HERE IS THE ESSENCE OF THE REMARKS I FEEL THE PRESIDENT MIGHT CONSIDER IN HIS NEXT FORTHCOMING DEBATE FOR YOUR AND HIS PERUSAL.
QUOTE "I HAVE INCREDIBLE COMPASSION FOR EACH INDIVIDUAL, EVERY HUMAN BEING AND EVERY HEART THAT IS HURTING BOTH MENTALLY AND PHYSICALLY. MY DREAM IS FOR THEM TO HAVE THE DIGNITY OF OWNING
THEIR OWN JOB, TO BE A PROVIDER AND TO HAVE A FEELING OF STRONG SELF WORTH". END OF QUOTE.

ALSO, HE MAY CONSIDER THESE WORDS: "WHEN YOU ARE HURTING, YOU
WANT TO KNOW SOMEONE CARES ABOUT YOU AND YOUR FAMILY, THIS
PRESIDENT DOES CARE FOR YOU AND I WILL DO EVERYTHING IN MY POWER
TO BRING BACK THE DIGNITY OF JOBS AND CARING FOR THE AMERICAN PEOPLE".

Tom Manhart

1. The results of the debate have not changed the polls appreciably.
2. It is our opinion that you must give your Gettysburg Address soon.
3. The material for such a statement can and should be the Republican record for the past 12 years on the economy of the nation .
4. On the Republican watch, 2 major events have affected our economy:
 - a. The Globalization of the economy.
 - b. The Demise of Communism.
5. The Globalization has resulted in the relocation of plants, people and materials. Cost controls such choices as the above with the result that the product concerned is produced where it can be done the cheapest and the best. United States adjustments to this condition have largely been made and include labors recognition that their cost must be competitive. We did not export jobs, the market allocated both the materials and the job content of any product. This process was made possible by the United States development of instant communications both of data and money.

Globalization is here to stay and we'll be a principal beneficiary.

- b. The demise of Communism has relocated large segments of our defense budget, and has resulted in a loss of jobs and activity in many of the large defense industrial complexes. This adjustment in the economy will be like all others, i.e. dynamic.

Under the Bush administration, you have personally conducted an engagement in the Persian Gulf through the mandate of the United Nations and in so doing have emphasized United States key role in peace keeping and the usefulness of the United Nations as an institution for the first time. Your management of the financial impact of this engagement was outstanding in getting the other interested nations to share the cost. All of which is certainly an economic first.

Granted doing the Republican watch certain excesses have occurred which have seriously affected our economy, for instance, the Savings and Loan problem which is directly related to the Congress changing the laws governing such institutions. This change involved the purpose of a savings and loan which was to finance individual homes to allowing the financing of junk bonds and other very high risk investments. On top of that as you are well aware, we guaranteed the deposits which assured manipulation and unnecessary losses. Please share the blame with the Democratically controlled committees.

Tom Manhart

Lastly, You have presided over the United States in regaining it's prestige in the world and it's reliability as an ally. We think this a dramatic story which you should tell to your constituents.

All of the above contains nothing new to you but it is our sincere opinion that you would make an impact on the election results by stringing it together carefully and making the point that those crying for change, don't even know that the change has taken place.

LIVE INTERVIEW OF
THE PRESIDENT ON THE TODAY SHOW
BY KATIE COURIC (NBC-TV)

The Residence

8:28 A.M. EDT

THE PRESIDENT: -- because it happens to be true. So I think that's the biggest difference. But how can you say you're a new breed when your own proposal says I want to spend $150 billion more in taxes -- tax $150 billion more and spend $220 billion. And that's before the tax that would have to come from his health care plan. So we've got these differences but I've got to get them in focus. But I thought Barbara did a good job at that.

MRS. BUSH: I'm going to go home and write my resignation -- put it on your desk and see if you take it.

THE PRESIDENT: Well -- we'll get Millie to resign --

Q Are you going to have Barbara --

THE PRESIDENT: She wakes up in the middle of the night

--

MRS. BUSH: -- wait up --

THE PRESIDENT: I've got to -- here's my side of this.

MRS. BUSH: Who did I tell you got me up at 4:00 a.m. in the morning?

Q Ranger at 4:00 am; and she said she wasn't going to argue with him about going outside.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, what happened to 3:00 a.m.? I got to bed, I'm very tired -- took a long trip yesterday, the equivalent of flying to Paris, and this kid, Millie, is up on my bed at about 3:00 a.m. That's not fair, Katie. There's no justice out there.

MRS. BUSH: Come on.

Q Before you go -- before you go --

THE PRESIDENT: Ranger's a good boy.

Q I asked you about the debates initially, Mr. President --

THE PRESIDENT: Are you sure they can hear me?

Q I hope so. How about the upcoming debates? How crucial do you think they are to the campaign.

THE PRESIDENT: Oh, I don't know. You know, you get asked -- I remember getting asked this in 1984 when I had the honor of debating Geraldine Ferraro. You talk about a tough tension city then, because that had a uniqueness to it in the history of American debates. I remember the same kind of tension in '88. I honestly don't know the answer to your question, because I think elections don't hinge on debates particularly, but I think they're important. I think they're important.

I'm getting all ready, too, with ideas as to how to go after this proposal or that one or why my proposals for the economy are better -- world peace, you know. And so it gives you a chance to get out with what you really are. It's a little bit structured in the sense that it's hard to really develop policy. But I think by the time the three debates are over, the definitions will be clear.

Q The single moderator might be more helpful tonight in terms of --

THE PRESIDENT: Maybe, maybe, maybe. We'll see how it goes. That'll be interesting.

Q Rather on Thursday.

THE PRESIDENT: I think the next one -- we have questions from the audience, and I've always liked that format. We have programs we called "Ask George Bush" all through the primaries way back in 1980 and 1988. And I think it's effective because I feel comfortable doing that. Sometimes if I get on there with some of the more contentious interviewers -- present company excepted; good ones, but not as contentious -- why then you get a little tense. It's human nature. But if you get questions from the audience, say look, here's what I feel, then it's a lot better. It's a lot easier to really --

Q Easier for you.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, easier for me. But that's not the way -- I don't think that every interviewer works. They want to make the news, they want to get the zinger on the 5:00 p.m., 6:00 p.m., 7:00 p.m. news. So they have to be a little more contentious. But from the audience, I think, it gives you a chance to expound better. So we'll see, I mean -- but then when you have three people standing there, it's a little more complicated than anything I've ever been through.

Q Well, let's talk about that third person, Ross Perot.

THE PRESIDENT: I told you I was going to be here for 30 seconds to talk about Barbara --

Q Well, I know, but aren't I great? I'm one of these less contentious reporters who can convince you to stick around --

THE PRESIDENT: Yes but you're too --. I got to get--

Q -- and talk with me, because I'm so easy.

THE PRESIDENT: I know what one candidate said about you -- blame it on Katie Couric -- (laughter) -- I don't want to get in a fight with you.

Q No, that was -- I was trying to prove my manhood. (Laughter.) What did you think about --

THE PRESIDENT: You were, you were. That's it.

Q What do you think about Ross Perot?

THE PRESIDENT: And I'm over here protesting -- I'm over here protesting that I don't have a male dog on the program, and you're taking the offense. You see, that's why I didn't want to come here in the first place.

Q A lot of people said that Ross Perot stole the show the other night. What did you think of his performance?

THE PRESIDENT: I thought he did well. I thought he did well.

Q That's it -- "I thought he did well"?

THE PRESIDENT: Well, I mean, he had some good lines, you know, and he stood there in a feisty manner. And I think people liked that.

Q Do you think he hurt you because --

THE PRESIDENT: Well, I can't tell. I can't tell. I think our pros think maybe it's the other way around. But it's going to sort out after three rounds of these debates. But I can't tell about it. I mean, we know we know what the problem is, now what's the answer? And that's a big thing and I think we've got the best answer -- the Agenda for America's Renewal is sound economic policy, visionary in terms of what we have to do in terms of education. But what I've got to do is what I thought Barbara did effectively -- say we've got some big problems here. But don't over represent them. I mean, we're on -- with interest rates down, inflation down, we're ready for movement. And don't ruin it by raising taxes and increasing spending. Or on the other hand, don't screech the economy to a halt by slapping a tax on Social Security and gutting the economic growth.

I think I'm a -- on this issue, kind of in between extremes -- I do not want to tax and spend, and I don't want to cut the economy so fast that the train stops and the screech in the tracks. We can't do that. And our policy, our program is, I think, in between. It gets the deficit starting coming down. But it doesn't stifle growth by raising taxes on people.

Governor Clinton talks about infrastructure -- we passed $150 billion infrastructure highway bill -- $150 billion -- and he stills wants to spend more, take it from the taxpayer, spend more. I think that's bad.

Q Why hasn't that highway bill affected unemployment?

THE PRESIDENT: I think it's starting to affect it. Unemployment is down for three months. But you know what I hear on the television? Bad news for President Bush -- job market shrinks. Then it comes down the next month -- bad news for President Bush. I mean, come on, when unemployment goes down, that's good. That's good. And so it's starting down. And I think that the highway program is helping. But it hasn't really -- that $150 billion -- hasn't really gotten out into the highway system yet. When it does it will certainly create a lot of jobs.

Q Governor Clinton had a fairly strong rebuttal to your charges of questioning his judgment and character about demonstrating overseas.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes.

Q He said your father, Prescott Bush, during the McCarthy days stood up to McCarthy. And he said you really shouldn't question his patriotism. Will you continue to raise -- raise questions about his character?

THE PRESIDENT: His judgment? Absolutely. Absolutely. I don't know whether the listeners agree with me. I simply do not understand when Americans are in a prison camp in Hanoi and Americans are dying in the battlefield -- a lot of kids drafted, didn't have any connections to get out of the draft -- I cannot understand an American citizen organizing demonstrations in a foreign land. And I think it's an issue. And I think it isn't to do about patriotism. He talked about my father -- my father served his country and my father believed in duty, honor and country. And I, like my father, do not like McCarthyism, and this isn't McCarthyism. He ought to come clean on the draft, Katie. I mean, a lot of kids ducked the draft. A lot of them went someplace -- some of them went to Canada. But they didn't try to have it both ways -- protect the political viability and then tell different stories about it.

And I just don't think that's right. We didn't get into the draft in this debate. But I think it's an issue. Now, a lot of the Clinton supporters -- oh no, a lot of kids had trouble with the war, they did. But when you're President you can't take one story and then phase it out. He said -- maybe it was on your program, I don't know -- that on April 17th we'll bring out all the records; I will give all the records on the draft. I think he ought to do that. I think that's an issue. It is not an issue of patriotism, it is an issue of character. Telling the truth is a question.

Q This wasn't a strategy cooked up by some of the more conservative members of Congress?

THE PRESIDENT: No. I'll tell you, some conservative members of Congress came to see me, but it was not a strategy cooked up by them. Barbara can tell you I've felt this way for a long time. But I'll tell who made the most impression on me of that group, the Congressman Sam Gejdenson. Does that name ring a bell? Probably not. You know where he was when Governor Clinton was organizing demonstrations, organizing them against the U.S.? He was in a Hanoi prison. And I don't know -- Bar put it well today here -- you look out -- we can look out that door, there's probably a handful of people out there right now demonstrating. And I understand that. We had a bunch of AIDS people circle this building yesterday or the day before, and I can understand that. I cannot understand going to a foreign land and organizing demonstrations, and at the same time -- at the same time, not leveling with the -- now, years later -- but now, not leveling with the American people on the draft.

Q President, at you Inaugural Address four years ago, you said the American people can no longer be -- to paraphrase -- torn apart by Vietnam.

THE PRESIDENT: Exactly.

Q This seems to contradict that vow.

THE PRESIDENT: Desert Storm put Vietnam's shame to rest. What happened in Desert Storm -- it was amazing. The country came together, and not only did they salute the heroes of Desert Storm, but they saluted the veterans of Vietnam -- those who had been humiliated; those who had been taught by demonstrators that their mission was immoral. You see, I don't think it was immoral. What I think was immoral is to send a young kid into fight in Vietnam, a draftee into fight in Vietnam, and tie his hands behind his back by not winning.

And in Desert Storm, I said to Norm Schwarzkopf and these guys, hey, we're going to win this war, and we're not going to start it until you assure me we're going to win it. It's like I feel in Yugoslavia now. So, we did it, and that lifted the Vietnam syndrome. But I don't think it's a question of necessarily of Vietnam. I think if a person stands up and says look, I was against it, period. But to have it both ways, to try to protect your political viability, I think that's an issue.

Q You don't think someone can love their country and not serve in the Vietnam War?

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, I do think that. Yes I do. I think somebody can love his country and that's what -- you see, this is where you get into somebody's patriotism. I'm not questioning patriotism. I'm questioning character and judgment. And all I'm saying is, level with the American people -- level -- tell the truth. You said you'd bring out the records on April 17th, and they're not there. And I don't --

Q On the flipside --

THE PRESIDENT: I do believe in service to country. I really believe in it. And it shaped my life, my own experience. And I think in one aspect of my job, I'm better because of that. And that is being Commander-in-Chief of the Armed Forces. It's awful, Katie, when you have send someone else's kid into fight. It is a terrible decision. Barbara can tell you that -- we sat up there at Camp David knowing in a day or two we were going to send these airmen in to battle. And I knew what the General said. And I was saying to myself, are they right? Are they sure when they tell me they can do this at a low risk? And, yes, they proved to be right.

My decisions that I had to make on Desert Storm were tempered by having served my country. I don't think that's essential. I don't you have had to serve. I do think you have to level, though. I think I would be diminished as a President if I didn't level with the American people.

Q On the flipside, some observers, some Democrats, say that you have not leveled about your knowledge of Iran-Contra.

THE PRESIDENT: Glad you asked that, and I knew you would. (Laughter.) You know how many questions we've answered on Iran-Contra? Take a guess. You're not the -- I'm the interviewer. I remember you told Barbara off a minute ago. Four thousand -- 450 by me, some under oath, some to the news media; 3,500 by staff. And to bring this up in a desperate attempt to level it with the failure to tell the truth on the draft, I'm sorry, I think they are totally different. So there it is.

Q But those questions were asked, Mr. President, were they not, prior to Casper Weinberger and George Shultz coming forward and talking about your knowledge.

THE PRESIDENT: Well what's the question? Ask me now. This might be a good chance to ask me the question you want to ask. Which is it?

Q Do you have any knowledge of the Iran-Contra arms-for-hostages deal while you were in office as Vice President?

THE PRESIDENT: I've testified 450 times under oath, some of them -- and our staff 3,500 -- yes. But nobody's accused me of not doing it. In terms of the Contra part of it, absolutely not. And no one has suggested I did. Diversion of arms for support for the Contras -- no. And no one's challenged that. What was challenged, I think, I'll help you with the question -- what was challenged --

Q Oh, thank you, Mr. President.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, go ahead --

Q No, no, no --

THE PRESIDENT: You go ahead and ask me that.

Q I want you to go ahead.

THE PRESIDENT: You already asked that.

Q Clarify what you think was challenged.

