BUSH EXPLORES 'GRAND CANYON' DIVIDING HIM AND CLINTON

COLORADO SPRINGS -- President Bush, saying he's tired of Bill Clinton lying about him, began a weeklong drive to the Republican convention Thursday that will stress the differences he has with the Democrats and poke holes in his opponents programs.

"We are separated by a gulf as wide as the Grand Canyon," Bush said to cheers from the annual meeting of the American Legislative Exchange Council.

Bush's attack was the harshest yet and the first time he has devoted a full speech to describing the differences between him and his opponent.

Torie Clarke said Bush plans to step up his attacks on Clinton's proposals as he approaches the GOP convention. "It's all show and no pony," she said of the Democrats. "They talk a good game, looking good and sounding good, but there is just nothing there."

Campaign officials welcomed the strategy. "We should have done it six months ago," a top official said. Other Bush aides said the President's aggressive approach to the campaign is being orchestrated by Secretary Baker, who is expected to take over the campaign after the convention.

In a 10-minute radio interview later Thursday, Bush lashed out at conservatives who have suggested he should quit the race for re-election. "Tell them to go jump in the lake," the President said on Denver's KOA radio. "I'm not a quitter, I'm a fighter. I've been down before."

(Paul Bedard, Washington Times, A4)

Bush Issues Stinging Criticism Of Clinton's Economic Plans

COLORADO SPRINGS -- President Bush, responding to criticism within his party that he needs to better define his differences with Bill Clinton, Thursday ridiculed his opponent's economic plans and said the only federal program a Democratic Administration would eliminate would be a $20 million federal subsidy for honeybee farmers.

Clinton's campaign quickly fired back at Bush. "President Bush has the worst economic record of any president since Hoover and now he wants to try more of the same policies that got us into this mess," said George Stephanopoulos, Clinton's communications director, in a statement.

The Clinton campaign, citing Bureau of Labor Statistics data, said that over the past four years, Arkansas under Clinton had produced more private sector jobs than Bush had produced in the rest of the country. The campaign said that between January 1989 and June 1992, the number of non-farm private sector jobs in the country had declined by 82,000, while Arkansas had registered an increase of 88,200 from January 1989 to May 1992.

As he has in other recent speeches, Bush seemed to apologize for his campaign, saying "I've been a little slow to fight back" and acknowledging he lacked the oratorical skills of Ronald Reagan.

(Bill McAllister, Washington Post, A12)

Bush Tries To Get Back The Anti-Tax Vote

COLORADO SPRINGS -- President Bush sought Thursday to regain the anti-tax constituency that won his 1988 election campaign by portraying Bill Clinton as a candidate who would raise taxes $150 billion over the next four years, figures Clinton denies.

"It's just not true," Clinton said of Bush's charge.

A morning editorial in a local paper reminded Bush of the political price he has paid for the tax increase he negotiated in a budget-cutting deal with Congress. That tax increase, currently the largest in U.S. history, "was your biggest mistake," lectured the Gazette-Telegraph, and unless Bush rediscovers "conservative pro-growth themes," it said, "you might as well not run."

Bush is trailing Clinton 47% to 22% in this state, which has not been won by a Democratic presidential candidate since 1964, according to a Denver Post poll taken immediately after the Democratic convention and published Thursday. Only 56% of Colorado Republicans said they would support the President.

(Mike Dorning, Chicago Tribune)

Bush Says Rival Would 'Pull A Fast One' Over Taxes

COLORADO SPRINGS -- Trying to steady the Republicans' wobbly conservative base, President Bush Thursday made his most aggressive assault yet on Bill Clinton, charging that Clinton would "pull a fast one on the American people" and raise taxes by hundreds of billions of dollars.

Bush's speech, which drew two standing ovations and much flag waving, was an exercise in minimizing the Administration's disappointments on the economy and presenting the President as the heir to Ronald Reagan's conservative policies.

The Bush campaign, for example, said Thursday that Clinton "unabashedly proposes the largest tax increase in American history, at least $150 billion over four years." That assertion is at best questionable. The tax increase signed by Bush in 1990 may actually have been larger. It was $137 billion over five years.

In the face of political pressure -- and the rumors about his physical health -- Bush appeared more good-humored, self-deprecating, energetic, angrier and confident Thursday.

STATING HIS CASE, BUSH
MISPLACES RIVAL'S HOME

OKLAHOMA CITY -- Vice President Quayle recently failed spelling, and Thursday President Bush flunked geography.

Campaigning in Colorado Springs, Bush referred to Bill Clinton as "the governor of a certain state... located somewhere between Texas and Oklahoma."

The Red River and a few sandbars are the only things between Oklahoma and Texas, where Bush lived for 25 years and still maintains residency. "The man who promised he would be America's education President doesn't know his geography," said Bill McDonnell, director of Clinton's Oklahoma campaign.

Columbus discovered America, but after three years in the White House, "Bush hasn't found it yet," Clinton said.

NATIONAL NEWS

SUPPORT FLUID, POLL SHOWS

Only about half the voters in the U.S. support the same candidate for president they backed in early June, and the dramatic surge in support for Bill Clinton could change again before the campaign is over, a Times-Mirror poll released Thursday shows.

Clinton's supporters are more united by their disaffection from President Bush than by their views of Clinton, and "there is little indication that this decisive voting bloc has made a firm commitment to the Democratic ticket," the Times-Mirror analysis said.

But the survey found far more bad news for Bush than Clinton. The organization reinterviewed 1,023 registered voters it had surveyed in June and found that Clinton leads Bush by 57% to 36%.

During the time between the two surveys, Clinton repaired his image with many voters, with 36% rating him more favorably than they did in June. Bush, in contrast, saw his image deteriorate, with 24% giving him a less favorable rating since June.

GOLDWATER WARNS ABORTION PLANK MAY WRECK GOP

One of the most conservative voices in the Republican Party predicted Thursday that unless the GOP modifies its antiabortion position, "the Republican National Convention will go down in a shambles, as will the election."

Former Sen. Goldwater said in a letter to Mary Dent Crisp, head of the National Republican Coalition for Choice, that "abortion is not something the Republican Party should call for the abolition of.... There is no way in the world that abortion is going to be abolished. It has been going on ever since man and woman lived together on this Earth."

(Politics, Washington Post, A12)

AT THE WHITE HOUSE, BAD NEWS FOR THE MESSENGERS

At a time when President Bush is frantically trying to get his message heard above the din of Democratic volume and general mudslinging, the White House has axed at least three speech writers. Steve Provost told the writers Tuesday night that their services would no longer be needed.

The casualties so far: Joe Duggan, Mike Johns, and Beth Hinchliffe. A fourth writer was expected to be removed but had left work early Tuesday before Provost could deliver the bad news.

It is not known who is replacing the White House group yet, but word is that Richard Nixon's former wordsmith Ray Price is being recruited to help craft Bush's high-stakes acceptance speech at the Republican convention.

(The Reliable Source, Washington Post, C3)

White House To Reassign Three Writers

Three speech writers for President Bush were told this week that they would be reassigned to other posts, Bush Administration sources said.

Sources outside the White House speculated that the reassignments may have been an attempt by Richard Darman to further extend and consolidate his power within the White House in case Secretary Baker moves in. A Darman protege, Robert Grady, is now expected to become involved in presidential speech writing.

But other sources familiar with the White House speech-writing operation said the reassignments merely reflected the desire of Steven Provost to bring in his own team.

CLINTON PRESSES ECONOMY, ENVIRONMENTAL ISSUES

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa -- Bill Clinton Thursday sharply criticized President Bush for his attitude on the economy and the public's perception of the recession.

"He (Bush) said, the recession is over but the people don't know it," Clinton said. "It's like we're all a bunch of dummies."

Clinton said it was interesting that the President approved the sale of 30,000 metric tons of pork to the CIS shortly after Clinton started talking about agriculture and the hardships faced by family farmers. He said maybe if he starts talking about ethanol, the federal government will approve new rules that would make it an attractive alternative fuel under clean air rules.

Clinton charged that Bush's promise of 30 million jobs in 1988 has fallen 29 million short and said the recession gave the country a net loss of 2.2 million jobs.

Clinton said that while Bush raised $159 billion in taxes, mostly on the middle class, the recession saw real GNP per capita fall at an annual rate of 0.6%. He said Bush has presided over the only Administration since World War II to have negative economic growth.

POSTAL SERVICE PLANS SWEEPING OVERHAUL

In the most dramatic restructuring of the Postal Service in the past 25 years, Postmaster General Marvin Runyon is expected to announce Friday a 25% cut in managerial positions and a complete overhaul of the service's much-criticized, military-style hierarchy.

The changes, which will go into effect over the next three months, aim to reduce next year's projected Postal Service deficit of $2 billion and to delay by at least a year a stamp rate increase originally scheduled for 1994.

The move won praise Thursday from some of the service's harshest critics, from union leaders to industry representatives. "At first blush this looks to be very good and very necessary," said Art Sackler, managing director of the Mailers Council, a coalition of business mailers. "Pushing people down and out and reorganizing positions is something people have called for a very long time."

Mirroring a corporate model, the new organization will divide the post office into two divisions, a distribution and processing side and a customer services side, industry sources said. The first division will oversee the moving of mail while the customer services side will handle retail and business mail and express mail delivery, where the Post Office faces the greatest competition from private mail delivery firms. (Shari Rudavsky, Washington Post, A1)

U.S. PULLS OUT ALL STOPS IN KING CASE

The Justice Department, concerned with political and social consequences of failure, is mustering a massive, top-priority effort to convict four Los Angeles policemen on federal civil rights charges in the 1991 videotaped beating of Rodney King, officials said Thursday.

More than 60 federal lawyers, investigators and staff members -- headed by the department's top civil rights prosecutor, Barry Kowalski -- have been involved in an intensive grand jury investigation in Los Angeles that this week led to a federal indictment of the four officers.

Justice Department officials have denied allegations that surfaced last month in Los Angeles that the Bush Administration had urged the department to indict the officers before the Nov. 3 general election. Defense attorneys and others have said the case had become a political liability and President Bush was pushing for indictments to help his re-election effort.

"It is absolutely not true that we have been asked by anyone to bring this matter to a close by any particular date," said Justice Department spokesman Paul McNulty. He also denied that the indictment had been motivated by political considerations.

AUDIT OF WALSH STIRS PARTISAN
FLAP OVER COUNSEL LAW

A battle is shaping up over the future of the independent-counsel statute, with many Democrats saying it should be extended while Republicans argue that Lawrence Walsh has shown why the law has failed.

The GAO is now rushing audits ordered by Congress in 1987, pressured primarily by House Republicans and disclosure in the Washington Times of possible abuses by Walsh's office. Congressional GOP leaders argue that Congress must know how much special prosecutors are spending and on what before it renews the law or appoints new prosecutors.

Attorney General Barr must decide by tomorrow whether to meet a House Democratic request to appoint a special counsel to investigate the Bush Administration's dealings with Iraq before the invasion of Kuwait.

On Wednesday, Sens. Levin and Cohen introduced a bill extending the special-counsel law for five years. The statute must be reauthorized every five years and is due to expire Dec. 15.

President Bush and the Justice Department want changes in the law. Barr has said he would advise Bush to veto the bill if the counsel provision is not changed. He wants the special-counsel law expanded to include probes of congressional wrongdoing, something the Democrats generally oppose.

ABA LEADER BLASTS
BUSH ON CRIME

The president of the ABA is attacking the Bush Administration for a "quick fix" approach to crime.

In a letter set for release Friday, ABA president Talbot D'Alemberte of Miami said Attorney General Barr's recent report on violent crime "appears to ignore the broad societal context" for crime and focuses instead on "a panoply of 'get tough' edicts," such as more prisons and tougher sentences.

D'Alemberte says more drug treatment, social services and gun control measures are needed to attack the causes of crime.

AIR FORCE SAYS FLAW IN B-2'S
'STEALTHINESS' CAN BE FIXED

Air Force Secretary Donald Rice announced Thursday that designers of the B-2 "stealth" bomber have found a way to correct a flaw that caused failure of an important test of its radar-evading ability last year.

Rice declined repeatedly to say how much the fix would cost or whether he believes that it is worth the price. Two less expensive corrections are under study, he said in the interview, and he plans no recommendation until "early next year."

But with the Senate poised to decide the B-2's fate, Rice said that the plane passed its latest test "with flying colors" and that the new results ruled out any fundamental flaw in the "basic design of the platform."

