instantly accused and suspected of being manipulative." (6/10)
- Arizona Poll: O'Neil Associates conducted a poll of 402 likely voters between June 2-7:

|         |     |
|---------|-----|
| Perot   | 41% |
| Bush    | 26% |
| Clinton | 18% |
| Undec.  | 16% |

The poll was published in The Valley Monitor and has a margin of error of +/-5%. (AP, 6/10)

- "The defection of Mr. Jordan and Ed Rollins from their parties to become co-managers of the Perot campaign only reinforces the message that party loyalty is at an extraordinary low, and that the Perot candidacy cuts across party lines and appeals to non-partisans and a miles-wide spectrum of middle America." (The Dallas Morning News, 6/8)
- Georgia supporters are making plans for 15,000 Perot backers to converge on the secretary of state's office June 27 with petitions to get Perot on the ballot. Supporters have already collected about 137,000 signatures, well over the 29,413 needed for ballot access. (AP, 6/10)

Schedule

Today: Appears on NBC's Today Show at 7:00 A.M.

Tomorrow: No schedule available from published or electronic sources.

News

- NOTE: Excerpts of Perot's appearance on the Today show were not ready at the time the daybook was prepared. It will be distributed later today.

- Perot is now on the ballot in 13 states:

|          |            |
|----------|------------|
| Alaska   | Maine      |
| Arkansas | New Jersey |
| Delaware | Tennessee  |
| Florida  | Texas      |
| Idaho    | Utah       |
| Kansas   | Wyoming    |
| Kentucky |            |

- This morning's Washington Post compares the small town upbringing of Perot and Clinton. On Perot: "American politics has always fed on tales of modest, heartland roots, but this double dose strains even the supple bounds of myth. Perot's progress from the dusty streets of a little railroad junction to stunning wealth and presidential reveries would be fuel enough for one year's installment on the up-from-nowhere American Dream." (6/11)
- The Washington Post also ran a story on Perot's "teflon" effect with the press. Compared to Clinton, the Post reports, "potentially damaging stories about Perot are receiving far less attention, especially on television, and do not seem to be resonating with readers and viewers." The Post cited Perot's possible business dealings with Vietnamese officials, his supposedly spontaneous declaration of availability on 'Larry King Live,' a rent dispute with a tenant renting from him, the firing of an orthodox Jew for refusing to shave his beard and his effort to win an early release from the Navy in 1955 as stories that have only stuck to Perot for a few days." (6/11)
- Richard Cohen: "Ross Perot gives every indication of never having read the Constitution. The notion of an electronic town meeting that could set policy, make law and even determine the tenure of the president is a near repudiation of representative democracy.... Much of the discussion of Perot revolves around fiscal matters -- his area of presumed expertise. But not a lot of attention has been paid to his evident impatience with basic civil liberties. That is where I find Perot's candidacy most troubling." (The Washington Post, 6/11)

- National Poll: Democratic pollster Celinda Lake and Republican pollster Edward Goeas conducted a nationwide poll of 1,000 registered voters between June 2-4:

|         |     |
|---------|-----|
| Perot   | 36% |
| Bush    | 32% |
| Clinton | 24% |

The poll has a margin of error of +/-3.1%. (AP, 6/11)

- Maryland Poll: Mason Dixon Political-Media Research Inc. conducted a statewide poll of 815 registered voters between June 3-5:

|         |     |
|---------|-----|
| Clinton | 29% |
| Perot   | 28% |
| Bush    | 27% |

The poll has a margin of error of +/-3.5%. (AP, 6/11)

- Virginia Poll: Mason Dixon conducted a poll of 829 registered voters between June 6-8:

|         |     |
|---------|-----|
| Perot   | 35% |
| Bush    | 33% |
| Clinton | 20% |

The telephone survey, released yesterday, has a margin of error of +/- 3.5%. (AP, 6/11)

- Perot was the write-in winner of Tuesday's South Dakota's Democratic presidential primary with 8,951 votes (or 28 percent). He received 3,452 votes, (or 7 percent) in the Republican primary. Additionally, supporters say they have between five and six times as many signatures needed to put Perot on the ballot there. He needs 2,567 for ballot access.... Supporters in North Carolina turned in 176,000 signatures to the state Board of Elections yesterday. Perot needs 70,543 for ballot access.... Perot will address a rally in Denver, Colorado on June 19. (AP, 6/11)
- Former President Jimmy Carter's media man, Jerry Rafshoon has met with Perot. Also, Perot has contacted the ad firm Saatchi & Saatchi. (The Washington Post, 6/11)

Republicans stiff Bush

Nary a penny from Reagan, Wilson

By John Jacobs
and Lance Williams
OF THE EXAMINER STAFF

President Bush has raised $1.93 million through March from Californians, about 8 percent of his total 1992 campaign chest of $25.4 million, but not a penny came from California's best known Republican: former President Ronald Reagan.