2 THE PRESIDENT: Well, what was asked was whether I knew that Casper Weinberger and Shultz -- how strongly they opposed it. And I said to that, there were two key meetings where they almost got into a shouting match, I'm told -- that I did not attend. But I said all along that I knew about the arms going, and I supported the President. I gave speeches about it. So it's a crazy thing to try to equate this with telling the truth on the draft.

Q Howard *Tisher, who was an official with the National Security Council, came on our program a few weeks ago and said he fully briefed you --

THE PRESIDENT: He did.

Q -- about everything.

THE PRESIDENT: I don't remember Howard doing it, but I remember -- not about the Contra part of it. He didn't say that. Please be careful -- he did not say that.

Q He said that you knew the details and that you were, as we understand it, in the loop.

THE PRESIDENT: Katie, Katie, you're saying something he didn't say.

Q Okay.

3 THE PRESIDENT: You're saying that he said I knew about the funds being diverted to the Contras. I did not. And no one, including the --

Q But you knew about the arms for hostages.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes. And I've said so all along -- given speeches on it. But to equate this with whether you've told the truth on the draft, I'm sorry, I've been under oath on this. And it's strange, strange.

Q Let me ask you if I could, Mr. President, about the --

THE PRESIDENT: No.

Q -- Justice Department investigation of William Sessions, the head of the FBI.

THE PRESIDENT: I know nothing --

Q Can you confirm there is a Justice Department investigation?

THE PRESIDENT: No, I cannot. I just read it in the paper this morning.

Q No knowledge of any kind of Justice --

THE PRESIDENT: No knowledge. No, not that I know about.

Q While I can you're making a move toward the Oval Office, Mr. President, thank you very much.

What do you expect to hear in tonight's Vice Presidential debate before you go?

MRS. BUSH: Come on, Katie. (Laughter.)

THE PRESIDENT: What time do we break for the hour here. I'd like to be on for another half hour.

Q You've got 15 more minutes if you'd like to stay with us.

THE PRESIDENT: I'd like another segment here. (Laughter.)

Q What are you expecting?

THE PRESIDENT: I think Dan Quayle will be -- I love these polls -- 92 percent of the people or 83 percent think Gore will be the winner; 16 Quayle. He'll do fine. He has taken a real pounding out there -- and just so grossly unfair. Do you remember the -- do you remember the pounding he took on going into the National Guard? I do. He served his country. And, oh, the terrible pounding he got -- for influence, which was not true -- going into the Guard. And now we have the guy running for President who wanted to stay out of everything; and how we've got to look back; it was 20 years ago, we've got to heal the wounds. Come on. Let's have some fairness. Dan Quayle will do great in this debate.

MRS. BUSH: Come on, we've got to go.

Q Thank you so much for talking with.

THE PRESIDENT: He'll do great.

Ranger, boy --

Q Mrs. Bush, thank you again. Mr. President, could you join us again next week?

THE PRESIDENT: -- didn't even take a picture --

Q Any chance?

THE PRESIDENT: Katie --

Q Nothing like a live request.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, let me think about it.

Q Would you join us next week?

THE PRESIDENT: You're what I call a very fair interviewer. You know what a fair is versus an unfair? You give the guy a chance to answer the question. Some -- this is an analysis -- you didn't ask for this, but I'll give it to you -- an analysis of your profession. Some have what I think we call in the trade curve balls, the majority -- they know where they want to come out, and they're determined to get the interviewee, whether it's the President or anybody else, to come out there. I'm not saying this gratuitously -- they may edit this up here -- is this live?

Q No, fortunately, we're on live television, so please say whatever you'd like. (Laughter.)

THE PRESIDENT: But what I say is --

MRS. BUSH: -- at it, George.

THE PRESIDENT: No, but I think when you ask a question, you at let me listen without interrupting -- how can you equate this with that and that. So there's a fighting chance for this. But I've got a lot of stuff to do, you've got to understand that.

Q I know you're a very busy man, but we'd certainly appreciate some more of your time next week if it could be arranged.

THE PRESIDENT: Would you really? Would you?

Q Yes, we would.

THE PRESIDENT: Just you and me, alone in these blue chairs here?

Q Sure.

THE PRESIDENT: Let me think about it. I've enjoyed this very much.

Q All right. Mrs. Bush, make sure he thinks about it.

MRS. BUSH: I'm looking for Marlin right now -- (laughter) --

Q I'll call you this afternoon. (Laughter.) Marlin's probably pulling what hair he has left out. (Laughter.)

President Bush, thanks again.

THE PRESIDENT: I enjoyed it. I really did.

Q Thank you, I enjoyed it too.

MRS. BUSH: Good-bye, Katie.

Q You never know what happens when you wonder into the Blue Room on a Tuesday morning.

THE PRESIDENT: I know it, I know it.

Q Thank you, Mr. President. He wants to stay, Mrs. Bush. He's not making any moves.

MRS. BUSH: --

THE PRESIDENT: Not really.

Q Thanks again.

THE PRESIDENT: It's good to see you.

Q It's good to see you, too. And we'll be back with more on Today right after this.

The Honorable George Bush
President of the United States
The White House

Dear Mr. President:

Congratulations on a superb debate performance. You appeared statesmanlike, extremely knowledgeable, and in command. You were forceful and very effective in presenting your economic program. We remain confident that in the end a majority of the American people will agree with us that you are best qualified and deserve reelection. You will be the victor on November 3, notwithstanding the outrageous bias of the media.

We pray that God will continue to give you strength and courage in the remaining three weeks.

Sincerely,

Robin,

This came across our fax. I know that Karl Samuelian is a big GOP fundraiser from CA, but I don't know if he is a personal friend of the President's.

If not, I'll just give to Presidential Correspondence for handling.

I was very touched by your wonderfully supportive letter of October 6.

One of our National educational goals is to do better, as you know, in math and science. You continue to be my idol in all of this -- not only in this regard, but also in all you do to help kids that really need your guidance and leadership.

Barbara joins me in sending our warmest best wishes.

President George Bush
The White House
Washington, D.C. 20500

Dear Mr. President:

In 1982 the news that my class of all Latino math students had been denied their passing scores on the AP test in Calculus had just appeared in the national news media. I received a phone call that week from someone in Washington. Truthfully, I did not even understand who it was that called. This person on the other end of the line told me, "what you are doing is making a big difference and that you proved that anyone can learn and perform; race is not the issue."

Only at the end of the call did I realize that the encouragement was coming from you, Mr. President, then calling in your capacity as Vice President of the United States of America.

That call told me a great deal about you. It told me that as a person you cared about the situation with my kids and that as a national leader you wanted to help Latino kids reach their full potential.

You demonstrated that commitment in later meetings and discussions. One in particular I remember, was when you accepted my invitation to visit me at Garfield High School. You and Mrs. Bush spent nearly a full day with me and I know from your curiosity and questions that you were sincerely interested in the real situation with Hispanics in school in the inner city.

As you and I have discussed we have yet to face the greatest challenges for our students here in California and elsewhere. In your next term I am positive that you will make education one of the top issues on the national agenda. It is the key to our national future and economy.

We as a country invest enormous resources in education. I believe that by a more prudent use of those vast resources we can greatly improve our schools. For instance, in my field, teachers who are not qualified in mathematics can learn to better motivate their students and become more qualified to teach math. This, alone, would make math a great deal more interesting and challenging to a whole generation of students.

President Bush
Page Two
October 6, 1992

All of us in society must accept some responsibility for education. No one alone can fix all of these problems, not even the President of the United States.

But I know with your leadership we can work together and make a big difference.

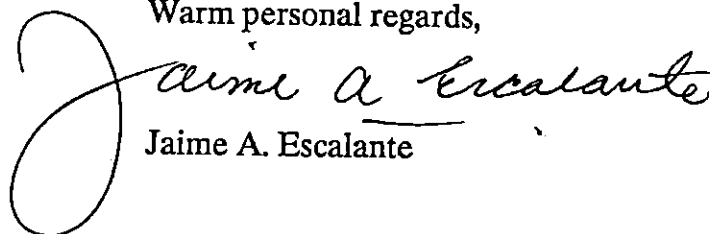

I believe in action. I have always taught my students that to make a difference one has to go into action and "stand and deliver". You gave my students and the world an example of "standing and delivering" when you expelled the Iraqis from Kuwait and helped bring about the collapse of communism in Russia and Eastern Europe.

Now with that same courage and commitment turned to domestic affairs I know you will "stand and deliver" for education.

I and my entire family support your work and trust your leadership and are casting our vote for you come election day.

FOR THE FUTURE OF CHILDREN AND MINORITIES,

Warm personal regards,

NBC'S TODAY -- INTERVIEW WITH PRESIDENT BUSH

Note: The interview did not start to air until it was already underway.

President Bush: Because it happens to be true. So I think that's the biggest difference. But how can you say you're a new breed when your own proposal says I want to spend $150 billion more in taxes, tax $150 billion more and spend $220. And that's before the tax that would have to come from this health care plan. So we've got these differences. But I, I've got to get them in focus, but I thought Barbara did a good job at that.

Mrs. Bush: I'm going to go home and write my resignation, put it on your desk and see if you take it.

President: Well. [Inaudible] resign. She wakes up in the middle of the night. Here's my side of this.

Mrs. Bush: Who did I tell you got me up at 4:30 --

NBC's Katie Couric: -- at 4 a.m. and she said she wasn't going to argue [inaudible] going outside.

President: -- Got to bed, I'm very tired, took a long trip yesterday, the equivalent of flying to Paris, and this kid, Millie, is up on my bed at about 3. That's not fair, Katie.

Couric: Before you go, before you go, we asked you about the debates, initially, Mr. President.

President: [Inaudible]

Couric: How about the upcoming debates, how crucial do you think they are --

President: -- You know you get asked, I remember getting asked this in 1984 when I had the honor of debating Geraldine Ferraro, you talk about a tough tension-city then, because that had a uniqueness to it in the history of American debates. I remember the same kind of tension in 88. I honestly don't know the answer to your question, because I don't think elections hinge on debates, particularly, but think they're important. I think they're important. I'm getting all ready, too, with ideas as to how to go after this proposal or that one or why my ideas for the economy are better, or world peace, you know. And it gives you a chance to get out what you really are. It's a little bit structured in the sense that it's hard to really develop policy, but I think by the time the three debates are over the definitions will be clear.

Couric: The single moderator might be more helpful tonight in terms of --

President: Maybe. Maybe. Maybe. We'll see how it goes. That will be interesting. [Inaudible] the next one, we'll have questions from the audience, and I've always liked that format. We have programs we've called "Ask George Bush," and all through the primaries way back in 1980 and 1988, and I think it's effective because I feel comfortable doing that. -more-

White House News SummaryTuesday, October 13, 1992 -- 2

President: Sometimes if I get on there with some of the more contentious interviewers, present company accepted, good ones, but not as contentious, why then, you get a little tense. That's human nature. But if you get questions from the audience, say, look, here's what I feel, then it's a lot better. You know, it's a lot easier to really --

Couric: Easier for you.

President: Yeah, easier for me. But that's not the way, I don't think, that every interviewer works. They want to make the news, they want to get the, you know, zinger on the 5 o'clock, 6 o'clock, 7 o'clock news. So they have to be a little more contentious. But from the audience, I think, it gives you a chance to expound better. So we'll see, I mean. But then when you have three people standing there, it's a little more complicated than anything I've ever been through.

Couric: Well, let's talk about that third person, Ross Perot.

President: I told you I was gonna be here for 30 seconds.

Couric: Well, I know, but aren't I great? I'm one of these less contentious reporters who can convince you to stick around --

President: Yes, but [inaudible] too penetrating.

Couric: -- talk with me -- so easy.

President: I know what one candidate said about you; blame it on Katie Couric. And I don't want to get in a fight with you.

Couric: No, that was, I was trying to prove my manhood. What do you think about Ross Perot?

President: I'm over here protesting, I'm over here protesting that I don't have a male dog on the program and you're taking the offense, here. You see, that's why I didn't want to come here in the first place.

Couric: A lot of people said that Ross Perot stole the show the other night. What did you think of his performance?

President: I thought he did well. I thought he did well.

Couric: That's it? "I thought he did well."?

President: Well, I mean, he had some good lines, you know, and he stood there in a feisty manner, and I think people like that.

Couric: Do you think he hurt you, because --

President: Well, I can't tell. I can't tell. I think our pros think it's the other way around, but it's gonna sort out after three rounds of these debates. But I can't tell about it. I mean, we know we know what the problem is; now what's the answer? And that's the big thing, and I think we've got the best answer.

White House News SummaryTuesday, October 13, 1992 -- 3

President continues: The Agenda for America's Renewal is sound economic policy, visionary in terms of what we have to do in terms of education, and so what I've got to do is what I thought Barbara did effectively. So we've got some big problems here, but don't overrepresent them. I mean, we're on, with interest rates down, inflation down, we're ready for movement. And don't ruin it by raising taxes and increasing spending. Or on the other hand, don't screech the economy to a halt by slapping a tax on Social Security and gutting the economic growth. I think I'm a, on this issue, kind of in between extremes. I do not want to tax and spend, and I don't want to cut the economy so fast that the train stops in the streets, on the tracks. We can't do that, and our policy, our program, is, I think, in between. It gets the deficit starting coming down but it doesn't stifle growth by raising taxes on people. Clinton, Gov. Clinton talks about infrastructure. We passed a $150 billion infrastructure highway bill. $150 billion, and he still wants to spend more. Take it from the taxpayer, spend more.

Courier: Has that highway bill affected unemployment?

President: I think it's starting to affect it. Unemployment's down for three months. But do you know what I hear on the television? Bad news for President Bush; job market shrinks. And it comes down the next month. Bad news for President Bush. I mean, come on. When unemployment goes down, that's good. That's good. And so it's starting down, and I think the highway program is helping. But it hasn't really -- you had 150 -- it hasn't really gotten out into the highway system yet. When it does, certainly create a lot of jobs.

Courier: Gov. Clinton had a fairly strong rebuttal to your charges of questioning his judgement and character about demonstrating overseas. He said that your father, Prescott Bush, during the McCarthy days stood up to McCarthy, and he said you really shouldn't question his patriotism. Will you continue to raise questions about his character?

President: Absolutely. Absolutely. I don't know whether the listeners agree with me. I simply do not understand. When Americans are in a prison camp in Hanoi, and Americans are dying in the battlefield, a lot of kids drafted, didn't have any connections to get out of the draft, I cannot understand an American citizen organizing demonstrations in a foreign land. And I think it's an issue. And I think it isn't to do about patriotism. He talked about my father? My father served his country. And my father believed in duty, honor and country. And I, like my father, do not like McCarthyism. And this isn't McCarthyism. He ought to come clean on the draft, Katie. I mean, a lot of kids ducked the draft. A lot of them went someplace. Some of them went to Canada. But they didn't try to have it both ways, protect the political viability and then tell different stories about it. And I just don't think that's right. We didn't get into the draft in this debate. But I think it's an issue. Now, a lot of the Clinton supporters, oh, no, a lot of kids had trouble with the war. They did, but when you're president you can't take one story and then phase it out.