NEA CHANGES LEAD EX-CRITICS TO DROP HOSTILE CAMPAIGN

The Christian Action Network (CAN) said Thursday it is ending its two-year campaign to kill the National Endowment for the Arts, because of changes that have been made at the agency under its new acting chairman, Anne-Imelda Radice.

"We will cancel all further activity to abolish the NEA, and we'll now support the NEA," said Martin Mawyer, president of the group, which he said has submitted petitions with 500,000 signatures to the White House and to Congress in the past two years calling for the abolition of the endowment.

The network's dramatic turnabout was announced at a news conference after a meeting Mawyer had with Radice and her staff. Mawyer said he came away from the meeting with Radice confident that the NEA will not be funding "homoerotic or blasphemous" art and that it intends to let interested individuals and groups review grant applications on request.

"Our goal was to pressure the White House to clean up the NEA. Our goal was to keep the pressure on President Bush," Mawyer said Thursday. "This is a noose around President Bush's neck."

EXECUTIVE BRANCH GETS STANDARDIZED ETHICS CODE

The U.S. Office of Government Ethics Thursday released its new standards of ethical conduct for federal workers, but put off a conclusive decision on one of the most controversial ethical questions -- whether federal employees should belong to professional organizations.

The ethics office regulations dovetailed the congressional ban on honoraria for speaking, teaching and writing, and other areas of contention. Ethics office officials said that decision may be reviewed and amended if the congressional ban is declared unconstitutional.

Government ethics office director Stephen Potts said Thursday that the ethics office was postponing action on rules governing federal employees participation in professional organizations. He said that while some have charged that federal workers belonging to professional organizations face a potential conflict of interest, the ethics office feels it "is extremely important for the federal workforce to be out there participating in professional organizations."

COMPETITIVENESS COUNCIL IS TARGET OF DEMOCRATS' FIRE

Congressional Democrats took aim at the White House Competitiveness Council, threatening to cut off its funds and voting to force it to conduct its business in the open.

At a news conference, a group of senators led by John Glenn announced a provision that would strip the council of its funding. The amendment would be added to an appropriations bill scheduled to come up on the Senate floor soon. The House has approved such a provision as part of its version of the bill.

Separately, on a 23-15 vote along party lines, the House Government Operations Committee approved legislation that would require the council to make many of its proceeding open to public view.

At the news conference, the senators, who included Max Baucus, Carl Levin, Joseph Lieberman and Tim Wirth, said their bill would be similar to the House measure, which would strip the $86,000 council budget from a $22.7 billion bill providing funds for the White House and Treasury. TO CHOOSE OR NOT TO CHOOSE A SCHOOL

With an "education President" in the White House and a Democratic majority in Congress, the last three years seemed like a prime time for federal action on lagging student achievement in the nation's schools.

But 90% of President Bush's term has passed without enactment of a single piece of education reform legislation. And Secretary Alexander has rated the chances for a compromise on two pieces of modest legislation near passage as "not good."

The debate about how to boost achievement among elementary and secondary students of all socioeconomic backgrounds has stuck on a political divide: Bush's proposal to help lower-income families pay tuition at private or religious schools.

The issue, with its long, emotion-charged history, has so divided Congress and the Administration that even modest funding to encourage school experiments has been lost, delayed and threatened with an election year veto.

HOUSE PASSES BILL TO EXPAND
FAMILY WELFARE PROGRAMS

The House Thursday passed a Democratic bill that would expand child welfare programs designed to keep troubled families together and in doing so joined the election debate about family values.

The 256 to 163 vote along party lines fell short of a margin large enough to override the presidential veto that Republican members predicted. In addition to the child welfare services, the legislation makes changes in food stamp regulations to make more families eligible to receive benefits. The measure is financed by imposing a 10% surtax on millionaires.

One House Republican leadership aide derided the bill as "the perpetuation of the bureaucratic welfare state. It's part of the facade being put up by the new Democrats to hide the fact they remain in their old policy modes."

The bill, prompted in part by a 50% increase in foster children between 1986 and 1990, would create a new entitlement program designed to keep troubled families together, and their children out of foster homes. For families with high housing costs, more of those expenses would be deducted when calculating their eligibility for food stamps.

HOUSE VOTES
'GAG RULE' REVERSAL

The House voted overwhelmingly Thursday to overturn the Bush Administration's "gag rule" restricting abortion information at federally supported family planning clinics.

But the 251-144 vote fell short of the two-thirds majority needed to override the President's threatened veto.

The vote, which came on a conference report resolving differences between bills already passed by the House and Senate, would strike the Administration's restrictions on abortion counseling at the clinics, which serve low-income women.

TIMBER SALE BLOCKS REMOVED

The Senate agreed Thursday to limit the public's ability to block sales of timber from national forests, dealing a rebuff to environmentalists.

In a victory for timber interests, senators approved a plan by Sen. Craig, aimed at reducing what he said were frivolous appeals designed to inhibit logging on public lands.

However, the measure was not as restrictive as an Administration proposal that would close off all appeals to the U.S. Forest Service, leaving court action as the only way to block such sales.

NEW JOBLESS CLAIMS SURGED TO 10-YEAR HIGH IN LATE JULY

First-time claims for unemployment benefits soared to a 10-year high in late July, mostly because of a two-week shutdown at GM auto plants, the Labor Department said Thursday.

Government figures showed that 469,000 people filed initial claims for state jobless benefits in the week that ended July 25, up from 400,000 for the prior week. The report marked the highest one-week increase since January 1982.

The number of people actually receiving jobless benefits has remained steady at 3.28 million over the past month, one private economist said, suggesting that July unemployment data, due Friday, will offer few signs of an improving economy.

BUSH SHIFTS TOWARD FORCE TO AID BOSNIA

President Bush Thursday denounced the "vile policy of ethnic cleansing" practiced by Serbs in the former Yugoslav republics and announced measures to penalize Serbia and deliver humanitarian aid, protected by military force if needed, to victims of the inter-ethnic fighting. Bill Clinton praised Bush's statement as a step in the right direction.

Bush announced that the U.S. is seeking quick passage of a U.N. Security Council resolution authorizing "all necessary measures," including possible use of force, to facilitate delivery of humanitarian assistance, now blocked, to the besieged people of Bosnia.

A White House official expressed confidence that the U.N. will go along with Bush's proposal, especially in view of the recent suspension of air deliveries of food and medical supplies through the Sarajevo airport and overland through Bosnian territory due to an upsurge in fighting. However, U.N. sources said passage of the U.S. proposal is uncertain due to the qualms of several nations about participation in military activity in the murderous climate of the Balkans.

British Prime Minister John Major, in a letter to a political critic released in London, rejected use of force to end the fighting, saying it would pose "disproportionate risk to the lives of civilians and our armed forces." A British diplomat said, however, that Major had not ruled out supporting the U.S. plan for using force if necessary, to protect humanitarian supplies, although London is seeking changes in the wording of the U.S. proposal. Bush Calls For Immediate Access To Yugoslavian Detention Camps

COLORADO SPRINGS -- Responding to horror stories of Nazi-style concentration camps, President Bush on Thursday demanded immediate international access to all detention camps in the former Yugoslavian republics and vowed to do "whatever it takes" to deliver relief supplies to the besieged people of Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Bush raised the possibility of limited military intervention along with the mainly diplomatic steps the Administration is taking to prevent the conflict from expanding further and to address the most urgent humanitarian needs.

On Capitol Hill, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted 12-4 for a resolution asking the President to call an emergency U.N. meeting to discuss possible military intervention. The resolution called for using "all necessary means, including military force" to protect deliveries of humanitarian relief to Bosnia and to halt the shelling of civilians.

In Washington, Pete Williams said "up-to-the-minute" intelligence, presumably from reconnaissance satellites, had been unable to find evidence of death camps such as open-pit graves.

Bush Asks U.N. To Authorize Force

COLORADO SPRINGS -- President Bush on Thursday granted full diplomatic recognition to three former Yugoslav republics and asked the U.N. to authorize force if needed to protect humanitarian aid deliveries.

The President announced that the U.S. would open formal relations with Bosnia-Herzegovina, Slovenia and Croatia. And he said the U.S. would step up economic and political pressure on Serbia to end its attack on Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Bill Clinton was supportive Thursday of Bush's latest actions, saying the full diplomatic recognition of the three nations "will help to reinforce the legal authority the U.N. may need to take appropriate action there."

Clinton said he understood the Administration was circulating a resolution in the U.N. "which would justify the use of military force by the United Nations to try to end the carnage there and get to the truth" about Nazi-style concentration camps allegedly established by Serbian fighters.

"I think that is a step in the right direction" said Clinton.

The announcement of diplomatic recognition was "very, very good news," said Kresimir Pirs, an employee at Croatia's informal office in Washington. "This will help in the crisis. It is something Croatia has been seeking since our independence."

Dr. Nejib Sarcibey, who represents Bosnia's president in Washington, said the presence of U.S. diplomats in Sarajevo would help prevent the killing there because they would be "witnesses to what is going on."

Bush Targets Detention Camps

COLORADO SPRINGS -- President Bush, promising "we will not rest" until Serbian-operated detention camps are opened, Thursday said Washington will establish full diplomatic relations with Slovenia, Croatia and Bosnia-Herzegovina. Bush also pledged to continue pushing for a U.N. resolution that would allow military protection, if needed, for humanitarian missions to Bosnia.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted 12-4 Thursday to approve a resolution urging "all necessary means, including military force" to protect deliveries of humanitarian aid and halt shelling of civilians.

Sen. Lieberman said, "I don't think we have an acceptable option other than to tighten the noose. At a minimum, we have to be ready for airstrikes. This is not an invasion to win a war, but to stop Serbian aggression. We're not trying to liberate a country."

"He's (Bush) coming along," said Sen. DeConcini. "He's a little tardy, but he's moving in the right direction. I don't want to beat up on him," he said. (Paul Bedard, Washington Times, A1)

Bush Urges U.N. To Back Force To Get Aid To Bosnia

COLORADO SPRINGS -- Responding to mounting international and domestic pressure to take action on the Balkan war, President Bush called Thursday for a U.N. resolution authorizing the use of force to deliver food and medicine to the populations of Bosnia and Hercegovina.

Administration officials said that even if force were used under these circumstances, it would be limited to supporting the relief efforts and not to impose an end to the fighting or to check Serbian aggression. Bush asserted Thursday that no amount of outside pressure or force would end the bloodshed in the Balkans, which he said could go on for years.

BUSH HOLDING BACK FOR FEAR U.S. COULD BE DEFEATED IN YUGOSLAVIA

President Bush's reluctance to use force to punish Serbia based on allegations of atrocities in Bosnia is due at least in part to advice that military action is unlikely to be effective and could draw the U.S. or a U.S.-backed international force into a quagmire worse than the Vietnam War.

The Serbs, said a government analyst, "can be defeated but are never beaten."

"I would compare it more to Lebanon or Northern Ireland than to Vietnam or Iraq," the analyst said.

A State Department specialist who has served in the region said that militarily and politically the prospect of forcing a settlement by attacking Serbian gun positions or strategic targets is regarded as practically nil. Nor is there any international consensus on what to do, said the official. Russia, for instance, has had a history of sympathy with the Serbs and would find it difficult for domestic political reasons to turn on them and support a "cleansing" in territory Serbs regard as historically theirs.

What is more, "wiping out some artillery positions in the hills is not going to make the problem go away," the official said, referring to proposals that U.S. warplanes be used to suppress guns firing on U.N. relief convoys. (Michael Putzel, Boston Globe)

NATO ALLIES MAY USE FORCE ON YUGOSLAVIA AID

BRUSSELS -- NATO members agreed Thursday to draw up plans that could involve thousands of Western troops in ensuring humanitarian aid is delivered to people in former Yugoslavia, alliance sources told Reuters.

NATO's military authorities will be formally asked next week to work out contingency plans including the possibility of opening up a land corridor from the Adriatic to Sarajevo for armed relief convoys -- an operation the alliance thinks might need up to 100,000 troops.

All NATO members have until Monday to raise any last-minute objections to the agreement. "We don't expect any problems," said one source.

HOUSE APPROVES AID FOR ECONOMIC SHIFT IN RUSSIA, OTHER REPUBLICS

The House Thursday night approved a broad package of economic aid for Russia and other republics of the former Soviet Union after Democrats squeezed more money for jobs at home from a reluctant Administration.

The measure, which now appears on the way to being passed in the fall, was approved by a vote of 255 to 164 as Democratic and Republican leaders pulled together in rare harmony and calmed widespread jitters over approving foreign aid during an election year dominated by domestic and economic concerns.

