Possible Questions From Barbara Walters

1. "One of the biggest criticisms about President Bush is that he doesn't seem to have an ideology. People talk about Ronald Reagan and they say you may or may not have liked him, but we knew where he stood. Can you tell me what the President is passionate about? And a balanced budget doesn't sound too inspirational."
2. "A year ago, he (the President) was a hero, not just in this country, but throughout the world. It's one year later -- and we felt the passion, we felt the strength -- it's one year later and a man who was almost totally unknown a year ago is now in the polls running ahead, not on issues, but on fire, on fearlessness, these kinds of ephemeral qualities. What went wrong in the past year?"
3. Describe to me the George Bush vision for the 2nd Term? Where will we go and how will you take us there?
4. Your children, George, Jr., Jeb, and Neil, in particular, have been the subject of intense scrutiny. What do you tell them? How does this affect you?
5. If there were one decision, one thing you could change about your 1st term, what would it be? Tax frame it - fought it
6. Your health -- last year you were hospitalized for heart fibrillation, in Japan you took ill, you're 68 years old. Are there times when you say to yourself, "Is it worth it? I could have a nice life. What do I need this for?"
7. How would you grade your 1st 3 & 1/2 years in office? What are your memorable moments? The best time? The worst time?
8. How do you respond to the criticism that you are out of touch with the American people?
9. Leadership -- How would you describe George Bush's leadership qualities?
10. Murphy Brown - Do you agree with Vice President Quayle's criticism of her character? What exactly do you mean when you say you're for family values?
11. You have called yourself the "Environmental President," yet your environmental record was criticised in Rio. You have called yourself the "Education President," but you can't get an education bill through Congress. How would you characterize this type of presidency?

My views on traditional values well known -
No Litmus test applied on this - live on units -

12. You've been Vice President, Head of the CIA, Head of the Republican Party, a Congressman, Ambassador to the U.N. and to China, and now President. Why do people have trouble understanding what you stand for?
13. I know you are not going to talk about Ross Perot the candidate, but how do you explain the phenomenon of Perot? What does it say about your presidency -- that if the election were held today you'd lose to someone who was a political unknown 3 months ago? What does it say about the mood of the electorate?
14. On breaking your "read my lips, no new taxes" pledge, do you deserve to retain the trust of the people?

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS:

SUPPLEMENTAL SIGNING
THE ROSE GARDEN
THE WHITE HOUSE
MONDAY, JUNE 22, 1992
2:00 p.m

[Acknowledgments] I'm pleased to welcome all of you to the White House. Mayor Schmoke, Bob Neall [Anne Arundel county executive], Secretary Lynn Martin. Senators Seymour, Hatch and Stevens and Congressman McDade, who've been so helpful with this legislation, thank you for your efforts. And it is a very special privilege to have with us some young Americans from right here in our nation's capital. They're the reason -- kids like these are the reason -- why we've produced today's legislation. They're the reason we're fighting for far-reaching reforms to offer opportunity for a better future. \\\

The supplemental appropriations bill I'm signing today provides emergency funding for the nationwide disaster programs of the Federal Emergency Management Agency and the Small Business Administration. This bill replenishes the resources of both agencies for expenditures they are making to help victims of the lawless violence in Los Angeles and the flood in Chicago. These funds are used to help shelter people affected by major disasters, and to offer low-interest loans to individuals and businesses in disaster areas. The bill also will help finance more than 400,000 summer jobs through a program of the Department of Labor -- with a special focus on helping young people in America's largest urban areas. By providing for $1.45 billion in SBA guaranteed loans, this bill will help small businesses across the country create thousands of new jobs.

I turned aside efforts by some in the Congress to spend more for the sake of spending more, when the urgent need is for fundamental change to provide hope and opportunity for people in our inner cities. We've got to recognize these supplemental funds are a beginning -- only a beginning. It's imperative that we make a fundamental change -- that we put in place the package of reforms I call the New America Plan.

That plan has several points. First, it enhances government's primary mission -- to ensure the personal safety of our people. Our neighborhoods, our streets must be free from crime. To strike a blow for our people's right to live free from fear, I'm asking Congress to act now on my Weed and Seed program to fight urban crime -- as well as a tough, comprehensive new crime bill. \\\

People in our cities need more freedom and opportunity to achieve, to excel. The second part of my plan calls for Enterprise Zones -- to offer incentives for innovation and job creation in the greatest American tradition. It's high time we put this great idea into action. \\\ The third part, our HOPE initiative, will help turn public housing tenants into homeowners -- and there's no overestimating the dignity that brings. Fourth, our America 2000 education reforms will help extend to parents and kids in the inner cities the same choices that people in the suburbs already have. \\\ Fifth, to give people new skills, we propose to reform job training. Finally, the long-term well-being of neighborhoods that are now dangerous and depressed demands that we break with the culture of dependency. My agenda for welfare reform aims to reward work and learning; to insist that fathers take responsibility for their children; to make families whole.

These are the keys to providing hope for our new generation. These are the only reliable means for making our cities the safe and prosperous places they ought to be. So again, I'm urging the Congress to put an end to delays and take action on my New America Plan. \\ Thank you all, and God bless the United States of America.

THE WHITE HOUSE

Sickened

Mr. President,

The House is now voting on the Coast Guard Authorization.

You may want to let them know.

Mike

- I'm asking you, on a bipartisan basis, to pull together and get this done. Let's put aside our partisan differences long enough to get this amendment through. Let's give the American people the results they want on something they want, and let's do it by working together. And more important, let's do it for the interests of future generations of Americans, our grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

- We are borrowing against their future, and that has got to stop. I am now more convinced than ever that the time has come to move a balanced budget forward.

TALKING POINTS FOR MEETING WITH HOUSE REPUBLICANS ON HEALTH CARE REFORM

(WITH PRESS IN THE ROOM)

- We are here to talk about health care reform, an issue on which we can and should act now.
- When the Congress came back after its' Easter recess, I suggested that there were areas of relative consensus within this complicated subject and that we should move forward in at least those areas.
- Now, I keep reading that the Democrats want to vote on a plan that will make a "political statement." A "political statement" simply will not do. I want the Congress to vote on a plan that can make a difference now for the American people.

- The proposal that has the broadest support is our package of small market reforms; increased tax deductions for the self-employed; administrative savings; and medical malpractice. It will help and help now, small businesses, their employees and many other Americans.

(AFTER PRESS LEAVES)

- Thank you all for coming down today to discuss this very vital issue of health care reform.

- First, I want to commend the House Republican Health Care Task Force for their work, leadership and effort. We appreciate your close consultation with us throughout the process. You have produced an excellent product. It is very similar to the parts of our plan that we hope to see enacted this year.

- Second, it's clear that the White House and Congressional Republicans are a lot more united on the issue of health care reform than are the Democrats. The other party's disarray on this issue provides us with a window of opportunity that we shouldn't pass up. And, I think it's important that we make sure the American people know we have a good plan that will work.

- As Republicans we all have a common goal on this issue: to take the first step toward comprehensive reform by passing several of its building blocks this year. These include small market reform, 100% deductibility of health insurance premiums for the self-employed, administrative savings and malpractice reform. Tomorrow, I will be sending a new, stronger malpractice bill. You know how important I think it is that we resolve this part of the health care problem.

- I thought this afternoon would be a good opportunity to talk about a common strategy to achieve that goal and how we might capitalize on our unity on this issue. Why don't we begin with Bob Michel and then we can move around the table to hear your thoughts about what strategies we should employ to get something done this year.

- First, I want to commend the House Republican Health Care Task Force for their work, leadership and effort. You produced an excellent product, and we appreciate your close consultation with us throughout the process. You have produced an excellent product. It is very similar to the parts of our plan that we hope to see enacted this year.

Card 2

- Second, it's clear that the White House and Congressional Republicans are a lot more united on the issue of health care reform than are the Democrats. The other party's disarray on this issue provides us with a window of opportunity that we shouldn't pass up. And, I think it's important that we make sure the American people know we have a good plan that will work.

Card 3

- As Republicans we all have a common goal on this issue: to take the first step toward comprehensive reform by passing several of its building blocks this year. These include small market reform, 100% deductibility of health insurance premiums for the self-employed, administrative savings and malpractice reform. Tomorrow, I will be sending a new, stronger malpractice bill. You know how important I think it is that we resolve this part of the health care problem.
- I thought this afternoon would be a good opportunity to talk about a common strategy to achieve that goal and how we might capitalize on our unity on this issue. Why don't we begin with Bob Michel and then we can move around the table to hear your thoughts about what strategies we should employ to get something done this year.

FROM THE PRESIDENT

Committee on Foreign Affairs

May 28, 1992

The Honorable George Bush
The President
The White House
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Mr. President:

A good friend and colleague of ours is retiring after a long and distinguished career in Congress, but at a time when he still has the vigor, determination and experience to continue serving his country.

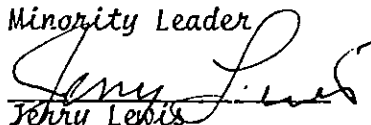

Bill Broomfield has devoted more years of his life to the development of American foreign policy than virtually any other person we can think of. After a 36-year career in Congress he has a wide knowledge of the key players and institutions in the foreign policy field; acquaintances, and in many cases friendships, among the leaders of other nations; and a keen sense of what the American people are willing to support in the conduct of their foreign policy.