White House News SummaryTuesday, October 13, 1992 -- 4

President: He said -- maybe it was on your program; I don't know -- that on April 17th, we'll bring out all the records; I will give all the records on the draft. And I think he ought to do that. I think that's an issue. But it's not an issue of patriotism; it is an issue of character.

Couric: This wasn't --

President: Telling the truth is the question.

Couric: This wasn't a strategy cooked up by some of the more conservative members of Congress?

President: No. I'll tell you, some conservative members of Congress came to see me, but it was not a strategy cooked up by them. Barbara can tell you I've felt this way for a long time. But I'll tell you who made the most impression on me of that group: Congressman Sam Johnson. Does that name ring a bell? Probably not. Do you know where he was when Gov. Clinton was organizing demonstrations, organizing them against the U.S.? In the Hanoi prison. And I don't know, Bar put it well today here. We looked out, we can look out that door, there's probably a handful of people, some handful of people out there right now demonstrating, and I understand that. You had a bunch of AIDS people circle this building yesterday or the day before, and I can understand that. I cannot understand going to a foreign land and organizing demonstrations, and at the same time, at the same time not leveling with the -- now, years later, but now -- not leveling with the American people on the draft.

Couric: -- in your Inaugural Address four years ago, you said the American people can no longer be, to paraphrase, torn apart by Vietnam.

President: Exactly.

Couric: This seems to contradict that vow.

President: No. Desert Storm put Vietnam's shame to rest. What happened in Desert Storm, it was amazing. The country came together, and not only did they salute the heroes of Desert Storm but they saluted the veterans of Vietnam, those who had been humiliated, those who had been taught by demonstrators that their mission was immoral. You see, I don't think it was immoral. What I think was immoral is to send a young kid to fight in Vietnam, a draftee in to fight in Vietnam, and tie his hands behind his back by not winning. And in Desert Storm, said to Norm Schwarzkopf and his -- hey, we're gonna win this war, and we're not gonna start it until you assure me we're gonna win it. It's like I feel in Yugoslavia. And so we did it, and that lifted the Vietnam Syndrome. But I don't think it's a question necessarily of Vietnam. I think if a person stands up and says, look, I was against it, period -- but to have it both ways, to try to protect your political viability, I think that's an issue.

Couric: You don't think someone can love their country and not serve in the Vietnam War.

-More-

White House News SummaryTuesday, October 13, 1992 -- 5

President: Yes, I do think that. Yes, I do. I think somebody can love his country, and that's what, you see, you see this where you get into somebody's patriotism. I am not questioning patriotism. I am not questioning patriotism. I am questioning character and judgement. And all I'm saying is, level with the American people. Level. Tell the truth. You said you'd bring out the records on April 17th, and they're not there. And I don't know, you know, I do believe in service to country. I really believe in it. And it shaped my life, my own experience, and I think in one aspect of my job I'm better because of that. And that is being commander-in-chief of the armed forces. It's awful, Katie, when you have to send somebody else's kid in to fight. It is a terrible decision. Barbara can tell you that. We sat up there at Camp David knowing that in a day or two, we were gonna send these airmen into battle. And I knew what the general said, and I was saying, are they right? Are they sure what, when they tell me that we can do this in a low risk? And yes, they proved to be right. My decisions that I had to make on Desert Storm were tempered by having served my country. I don't think that's essential. I don't think you have had to serve. I do think you have to level, though. I think I would be diminished as a president if I didn't level with the American people.

Courier: On the flip side, some observers, some Democrats say that you have not leveled about your knowledge of Iran-contra.

President: Glad you asked that, and I knew you would. You know how many questions we've answered on Iran-contra? Take a guess. You're not the -- I'm the interview -- I remember you told Barbara off a minute ago. But 4,000. Four hundred and fifty by me, some under oath, some to the news media; 3,500 questions by staff. And to bring this up in a desperate attempt to level it with the failure to tell the truth on the draft, I'm sorry, I think they're totally different. So there it is.

Courier: But those questions were asked, Mr. President, were they not, prior to Casper Weinberger and George Shultz coming forward and talking about your knowledge --

President: Well, what's the [inaudible] this might be a good chance to ask me the question you want to ask. Which is it?

Courier: Do you have any knowledge of the Iran-contra arms-for-hostages deal while you were in office as Vice President?

President: [inaudible] 450 times under oath, some of them, and our staff 3,500, yes. But nobody's accused me of not doing -- in terms of the contra part of it, absolutely not. And no one has suggested I did. Diversion of arms for support to the contras, no. And no one's challenged that. What was challenged, I think, I'll help you with the question --

Courier: Oh, thank you, Mr. President.

President: Well, look --

Courier: Go ahead. No, no, no, no. I want you to go ahead.

President: No knowledge. Not that I know about.

Couric: Well, I can see that you're making a move toward the Oval Office. Mr. President, thank you very much. What do you expect to hear in tonight's vice presidential debate before you go?

Mrs. Bush laughs.

President: What time do we break for the hour, here? I'd like to be on for another half-hour.

Couric: We've got 15 more minutes, if you'd like to stay with us.

President: I'd like another segment, here.

Couric: What are you expecting?

President: I think Dan Quayle -- I love these polls. 92% of the people or 83% think Gore will be the winner, 16 Quayle. He'll do fine. He has taken a real pounding out there. And just so grossly unfair. You remember the pounding he took on going into the National Guard? I do. He served his country. And, oh, the terrible pounding he got for influence, which was not true, going into the Guard, and now we have the guy running for president who wanted to stay out of everything. And we've got to look back, it was 20 years ago, we've got to heal the wounds. Come on, let's have some fairness. Dan Quayle will do great in this debate.

Mrs. Bush: Come on, we've gotta go.

Couric: Thank you for so much for talking -- thank you again. Mr. President, won't you join us next week -- any chance?

President: Maybe.

Couric: Nothing like a live request.

President: Well.

Couric: Would you join us next week?

President: Let me think about it. You're what I call a very fair interviewer. You know what a fair is versus an unfair? You give the guy a chance to answer the question. Some, this is an analysis, you didn't ask for this, but I'll give it to you, an analysis of your profession. Some have what I think we call in the trade curveballs, they're pejorative, they know where they want to come out and they're determined to get the interviewee, whether it's the president or anybody else, to come out there. I'm not saying this gratuitously, they may edit this up here --

Couric: No, fortunately we're on live television, so please say whatever you'd like.

President: No, but what I say is -- no, but I think when you answer question you at least let me listen, without interrupt, how can you equate this with that and that.

President: Would you really? Would you? Just you and me alone in these blue chairs here?

Couric: Sure.

President: Let me think about it.

Couric: All right.

President: I've enjoyed this very much.

Couric: Mrs. Bush, make sure he thinks about it. I'll call you this afternoon.

Mrs. Bush: [inaudible] Marlin...

Couric: Marlin's probably pulling what hair he has left out. President Bush, thanks again.

This package is from Joseph Jennings who is just an incredible Black guy who loves the President. He's basically a former thug who is for Christ and now speaks about his experience with great success in high-schools across the country. Often he speaks in tandem with John Guest or others. I have not looked inside but basically he just wanted to encourage the President.

Dear Mr President,

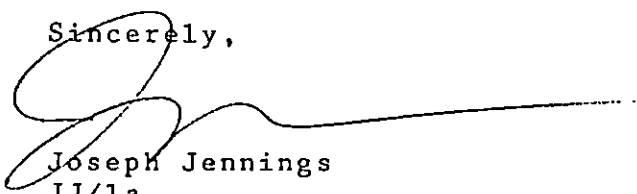

My name is Joseph Jennings and I am endeavoring to serve the children of our country as a national anti-drug/anti-gang speaker. I am a forty-two year old product of America's inner cities and have never even voted for a presidential candidate. All my life I wanted a part of the "American Dream" which for me became a nightmare because of drugs and gangs (I have enclosed a book that shares my story).

Even though much more needs to be done, I have appreciated the effort you have shown in trying to address the drug, crime, and gang issues. Even before my conversation with your nephew, James, I felt I should commit to vote for you this November. My hope is that four more years will help you cut through some of the bureaucratic red tape that mummifies Washington and make significant progress in this war for our youth.

I spend a great deal of time with inner city schools and churches around the nation (I was recently at your back door at Washington's Ward Eight District) and feel that I understand the needs, perceptions, and expectations of the people who live there. After discussing it with James, I felt you would be interested in the trends I am seeing along with the success we are having. (The packet I have enclosed will give you an idea of how well we have been received around the nation.)

I would love to meet with you. Please respond.

Sincerely,

Joseph Jennings

BUSH: NO TIME FOR NOVICES

SPRINGFIELD -- President Bush charged out of the first presidential debate Monday, hammering Bill Clinton for a lack of experience in foreign affairs and warning: "Do not take a risk on America's future."

In a speech studded with attacks on Clinton, Bush said Clinton was not up to the job of president.

"Governor Clinton has absolutely no experience in international matters and I am the president who has led the world," the President said.

Clearly energized and with his popular wife Barbara at his side, Bush nearly screeched as he hammered at the Democrat for what he called a woeful 12 years as governor of Arkansas.

And in launching one of his most direct attacks on Clinton's lack of foreign policy expertise, Bush declared: "This is no time to hand the wheel to a novice. America needs a driver that knows the highway. Do not take a risk on America's future." (UPI)

BUSH CAMPAIGNS IN PENNSYLVANIA

PHILADELPHIA -- The morning after, Bill Clinton raced through Philadelphia in a virtual victory lap. He checked out such institutions as Mary Mason, the Market-Frankford and El and Geno's Steaks -- with time out for some heavy-hitting military endorsements.

The morning after, President Bush bounded into Springfield, Delaware County. He basked in the support of volunteer firefighters, charged up a suburban crowd with his vision of a safer, Clinton-less, world -- and made public plans for a staff shakeup.

Clinton and Bush both chose southeastern Pennsylvania for showcase events Monday after jousting with Ross Perot, and each other, in the first presidential debate Sunday in St. Louis.

And on a day of boilerplate speeches and friendly crowds, both men made real news:

Bush, in a memorandum released as he campaigned in Springfield, asked for the resignations of his Cabinet and other top officials immediately after the Nov. 3 election, a step that meant he would replace all his top economic advisers for his second term, according to aides.

NATIONAL NEWS

BUSH PLANS SHAKEUP OF ECONOMIC TEAM IF RE-ELECTED

SPRINGFIELD -- President Bush will ask for resignations from his Cabinet and other top Administration officials if re-elected and would completely remake his economic team in a second term, aides said Monday. The announcements came as Bush sought new ways to invigorate a stalled campaign that appeared to get little benefit from the leadoff presidential debate.... The day after the first debate, Bush focused on economic themes. He said Bill Clinton's economic plan was "worse than Mondale, worse than Dukakis."

"We're part of a global economy," Bush said at a rally in this Philadelphia suburb. "This is not time to hand the wheel to a novice."

Bush Plans Shake-Up Of His Economic Team

HOLLAND -- President Bush's main stop in Michigan on Monday was an exuberant rally at Hope College, where he addressed more than 10,000 jubilant supporters who didn't seem to mind their one-hour wait. But the upbeat campaign appearance was overshadowed by the White House's promise on Monday that the President, if re-elected, would shake-up his Cabinet. Aides said Bush would follow through by having James Baker oversee a major revamping of Bush's economic team. "Boskin, Darman and Brady absolutely will not be in those jobs in a second term," a senior Administration official said. "There will be a new economic team," said another senior official, speaking anonymously. The White House later released a memorandum from Baker, telling all presidential appointees to prepare to submit letters of resignation "immediately following the election." Bill Clinton derided the move: "Sounds like they've had a losing season, and the coach wants to fire the team. In America, when you have a losing season, the coach gets fired, not the team."
(Dawson Bell, Ellen Warren and Katharine Seelye, Detroit Free Press)

Bush Pledges Change In Economic Team

President Bush Monday promised a new economic team for his second term as his aides expressed hope that Ross Perot's strong showing in Sunday night's debate will slow Bill Clinton's momentum three weeks before Election Day. On the morning after the first of three scheduled televised encounters, Clinton showed some uncertainty about how to handle the reemergence of the Perot challenge, first criticizing Perot and then backing off. But aides insisted he would not change tactics or shift his focus from Bush.... Bush aides acknowledged the President had failed to throw a knockout punch at Clinton Sunday night and Bush tried again to demonstrate that his reelection would lead to the economic policy changes voters apparently want, by elaborating on the announcement he made in Sunday's debate that James Baker would take charge of domestic policy in a second term. Officials traveling with Bush in Pennsylvania and Michigan and others in Washington said he has asked Baker to assemble a new economic team, a second-term package of economic measures and a new political support group to get it passed.

Bush Ready To Jettison Advisers To Save Himself Politically

HOLLAND -- In a puzzling political maneuver that conjures an image of people being thrown from a sinking ship, President Bush is making it clear that his top economic planners will be replaced if he wins a second term. The problem is that he said as much once before -- at the Republican convention -- and it did nothing to help his sagging political fortunes. He also jettisoned Secretary Derwinski to appease veterans' groups last month, and that move brought him little but criticism that he was putting political self-interest above all else. The promised shake-up diverted attention from a series of Bush campaign events in Pennsylvania and Michigan that drew large friendly crowds.... Secretary Brady said Monday he would not wait to be pushed, but would leave the Administration voluntarily. "I came for four years and I have no intention of staying longer than four years," he told a news conference. (Gene Gibbons, Reuter)

PREVIEW OF BUSH'S SECOND TERM

PHILADELPHIA -- President Bush's embattled economic troika would be dumped and James Baker named to manage domestic and fiscal affairs in a second Bush Administration, officials said Monday.

Bush's decision to concede failures by his own financial advisers and let Baker work the magic that served well in foreign crises is a sharp reversal from the Bush policy of laying blame for bad times on Congress and global recession.

Asked why Bush hadn't taken action sooner, a senior Administration official said: "He can't do it now. Clinton would say it was a sign of panic." (Frank Murray, Washington Times, A1)

BUSH MAKES BID TO BUILD BUSINESS CONFIDENCE

President Bush is promising to overhaul economic policymaking in his second term in an apparent bid to convince a gloomy business sector he is serious about putting people to work, fast....

Rep. Weber, who asked Bush to ditch his economic advisers, praised the shake-up. "It's not that Bush has problems with his agenda; it's that people don't believe he has any chance of implementing it," Weber said. "Saying personnel is going to change means Bush is going to commit himself to doing it."

(Jessica Lee, USA Today, 8A)

BAKER AS 'ECONOMIC COORDINATOR' DRAWS MIXED REVIEWS

President Bush's decision to make James Baker his domestic "economic coordinator" if he wins a second term has drawn mixed reviews from those who recall Baker's performance as Treasury Secretary during President Reagan's second term. Although Baker's supporters say he energized international coordination on economic issues and helped win approval of the 1986 tax reform act, critics say he swept the deepening savings and loan mess under the rug and failed to win backing for policies strong enough to stop the steady rise in the federal budget deficit. "Baker's not a panacea for domestic economic problems. A lot of them occurred on his watch," said Robert Hormats, vice chairman of Goldman Sachs International and a supporter of Bill Clinton.

