FOR THE PRESIDENT

1. summary of points
2. document identifying petition for commutation of sentence
3. list of sentences imposed on persons convicted of comparable offenses
4. letter of remorse from Jonathan Pollard to his parents
5. sample Presidential statement accompanying commutation

-- The guilt of Jonathan Pollard is not in question. He transferred highly classified information to a foreign government and deserved a severe prison sentence.

-- As a federal court has now confirmed, Pollard's prosecutors extracted a guilty plea from him through distasteful methods. They said they would show no leniency towards Pollard's wife, who was arrested along with him and who was seriously ill, unless he pled guilty. They also promised to tell the sentencing Judge of Pollard's co-operation with them and said they would not ask for a life sentence. But when the time came, they minimized his co-operation and described him as guilty of behavior for which only the heaviest punishment was appropriate.

-- As a result, Pollard did get a life sentence. It was much longer than any other sentence in our recent history for a comparable offense.

-- Because of his continuing concern about the treatment of his wife, who had been incarcerated, Pollard delayed his appeal. And because of this delay, he could make only a "collateral" appeal, subject to special standards that are almost never successfully met. Even as the appeals court turned him down by a two-to-one margin, the Judges left little doubt that Pollard would probably have succeeded if he had been in time to launch a more conventional direct appeal. The dissenting Judge, Steve

Williams, called the prosecutors' conduct in the case a "fundamental miscarriage of justice."

-- Pollard has already served seven years of his sentence-- not only in a maximum security prison but in solitary confinement. He is restricted to his cell for 23 hours a day. These conditions are extraordinarily harsh.

-- Under these circumstances, it seems appropriate to commute the balance of Pollard's sentence to time served. The commutation would by no means be any sort of pardon or exoneration, for he deserves neither. Instead, it would be simply a recognition both of the particular problems that have arisen in the case and of the specially difficult circumstances of Pollard's incarceration.

Dear Mom and Dad,

In view of my appeal before the United States Court of Appeals and the generous support that people around the world have shown for the legal arguments in my appeal, I feel it is appropriate for me to make the following statement:

I have always stated ^{that} I am not above the law, and deserve to be punished for my actions, however well motivated I thought them to be. At the time I was faced with a cruel dilemma in which I thought I had to choose between the law and my conscience. The danger that I perceived to Israel's existence was so acute that I instinctively chose action over reflection. I now know that that was wrong. I should have made the effort to discover a legal solution to the dilemma I faced. For this error in judgment I am profoundly sorry.

Also, I regret the adverse effect which my actions had on the United States, and the Jewish community. I am now and have always been very proud to be a citizen of this country. However, the loyalty of American Jews to their Nation and its law has been unwavering and intense. In fact, American Jews have been particular champions of our legal system in good part because they know that our American law is the major bulwark against bigotry toward minority groups. In taking the actions I did, I failed to understand the critical nature of this stance, and the ammunition my actions provided to anyone who might want to accuse American Jews of having dual loyalties.

During the past six years in prison, I have also reflected on how and why, despite my idealism about the world and Israel's place in it, I was capable of taking the actions I did. The answer has come to me I think through the maturity gained since the day of my arrest. My problem stemmed not from dual loyalties, but from my anxiety that the past ^{unless I intervene} would repeat itself. Unfortunately, I failed to appreciate the fact that vigilance does not justify one's indifference to the law. In my mind, assisting an ally did not involve or require betraying the United States. I never thought that enhancing Israel's security would in any way jeopardize America's strategic interests. But that judgment was not mine to make.

I say all of this not as a defense for what I did, but as an explanation to my friends and family, so that they may understand why I made mistakes that have caused the people I love and admire to suffer so grievously from my actions. I naturally hope that my legal appeal will be successful, because I believe very strongly that there is substantial merit in my case, particularly concerning the disproportionate punishment I have received. But whatever the outcome, nothing will alter the remorse I feel as a result of my actions.

Love,

Jarrett

P.S. Please file this under "Personal Letter Of Jarrett Pollard To Parents" dated 6/6/91.

BUSH LIBRARY PHOTOCOPY

More than seven years ago, Jonathan Jay Pollard, a Navy intelligence analyst, was arrested for delivering highly classified documents to the Israeli government. What he did was terribly harmful, and he deserved severe punishment.

But since Pollard's arrest, several circumstances have changed. Questions have been raised, in part by a federal appeals court, about the process by which he was induced to plead guilty. It now appears that his life sentence was much, much longer than any other sentence in our recent history for a comparable offense.

Pollard has already served seven years of his sentence in solitary confinement, locked in his cell for 23 hours a day. I believe that he now understands why his actions were so deeply wrong and feels genuine remorse for what he did. Many organizations and religious leaders, of all denominations, have appealed to me to act compassionately in this case.

For all these reasons I have decided to commute the balance of Jonathan Pollard's sentence to the time he has already served.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

THE VICE PRESIDENT
SECRETARY NICHOLAS F. BRADY
DIRECTOR RICHARD G. DARMAN
CHIEF OF STAFF BAKER
DEPUTY CHIEF OF STAFF ZOELLICK
ROGER B. PORTER

FROM: MICHAEL J. BOSKIN mjb

RE: Administration Economic Forecast Accuracy

It is sometimes alleged the Administration was "out of touch," didn't know what was happening in the economy, etc. It may be of some use to you when we leave office to know that, in fact, the Administration's short-term economic forecasts were the most accurate of any Administration in the modern budget era and generally more accurate than private analysts', the FED, etc. (Outyear forecasts are not comparable, as the Administration forecast assumes passage of the President's proposals, whereas others do not do so.)