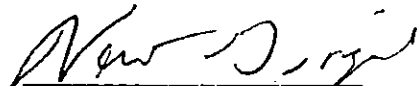

We believe he would be an ideal Ambassador. He is a man of judgment and integrity; a loyal supporter of your Administration; and just the sort of friendly, engaging American that most foreigners come to expect when they meet representatives of this great country.

We urge you to consider Bill when a suitable ambassadorial appointment comes up. We can think of no finer gentleman to represent America to other peoples of the world than Bill Broomfield.

Sincerely,

Dear Patty,

Enclosed is some language I proposed for the platform writers. Working on the documentary that I am Fed-exing was stimulating and joyful and the response was incredible; drafting platform language was disappointing.

The platform project focused my thoughts. I hope you don't mind if I share them with you -- but I wasn't sure who else to entrust these to....

We Republicans have moved too slowly with regard to HIV/AIDS. First Clinton and soon Perot will be taking all the reasonable leadership positions. For an issue that doesn't really belong in the political arena, we're being left with nothing but defense of what we have or haven't done - - and the AIDS community is hearing nothing from us, or from the Administration, of leadership, compassion, or hope.

I presented to the National Commission on AIDS yesterday in Kansas City. Afterward I was questioned, hard, on and off the record, regarding the Administration's dealings with Commission recommendations. People wanted to know the President's "real position" on HIV/AIDS. Reports circulating today that Secretary Sullivan has rejected Commission findings, or has suggested that "we're already doing most of what's recommended," only added fuel to the fires. I sidestepped questions regarding the Administration, re-asserting the importance of local, grassroots advocacy. But I felt the sting of the questions, even while avoiding them.

This may be hard to believe, living in the White House, but confidence that the President genuinely cares about this issue is low. I've faced tough critics before, of course, and have always been loyal to my President (as I am now). But what makes this peculiarly grim is that the hardest questioning isn't from the President's critics, but from friends. Republicans. Loyalists.

If in November we're going to attract any of the 15,000,000 people in families directly affected by AIDS, some recognizable -- that is, public -- leadership position is needed. This could involve a speech or appearance. It could involve the President himself. It could be supported by platform language which is more explicit and aggressive than what I dared (given all the silence on this issue) propose.

I'm willing to help in any way, but I have no official standing in the White House or the Party from which to speak or act, so my comments are without status. At the same time, because of my background and loyalties, people see me as a defender of the Administration. And the challenge I am asked to meet more and more frequently is one of integrity: I speak of the President's private compassion toward me, and questioners ask how my comments can be true given the Administration's public positions. I can hear your frequent admonition, "Do the right thing," but I'm beginning to wonder what the right thing really is.

I am concerned, and I need some advice from you. We can't wait until the convention for the President to speak out on AIDS; by then, Clinton (or, soon, Perot) will take away all the tolerable positions. So what should I do?

The President earlier asked that I meet with him "after consulting with Secretary Sullivan and Sam Skinner." I've met that requirement; should I ask for the meeting now?

I could outline a series of steps by which the President could demonstrate his compassionate leadership for families being destroyed by HIV/AIDS. But is it desired?

You know everything went well in Salt Lake City...my testimony was well received. Per Bob Mosbacher and Daddy, I have made my formal request to speak at the convention and am awaiting a response.

What do you suggest?

Dear Orrin:

Thank you for all of your efforts to prevent the passage of the Striker Replacement legislation.

ACTION

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: BRENT SCOWCROFT BS
SUBJECT: Letter to Nicaraguan President Violeta Chamorro concerning U.S. Aid to Nicaragua

Purpose

To reply to President Chamorro's concerns expressed to you at the UNCED Conference concerning U.S. aid to Nicaragua, and to a letter from her concerning two Nicaraguan citizens on death row in Florida.

Background

At Rio, President Chamorro expressed her concern to you that the U.S. Senate hold on assistance to Nicaragua would damage her country's economic recovery, and she asked for your help in freeing up the assistance. She has asked others to intercede on her behalf, and the six Central American Presidents have written to you requesting that you directly intercede with the Congress. (We have the cable version, but have not yet received the signed text). In her letter concerning the men on death row, she requests that you use your good offices to pass her petition for a pardon of the death penalty to the appropriate authority.

In our proposed reply, you tell her that you understand her concern over the hold on aid to her country. You note the Senate's concern with the lack of progress on the issues of property rights, including the cases of U.S. claims, and police reform. You express hope that our Governments continue to discuss ways to resolve these issues so that we can report concrete progress to the Congress and resume our aid. Regarding the men on death row, who have been convicted of the murder of a Miami police officer, you offer to pass her request along to appropriate State of Florida authorities, explaining that it is a state rather than federal judicial issue.

RECOMMENDATION

That you sign the letter at Tab A.

ACTION

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: BRENT SCOWCROFT BS
SUBJECT: Reply to Letter from President Lacalle of Uruguay

Purpose

To advise President Lacalle that we will consider his proposal for a treaty on the environment.

Background

President Lacalle advocates a treaty on the environment that would codify international standards and encourage sanctions against violators of the treaty. He believes this would help assure international cooperation on important environmental issues, and cites positive results achieved with treaties on human rights and the protection of human life at sea. He has consulted with the governments of Brazil, Argentina, Paraguay, Chile and Spain, and believes they would support a treaty of this kind.

In our draft response, you agree that we will consider the idea of a treaty, but make no commitment beyond that.

RECOMMENDATION

That you sign the letter to Uruguayan President Lacalle at Tab A.

MEMORANDUM FOR RON KAUFMAN

FROM: LYNN LAWSON [initials]
ASSOCIATION DIRECTOR
OFFICE OF POLITICAL AFFAIRS

SUBJECT: FOLLOW UP TO NEW YORK REPUBLICAN STATE COMMITTEE MEETING

In response to my previous memo to you regarding concerns voiced at a recent New York Republican State Committee meeting with regard to the President's participation in the Rio summit, the President expressed the importance of clarifying the issue with the folks in New York. (See attached memorandum.)

Please be advised that I have spoken at length with GOP State Chairman Bill Powers to clarify the correlation between the withholding of the decision to attend and the relevance of that participation to the negotiations.

I have also spoken to several of the County Chairmen to clarify the issue.

✓ Further, I have asked that this point be made in an upcoming segment on the Rio summit in the NY GOP State Committee newsletter. We are working with Chairman Deland's office on specifics. Powers has reinstated the state committee publication after a lengthy absence due to funding and staffing problems.

FYI: Powers issued a potent press release in support of the Balanced Budget Amendment, urging "the Democrat Congress to back President Bush on vital issue." He issued a separate but equally as potent release on what he termed the "boys of November" - Rollins and Jordan. He is at it, as always, with all of his gut and gusto!

To Ron Kaufman

With Reference to Lynn Lawson's memo, please be sure that whoever was concerned in NY understands that our withholding decision on Rio was not vacillation, but rather using or proposed presence to leverage the negotiations .It is important, the issue having been raised that the record is set straight.
(see last para Lawson memo to me 6-1-92

I will write a note to Sec. Kemp, thanking him for his stellar performance.

MEMORANDUM FOR ~~RONALD E. KAUFMAN~~ THE PRESIDENT

FROM: LYNN LAWSON
ASSOCIATE DIRECTOR
OFFICE OF POLITICAL AFFAIRS

SUBJECT: NEW YORK REPUBLICAN STATE COMMITTEE MEETING

The New York Republican State Party convened yesterday. The three hundred GOP members unanimously endorsed Senator Al D'Amato as the Republican candidate for the U.S. Senate general election. D'Amato addressed the group promising to, "stand up for the little guy."

Elections for Republican National Committee positions were also held. Knowing that he did not have the votes, Dick Rosenbaum withdrew from the contest for National Committeeman. He proceeded to deliver a fervent speech on the importance of including an abortion-rights plank in the national convention platform. Rosenbaum had held the National Committeeman position for 15 years. Joe Mondello was elected as Republican National Committeeman. Mondello is the current Republican County Chairman in Nassau County, the strongest Republican county in the state. The President supported Mondello for the National Committeeman post in 1988. Eunice Whittlesey was re-elected as National Committeewoman. She has served in that position since 1977.

According to State Chairman, Bill Powers, Secretary Kemp delivered the "greatest support speech" that Powers has ever heard. Kemp's remarks were extremely supportive of the President and the Administration.

Bill Powers held an executive session with his county chairman and aggressively declared the importance of their performance in support of the President (and in preparation for the gubernatorial election in 1994). He identified a certain percentage for each county to produce and told the chairmen that if that percentage was not met, they would be replaced. He told the group that it is not Perot that is being tested, but rather their own operations.

Powers did mention that there was a fair amount of discontent throughout the membership regarding what they identified as a lack of a message from the President. They specifically cited economic leadership and referenced the Rio trip, stating that it was important to have made a decision and moved ahead rather than having publicly debated whether it was correct or incorrect to attend.

MEMORANDUM FOR RONALD C. KAUFMAN
DEPUTY ASSISTANT TO THE PRESIDENT
FOR POLITICAL AFFAIRS

FROM: ASSOCIATE DIRECTORS
OFFICE OF POLITICAL AFFAIRS

SUBJECT: WEEKEND GOP ACTIVITIES IN IDAHO, MINNESOTA, TEXAS
AND WASHINGTON

Over the weekend, Republicans gathered for state conventions in Idaho, Minnesota, Texas, and Washington.