BUSH'S BURDEN
Economic Troubles Overwhelm His Effort,
Making New Moves Seem Just Expedient

Instead of giving President Bush the forward motion he needed so badly for his campaign, the first of three presidential debates became a showcase for his political problems. The debate made especially clear what a crushing burden the economy has become for this president who courts country singers to display his common touch, but seems unable to make voters trust his instincts on bread-and-butter issues. White House strategists felt that Bush needed to use the debate to instill confidence that his second term would be better than his first on domestic policy. But the President's presentation was not built around any ambitious agenda, and his tactical moves have lent the campaign a floundering, discouraged air. Monday, the White House was publicly searching for gestures that would lend a sense of action to Bush's campaign.

James Baker sent a letter to Cabinet members, agency heads and senior Administration appointees, asking for letters of resignation dated for Election Day. The letter seemed designed to deliver a message that Bush did not stress in the debate: that a second term would be dramatically different. The appearance of floundering was reinforced during the debate when Bush blurted out that he planned to make Baker the domestic policy overlord in a second term -- an idea that had been kicking around since the convention and had not been completed until the last few days.

BUSH: HOPES 3-WAY RACE TURNS HIS WAY

HOLLAND -- President Bush's campaign believes a Ross Perot comeback could help Bush beat Bill Clinton on Election Day.

"A three-way race tends to make it more volatile; the moment of decision-making is much later," Robert Teeter told reporters Monday. "And if you open up another possibility and Perot does well, I think it opens up more people to reconsider who they're going to vote for." If enough of Perot's support comes from Clinton and if Bush makes some gains in the final two debates, Bush could halve Clinton's poll lead this week, Teeter said.

"And then I think you gain that much and you've got a pretty good run for the last couple of weeks." (Judy Keen, USA Today, 4A)

PAST ANOTHER 'TURNING POINT,' TIME RUNNING OUT

One month ago, Bill Clinton's record as a "tax-and-spender" was going to turn the election President Bush's way. When that fell flat, Republican hopes turned to Clinton and the military draft. Then it was Clinton's trip to Moscow and anti-Vietnam War demonstrations 23 years ago. And most recently, the election's turning point was going to be Sunday night's debate, when voters finally would size up Clinton and Bush. As Bush's aides threw up a fistful of new straws to grasp at Monday -- Ross Perot will shake things up, voters will rally around Bush's promise to turn out his economic team -- their prospects seemed bleak as the days, and lines of attack, grow short.

(Adam Nagourney, USA Today, 4A)

MANY KEY ISSUES YET TO BE COVERED IN THREE REMAINING DEBATES

For all the points the three presidential candidates managed to make during Sunday's debate, they merely scratched the surface of the country's concerns and problems. And all three camps have their ideas about what the next debate ought to be about....

For Clinton's camp, there can't be too much time spent on the economy. "A further discussion of the economy will further undermine Bush's case," said Bruce Reed, Clinton's deputy campaign manager for issues. "Last night's format didn't make that easy. But with a moderator and an audience, there will be no place for Bush to hide."

Linda DiVall, a Republican pollster, argued that Clinton "dodged the bullet twice" on taxes, and that Bush needs to move the discussion more toward the specifics of Clinton's economic proposals.

"For Bush, the change in tactics has to be to take every opportunity to spell out very clearly and specifically what the differences are...and to spell out how Clinton has tried to have it both ways and to focus more on taxes," she said.

(E.J. Dionne, Washington Post, A10)

RINGSIDE SCORERS AND SPINNERSPundits, Press Favor Pugilistic Metaphors In Analyzing Debate

The pundits at ringside scored the bout this way: Bill Clinton won on points, President Bush failed to deliver a knockout blow and Ross Perot could have been a contender....

The media debate that follows a presidential debate often shapes perceptions of who "won" and "lost," although academics say it is silly to frame the question that way because debates change few voters' minds. Still, there was an immediate consensus among the opinion-mongers that the President did not help himself in the three-way faceoff.

(Howard Kurtz, Washington Post, A10)

IN NORTH CAROLINA, RACIALLY CODED'WEDGE ISSUES' NO LONGER DOMINATE

RALEIGH -- ...The racially coded issues that have worked so well here in the past have either been blunted -- or left unused -- in most of the top races this year....

Democrats are taking nothing for granted. Bob Geolas, who is running the Clinton-Gore campaign in the state, said, "I'm amazed at how quite and passive they (the Republicans) have been. I keep expecting the wedge issues -- but it hasn't happened."

To hear Republicans tell it, President Bush has been foreclosed on that front, partly by his actions, partly by Bill Clinton's deftness and partly by circumstances beyond his control.

The "racial quota law" that Sen. Helms used so effectively against Harvey Gantt in 1990 was vetoed by Bush that year, then signed into law -- virtually unchanged -- by Bush in 1991. When he signed it, Bush told the country it was "not a quota bill."

Charles Black said, "The quota issue disappeared the minute Bush signed that bill.... We don't bring it up anymore, so it's not on people's minds."

(David Broder, Washington Post, A12)

DAILY TRACKING POLL

The USA Today daily tracking poll has Bill Clinton at 50%, President Bush at 33% and Ross Perot at 11%.

("Election '92," USA Today, 5A)

FAR AND WIDE, CANDIDATES CLING TO CLINTON; RUN FROM BUSH

PHILADELPHIA -- Senate candidate Lynn Yeakel weaved through the bedlam at a Philadelphia subway station, straining to get near Bill Clinton amid the packed mass of cameras and potential voters.

Democratic candidates for governor and Congress around the country are doing what Yeakel did on Monday -- making sure they're front and center when Clinton comes to town, hoping that being tied to him will translate into votes down the ticket.

On the flip side, a number of prominent Republicans are distancing themselves from President Bush out of fear a backlash at the Republican Administration will hurt their own bids.

In the Pennsylvania Senate race, Sen. Specter, for instance, frequently boasts about his many votes against the Bush Administration.

Even in Kansas, Sen. Dole is running an ad that touts his independence and features two prominent Democrats praising his leadership.

(Karen Ball, AP)

CLINTON PICKS UP BACKING OF MILITARY LEADERS

PHILADELPHIA -- Bill Clinton, whose credentials as a potential commander in chief have come under fire from President Bush, picked up the backing Monday of former military leaders who praised the Democrat's "vision for our country's future."

"Those gathered here today collectively have hundreds of years of military service," Clinton said, flanked by the retired generals and admirals, many of them decorated war heroes.

"I look forward to working with them...to make sure we have the strongest military we need," Clinton said.

"The election is primarily about the future of our country," the military leaders said in a statement. "The national security of this nation depends, first and foremost, on its domestic strength."

Clinton, appearing later in Delaware, said the military leaders' endorsement was "a stern rebuke to the rhetoric of the other side."

"They said, 'We believe that patriotism is not the private property of the Bush Administration,'" Clinton said.

The retired officials included Army Lt. Gen. Calvin Waller, Vice Adm. Truly, Adm. Stansfield Turner, and Gen. Mike Dugan.

"In our view, a commander in chief needs sound judgement, a strong sense of purpose, a clear understanding of national defense and a vision for our country's future," the statement said. "Bill Clinton has those qualifications to be commander in chief."

(Karen Ball, AP)

THE CLINTON PLAN: IT'S FALLING INTO PLACE

PHILADELPHIA -- Like a carefully drawn blueprint, the lines of Bill Clinton's strategy for becoming president are taking shape.

The day after his debate with President Bush and Ross Perot, Clinton did two things his campaign felt he needed to do: He got an unequivocal endorsement from ex-military leaders, who said he's what the country needs, and he walked among black voters in a downtrodden neighborhood to counter the suggestion that he has ignored traditional Democratic strongholds.

The day was vintage Clinton.

He was eager to see the glow and excitement in the eyes of ordinary citizens that he says sustains him. He wanted to see for himself that his instinct was right. He felt he won Sunday night's encounter hands-down, and he wanted the reassurance of friendly folks that he did.

Clinton got the feedback he wanted from his warm crowds Monday.

Aide Paul Begala assured reporters that Clinton is much better with real people than Bush is.

Obviously, Bush's aides don't agree, but they admit that Clinton is superb at "walking the walk and talking the talk."

(Ann McFeatters, Scripps Howard)

PEROT'S SURGE CALLED TOO LATE

Pullout Seen As Fatal Error

Although Ross Perot has shown he can do many things, like stealing the show at Sunday's debate, he is unlikely to make either President Bush or Bill Clinton an also-ran on Nov. 3.

That's the conclusion of several analysts. These analysts betrayed exasperation over Bush's passionless performance and issue-hopping strategy.

"Perot doesn't have to make Bush an also-ran. Bush has done a pretty good job of doing that to himself," said Lyn Nofziger.

The Bush camp does not buy that, of course.

"It's not possible for Perot and Clinton to make this a two-man race," said Charles Black. "Perot has attracted some interest for a few days during the debates, but voters will in the end understand that it is a Clinton-Bush race."

Mason-Dixon Poll president Brad Coker says his figures are poised to project an overwhelming Clinton margin. Coker, who has awarded Clinton 300 electoral votes based on state-by-state surveys, says another 130 electoral votes seem about to fall into the Clinton column, depending upon the next two debates.

"Clinton could be looking at a 400-plus electoral majority," Coker said.

PEROT SAID TO PLAN AMBITIOUS PRIME-TIME TV APPEARANCES

DALLAS -- Ross Perot...plans to present his proposals for the country's economic woes on prime-time TV Friday.

Perot campaign sources said Monday Perot will feature his first in-depth discussion of his proposed solutions.

Perot will air a 30-minute paid advertisement at 10:30 p.m. EDT Friday on NBC, a campaign statement said in Dallas.

Perot has also purchased one hour of air time at 8 p.m. EDT Saturday on ABC, the statement said.

Perot aides would not discuss what Perot plans to do in the 60-minute slot. But campaign sources told Reuters he was considering an "electronic town meeting" in which a panel of economists and Perot would answer questions from people who call a toll-free number. (Mike Clancy, Reuter)

QUAYLE COULD SURPRISE HIS CRITICS

Going into tonight's debate in Atlanta, expectations for Vice President Quayle are at rock bottom.

Despite nearly four years of sitting a heartbeat away from the presidency, and more media attention than any previous holder of his job, he hasn't convinced most voters he belongs in the political big leagues.

A new USA Today/CNN/Gallup poll finds nearly two in three voters have an unfavorable view of Quayle. And by a 3-1 ratio they figure Al Gore will eat Quayle's lunch in the face-off.

MANY OF COMPETITIVENESS COUNCIL'S BENEFICIARIES ARE FIRMS THAT MAKE BIG DONATIONS TO THE GOP

When Big Oil had a big problem with proposed regulations on used motor and lubricating oil, it called on its friends on the Competitiveness Council. The result: Within six months, the Administration released weak rules that pleased the industry and enraged environmentalists.

Many of those who seek the council's help also supply the GOP with large contributions, many of them in the form of "soft money."

Critics say the combination of unrestricted corporate campaign money and the council's secret activities is a toxic one, creating at the very least the appearance of regulatory favors doled out to GOP contributors. "When you have open-ended campaign contributions and a back-door opening into the regulatory decision-making operation, you have a very corrupt system," charges Joan Claybrook, president of Public Citizen.

JUSTICE DEPARTMENT PROBING FBI CHIEF

The Justice Department is investigating FBI director Sessions for alleged ethics violations amide feuding over a politically sensitive case involving Iraq, sources said Monday.

The author of a forthcoming book about the FBI, Ronald Kessler, said the investigation began last summer after he detailed charges against Sessions in a letter seeking the FBI chief's comments for the book.

Sessions confirmed in a telephone interview Monday night that an inquiry had begun, but declined further comment. "I can confirm that there is an inquiry but beyond that I cannot comment," he told Reuters.

ABC News said investigators were checking the travel records of Sessions and his wife, Alice, to see whether government cars, aircraft and personnel "have been used for private purposes."

ABC said sources friendly to Sessions were accusing the Justice Department of using the ethics probe to force him out for resisting "Bush Administration efforts to politicize the FBI."

U.S., E.C. FAIL TO AGREE ON TRADE PACT Farm-Subsidy Debate Blocks GATT Deal

BRUSSELS -- The U.S. and the E.C. failed Monday to bridge their differences in global trade talks, dashing hopes for a dramatic breakthrough that could bolster the world economy before the U.S. presidential election three weeks from now.

Senior U.S. and European trade officials concluded two days of intense bargaining without any accord on how to deal with farm subsidies.

Officials on both sides said chances of an imminent deal had been shattered by France's adamant opposition to further concessions on the agriculture issue.

KUWAITIS WILL BUY TANKS MADE IN U.S. Bush Pressed Hard For Deal Worth Thousands Of Jobs

Kuwait has agreed to buy 236 advanced battle tanks built in Michigan and Ohio, instead of British-made tanks, after President Bush, Vice President Quayle and Secretary Cheney personally intervened with the Kuwaiti royal family, Administration officials said Monday.

The sale could be worth about $4 billion, according to a Pentagon official.

The extraordinary lobbying effort by high White House and Administration officials will help the tank's manufacturer, General Dynamics, preserve 5,900 jobs, at least to the end of the decade, in two hotly contested states in this year's presidential race.

U.S. Tank Is Chosen By Kuwait

Making a choice between two staunch allies during the Gulf War, the government of Kuwait has decided to buy the American M1-A2 tank over a British rival....

IRAQI OPPOSITION FIGURE URGES INTERNAL RESISTANCE
Shiite Says Change Must Come From Inside

TEHRAN -- Bakr Hakim, head of the Supreme Council of the Islamic Revolution in Iraq and a key Shiite opposition figure, has outlined a strategy for change of rule within Iraq that relies on a broad-based internal resistance rather than a military coup against Saddam or attempts to negotiate autonomy with his regime.

Hakim discussed the approach in an interview at his headquarters in Tehran last week after returning from a meeting in Irbil, in Kurdish-populated northern Iraq, of all Iraqi opposition groups, and said it was supported by a wide spectrum of groups who form the nucleus of a government in exile.

The only means for change in Iraq, he said, is a "strong internal, popular jihad or resistance movement that will be properly administered and backed with launching points from neighboring countries, on condition that the Baghdad-run army be neutralized," possibly by peacefully winning it over to the side of the people, "so it does not enter into a confrontation between the people and the regime."

"All other strategies such as negotiations attempted by Kurdish leaders with Baghdad last year, or a military coup through contacts with officers close to the regime...have failed," he said.

MANILLA MAY LET SOME U.S. FORCES STAY

MANILA -- President Ramos said Monday that he was willing to accept the stationing of American troops in the Philippines even after the U.S. withdraws from its last major military base here.

The president's remarks, made in an interview, mean that the American military presence in the Philippines will not necessarily end next month, when the Navy is scheduled to lower the flag for a final time over the huge American naval base at Subic Bay. But it was unclear what kind of military presence was contemplated, or whether the U.S. would be interested in any proposal that could also satisfy the Philippine Senate.