- o Bush Administration short-run economic forecasts have been the most accurate of any Administration in the modern budget era.
 - Across a broad set of variables--real growth, inflation, unemployment rate, interest rates--Bush Administration forecasts have been more accurate than the Carter and Reagan Administration forecasts, with the average absolute error of Bush Administration forecasts being over 40 percent lower than Carter Administration forecasts, and 17 percent lower than Reagan Administration forecasts.
- o The first official forecast of the Bush Administration, the Mid-Session Review forecast for 1989, was more accurate than any of the individual forecasts of the private Blue Chip forecasters based on the data available at that time.
- o When I first publicly acknowledged the recession, it was the only time ever that a high-ranking Administration official, Republican or Democrat, said we were in a recession before data on even one quarter of decline in real output were available (through 9 post-war recessions). OMB formally advised Congress in mid-January 1991 that we were forecasting two consecutive negative quarters and that the clause triggering a vote and suspending the budget law was in order; this was also before data on even one negative quarter were available.

- o The Administration forecast for 1991, made in 1990, correctly predicted that real output would continue to decline in the first quarter of 1991 and then grow slowly in the remaining quarters of the year. That forecast correctly predicted that it would be the slowest recovery on record. [Only one of fifty private forecasters predicted the flattening out at the end of the year.]
- o The 1992 forecast, made in late 1991, also correctly predicted that the economy would continue to grow relatively slowly. Thus far, it is more accurate on real growth, inflation and unemployment for 1992 than the Blue Chip consensus made at the same time (whether we use the forecast released with the Budget or with the Mid-Session Review), as well as the overwhelming bulk of individual forecasts.
- o Over the past several years, we correctly anticipated that the Japanese economy and several European economies were going into recession, and called for policymakers in those countries to adopt policies to help boost their economies in numerous international meetings (G-7, OECD, etc.)

THE PRESIDENT

January 8, 1993

Dear Pat,

I was distressed to get your letter. I hate it that you, who loved Mother so much, have been hurt.

Pat, there were no invitations to the funeral that I know of. I know we did not invite anyone at all- in fact Billy Graham said he wanted to come and we had to tell him that it was to be private. That changed a little and a lot more people came on their own than originally had been expected.

In any event you should have been there- you should have felt welcome; and Barbara and I are both very sorry.

I loved the anecdote you wrote about Mother and the golf game. She was so special and, Pat, I miss her more than tongue can tell.

Good Luck to you. Sincerely,

Dear Mr. President,

The three greatest losses for me this November, 1992 - Your not being re-elected - the passing of your mom, and my not being invited to attend her funeral. This will sadden me as long as I live. I received more phone calls (over a hundred) expressing their sympathy from all parts of the world, ~~they~~ could not believe that I wasn't invited.

I have scheduled a mass for Dorothy Bush, on Sunday - December 20, 1992 - 8:30 A.M. at St. Michael's Roman Catholic Church on North Street, in visits with her at Walker's Point and

My most memorable and honorable experience, was meeting both you and Barbara and campaigning for you all these years.

Dorothy Rust was a special, unique lady - one of a kind - and a delight to be with. She always had an up-lift message for me.
For instance, when having played a round of golf at Round Hill Club, in Greenwich, a member was heard saying -

Patricia M. Silbereisen
22 Saxon Court, Stamford, Ct. 06905-1919

You invited a beautician to play golf? Later that day, I went to do your mom's hair at her home. When I arrived, she asked to see my score card and made a comment what a great game I played, and then asked "What is wrong, Pat?" "You always are up and full of life?" Mrs. Bust - You know that I became a hairdresser because I love being with people and doing for them and also to help pay for a college education to become a lawyer - but I got married instead. Then I told her what I had heard at the Club. She answered "Pat - just remember - "Your job starts at the top" a decent and honest person like you should never feel a "stigma"

Patricia M. Silbereisen
22 Saxon Court, Stamford, Ct. 06905-1919

Concerning your career. "In fact - you have been and still are very successful in your other careers - Real Estate - Beauty Culture instructor - and Ball-room dancing instructor", and Pat - "you will always be on 'top' in my mind".

Your mom's greatest wish, that she could pass on to her family the gracious love and concern that she had for those who served her well. It's too bad, that she had more character in her little finger than your sister Nancy and brother Prescott has.

Someday - speak with Marge Grover - your mom's companion.

She will tell you how awful she and your mom were

I will continue to pray for us to always remain friends.

Dear Mary Louise,

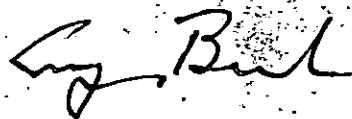

Thanks for that wonderful letter. We are now shifting gears and looking forward to coming back to Houston.

We are aiming for a very quiet, private not public life. We'll see.

Mary Louise, you are so sweet to want us for lunch; but I just cannot accept for the days you suggest. On the second one we have conflicts; and on the first we should just get settled. Barbara is frantic about getting our boxes in order there and asked that we not make plans.

To you and Tom our love and Thanks. You are so very kind to us.

Love,

Dear Mr. President,

Several times over the past ten days I've begun a letter to you, and the arrival of your thoughtful letter yesterday prompts me to fulfill my intent to write.

Of course, the results of the November 3 election were deeply disappointing. To you such words are woefully inadequate. I only hope sincerely that any disheartened feelings you may have now will disappear - and even disappear - with the passage of time. Your old problems are now "theirs"; and you have so very much which you must continue to offer that I hope you can keep in mind that any ending only means that a new beginning follows.

For the leadership, the dedication, the wisdom and the energy which you have expended for the betterment of us all you have our warmest and most sincere appreciation.

Your coming back to Houston will be a red letter day here - and one in which I would be more than proud to expedite in any way I could.

Most sincerely, Jue

My dear Mr. President,

First of all -
many thanks for your kind call the other day from H'port. Not only great to hear your voice, but to hear it sound so up beat.

You have had a pre-whistle of a fall, and as you said '93 can only be better. As for the loss at the polls - I can only imagine how it hurts and will continue to hurt - you will get our most of it - being you - but never all of it I believe.
The people around you served you ill.

Your mother's passing is sad in many many ways, but her quality of life couldn't have been very great at best.
No matter how much you may have anticipated it, one is never truly ready to accept the passing of one loved so dearly.

I feel very privileged to have known loved & respected her. She had a great and wonderful influence on all she touched.
You will miss her - and so will the rest of us - But thank God we knew her.