IDAHO

22 delegates were elected, 6 At-Large and 16 by district, nine men and thirteen women. Bush-Quayle Chairman, Blake Hall is Delegation Chairman. All delegates and the four electors are solid Bush supporters.

Secretary Derwinski, Senator Hatch, and Congressman Vander Jagt all spoke to the convention and were well received.

National Committeeman and Bush-Quayle Chairman, Blake Hall was re-elected along with GOP State Chairman, Philip Batt. Cindy Moyle was elected National Committeewoman following the retirement of Janet Miller.

The abortion plank was moderated somewhat in deference to the pro-choice delegates to the state convention.

MINNESOTA

Eight delegates were elected At-Large, and 22 by district. The break-down for voting on the first ballot in Houston will be Bush 22, Buchanan 8, Stassen 1, and uncommitted 1. The Delegates, however are good Bush supporters. Delegation Chairman will be Bob Weinholzer.

The convention was bitterly fought out between the pro-life and pro-choice camps with the pro-life winning out. Pro-life delegates swept all positions with Evie Ashahl and Vin Weber on the Platform, Ed Fiore and Mary Keffmeyer on Rules, Ron Karry and Georgiann Stenerson on Credentials, and Phil Herwig and Sue Turch on the Permanent Organization Committees.

CONVENTION HIGHLIGHTS

During a invocation, the minister made reference to the government staying out of issue of abortion which sent many in the crowd through the roof. After much booing Bob Weinholzer, Bush-Quayle Chairman and State GOP Chairman asked the minister to leave and another minister finished the invocation.

Harold Stassen was prevented from being his own delegate to the National Convention.

Jack Meeks, Chief of Staff to Congressman Vin Weber was elected National Committeeman on the third ballot over present National Committeeman, Dave Printy. Evie Axdaahl was unopposed in her re-election as National Committeewoman.

TEXAS

The President's visit to the state convention made a tremendous impact on both leadership and the delegates. State Chairman Fred Meyer was overwhelmed following the President's remarks going so far as to assert that this event may indeed turn out to be the turning point for the Bush/Quayle effort in the state.

Jim Oberwetter and Barbara Patton were also extremely pleased with the speech. Many asserted the President's visit climaxed a perfect week for the Texas GOP.

Press coverage of the speech was also very positive (see attached articles). The President's visit went a long way in restoring enthusiasm and vigor to the campaign at the grass roots level. During the week, Victory '92 chairman Rob Mosbacher hosted a meeting with over 125 county chairmen. On several occasions, the leadership urged the campaign and the President to take a more aggressive and assertive posture towards Perot in Texas. This speech was more than enough to convince the troops that indeed the President is ready and willing to join the battle.

Elections were held for National Committee members and State Chairman. While Ernie Angelo, Jr. and Penny Butler were re-elected without opposition, state chairman Fred Meyer had token opposition from fringe candidate David Rucker. Meyer won re-election overwhelmingly.

As for delegate selection, all went well for the campaign. While 121 delegates were elected, gender balance was achieved. While this delegation weighs heavy on the conservative side, all delegates and electors stand solidly behind the President.

The only downside during the week was the fight over the abortion issue. While the conservatives swept the county conventions, giving them firm control of the convention, they took advantage of their numbers by tightening up the abortion language on the platform. They also added language stating their firm support for the President's position on the issue. The pro-choice delegates attempted a demonstration on Friday evening, but were defeated.

While Texas Republicans are solidly united behind the President, there exists a particular disparity between the moderates and the conservatives.

Senator Phil Gramm will serve as the delegation chairman while Barbara Patton will serve as Co-Chairman.

Sally McKenzie and Wales Madden Jr. will serve on the rules committee. Rep. Joe Barton and Diane Rath were elected to the Platform Committee. Ernie Angelo, Jr. and Rita Palm will serve on the Credentials Committee.

It should be noted that Bush/Quayle State Chairman Jim Oberwetter demonstrated superb leadership throughout the week. While there were several national campaign operatives in attendance, Oberwetter was decisive and focused on both logistics and politics which proved to be critical in the success of the weeks activities.

Mrs. Bush's activities at the convention were also extremely well received. More than 3,000 supporters attended a dinner in her honor on Friday evening.

WASHINGTON

35 Delegates were elected, 8 At-Large, 27 by district, 16 women and 19 men. Delegation Chairman will be Rich Kuhling

Secretary Lynn Martin was the key-note speaker and received a warm reception. Eleven electors were elected, all good Bush supporters. Pro-life movement was very strong and it dominated committee selection. Mike Undseth and Cathy Mickels were elected to the Platform Committee. Sharon Bumala and Paul Middleton were elected to the Rules Committee. Marlyn Derby and Don Kistler were elected to the Credentials Committee. Marcell Smith and Dick Derham were elected to the Permanent Organization.

Texas GOP drafts Perot battle plan

Strategy takes aim at his outsider image

Texas Republicans, moving to blunt Ross Perot's insurgent campaign, have quietly developed a battle plan for beating the Dallas billionaire in President Bush's adopted home state.

Party leaders will meet with several hundred key Republicans behind closed doors this week to distribute suggested issues and quotations to attack the front-running Independent candidate, The Dallas Morning News learned Wednesday.

The anti-Perot strategy will be unveiled as an estimated 10,000 Republicans convene Thursday for the three-day Texas GOP convention in Dallas. An expected intraparty fight over abortion fizzled Wednesday as abortion opponents dominated the platform committee.

The move against Mr. Perot in Texas is the most organized effort to date by GOP strategists, who plan to attack the computer tycoon's theme as an outsider best able to harness the federal government.

The Perot campaign said late Wednesday that a spokesman was not available to comment on the Republicans' actions.

The six-page document, obtained by The News, was prepared for GOP leaders and delegates. It includes opposition research on probable Democratic nominee Bill Clinton, chiding him for raising taxes as governor of Arkansas.

But many Republicans said they consider Mr. Perot a bigger threat to the president than Mr. Clinton. GOP officials said a primary objective during the state convention is to fire up the party faithful to defeat the Dallas businessman.

The document says Mr. Perot has opposed the balanced-budget amendment, the proposed North American free-trade agreement and the Persian Gulf war.

It notes his former membership in racially restrictive clubs in Dallas and uses newspaper articles referring to his support for abortion rights, "gun control" and a state income tax.

In interviews, Mr. Perot has said he opposes the balanced-budget proposal and has denounced the Bush administration for giving foreign aid to President Saddam Hussein before Iraq invaded Kuwait.

He has denied published reports that he once favored an income tax for Texas. On abortion, he has said it is "the woman's decision" but favors parental notification for youths.

As for gun control, he has said it is "a very complex issue, but we've got to think what is the objective." He's indicated that he opposes handgun registration and mandatory waiting periods before gun purchases.

The document was drafted by officials of the Victory '92 Committee, a statewide group raising money and promoting all GOP candidates in Texas.

Although some of Mr. Perot's recent comments conflict with the GOP document, Republicans have accused Mr. Perot of altering his positions over the course of the campaign.

Unlike Democratic leaders who so far have avoided criticizing Mr. Perot, Republicans said that because Texas is such a crucial state they intend to blast Mr. Perot on issues as well as his personality.

"I fully expect that if Mr. Perot is going to pull out the stops anywhere, he'll pull them out in Texas," said Rob Mosbacher, a Houston businessman and chairman of the party's Victory '92 Committee.

"I like the temperamental tycoon description. I believe his record as a businessman ... is one in which you do it his way or it's the highway or it's the courthouse," said Mr. Mosbacher, whose father, Robert, is chairman Mr. Bush's re-election campaign.

Also, Mr. Mosbacher and other party leaders say they want to exploit the cult of personality surrounding Mr. Perot.

"We are not running against a program, a position on the issues or a party with direction but against strictly a personality," said Texas GOP Chairman Fred Meyer of Dallas.

State Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, predicted that public disclosures about Mr. Perot's personality and past business dealings will take their toll on his budding candidacy.

"Right now, he's all things to all people," Mr. Craddick said. "Sooner or later, somebody's going to ask him a question and make him answer it."

Besides his views on issues, the GOP document outlines contributions by Mr. Perot and his family to members of Congress, saying that such donations show that Mr. Perot is "no outsider."

Over the years, Mr. Perot has given to scores of local, state and national politicians. In 1974, Mr. Perot donated more than $90,000 to congressional candidates, making him the largest individual contributor in the country that year, according to news reports.

Republicans also recalled his remark upon resigning from clubs that had no minority members. "It doesn't mean anything to me, but if it is an issue, why bother with it," he is quoted as saying.

The document also cites a 1987 comment that Mr. Perot made in The New York Times about running for president. "This country has enough problems without inflicting me on it," he is quoted as saying.

Included in the document are two pages on Mr. Clinton and his record as Arkansas governor. It says he raised taxes and fees 128 times and that Arkansas ranks near the bottom of all states in wages, environmental protection and programs for children.

A Clinton spokesman could not be reached Wednesday but aides said earlier that Arkansas has the 49th-lowest per-capita tax burden in the nation. They said Mr. Clinton last year helped pass a tax cut for 374,000 lower- and middle-income taxpayers.

Mr. Bush is scheduled to address the GOP convention Saturday, marking his third visit to Dallas in recent weeks and demonstrating his concern about carrying Texas.