"Why not? I don't know," said a prominent state Republican who did not want to be quoted by name.

"Ronald Reagan is an apolitical Republican. If you asked him why not and told him that George Bush was his loyal vice president for eight years, he'd look at you and say, 'I don't understand the question.'"

No spokesman was available at the former president's Los Angeles office Thursday, and a secretary

To donate to Bush

said Reagan was at his Santa Barbara ranch and could not be bothered there.

In February, the Washington Post reported that Reagan told "sources close to the former president" that Bush's re-election was in trouble because "he doesn't seem to stand for anything."

To repair the damage, the Bush White House hurriedly set up a visit with the former president, who did not attend a $1,000-a-person Bush dinner one block from Reagan's office in Los Angeles. Reagan quickly issued a statement saying he would do "everything I can to see that he is re-elected" and said the quote attributed to him in the Post was "incorrect."

Buchanan draws smaller amount

Conservative challenger Patrick Buchanan took in only about 10 percent of what the president has raised here, some $212,000, and only $7,500 of it from San Francisco. His list of contributors included many with Eastern European names, and the only celebrity names were Walt Disney, son and namesake of the famous founder of the Disney empire, and actor Tom Selleck, who also contributed to Democrat Paul Tsongas.

So far, Bush has held few fundraising events in California. Federal law precludes individual contributions of larger than $1,000. But as the general campaign gets underway, Republicans will be asked to contribute huge sums to the state party, where the size of donations is not limited. The GOP can use them for voter registration, vote by mail and other party-building programs.

A review of Federal Election Commission campaign contribution files also showed that despite San Francisco's reputation as a bastion of liberalism, San Franciscans contributed to Bush's re-election fund $234,401, or 12 percent of all the money he raised in California. That was almost as much as the $266,900, or 14 percent, that Los Angeles donors contributed.

Donors in one ZIP code, 94104, in San Francisco's Financial District, contributed $34,150 to Bush, more than every other ZIP code in the state but four.

Of the 30 ZIP code areas in which donors gave the most money to the president, 16 were in the Bay Area. Seven were in San Francisco and the rest were in such wealthy suburban enclaves as Hillsborough, Atherton, Menlo Park, Palo Alto, the Los Altos Hills, Woodside, Saratoga, Cupertino and Orinda.

As of April 1, President Bush had raised $1,925,144 in the Golden State — nearly 8 percent of the total funds raised for his re-election bid. Here's a look at the 20 cities whose residents have given the most to re-elect Bush.

Rounding out the top 10 cities, after Los Angeles and San Francisco, were Beverly Hills, Pasadena, Newport Beach, Hillsborough, Atherton, San Marino, Rancho Palos Verdes and Palo Alto.

Unlike Bush and the Democratic candidates, who took money from such posh communities as Beverly Hills and Atherton, Buchanan got small amounts of money from all over the state. He got only four contributions from Beverly Hills, for example, compared to nine from Bakersfield and 14 from Glendale.

State Republicans absent

Reagan was not the only prominent state Republican not to kick in cash for the president. Also missing were Gov. Wilson, Attorney General Dan Lungren and U.S. Sen. John Seymour and every Republican member of the Legislature, save Sen. Becky Morgan of Menlo Park.

Morgan and former Gov. George Deukmejian were the only politicians yet to have contributed, the records show.

"George Bush is not taking political action committee money," said Republican attorney Vigo "Chip" Nielsen, a $1,000 contributor himself, who added that Republican office-holders used to give by transferring it from political action accounts.

"This time, it has to be personal money, so a legislator says: 'I'm only making $60,000. I can't afford it.' And the Democrats don't do it any more than we do. George Deukmejian is now a wealthy, successful international lawyer... and Becky Morgan is married to a very successful millionaire entrepreneur in Silicon Valley."