"What would be good for the Philippines is a continuation of the friendship -- and of the mutual security arrangement -- with the U.S.," Ramos said in his most detailed comments to date on the future of military ties with the U.S. "We'd like to find a way to make that mutually agreeable to both governments, if that is part of what the U.S. wants."

ENVOYS TO HANOI DOUBT VIETNAM HOLDS U.S. MIAs

HANOI -- Senior foreign diplomats and Western aid workers in Hanoi have dismissed American rumors that Vietnam still holds U.S. servicemen missing from the war and have urged Washington to make peace with its old enemy.

Reuters and the BBC canvassed the 37 embassies and about two dozen aid agencies in the Vietnamese capital on the MIA issue.

CAMPAIGN/DEBATE

ABC's Peter Jennings: If you watched the presidential debate last night -- and 60 percent of people watching television did -- you already have a feel for which of the candidates ended up with an advantage. We begin tonight by filling in some of the blanks, namely what effect the debate might have on the presidential race overall. It was widely perceived before the debate that President Bush, who's been stuck down under in the polls for a long time, would have to seriously damage Gov. Clinton. Our polling unit discovered that at least eight out of 10 voters who watched last night say that nothing happened that would cause them to change their minds, even though many were impressed with Ross Perot.

ABC's Jeff Greenfield reports all three candidates came to St. Louis with a message.

(Gov. Clinton: "I represent real hope for change."... "I must challenge the American people to change."... "It's time to change."... "We have to change in this country.")

(President Bush: "I disagree with the tax-and-spend philosophy."... "But I do not want to go the tax-and-spend route, and a way to do better is not to tax and spend."... "I am going to protect the American taxpayer against this spend-and-tax Congress.")

But the story of the night was Ross Perot. His watchword last night may well have been, "Read my quips."

(Perot: "I don't have any experience in running up a $4 trillion debt."... "The party's over and it's time for the clean-up crew."... "If there's a fair way, I'm all ears.")

While his words were not new, they were vivid.

(Perot: "Now all these fellows with thousand-dollar suits and alligator shoes running up and down the halls of Congress that make policy now -- the lobbyists, the PAC guys, the foreign lobbyists and what have you -- they'll be over there in the Smithsonian, you know. We're going to get rid of them.")

Perot's performance overshadowed the one dramatic clash between Bush and Clinton.

(President Bush: "It's not a question of patriotism, it's a question of character and judgment. And I just find it impossible to understand how an American can demonstrate against his own country in a foreign land, organizing demonstrations against it, when young men are held prisoner in Hanoi or kids out of the ghetto were drafted.")

(Clinton: "When Joe McCarthy went around this country attacking people's patriotism, he was wrong. He was wrong, and a senator from Connecticut stood up to him, named Prescott Bush. Your father was right to stand up to Joe McCarthy. You were wrong to attack my patriotism.")

Greenfield continues:

That exchange defused the President's strength on foreign policy. (President Bush: "We're the United States of America. In spite of the economic problems, we're the most respected economy around the world. Many would trade for it. We've been caught up in a global slowdown. We can do much, much better. And we ought not try to convince the American people that America is a country that's coming apart at the seams.")

In the frenzy of post-debate self-promotion, Bush and Clinton backers all explained how Perot's performance would benefit their candidate.

(TV coverage: President Bush with Perot and Clinton after debate.)

(Gov. Ann Richards: "Well, you felt like Perot knew what the problems were. He was pretty sure he didn't know how to get them solved.")

(Secretary Martin: "But it was Perot and Bush, Bush and Perot, and Clinton was almost in an aside.")

In fact, first poll numbers suggest that while Perot gained, there was no change in the shape of the race.

That may be why the debate was particularly bad news for the President. All this year, event after event has been described as a defining moment for Bush, one that would put him back on track. Nothing has worked, and there are 22 days left. (ABC-Lead)

Jennings: Ross Perot disappeared from sight again today to tape some new campaign commercials. President Bush and Gov. Clinton followed the more tradition course: Get out, be seen and try to look like a winner. Both campaigned in the Philadelphia area.

ABC's Brit Hume: The President today went to the kinds of events and the kinds of places that have helped him and Ronald Reagan in campaigns past but have not provided much of a boost this year. In Pennsylvania, where he trails by as much as 20 points, he spoke at a firehouse in a blue-collar suburb of Philadelphia, then at a rally in the same community.

(TV coverage: President Bush holding horn at firehouse; acknowledging cheers at rally.)

There were no grand claims about his debate performance last night.

(President Bush: "I don't pretend to be an Oxford debater, but I think I did OK." [Applause])

The President's political advisers insisted with straight faces today that it's just fine with them that Ross Perot is the man everyone is talking about after last night. They claim that will cause people to reconsider their vote and thereby give Mr. Bush a chance to win them over.

Hume continues:

There was no indication, though, that the President has anything more dramatic in mind for the remaining debates than he displayed last night.

(TV coverage: President Bush at debate; speaking to James Baker; climbing steps to Air Force One.)

There was no indication either that chief of staff Baker, who left the President's side this morning as the President was leaving St. Louis, has anything dramatic in his mind either. Baker headed home to plan his role as the newly designated economic-policy chief for a Bush second term, if there is one. Presidential spokesman Fitzwater said there will be a new economic-policy team, presumably replacing the current trio of Michael Boskin, Secretary Brady and Richard Darman. But those three will on at least until January, despite criticism that they are the architects of a failed economic program. What may be most striking about this campaign at this stage is how desperate it isn't. The President took no major risks, threw no big punches in last night's debate, and apparently plans none for the remaining encounters. His campaign goes on much as before. It has succeeded so far in solidifying his position -- 10 or 15 points behind. (ABC-2)

Jennings reports the most partisan observation after the debate last night came from Gov. Ann Richards. Referring to President Bush, she said, "Stick a fork in him, he's done." No one in the Clinton camp was foolish enough to make a remark like that in public today, but there is no denying the fact that the Clinton people are very pleased.

ABC's Chris Bury reports Clinton, campaigning in south Philadelphia, likened himself to the city's fictional come-from-behind prize fighter.

(TV coverage: Clinton speaking to cheering crowd.)

(Clinton: "Every day that goes by, I feel a little more like Rocky Balboa." [Applause])

Clinton does not acknowledge in public what his top aides say: That the debate cemented his lead and all but cinched his election.

(Paul Begala, strategist: "The old saying, the opera ain't over 'til the fat lady sings. Last night, we saw her walking up to the microphone.")

Clinton's campaign had expected even harsher attacks on his patriotism and draft record, so it had prepared an endorsement today from a whole battery of retired admirals and generals. He found himself answering questions about Ross Perot.

(TV coverage: Clinton accepting endorsement from retired generals and admirals.)

(Clinton: "I thought he benefited last night from having come into the race having not been a part of the conflict the last few months, and having basically no expectations and an open mind.") Nonetheless, the Clinton camp says Perot helped them last night by criticizing the President's record. Perot also came to Clinton's defense when Bush attacked his anti-war activity. Clinton's aides say Perot probably can't get enough votes to threaten Clinton.

Clinton's aides do concede that Perot will change their strategy in some ways. His folksy and funny style was such a hit that Clinton, often stiff and serious last night, will try to relax and be more himself for Thursday's debate. (ABC-3)

-more-

Jennings reports more than 90 percent of the people who thought President Bush won the debate said they plan to vote for him; same for Gov. Clinton. But only 42 percent of the people who said Ross Perot won the debate plan to vote for him. (ABC-4)

CBS's Dan Rather: It was debated all around the country today: Who won the first face-to-face-to-face joint appearance by the presidential candidates? The Clinton, Bush and Perot camps are all claiming victory. But the most important question is, what do the voters think?

CBS's Mark Phillips reports on a debate party in a St. Louis suburb, where the participants rated the candidates' answers.

(TV coverage: President Bush with Perot and Clinton in debate.)

(Perot: "I don't have any experience in running up a $4 trillion debt.")

And there's no denying that Ross Perot's one-liners scored high. If the incumbent had to score big here, he didn't.

CBS News-New York Times Poll

Who won the debate?

PEROT.....33%

CLINTON.....30%

BUSH.....16%

(President Bush: "I mean, we've got big economic problems. But we are not coming apart at the seams.")

The President's glass-half-full view of the economy left many shaking their heads. His attack on Clinton's draft record may have produced the best drama of the debate.

(President Bush: "I think it's wrong to demonstrate against your own country or organize demonstrations against your own country in foreign soil.")

But the strategy may have backfired again last night.

(Clinton: "Your father was right to stand up to Joe McCarthy. You were wrong to attack my patriotism. I was opposed to the war, but I love my country.")

One brief exchange often sets the tone for public perception of what happened, and last night, this was it. Bush's announcement that James Baker would head up some sort of economic-team revisions seemed lost to viewers, as well. The Clinton approach was much more cautious.

(Clinton: "Then we would present a plan to control health-care costs.")

He also subtly countered the remaining public impression of him as something less than a complete family man.

(Clinton: "Tonight's my 17th wedding anniversary.")

And throughout the event, Perot provided sometimes thought-provoking, sometimes humorous relief.

(Perot: "If there's a fair way, I'm all ears.")

If the Republicans were looking for some movement at the beginning of this week, the movement was in exactly the wrong direction.

(CBS-Lead)

Rather reports other polls, including those by ABC, Newsweek and CNN-USA Today, leave President Bush with little to cheer about.

(CBS-2)

Rather: There's no evidence that winning an appearance at a joint presidential candidates' affair translates into votes. Even so, the candidates do care a lot about your perception, your impression of how they did, and they're doing their best to manipulate it -- in their words, spin it.

CBS's Susan Spencer: White House aides were mumbling privately today that for a man 10 points ahead in the polls, Mr. Bush did a great job last night. But he's 10 points behind. Frankly, he could have used a knockout, and he just didn't get it. So the effort today is to put, of course, the best spin on that. The overall mood is not particularly chipper. His aides today were predicting major changes in a future Bush Cabinet, should he be reelected, trying to get reporters to talk about that. They were talking, as Mark Phillips says, about this idea that Jim Baker would become an economic-policy czar in the next Bush term, should there be one. Even some Republicans were shaking their heads and saying that all sounded a little bit desperate. But the idea is to get voters to take a second look at this President, to persuade people that in fact he does have a strong economic agenda for the future, something they right now, according to most polls, don't really believe. In addition to all the positive message that the President will be trying to convey in the next few weeks, he also will be getting hard still on the negative. There is an absolute conviction in this campaign that the negative attacks Bill Clinton do work, that it is good to go after his character, that that will pay off. There are hints from the Vice President's office, in fact, that Mr. Quayle will do that heavily tomorrow night in his debate, in hopes that maybe he can break things open in a way that so far, Mr. Bush has not been able to do.

CBS's Bill Laguttuta reports Perot received a slight bump in the polls. Many people have said they like his message, but they don't trust him enough to vote for him. Whatever happens to Perot, it means bad news for President Bush.

CBS's Richard Threlkeld reports the Clinton campaign is not too disappointed in finishing second behind Perot in many polls. The feeling is, let Perot win the debates, we'll win the election.

(CBS-3)

NBC's Tom Brokaw: There is no one scorecard for determining who won or who lost last night, but a consensus does seem to be emerging. Ross Perot: the star of the night, apparently because no one knew what to expect. Bill Clinton: just good enough. And President Bush: He'll have to do much better. The question is, what next for all three?

NBC's John Cochran: The Bush people are getting very, very tired of hearing that the President did not hit a home run last night. They know it and they know he must now focus on what voters have focused on all year long -- the economy. Today, no more talk about Bill Clinton's youthful days as an anti-Vietnam protester. Instead, Bush was talking about experience.

(TV coverage: President Bush at rally.)

(President Bush: "Gov. Clinton has absolutely no experience in international matters.")

But voters appear to have little interest in international matters. So Bush's new pitch is that foreign policy creates jobs.

(President Bush: "And in my second term, we will fight for new agreements with the nations of Europe and Asia and Latin America. And just as we once used our military alliances to win the Cold War, we can use these economic alliances to win the new business war.")

And to try to appease his critics on the economy, Bush is making it known that in his second term, he would have a new economic team to replace Secretary Brady, Michael Boskin and Richard Darman, who urged Bush to go along with the tax increase that cost him so dearly in the polls. Last night, Bush said James Baker would head economic policy.

(TV coverage: President Bush with Perot and Clinton in debate.)

But today, a top aide told NBC News that Baker has promised only to put together an economic program. And after that, Baker could return to the job he really likes, secretary of state. First, though, Bush must get reelected, and Ross Perot's boffo performance last night complicates everything. The Bush camp hopes that Perot helps by taking some of the anti-Bush vote away from Bill Clinton. But Perot scared the Bush people when he was more critical about the President's record than about Clinton's anti-Vietnam protests.

(Perot: "When you're a senior official in the federal government, spending billions of dollars in taxpayers' money, and you're a mature individual and you make a mistake, then that was on our ticket. To make it as a young man, time passes.")

What Bush's aides fear is that Perot, who does not like Bush, will level an all-out attack on him before the debates are over.

(NBC-Lead)

NBC's Lisa Myers reports Ross Perot connected with voters and, in the eyes of some observers, established himself as a credible alternative to a couple of career politicians.

(Perot: "Well, they've got a point. I don't have any experience in running up a $4 trillion debt.")

On what he would do if elected:

(Perot: "Now all these fellows with thousand-dollar suits and alligator shoes running up and down the halls of Congress that make policy now -- the lobbyists, the PAC guys, the foreign lobbyists and what have you -- they'll be over there in the Smithsonian, you know. We're going to get rid of them.")

Myers continues:

Sometimes, he was funny by accident.

(Perot: "We've got to collect the taxes to do it. If there's a fair way, I'm all ears.")

All ears, but few solutions.

(Geoffrey Garrin, pollster: "The only thing that could make Ross Perot a really serious factor is if next Thursday or next Monday, Bill Clinton really hurts himself.") (NBC-2)

NBC's Andrea Mitchell reports Clinton and his aides are happy.

(TV coverage: Clinton at rally; speaking in debate.)

(Clinton: "And every day that goes by, I feel a little more like Rocky Balboa.")

Clinton challenged Bush at the outset of the debate, trying to avoid being too nasty. He feels that would turn off voters.

(Clinton: "Mr. Bush, for 12 years you've had it your way. You've had your chance and it didn't work. It's time to change.")

Another major objective: neutralizing Bush's attack on Clinton's patriotism and draft record. Today, he produced endorsements from 20 retired admirals and generals.

(TV coverage: Clinton accepting endorsements.)

Last night, he tried to shame Bush for what Clinton called McCarthyism.

(Clinton: "Your father was right to stand up to Joe McCarthy. You were wrong to attack my patriotism. I was opposed to the war, but I love my country.")

After a subway photo-op to west Philadelphia, Clinton found plenty of cheerleaders for his performance, except 14-year-old Leonard Duncan, who felt Clinton had not been tough enough with Bush.