Cheer up, my friend - you got a hook in the hat - for a job well done - and no thanks from the public - but then neither did Cleveland nor Grover.

We love you - we thank you for who you are - what you are - and what you stand for.

God bless and say love to you both

MR. PRESIDENT
Dear George,

Eloise and I extend our deepest sympathy to you and Barbara in the loss of your Mother. Having read of the deep insights she gave you during her life on the importance of personal values, we know you will miss having her with you.

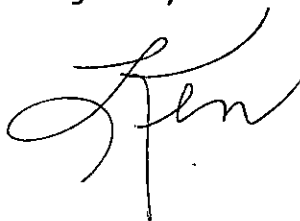

We are very proud of the work you have done over the years on behalf of all Americans and particularly of the Republican outlook on family principles. We look forward to the continuing contributions you will be making to the lifestyles of all Americans.

The local newspapers continue to document your activities in moving into the lifestream on the Houston scene. We continue to marvel at the house you will be building -- and are looking to see what you will be building on a lot 33 feet wide. Viewing the house you will be renting until your home is completed, I do hope your architect will release the floor plan.

We do need your guidance and insight from a true Republican viewpoint in Houston. Recent actions of Steve Hotze, Shirley Johnson, Betsy Lake and Iris Manes have definitely muddled up the scene -- something we definitely do not need at this time if we are to continue to attract Houstonians to the party. The actions of the Christian Coalition toward crystalizing the party outlook appears to me self-defeating. Hotze has been quoted as saying the party must have a litmus test to determine who can and cannot be a true Republican. On the face of it, this type position can only further isolate the party from moderates who may like the overall objectives of the party but find the extreme right attitudes to be undesirable. We do need your guidance, George. The sooner you can wind down your Washington duties, the better it will be for us.

Look forward to having you in Houston.

Best regards,

CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCY

JANUARY 8, 1993

- Thank you Bob. It is just great to be back at Langley again. The last time I was out here, you all joined me as Bob Gates was sworn in as DCI. Today, you have honored me with a wonderfully warm reception. I feel very welcome and thank you.
- Last November, when Bob Gates became Director, I noted that the men and women of the Intelligence Community faced a new mission in a dramatically changed world. I stated then, and I will state again now, that we must not let our guard down. We must not again dismantle the capabilities of the Intelligence Community we worked so hard to rebuild.
- Yes, we have made tremendous strides. The Cold War confrontation is behind us and the historic arms agreement Boris Yeltsin and I just signed in Moscow does provide great hope for a better and safer world. But we must not fool ourselves. Those who would challenge freedom's gains are many. We continue to face threats in the fields of terrorism, weapons proliferation, narcotics trafficking and economic security. Those threats are real and we need more intelligence, not less, if we are to meet the challenge. We must also have the best possible intelligence as we work for peace, decency and respect for the rule of law.

- Now is not the time to claim victory and turn our backs on the intelligence needs of the future. Indeed, as we face a more turbulent and unpredictable world, and as our military forces are being reduced, I believe it would be a tragic mistake to further significantly reduce the intelligence budget.
- So let me say to everyone here today: The work you do has always been hard. It will remain so. The dangers you face are real, as the stars in the entry hall attest. You will continue to do the job, and do it well. How fortunate this nation is to have your service. You are a remarkable group of men and women. I'm proud of you, all of you, and deeply grateful for your service to country. May God bless you all and thank you very, very much.
- Before departing, I have one last matter to address. Bob, will you join me for a moment. Becky, will you and the children join me as well.
- Bob, it gives me great pleasure today, in the presence of your family and your colleagues here at CIA, to honor your accomplishments as a distinguished public servant by awarding you the National Security Medal.
- As we honor you today, let me briefly recap your outstanding career in public service: Director of Central Intelligence, Assistant to the President and Deputy for National Security Affairs, Deputy Director of Central Intelligence, CIA Deputy Director for Intelligence, National Security Council staff member for three Presidents, National Intelligence Officer and Chairman, National Intelligence Council.

- Bob, you have been my intelligence advisor, my counselor and my friend, and I have long trusted and respected your opinions and advice. I could go on listing your accomplishments, but your service as an intelligence and national security professional is legend in Washington and speaks for itself.
- As DCI, you led the Intelligence Community to historic accomplishments. Under your thoughtful leadership, the Community successfully emerged from the most important reorganization since the end of World War II.
- Because of your work, the Community is now positioned and prepared to meet new challenges with creativity and teamwork.
- Always the leader, ready to challenge conventional wisdom, ready to innovate, you have devoted yourself to excellence in service to nation. On behalf of a grateful nation, I thank you for your truly superb performance and your contributions to our national security. It is with great pride and pleasure that I present you the National Security Medal.

IRAQ CLAIMS LEGAL RIGHT ON MISSILES

Iraq asserted Thursday a legal right to position antiaircraft missiles in the southern zone patrolled by U.S. and allied aircraft, as the U.S. and its Persian Gulf War allies reaffirmed their demand for removal of the missiles by nightfall here Friday.

At the U.N. Thursday night, Iraqi ambassador Nizar Hamdoon said his government reserved the right to act as it wanted anywhere in its territory. "Iraq has decided not to give up that right," Hamdoon told reporters after handing a four-page statement to representatives of the U.S., France, Britain and Russia who had formally handed him the ultimatum about the missiles Wednesday.

Hamdoon Thursday introduced another element into the dispute, inviting a delegation from Congress to visit Iraq with a view to negotiating on a variety of issues. A U.S. official said the suggestion was not in the letter to the allies, and it seemed unlikely any member of Congress would accept.

While Administration officials reported movement of the missile batteries, the officials said they suspected the relocation was primarily aimed at protecting the missiles rather than complying with the allied demand for removal to previous positions north of the 32nd parallel.