"I don't think the issue has come up," said Jeff Weir, Seymour's campaign spokesman, when asked why his millionaire boss had not yet contributed to the president's campaign. "But Seymour gave $100,000 in political money he raised and transferred to Bush in 1988."

But the California list is replete with corporate executives, attorneys, developers and prominent retired Republicans who contributed the maximum of $1,000.

Nixon cronies weigh in

Among the latter were Roy Ash, a former director of the Office of Management and the Budget under President Richard Nixon, and Maurice Stans, the former Nixon Commerce secretary and later finance chairman of the Committee to Re-Elect the President. Stans was embroiled in connection with the Watergate scandal in 1972.

Other Bush contributors included Los Angeles Dodgers baseball team owner Peter O'Malley and former Dodgers star pitcher Don Drysdale; retired Bank of America chairman and World Bank President Tom Clausen; UCSF Professor Herbert Beyer, who with a partner first developed the gene-splicing technology that gave birth to the biotech industry; Republican political consultants Stuart Spencer and Ken Khachigian.

5/1/92 - SF Chronicle

Hewlett-Packard co-founder and prominent checkbook Republican David Packard gave $1,000, as did Apple executive John Sculley, who also contributed $1,000 to Democratic candidate Bill Clinton. Apple co-founder Steven Wozniak and his wife Suzanne each gave $1,000 to Bush. Wozniak was a 1984 delegate for Democrat Gary Hart.

Former GOP party Chairmen Paul Haerle, Robert Naylor and Frank Visco also contributed the $1,000 maximum, as did current GOP Chairman Jim Dignan and his wife Susan. The Dignans tried to orchestrate an official state party endorsement of Bush in February, but the effort blew up when they could not be certain of getting enough votes, and the convention settled for an unofficial straw poll favoring Bush.

The Gallo wine family contributed $6,000 through six family members. Another $1,000 donor was William L. Horton of Los Angeles. His occupation was not given. It was not believed he was the same "Willie" Horton who escaped on furlough from a Massachusetts prison and about whom Bush trashed 1988 Democratic nominee Michael Dukakis with an infamous television ad.

Some of the San Franciscans who contributed the maximum $1,000 included: former San Francisco Newspaper Agency executive Jesse Knight, now a senior vice president of the Chamber of Commerce; newspaper Publisher Florence Fang; Gap Stores owner Donald Fisher and wife Doris; and philanthropist Gordon Getty.

Others included: insurance executive Richard Goldman, Mayor Jordan's chief of protocol; three members of the Haas family, Evelyn, Peter and Walter Haas Jr.; socialites John and Dodie Rosekrans and Charlotte Mailliard Swig; former U.S. Attorney Joseph Rusionello; discount broker Charles Schwab; and vintners Catherine and E.E. Trefethen Jr., whose California wines are often featured at White House functions. Hunan Restaurant owners Henry and Diana Chung donated $500.

Honorable George Bush
President
United States of America
The White House
1600 Pennsylvania Ave., N.W.
Washington, D. C. 20500

Dear Mr. President:

Out of deep respect for you and the special friendship that we've had for a good many years, I wanted to explain the details behind my decision to withdraw from the various campaign positions that I have held as well as to resign the position on the Legal Services Corporation to which you appointed me.

As I indicated in our telephone conversation several weeks ago, I am totally convinced that an innocent man is in a federal penitentiary today facing 87 months of incarceration for a crime that he did not commit. In our conversation, you were very cooperative and sympathetic and suggested that I wait an hour or so and then contact Boyden Gray to discuss the legal issues involved. You may have heard that I did not contact Boyden Gray and that probably puzzles you. The reason must be known. Shortly after I spoke to you, I had a telephone conversation with John Schmidt. John Schmidt asked me not to call Boyden Gray and said they wanted to keep you out of the issue. I abided by that advice since I felt they were, for whatever reason, trying to protect you. Out of deference to that particular request, I refrained from heeding your suggestion to call Boyden Gray.