Before Thursday's session, Speaker Foley said the Administration was "being forthcoming" about speeding up transportation spending by shifting funds from other domestic accounts, involving "somewhere in the range of $400 million" to be spent as soon as possible. In addition, Foley said, the Administration "seems to be inclined to consider favorably" an increase in loan guarantees to help financially hard-pressed cities finance housing, roads and other community development projects.

While Rep. Bonior hailed the tentative agreements with the Administration as a "victory," he warned a final House-Senate compromise will not be approved unless the Administration completes the agreement to the House's satisfaction.

House Votes No-Strings-Attached Aid To CIS

The House approved a massive package of aid for Russia and neighboring former Soviet republics Thursday night, turning aside demands that the money be spent at home or at least linked to concessions from Boris Yeltsin.

While officials had trouble supplying concrete figures for the aid in the bill, it includes roughly $1.2 billion in assistance and a $12 billion increase in the U.S. quota for the IMF.

The legislation would transform U.S. relations with the former Soviet Union. The bill erases Cold War prohibitions on American investments, increases efforts to secure Soviet-era nuclear weapons and power plants, and provides help with the building blocks of democracy and capitalism.

The Bush Administration opposed any direct linkage between the aid and actions to revive the American economy. Many lawmakers, most of them Republican, wanted a different kind of linkage, parlaying the aid for promises of action from Yeltsin.

Demands ranged from a cutoff in Russian assistance to Cuba to a withdrawal of Russian troops from the Baltic nations to a lien on Russia's immense natural resources.

BUSH WARNS BAGHDAD ON INSPECTIONS

A new Iraqi threat to bar future U.N. inspections of government ministry headquarters provoked a swift response Thursday by President Bush, who said "we will help guarantee" U.N. access to the buildings as needed.

Bush's remarks came only a few hours after the Iraqi minister of culture was reported telling a Baghdad news conference that Iraq believes such inspections are unacceptable violations of its sovereignty.

U.S. officials said they viewed the statement by Iraqi Minister of Culture Hamed Youssef Hummadi with particular concern because a 26-member U.N. team is slated to arrive in Baghdad Friday for a weeklong inspection beginning Saturday morning.

If Iraq resists the forthcoming inspections, officials said that contingency plans call for the U.N. Special Commission on Iraq to seek an immediate denunciation of Iraq by the U.N. Security Council. This would be followed if necessary by allied bombing of Iraqi military targets that have already been identified, the officials said. Whether the inspection team would be withdrawn from Iraq before the bombing campaign has not been decided, the officials said.

A U.S. Defense official said Washington was not moving additional military equipment into the region in anticipation of any trouble.

IRAQIS RESTRICT PROBERS

BAGHDAD -- Iraq declared Thursday that it will not allow U.N. arms inspectors into government ministries, but the White House said Baghdad must honor the Gulf War cease-fire resolutions.

"We reject categorically visits to the headquarters of ministries because the aim... is to hurt Iraq's sovereignty and independence," Hamed Youssef Hummadi, culture and information minister, said at a news conference.

Pete Williams said: "The Iraqis need to submit to the U.N. inspectors wherever and whenever the U.N. wants to visit, whether it is a ministry building or a library building or anything else. This would be only the latest in a series of preposterous statements... about U.N. inspectors," he told reporters at the Pentagon.

IRAQI FRONT MOVES TOWARD COOPERATION WITH U.S.

DAMASCUS -- A coalition of Iraqi opposition groups seems to be moving toward closer cooperation with the U.S. following a visit to Washington last month by its top leaders, while plans of Syria, Saudi Arabia and Iran for a regional rival opposition front have apparently collapsed, according to Iraqi dissident sources here and in Washington.

A six-man Iraqi delegation, led by Kurdish leaders Massoud Barzani and Jalal Talabani and grouping Shiite and Sunni Muslim Iraqi figures, came away without any firm pledges from the Bush Administration for military and financial support, but with promises of protection. "We have been assured that protection for the opposition will be maintained," said Barham Salih, the Washington spokesman for Talabani.

Salih said discussions continued in Washington this week toward arranging further cooperation between the opposition groups and the U.S. Members of the "Vienna Group," as the coalition that met there is called, argued that resistance to the Baghdad regime could begin in the "liberated area" of Iraqi Kurdistan, which is protected by an allied air umbrella from attack by Saddam Hussein's forces.

The issue of American support for a "safe haven" in southern Iraq to protect the Shiite Muslim insurgents there was raised by the Iraqi opposition delegation that visited Washington last week. The opposition leaders were told the Bush Administration is giving the idea "serious consideration," according to Salih.

HOUSE BANKING PANEL GIVES GONZALEZ SUBPOENA POWER

The House Banking Committee voted 31 to 19 along party lines Thursday to give Chairman Gonzalez power to issue subpoenas for documents held by the CIA, other federal agencies and the states of New York and Texas in his continuing investigation of how the U.S. banking system was illegally used to funnel arms to Iraq.

Committee Democrats rolled over GOP objections to extending the subpoena power to U.S. intelligence agencies. Gonzalez said it was necessary to view intelligence documents because the agencies had extensive data on Iraq's nuclear and weapons buildup program as early as 1988. HAITIAN REFUGEES WITH HIV REMAIN
IN LIMBO AS ASYLUM CLAIMS STALL

One in 10 of the HIV-positive Haitian refugees being held at the U.S. Naval Base at Guantanamo Bay has developed actual or possible AIDS symptoms as the months-long legal battle over their asylum claims drags on.

The 233 Haitians with the virus that causes AIDS, along with 59 of their relatives, are the only refugees remaining at the base, immigration officials said. Although the U.S. Public Health Service does not support quarantines for people with AIDS, Camp Bulkeley has become "a kind of quarantine" for other reasons, said health service spokesman Bill Grigg. "Basically because nobody knows exactly what to do with them," he said.

The Haitians are caught in a legal limbo. District and appellate courts have agreed with immigrant rights attorneys that the Haitians have a right to legal representation. But the government has argued that the tentative approval granted for the Haitians to enter the U.S. did not confer on them such constitutional protections. (Lynne Duke, Washington Post, A3)

NORTH AMERICAN TRADE TALKS NEAR CONCLUSION

After a marathon nine days of high-level negotiations, the U.S., Mexico and Canada Thursday stood on the verge of concluding a continent-wide free trade agreement -- possibly soon enough for a White House announcement Friday.

Although the talks picked up momentum Wednesday and Thursday, sources close to the negotiations said the talks had bogged down Tuesday over Canadian demands for a special exemption on clothing trade.

The issues remaining Thursday concerned the length of time that duties would remain on some products; the amount of North American content that will be required for cars in order to receive duty-free treatment; the elimination of restrictions on cross-border investment; and an opening of government purchases in all three countries, including Mexico's public-owned oil company, Pemex, to companies throughout the hemisphere.

U.S. HOUSE EXPRESSES CONCERN ON TRADE PACTS

The House Thursday night voted unanimously to oppose any trade agreement that jeopardized Americans on health, safety, labor and environmental protection issues.

The 362-0 vote came on a non-binding resolution urging President Bush to consider the four issues in negotiating trade agreements, specifically the North American Free Trade Agreement and the GATT, and said Congress would oppose any pact which did not address those concerns.

"Trade we enter into must raise environmental, health and labor standards in other countries, not bring us down to a lower level," said Rep. Collins.

"We can't let jobs be our number-one export," Rep. Bonior added. (Reuter)

NETWORK NEWS

(Thursday evening, August 6)

YUGOSLAVIA

ABC's Forest Sawyer: World reaction is growing tonight to claims of atrocities in detention camps in what used to be Yugoslavia. The U.S. is now pushing for the U.N. to do whatever is necessary to get humanitarian aid into Bosnia-Herzegovina. The Red Cross is still fighting for access to detention camps and says it is impossible to know how many camps there are, how many injuries and how to separate fact from fiction. With pressure mounting to reveal the truth, Serbian forces took some reporters into two camps in Northern Bosnia.

ABC's John Lawrence reports a British correspondent got into the detention camp at Trnopolje where Serbian gunmen are holding Muslim civilians prisoner and described the conditions there as appalling. Hundreds of Muslim men are trying to survive in an open field on one bowl of soup and a piece of bread per day. Some who have escaped tell of beatings, torture and executions on a massive scale.

Sawyer: President Bush, who has been criticized for not doing more, announced today the U.S. will step up pressure on Serbia. While the President cautioned there is still no hard evidence to confirm charges about conditions in detention camps, he said that for starters the U.S. is establishing full diplomatic relations with Serbia's adversaries: Bosnia-Herzegovina as well as Slovenia and Croatia.

ABC's Brit Hume: The President interrupted a campaign visit to Colorado to hold a hurriedly arranged news conference on a diplomatic problem. Diplomatic but also political.

(TV coverage of President walking from Air Force One to speak to press.)

He announced steps to deal with the horror in the former Yugoslavia and to deal with the criticism that he's been timid in his response to it.

(President Bush: "I have directed the Secretary of State to press hard for quick passage of a United Nations Security Council resolution authorizing the use of all necessary measures to establish conditions necessary for and to facilitate the delivery of humanitarian assistance to Bosnia-Herzegovina.")

What that means, of course, is authority to use force but he said he hoped that would not be necessary.

(TV coverage of President speaking.)

The President echoed the view of other Administration officials that military involvement there has what they've called high quagmire potential.

(President Bush: "I would only suggest that this is a very complicated military question -- very, very complicated indeed.") He said, for example, that it would be difficult to use air power against Serbian artillery installations. What's more, there are apparently divisions within the U.N. Security Council about authorizing force.

(President Bush: "We've been working this problem for a long time at the United Nations -- a long time -- several, a couple of weeks, and I have to tell you there have been some differences.")

What's new here is not so much the policy steps announced as the person announcing them. The President had seemed to be trying to finesse this issue, doing the diplomatically correct things while leaving the leadership to others. But the worsening situation and the intensifying political heat have forced him to try to take the lead, or at least to appear to. (ABC-Lead)

NBC's Tom Brokaw says there are several important developments in Bosnia tonight. The U.N. humanitarian relief effort to Sarajevo scheduled to resume this weekend may be in jeopardy. The airport today came under heavy cross fire between Muslim and Serbian forces. And President Bush said today that he was outraged and horrified at the terrible violence. He called on the U.N. Security Council to quickly pass a resolution authorizing force if necessary to guarantee delivery of relief supplies. The President upped the diplomatic stakes as well in the Bosnian crisis.

(President Bush: "We must support the legitimate governments of Slovenia, Croatia and Bosnia-Herzegovina. And to this end I've decided that the United States will move now to full diplomatic relations with those governments.")

There have been increasing reports of atrocities in the Serbian-run detention centers. The President, however, said he had no hard evidence to support claims of death camps.

NBC's Rick Davis says a U.N. memorandum obtained today but dated July 3 and marked restricted mentions four camps and states "the treatment of Muslims and other minorities in the camps is reportedly atrocious, with regular beatings, deprivation of food and water, and poor shelter." A British reporter saw part of the Omarska camp today.

(Ed Vulliamy, "The Guardian": "Some of them look as though they haven't eaten for weeks properly, if not months; they wolfed down their food like famished animals. Their skin was clinging to their bones -- pathetic.") (NBC-3)

CBS's Connie Chung: The proof is mounting tonight of Serbian atrocities in the former Yugoslav republic of Bosnia. And the pressure is mounting on President Bush and America's allies to intervene with military force. CBS's David Martin has obtained pictures from alleged Serbian death camps in Bosnia. We caution you; the images are graphic.

CBS's David Martin says the photographer who took these pictures said they are the bodies of 20 civilians killed in a Serbian concentration camp. Women who say they were released from one of these so-called camps tell a story as ghastly as the pictures.

(unidentified woman: "Terrible massacre happens there. They kill people and throw them into a fish pond. People are floating in the fish pond.")

Despite the undeniable evidence of atrocities, U.S. spy satellites have so far been unable to find any sign that the detention centers have become Nazi-like death camps.

(Pete Williams: "We do not see any evidence of a program of systematic or massive killing of innocent people by any part of the parties to the fighting.")

The Bush Administration continues to search for a policy that will somehow get tough enough to stop the fighting without getting the U.S. military involved in Yugoslavia's civil war.

(TV coverage of President Bush shaking hands in a crowd.)