On another issue, GOP abortion opponents were so clearly in control Wednesday that abortion-rights supporters did not testify at platform hearings.

The platform committee adopted a strong anti-abortion plank advocating a constitutional amendment to ban abortion except to save a woman's life.

Also stricken from the last version of the party's platform was a conciliatory phrase that had recognized that Americans hold different views on the abortion issue.

"Overall, they have toughened this platform," said Bill Price, president of Texans United for Life, the state's largest organization opposing abortion rights.

The platform urges legislative action — including a ban on abortion for sex selection and a requirement that minors notify their parents — "until our final goal of total constitutional rights for the unborn" are achieved through a constitutional amendment.

Advocates for abortion rights conceded Wednesday that they were outnumbered among delegates to the GOP convention.

"There was a concerted effort to keep pro-choice delegates from even going to the convention," said Pat Cohn, vice president of Texas Republicans for Choice. "They do not want any pro-choice people there to rock the boat."

In the most emotional testimony of the day Wednesday, a Harris County woman who became pregnant from a rape urged the platform committee not to abandon its strong anti-abortion language.

Gail Fernandez, a GOP delegate from Humble, said she eschewed the recommendation of friends that she have an abortion after being

Bush chides foes, flails Congress

U.S., world need SSC, he tells GOP delegates

Austin Bureau of The Dallas Morning News

A fiery President Bush rallied Republican loyalists Saturday in Dallas, bashing independent Ross Perot and the "old goats" in Congress for derailing his domestic programs.

Although trailing Mr. Perot in recent presidential polls in Texas, Mr. Bush predicted that he would carry his adopted home state and "win going away."

"There is too much at stake to buy a pig in a poke," the president said in an apparent dig at the Dallas billionaire's lack of government experience.

"A president must be temperamentally suited for the job. I have been tested by fire, and I am the right man."

Mr. Bush also pledged continued support for the $8 billion Superconducting Super Collider research project in Waxahachie, for which the House voted last week to halt funding.

"The Congress may have a vision problem. But don't think we're going to give up on the Superconducting Super Collider. . . . The country needs it, and the world needs it," he said.

Mr. Bush used the state GOP convention to deliver his toughest political speech to date on the same day that Mr. Perot sought support in Boston and likely Democratic nominee Bill Clinton campaigned in his home state of Arkansas.

More than 10,000 flag-waving Republicans greeted Mr. Bush and his remarks with rousing enthusiasm, standing ovations and repeated chants of "four more years."

prompted one of the most sustained outbursts from the convention, dominated by anti-abortion rights advocates.

Steering clear of a specific mention of abortion, the president said family values are "under siege."

Mr. Bush never mentioned Mr. Perot or Mr. Clinton by name, but he chided opponents with "snappy answers and glib talk."

"Let somebody else become the darling of the talking heads on television," he said. "I'm going to keep on trying to get something done for this country."

Mr. Bush also ridiculed Mr. Perot's suggestions that he might conduct "electronic town meetings" on crucial issues.

"It is just plain irresponsible and out of touch with reality to suggest that a president should take a poll and get a tax increase before he leads the world against aggression," Mr. Bush said.

"What the people want from their leaders is leadership."

Targeting Mr. Clinton, the president said: "Unlike one of my opponents, I do not believe that the only way to ever balance the budget is — quote — a massive tax increase — unquote."

White House aides cited a June 3 news article quoting the Arkansas governor saying that he favored a tax boost. A Clinton spokesman could not be reached for comment.

Taking the offensive

In his speech, Mr. Bush made it clear that he intends to take the offensive after the party's national convention this summer in Houston.

"You wait until August, and we'll roll up our sleeves and get in that campaign mode," he said, standing on a stage festooned with Texas and American flags.

Mr. Bush, making his third trip to Dallas in a month, said that the potential three-way race for president has made for a "strange political year." But he said he acknowledges the anger Americans feel about their government.

"I understand the frustration out there. I have felt the heartbeat of America. ... I know the American people. They are with us. But they are angry."

"They're angry at big government, small results and big excuses. And they are right. Government is too big, and it spends too much."

Alluding to his success leading the nation during the Persian Gulf war, Mr. Bush said he has had more trouble with Congress.

"Some people say why can't you bring the same kind of purpose and success to the domestic scene as you did in Desert Shield and Desert Storm," he said. "The answer is I didn't have to get permission from some old goat in the United States Congress to kick Saddam Hussein out of Kuwait."

Those Democrats, he charged, have produced little but "a crooked post office and bounced checks."

He went on to tout accomplishments in his first term and promised to return to Texas after leaving the White House. "I have never felt as strongly as I do now. I am proud to be a Texan," he said.

Republicans hailed the unusually combative 25-minute speech as the best since he won the presidential nomination in 1988.

"It was the old George Bush. I still have goose bumps. It was what we needed to get our enthusiasm up," said Jan Patterson, a Dallas delegate.

Said Don Truman, a delegate from Victoria, "It's the best he's been all campaign. The dramatic delivery, the raw drama. It was fabulous."

John Weaver of Austin said, "It was red meat to the lions, and the lions roared."

But supporters of abortion rights complained that the president avoided the volatile subject, which has divided the GOP.

Abortion issue

"He was afraid to speak out on the issue," said Gerald Zimmerer, a

Houston delegate and member of Republicans for Responsible Decisions.

Abortion rights opponents, wearing stickers bearing the logo of a red, white and blue fetus, dominated debate over the state party platform, blocking efforts to weaken its anti-abortion language. On the floor of the Dallas Convention Center on Saturday, they waved placards, including one that said: "Jesus, George and the Unborn."

Mr. Zimmerer vowed that supporters of abortion rights will carry the issue to the national GOP convention.

"We are a significant constituency," he said. "We will not be shut down. We will not be silenced."

Some abortion-rights backers warned that the party risks driving more moderate voters to Mr. Perot in November.

"Every one of us is ripe for picking for Ross Perot," said a longtime Bush supporter from Austin.

During the final session of the three-day convention, Republican leaders defended Mr. Bush and denounced Congress and the news media.

Veteran U.S. Rep. Bill Archer of Houston attributed the president's standing in the polls to "the three chicken littles on the network news."

In an afternoon replete with references to family values, Republican House candidate Donna Peterson of Orange said, "Standing up for solid conservative values and conservative Christian values doesn't make you right wing — it just makes you right."

The Texas Republicans also completed their party business by re-electing national committee members Ernie Angelo of Midland and Penny Butler of Houston.

They also selected the 121 delegates that Texas will send to the Republican National Convention in Houston in August.

Before flying to Texas, Mr. Bush wrapped up a campaign swing to Universal City, Calif., where he found himself in the unevident position of having to work hard in some areas for what should have been automatic Republican votes.

In trouble with conservatives for breaking his 1988 no-new-taxes pledge, Mr. Bush received a polite reception before the Howard Jarvis Taxpayers Association, the group responsible for California's Proposition 13 referendum that has held down taxes for longtime property owners. Last week, the U.S. Supreme Court upheld that decision.

The president did not mention his decision to support a tax increase as part of the 1990 budget deal but cited tax cuts of the Reagan years.

"Our revolution isn't the work of a single presidency; it's the mission for a whole generation of reform," he said.

Bush asks Texas GOP for extra innings

BY KAYE NORTHCOTT

DALLAS — President Bush asked enthusiastic Texas Republicans yesterday to give him four more years to complete his goals rather than turning to an ill-defined Texas alternative, namely Ross Perot.

Bush did not mention Perot by name but he firmly addressed Perot's challenge, which has shown the potential independent candidate leading in many polls.

"A snappy answer and glib talk will not get the job done," Bush said at the state Republican convention. "Let somebody else become the darling of the talking heads on television. I'm going to keep on fighting to at stake for America to forget about trust and judgment and values. . . . Too much at stake, as we say here, to buy a pig in the poke," he said to a cheering, stomping crowd of thousands.

Some delegates said it was an unusually forceful speech from Bush, who frequently had the crowd on its feet.

The president thanked the crowd for "a sensationally warm welcome."

Many Republican delegates were critical of the attention the media are giving Perot.

Donna Peterson of Orange, who is running against Democrat Charles Wilson of Lufkin for an East Texas congressional seat, just about brought down the house when she said Bush's biggest problem is getting his message out.

"It is filtered every night by the three Chicken Littles on the network news," she complained.

Bush touched on all the issues the Republicans are expected to address during the fall campaign.

For instance, Bush paid homage to family values. "Fads may come and go, but in the Bush administration the family will always be in fashion and that's how we put things first," he said.

He said his fellow Texans know he will never "break with those Texas values we hold so dear: freedom and faith and honor and decency and most of all family."

He called for "a moral and even spiritual revival across this country."

Apparently responding to criticism that he is a low achiever on the domestic front, Bush said it is not as easy to accomplish domestic goals as it was to act decisively during Operation Desert Storm.

from some old goat in the United States Congress to kick Saddam Hussein out of Kuwait," he said.

Bush firmly placed the blame for government gridlock on an "old-thinking" Democrat-controlled Congress.

He said that if voters produced a GOP majority in Congress, he would have the country on the move again.

Bush said he will fight for a balanced budget, a line-item veto and term limits for Congress.