In the ensuing weeks, I tried frantically to attempt to get someone in the Justice Department to review a lot of video tapes, affidavits and other information which I felt clearly proved that Occhipinti was innocent and was set up by a Dominican drug cartel. Those in Justice delayed responding citing that the appeal was pending. Out of sheer frustration, I finally sent a letter, which I am enclosing for your information, to Attorney General Barr. I thought I made a reasonable request. I didn't ask for a pardon. I didn't ask for clemency. I didn't ask for a new trial. I simply asked for a 60-day stay of execution for two reasons:

1. The Office of Professional Responsibility has commenced an investigation at my request of the actions taken by the U. S. Attorney's Office, Southern District, in the handling of this matter. That is an active investigation and will be completed in less than 60 days. It could show prosecutorial misconduct and have a bearing on Occhipinti's future.

2. During that same period of time, I wanted the opportunity to review the evidence with a designee of the Attorney General or the FBI, but someone who would sit down and carefully review what we believe is compelling information indicating that Joe Occhipinti is innocent.

Last Friday morning, a press conference was called between many of the law enforcement groups, and many of your friends, including Phil Caruso, were there protesting the incarceration of Occhipinti. Without question, I was angered at the stone wall I had run into at Justice, and I simply could not stand by quietly and allow such a tragedy to occur. The decision on my part that morning to resign the various positions, was primarily to protest the failure on the part of the Justice Department to extend what I thought was reasonable cooperation.

I might add that just before I left for the press conference, I received a letter from John Dunne citing the result of the appeal and thereby rejecting my request for a 60-day extension. First I am told to await the outcome of the appeal, then that very outcome is used to deny the action that I was seeking in the first place. My decision was a result of these months of frustration and antipathy.

This matter has disturbed me very deeply and a lot of other people as well. The drug dealers have now discovered a new weapon that they didn't have before. Get a number of "friends" to tell the same lie and you can convict a law officer of a civil rights violation, and that is exactly what happened here. I made close to 50 telephone calls to Ron Kaufman, various officials at the Justice Department and others in the Administration desperately trying to prevent this from ever happening. Now that it has, I continue to hold compelling evidence that indicates that Joe Occhipinti is innocent and unjustly incarcerated. You should know that Joseph Occhipinti had to be put in solitary confinement temporarily because that was the only safe place for him to be.

While I will not stop in my efforts to get the truth out, and I realize that I have angered some of my friends, sometimes this is unavoidable if your beliefs are strong enough. Those who suggest that I haven't agonized over this decision both before -- and after -- do me a grave injustice. On a personal level, I remain committed to your leadership. While there are those that remain troubled by my decision, I feel better for having stayed true to my convictions.

For your reference, I am enclosing copies of some of the pertinent correspondence. I hope this better explains the circumstances behind my decision. As Ron Kaufman put it, "I'm sorry it ever had to come to this," but, sir, I can honestly say I tried everything humanly possible within my power to avoid it.

With warmest personal regards.

Sincerely yours,

Mr. William P. Barr
Acting United States Attorney General
Department of Justice
Constitution Avenue and Tenth Street, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20530

Dear Attorney General Barr:

I appreciate your having spoken with my daughter, Congresswoman Susan Molinari, recently. Unfortunately, I was sidelined by a bout with severe asthma for a couple of weeks and am only now beginning to get my strength back or I would have contacted you sooner.

Several of my key staff people with investigative backgrounds and I have been involved in the matter of INS Agent Joseph Occhipinti for the past few months at the urging of police organizations from throughout the nation who have expressed the opinion that Mr. Occhipinti was set up with regard to the civil rights charges brought against him. I entered this case with an open mind two days before Mr. Occhipinti's sentencing. It was during the sentencing proceedings that I came to the conclusion that there was something very wrong in view of some of the conversations I heard in open court between the judge and the U.S. Attorney, conversations which convinced me that a fair trial might well not have been afforded this man.

Since then I and my staff have spent an extraordinary amount of time and effort reviewing the facts of the case and interviewing Dominican friends of Mr. Occhipinti who went undercover for him and for us, visiting the principal prosecution witnesses. From all the taped interviews, including an audiotaped conversation with journalist Manuel DeDios three days before his assassination, we've found strong evidence of wholesale illegal activities among these witnesses who had openly perjured themselves in court, illegal activities which include major and minor narcotics operations; illegal lotteries; international money laundering; the sale of weapons, untaxed rum and other contraband; the forgery of immigration documents; loansharking; and a host of other crimes. We have already passed some of the information on the Internal Revenue Service, which is in the process of investigating these very serious charges.