Interrupting a campaign trip, President Bush announced a further attempt to isolate Serbia by granting full diplomatic recognition to three former Yugoslav republics including Bosnia. And he repeated U.S. willingness to use its air and naval forces to protect the delivery of relief supplies.

(President Bush: "My heartfelt hope is that that will not prove necessary, but the international community cannot stand by and allow innocent children, women and men to be starved to death.")

Today Margaret Thatcher called on the U.S. and its allies to do more -- to intervene militarily if that's what it takes to stop the fighting. That says Douglas Hurd would only make matters worse.

(Hurd: "There's no point in getting into action which puts your own forces at risk and maybe kills a lot of innocent civilians unless it is going to produce a greater good.") (CBS-Lead)

YUGOSLAVIA/VOLUNTEER RELIEF EFFORTS

CBS's Giselle Fernandez reports some diplomats and relief agencies say they hope Americans don't quickly forget the gripping images of babies and death camps that finally aroused them to care about a war they say has been virtually ignored here. They hope instead that interest will swell and prod the White House to take action they say is long overdue. (CBS-2)

PRESIDENT'S TRIP

Sawyer: President Bush weighed in today with his toughest attack yet on governor Clinton's economic plan. The setting was a campaign stop in Colorado where Mr. Bush spoke before a group of conservative legislators. As usual, governor Clinton was quick to answer the President's charges.

ABC's Chris Bury reports the President, who says he has been itching to take Clinton on apparently could not wait until after the convention, though he didn't mention Clinton by name.

(President Bush: "He has proposed over $200 billion of new spending and at least $150 billion in new taxes.")

His figures are accurate, but on the road in Iowa the governor denounced Bush's charge as bogus because he failed to point out who Clinton would tax.

(Clinton: "He is misrepresenting this to the American people because he knows that my tax program raises money on the upper 2% of the people whose taxes went down under his Administration and Reagan's.")

On spending, the President suggested Clinton never met a government program he didn't like. Bush said he proposed cutting 245 such programs and that Clinton could find but one.

(President Bush: "He searched and searched through thousands of government programs and found only one that he would eliminate: federal subsidies for honey bee farmers.")

It is true that Clinton supports most subsidies for farmers, but the Clinton campaign points out that Bush ignored Clinton's proposed budget cuts of $144 billion in other areas including defense. It is Bush, Clinton claims, who has been the big spender.

(Clinton: "Government spending has gone up faster under George Bush than it did under Lyndon Johnson.")

The President clearly telegraphed his plan to paint Clinton as a taxpayer and a spender. But Clinton just as clearly signals his counter punch -- that Bush's record does not give him the credibility to make those charges stick. (ABC-2)

Brokaw: All this [economic news], of course, only adds fuel to the political fires, with President Bush trying to put them out and Bill Clinton fanning the flames. NBC's John Cochran is covering the President in Colorado today, and Andrea Mitchell is with the Clinton campaign. John, tough job for the President?

NBC's John Cochran: It is. As long as this country is mired in the recession it is virtually impossible for the President to turn pocketbook issues into a positive for him. So today he tried to turn them into a negative for Clinton too.

(TV coverage of President Bush walking to speakers' platform.)

The economy has devastated Bush's popularity here in Colorado where a KCMC/Denver Post poll shows Bill Clinton favored by a 2-1 margin, and Colorado hasn't voted for a Democratic presidential nominee since 1964. Bush said the problem is Clinton is conning voters into thinking he is not liberal on economic issues.

(President Bush: "My opponent copies you and me when he says that an expanding economy is the best policy of all. But first he proposes the largest tax increase in American history, and then he proposes at least a 7% payroll tax to finance a new government-run health care scheme.")

(TV coverage of President Bush speaking.)

But Ronald Reagan and George Bush presided over the two largest tax increases in history: Bush when reneged on his campaign pledge by giving in to demands from Democrats for higher taxes. Bush now says he will veto any economic package with new taxes even if that package includes things he wants like tax breaks for investments and first-time home buyers, new IRA savings accounts, and lower capital gains taxes.

(President Bush: "In the next four months and for the next four years I will accelerate our fight for these tax incentives and lowering the taxes for budgetary discipline, for making the tough calls on runaway spending.")

And, charged Bush: you know that in the end Bill Clinton will act like a Democrat.

(President Bush: "Is all this talk of what they call a new covenant simply a coverup for some very old and tired ideas? The other side talks about changing the economy with new spending and taxes, but when they talk about change it's all you're going to have left in your pockets when these guys get through with you.") Bush decided he could not wait until after the Republican convention to accuse Bill Clinton of selling snake oil. He decided he couldn't wait because, as the President admitted today in effect, Bill Clinton is a very effective salesman.

NBC's Andrea Mitchell says Bill Clinton countered the President's charges by saying that George Bush has no credibility on the economy and was misrepresenting Clinton's tax proposals. At an aluminum recycling plant in Davenport, Iowa, Clinton reacted quickly to Bush's claim that he is proposing the biggest tax increase in American history.

(Clinton: "I propose a very modest tax increase on the upper 2% of the American people, much of which is offset by the tax relief that I want for the working poor and the middle class, especially those with children. So it's not true. It's like a lot of what he says; it is not true.")

As his bus tour winds north along the Mississippi he does not mention how to pay for all his promises: more jobs, investment, universal health care. And when he got to Iowa: no cuts in farm subsidies. Clinton's answer is government investment in companies to produce more jobs and eventually shrink the deficit.

(Clinton: "More incentives not less for new plant and equipment, for new environmental technology to train their workers to do new research, but no more incentives to shut our jobs down and move them overseas.")

Along the way people are open to his message even when told that critics say Clinton's programs don't all add up.

(unidentified man: "We've seen four to 12 years now pretty much the same kind of politics, and he's offering some refreshing ideas much like what we're trying to do here at this facility.")

What Clinton is discovering on this trip is that people are more concerned with getting health insurance than reducing the deficit.

(NBC-2)

Chung: In the presidential race the Bush and Clinton campaigns traded charges today about who's to blame for the state of the economy and who can fix it. Al Gore said President Bush's economic policies caused the recession. Mr. Bush charged that Bill Clinton's economic program included the largest tax increase in American history.

(CBS-5)

BUSH CAMPAIGN/GOLDWATER

Chung says Mr. Bush got a warning today from the 1964 Republican presidential nominee. Barry Goldwater said including an antiabortion plank in the GOP platform will cost Bush the election and leave the party in shambles.

ECONOMY

Brokaw: There is more troubling news about the American economy tonight and more to come tomorrow for thousands of U.S. postal workers. It only adds to the growing impression that recovery from this stubborn recession still is a way off. Tonight numbers are first-time claims for unemployment benefits -- 469,000 people filed their first claims the third week in July. That's the largest jump in 10 years. A two-week GM shutdown was a major factor in all of this. Our chief financial correspondent Mike Jensen, however, reports tonight on how the smaller work force is actually helping the corporate bottom line.

NBC's Mike Jensen says all those lay offs are one of the main reasons why corporate profits are booming. Analysts say the cutbacks also are holding the economy down. People who've been laid off obviously have less to spend, and when they find work it's often for less money.

NBC's Robert Hager reports sources tell NBC News postmaster general Runyon will announce sweeping changes in the postal service aimed at eliminating 30,000 to 40,000 jobs mostly from the ranks of management and supervisors. Runyon will say he believes the cuts are necessary because without change the postal service will operate deep in red ink next year -- a probable deficit of $2 billion. (ABC-3, CBS-8, NBC-Lead)

IRAQ/INSPECTIONS

Sawyer reports Saddam is saying "no" to the U.N. More U.N. weapons inspectors arrive in Baghdad tomorrow. But Iraq is saying they will not be allowed to search any government buildings. The White House says there are ways to force Iraq to cooperate. (ABC-9)

CBS's Allen Pizzey says Iraqis called a press conference today to talk about alleged Iranian trouble making. But in response to a direct question the minister of information reiterated his government's position on U.N. inspections.

(information minister Hammadi: "Ministries or headquarters of ministries will not agree to. As far as other places, the inspection teams can visit any place in the country.") Diplomats say Saddam is willing to stand on national sovereignty over U.N. inspections because he feels secure. The idea of a coup a long experienced diplomat here said is pure Western fantasy. (NBC-4, CBS-4)

B-2

Sawyer reports the Air Force says it can fix a problem with the B-2. The plane is supposed to be virtually invisible to enemy radar, but last year tests showed it is not. Today the Air Force announced it only needs to change some materials on the plane's surface. That would be a relatively inexpensive solution. (ABC-8)

LAWN MOWER POLLUTION CRACKDOWN

ABC's Ned Potter reports every hour a suburbanite uses a gas mower it causes as much pollution as 60 miles of typical driving. As the government considers tougher regulations to clean the air, the electric industry says one solution is to replace gas mowers with battery-powered models. In a pilot project with the EPA, they'll give away a thousand electric mowers to people who turn in their gas models. (ABC-5)

LONGER SCHOOL YEARS

CBS's Erin Hayes says year-around school may be on the way for more students because many educators think the old calendar is outdated. (Secretary Alexander: "We don't still watch black and white television, we don't still drive Model-T Fords, but we do insist on keeping our schools just as they were for our great-grandfathers.") EDITORIALS/COLUMNISTS

CAMPAIGN/MUD SLINGING

Self-Inflicted Wounds -- "Has the GOP fallen so far its mudslingers can't even sling straight? Desperate over George Bush's sagging popularity, deputy campaign manager Mary Matalin put out a press release so clumsy and sophomoric that even top Republicans didn't like it.... Constructed in question-and-answer format, the release aimed to show Democrats as hypocrites for accusing Republicans of running dirty campaigns. But the point was lost in a series of disjointed references and tacky quotations about 'bimbo eruptions' and Bill Clinton's weight. For both Bush and Matalin, the result more resembled a suicide than assassination."

(New York Daily News, 8/6)

The Sly Road -- "George Bush's version of 'taking the high road' in campaign tactics seems to be just about what it was in 1988: The President strives mightily to keep from getting his own fingerprints on the sleazy things his campaign does, apologizing after the fact for what has been done in his name. A press release written by...Mary Matalin and repudiated by the President says more about the disarray and panic in the Bush campaign than it does about...Bill Clinton.... Whatever his vulnerabilities, it's clear that going after Mr. Clinton won't be quite the one-sided exercise the marginalization of Michael Dukakis managed to be four years ago.... On both practical grounds and principle, then, Mr. Bush would do well to forget the gamesmanship and really try to regain some high ground."

(Detroit Free Press, 8/5)

A Kind Word For 'Sleaze' -- "In a highly unusual move, President Bush on Monday reprimanded Mary Matalin...for supposedly violating his pledge for a 'clean' campaign by noting the Democrats had hired private investigators to prevent 'bimbo eruptions' from damaging Gov. Clinton. The Democrats did not deny the substance of Ms. Matalin's statement, which was in questionable taste, but cried 'sleaze' and got Mr. Bush to admonish his own aide. Whatever the merits of the current dispute, Mr. Bush's frightened retraction of a true statement shows the Democratic strategy of labeling any and all criticism as 'dirty tricks' and 'negative campaigning' seems to be working. If that pattern holds all the way to November, then the American people might awake with Bill Clinton in the White House and no one knowing what he stands for." (Detroit News, 8/5)

Welcome To Campaign '92 -- "Beware the backfiring 'bimbo eruption.'... Yes, President Bush did move quickly to disavow a campaign aide's charge that the Clinton camp is guarding against a 'bimbo eruption.' But the mud ended up leaving a stain not on its intended target, but on its source. And more than that, it continued the diversion of attention from the real issues -- issues that do divide Democrats and Republicans.... The Bush campaign could talk about all those things [real issues], or it could continue to talk about 'bimbo eruptions.'" (Boston Herald, 8/5)

Mud-Faxing -- "Quick. Which presidential campaign, mired in political muck of its own making, is slithering further into its hole? Answer: the Bush-Quayle reelection team.... The asinine and, at times, bizarre 'attack fax' issued over the weekend by...Mary Matalin referred to Clinton by the moniker 'Slick Willie,' rehashed controversies from the primaries and accused Clinton of unfairly attacking Bush.... The President, who has vowed time and again not to besmirch this campaign as he did the 1988 contest, was rightly upset. And Matalin issued a lukewarm apology for the release's 'tone' -- but not its content. That's not enough. The President must disavow smear and slander -- and this time, back up his words with action to stop it." (Newsday, 8/4)