Several officials said the Administration decided to take a tough stand against Saddam Hussein not only to constrain him but also to warn the government of Serbia to stop the fighting in the Balkans. (Ann Devroy & Jeffrey Smith, Washington Post, A1)

U.S. Intelligence Detects Removal Of Iraqi Missiles From "No-Fly" Zone

Senior Pentagon officials say Iraq, responding to warnings of retaliation, has started removing newly deployed surface-to-air missiles from a "no-fly" zone in southern Iraq patrolled by allied warplanes.

Officials said intelligence-gathering apparatus detected movement of Soviet-made SA-2 and SA-3 missiles away from the 32nd parallel that serves as the zone's northern boundary.

A senior Administration official said that any preliminary movement of the missiles would not automatically satisfy Washington's demands because Administration concerns go "far beyond the missiles."

Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz defiantly announced rejection of the ultimatum to remove its missiles early Thursday, saying Baghdad's forces were free to move within their own borders.

But at about the same time, U.S. intelligence indicated that the weapons were being moved, senior Pentagon officials said.

"The missiles appear to be moving out," one official said. "My guess is that (Saddam) was just teasing (President) Bush a little bit in his final weeks (in office)." (UPI)

Saddam Plays Game On Ultimatum

Saddam Hussein defiantly kept his surface-to-air missiles in the no-fly zone of southern Iraq Thursday but changed their positions as an allied deadline for their removal neared, U.S. officials said.

Playing a cat-and-mouse game with U.S. spy cameras in the sky, Iraq moved the SA-2 and SA-3 missile batteries from their positions of Wednesday.

"There's been movement. But we're not sure what that means yet," said a senior Pentagon official. "To describe it as positive would be premature. Let's hope it's for the right reasons."

U.S. officials said they did not know where the missiles were taken, partly because of cloud cover and darkness, but believed they were still south of the 32nd parallel.

Iraqi Deputy Prime Minister Tariq Aziz blasted the demand to remove the missiles by 5:30 P.M. EST Friday or face attacks. But he did not directly reject the ultimatum.

Iraq Apparently Rebuffs Allies On Missiles Deployed In South

In an apparent rebuff of the allied demand that Iraq remove its newly deployed surface-to-air missiles in southern Iraq, Baghdad said Thursday that it was entitled to station the weapons anywhere on its territory.

The Iraqi rebuff of the allied ultimatum came amid other indications that Iraq might be challenging the restrictions imposed on it after the Persian Gulf War. An Administration official said that relief organizations in the Kurdish organization in northern Iraq had recently come under attack and that some American officials believe the assaults, including a fatal one, may have been the work of Iraqi agents.

But CARE Australia in a statement described the death as accidental.

POWELL SAYS IRAQ NO-FLY CHALLENGES WILL BE MET

COLUMBUS, Ga. -- Gen. Colin Powell kept up the rhetorical heat on Iraq Thursday night in a speech in which he said continued challenges to the allied no-fly zone would be punished.

In a speech to about 1,300 members of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce, Powell said, "Iraq is once again misbehaving and Iraq is once again wondering if they can challenge us without getting a response. The answer to that is absolutely not."

Powell also urged a continued strong American ground presence in Europe. "Even though the Soviet Union is gone, even though the Red Army is gone, NATO continues to provide the basis for stability in the West," Powell said. "America must remain a firm member of NATO which means keeping ground forces in Europe." (Reuter)

CIA TELLS WHY U.S. LET HUSSEIN STAY IN POWER

CIA Director Gates has provided a new, detailed account of one of the most historically significant and controversial actions of the Bush Administration: the decision to leave Saddam Hussein in power at the end of the Persian Gulf War.

In an interview with the Los Angeles Times this week, Gates acknowledged that Administration officials talked extensively about the possibility of making the capture of Hussein one of America's war aims.

In the end, Gates said, Administration officials rejected the idea, largely because they feared that Hussein would go into hiding, as Manuel Noriega had done during the 1989 U.S. intervention in Panama, and that U.S. troops would be unable to find him.

"We were all a little shaped by that experience (Panama), and Iraq's a hell of a lot bigger country than Panama and we knew a lot less about it than we did Panama," said Gates. "I think there was a general feeling that it would not be difficult for Saddam to flee Baghdad and it would be very difficult for us to try and find him. So you'd end up potentially occupying much of Iraq and then having to deal with the consequences of that."

U.S. FORCES BLAST
SOMALI STRONGHOLD

MOGADISHU -- U.S. attack helicopters, tanks and armored vehicles staged a dawn raid on a fortified arsenal of one of Somalia's most powerful warlords Thursday as the chief of U.S. forces here confirmed that a new phase of the relief operation would focus on "going after the technicals and the bandits."

Gen. Robert Johnston, commander of U.S. forces here, described this new stage as "systematically going after the 'technicals' and the bandits. Now the focus is on eliminating the technicals" -- four-wheel drive vehicles converted into battlewagons with weapons.

The target of the assault was one of several designated "cantonment areas" where forces of warlord Mohamed Farah Aideed had agreed to mass their weapons after the arrival of U.S. forces here on Dec. 9. American officials said they decided to strike the site -- a compound surrounding four metal warehouses on the northwestern edge of the capital -- after marine patrols were fired on by snipers inside.

During Thursday's attack, Aideed's militiamen fired back at the U.S. helicopters and ground troops with antiaircraft guns and tried to bring their technicals to bear, but they were quickly overwhelmed by what U.S. Marine Maj. Gen. Charles Wilhelm called "very decisive force" applied by about 400 U.S. troops.

Marines Disable Weapons

MOGADISHU -- U.S. marine tanks and gunships pounded two Somali weapons compounds Thursday, disabling feuding Somalis who had taken potshots at U.S. troops and threatened the famine relief effort.

At least seven Somalis died and one marine was wounded in the morning operation, which was described by U.S. officials as a culmination of events that began with a clan battle New Year's Eve.

Sources at the meeting in Ethiopia between the two main warlords said the warlords, who have tentatively agreed to hold a national reconciliation meeting in April, have been arguing over whether to sign a formal cease-fire or just agree to stop fighting.