(TV coverage: Clinton riding subway with aides.)

(Duncan: "He questioned your motives in Moscow, he questioned your motives in Vietnam, and now he's even questioning your motives to be president of the United States. Doesn't this bother you at all, Mr. Clinton?")

Clinton: "Not much.")

Clinton's strategy is to treat Perot with kid gloves. But in a radio interview today, he sounded irritated with Perot's resurgence.

(Clinton, on radio: "The press just let him alone. So I think he benefited from no scrutiny and a free ride.")

Later, he denied making the comment.

(Clinton: "That's the craziest thing I've ever said. That's not what I said. Y'all are just trying to make a story out of it.")

Clinton's advisers think Perot helps Clinton by criticizing Bush. But it would certainly be easier to protect Clinton's lead without Perot in the race. (NBC-3)

NBC's Bob Kur reports on the symphony of spin doctors, showing analysis by various media pundits. It was not good news for Bush, and there was a surprise.

(Cokie Roberts, ABC: "Let's call a spade a spade here. Ross Perot won this debate.")

Partisan politicians also hyped the candidates' performances. By morning, what had been last night's analysis had become conventional wisdom. With two more storms of media comment in the forecast, keep in mind that winning a debate and winning the election are two different things. (NBC-4)

Brokaw discusses the campaign with Cochran, Myers, Mitchell and NBC's Tim Russert.

Brokaw: Do the Bush people think they'll have to go after Ross Perot very directly in that next debate?

Cochran: Jim Baker has not shared his strategy with me. I'm getting hints that he's going to finally take the gloves off. For example, I am told that late this week, Jim Baker will give an economic speech. And he will say things in there that George Bush can't say. Well, one thing he could say is that: Look, I've been around two White Houses -- Ronald Reagan's, George Bush's. George Bush understands economic policy better than a governor from a small Southern state, better from a businessman who has no idea how government works. On top of that, in the debates, let's say the POW-MIA issue comes up and Ross Perot takes up the rubbish on that. Bush can say: Listen, Ross, you got in the way of efforts we were making during the Reagan Administration; we were doing everything we could to get those POWs out of there; just shut up, Ross. That's one way of going after it, and at this point, a lot of people in the White House think that's not a bad idea.

Brokaw: ...What issues do we need to get to in the next debate?

Russert: I think Bush will again resort to character, judgment, experience, and I wouldn't be surprised to see Bill Clinton counter that with Iraggate, Iran-contra and "Read my lips," three subjects we have not heard. But I also think the President is going to have move beyond simply firing his economic advisers or appointing Jim Baker to a key position. He's going to have to say: I hear you, I got your message, I'm going to be the economic czar, listen to me....

Brokaw: ...Will this go to the House of Representatives?

All: No.

(NBC-5)

Brokaw talks to three undecided voters about their reactions to the debate.

(NBC-6)

IRAQ/BNL LOANS

ABC's John McWethy reports not only does it appear that bank officials in Rome knew about loans to Iraq, but the Bush Administration may have also known early in the investigation. Deputy Attorney General George Terwilliger today said the FBI would be looking not only at the Justice Department, but also at the CIA. From his perspective, the CIA could have helped a lot more.

(Terwilliger): "We have been frustrated by the information coming out of the CIA in a rather episodic fashion. Clearly, we did not get all the information that they had when we originally asked for it, which was quite some time ago.")

The White House is trying desperately not to get dragged into the mud on this one. But with the Administration's own CIA and Justice Department bickering over who is to blame for making false statements to the court, it will be difficult for the President to stay above it all.

(ABC-6)

CBS's David Martin reports Sen. Boren suggested the Bush Administration might have been trying to avoid some unpleasant questions about its pre-war dealings with Iraq.

(Boren: "Was there knowledge of American officials about what was going on, or is there some tilting here in order to try to get more money to Iraq? What really was going on? And the surest way to prevent the whole picture from coming out was to try to pin it all on one isolated individual and pretend he was acting alone.") According to a Sept. 17 letter, the CIA had nothing more than press reports about the role of BNL officers in Rome. That, Boren said, is not true.

(Boren: "The facts were that there were many other documents in the possession of the intelligence community that didn't come from public sources, that came from intelligence sources and channels.")

FBI/SESSIONS INVESTIGATION

ABC's Sam Donaldson reports Justice Department investigators are looking into FBI Director William Sessions' travel records and those of his wife, Alice, to see whether government autos, airplanes and personnel have been used for private purposes. Investigators also are inquiring into a grab-bag of allegations that Alice Sessions has violated FBI procedures, such as in the use of her personal bureau building pass. Sources friendly to Sessions are accusing the Justice Department of trying to force him out, because he has tried to resist efforts by the Bush Administration to politicize the FBI.

BUDGET DEFICIT

IRAN/NUCLEAR WEAPONS

Rather reports there was an unconfirmed report today that Iran has closed a deal to buy nuclear warheads from Kazakhstan. The report comes from an Iranian opposition group.

CAMPAIGN/CLINTON OVERSEAS

Bush Peddles Rancid Redbait -- "President Bush implied that Bill Clinton...got mixed up with the KGB. Put a sock in it, Poppy. This is too much, even for you.... Clinton may be straddling the truth when it comes to his involvement in the anti-war movement.... But Bush's implication that to protest a war is to be unpatriotic...does violence to the spirit of the First Amendment. And to claim that Clinton was somehow involved with the KGB is a smear of the lowest, most desperate kind. If that's the best reason Bush can give the American people to vote for him, he might as well skip the debates and start packing his bags."

(New York Daily News, 10/9)

Bill Clinton And 1969 -- "We can't imagine that there's anything Bill Clinton did in 1969 that would affect our decision about whether or not to endorse him in 1992.... There's only one thing that might give ordinary people pause even at this late stage: a sense that the Arkansas governor isn't leveling with them.... Such is our tactical counsel to Bill Clinton: He has a large lead in the polls; and a few Americans are interested in revisiting the Vietnam War debate. The only thing that could cost him, at this point, would be a failure to come clean." (New York Post, 10/9)

A Poll's Advice To The President -- "Who is George Bush trying to impress with his endless harangue about Bill Clinton's draft record and opposition to the Vietnam War? The latest Star Tribune/WCCO-TV Minnesota Poll says it must not be Minnesotans. By big majorities, poll respondents said Clinton's draft record isn't important to their vote this fall.... If a poll could speak, the latest Minnesota Poll would say this to President Bush...: Please don't waste time questioning Clinton about his response 23 years ago to the tragic mistake of Vietnam. Please outline instead how you'll turn this nation toward economic health, and its people toward a better life." (Minneapolis Star Tribune, 10/9)

Smear Campaign -- "It is a measure of the desperation of the Republican campaign that Gov. Clinton is being accused.... There is not a shred of evidence that Mr. Clinton tried to become a citizen of another country, and the Democratic standard-bearer has unequivocally denied the Dornan charge.... President Bush's attacks on Mr. Clinton have grown shriller and more personal recently. It is hard to avoid the suspicion that the timing of Mr. Dornan's outrageous accusations is not a mere coincidence."

(St. Louis Post-Dispatch, 10/8)

Cheap Shot, Mr. President -- "There he goes again! Why, oh why, can't President Bush curb that nasty, political instinct to go for the cheap shot?... In 1988, Mr. Bush toured a flag factory and tried to sully his then-opponent Michael Dukakis. Mr. Clinton is no Dukakis, and the world has changed. The great powers are at peace, and Mr. Bush can claim some of the credit. What he cannot and should not claim is that those who want to refocus the nation are unpatriotic." (Miami Herald, 10/9)

SUBJECT

200TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE WHITE HOUSE

On Tuesday, October 13, 1992, Mrs. Bush will bury a time capsule to commemorate the 200th anniversary of the White House in the Southwest corner of the South Lawn at 6:00pm and then participate in a reception on the State Floor at 6:15pm. The reception will have approximately 500 people attending. According to the Social Office, time at the reception would only be about 15 minutes. She would give brief remarks and then work her way out, no formal greeting line would be in place.

I know the President had mentioned earlier that he was interested in participating in an event for the commemoration as well. Do you think he would like to do this event with Mrs. Bush? If so, they would change the remarks so that the President would make them in stead of Mrs. Bush and they would leave the reception together. //

Please let me know if he will do this and I will pass along the information to Susan Porter Rose and Laurie.

Thank you.

TIME: 11:20 a.m.

THROUGH: DAVID DEMAREST XX

I. PURPOSE

To sign H.R. 2448, the "Benjamin Franklin Memorial Fire Service Bill of Rights Act." To salute the nation's volunteer and paid firefighters for their sacrifice and commitment to America's neighborhoods.

II. BACKGROUND

Before Congress adjourned this week, both houses passed H.R. 2448, the "Benjamin Franklin Memorial Fire Service Bill of Rights Act." Introduced by Congressman Curt Weldon (R-PA), the bill authorizes the minting next year of 1.5 million silver medals to help fund several national fire service programs and the Franklin Institute of Philadelphia. Ben Franklin founded the nation's first fire station.

Specifically, proceeds would fund various fire training grants, college scholarships in fire science, burn injury research, arson prevention programs, and scholarships for children and spouses of firefighters and emergency medical personnel killed in duty.

The Bill of Rights component recognizes the nation's approximately 1.2 million volunteer and 300,000 paid firefighters as "our first responder to domestic emergencies" and states that firefighters deserve every protection from the dangers associated with emergency response.

Congressman Weldon, a former volunteer fire chief, is also the founder and chairman of the Congressional Fire Services Caucus, an informal bipartisan group of lawmakers backing fire and life safety. You addressed the caucus' first fund-raising dinner in 1989.

On October 11th the U.S. Fire Administrator hosted an annual ceremony at the National Fire Academy in nearby Emmitsburg, Maryland honoring the nation's firefighters killed in duty. Because of this, many national fire service leaders will also be in attendance at this event.

TALKING POINTS FOR PENNSYLVANIA VICTORY'92

-- THANK YOU FOR THAT WONDERFUL INTRODUCTION AND THANK YOU ALL FOR COMING TODAY. IT'S GREAT TO BE BACK IN PENNSYLVANIA.

-- BEFORE I BEGIN TODAY, I'D LIKE TO THANK MY SPECIAL FRIENDS CHARLES SEXTON AND CONGRESSMAN WELDON.

-- LAST NIGHT WAS THE START OF OUR FINAL PUSH TOWARD NOVEMBER 3. I THINK IT WAS SUCCESSFUL IN BOTH LAYING OUT MY PLAN FOR THE FUTURE AND DEFINING WHAT A CLINTON PRESIDENCY WOULD MEAN FOR THIS COUNTRY.

-- IF THE GOVERNOR THOUGHT LAST NIGHT WAS DIFFICULT, ALL I CAN SAY IS, MR. CLINTON YOU HAVEN'T SEEN ANYTHING YET. I CAN'T WAIT UNTIL NEXT THURSDAY IN RICHMOND AND SUNDAY IN MICHIGAN.

-- A FEW WEEKS AGO, I ANNOUNCED MY AGENDA FOR AMERICAN RENEWAL. IN IT WE HAVE CONFRONTED THE PROBLEMS THAT AMERICA FACES AND LAID OUT OUR PLANS FOR THE FUTURE.

--TO REMAIN COMPETITIVE WE MUST CONCENTRATE OUR EFFORTS ON LEADING EDGE PRODUCTS SUCH AS SUPERCOMPUTERS, THE MATERIALS OF TOMORROW, AND BIOTECHNOLOGY.

-- WE MUST BRING TOGETHER THE MANPOWER AND, MORE IMPORTANTLY, THE BRAIN POWER OF BUSINESS AND GOVERNMENT, UNIVERSITIES, AND FEDERAL LABS TO FACE THE CHALLENGES OF OUR FUTURE.

-- MY COMPREHENSIVE APPROACH TO WIN THE NEW GLOBAL ECONOMY IS BUILT ON LOWER TAXES, LOWER SPENDING, AND LESS REGULATIONS.

-- WE MUST WORK WITH THE PRIVATE SECTOR NOT REGULATE IT.

-- WE MUST PREPARE OUR CHILDREN TO COMPETE IN THE WORLD. OUR CURRENT SCHOOL SYSTEM IS NOT UP TO THE TASK. SCHOOL CHOICE - EDUCATIONAL COMPETITION- MUST DRIVE EDUCATION REFORM.

-- IF WE PREPARE OUR CHILDREN TO COMPETE, WE MUST ALSO ENSURE THAT THERE ARE JOBS FOR THEM. WE MUST FREE UP CAPITAL SO BUSINESSES CAN EXPAND. CUT AND INDEX THE CAPITAL GAINS TAX, CREATE ENTERPRISE ZONES AND MAKE THE R & D TAX CREDIT PERMANENT.

-- BUT WE CAN ALSO HELP BUSINESSES -AND THE AMERICAN WORKER- BY ELIMINATING EXCESSIVE REGULATIONS, SUPPORTING CIVILIAN R & D, AND REFORMING THE LEGAL SYSTEM. AMERICAN BUSINESS AND CONSUMERS SPEND UP TO $200 BILLION IN DIRECT COSTS TO LAWYERS. THIS TOO MUST CHANGE.

-- WE MUST NOT ONLY PROVIDE JOBS BUT PROMOTE THE ECONOMIC SECURITY FOR THE WORKING MEN AND WOMEN OF AMERICA. INCREASED JOB TRAINING WILL DEVELOP THE CAPABILITIES OF THE INDIVIDUAL AND LESSEN THEIR DEPENDENCY ON GOVERNMENT. MY HEALTH CARE REFORMS WILL GUARANTEE ACCESS- NOT CREATE YET ANOTHER BUREAUCRACY. PENSIONS MUST BE PORTABLE. THIS IS TRUE ECONOMIC SECURITY.

-- BUT WE MUST ALSO LOOK OUT FOR ONE ANOTHER. MY AGENDA WILL GIVE EVERY AMERICAN HIS OR HER SHOT AT THE AMERICAN DREAM THROUGH OWNERSHIP AND OPPORTUNITY. EMPOWERMENT AND FREEDOM FROM CRIME. DIGNITY AND SELF-RELIANCE.

-- BUT GOVERNMENT MUST ALSO CHANGE. THE DEFICIT MUST BE ELIMINATED BY A CAP ON MANDATORY SPENDING, A FREEZE ON ALL OTHER SPENDING, THE LINE ITEM VETO, A BALANCED BUDGET AMENDMENT AND A TAX CHECK OFF OF 10% TO REDUCE DEBT AND SPENDING.

-- I HAVE PLEDGED TO CUT THE WHITE HOUSE BUDGET BY ONE THIRD IF CONGRESS WILL DO LIKEWISE.

-- THROUGH THESE PLANS, WE WILL CREATE A $10 TRILLION ECONOMY. THIS IS WHAT THE AMERICAN PEOPLE WANT. THIS IS WHAT THE AMERICAN PEOPLE DESERVE.

-- THIS IS WHAT I WILL FIGHT FOR EACH AND EVERY DAY IN THE NEXT FOUR YEARS.