Same Old Mudslinger Bush -- "It's a new Democratic ticket and a new-style campaign, but it seems to be the same old Bush with the same old tactics. With nothing to say on any issue of real concern, apparently the preferred option is to cover up that failure with some mudslinging -- insulting the intelligence of American voters in the process -- and then issue clarifiers or apologies. There is no Willie Horton in sight this year, so the Bush campaign team has come up with 'bimbo eruptions' -- whatever they may be.... With Clinton and Gore obviously so quick -- and clever -- in their responses to the Bush mudslinging, perhaps the most frightening thing about the weekend episode is how quickly White House officials tried to disclaim responsibility for it. This suggests that President Bush does not know what's going on in his campaign. Worse, it implies that he encourages the poisonous barbs because he has little worth saying about health care, jobs, economic recovery -- or even foreign policy." (Boston Globe, 8/4)

CAMPAIGN/RUMORS

Why The Rumors Are Flying -- "Most of the rumors coming out of the Bush Administration these days are just ordinary political fog: that the President is ill, that Barbara Bush is ill, [etc.].... And yet the reports, even if untrue, reflect a troubling fact, both for the President and for the country, that goes well beyond the President's decline in the opinion polls. Where political campaigns don't generate significant hard news, rumors always fill the vacuum.... It's now widely reported that Baker will be brought back later this summer to run the President's campaign and -- by inference -- to run the White House as well. That may make sense for Bush...but given the confusion of politics and the uncertainty of principle in the Oval Office, it may not be nearly enough. Unless that changes, there will be more rumors about heads rolling and replacements in the Cabinet. And sooner or later, some of them are bound to come true." (Sacramento Bee, 7/24)

Should Bush Pack It In? -- "When the chips are down, you find out who your friends are. George Bush is finding out he doesn't have very many.... So should Bush pack it in? Not unless he wants to on a personal level. However weak his stewardship has been, he has done nothing to deserve being driven from office by members of his own party. Republicans asked Bush to carry their banner four years ago. Now, if nothing else, they owe him the chance to present his case to the people for a second term." (Des Moines Register, 7/31)

Floor Action: The Senate is expected to take up the fiscal 1993 defense authorization bill.

As approved by the Senate Armed Services Committee July 24, the measure (HR 5006) would authorize $274.5 billion for defense spending, compared with $270 billion authorized under the House version of the bill.

Both the House and Senate versions of the bill would permit completion of 20 B-2 bombers. An amendment is expected to be offered to reduce or eliminate funding for the B-2 program.

Both versions would also cut more than $5.4 billion from the administration's request for the Strategic Defense Initiative, a ground-based anti-missile system.

Senators may also consider a tax bill (HR 11) that includes proposals backed by the administration to establish enterprise zones in some of the nation's inner city areas. The zones are intended to attract business investment in order to help spur growth in poor neighborhoods.

• Senate Majority Leader George J. Mitchell, D-Maine, said the Senate may be in session on Saturday in order to finish as much business as possible before leaving for the August recess next week.

Possibilities for floor consideration on Saturday include the defense reauthorization and tax measures and remaining fiscal 1993 appropriations bills, including a bill (HR 5679) to finance the departments of Veterans Affairs and Housing and Urban Development and legislation (HR 5488) to fund the Treasury Department and Postal Service.

• No legislative business is scheduled in the House.

Veterans Drugs: A measure that would change drug-pricing policy for veterans will be considered by the Senate Veterans' Affairs panel.

The panel in June completed most work on the measure (S 2575), which would make miscellaneous changes to veterans health policies, but delayed consideration of a controversial drug-pricing provision. Members had reached an impasse over an amendment by Alan K. Simpson, R-Wyo., that would allow the Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) to buy drugs more cheaply than Medicaid customers.

Since enactment of a 1990 law allowing Medicaid customers the same bulk rate prices on drugs as the VA, drug companies have raised prices across the board, including sales to the VA, instead of lowering costs, as Congress had anticipated.

A temporary provision in the fiscal 1992 veterans affairs and housing appropriations bill to separate the VA from the Medicaid pricing scheme expired June 30. Lawmakers have since disagreed over regulating drug pricing for the VA.

Simpson plans to resubmit his amendment. John D. Rockefeller IV, D-W.Va., may propose a change to the amendment to ensure reasonable drug prices for all federally funded agencies, not just the VA.

HOUSE FLOOR: Russian aid, child-welfare bills pass.

Approval of a long-delayed Russian aid bill (HR 4547) highlighted a busy day on the House floor.

The measure, passed 255-164, had been held up in the House because members did not want to consider a costly foreign aid bill with the U.S. economy in the doldrums.

In talks with Bush administration officials this week, congressional leaders received assurances that the White House would support additional domestic spending, which cleared the way for the measure's approval.

The bill would authorize a $12.3 billion increase in the U.S. contribution to the International Monetary Fund. It would also grant $417 million in fiscal 1993 aid to the 12 former Soviet republics. A $100 million fund would be established to help the former republics destroy weapons.

Child Welfare, Nutrition. House members also passed, 256-163, a $7 billion bill (HR 3603) that would expand eligibility for federal child-welfare and food stamp programs.

A program that provides grants to states to provide child-welfare services would be turned into a mandatory program, with a spending ceiling of $200 million in fiscal 1993, increasing to $600 million in fiscal 1997.

The measure would expand access to the food stamp program, at a cost of $3.5 billion. It would gradually increase the amount deducted for housing costs from income when determining an applicant's eligibility.

The measure would be paid for by a 10 percent surtax on taxable income of over $1 million. The Bush administration opposes the measure's cost and the surtax.

Abortion Counseling. The House last night approved, 251-144, the conference agreement on a bill (S 323) that would overturn a Bush administration ban on abortion counseling at federally funded clinics.

SENATE FLOOR: Interior bill approved after lengthy debate.

The Senate yesterday approved, by voice vote, a fiscal 1993 appropriations bill (HR 5503) that would provide $12.6 billion for the Interior Department and several agencies.

During action yesterday, members tabled, or killed, 60-35, an amendment by Slade Gorton, R-Wash., that would have allowed salvage of dead and dying trees in protected forest areas of the Northwest.

Sparks Fly Over How to Curb Forest Fires

As fires continue to rage across the Pacific Northwest this week, Congress has joined in the debate over how to best manage the nation's ailing forests.

Some lawmakers say the way to reduce the risk of catastrophic forest fires is to log the dead and dying trees. This process, known as salvaging, is geared toward thinning the massive buildup of dry and rotted wood, which acts as fuel in a forest fire. They add that it provides timber-starved mills with a source of lumber while contributing to forest health.

But others on and off the Hill would take a different approach: remove dead and dying trees the natural way, with fire. They advocate "prescribed burning," a process in which fires are set under controlled conditions, allowing dead and diseased trees to burn harmlessly and providing space for large, healthy trees to thrive.

This week alone more than 200,000 acres have gone up in flames in California, Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Nevada. Homes have been evacuated and thousands of firefighters have been mobilized to battle the blazes.

Current forest conditions have largely been attributed to an intense period of drought in the past decade. Without enough water, weakened trees have been unable to withstand insect attacks, resulting in massive infestation and decaying forests.

In the past, cyclical natural fires have served to burn up dead wood before it accumulated and became a fire hazard. Critics say the U.S. Forest Service's policy of snuffing out forest fires has led to dangerous conditions. They blame a "Smokey the Bear" mentality on the part of the Forest Service.

"With Smokey the Bear, the Forest Service thought they were doing the right thing to save the forests, but they forgot that if fire didn't take out these trees, something would have to," said R. Neil Sampson, executive vice president of the American Forestry Association.

A Forest Service staffer said that Smokey the Bear's message had only to do with prevention of fires caused by human error, not the suppression of natural blazes, such as those caused by lightning.

Whatever the roots, Sampson said the situation in the Pacific Northwest is a "powder keg ready to explode."

Salvaging Timber for the Mills

The Forest Service and many in Congress say salvaging is the answer. Yesterday, the House Agriculture Subcommittee on Forests gave voice vote approval to a bill (HR 4980), sponsored by Larry LaRocco, D-Idaho, that would allow the Forest Service to speed up sales of salvage timber on certain lands.

According to the Forest Service, once trees die, they rapidly deteriorate, quickly losing their market value as wood and soon after as chips.

"Because harvesting trees is essential for building houses, milling lumber, and providing jobs, it makes good sense to harvest dead and dying trees that are destined to lose their value quickly," said LaRocco when introducing the measure.

Under the bill, the secretary of Agriculture would be allowed to declare a "forest health emergency" for areas with a significant volume of dead and dying wood. The federal land management agency overseeing the area could then use expedited salvage sales to restore forest health.

Critics of the legislation say that salvaging operations are merely an excuse to put a road into a roadless wilderness area. Timber companies, they say, do not just take dead wood; they log healthy old growth trees as well.

"There's no way to remove enough trees by salvaging to make a difference. It's cloaked in forest health, but it's really not there. It's strictly to provide fiber to the mills," said Craig Gehrke, regional director of the Idaho Wilderness Society.

Bill supporters say that the Forest Service, which is conducting salvage operations, is not proceeding fast enough. At a June 30 Forests Subcommittee hearing, Wally Herger, R-Calif., told Forest Service officials, "I want to get a fire started under the Forest Service. Why haven't you started aggressive salvaging already?"

Some Like it Hot

One opponent of the bill, Indiana Democrat Jim Jontz, said at the markup that logging should not be the primary remedy for a sick forest.

He has advocated a program of prescribed burning, in which forest managers wait for precise conditions of humidity, wind speed and rainfall, then use a drip torch to set an area ablaze. Officials use the topography of the forest, such as the roads and the hills, to contain the fires and keep them at low heat levels. Advocates say this process cleans out the dead trees the way nature would.

"Salvage can play a positive role in the long-term recovery of a forest. But so can fire and so can other strategies. We need a plan that contemplates all of these, not just salvage. And that's where this bill falls short," said Jontz.

Those who oppose prescribed burning say there is so much dead wood in the forests that it is impossible to set low-heat fires. They say that a fire today would get so hot, that it would burn even healthy, old growth trees and sterilize the soil, making regeneration of the forest nearly impossible.

But a Jontz aide said, "Salvage bills are just another loophole to get through environmental regulations. . . . If half [of the trees] are dead or dying they'll take out all the big green trees too. It's a dirty and easy way to get a lot of timber volume real quick."

amendment a "Trojan horse" that would in effect overturn many court orders intended to protect old growth forests.

But others disagreed, including Conrad Burns, R-Mont., who said the practice of removing dead growth both creates jobs and makes good environmental sense because it clears dry wood that fuels forest fires. (See story, above)

The Senate also tabled, 50-44, an amendment by James M. Jeffords, R-Vt., that would have raised the price that the federal government charges private ranchers who graze their cattle on public lands. The fee is currently $1.92 per cow (or sheep) a month, an amount generally lower than what private pastures charge.

Jeffords' amendment would have raised the fee 25 percent to $2.40 a month for one year and would have applied only to large ranchers who own or control more than 500 cattle or 2,500 sheep. The House-passed version of the bill would raise the fee 33.3 percent to $2.56 a month.

AGRICULTURE spending conferees cut wetlands program.

Conferees on a fiscal 1993 agriculture appropriations bill (HR 5487) reached agreement yesterday on the approximately $60 billion bill.

Negotiators agreed to kill all funding for a wetlands reserve program created in the 1990 farm bill, adopting the House position on the provision. The Senate had provided $54.9 million in fiscal 1993 for the program. The wetlands program is intended to take 1 million acres of farmland out of production by 1995 in order to return the lands to wetlands.

The conferees also agreed to cut some funding from the Market Promotion Program, which gives grants to private companies for promotion of U.S. food products overseas. The conferees agreed to provide $150 million for the program, which currently spends about $200 million. The House had sought $75 million.

BANKING AGENCIES' turf defended by Banking panel.

The House Banking Committee moved yesterday to protect the oversight duties of federal banking regulators. By voice vote, the panel approved legislation (HR 3917) that would give bank regulators jurisdiction over banks' securities dealings. It would also beef up regulation of government securities transactions.

A version approved by the House Energy and Commerce Committee in June would grant new authority to the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) to collect data on the resale market for government securities — Treasury notes, bills and bonds. Under the bill, the SEC could step if it found that the bond resale market was being manipulated.

Banking Chairman Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Texas, objected to provisions that would give the SEC regulatory authority over banks dealing in government securities. Those provisions, said Gonzalez, represent "nothing less than an effort to fatten the jurisdictional reach of the Energy and Commerce Committee."