Among the more convincing occurrences have been the activities of a Dominican Attorney named Angel Nunez, an outstanding citizen who abhors what he sees happening in his community as a result of the actions of the Dominican crime cartel. When Mr. Occhipinti appealed to him for help, Mr. Nunez said he would consider providing such assistance only after he personally visited all of the establishments involved in Project Bodega, the operation which led to Mr. Occhipinti's downfall. After doing this, Nunez reported 80 percent of the individuals he interviewed, even some who had been arrested in the operation, said that Mr. Occhipinti had conducted himself properly during his time at their establishments and had gotten consent forms signed on the way into their places of business, rather than on the way out. Interestingly, none of these people were members of the Federation of Dominican Merchants, the organization which we've concluded was part of the conspiracy against Mr. Occhipinti.

The remaining 20 percent of the merchants interviewed Mr. Nunez - all members of the Federation - universally stated that Mr. Occhipinti had gotten the consent forms improperly signed on the way out of their establishments rather than on the way in, a rather startling coincidence. These allegations became the principal components of the unprecedented criminal civil rights charges brought against Mr. Occhipinti.

Through a variety of witnesses we have interviewed since that time, we can establish that, indeed, there was a conspiracy to frame Joseph Occhipinti and we can identify the principal players in that conspiracy. It would take only simple investigative work by a few professionals to verify the accuracy of our findings.

Although it has no direct bearing on the guilt or innocence of Mr. Occhipinti, the support of the nation's law enforcement community for this man should be noted. Numerous letters from police associations form all over the country indicate a strong concern that they might someday face the same fate as Mr. Occhipinti, a frightening new weapon available to the criminal element to thwart the legitimate efforts of law enforcement officials to conduct searches. Lately, major news organizations like Inside Edition and, currently, 60 Minutes, as well as local New York City newspaper reporters and columnists and radio news organizations, have become convinced of Mr. Occhipinti's innocence and have been reporting or are planning to major reports on what has taken place in the case.

It is because of these considerations that I have asked for a delay in the execution of Mr. Occhipinti's sentence, a delay of 60 days, with two principal reasons in mind. First, it would allow the Office of Professional Responsibility to complete its ongoing investigation of charges of prosecutorial misconduct in Mr. Occhipinti's trial, an investigation which began with a visit to their offices by myself and members of my staff several months ago. Second, such a delay would provide a reasonable opportunity for my investigators to share with the appropriate federal authorities the vast amount of evidence - audio and videotapes, affidavits and documentary material - which we have compiled in this case showing widespread criminal activity and perjury among the witnesses at Mr. Occhipinti's trial.

At the conclusion of that 60-day period, or whatever time frame you deem proper, if your department feels that we have failed to prove the allegations set forth above, then Mr. Occhipinti can be remanded at that time to begin serving his sentence and nothing has been lost. If, on the other hand, we are able to prove to you and the other authorities involved that what we are saying is accurate, I'm sure you'll want to take whatever steps are necessary to pursue these matters.

Because of the time element - Mr. Occhipinti is scheduled to surrender and begin serving his sentence within 24 hours of the mandate's being issued by the Court of Appeals, which I understand will take place by Thursday, June 11 - it is imperative that any action to stay the execution of his sentence take place within the next few days. Therefore, I urge that you give this matter your immediate attention.

Very truly yours,

The Honorable George Bush

Dear Mr. President:

I am writing this letter as a personal plea to you sir, on behalf of U. S. Immigration Agent Joseph Occhipinti. This courageous officer is facing a prison sentence that will have a negative and profound affect on law enforcement personnel throughout this great nation.

Agent Occhipinti was tried and convicted criminally in the Southern District of New York, for allegedly conducting illegal consensual searches. However, at trials end, it appears as though the presiding Justice, Constance Baker Motley, allowed the suppression of certain critical evidence which would have proved beyond a reasonable doubt, Joseph Occhipinti's innocence.

Mr. President, in October, 1988, my son New York City Police Officer Michael John Buczek was shot and killed in the line of duty. Agent Occhipinti was instrumental in locating my son's killer, Daniel Mirambeax who fled to his homeland, the Dominican Republic. During the investigation that followed, I wrote to you for assistance in extraditing Mirambeax from the Dominican Republic, but, I received no response or help from you or your staff.