-- THANK YOU FOR ALL YOU ARE DOING. FOR YOUR HELP IN THIS CAMPAIGN. AND GOD BLESS AMERICA.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

THROUGH: HENSON MOORE

FROM: BOBBIE KILBERG
MARK FRANTZ

SUBJECT: PENNSYLVANIA (Springfield -- suburb of Philadelphia)

BR for HM

BK

[Handwritten signature]

I. Recent Correspondence

Kingston Township Manager Jeffrey Box urged you not to veto the cable TV re-regulation bill.

II. Discussion

A. Philadelphia Municipal City Workers Strike

At midnight on October 6th, the city's municipal workers went on strike. The strike lasted just 16 hours before an agreement was reached between Mayor Ed Rendell (D) and the unions. Rendell won significant concessions in the areas of health care and vacation/sick leave benefits, as well as eliminating the union's "no-layoff" clause and delaying a pay increase for two years. These concessions should be enough to keep the city solvent through the next fiscal year.

It is rumored that Governor Clinton is now avoiding Mayor Rendell because of union pressure.

B. US Air Strike

On Thursday, October 8th, US Air reached an agreement with the International Association of Machinists to end a four-day strike that had partially crippled the airline. US Air will resume full service on Monday, October 12th.

Details of the agreement have not been released yet but leaks to the press indicate that US Air management got a 8 percent wage reduction from the machinists, in return for increased job security assurances to the union.

The strike occurred over the union's disagreement with US Air's proposal that non-union mechanics be allowed to push planes from the gates and de-ice planes.

C. Special Session of the Legislature

On October 5th, the legislature began the special session that Governor Casey had ordered at the end of September. The House quickly took up the following issues but the Senate, though technically in session, has no immediate plans to follow-up:

Workers' Compensation

On October 8th, the Democratically-controlled House passed its version of a workers' compensation reform bill, primarily along party lines. The plan would require insurers to cut future rates by 10 percent, would cap medical fees at 117 percent of what Medicare pays for services, and would leave benefits unchanged.

The House bill is expected to die in the Republican-controlled Senate, which has passed its own plan. Governor Casey is currently negotiating with the bi-partisan leaders of the Senate plan in an effort to produce a bill that all parties can agree to.

Please note that insurance, business and medical interests have endorsed the bi-partisan Senate plan, while labor has praised the House plan.

Children's Health Care

On October 9th, the House overwhelmingly approved a children's health insurance bill. The measure creates a state-subsidized insurance plan for approximately 100,000 children under the age of 6, whose families do not have work-related coverage, are too poor to buy their own or do not qualify for Medicaid coverage. The plan will be funded by an existing, specifically dedicated, two-cent premium on cigarettes.

Please note that Republicans succeeded in passing an amendment which strictly limits funding of the program to the amount of revenue raised by the cigarette tax.

D. Unemployment Figures

Statewide (seasonally adjusted)

September 1992	7.6 percent
August 1992	8.2 percent
September 1991	7.2 percent

City of Philadelphia (non-seasonally adjusted)

July 1992	7.9 percent
June 1992	7.7 percent
July 1991	6.7 percent

E. Austin Avenue Superfund Site

Thirty homes in communities adjacent to Springfield have been contaminated by radiation from a processing warehouse that existed in the early 1920's. These homes were proposed for inclusion on the Superfund list in February of 1992.

Please note that a local newspaper recently quoted an unnamed EPA official as saying the Administration's moratorium on new regulations was holding up the homes being placed on the Superfund list. On October 1st, after reading the article, Congressman Curt Weldon (R-PA) expressed his concern to Administrator Reilly and Director Darman.

In response, EPA contacted Congressman Weldon and informed him that the homes would be placed on the Superfund list (the list will be printed in the Federal Register on October 14th).

F. New Federal Center In Downtown Philadelphia

After being put on hold earlier this year, plans for a new $300 million Federal center in downtown Philadelphia have started moving again because of heavy lobbying by Senator Arlen Specter (R-PA).

The building, to be built at 30th and Walnut Streets, will house the regional offices of HHS, Labor, Education, ICC, EPA, and IRS. Senator Specter, Mayor Rendell, GSA and the city's construction unions favor the proposal while many landlords and the majority of the Philadelphia press oppose it, due to existing high vacancy rates.

G. America 2000/Philadelphia 2000

Governor Casey kicked-off Pennsylvania 2000 on October 18, 1991. To date, there are approximately 40 communities across the Commonwealth that are in various stages of the program's development.

On September 22, 1992, Philadelphia became the latest community to join Pennsylvania 2000. Secretary Alexander joined Philadelphia School Superintendent Constance Clayton at the kick-off ceremonies.

CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT VISIT

On this trip, the President will travel to Springfield to address a BUSH-QUAYLE rally and to attend a Victory '92 reception. Springfield is in Congressional District 07 and is represented by Republican Congressman Curt Weldon. Representative Weldon is seeking a fourth term and he faces Democrat challenger Frank Daly. Daly is the former Mayor of Media.

POLITICAL HOT POINTS

Between September 24 and September 27, the Cromer Group -- a Democrat firm -- conducted a poll for AFSCME-Council of 700 registered voters with a margin of error of +/- 4 percent. These were the results:

President Bush:	29%
Clinton:	47%
Perot:	18%

Between September 17 and September 19, Political Media Research conducted a statewide poll of 818 likely voters for KDKA-TV with a margin of error of +/- 3.5 percent. These were the results:

President Bush:	32%
Clinton:	39%
Perot:	15%

On September 23, the President visited Penn State University to speak about his Agenda for American Renewal by discussing jobs, taxes, exports, entrepreneurial capitalism and small businesses.

On September 9, the President visited Norristown to address students at Norristown High School and to host an "Ask George Bush" forum with employees at Uniform Tubes, Incorporated.

On October 5, the First Lady traveled to Villanova to attend a Victory '92 lunch and traveled to York to visit a Community Day Care Center and to appear at the County GOP Annual Fall Dinner.

On September 24, Mrs. Quayle traveled to Bethlehem and Philadelphia to host a GOP reception, to visit the Albert Einstein Cancer Center and to attend the Breast Cancer Summit.

In early September, Senator Gore traveled to Pittsburgh to visit the Clinton-Gore state headquarters and to attend the United Steel Workers Convention.

On August 23, the Clinton-Gore bus tour stopped in Erie to speak about jobs and the economy. A group of Republican congressional candidates bracketed the trip.

On August 11, Clinton visited Pittsburgh to receive the endorsement of the National Association of Teachers. Secretary of Education Lamar Alexander bracketed the trip.

Jobs and the economy remain the key issues in Pennsylvania. The state's unemployment rate for August was 8.2 percent. The national average rate for August was 7.6 percent.

Canada is Pennsylvania's largest export market. From 1987 through 1991, Pennsylvania's exports to Canada increased nearly 85 percent -- to $3.3 billion.

Endemic to Philadelphia is the loss of jobs at the Philadelphia Naval Shipyard.

Pennsylvania will receive $7.4 billion from the President's $151 billion Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act of 1991.

There has been a strike against Pittsburgh newspapers since May.

Fifty-seven percent of Pennsylvania Republicans believe that Roe v. Wade should not be overturned. In this group, support for Senator Specter is 4 to 1.

1992 PRESIDENTIAL PRIMARY

The Presidential Primary was held on April 28. All 91 elected delegates support the President. These were the results:

1992 Presidential Primary

Republicans

President Bush: 78%
Pat Buchanan: 22%

Democrats

Bill Clinton: 56%
Jerry Brown: 26%
Paul Tsongas: 13%

Perot's organization remains limited in Pennsylvania, without noticeable change since he announced his candidacy on October 1. After his withdrawal in July, Perot's followers became inactive, splintered, disorganized, and disappointed. Prior to his withdrawal, Perot activity in the state had been minimal. Although an organization was forming, there were no politically prominent people signing on with the campaign. Senator Wofford endorsed Clinton shortly after his personal friend, Paul Tsongas, suspended his campaign. While campaigning in Pennsylvania, Clinton used Wofford's race last fall against Dick Thornburgh as a blueprint for highlighting the need for health care reform.

1992 CONGRESSIONAL OUTLOOK

SENATE OUTLOOK

Republican Senator Specter has lost his strong lead over Democrat challenger Lynn Yeakel. According to The Harrisburg Patriot, Specter led Yeakel by eleven percentage points in July. By August, the race had become a statistical dead heat, with Specter leading Yeakel by one percentage point. Specter then enjoyed the biggest lead he had at any time in the campaign. Now the race has become close again.

Between October 3 and October 8, Millersville University Center for Politics and PSU Center for Survey Research conducted a poll for the Philadelphia Daily News of 688 likely voters with a margin of error of +/- 3.7 percent. These were the results:

Specter:	41%
Yeakel:	39%
Undecided:	20%

Specter and Yeakel continue their struggle for endorsements and their television advertisement campaigns. The Daily News writes that in her first advertisement, Yeakel "creates the impression that everyone's endorsed her." The only actual endorsement mentioned in the commercial is by the National Council of Senior Citizens. In response, Senator Specter released an advertisement referring to the fact that Yeakel paid $17,000 in back taxes the day before she declared her candidacy.

Two prominent blacks have endorsed Senator Specter: Philadelphia Sheriff John Green and Democrat State Senator Hardy Williams, who is "considered the dean of black politics in Philadelphia."

Senator Specter is winning a union endorsement stalemate since neither candidate has achieved significant endorsements that historically go to Democrats. Specter stalled the International Ladies' Garment Worker's endorsement of Yeakel by voicing his objections. The ILGWU endorsed Specter in 1986. The AFL-CIO has not offered an endorsement of either candidate. The Pennsylvania AFL-CIO endorsed Specter's Democrat challengers in 1980 and 1986. Teresa Heinz, widow of the late Republican Pennsylvania Senator John Heinz, appears in a television advertisement supporting Senator Specter.

Specter and Yeakel are both actively courting Jewish voters. Although Jews constitute 3 percent of Pennsylvania's voters, they represent a swing voting bloc. Yeakel was endorsed by the National Jewish Democratic Council, but she has been criticized for belonging to Bryn Mawr Presbyterian Church because church leaders made controversial remarks about Israel after touring the Middle East in 1989.

The Senatorial Primary was held on April 28. These were the results:

Republicans		Democrats
Specter:	65%	Yeakel:	44%
Freind:	35%	Singel:	33%
		Colville:	14%

After the death of Republican Senator John Heinz, Harris Wofford, a member of Governor Casey's cabinet, was appointed to fill the seat. He was challenged by former US Attorney General Richard Thornburgh. Although Thornburgh led Wofford by 40 percentage points, Wofford campaigned on the issue of national health care and convinced voters that Thornburgh lacked a coherent message for the future. Wofford won by 10 percentage points to become the first Democrat Senator from Pennsylvania in 23 years. Wofford will face re-election for a full six year term in 1994.

HOUSE OUTLOOK

Republican Congressman Curt Weldon bounced nine checks in the House bank scandal. In 1988, 60 percent his CD-07 voted for the BUSH-QUAYLE ticket.

Due to redistricting and retirements, the Pennsylvania congressional elections are quite competitive. Four Members of Congress are retiring. The two retiring Republicans are Richard Schulze (CD-05) and Lawrence Coughlin (CD-13). The two retiring Democrats are Gus Yatron (CD-06) and Joseph Gaydos (CD-20).

Pennsylvania Political Briefing
Page 5

Attorney Ann Miller launched a write-in candidacy for Lawrence Coughlin's open seat. The Democrat candidate is former television journalist Marjorie Margolies Mezvinsky and the Republican candidate is Montgomery County Commissioner Jon Fox. Miller is running as an unequivocally anti-abortion candidate, whereas Mezvinsky is pro-choice and Fox supports abortion rights in limited circumstances.

Republican Congressman Joseph McDade was indicted for allegations that he received campaign contributions in return for manipulating Navy contracts into his district. The case is pending under review of a judge.

Reapportionment

Pennsylvania lost two seats due to redistricting. The new plan creates two districts with a majority of black voters.

STATEWIDE OUTLOOK

Pennsylvania Attorney General Ernie Preate (R) and State Auditor General Barbara Hafer (R) face re-election this year. Many speculate that Preate aspires to the governorship. Hafer will face Democrat State Senator Craig Lewis.

Former State Party Executive Director Lowman Henry is the Republican nominee for State Treasurer. Henry will face incumbent Democrat Catherine Baker Knoll.

The 1992 Pennsylvania ballot will include one half of the State Senate seats and the entire 203 member State Representative body. Republicans hold a slight majority in the State Senate by a margin of 26 to 24. Democrats control the House of Representatives by a margin of 107 to 94, but Republicans are confident that they will gain control of the House in 1993.

Last year, Pennsylvania passed a tax increase of more than $2.9 billion -- the largest in state history. Eighty-six Democrat Representatives and four Republican Representatives who voted for the increase are up for re-election. Business leaders believe that the state economy will continue to lag behind the rest of the country if the tax burden is not eased.

PARTY & CAMPAIGN ACTIVITY

The BUSH-QUAYLE Headquarters is located in Harrisburg, with additional operations in Pittsburgh and Montgomery County. There are statewide campaigns to coordinate letters-to-the-editor and radio call-ins. A newsletter was mailed to a base of 1,000 and collateral materials were distributed throughout all 67 counties.

There is an intensive surrogate speaker program with well known Pennsylvania Republican leaders appearing at various GOP events across the state on behalf of the BUSH-QUAYLE ticket: Senator Arlen Specter, National Committeewoman and Pennsylvania BUSH-QUAYLE '92 General Chairwoman Elsie Hillman, Congressman Lawrence Coughlin, Congressman Robert Walker, Congressman Curt Weldon, Congressman George Gekas, Congressman E.G. Schuster, Congressman William Clinger, Congressman Bill Goodling, Congressman Thomas Ridge, Congressman Rick Santorum, Congressman Donald Ritter, State Senator Robert Jubelirer, State Auditor General Barbara Hafer, and State Attorney General Ernie Preate.

Pennsylvania Victory '92 hopes to raise $920,000 and plans to focus 75 percent of the voter programs in suburban Philadelphia. In 1991, the State Party raised $1.6 million.

The State Party is well organized. In the registration drive this year, they cut the Democrat advantage in registered voters by 28 percent. They are strengthening local leadership by increasing their involvement in candidate recruitment as well as special State Party meetings and committees.

In 1988, the BUSH-QUAYLE ticket won Pennsylvania by a margin of 51 percent to 48 percent.

ASSOCIATION ENDORSEMENTS

DATE: OCTOBER 12, 1992
TIME: 3:50 P.M.
LOCATION: KENT COUNTY AIRPORT
GRAND RAPIDS, MI
THROUGH: DAVID DEMAREST AA
FROM: JEFF VOGT JV
WALTER HAZLITT Wd

I. PURPOSE:

To accept the endorsements of the Michigan Chamber of Commerce and state affiliates of small business and agriculture associations. To underscore the support within the business and agriculture communities for your re-election and for your "Agenda for American Renewal."