At an earlier stop in Los Angeles yesterday, The Associated Press reported, Bush tried to make amends for breaking the read-my-lips, no-new-taxes pledge he made at the 1988 Republican National Convention.

He told the Howard Jarvis Taxpayers Association that he is "committed as strongly as ever to win more tax relief and reform."

In Dallas, Bush reminded his fellow Republicans of the historic changes that have occurred in the balance of world power during his watch.

"Eastern Europe is free. Germany is united. Imperial communism is dead and buried," he said.

He mentioned the nuclear arms agreement he and Russian President Boris Yeltsin announced last week in the White House Rose Garden.

"Dreams come true for America," Bush said. "And these kids here will sleep at night without the same fear of nuclear war."

Bush's appearance in Dallas prompted a show of support for the Superconducting Super Collider. Collider contractor Jim Wade of Sunnyvale said the point of the rally outside Dallas City Hall was to explain why the giant atom-smasher needs to be built. The House voted to kill the $8.25 billion project last week.

"We're not seeking to protect our jobs," Wade said. "We need to see the project survive for scientific reasons and medical reasons."

Bush said he will not give up support for the project.

"It's good for Texas and it's good for America," the president said.

Bush began his speech as he frequently does at Texas Republican gatherings: by reminiscing about the Texas roots he put down when he moved with his wife, Barbara, to Texas in 1948 to go into the oil business.

"I have never felt as strongly as I do now. I am proud to be a Texan," he said.

A group of Dallas abortion-rights supporters picketed outside the Dallas Convention Center.

The 20 protesters — none of them delegates to the state GOP convention — wore pillows under their clothes to simulate pregnancy, and some walked barefoot on the hot concrete. "Barefoot and pregnant is the Republican way," said one sign.

The GOP platform includes the strictest anti-abortion language in years.

A fired-up Bush mobilizes forces at GOP convention

BY KAREN POTTER

Fort Worth Star-Telegram

DALLAS — It was a trademark clutch play.

Trailing in the polls, a feisty President Bush brought the fight to Ross Perot's backyard yesterday and told a convention hall full of frenzied fans that he's committed to toughing it out.

His performance capped three days of strategizing and rejuvenation by GOP state leaders and activists who are admittedly worried about the president's re-election chances in a three-way race against Perot and Democrat Bill Clinton.

"The president always does better when he gets a little upset," said Rep. Joe Barton, R-Ennis. "It fired me up."

Bush's speech touched the chords of an aggressive new campaign strategy to fend off Perot — one that places a premium on capturing the president's home state.

Bush moved to solidify his appeal to the conservatives who dominated the state GOP convention by talking about family values.

He reached out to Texans displaced by the economy by stressing his optimism and blaming "old goats" in Congress.

And without mentioning Perot's name, Bush aimed enough barbs at the billionaire challenger to assure convention-goers that he has it in him to fight back.

"I see this as a real charge" for Bush supporters, said Rep. Kim Brimer, R-Arlington. "This convention has picked them up."

Jim Oberwetter, Bush's Texas campaign director, said that for all practical purposes, the state GOP meeting kicked off the president's fall election campaign.

"We have a very big job ahead of us," Oberwetter said. "Texas is a pivotal state. It is a cornerstone of a winning presidential election. I suspect it will be the same this fall. I expect a knockdown drag-out."

For Bush's Texas backers, the campaign ahead is full of unknowns, and a three-way race means that they are having to revise their strategies for identifying voters and turning them out.

A candidate could capture all of Texas' electoral votes with only 40 percent of the popular vote, Republican officials said last week. Polls indicate that Bush now trails Perot in Texas.

Bush didn't mention his party's anti-abortion stand, but he repeatedly talked about the importance of family, a litmus test for many conservative Republicans whose support Bush needs in the fall. Abortion opponents outnumbered supporters nearly 10-to-1 at the convention, according to some estimates.

"I'm absolutely delighted to see it," Bill Price said. The president of Texans United for Life said Bush's emphasis on the family would mean the difference in how pumped up the GOP delegates would be when they left the Dallas Convention Center hall.

Republican strategist Karl Rove said that Clinton rather than Perot might end up being Bush's main opponent in Texas. Rove contends that support for Perot among young supporters, professionals and younger women is loose enough that they could be persuaded to switch camps.

"Right now, Ross Perot is the principal opponent of George Bush," Rove said. "My suspicion is when he does begin to recede — and he will recede — the principal opponent of George Bush becomes Bill Clinton. Not because Clinton is necessarily doing anything but standing on his feet, but because Perot becomes increasingly strange and weird."

Indeed, Republican officials are beginning to work on that "strange and weird" theme. A series of gun-slingers took aim in the past three days at Perot's temperament. Texas GOP Chairman Fred Meyer compared Perot with Italian dictator Benito Mussolini.

Another line repeated several times: Which candidate would you rather live next door to?

Several convention delegates said they were supporting Bush because he is the best of the three candidates, and they mentioned Perot's personality traits.

"Perot scares me," said systems analyst David Linehan, 32, of North Richland Hills. "I remember what he tried to do about Texas education. He runs roughshod."

Although the delegates' response to Bush's speech was uproariously favorable, some voiced concerns about jobs and the economy that reflect those heard from voters at large.

Barbara Gilman of Plano, an administrative assistant at a food company, said she's concerned enough about the economy that she's eyeing Perot.

"I think he [Bush] needs more help from Congress on the economy, but I think as far as the job situation, this country is in trouble," said Gilman, a longtime Republican who attended an appreciation dinner for first lady Barbara Bush.

"I like Ross Perot, yes. But whether or not I'll vote for him, I won't commit to anything of that nature now because I don't know what his platform is going to be. . . . Whether or not Perot can do anything with the Congress like he says he can or not, I don't know."

George W. Bush, the president's oldest son and a political adviser, said Fort Worth-Dallas will be a key battleground in Texas. Battered by defense cuts and familiar with Perot's good works, residents of the area now favor Perot by a 3-1 margin, Bush said.

The president's son and other advisers said they hope to recapture Metroplex voters with an improving economy and an emphasis on who is best-suited to be president.

Read his lips — president says no Perot

Bush indirectly assails billionaire after taxing day

By KEN HERMAN
POST AUSTIN BUREAU

In a preview of the portrait of Ross Perot he will try to paint before November, President Bush aggressively jabbed at the Dallas billionaire's personality and plans during a Saturday speech to the Texas GOP convention.

Though he never mentioned Perot by name, Bush picked up on a theme laid out earlier in the week by Rob Mosbacher, a Texas GOP official who called Perot a "temperamental tycoon."

"A president must be temperamentally suited for the job," Bush said forcefully. "And I have been tested by fire, and I am the right man for that job."

The tough rhetoric came after a taxing day in California, where Bush tried to make amends with conservatives for breaking his no-new-taxes pledge.

In Los Angeles, Bush told leaders of the taxpayer revolt movement that "it is your duty to your family" to fight high taxes and government waste. He did not mention his 1990 flip-flop on taxes.

Bush cast himself there as the steadfast partner of Ronald Reagan — the idol of tax-cut advocates — and expressed sympathy with voters' anger at Washington. Government has grown too large and spends too much, he said.

In Dallas, Bush chided Perot's plan to hold electronic town hall meetings to take the public's pulse on major decisions, such as tax increases.

"It is just plain irresponsible and out of touch with reality to suggest that a president should take a poll to get a tax increase before he leads the world against aggression. What the people want from their leaders is leadership," he said. "I don't need to take a poll to know what's right."

The Bush speech was the highlight of a three-day state GOP convention that was marked by an undercurrent of discontent about Bush's decision not to attack Perot head-on until after the Republican National Convention in Houston in August.

While Republicans cheered wildly Saturday for what Bush said at their state convention, some had grumbled quietly during the convention about what he has not been saying.

One GOP operative said there is an undercurrent of discontent among Texas Republicans who are tired of reading polls that put Perot in front.

"They are upset that Perot has risen and the president's campaign is not responding. The campaign strategy is to wait until after the (GOP national) convention to deal with Perot or Bill Clinton. But some are arguing strongly that the president shouldn't wait that long," the consultant said.

T-shirts bashing Perot hot items

ASSOCIATED PRESS

DALLAS — The hottest items at the state Republican Party Convention share a common theme: Bash Ross Perot.

The 10,000 GOP delegates can buy pro-Bush coffee mugs, aprons and earrings.

But the most popular items at this weekend's gathering in Perot's hometown seem to be T-shirts bombarding the Dallas billionaire, who hasn't yet declared his candidacy for the White House.

T-shirts said: "Bush for Boss

Instead of Ross" and "I'd Rather Toss than Vote for Ross."

One featured a mock lottery ticket bearing a picture of Perot. "Texas Lone Star Billions," it said. "Take a Chance. Match 3 Issues and Win a President."

Another shirt depicted a box of "Sugar-Coated Perot Flakes."

One booth's best-seller featured a picture of Bush, Democrat Bill Clinton and Perot with the words: "The Good, the Bad, the Uncommitted."

And then there was a button with a simpler message: "Cynical Observer."

Bush's Saturday speech sounded like a trial run, in front of enthusiastic supporters, of the themes he will use to try to erode support for Perot.

"It's a strange political year, yes, but snappy answers and glib talk will not get the job done," he said. "Let somebody else become the darling of the talking heads on television. I'm going to keep on fighting to get something done for this country."