The sources told AP that Gen. Aideed favors a formal agreement while his main rival, Ali Mahdi Mohamed, and nine other factions want an informal one. (Michael Hedges, Washington Times, A1)

400 U.S. Marines Attack Compound Of Somali Gunmen

MOGADISHU -- In the sharpest clash involving American troops since they landed here nearly a month ago, about 400 marines attacked a camp of one of Mogadishu's chief warlords Thursday, destroying several buildings, capturing a large cache of weapons, and killing or wounding many gunmen.

The official explanation for the attack was that marines had been fired on by gunmen from the Aideed compound. But beyond the marines' desire to deter any further attacks was a signal that the U.S. intended to take more seriously the difficult task of insuring stability in Mogadishu and other towns.

"This is definitely meant to convey a message that we won't tolerate being shot at," said Col. Peck, the U.S. spokesman. He added, "It's a whole new ballgame now."

U.S. WOULD LET SOME GIs SERVE UNDER U.N. FLAG

U.N. -- In what would be the first U.S. participation in a U.N. peace-keeping mission, the U.S. is prepared to contribute up to 5,000 American logistical, transportation and engineering soldiers to the multinational U.N. force being drawn up to replace the U.S. troops now in Somalia.

"It will be a first -- the first time that American troops will be operating directly under the U.N. flag," said a western military official familiar with the planning for the Somalia peace-keeping force that will be known as UNOSOM-2. However, some sources cautioned there still is opposition in the Pentagon to setting such a precedent of U.N. command, so the U.S. might decide to seek some kind of separate status for any residual force it leaves in Somalia.

Other sources stressed that any U.S. soldiers assigned to the UNOSOM operation would not be combat troops but rather support units able to provide supply, transportation and engineering services. "The U.S. troops all will be non-shooters," one U.S. official said. (John Goshko & Trevor Rowe, Washington Post, A16)

RIFT DEVELOPS AMONG ENVOYS IN BOSNIA TALKS

In a fresh sign of differences between the U.S. and special envoys trying to broker an end to the war in Bosnia-Herzegovina, the Bush Administration Thursday set plans to meet with Bosnia's visiting president.

The decision for Secretary Eagleburger to host Bosnian President Izetbegovic Friday is in effect a rebuff to U.N. envoy Cyrus Vance, who had asked Eagleburger not to do so.

Vance apparently fears that because Izetbegovic is asking for western intervention on behalf of Bosnia's besieged Muslims, high-level meetings with him in Washington could mar negotiations aimed at stopping the war.

"Vance and (EC mediator David) Owen are basically the modern-day version of Neville Chamberlain. They basically want to appease the Serbs," said one official who has played a role in forming Bush Administration policy toward former Yugoslavia.

(Warren Strobel & Major Garrett, Washington Times, A7)

BOSNIAN ARRIVES;
U.S. EMBARRASSED

For months, the Bush Administration and the Clinton team have portrayed the Bosnian Muslims as victims of unspeakable acts of murder, rape, terror and "ethnic cleansing" at the hands of the Serbs. But when the leader of the Muslim-dominated Bosnian government came to town Thursday looking for help, neither the old or new administrations were quite sure what to do with him.

The visit by Bosnian President Izetbegovic cast in a very personal light the quandary facing the U.S.: how to respond to a war and a humanitarian tragedy that has evoked widespread sympathy but little enthusiasm for military intervention in the West.

Izetbegovic denied in an interview Thursday that he was seeking meetings with senior officials of either the Administration or the Clinton camp, but that if asked he would be delighted to accept.

EAGLEBURGER: U.S. LOSING STATURE WITH ISLAM

Secretary Eagleburger said that the Administration's inability to end the carnage in Yugoslavia has "cost us in the Muslim world" and encouraged extremism.

Eagleburger, responding to audience questions following a speech to the Council on Foreign Relations, said in countries such as Iran and Turkey, and in initiatives such as the Middle East peace talks, the Administration's failure to bring peace to Bosnia-Herzegovina has lowered its stature among both radical and moderate Islamic nations.

"There is no question that our inability to bring the Yugoslav slaughter to an end in Bosnia has had a very substantial impact on the attitudes of the Muslim world and has encouraged Muslim extremism," he said Thursday.

For example, Eagleburger said Turkish Foreign Minister Giray Safa "takes me to task" on the Administration's "inability to deal with the problem" every time they meet.

U.S. PRESSES UKRAINE TO RATIFY NUCLEAR ARMS PACT

The U.S. has stepped up pressure on Ukraine to ratify the START I nuclear arms reduction treaty and has told Ukrainian officials there will be no financial help from Washington until Kiev does so, U.S. officials said Thursday.

"It's time for them -- it's more than time for them to ratify these things," a senior State Department official said after Thursday's talks with the Ukrainian delegation.

Richard Boucher said the U.S. is prepared to offer security guarantees to Ukraine only after it ratifies START I.

Describing the talks, he said, "There was a useful review of the status of START and the Non-Proliferation Treaty, which are now before the Ukrainian parliament for approval, including assistance and assurances the United States is prepared to provide to Ukraine once these agreements are approved."

JAPAN BUYS FEWER GOODS FROM THE U.S.

TOKYO -- Japan's recession has resulted in the first decline in purchases of U.S. goods here in seven years.

In the year since President Bush arrived here on a high-powered trade mission vowing to create "jobs, jobs, jobs" in America, imports from the U.S., which soared 83% from 1986 to 1991, dropped 2.6% in the first 11 months of 1992.

The problem lies in the overall performance of the Japanese economy. To create jobs, it is necessary to generate growth. The Japanese authorities, who had promised Bush that they would take steps to ensure a healthy expansion last year, instead allowed the nation to slip into its worst recession in two decades.

As a result, demand for all sorts of foreign products has fallen and U.S. companies selling goods ranging from furniture to machinery to camping equipment have suffered.

ASPIN QUESTIONS BUSH ESTIMATES ON ARMS BUDGET

Rep. Aspin said Thursday that the Bush Administration's military budget for the next six years may overestimate savings and underestimate weapons costs.