Agent Occhipinti did his job and did it well. He worked in the Washington Heights area of Manhattan, one of the most drug infested areas in the world. He fought the war on drugs against those who took my son's life but now faces imprisonment for his dedication to public service. It's unfair and reeks of the liberal policies that have contributed to societies lack of support for the men and women that put their lives on the line day in and day out for people like me and you.

I am asking you Mr. President to this time answer my call for help and get involved. In this matter, it is you and only you that can make a difference by ordering a federal inquiry into the events surrounding Agent Occhipinti's circumstance. His conviction sends a clear message to the criminals: that the streets of this nation are theirs; and it sends a horrifying message to our police: DO YOUR JOB AND GO TO JAIL!

As it was my son's job and ultimate destiny to give his life protecting this country and trying to make a difference, it is your job and duty to support those that continued in his place. Joseph Occhipinti is one of those that has tried to make a difference. Support him, order a federal investigation and let the law enforcement family know that you at least care.

Thanking you in advance for your time and concern in this matter, I remain,

Sincerely,

Ted Buczek
Trustee

Dear Mr. Molinari:

This is in response to your letters dated May 26 and 29, 1992, concerning Special Agent Joseph Occhipinti.

As Assistant Attorney General John Dunne previously emphasized in his November 27, 1991 letter to you, Agent Occhipinti's conviction was appealed to the Second Circuit Court of Appeals. All errors of law and/or fact, including the credibility of the government's witnesses and the sufficiency of the evidence which supports the conviction were litigated in that forum. You should be aware that on May 21, 1992, this appeal was vigorously argued but that within two hours the Court issued a summary affirmance of Mr. Occhipinti's conviction. We hope that Mr. Occhipinti's many supporters will recognize the high standard of proof required in a criminal prosecution and the rigorous review to which his conviction was subjected by the appellate process.

As you note in your correspondence, the allegations of misconduct by the federal prosecutors in this case have been referred to the Office of Professional Responsibility. We will forward copies of your letters to that office for their information, and we would encourage you to provide any relevant materials in your possession directly to that office.

Thank you for advising us of your continued interest in this matter.

The Honorable Guy V. Molinari
President of the Borough

Dear Mr. President:

This is in response to your letter of June 8, 1992, to Attorney General Barr regarding a 60 day stay of execution of sentence for former INS Agent Joseph Occhipinti. You can be reassured that the Justice Department views its obligation to secure justice as its highest priority. The Attorney General has asked me to personally look into this matter and in doing so, I have asked senior professionals within our Criminal Division to review the issue.

It should be noted that Mr. Occhipinti has had the benefit of a trial by jury and an appeal. There are, of course, other avenues of judicial review open to him. We will always be willing to review information about a matter to ensure that justice has been done. However, in his matter, all reviews to date offer no basis for the United States Attorney's Office for the Southern District of New York to have acted differently or to request a stay of the execution of the sentence.

While there is no basis for the Justice Department in Washington to interfere in the court process in New York at this time, I assure you that I will continue to monitor the progress of the review by our Office of Professional Responsibility of allegations of prosecutorial misconduct in this matter. I further reaffirm our prosecutors' continued willingness to expeditiously consider any substantial, new evidence which warrants further review of the matter.

OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

May 27, 1992

The Honorable George Bush
The President
The White House
1600 Pennsylvania Avenue N.W.
Washington, DC 20500

Dear President Bush:

As I write this letter, a major travesty of justice is taking place in a federal courthouse in New York City. The travesty I refer to is the fact that former Immigration and Naturalization Officer Joseph Occhipinti is today about to be remanded to the Manhattan Correctional Center by Judge Constance Baker Motley to begin a three year prison term for an alleged violation of the Civil Rights Act. And I use the term "alleged" -- even in the face of a conviction after trial -- because there remains a score of mitigating factors, unanswered questions and new evidence to suggest that Agent Occhipinti was cleverly set up and victimized by members of a Dominican drug cartel operating here in New York City.