"And you wait till August and we'll roll up our sleeves and get in that campaign mode," Bush added. "There is too much at stake to buy a pig in a poke."

The president drew wild applause by calling for a "moral and even a spiritual revival, particularly when it comes to instilling values in our kids."

"We are going to get the job done. There has been too much pessimism, too many people trying to get elected by saying how bad things are, too many gloomy TV news stories about what's wrong with America," Bush said.

He also told the Texans that the U.S. House had a "vision problem" when it voted last week to curtail funding for the superconducting super collider planned for North Texas.

"Don't for a minute think we are going to give up on the superconducting super collider," Bush said. "The country needs it, and the world needs it. It is good for Texas, and it is good for the United States of America."

Bush's words pleased about 350 demonstrators marching outside in support of the project. Computer scientists, mechanical engineers and magnet specialists carried makeshift signs and held a pep rally for the collider.

Though many delegates said they have been comfortable with Bush's hands-off-Perot strategy, some said they are worried.

"I think he is just biding his time, then he is going to show Perot for what he is," said delegate Bryan Copeland of Lubbock. "I'm a little concerned about it, but I think he can take him down."

Delegate Robert Lyster of Brownwood said he hopes Bush is about to take off on Perot.

"I think it's time. I think the Republican Party is really going to push a real hard drive beginning with this convention today," he said.

Bush backers at the convention clearly were ready to hear some Perot bashing. U.S. Rep. Bill Archer of Houston told delegates the election can be won merely by recounting the accomplishments of the Bush administration.

"We do not have to talk about the frailties of Ross Perot or Bill Clinton," Archer said, drawing cheers.

Bush launches attack on Perot

By Laylan Copelin
American-Statesman Capitol Staff

DALLAS — President Bush on Saturday unleashed his most direct attack yet on Ross Perot, blasting one of his proposals as irresponsible and warning voters "there is too much at stake" in the race for the White House "to buy a pig in a poke."

The president also admitted he is in a fight for his political life, but he told the Texas Republican Convention that he would win his adopted state "going away."

Bush, who has been insisting he would refrain from attacking his foes until later in the campaign, never mentioned Perot by name in his speech. But many of his remarks in Perot's political backyard clearly were aimed at the billionaire.

For instance, Bush alluded to a theme his campaign operatives are developing — that Perot is a mercurial tycoon unfit for the presidency. "A president must be temperamentally suited for the job," Bush said. "I've been tested for four years."

Bush's "pig in a poke" line underscored Perot's lack of government experience. And in an obvious reference to Perot's suggestion that he would conduct electronic "town meetings" to tap public opinion on major issues, Bush called it "just plain irresponsible and out of touch with reality."

In addition, the president dismissed recent appearances on television talk shows by both Perot and Democrat Bill Clinton, saying, "Let someone else become the darling of the talking heads on television."

Locked in a three-way free-for-all, according to recent polls, Bush blamed a Democratic-controlled Congress for his problems. He contrasted the stalemate on domestic issues, particularly the economy, with the U.S. victory in the Persian Gulf war.

"I didn't have to get permission from some old goat in Congress to get Saddam Hussein out of Kuwait," Bush said.

He also defended his use of force without waiting for a national consensus. "I don't need to take a poll to know what is right when standing up to aggression," he said. Perot has criticized the president for "committing the troops" before the American people were united behind the cause.

Bush spoke for about 30 minutes to an estimated 15,000 delegates, alternates and visitors on the third and final day of the GOP state convention. The audience waved such signs as "Viva Bush" and "Texas Women 4 Bush" and broke into chants of "four more years."

During the speech, Bush addressed key developments in Washington last week — including the vote by the U.S. House to stop funding for the superconducting supercollider being built south of Dallas. As supporters of the multi-billion-dollar atom smasher demonstrated outside, the president vowed not to "give up" on the project.

Bush hailed the arms-reduction agreement with Russian President Boris Yeltsin as the "most sweeping nuclear arms cuts in history." However, Bush warned that the world is still dangerous.

Bush also brought up:

■ Parental choice in education. "Whether it's public, private or religious, parents are going to have the right to choose their schools," he said.

■ Taxes. Bush made a veiled reference to his broken promises from 1988 of "no new taxes." To strike a budget deal with Congress two years ago, Bush agreed to tax increases. He said many Texas Republicans "argued with me over the price" of the budget agreement.

■ His record of vetoing legislation. "It's Bush 26 and the Congress zero," the president said.

His address concluded a convention dominated by right-wing, anti-abortion party members. They strengthened the anti-abortion plank in the state GOP platform despite predictions by some Republicans that the stand would hurt Bush's re-election chances.

Though Bush mentioned "family values," he said nothing in his speech about abortion rights. Early in his career, Bush supported abortion rights. He now supports a constitutional ban on abortions except when the mother's life is in danger or in cases of rape or incest.

Bush promised he could get the country moving again if voters give him a GOP majority in Congress. He said 35 years of Democratic leadership in the U.S. House has given the American people "a crooked post office and a lot of bounced checks."

The convention also honored John Tower as the father of the Texas Republican Party.

Texas Republicans also selected presidential electors and delegates to the Republican National Convention in Houston in August.

From the 10th Congressional District, the delegates are Cynthia Hall, Kirk Overbey and David Herndon, all of Austin. Alternates are R.J. "Duke" Bodisch, Alan Sagar and Pam Willeford, all of Austin. The presidential elector is Richard Box of Austin.

From the 11th Congressional District, the delegates are state Rep. Dianne White Delia of Temple, Bernie Henderson Jr. of Cameron and Rick Castillo of Temple. Alternates are Sarilee Ferguson of Waco, Bill Stanford of Belton and Ray Meadows of Waco. The presidential elector is Rebecca Dixon of Waco.

From the 14th Congressional District, the delegates are Charla Borchers-Leon of Victoria, Oliver Kitzman of Waller County and Laurie Stettler of Blanco. Alternates are Teresa Spears of Dripping Springs, Hally Clements of Victoria and Arlene Marshall of Port Lavaca. The presidential elector is Margaret Fieldhorn of Refugio.

SSC workers urge Bush to save project 350 rally outside GOP convention

By Beth Silver

Staff Writer of The Dallas Morning News

About 350 Superconducting Super Collider laboratory workers and their families waited four hours Saturday outside the state GOP convention to hear what they wanted: President Bush's pledge to save the $8.25 billion project.

Mr. Bush told delegates at the Dallas Convention Center that he would continue his support for the project, which the U.S. House voted last week to kill.

project," he told a cheering crowd of 10,000 conventioners.

The lab workers and their families marched from City Hall to the convention center carrying signs that read, "Don't sacrifice our future," "The pursuit of technology is not a waste" and "Bush, keep the SSC vision thing."

By the time Mr. Bush spoke, the crowd of demonstrators had dwindled to 30 people, who did not get to see the president.

He said he hopes the president "gets the message that we're here because we believe in the project. Surely he can throw his weight in the Senate."

Dan Hutton, a mechanical engineer with the lab for three years, said Mr. Bush should lobby the Senate harder than he has done in the last month.

Joe Popp, an engineer from Red Oak, joined about 350 demonstrators Saturday outside the Dallas Convention Center to urge President Bush to support continuation of the $8.25 billion Superconducting Super Collider project.

Andy Mears, a quality assurance engineer at the lab, said the debate in the House was purely political. The Super Collider, he said, stands on its technical merits.

SSC employees began talking of a demonstration Friday at work. They said they will continue to contact their Congress members to fight for the project.

With the large turnout at the rally and Mr. Bush's pledge, morale is bound to pick up at the labora-

"It's not over yet," Mr. Mears said.

Earlier Saturday in Duncanville, U.S. Rep. Martin Frost, who voted for continued funding of the project, said the Super Collider is not a pork-barrel venture but a national project "that happens to be in Texas."

"If we're going to be a leader in the world in science research, we're going to have to do things like this," said Mr. Frost, D-Dallas. "It's not in our national interest to eliminate the Super Collider and advocate national research."

He said he is confident the Senate will reverse the House's decision because national attention now is focused on it.

To his surprise, none of the 40 people who turned out for his regular town hall meeting asked questions about the Super Collider. Instead, most asked about health care and unemployment.

"Maybe they are just stunned," he said.

Over Barbara Bush, GOPers all agree

DALLAS — One of the main goals of top Texas Republicans at the GOP state convention here this weekend was to generate enthusiasm for George Bush and for his re-election.

Exactly how well that objective was met at the confab seething with the discontent of those feeling misused by a relentless majority still is to be seen.

But if there is one thing on which Republicans of all ilk — indeed, apparently Americans of all ilk — agree, it is that they are crazy about his wife Barbara.

Jane Ely

That hardly is news. Still, her enormous popularity would have been notable even at a convention united in unqualified support for the president.

Here, it sometimes — especially in private conversations — was stark.

For example, one known for her unstinting support of George Bush in his 1988 campaign was asked the other day if she would work for Bush's re-election this year.

After a long moment of clearly agonized silence, she dragged out a "yes," quickly followed by her softly spoken though firmly intentioned declaration: "but not as hard as last time." Her explanation for her flagging enthusiasm for Bush was not simple and it was not single-issue.

But if she tended to ramble a bit as she tried to sort out her feelings about the president, she was unhesitating in gushing her affection for the first lady.

"Oh, I still love Barbara," she blurted in relief at the switch in talk from the president to his wife.