A Gonzalez amendment approved by voice vote yesterday would require banking regulatory agencies, not the SEC, to enforce the new regulations spelled out in the bill.

The amendment would also change the procedures governing the auction of government securities. The changes would mandate the creation of a fully automated system that allows remote participation by all qualified brokers, in an effort to increase access to the auctions.

SUBPOENAS APPROVED for probe into pre-war loans to Iraq.

House Banking Committee Chairman Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Texas, pushed forward yesterday with his quest to investigate the web of business interests that may have supported loans to Iraq in the months and years before the gulf war.

The House Banking Committee voted, 31-19, to authorize additional subpoenas relating to the panel's ongoing probe into the Bush administration's support for loans to Iraq before the war.

The committee's action was marked by partisan parliamentary wrangling.

The subpoena requests center on allegations that the Atlanta branch of Banca Nazionale del Lavoro (BNL) made billions of dollars in unauthorized loans to Iraq and financed Iraqi front companies. Democrats have said that Iraq used the funds and loans to build up its military and weapons complex.

Christopher Drogoul, a former execu-utive with the Atlanta branch of BNL, is the only individual on the list. Drogoul recently pleaded guilty to federal fraud charges in the case.

The other subpoenas are for documents from BNL itself, U.S. and foreign companies that got loans from BNL and had dealings with Iraq, Iraqi front companies that operated in the United States, several banks that were involved with BNL, banking regulators in New York and Texas, and federal agencies.

Among the agencies listed in the subpoena request are the Central Intelligence Agency, the Defense Intelligence Agency and the National Security Agency. Ranking Republican Chalmers P. Wylie, Ohio, said that he would support the subpoena request if these agencies were excluded. But Gonzalez pressed for the full list, ignoring GOP requests.

U.N. FORCE resolution on Yugoslavia backed by Foreign Relations.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday approved, 12-4, a draft resolution urging the U.N. Security Council to authorize the use of military force, if necessary, to take control of artillery being used in the civil war raging in the former Yugoslavia.

In a resolution reflecting horror at reports of atrocities taking place in Bosnia-Herzegovina, the Foreign Relations Committee called on President Bush to seek an emergency Security Council meeting to consider possible use of force, both to ensure delivery of humanitarian aid and to put under U.N. supervision all heavy artillery being employed in the conflict.

Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., and other Republicans opposed the measure, saying that the time is not right for Congress to issue a de facto authorization of war.

But Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., said the resolution does not authorize the commitment of U.S. forces, only seeks U.N. approval of military action.

QUAYLE COUNCIL sunshine bill wins in party-line vote.

The House Government Operations Committee yesterday approved, 23-15, legislation (HR 5702) that backers say will lift the veil on the inner workings of the White House's Council on Competitiveness.

Critics of the council, which is chaired by Vice President Dan Quayle, charge that it has acted to dilute agency regulations. But supporters of the council say it is performing a service by cutting federal red tape.

The measure would require the council and the Office of Management and Budget to open to the public their meetings with members of the private sector on pending regulations.

Members rejected in party-line votes two GOP amendments to apply the same openness rules to Congress.

The full House voted June 1 not to provide $86,000 in requested funding for salaries associated with the council.

Key senators yesterday announced plans to push companion legislation.

SPOTTED OWL habitat protection plan backed by House panel.

The House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee yesterday gave voice vote approval to a measure (HR 4615) that aims to speed the implementation of an agreed-upon plan for the protection of the northern spotted owl and old growth forests on state-owned lands in western Washington.

The state owns and manages for timber production 260,000 acres on the Olympic Peninsula. In 1989, a special state commission formulated a plan that attempts to balance economic and environmental needs by creating an experimental forest management program for the area.

The plan bars logging on part of the state forest for 15 years while allowing some timber cutting to proceed in the rest of the area. It would also create a center to study and manage natural resources in the forest and require a comprehensive economic study of the area.

Currently, little timber harvesting taking place within the area because of regulations under the Endangered Species Act imposed to protect the owl.

Under the bill, the state could ask the secretary of the Interior to determine whether its actions comply with federal owl protection requirements.

Supporters of the measure contend that the federal government can help the state with the difficult task of managing this economically and environmentally viable area.

ANTARCTICA TREATY bill wins Merchant Marine approval.

Legislation (HR 5459) that would implement an unratified treaty banning mining and oil drilling in Antarctica for 50 years was approved by the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee yesterday.

The bill, which was approved by voice vote, would implement the Protocol on Environmental Protection to the Antarctic Treaty (Treaty Doc. 102-22). The pact would establish Antarctica as a natural reserve devoted to peace and science.

The 1991 protocol is currently awaiting approval by the full Senate.

In addition, the measure would prohibit U.S. vessels from discharging oil into Antarctic waters and impose strict waste disposal requirements at U.S. outposts on the continent. It would also express the sense of Congress that the minerals development ban imposed by the treaty should be left in place indefinitely.

The panel voted to ease a ban on incinerators by recommending that burning of garbage should be permitted when there is no feasible alternative for disposing of food waste.

ROAD PROJECTS bill tinkers with transportation bill.

The House Public Works and Transportation Committee yesterday approved by voice vote a bill (HR 5753) making "technical corrections" to last year's major six-year $151 billion surface transportation authorization law.

Most of the provisions of HR 5753 involve minor changes, though the scope of some road and transit projects would be expanded.

Five projects that got left out of last year's bill due to "drafting errors" are included in the measure, but none of an estimated $1 billion in requests for new projects by members was granted, said Surface Transportation Subcommittee Chairman Norman Y. Mineta, D-Calif.

"The money simply isn't there, so we had to say no to everybody," said ranking subcommittee Republican Bud Shuster of Pennsylvania, whose state would benefit from several of the projects that did make it into the measure.

The Senate version of the fiscal 1993 transportation appropriations bill (HR 5518), passed on Wednesday, includes a technical corrections section for last year's authorization. But Mineta said he will try to assure that only authorizers, not appropriators, be allowed into a conference committee on the measure.

SMALL BUSINESS equity measure clears a Senate hurdle.

The Senate Small Business Committee yesterday approved, 15-0, legislation (HR 5191) aimed at providing more investment in the small business sector.

The bill would make changes in a federal program that provides investment capital to small businesses through small-business investment companies (SBICs).

A number of SBICs have failed, drying up sources of capital for small businesses. The measure would allow pension funds and other institutional investors to invest in SBICs in an effort to improve their solvency.

Under HR 5191, the federal government would be allowed to pay some of the interest on SBIC loans in return for a share of the profits at a later date.

The committee-approved bill — unlike the House-passed measure — would allow state and municipal governments to invest in SBICs.

INDIAN DEVELOPMENT bill gets committee's green light.

The Senate Indian Affairs Committee yesterday approved, by voice vote, legislation (S 3118) that backers hope will generate business for Indian-owned companies.

The measure revises the Buy Indian Act, which gives preferential treatment to Indian companies over other firms seeking contract work with the Bureau of Indian Affairs and the Indian Health Service.

An earlier version of the bill was vetoed over language that would have required formal certification of Indian contractors.

Short of requiring formal certification of contractors to assure they are Indian-owned, the new bill would require spot checks to confirm the eligibility of Indian firms working under preferential contracts.

The bill also would set aside, for small businesses only, all Buy Indian contracts under $1 million.

• The committee also gave voice vote approval to legislation (S 2836) that would assist states in constructing roads on Indian reservations.

Specifically, the bill would allow a portion of the annual appropriations of the Indian Reservation Road Fund, which is part of the Highway Trust Fund, to be used by states as a loan for repairing parts of state highways that transect Indian reservations.

RUSSIAN SCIENTISTS to get special status under Judiciary bill.

The House Judiciary Committee yesterday completed work on three measures, one of which seeks to encourage scientists from the former Soviet Union to emigrate to the United States.

Aimed particularly at attracting nuclear scientists, the bill (S 2201) would allow the scientists to enter the United States before getting employment, reversing the current policy that requires immigrants to have jobs before they can get visas.

Of the 140,000 slots currently made available for immigrants who have a specialized skill, the bill would set aside 750 slots for the scientists and their families.

The committee also approved:

• HR 2357, which would allow Americans working for a U.S. company overseas who suffer physical injury, including torture or death, at the hands of a foreign government to sue that government in U.S. courts. The individual bringing the suit would first have to exhaust all legal remedies in the country where the act took place.

The bill was approved 21-12.

Bill McCollum, R-Fla., spoke against the bill, saying that it would lead to retaliation by foreign governments.

• HR 5688, which would authorize the appointment of 35 additional federal bankruptcy judges. The bill was approved by voice vote.

TECHNOLOGY BILL thwarted by procedural problems.

After a third round of procedural squabbling, the House Science, Space and Technology Committee failed to complete action yesterday on a measure to promote technology competitiveness.

The panel approved the measure (HR 5231) by a 25-2 open roll call vote, but the House parliamentarian later ruled that the open roll call was not suffi-

Not As Scheduled

The House Government Operations Committee delayed until next Tuesday yesterday's scheduled markup of legislation (HR 5259) that would inject $5.4 into nearly 40,000 municipalities nationwide.

The measure is aimed at providing money for "ready to go" construction projects and other programs that were shelved by city governments because of the continuing recession.

The measure was rejected, 20-20, by the panel on June 3.

Consideration was delayed after GOP members questioned the parliamentary procedures by which a bill can be brought up for a second time after it has been rejected.

cient to constitute an official quorum of the committee.

The bill (HR 5231), which would develop a national information network to help small- and medium-sized companies become more technologically competitive, had initially been approved by the panel last month. Because a quorum had not been present the first time, members feared that the measure could face a procedural challenge on the House floor and sent the bill back to the committee.

The panel attempted to reconsider the bill on Wednesday but encountered an objection from ranking Republican Robert S. Walker, Pa. He argued that the bill before the members lacked a provision from the measure originally reported by the panel.

In yesterday's markup, the panel defeated 6-13 Walker's attempt to attach his own manufacturing technology bill (HR 5229) as an amendment to the bill being considered. Walker's provisions would have given tax breaks for small businesses.

But Walker, who wanted to delay floor consideration of HR 5231 until after the August recess, appeared to win out yesterday. Although the panel will attempt another markup next week, the bill is not likely to reach the floor until September.

WILDERNESS BILLS would overhaul agency efforts.

The House Interior Subcommittee on National Parks and Public Lands yesterday gave voice vote approval to three bills to create new positions in federal agencies to better manage the nation's 95 million acres of wilderness.

The bills (HR 4325, HR 4326, HR 4327) would establish "wilderness czars" in the Forest Service, the National Park System, the Bureau of Land Management and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Currently, the agencies have no official responsible for wilderness matters, and bill backers say the wilderness system is deteriorating as a result.

The bill would make success in preserving wilderness areas a key component of forest supervisors' performance ratings.

Corrections. Thursday's Monitor incorrectly reported that a bill (HR 3591) that would grant workers at federally funded health clinics immunity from malpractice suits was approved by the House Energy Committee on a 28-15 vote. HR 3591 was approved by voice vote.

The 28-15 vote of approval came on another bill, HR 5346, which would reauthorize grants for health programs for native Hawaiians.

• Thursday's Monitor incorrectly reported that a wetlands reserve program had never been funded. The program received $46 million in fiscal 1992.

was a prolific desert plant.

Silly Billy. Of course anyone can make a mistake. But attend these two CQ Foundation Programs and it's unlikely you'll ever make such a glaring faux pas as Mr. Kraft.

Register for Understanding Congress on April 23, June 1 or August 10 ($225), and you'll know the various steps of the legislative process and the function of congressional leadership, as well as how to track bills as they move through the process.

CQ's Research Workshop on Congressional Documents on April 24, June 2 or August 11 ($225), will add dimension to your knowledge as you learn to use and interpret congressional documents — and gain invaluable information on where, when and how you can obtain as well as capitalize on the information they provide.

With so much riding on your understanding of Congress, can you afford to make mistakes like Mr. Kraft?

WREATH-LAYING CEREMONY \ MARINE CORPS MEMORIAL
FRIDAY, AUGUST 7, 1992 \ 11:00 A.M.