The plight of Agent Occhipinti has become a cause of serious concern for law enforcement nationwide, a cause that has galvanized a last-ditch effort to act on his behalf, and, in this regard, I know that other law enforcement groups have sought your help in this matter. It is our fear that a tragic irony of profound dimension will be carried to fruition, an irony in which drug dealers will have exploited the originally unforeseen quirks extant in the federal Civil Rights Act and in so doing rid themselves of a worthy adversary who, over the course of an unblemished twenty-two year career, served his agency with honor and distinction, particularly with respect to his efforts in the war against drugs. In this connection, I might add that it was Agent Occhipinti's tireless efforts that developed for New York City police investigators the identity of the Dominican drug dealers who gunned down Police Officer Michael Buczek on a New York City street back in October of 1988.

Consequently, it would truly be unconscionable to allow Agent Occhipinti to fall victim to those purveyors of death who pose a greater threat to the fabric of our society than any other foreign or domestic force, be it social, economic or military in nature. At this point it is important to note that Agent Occhipinti's "crime" does not involve an act of corruption, nor does it involve brutality, both of which are the kinds of law enforcement transgressions that normally capture headlines and evoke outrage. In this particular matter, Agent Occhipinti -- in a worst case scenario -- can be accused of overzealousness in combating the insidious dealings of drug lords who daily ravage the stability of our society without conscience.

The President

In the final analysis, it is absolutely mind-boggling to those of us in law enforcement to view a case that could have been best handled administratively, assuming the presence of a valid complaint, wind up in a jail sentence for an officer who deserves fairer treatment. Paradoxically, not even drug dealers and other vicious criminals are dealt with so severely by the criminal justice system we serve.

I therefore respectfully request that you intervene in this matter and order that an investigation be conducted by the Federal Bureau of Investigation so that the concerns of law enforcement can be addressed in a thorough, fair and impartial manner. We stand reasonably confident that with all the original mitigating factors, taken in combination with revealing new evidence that has been elicited, we can demonstrate cogently that Agent Occhipinti was unjustly found guilty of charges concocted by known drug dealers.

Mr. President, we have no one else to turn to in our quest for fairness and justice. I know I need not remind you of how difficult and hazardous the climate for law enforcement is today. In terms of accusations lodged against law enforcement officers, the legal anomaly of double jeopardy would be a welcome phenomenon. For, you see, a law enforcement officer accused of wrongdoing nowadays is customarily confronted with a devastating form of quadruple jeopardy: a criminal trial, a departmental trial, a civil lawsuit and, of late, a civil rights action. I might also add the jeopardy of trial by headline, which often leads to public pillory and premature conviction before an officer has even had his/her day in court.

I must emphasize that law enforcement officers throughout the nation, whether they be federal, state or local, fear with greater intensity the consequences that can befall them if accused of wrongdoing after taking a split-second action, than they fear criminal guns. Such a sad state of law enforcement affairs obviously does not augur well for the promotion of public safety all across our great nation. The ongoing fallout from the Los Angeles incident has certainly exacerbated the prevailing climate of legal jeopardies and psychological constraints that confront law enforcement at a time when drugs, guns and violence must be swept from our streets.

The President

And, unlike criminal marauders who can take to the streets to burn, pillage and murder as a means of redress of their "socio-economic grievances," law enforcement officers must traverse the tortuous corridors of our justice system in the hope that someone, somewhere along the legal path, will listen and respond.

You, sir, are that hope. If in fact law enforcement officers must face quadruple jeopardy in the course of discharging their awesome duties and responsibilities, then, on balance, they should be accorded a fair opportunity to be heard in cases that reek of injustice. The Occhipinti matter is such a case. Please help.

Respectfully yours,

CHECKLIST OF ISSUES TO RAISE WITH YELTSIN
DURING ANNAPOLIS EVENT
(full talking points attached)

High Priority Issues

- 1) Baltic Troops: Russia should engage in real negotiations to establish a withdrawal timetable and legalize their troop presence through Status of Forces Agreements;
- 2) Northern Territories: U.S. is willing to be helpful if Russia finds that useful. (Note: Yeltsin listened when Vice President raised this at breakfast, but did not respond to offer of U.S. assistance. He and Lukin emphasized that public pressure could be counter-productive.)
- 3) KAL-007: (We should close on this issue after discussion in yesterday's one-on-one.) Ask Yeltsin to
  - Invite a small group of family members to begin talks with Russian government; and
  - appoint a senior official with whom the families and the USG can work (Defense Minister Grachev?).