Aspin, testifying before the Senate Armed Services Committee, said that one of his first acts as Defense Secretary would be to sort out the budget figures.

"Are we talking about a realistic number from which the president-elect has pledged to cut $60 billion, or are we talking about something else?" Aspin asked.

The Bush Administration, for example, contends it can save $71 billion by 1997 through internal cost-cutting steps, like consolidating supply depots and changing accounting procedures. But some Pentagon officials say those measures will save only $10 billion to $20 billion.

EPA REPORT CALLS CIGARETTE SMOKE 'SUBSTANTIAL' RISK TO NONSMOKERS

Cigarette smoke has "a serious and substantial public health impact" on nonsmokers, causing lung cancer in adults and as many as 300,000 cases of bronchitis, pneumonia and other infections in infants, EPA said Thursday.

Among the report's findings: Secondhand cigarette smoke is a human carcinogen, killing about 3,000 U.S. nonsmokers because of lung cancer annually; cigarette smoke is responsible for 150,000 to 300,000 cases of bronchitis and pneumonia and other lower respiratory infections in children up to 18 months of age; cigarette smoke increases frequency and severity of symptoms in 200,000 to 1 million children with asthma and increases the risk of new cases of asthma.

Meanwhile, GAO has launched two investigations of EPA's handling of the health effects of secondhand smoke.

One investigation concerns the adequacy of EPA's scientific peer reviews, in which EPA documents are critiqued by other scientists to assure accuracy, said Peter Guerrero, associate director of GAO.

The other investigation is directed at the leak of a draft EPA report on secondhand smoke and heart disease. The report was initially intended to be a companion to the secondhand smoke report that EPA released Thursday.

(Paul Raeburn, AP, Washington Post, A3)

EPA: Risk Of Secondhand Smoke 'Astonishing'

About a fifth of all lung cancers caused by factors other than smoking result from exposure to secondhand smoke, and a nonsmoker has a 1 or 2 in 1,000 risk of developing the deadly disease, William Reilly said Thursday.

Secretary Sullivan said the report shows "it is time for Americans who smoke to make the choice to stop smoking, and, in particular, it is irresponsible for smokers to expose young children to the health consequences of their addiction."

He called the report a "sound and careful scientific study" and said it was "ridiculous" for the tobacco industry to "question EPA's credibility." Of the tobacco industry, he said, "I know of no industry that has so little credibility in the eyes of the American public."

EPA APPROVES EMISSION CONTROLS

EPA gave California permission Thursday to impose more stringent auto pollution controls than required by federal law, clearing the way for several Northeast states to do the same.

EPA, noting that California has the worst air pollution problems in the country, granted the state a waiver from the 1990 Clean Air Act, so that it may continue to implement its strict auto emissions control program.

BUSH BLOCKED FROM FIRING POSTAL AIDES

A federal judge Thursday ordered President Bush not to carry out his threat to fire six members of the Postal Service's Board of Governors in retaliation for their defying the President's order to drop a lawsuit over postal rates.

U.S. District Judge Louis Oberdorfer rejected arguments from Justice Department officials that he lacked authority to issue an order against the President and signed the injunction that bars Bush from acting.

Assistant Attorney General Stuart Gerson, head of the department's civil division, told the judge that his office probably would ask the U.S. Court of Appeals to stay Oberdorfer's order. A senior White House official said late Thursday that a request for a stay had been prepared and was ready to be filed Thursday night or Friday.

Leslie Southwick, Gerson's deputy who argued the President's case before Oberdorfer, said that if Bush's removal of the board members was ultimately found to be illegal, the proper legal remedy for board members was a suit for back pay.

GAO: JUSTICE NEEDS A TIGHT REIN

The Justice Department needs strong leadership because of rising crime rates, exploding prison populations and massive drug prosecutions, the General Accounting Office said Thursday.

GAO, in a 40-page report forwarded to Congress and Attorney General-designate Zoe Baird, said that because of increased Justice Department workloads, the need for strong leadership was greater this year than four years ago.

In the report, GAO said, among other things: The department should step up its war against white-collar crime and increase efforts to collect monetary penalties; and overcrowded federal prisons need to be studied, with an eye to possible alternative programs, such as "boot camps" for first-time offenders, halfway houses, home detention and minimum security facilities.

AUDIT OF GOVERNMENT SAYS BILLIONS ARE BEING WASTED

The top federal auditor told President-elect Clinton Thursday that the government did "an abysmal job of rudimentary bookkeeping" and has tens of billions of dollars in hidden liabilities.

In a series of 45 transition reports, Comptroller General Charles Bowsher painted a grim picture of a government plagued by mismanagement, unable to collect delinquent taxes and unwilling to acknowledge the full cost of its long-term commitments.

He said the State Department, the Transportation Department, NASA, the Health Care Financing Administration and the Energy Department were losing billions of dollars a year because they were lax in supervising federal contractors who build embassies, subways and satellites, pay Medicare claims and run government laboratories.

USDA ANNOUNCES PLANS FOR CLOSING FIELD OFFICES

Secretary Madigan said Thursday he will order the closing or consolidation of as many as 1,000 field offices before Jan. 20 in an effort to streamline department operations.

The reductions would come from a list of 7,045 offices of the Soil Conservation Service, the Farmers Home Administration, the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service and the federal crop insurance program. Those agencies provide services to farmers. Other agencies are not included.

BAIRD BACKED QUAYLE PLAN, PANEL TOLD

As vice president and general counsel of the Aetna Life & Casualty Co., Attorney General-designate Zoe Baird last year praised Vice President Quayle for pushing a controversial series of "tort justice" reform proposals to limit lawsuits that she said are having "a very debilitating effect on America's competitiveness."

During last year's campaign, President-elect Clinton sharply attacked the Quayle proposals, calling them "dramatically tilted toward big polluters, manufacturers and insurance companies and against consumers and victims."

In a March 10, 1992 speech to a group called "Great Performers Executive Council," Baird praised Quayle for pushing the tort reform issue.