Just as she was in the clear majority of the entire convention in her regard for the first lady, she also echoed the strongly dominant response of a hit-or-miss scattering of activists, operatives and longtime GOPers who were informally asked:

If you were involved in a district campaign for someone and had to choose between having either the president or his wife come into the district for an event, which would you want?

Almost without exception, the responses were prompt and they were emphatic. "Barbara," "Barbara," "Barbara," the GOPers said.

A few felt compelled to explain that Barbara Bush, after all, does not carry the baggage of being the president who is bound to alienate at least some with every hard decision he makes or action he takes. Or doesn't make or take.

One bluntly contended, "she has a better speechwriter and delivers funny lines so well, when he can't at all."

Several mentioned her humor and her ability to communicate with "regular people." Many spoke of the sense of warmth and caring she conveys in words, in her very presence.

"Everybody wants to feel good, and Barbara makes everybody feel good," one contended.

Barbara Bush would loath the comparison, but two political junkies found themselves sending several GOPers into breath-gasping spasms with their contention her strength is much like that of Ross Perot, the billionaire Texan whose virtually certain independent presidential campaign has many Republicans on the edge of panic.

The political brilliance of Perot, the two maintained, is centered in his skill at making his hordes of supporters feel they are actively involved in politics.

He makes them feel important, that they matter, contended the two, a politician and a rag-tag political columnist. And that, they told those now gulping for air, was just what the gaspers had been emphasizing as a great part of Barbara Bush's enormous appeal.

The rest of this small group engaged in typical hotel-lobby political chat may have balked at acknowledging any similarity of any kind between Barbara Bush and Perot, but they demurred not at all in acknowledging they use mention of her at every opportunity in their campaigning for her husband.

Indeed, it is not at all unheard of for GOP campaigners to speak as much, if not more, of her as they do of the president — particularly if they are speaking to groups mostly made up of women.

That Barbara Bush seems to have equally strong approval in the two most blatantly, and painfully, disparate groups within the party shows not just her personal appeal but her political skill — a talent she consistently displays while denying she has it.

Her admirers within the ranks of the staunchly anti-abortion forces that dominated this convention are legion. Her boosters among those who would prefer their party either to take no position on the question of abortion or to favor a woman's right to choose are every bit as many and as ardent.

Had there been any doubt of that, it was dramatically proven as those on either side of that issue — and either side of a good many other less passionate ones — stood shoulder to shoulder in repeated bursts of applause throughout her convention speech, in which she, yes, demonstrated humor, warmth and caring.

And had those on the floor of the convention heard her later when she told Texas reporters the president will campaign in the Bushes' home state "a lot" before November, a good many likely would have called on her to be sure to come with him.

In the words of her son, George W. Bush, Barbara Bush, indeed, "is a great warrior for the old man."

Mr. President, dear George,

Let me tell you how much I was moved by your telephone call during my stay at the hospital and after returning to office.

I thank you from all my heart for your sympathy and good wishes. You helped me a lot by your kindness. Knowing about your tough schedule I could not expect such a gesture of friendship. First I thought somebody was playing a joke on me when they told me that the American President was on the phone. And then it was really you. As you can imagine one is particularly receptive to and thankful for such expressions of affection at such times.

Knowing that you were thinking about me helped to speed my recovery. Take all my gratitude for your kindness and thoughtfulness. I will not forget it!

My prayers and thoughts are with you in that decisive election year. You have been such an outstanding leader of the Western world that we seriously need you also in the future.

May God bless you!

Yours in gratitude,

Dear Friend of Freedom,

It was an honor for me to join thousands of our fellow Virginia Republicans at the Republican Party of Virginia Convention in Salem two weekends ago. In this critical election year, it was encouraging to see the enthusiasm that is sweeping our ranks.

I returned from our party's convention more convinced than ever that the 1992 elections present an historic opportunity for the Old Dominion and this nation.

For most of my adult life I have been involved in America's struggle against dictators and the tyranny of one party rule. When I retired from nearly a quarter century in the Marines, I thought these battles were behind me. I was wrong.

Sadly, I know of a place where more than six million people live in virtual bondage to tyrannical government.

I have seen the warm and friendly people of this place lose good jobs and face an uncertain future because of the gross incompetence of the ruling political party -- a party that has had its grip on power for over a decade.

In the capital of this resource rich dominion, the rulers are consolidating a one-party political dynasty. And despite their remarkable heritage and productivity, the fine people of this place suffer under the increasing burdens of debt, corruption and mounting unemployment.

Unfortunately the tragic -- but accurate -- situation I've described above isn't in some third world dictatorship. It's right here in Virginia.

That's right, your home and mine -- Virginia.

Read again what I've written. Now think about the sad shape we're in because of what's happening in Richmond. What a dismal outcome for the Old Dominion -- the state that gave our nation four of its first five presidents and the wise men who drafted our Declaration of Independence and our Constitution.

Compare the integrity, principles, moral values and character of founders like Thomas Jefferson, George Washington and James Madison to the petty, one-party despots running Richmond today under King Douglas, the Wilder. Worst of all, it is only going to get worse unless WE THE PEOPLE do something about it.

Last year, right after I was finally exonerated in my five and a half year struggle against Congress, the "Congressional Special Prosecutor" and the liberal media elites, I decided that I would do whatever I could to make a difference here in Virginia.

In last year's General Assembly elections, I devoted my time and energies to supporting and campaigning for good candidates who were trying to overthrow the permanent political potentates of one-party rule in Richmond.

People told me that my involvement wouldn't make any difference -- that the ruling liberal majority had so ruthlessly gerrymandered our new Assembly districts that the Republican challengers had no chance of taking them off their throne.

But since I am not a politician, I didn't listen to the pontificating pundits. Am I ever glad I didn't!

Last year with the leadership of Republican Party Chairman Don Huffman, our Republican opposition scored unprecedented victories. In fact, they scored a string of David against Goliath upsets. And Republicans almost doubled their numbers in the Virginia State Senate!

You see, one thing I learned as a Marine was never, ever give up. I'm glad I went out and campaigned for Republican challengers like Fred Quayle and Robert Nelms and others who now represent WE THE PEOPLE in our General Assembly.

I've also learned that we don't have to be professional politicians to have a stake in how our beloved Old Dominion is run. As a husband, the father of four children educated in Virginia schools, and as a Virginia businessman, I have a major investment in the future of our Commonwealth.

It made my blood boil when Governor Wilder betrayed Virginia's families by refusing to support parental notification and then pushed the distribution of condoms to Virginia's school children! If he thinks these are solutions to the crises facing our families, he's lost touch with America's values!

Doug Wilder and his powerful political friends may think that they can impose their liberal agenda on my family and me without a fight. If so, they've got another thing coming.

But sadly, they will have their way with our state unless you and I work together -- now! WE THE PEOPLE can stop them.

We can stop this liberal Democratic juggernaut by getting behind good Republican candidates who will put up a good fight against the reigning political aristocracy. You and I have the ability -- by using the democratic process started right here in Virginia -- to break the back of one-party rule.

Now, I'm not asking that you necessarily work in the trenches for 10, 20 or 30 hours a week for the candidates who need your help. But you can do your part by giving generously to the Republican Party of Virginia -- the RPV.

RPV's team is working around the clock to get good Republican candidates elected. It was largely due to their hard work that Republicans scored so many upsets last Fall -- even after the Democrats had cynically re-drawn Virginia's electoral districts in order to guarantee Republican defeats.

There is no time to waste. The Republican Party of Virginia is budgeting funds right now to deploy in support of Republican candidates for Congress who are fighting for their lives even as I write.

The Democrat incumbents that these Republican challengers face on the political battlefield cling to their Congressional seats by doing "favors" for powerful special interest groups. Liberal campaign budgets are literally overflowing with funds from big Unions, feminist groups and other liberal activist organizations.

The bottom line is that the Republican Party of Virginia needs to raise $100,000 before June 30th. This help is essential if we're to have strong Republican campaigns this summer.

As you know the Democrats are masters at raising money early and putting it toward political media and advertising, so that by the time the campaigns heat up in the Fall, our Republican challengers are too far behind to catch up.

But this time around, you and I have an opportunity to stop the Democrats from doing that to us again.

The Republican Party of Virginia needs your gift of $35, $50, $75, $100 or more -- right away. With your help, our candidates can get off to a winning start this time around.

Your contribution today can defeat a liberal Democrat tomorrow. But unless you and I work together now, we can't build on the Republican gains we made in the General Assembly last Fall. We will have lost momentum -- and wasted an historic opportunity for change.

You have my commitment to do my part by continuing to campaign across the length and breadth of Virginia on behalf of Republican candidates right up through the elections.

Please help by supporting the Republican Party of Virginia today with your most generous contribution.

Semper Fidelis,

Oliver L. North

P.S. We cannot sit idly by as Doug Wilder and his powerful, professional, political aristocracy run our state into the ground. I will do my part by continuing to campaign for good Republicans. I hope you will do your part by filling out the enclosed form and mailing it today in the attached envelope with your most generous contribution.