II. BACKGROUND:

To demonstrate the strong support for your candidacy from the Michigan business and agriculture communities, you will accept endorsements for your re-election bid from key associations in these important sectors.

The Chamber of Commerce of Michigan and the Michigan Manufacturers Association will endorse you at this event. This is particularly noteworthy as neither group has ever endorsed a Presidential candidate. Members include a cross-section of small and large businesses throughout the state, including the "Big Three" auto makers, as well as Kelloggs, Steelcase and other prominent companies.

In addition, the Michigan National Federation of Independent Business, the Michigan Homebuilders PAC and the Michigan Farm Bureau will all endorse you at this event. While their national organizations are unable to endorse a Presidential candidate, these state organizations have chosen to endorse your candidacy. Each cites concerns that economic conditions will worsen if Clinton's economic agenda were to be enacted, spurring high interest rates, inflation, increased regulation and more government mandates.

II. BACKGROUND:

The national offices of each of these groups have been supportive of the Administration in a number of areas, including: regulatory relief and health care reform, fighting government mandates and pushing free trade through their support for NAFTA. Your "Agenda for American Renewal" was very favorably received by these groups.

The Michigan Home Builders group is the state affiliate of the National Association of Home Builders. They will be endorsing you as well.

III. PARTICIPANTS:

- Governor John Engler
- Mr. James Barnett, President, Michigan State Chamber of Commerce

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

THROUGH: HENSON MOORE BK for HM
FROM: BOBBIE KILBERG BK
CLIFF ALDERMAN
SUBJECT: MICHIGAN (Holland and Grand Rapids)

I. Recent Correspondence

Governor Engler (R) wrote urging you to consider Detroit as a location for a future consolidated Defense Finance and Accounting Service (DFAS) center. His main concern is that current criteria for locating sites for these DFAS centers would place them in suburban areas. He wants cities to be considered as well, specifically Detroit. In September, Secretary Cheney toured a potential DFAS center site in downtown Detroit with Governor Engler and Mayor Coleman Young.

House Speaker Lewis Dodak (D), wrote encouraging you to ensure that domestic sugar markets are not negatively impacted by NAFTA.

Senator Mike Dunaskiss (R), Lake Orion, sent a press release praising your economic address to the Detroit Economic Club, particularly your position on gas mileage and auto emission standards.

The Michigan State Senate submitted their resolution, No. 567, urging you to intervene in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

II. Discussion

A. Teachers' Strike

When you were in Michigan on September 26, Detroit teachers were striking against the school system. The 30-day strike ended on September 28 when the teachers went back to work with a 4% pay raise.

MICHIGAN BRIEFING

B. Ethanol

Governor Engler and Michigan agriculture leaders praised your decision to increase the demand and use of ethanol, saying the move will create more jobs and help clean the environment. By 1995, Governor Engler, a member of the Governors' Ethanol Coalition, could include the reformulated gasoline in Detroit and Muskegon, two Michigan cities that have Clean Air Act non-attainment status.

C. Term Limit Proposal

A term limit proposal will be on the November ballot in Michigan. The proposed limits would restrict State Legislators' service to a total of eight years.

D. Unemployment

Rates are seasonally adjusted for the U.S. and Michigan; the rates for Holland and Grand Rapids are not seasonally adjusted.

	August 1991	August 1992	Change
U.S.	6.8%	7.6%	+ .8%
Michigan	9.1%	9.0%	- .1%
	July 1991	July 1992	Change
Holland	6.1%	7.6%	+ 1.5%
Grand Rapids	6.9%	7.6%	+ .7%

Michigan continues to work toward absorbing announced cuts in the auto industry. Unemployment rates will likely remain high for some time as secondary parts shops lose the supplier business that kept them in operation.

E. Exports/NAFTA

Michigan's exports to Mexico and Canada:

Mexico:	1991	$1.6 billion
	1987	$1.1 billion
Canada:	1991	$15 billion
	1987	$13 billion

Manufactured exports accounted for 97 percent of Michigan's $16 billion in exports to Canada and Mexico in 1991, and supported an estimated 260,000 jobs.

MICHIGAN BRIEFING
PAGE THREE

F. "Cut and Cap" Property Tax Proposal

Governor Engler's property tax proposal known as "cut and cap" has been placed on the November ballot. The proposed constitutional amendment would cut school operating property taxes 30 percent over five years, require that the state reimburse school districts dollar for dollar for revenues lost due to the cut, and cap assessment increases to 3 percent a year or the rate of inflation, whichever is less. Over five years, the plan will save taxpayers more than $6.5 billion.

G. Surface Transportation Funds

FY 1992 available funding	$468 million
FY 1991 apportionment	320 million

ISTEA FY 1992-97	3.13 billion
------------------	--------------

Through September 23, Michigan had obligated $458.9 million (97.9 percent) of its available FY 1992 Federal highway aid funds.

On August 10, Michigan received $9.5 million in obligation authority from "Moynihan/Courthouse" bill.

H. Welfare Reform

Governor Engler's welfare reform plan is designed to strengthen family responsibility. Engler's plan stresses AFDC as a temporary measure, improves child support collection by requiring absent parents to extend medical coverage to their children, denies professional licenses to parents who do not provide child support, and encourages employment.

Governor Engler's new "social contract" initiative began on October 1, requiring welfare recipients to spend 20 hours a week in school, at work, or volunteering.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: RONALD C. KAUFMAN (RCW)
DEPUTY ASSISTANT TO THE PRESIDENT FOR POLITICAL AFFAIRS

SUBJECT: MICHIGAN POLITICAL BRIEFING

CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT VISIT

The President will travel to Holland and Grand Rapids. Holland is currently located in the 9th Congressional District where incumbent Republican Guy Vander Jagt was defeated in the primary by Republican Peter Hoekstra. Due to redistricting, Holland will be in the 2th Congressional District where Hoekstra will face Democrat John Miltner.

Grand Rapids is currently in the 5th Congressional District represented by incumbent Republican Paul Henry. Due to redistricting, Grand Rapids will be located in the 3rd Congressional District where Henry will face Democrat Carol Kooistra.

POLITICAL HOT POINTS

The latest statewide poll, conducted by The Detroit Free Press, conducted between October 3-7 among 627 "likely voters" found:

President Bush:	31%
Bill Clinton:	50%
Perot:	8%
Undecided:	11%

A previous poll, conducted by Schulman, Ronca & Bucavalas for the Detroit News from October 1-2 found:

President Bush:	33%
Bill Clinton:	46%
Ross Perot:	10%
Undecided:	7%

This poll found that 49 percent of those surveyed thought Clinton would be best qualified to help create jobs. 22 percent thought that President Bush would, while 15 percent chose Perot.

MICHIGAN POLITICAL BRIEFING

Additionally, the poll found that 76 percent of those surveyed felt Clinton's draft status did not affect their decision to support him.

A previous statewide poll was conducted by Mitchell Research for WJBK-TV from September 25-30. Taken among 603 "likely voters" it found:

President Bush:	27%
Bill Clinton:	49%
Ross Perot:	9%

The Detroit Free Press endorsed the Clinton-Gore ticket on Sunday, October 1.

The current unemployment rate in the state is 8.6%, down from the April rate of 9.4%. Jobs remain the biggest issue facing the state.

The UAW strike is over at the Lansing General Motors plant and all workers are back on the job.

NAFTA remains a controversial issue in the state.

The Detroit News ran an editorial stating that Clinton "wimped out" on the issue by failing to take a strong stand.

Bill Clinton was in Flint on October 1 where he attended a rally. Before this, he was in the Michigan on Sunday, September 20, where he attended a rally at the Macomb County Community College and stopped at the St. Anne's Sausage Festival in Warren.

The Michigan Police Officers Association has officially endorsed the President, but the national parent organization endorsed Bill Clinton. The Michigan Bush-Quayle campaign is meeting with the Michigan Associated Builders and Contractors for a possible endorsement. The group is unhappy with the Supreme Court's decision mandating that all federal, state, or local government contracts involving construction must go to unionized labor. Attorney General William Barr met with the group to explain the decision and the President's position.

Governor Engler remains concerned about the minivan issue in the state. Minivan classifications allow foreign auto manufacturers to unload large quantities of minivans on the American market. One of the hottest issues in the state is CAFE standards. Both campaigns are battling over the issue.

Engler has lead Michigan Republicans on the attack against Bill Clinton's proposal to increase the Corporate Average Fuel Economy (CAFE) standards to 45 miles.

The Detroit News ran a full-page interview with Governor Clinton on Sunday, September 6. In this interview, Clinton stated that the 40 m.p.g. CAFE standard he has talked about is only a long term goal. He went on to say he would consider a lower threshold if it would hurt the auto industry.

In the same interview, Clinton claimed he has not waffled on the issue of NAFTA. He stated he believes the U.S. needs a trade agreement with Mexico, but he couldn't support a treaty in which he does not know the details.

Transportation Secretary Andrew Card was in the state on July 21 where he campaigned in Detroit on the CAFE issue.

The President's last visit to Michigan was on Sunday, September 26 and 27, where he traveled by train from Plymouth to Grand Blanc. On Thursday, September 9 the President was in Detroit to address the Detroit Economic Club. Previously, the President and the First Lady visited the state on Monday, September 6 where they walked across the Mackinac Bridge and participated in the Hamtramck Polish Labor Day Parade.

1992 PRESIDENTIAL PRIMARY

The March 17, 1992 Presidential primary results were as follows:

REPUBLICAN PRIMARY:	President Bush	67%
	Pat Buchanan	25%
	David Duke	3%
DEMOCRAT PRIMARY:	Bill Clinton	49%
	Jerry Brown	27%
	Paul Tsongas	18%

The Presidential election is the only statewide political race in Michigan in 1992, aside from non-partisan races including State Board of Education posts and University Board of Regents. The state will be a key battleground this year with 18 electoral votes whose electors were elected at the Republican State Convention in Grand Rapids on August 28 and 29.

The BUSH-QUAYLE ticket carried Michigan's 20 electoral votes in 1988 by a 54% to 46% margin. Most experts expect the campaign to center on economic issues. The three major automakers have experienced financial difficulties recently, laying off thousands of blue and white collar workers, many of whom reside in Macomb County, which was a prime target in 1988. Macomb County is an important county due to the high number of swing voters and conservative Democrats. Some fear these swing voters are disenfranchised and disgruntled due to the perceived gridlock both in Lansing and Washington. As in 1988, Macomb County will be a key target for the Bush-Quayle campaign.

Ross Perot's supporters remain visible among Congressional and local elections, however the formal Perot organization, United We Stand, lacks leadership and structure. Perot Supporters for Bush, headed by Terry Davis, has become active and believes that two Perot electors are ready to endorse President Bush.

Governor Engler, Michigan State GOP Chairman David Doyle, and several Bush-Quayle leaders in the state conducted outreach efforts to win over former Perot activists into supporting the President. Governor Engler and Chairman Doyle have met with several leaders from Perot's Michigan campaign and are establishing an ongoing dialogue.

CONGRESSIONAL UPDATE

U.S. HOUSE

Michigan will lose two Congressional Districts as a result of redistricting. A state court approved a compromise plan that should allow Republicans a competitive chance in this election. As a result of redistricting, several Congressmen have announced their retirement. Those retiring include Republicans Carl Purcell, William Broomfield, Bob Davis, while Democrats include Howard Wolpe, Bob Traxler and Dennis Hertell.

As a result, the Michigan delegation will lose 138 years of seniority which includes the primary defeat of 26-year incumbent Guy Vander Jagt. Traxler chairs an Appropriations subcommittee while Pursell is ranking member of another; Broomfield and Davis are both ranking members of full committees; Hertel chairs a Merchant Marine subcommittee while Vander Jagt is Chairman of the Republican National Congressional Committee

Michigan held its Congressional primary on August 4, 1992.

PAGE 5

Among the highlights are the following races:

1st Congressional District

Republican Bob Davis was forced to retire after news that he had bounced more than 800 checks. The Republican nominee for this seat will be former Republican Congressman Phil Ruppe. Ruppe will face former Democratic State Representative Bert Stupak. Ruppe is the heavy favorite to win this seat.

2nd Congressional District

Republican National Congressional Committee Chairman Guy Vander Jagt was upset in his bid for re-election by political novice and local businessman, Peter Hoekstra. Vander Jagt's upset sparked a wave of new concern of the anti-incumbent sentiment flowing in the minds of voters. Hoekstra will face Democrat John Miltner.

5th Congressional District

This is the seat of retiring Democrat Bob Traxler. The Republican nominee is former State Representative Keith Muxlow. Muxlow will face Democrat State Senator James Barcia.

8th Congressional District

This race is expected to be one of the most closely watched in the Michigan delegation. Incumbent Democrat Bob Carr will face a tough challenge by local businessman Dick Chrysler. Chrysler is a seasoned candidate who served as the Republican nominee for Governor in 1986. Chrysler is well versed on local issues and has a significant war chest.

10th Congressional District

Incumbent Democrat David Bonior is expected to face a rather heavy challenge from veteran Republican State Senator Doug Carl.

11th Congressional District

This is the seat of retiring Republican Bill Broomfield. The Democrat candidate will be Walter Briggs. The Republican nominee is Insurance Executive and Republican activist Joe Knollenberg. Knollenberg is expected to win in this heavily Republican district.

12th Congressional District

Incumbent Democrat Sander Levin is expected to retain his seat against Republican challenger and Oakland County Commissioner John Pappageorge. Due to redistricting, this district now contains portions of Macomb County, foreign ground to Levin, who is said to hold a heavy war chest.

STATEWIDE OUTLOOK

A favorable redistricting plan for districts in the state legislature will give Republicans an opportunity to take control of the state house. Currently, Republicans hold a 20 to 18 majority in the state senate under the leadership of Senate Majority Leader Dick Posthumus. Democrats hold a 60 to 50 margin in the state house, but the new plan is expected to make at least 20 seats very competitive.

Under the strong leadership of House Minority Leader Paul Hillegonds, Republicans filed candidates for all 110 State House seats, while the Democrats failed to file candidates in 13 seats.

There will be a number of ballot initiatives in November. Among those are property tax relief, which is being proposed by the Governor and term limitations. While the Governor supports term limits, the state GOP has chosen to stay neutral on the issue.

Additionally, there is a possibility of an auto insurance initiative on the ballot. The Democrats are fighting this proposal and AAA has asked the State Court of Appeals to send the referendum to the Legislature to be put on the ballot.

PARTY/CAMPAIGN ACTIVITY

Governor John Engler is the Bush-Quayle '92 General Chairman in the state while Tim Leuliette serves as Finance Chairman. Max Fisher serves as an Honorary National Finance Chairman, with Heinz Prechter on the National Finance Committee. Michigan Republican Party Chairman Dave Doyle and the entire Congressional delegation are campaign Co-Chairmen.

Michigan Republicans gathered at their state convention on May 30 for the business of electing National Committeeman and National Committeewoman. National Committeeman Chuck Yob won re-election without opposition. However, incumbent National Committeewoman Ronna Romney was challenged and defeated by Betsy DeVos. DeVos edged out Andi Fischer on a second ballot vote.