"The Vice President has, through his support for these reform agendas, moved tort reform to a level of visibility and credibility that it really has not had for years," she said.

DOLE WADES INTO REPUBLICAN BATTLE, URGES SEN. McCONNEL FOR NEW POST

Sen. Dole, showing his political muscle, entered the battle over the Republican National Committee chairman Thursday by telling party members he wants them to create the post of general party chairman and he wants his ally, Sen. McConnell, in it.

"All of a sudden a new job was thrown out in the middle of a very active campaign that has been going on," said Alec Pointevint, Georgia GOP chairman. "I consider Sen. Dole a friend and ally, but our next chairman should be chosen by us, not by someone in Washington."

The Dole move came as Mississippi RNC member Haley Barbour, one of the five announced candidates for the chairmanship, was the subject of a letter circulated among RNC members questioning his party loyalty. Entitled, "What Price Loyalty?" the letter outlined contracts Barbour, a Washington lobbyist, and his partner, former White House aide Ed Rogers, have had the past election cycle, focusing on their lobbying against President Bush on a cable television regulation bill.

MANUFACTURING TO PICK UP IN '93, COMMERCE PREDICTS

U.S. industry, a cornerstone of President-elect Clinton's strategy to revive the sluggish economy, will grow a little faster this year than last, but not enough to generate a burst of new, well-paying manufacturing jobs, according to a Commerce Department survey released Thursday.

The forecast for 350 manufacturing and service industries predicted that most manufacturing industry groups would grow this year, with the overall value of their shipments 2.7% higher than last year's total. No summary forecast was offered for service industries, but home entertainment, apparel and restaurants are projected to lead the way.

"We're seeing a significant growth in manufacturing, but it will outpace the growth of jobs," said Jonathan Menes, director of Commerce's Office of Trade and Economic Analysis.

Companies are using increased purchases of computers and other equipment to become more automated and cost competitive, he said. That will strengthen them in the long run, but also enable them to grow without adding a lot of new workers.

GROUCHY OVER VOUCHERS

Secretary Alexander got in a little partisan bashing Thursday, taking Bill Clinton to task for choosing to send his daughter to an exclusive Washington private school while at the same time opposing tax vouchers for parents who send their own children to private schools.

Asked on "CBS This Morning" if he thought Clinton's decision made him a hypocrite, Alexander said: "The answer is yes to that. The difference in our position and that of Gov. Clinton or other people is that they say what's good for them is not good for everyone else."

Clinton spokeswoman Dee Dee Myers, reached in Little Rock Thursday, said the president-elect has always been an advocate of public schools and "he just feels that we ought not to try to split scarce public resources between public and private schools."

IRAQ

ABC's Forest Sawyer: It all sounds familiar: another face-off between Saddam and the U.S. and its allies. Yesterday the allies issued an ultimatum to Iraq: Remove anti-aircraft missiles from a no-fly zone in Southern Iraq by Friday night or see them destroyed. Today Iraq responded by asking for meetings and saying the allies have no right to make the demand.

ABC's John McWethy reports late today Iraq's ambassador to the U.N. Nizar Hamdoon requested a meeting with representatives of the U.S., Britain, France and Russia to reply to yesterday's ultimatum. Hamdoon refused to say if Iraq would remove the anti-aircraft missiles from the no-fly zone.

(Hamdoon: "Iraq does not recognize the no-fly zone because it was not a U.N. job; it was imposed by the three Western powers. And based on that, Iraq reserves all its right to move whatever it wants at the time it deems necessary.")

Intelligence sources say they have gotten other indications that some of the launchers are on the move. Earlier today General Powell cautioned that movement does not necessarily mean compliance.

(Powell: "There's always some movement taking place in that part of Iraq. I wouldn't read too much into it yet.")

Tonight at the U.N. Iraq added a surprise. Ambassador Hamdoon invited a delegation from the U.S. Congress to visit Baghdad to put relations on a better footing. The Iraqi insistence that they can move the missiles anywhere they want provides Saddam with a chance to protest what he regards as unfair treatment by the U.N. and the U.S., but it also leaves a opening for him to withdraw the missiles while claiming that he's doing it because he wants to, not because the U.S. demands it.

(ABC-Lead)

CBS's Dan Rather: President Bush and Saddam Hussein are still locked in confrontation tonight. In New York Iraq's U.N. ambassador met with U.S. and allied diplomats about the demand that Iraq remove anti-aircraft missiles from a no-fly zone. Earlier there were reports that some missiles may have been moved somewhere.

CBS's David Martin reports Iraq's ambassador to the U.N. delivered a response from Saddam that stopped short of outright defiance but contains little indication Iraq is ready to back down.

(Nizar Hamdoon: "The Iraq response was focused on the Iraqi right of sovereignty and moving its civilian and military material within the space and within the territory of the country, and Iraq has decided not to give up that right.")

U.S. intelligence said there was no indication any of the missiles were being withdrawn as required by yesterday's ultimatum.

(CBS-Lead)

NBC's Jane Pauley: Iraq told the U.N. it won't back down for now: It won't pull out anti-aircraft missiles from an area controlled by allied warplanes. It won't give up its right of sovereignty. This with just 24 hours left in the U.N.'s ultimatum to move those missiles, or else.

NBC's Fred Francis reports a Pentagon official confirmed Saddam is moving his missiles out of the threatening triangle ambush pattern. Iraqi deputy prime minister Tariq Aziz maintained today that "it is the right of Iraq to deploy air defenses throughout the country." But the betting at the Pentagon tonight is that Iraq will move the missiles out of the no-fly zone. (NBC-Lead)

SOMALIA

Sawyer says in Somalia this morning the threat of taking military action became reality. For several days U.S. Marines have come under sniper fire from a compound belonging to one of Mogadishu's main warlords. When the gunmen ignored warnings to stop, as the Marine commander in Somalia put it, we hit them with a firestorm.