What do you think?
G.W.B.*

A national television series which will narrate the story of the Middle East and especially of Israel since World War II is being prepared by former Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban for broadcast this fall. The relationship between the United States and Israel will figure very prominently. Eban's last series was watched by a cumulative audience of 50 million Americans in three nationwide broadcasts. Eban would like to either interview The President or have The President tape a statement which would be incorporated in the series. ||

One of the highlights of the series will be a recorded film with President Truman explaining why he decided to recognize Israel as soon as it was established in May 1948. There are also interviews with former Presidents Nixon and Carter concerning decisions that they took and attitudes that they expressed when in office. Former President Lyndon B. Johnson appears in the film, conferring with Eban before the outbreak of the Six Day War in 1967.

The present text includes the closing Presidential speech at the Madrid Conference earlier this year, but this does not allude specifically to Israel as do the remarks of Truman, Johnson, Nixon and Carter.

Eban wishes to make clear on film that the period between 1989 and 1992 was what he calls "a golden year" in the flow of strength to Israel from the United States. The scope of aid was greater than in any former administration and, in addition, the current administration initiated the annulment of the anti-Zionist resolution, assisted the immigration of Jews from the former USSR and Ethiopia and inaugurated a peace process which brought Israel and the Arab nations into direct negotiation for the first time. Eban would ask The President to explain the reasons that led to these decisions and the prospect for continued cooperation in the future. Eban will explain that this is a versatile and constructive record in which all true friends of Israel in America can rightly take pride.

The premiere presentation of this series will be made to leaders of the Jewish community in late October and it should, in Eban's opinion, eliminate the mistaken idea that there is some serious tension in the relationship. ||

Dear Mr. Fitzwater:

Betty and Budge Sperling were married in Biloxi, Mississippi, outside of the airbase where Budge was stationed, on June 22, 1942. So on Monday, June 22, 1992, when Speaker Tom Foley will be our breakfast guest, the Sperlings will be starting their Golden Wedding Day.

The plan is to have the "socializing" begin at 7:30 AM before the breakfasters sit down to question the Speaker. It would really make the day for the Sperlings if the President could drop by to say "hello" and wish them well.

The Speaker knows of this invitation and enthusiastically "seconds" it. Indeed, if President Bush would find it more convenient to drop by a little later, between 8:00 and 9:00, everyone, including the Speaker, would welcome him with open arms. We'd have a brief interlude.

As you can see from what I am saying, this particular breakfast will not be kept to a tight schedule. Indeed, this whole morning might turn out to be one of socializing.

The President would only have to stay a few minutes. But he might want to remain for a little while to shake hands and chat. We are promising a powerhouse of the media to be on hand.

Many thanks.

Dear Roman:

It is with great appreciation for your outstanding work that I accept your resignation as Deputy Assistant to the President and Deputy Press Secretary for Foreign Affairs. Parting with friends and colleagues is never easy, but I am pleased to have this opportunity to thank for your efforts as a key member of my staff.

Your assistance was a tremendous asset to me during the past three years. You proved yourself a dedicated public servant and an eloquent spokesman for our foreign policy. I know how hard you and your staff worked during times of international crisis, and I appreciate the sacrifices that you made to ensure that we were able to get our message out promptly and accurately.

The experience that you gained at the White House should certainly serve you well in your new post as the first American Ambassador to Ukraine. The challenges will be great, but so will the rewards. As you establish our Embassy in Kiev and begin to foster a new friendship with the Ukrainian people, you take with you my admiration, my trust, and my gratitude.

Dear Mr. President:

It was a great honor to be nominated the first U.S. Ambassador to Ukraine. Your trust and confidence in me for this great task is greatly appreciated.

Over the past few years, we have witnessed historic changes throughout Eastern Europe and the demise of the Soviet Union. In their wake, we are now seeing the initial steps towards democracy and economic reform. Through your leadership, the United States and the West played a key role in facilitating these historic changes in a peaceful and positive direction. And now, through your able guidance, the United States is engaged in nurturing the reforms so that the peoples of these lands can join the ranks of free states as a constructive force in world affairs. It has been an honor to be a part of your team during these times and help in shaping this history.

I now look forward to carrying out my duties as the first United States Ambassador to Ukraine. I look forward to strengthening our bilateral relationship and in helping Ukraine meet the goals of political and economic reform.

As I move on to take up my post, I respectfully submit my resignation as Deputy Assistant to the President and Deputy Press Secretary for Foreign Affairs.

Once again, I thank you for your confidence, and I look forward to carrying out the Administration's agenda.

Respectfully,

Roman Popadiuk
Deputy Assistant to the President and Deputy Press Secretary

Dear Patty,

Enclosed is some language I proposed for the platform writers. Working on the documentary that I am Fed-exing was stimulating and joyful and the response was incredible; drafting platform language was disappointing.

The platform project focused my thoughts. I hope you don't mind if I share them with you -- but I wasn't sure who else to entrust these to....

We Republicans have moved too slowly with regard to HIV/AIDS. First Clinton and soon Perot will be taking all the reasonable leadership positions. For an issue that doesn't really belong in the political arena, we're being left with nothing but defense of what we have or haven't done - and the AIDS community is hearing nothing from us, or from the Administration, of leadership, compassion, or hope.

I presented to the National Commission on AIDS yesterday in Kansas City. Afterward I was questioned, hard, on and off the record, regarding the Administration's dealings with Commission recommendations. People wanted to know the President's "real position" on HIV/AIDS. Reports circulating today that Secretary Sullivan has rejected Commission findings, or has suggested that "we're already doing most of what's recommended," only added fuel to the fires. I sidestepped questions regarding the Administration, re-asserting the importance of local, grassroots advocacy. But I felt the sting of the questions, even while avoiding them.

This may be hard to believe, living in the White House, but confidence that the President genuinely cares about this issue is low. I've faced tough critics before, of course, and have always been loyal to my President (as I am now). But what makes this peculiarly grim is that the hardest questioning isn't from the President's critics, but from friends. Republicans. Loyalists.

If in November we're going to attract any of the 15,000,000 people in families directly affected by AIDS, some recognizable -- that is, public -- leadership position is needed. This could involve a speech or appearance. It could involve the President himself. It could be supported by platform language which is more explicit and aggressive than what I dared (given all the silence on this issue) propose.

I'm willing to help in any way, but I have no official standing in the White House or the Party from which to speak or act, so my comments are without status. At the same time, because of my background and loyalties, people see me as a defender of the Administration. And the challenge I am asked to meet more and more frequently is one of integrity: I speak of the President's private compassion toward me, and questioners ask how my comments can be true given the Administration's public positions. I can hear your frequent admonition, "Do the right thing," but I'm beginning to wonder what the right thing really is.

I am concerned, and I need some advice from you. We can't wait until the convention for the President to speak out on AIDS; by then, Clinton (or, soon, Perot) will take away all the tolerable positions. So what should I do?

The President earlier asked that I meet with him "after consulting with Secretary Sullivan and Sam Skinner." I've met that requirement; should I ask for the meeting now?

I could outline a series of steps by which the President could demonstrate his compassionate leadership for families being destroyed by HIV/AIDS. But is it desired?

You know everything went well in Salt Lake City...my testimony was well received. Per Bob Mosbacher and Daddy, I have made my formal request to speak at the convention and am awaiting a response.

What do you suggest?

MEMORANDUM

To: The President
FR: Jack Sloat
RE: Budget deficit reduction

CS

The mounting budget deficit seems to be the issue of greatest concern to the voting public. Inasmuch as Congress has turned down the balanced budget amendment and Tom Foley is now talking about coming up with a new deficit reduction plan, it is imperative, I believe, that the Administration come up with some new initiative to try to break the gridlock rather than appear helpless in light of the Congressional turndown.

Suggestion: Create an ultra blue ribbon Presidential Commission to develop a plan for achieving a balanced budget within 3 years -- i.e., within the next Presidential term -- with no pre-conditions on what the recommendations could be. The Commission would be charged with coming up with its recommendations within 6 months - December 1992 - which would be after the election and make any increased tax proposals politically palatable. Also, the Commission's work would be cast as doing something on behalf of the country (i.e., not just this Administration) regardless of who is elected President in November.

Suggestions on composition (20-25 members)

4 former members of Congress: e.g., Rudman, Conable, Conrad, Wirth
4 business CEO's: Shrontz (Boeing), Allen (A,T&T), etc.
4 economists: e.g., Jim Schlesinger, etc.
Miscellaneous: e.g., Jim Lynn (former OMB Director & recently retired President of Aetna)
Bob Strauss
George Shultz, etc.

Dear Mr President,

I am most grateful to you for your kind and generous message, following the completion of a general election for Fiji's House of Representatives.

We have been through five trying, and at times turbulent, years and the people of Fiji are greatly relieved that our nation has now returned to parliamentary government.

We are still by no means without problems, but we are confident that these will be solved, both by our own efforts and with the help of friends like you and your great nation.

Please accept my assurance that we deeply value your assistance and goodwill.

Yours sincerely,

Penaia K Ganiilau

Dear Howard,

Thanks for your letter of June 17. Yes, the political wars have been ugly -- attacks from the right and the left; but I remain confident about the fall. Words of encouragement and steadfast support by friends like you mean a lot.

Barbara and I send our best wishes. You're doing a terrific job.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. President + Barbara -

Watching the relentless media frenzy during the "Silly Season" makes me angry and embarrassed to be an American - Europeans simply scratch their heads and speculate

Please remember that I - and millions of others - consider you to be the best leadership this country could possibly have ... during 3 1/2 years of the most turmoil ever on our planet.

Thanks for being there for the rest of us.