THANK YOU, SECRETARY CHENEY, FOR THAT KIND^{2 AUG 7}
INTRODUCTION. SECRETARY DERWINSKI. SENATORS CHAFEE^{9:07}
AND HEFLIN AND CONGRESSMAN BROOKS, MEMBERS OF CONGRESS
WITH US TODAY WHO ARE VETERANS OF GUADALCANAL; COMMANDANT OF THE MARINES CARL MUNDY; SECRETARY OF THE ARMY MIKE STONE; ACTING SECRETARY OF THE NAVY SEAN O'KEEFE; AIR FORCE SECRETARY DONALD RICE; COMMANDANT OF THE COAST GUARD, WILLIAM KIME; MEDAL OF HONOR RECIPIENT MITCHELL PAIGE.

I WOULD LIKE TO OPEN, IF I MAY, WITH A STORY. IT IS A STORY OF HEROISM, A STORY OF COURAGE AND SACRIFICE. IT IS A STORY FROM GUADALCANAL.

KENNETH BAILEY WAS COMMANDING OFFICER OF COMPANY C, FIRST MARINE RAIDER BATTALION, WHEN HIS MEN WERE CALLED UPON TO DEFEND HENDERSON FIELD DURING THE JAPANESE
ASSAULT OF SEPTEMBER 12TH AND 13TH, 1942. THE ENEMY
HAD PENETRATED OUR MAIN LINE OF DEFENSE; THEIR NUMBERS WERE SUPERIOR TO OURS, AND ONLY A MIRACLE, IT SEEMED, COULD DEFEND THE AIRFIELD.

MAJOR BAILEY AND HIS MEN PROVIDED THE MIRACLE, TURNING BACK THE FLANK ATTACK, THEN COVERING THE WITHDRAWAL OF OUR MAIN FORCE. IN THE FIGHTING, MAJOR BAILEY SUSTAINED SEVERE WOUNDS TO HIS HEAD. EVEN SO, FOR TEN HOURS, HE AND HIS MEN ENGAGED THE ENEMY IN HAND-TO-HAND COMBAT.

THE ATTACK WAS REPULSED. HENDERSON FIELD WAS SECURED. MAJOR BAILEY DIED TWO WEEKS LATER FROM MACHINE-GUN FIRE, IN YET ANOTHER BATTLE ON GUADALCANAL.

HE RECEIVED THE CONGRESSIONAL MEDAL OF HONOR FOR HIS GALLANTRY ON BLOODY RIDGE.

MAJOR BAILEY'S STORY SERVES AS A SUMMATION FOR THOUSANDS OF OTHER STORIES, TALES THAT COULD BE TOLD BY THE BRAVE MEN GATHERED HERE, WHO SURVIVED THE HELL THAT WAS GUADALCANAL. SECRETARY CHENEY MENTIONED THE LESSONS OF THOSE BATTLES, AND I AM STRUCK, RECOUNTING MAJOR BAILEY'S STORY, OF ONE LESSON IN PARTICULAR.

KENNETH BAILEY WAS FROM PAWNEE, A TOWN OF 2,000 NEAR THE ARKANSAS RIVER IN NORTH-CENTRAL OKLAHOMA. IN THE MONTHS AND YEARS BEFORE THE GREAT WAR IN THE PACIFIC, WHO COULD HAVE PREDICTED THAT A SON OF PAWNEE, OKLAHOMA -- OR THE SONS OF RARITAN, NEW JERSEY; SIOUX FALLS, SOUTH DAKOTA; RUTLAND, VERMONT -- WHO COULD HAVE FORETOLD THAT THESE YOUNG MEN, FROM EVERY CORNER OF AMERICA, WOULD BE CALLED UPON TO DEFEND FREEDOM SIX THOUSAND MILES AWAY, ON AN OBSCURE PACIFIC ISLAND CALLED GUADALCANAL?

IT'S SAFE TO SAY THAT FEW IF ANY HAD EVER HEARD OF THE ISLAND. NONE COULD HAVE PREDICTED WHAT WOULD TRANSPIRE THERE. BUT IT WAS ON GUADALCANAL THAT THE FORCES OF FREEDOM BEGAN THEIR LONG MARCH -- A MARCH THAT WOULDN'T END UNTIL THREE YEARS LATER IN TOKYO BAY, ON THE DECK OF THE USS MISSOURI.

NO ONE CAN FORETELL WHEN OR WHERE FREEDOM WILL BE CHALLENGED -- THAT IS ONE OF THE LESSONS OF GUADALCANAL.

HOW MANY AMERICANS, IN 1947, HAD HEARD OF INCHON OR PUSAN OR CHOSIN? HOW MANY OF US, FIFTEEN YEARS LATER, HAD YET HEARD OF DA NANG OR KHE SANH? AND HOW FEW AMERICANS, IN THE SUMMER OF 1990, HAD YET HEARD OF KHAFJI OR SAFWAN?

YET TODAY THESE NAMES ARE INDELIBLY PART OF THE ROLL CALL OF HONOR, PLACES WHERE AMERICANS MADE THEIR STAND, AND OFFERED UP THEIR SWEAT AND BLOOD TO A CAUSE GREATER THAN THEMSELVES.

WE HONOR THE DEAD NOT MERELY FOR THEIR SAKE BUT FOR OUR OWN AS WELL. IN COMMEMORATION AND REMEMBRANCE WE LEARN AGAIN THAT FREEDOM, IN THE DEEPEST SENSE, ALWAYS HANGS IN THE BALANCE -- THAT WE EARN IT DAY BY DAY, IN HOT WARS AND COLD -- THAT ITS PRICE, AS JEFFERSON SAID, IS ETERNAL VIGILANCE, AN ENDLESSLY RENEWED DEDICATION TO KEEPING OUR COUNTRY STRONG, OUR DEFENSES SECOND TO NONE, OUR LEADERSHIP UNQUESTIONED AND UNCHALLENGED.

THERE WAS A RHYME PASSED AROUND DURING THOSE DARK SIX MONTHS AS THE BATTLE RAGED ON, WHEN FREEDOM HUNG BY THE UNBREAKABLE THREAD OF AMERICAN BRAVERY AND RESOLVE. EVERY MARINE WHO WASN'T FIGHTING ON THE ISLANDS KNEW THE LINES: "SAY A PRAYER FOR YOUR PAL // ON GUADALCANAL."

THIS MORNING, IN THIS PLACE, WE REMEMBER THOSE WORDS AND THE MEN WHO INSPIRED THEM.

WITH HEARTS FULL OF PRIDE AND AWE AND THANKSGIVING, WE ONCE AGAIN SAY A PRAYER FOR THOSE WHO FOUGHT AND DIED IN A PLACE FEW HAD KNOWN OF, BUT WHICH WE WILL NEVER FORGET.

MAY GOD BLESS THEM. MAY GOD BLESS YOU. AND MAY GOD BLESS THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

August 6, 1992

MEETING WITH ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCE INDUSTRY LEADERS

DATE: AUGUST 7, 1992
TIME: 1:30 P.M.
LOCATION: THE ROOSEVELT ROOM
THROUGH: DAVID DEMAREST
FROM: CECE KREMER
JEFF VOGL

I. PURPOSE:

To participate in a discussion with energy and natural resource industry leaders. To highlight your record of support for this industry, and to contrast your policies for this important sector with that of your opponents. To provide these trade associations with pictures for their fall publications.

II. BACKGROUND:

This industry sector has felt the impact of a slow economy. In fact, in the last 10 years, employment within the oil and gas industry, in particular, has been in a steep decline.

While the economic climate has been difficult, you have been a strong advocate for pro-growth, free market policies within the energy industry, seeking incentives for drilling, exploration and domestic production. On your initiative, the Natural Gas Wellhead Decontrol Act was enacted in 1989. The Administration launched the National Energy Strategy (NES) shortly thereafter, promoting incentives to increase domestic production of oil and gas, energy efficiency, alternative and renewable fuels and conservation measures.

Since that time, the Administration has taken several measures to help the oil and gas industry, including: enacting Alternative Minimum Tax (AMT) relief for independent oil and gas producers; pushing Congress for $2.25 billion in oil and gas tax incentives, as part of the '90 Budget Act; defeating new taxes on the industry sought by Democrats in Congress to fill the Strategic Petroleum Reserve (SPR); and fighting for access to ANWR and against new Outer-Continental Shelf moratoria. The NES bill, in which many of these issues are at stake, has gone to conference, and the Administration continues to fight for AMT relief and other measures to benefit the industry.

This meeting provides a key opportunity to draw clear distinctions in philosophy and policy between you and your opponents. In contrast to your personal understanding of this industry, your opponents' record is unclear. For example, while Governor Clinton advocates CAFE standards, Arkansas' mileage efficiency is the worst in the United States. While Governor Clinton states he supports alternative fuel development, including ethanol, he opposed such measures as Governor, vetoing a tax credit bill for ethanol users. Al Gore, meanwhile, advocates a fossil fuels "carbon tax."

Henson Moore and Linda Stuntz will give a summary of the Bush Administration's record on energy policy, while FERC Chairman Martin Allday and Boyden Gray will address the regulatory reform initiatives that the Administration has initiated to help the industry.

III. PARTICIPANTS:

The President

August 6, 1992

MEETING WITH AGRICULTURE INDUSTRY LEADERS

DATE: AUGUST 7, 1992
TIME: 3:00 P.M.
LOCATION: ROOSEVELT ROOM
THE WHITE HOUSE

THROUGH: DAVID DEMAREST DD

FROM: CECE KREMER CK
JEFF VOGEL JV

I. PURPOSE:

To participate in a discussion with agriculture industry leaders. To highlight your record in agriculture and to contrast your different policy approaches with those of your opponents. To provide these key agriculture associations with photos for their fall publications.

II. BACKGROUND:

As part of a continuing series of meetings with key industry sector trade association leaders, this group is assembled to discuss prevailing issues in the agriculture economy.

Moreover, this meeting provides a good opportunity to highlight your record of supporting American agriculture, and to contrast your record with that of your opponents. Your leadership in expanding markets for agricultural products is one reason farmers have seen the best four years of farm income on record.

U.S. agricultural exports reached $37.6 billion in 1991, compared to only $22.6 billion in imports. Each $1 billion in farm exports creates 27,000 U.S. jobs and $1.6 billion in economic activity.

Agriculture remains a critical focus of the GATT Round, which could expand U.S. farm exports by $2 to $5 billion by the end of the decade. This could add $1 to $2 billion to farm income. Agricultural exports to Mexico doubled between 1986 and 1991, totalling $2.9 billion, making Mexico one of our top three markets. The North American Free Trade Agreement holds the promise for more exports and farm productivity.

The Administration continues to seek a balanced and sensible approach to wetlands protection while preserving private property rights. In addition, it continues to seek out new uses for farm products, and new markets, as in the alternative fuels program and the use of ethanol.

Under Clinton-Gore's proposals, over 60 million acres of cropland would be defined as a wetland, and would ignore constitutionally guaranteed private property rights.

Also, during Clinton's tenure as Governor, he has raised 13 taxes and fees directly affecting farmers and 128 taxes and fees overall during his Administration. As a result, the family farm in Arkansas has suffered. While real net farm income grew 24 percent nationally, between 1984 and 1987, Arkansas' grew only 4 percent. In 1987, Arkansas farm income was up 6.3 percent, while U.S. farm income was at 11.32 percent.

Ann Veneman, Clayton Yeutter and Boyden Gray will be briefing the group as you arrive.

III. PARTICIPANTS:

The President

Clayton Yeutter

Ann Veneman, Deputy Secretary, Department of Agriculture

Beloved President:

God grant that the following word from Him will be an encouragement and a strength to you in these critical days.

"Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful.
But his delight is in the law of the Lord; and in his law doth he meditate day and night. And he shall be ike a tree planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth his fruit in his season; his leaf also shall not wither; and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper." (Psalm 1:1-3)

Dear Lucy and Fritz:

I'm sorry, too, that those political events (as great as they are) do not afford the opportunity for a good chat with old friends.

I appreciate your frankness, and your thoughts are always welcome. With regard to Dan Quayle, I'm afraid we just simply disagree. I can tell you that he has been superb in his official role, on every count, and his personal convictions are aligned with mine.

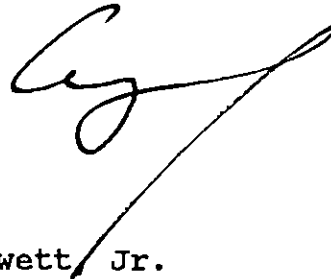

You also know me well enough to understand that I'm as much for "freedoms" and "choices" as anyone else; but on the complicated issue of abortion, I believe the overriding factor is the simple recognition that all life is a precious gift and must not be discarded for mere convenience.