ABC's Bob Zelnick reports starting at dawn Cobra helicopters fired TOW missiles at the compound where General Aidid's supporters had been told they could keep their heavy weapons. Machine guns from M-1 tanks and helicopters raked the area. After the 20-minute barrage the gunmen in the compound were warned to get out. Shortly after the warning hundreds of Marines swept through the compound, where they met only light resistance from the gunmen. The only U.S. casualty was a Marine accidentally shot in the stomach by another before the operation began. There are reports that at least half-a-dozen Somali gunmen were killed. Military officials said they decided to attack the compound after several incidents in which gunmen, believed to be operating without Aidid's authority, fired at U.S. forces. (NBC-2, CBS-3, ABC-2)

RETAIL SALES

Pauley says it was a green Christmas for the retail stores: the best sales for the holiday season in four years with one exception -- California. (ABC-9, NBC-6)

CLINTON/DEFICIT/DARMAN

NBC's Andrea Mitchell says Bill Clinton dismissed a parting shot from Bush budget director Richard Darman, who said Clinton's numbers don't add up.

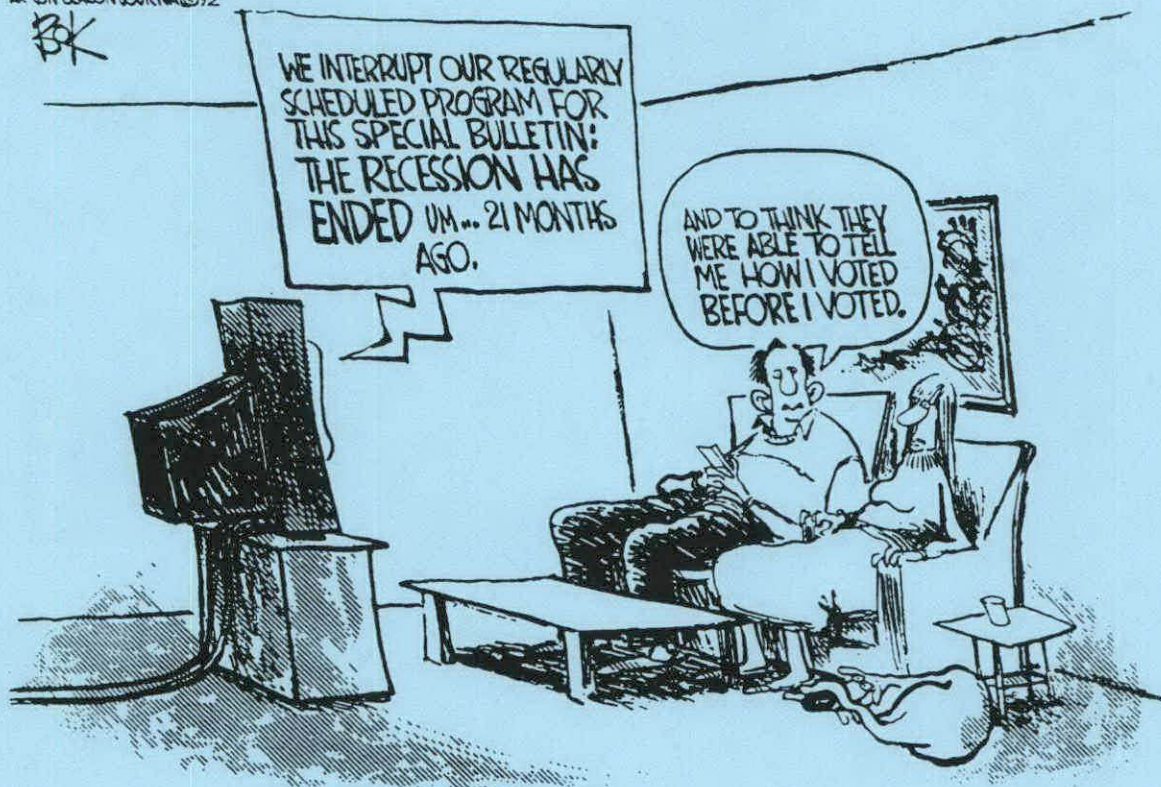

(Clinton: "I think Mr. Darman is an expert on math not adding up.") (NBC-3)

The News Summary Office will close Thursday, January 14, so this will be the last issue of The Friday Follies.

It has been our pleasure to bring you this weekly compilation; judging from the response we have received, it is by far our most popular product.

We want to express our thanks to President Bush, and to all who have been the object of the jokes -- some of them quite barbed -- found on these pages. Your indulgence in allowing us to produce the Follies is much appreciated.

Sincerely,

The News Summary Staff

Dear Mr. President,
 Thanks so much for your generous note of Dec. 17.
 I'm disappointed, but of course I understand. There say die, however. I'd like to be considered, in time, 1993, or October, 1994, for your first big post-White House newspaper conference?
 With best wishes for the holiday season & the future.
 Sincerely,
 John

Dear Mr. President & Bar,

I am glad you are home after a very successful & historic journey to Somalia & Mogadishu.

The "media" treated you quite fair for a change & admitted that what you had done in Somalia & Mogadishu was needed and was a very "Historic" ending to a long career of Public Service.

Mr. President & Barbara, I probably should not say this but I am sort of Happy (over) will be an issue much longer. Most people are tired of listening to it.

The last couple of weeks you seem to be more relaxed & eager to get things done — you have done an awful lot the past twelve years & I believe it will go very well for you in the future.

Marion & I may be in Washington before
JAN. 20th & if so hope we can give you "Hello".

Best regards & love to all of the family.

Sincerely,

Bob & Marion.

Dear Mr. President,

I certainly hope you have a very good trip to Somalia + also a very Safe Journey. Your trip to Sochi Russia + a new "Stock Treaty" will really be special for America.

Everyone that I meet with are very angry with Lawrence Walsh + wish he would Shut up + stay in Oklahoma. I guess his main goal in 1986 was to impeach Ronald Reagan over the Iran-Contra. I don't believe that Iran-Contra (over) will be on some much longer. Most people are tired of listening to it.

Best regards & love to all of the family.