Other Issues

- 1.) Russia-Ukraine: We will have strong relations with Ukraine, but no threat to you. Hope you will work closely with Kravchuk to defuse tensions.
- 2.) Nagorno-Karabakh: We are concerned and want to use CSCE to reduce tensions. (Key CSCE meeting in Minsk on June 23)
- 3.) Moldova: Very concerned. Can you restrain 14th Army there?
- 4.) Yugoslavia: We're working well together. Priority now is UN-led humanitarian relief. Our joint support is key.
- 5.) European Security: Key to permanent peace in Europe is strengthening CSCE and NATO. We support NATO's role in peacekeeping.
- 6.) Cuba: We both support democracy and reform there. We applaud the change in your relationship. We pose no threat.
- 7.) Middle East and Afghanistan: Jim and Andrei are an effective team on the Middle East. We support a broad-based government in Afghanistan, at peace with neighbors.
- 8.) Libya: Russia's enforcement of UNSCR 748 is critical to its reputation as an opponent of state-sponsored terrorism.
- 9.) Iraq: We need to keep pressure on Iraq to end Saddam's tyranny.

Dear Mr. President:

It was so nice to receive your call. You asked several times what I was doing and I don't remember giving you a sensible answer. Please understand my excitement in receiving a call from the President of the United States. There have been many calls over the years, but this was the first time a President has called me, I'm honored.

Mr. President, I shall answer your questions. I am President and Chairman of the Board of Force, Inc. I am also C.E.O. of D.T.F. Corp. investing primarily in real estate. I am also writing my personal biography and have been involved in community activities during the past several years. At present, I am doing the best I can to help elect my friend, George Bush, to his second term as President. That is the most important item on my agenda. "God help our Country if we should not be successful."

Mr. President, when I asked about Ross Perot, you stated it was too early to start a high pitch campaign. I trust your judgement and believe you are right. However, my opinion is we must do something to keep our Republicans from going astray. There is talk of a walkout at our State Convention by some of the Delegates of Congressional Districts #1, #2, #4, #5 and #8. This concerns me because of the possibility the News Media would have a field day at our expense.

Mr. President, I believe an appearance by you and or Barbara at our Senatorial District Caucuses would help to avoid undesirable circumstances. I realize this is impossible, but maybe if you could arrange several Senatorial Districts together it would be possible. I am sure you will address the convention, but if I could have my choice I would prefer you speak to smaller groups for five minutes rather than 30 minutes to the entire convention.

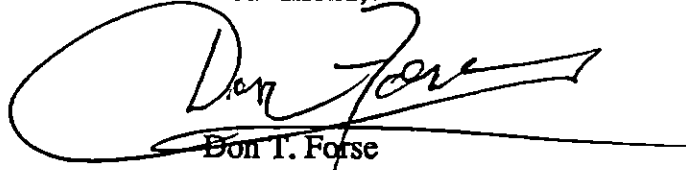

On another note, you have one of the finest families I have ever known. Barbara is the greatest First Lady ever and that is why I hope she will be a big part of your mass media campaign.

You stated Don Rhodes loved my family very much. We consider Don to be a very dear friend, and hold him in the highest accord.

Mr. President, again, I was honored to receive your call. Maybe when this is all over, we could go fishing. That would be great!

God Bless and keep you in good health.

Your friend,

Productivity--output per worker hour-- rose at a 2.7 percent annual rate in the first quarter of 1992. While this appears to be good news, slightly over half the gain was because of fewer hours worked and slightly under half was because of the increase in

SUBJECT: Productivity and Costs, First Quarter 1992, Labor Department Release, Tomorrow Morning, 10:00 a.m.

Productivity in the nonfarm business sector rose 2.7 percent at an annual rate in the first quarter of 1992. The increase in productivity was attributable to a 1.2 percent rate of increase in output and a 1.5 percent rate of decline in hours worked. For the manufacturing sector, productivity fell at a 1 percent rate, as the decline in output exceeded the decline in hours worked.

Hourly compensation in the nonfarm business sector rose 2.2 percent at an annual rate in the first quarter of 1992; in manufacturing, hourly compensation fell at a 1.9 percent rate.

The graph below shows that nonfarm business productivity has increased steadily over the past year, following the low or negative changes that predominated in the previous 2 years. Manufacturing productivity has been more volatile, showing strong increases in the middle of last year, before slipping back early this year.