Even though we disagree on these points, we are in total agreement on many, many more. Barbara and I want you to know how much your steadfast support has meant to us over the years. It's part of what makes this bumpy road worth travelling.

Warm regards.

Dear President George,

We were sorry that we did not have a few minutes to speak to you about our views at Clarence Woodard's on June 18th. As old friends of both you and Barbara, and strong supporters of your reelection, we are concerned about two primary issues:

1. Vice President Dan Quayle--he has worked hard, but has not gained enough credibility to serve a second term. Your loyalty to an individual is admirable up to a point, but we are concerned that you should be more concerned for your administration and the Republican Party in totality and select someone better qualified for the new needs of your second term.

2. Freedom of Choice--as President of all of the citizens of this country, we feel strongly that you need to modify your position on family planning and abortion. You are vocal in standing up for human rights and this should be a basic one.

At the Bohemian Grove, I hear deep concern from your campmates at Hillbillies and all over the Grove that you need to modify your position on these issues and to articulate better your goals for a second term. Don't wait for the convention. We need you now!

With best personal wishes to you and to Barbara.

Dear Mr. President:

On July 16, The Coastal Corporation hosted a breakfast for the Texas delegation at the National Democratic Convention, just as we will host several events in Houston for the Republican National Convention.

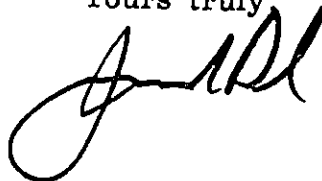

At the convention breakfast, Coastal's corporate counsel, Mike Beatty, served as host. His welcoming remarks to the Texas delegation, unfortunately, included several political criticisms of your administration. Naturally, the Texas press, as well as the energy press, gave extensive attention to these remarks.

I have discussed this matter with Mr. Beatty, pointing out that every person has his or her right to express their political opinions, but no implication can be given that the corporation or any other Coastal employee shares that position.

Mr. Beatty expressed his political beliefs as an individual, just as I express mine, and I am supporting George Bush for President.

My very best wishes to you and Mrs. Bush.

Re: July Employment and Unemployment

GOOD NEWS! The unemployment rate fell 0.1 percent to 7.7 percent in July from 7.8 percent in June. While this was what most private analysts had expected, there was a great deal of uncertainty because of the large increases in May and June due to unexpectedly rapid labor force growth.

Better still, there was a gain of 198,000 nonfarm payroll jobs in July, almost double what private analysts had expected. Further, there was a small upward revision to job growth in May and a downward revision to job loss in June totalling about 80,000 more jobs than had previously been reported.

With unemployment down, NAFTA on the verge of completion and Rabin's visit, it looks like a good run up to the convention.

Welcome back; from here it looked like the trip went well.

Dear Carl,

That was a very nice ceremony today and I am so pleased you invited me to attend.

I thought you might be interested in the attached letter which I answered today.

I send it along asking you to discount the political references. I thought you might like to see yet another example of the courageous spirit associated with the Corps. She lost "her Marine" in the Gulf, yet her spirit, and his too, come shining through.

If someone there is in touch with her they might want to mention how much I appreciate her letter.

Dear Mr. President:

encl.
I am sure you have heard of my son, the late Sgt. Kenneth Keller, USMC who died October 8, 1990, in Operation Desert Shield. His helicopter collided with another and exploded in mid-air. There were eight men on the two choppers, no bodies were ever found. To this day I cannot accept the fact that he is dead, to me he is an MIA. I know an investigation was performed, but not to find any bodies, just debris Mr. President, it is difficult for me to believe this, yet if my son was on a secret mission I would understand, because he would want me to. Mr. President, I know people were against the Gulf War, who wouldn't be, but the day I was notified that our son was killed we received a letter from him, saying, "Mom and Dad don't worry about me we are over here to help the people of Kuwait and to always make sure our country stays free, I love the Marines and my country." Mr. President, that day I received this letter it was too much for me to handle. Yet, I am proud of my Marine, because he did what he wanted to do in his short life, 27 years old. So Mr. President, at this 1992 Republican Convention you give it all you've got for these proud boys who wanted freedom for us as well as Kuwait. We are Republicans and proud of it. So for a Gold Star Mother it is difficult to accept my son's death, but he is alive in my heart.

I would never dream of voting for a draft dodger, not when these men and women gave their lives for their country. You see Mr. President, I could be bitter with the Military and God, but Ken would never want me to. You know the loss of a child, it isn't easy. My son, Michael has written to you also and a picture was sent to him from you with Barbara and Millie.

God Bless and the best of luck.

Sincerely,

Sophia B. Keller

Marine Sgt. Kenneth Keller, victim of Gulf copter crash

By Kenan Heise

Marine Sgt. Kenneth Thomas Keller Jr., 26, was serving as crew chief on a helicopter and was stationed in the Persian Gulf. He had been in the Marine Corps since he was 18 years old.

Sgt. Keller, a resident of Ocean-side, Calif., died in a helicopter crash over the Arabian Sea on Oct. 8. Two of the craft had been on patrols when they apparently collided, killing all members of both crews.

"He was a great kid and a true Marine," said his mother, Sophia. "His letters said that he was there to fight for his country, but he couldn't wait to get home to his wife and son."

A native of Chicago, Sgt. Keller played both Little League and football in Glenview, where he grew up. He attended the Avoca Elementary School and Loyola Academy.

He joined the Marines in 1982 and has served since then at Camp Pendleton near Oceanside.

Survivors, besides his mother, include his wife, Lolita; a son, Joshua; his father, Kenneth Sr.; and two brothers.

Sgt. Kenneth T. Keller

A memorial mass for Sgt. Keller will be said 10 a.m. Saturday in Our Lady of Perpetual Help Catholic Church, Church and Grove Streets, Glenview.

Accidents killed most GIs in gulf

By William Neikirk 3-24-91
Chicago Tribune

WASHINGTON—Sophia Keller of Glenview and Dorothy Hurley of Chicago feel like casualties of the Persian Gulf war.

Their sons, both Marines, were killed in an accidental helicopter collision Oct. 8 over the Gulf of Oman, during training exercises as part of Operation Desert Shield.

Now whenever Sophia Keller sees the casualties of Operation Desert Storm mentioned publicly as war heroes and Sgt. Kenneth Keller Jr.'s name is excluded, she cannot help but feel the pain.

■ Iraq and the gulf allies agree to step up prisoner exchanges. Page 12.

Those killed in accidents prior to the beginning of the war on Jan. 16 also belong on the list, she said. "These boys died in Desert Storm too. I feel hurt. I want these boys' memories kept alive. They were heroes. They were fighting for their country."

Dorothy Hurley agrees, but is more concerned that she has been given no information on the helicopter crash, how it occurred or who was to blame. She and a third Illinois mother who lost a son in the crash, Sheila Cronin of Elmhurst, learned from friends of their sons, Capt. William Joseph Hurley and Capt. William Cronin Jr., that it probably was a midair collision off the USS Okinawa. The bodies were never recovered.

"We get one letter each month from the Pentagon," Hurley said. "It says only that 'we have not reached a conclusion.' It's kind of like unfinished."

The whole picture of the casualties in Desert Shield and Desert Storm has an unfinished quality about it. Neither the Pentagon nor the media has made much of the pre-war accidental deaths of 108 troops, either in providing details or according them the same hero status of combat casualties.

Actually, accidents killed more U.S. soldiers than hostile fire during the entire Desert Shield/Desert Storm operation. The Pentagon said last Thursday there were 124 combat deaths and 207 non-combat deaths since the first troops were sent to the gulf in August.

For such a large operation, military analysts said, the number of accidents wasn't unusually high. Soldiers were killed in a variety of ways—vehicle accidents, airplane crashes, and, in one instance, a fall. Twenty-one sailors died in December when a ferry capsized in the Red Sea.

Dr. Eric Plaut, professor of psychiatry and behavioral sciences at Northwestern University, said families who feel a lack of proper recognition for a death have an understandable reaction. He compared it to the same kind of emotion felt by families who had a son wounded or killed in the unpopular Vietnam War.

Plaut said he presumes the military finds it hard to acknowledge that it lost more soldiers in accidents than in combat. "It's harder for them to explain and justify," he said.

But he stressed that it is important for the families who suffered the death of a loved one by accident to be honored equally by the Pentagon and by the country, especially the media.

For a time, the issue of money sharpened these feelings. Keller, for example, thought it would have been unfair if families of those killed in Desert Shield received a smaller insurance payment than those in Desert Storm. Her son's family—a wife and child—received $50,000.

Last month some members of Congress began talking about doubling the insurance payment to $100,000 for Desert Storm casualties. But the bill now before a House-Senate conference committee sets Aug. 1 as the eligibility date for the $100,000 payment.

Sen. Alan Dixon (D-Ill.) said he felt the same benefits and honors should be accorded any soldier killed, whether it was in preparation for the war or during the hostilities, whether by combat or accident.

"It was still a life given in the cause," he said.

This provision certainly helps ease one of Keller's causes for concern, but she said money wasn't the main issue. It went more to the question of her son's own pride and training for his job as a Marine.

Even as a boy of 5, Kenneth Jr. was interested in the military. "He loved the Marines," she said. "He was proud to be a Marine. The Marines have been very good to us."

Yet, she said, when the Pentagon-prepared casualty lists that appear on television and in the newspapers do not include those killed in the helicopter accident "it's as if it never happened."

Plaut of Northwestern said in some cases, lack of adequate recognition by a country for a soldier who gave his life can be such a focal point for a family that it interrupts the natural mourning process. This is one reason for providing balance when a nation honors its war dead, he said.

Cronin said recognition was important to her son. When he was stationed at Quantico, Va., she said, he often made the trip to Washington to view the Vietnam Memorial, where the names of hundreds of war dead are etched on a plain, stone wall.

"He was impressed by that wall," she said. If there were a similar memorial for those who died in the gulf, she said, the family would want his name included.

Keller expressed the same view—recognition on a memorial is very important.

"They were not exactly on a Caribbean cruise," Hurley added.

But all three mothers said their sons have been honored in their local communities, through scholarship programs and parades and in other ways. And all three told of receiving letters from their sons long after the accident.

In his last letter, Capt. Hurley said he hoped to be home by Feb. 7. From a stopover in the Philippines, he had arranged for his family to receive a Valentine. It arrived right on time.

Dear Alan,

Spence Geissinger just passed on the wonderful poster for the Republican Convention with your personal autograph. Thanks so much -- it looks great!

I really appreciate your thoughtfulness and especially your support and good wishes. I'm counting down the days to Houston.

Sincerely,

Spencer E. Geissinger
PRESIDENT

Dear Rose:

Enclosed please find several personalized "official" 1992 Republican National Convention posters. Our company had the good fortune of being selected to produce the official poster for the convention.

I asked the artist who we commissioned, Alan Rodewald, to personally autograph a copy for the President, the Vice-President, yourself and Patty Presock. Alan asked me to pass on his support and good wishes. We hope everyone enjoys them. Please note that the President and the Vice-President received number one and number two respectively.

The following is Alan Rodewald's address should the President and Vice-President wish to drop him a thank you note. I hope all is going well. I look forward to seeing you at the convention.

Alan Rodewald

Best Wishes,

A handwritten signature in dark ink, appearing to read "Spencer". The signature is fluid and cursive, with a large initial "S" and a trailing flourish.

The President today recognized Fanniedell Peeples of Detroit, Michigan, as the 856th Daily Point of Light for the Nation. Her lifetime of voluntary service has enriched the lives of hundreds of people in her community, ensuring them quality health care and a sense of well-being.

After 15 major operations, Ms. Peeples understands what it is like to be a patient and what it takes to be a volunteer. Every day she engages in a wide variety of activities at hospitals, ranging from emergency room assistance to new volunteer training at the Children's Hospital of Michigan.

There is no such thing as a typical day at the hospital for Fanniedell Peeples. She may assist patients in a surgical waiting room or help unemployed adults complete job applications in the personnel office. Often she leads prayer services or helps respond to letters that have been sent to deceased patients.

In addition to her hospital commitments, Ms. Peeples visits fourth grade students in juvenile delinquency homes where she encourages them to strive for personal success. Having no immediate family, however, she receives the greatest fulfillment from her relationships with hospital patients. She regularly sits at the bedsides of young oncology patients, encouraging them to fight against discouraging odds. Asked why, she replies, "These kids are not dying of cancer -- they are living with it. So I will live with them, because no one should die alone."

The President salutes Fanniedell Peeples for exemplifying his belief that, "From now on in America, any definition of a successful life must include serving others."
