Mr. President:

✓ Your brother Jonathan called last night. Said he understands Bill Fugazy was in Oval Office and made some presentation to you. Wanted you to know he is "not a good guy" -- he is a hustler -- has serious legal problems and is bragging that you are going to play in his golf tournament. Wanted you to be aware of this.

✓ 2) The Executive Order on National Research Council should be coming from Justice this morning. This is what Peter O'Donnell called about last night and wants two minutes to discuss it with you.

the Islam Tracing.

My dear Mr. President,

I hope you can find an early moment to inscribe the attached for presentation to His Majesty King Fahd Bin Abdul Aziz.

It is one of a series of items commemorating the Islamic faith and produced by an American company headed by Saudi businessman Nasir Asheimy.

Because King Fahd's preferred title is Custodian of the Two Holy Mosques, we are told this gift from you will take on extraordinary significance. This will be the first time His Majesty will have seen this dramatic tracing of the Islamic faith from its beginnings.

A suggest draft accompanying letter is attached.

Your Majesty,

I could not help reflecting on our recent pleasant visit when I learned of an enterprise in which both our nations can take pride.

Headed by Saudi businessman, Nasir Mohammed Ashemimry, an American company is producing a series of products commemorating the significant history of the Islamic faith.

Presenting this first of the items to you as Custodian of the Two Holy Mosques gives me great pleasure as does your continuing friendship.

Thanks so much for your kind letter of January 11 and for the great honor of being the first recipient of the George Bush Freedom and Independence Award.

Unfortunately, I'm not able to accept your invitation for the black tie gala at this time. I have decided to make no commitments for the future until after I return to Houston. If you care to contact me at a later date, I'd be glad to hear from you.

Once again, thanks for such a wonderful honor. Barbara will be thrilled to hear about the day care center. We'll be home in five days and we're looking forward to it. With best wishes,

Dear President Bush:

We would like to be among the first to welcome you back HOME TO HOUSTON.

At Easter Seals, we respect and commend your leadership and personal commitment to guaranteeing civil rights for all through the 1990 Americans with Disabilities Act. This law has made an enormous impact on the lives of millions of Americans, and given new hope to the children and adults served by Easter Seals' quality rehabilitation programs nationwide.

We desire the opportunity to show our respect and appreciation for your dedication to freedom and independence for persons with disabilities. The Easter Seal Society of the Gulf Coast would like to honor you as the first recipient of the GEORGE BUSH FREEDOM AND INDEPENDENCE AWARD. This will be an annual award honoring individuals who share your vision and commitment to persons with disabilities.

Our wish is to host a Black-tie gala with your friends, supporters and fellow Houstonians allowing them the opportunity to welcome you home and thank you for your lifetime of public service. This event would be held in late Spring or early Fall, pending your availability and schedule. As a result of this evening, we would like to name our daycare center, THE GEORGE AND BARBARA BUSH MAINSTREAM DAYCARE CENTER, which serves children with and without disabilities.

We have a very active PTK group on our campus who would love to have either you or Barbara or better still, both! I promised to deliver the invitations. (attached).

The photo was made at Thanksgiving and I wanted to share the 5 generations w/you.

Our holidays were great except for one small griet. We had a blonde cocker ^(B.G.) spaniel who looked a lot like your C. Fred - I found him dead on our back porch the day after Xmas. He was 13 and looked as though he just went to sleep and didn't wake up - Those old dogs really grab your hearts, don't they?

I'm really going to miss seeing you on the Nightly News - You've been a part of our household Routine for so long. If you permit anyone to greet you at the airport in Houston, Jan 20, Weldon and I would love to be there?

MEMORANDUM FOR HON. JAMES BAKER III
CHIEF OF STAFF
THE WHITE HOUSE

SUBJECT: TODAY'S BRIEFING

DATE: FRIDAY, JANUARY 15, 1993 - 11:45 AM EST

SINCE THE MORNING PAPERS:

- o Leaders of the 14 warring Somali factions agreed to an immediate cease-fire during negotiations in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, today, with heavy weapons to be surrendered to the US-led multinational force in place there. Meanwhile, a Swiss administrator for the International Red Cross was shot and killed by a Somali worker in Bardera earlier today. The killing was reported by a UN spokesman to be accidental, but fellow Red Cross workers said the shooting occurred during an armed holdup.
- o Financial news as of 11:45 AM EST:
 - DOW (30 Industrials): Up 5 points to 3273 on a volume of 133 million shares.
 - The Consumer Price Index rose 0.1 percent in December, following a 0.2 percent rise in November.
 - Industrial production increased 0.2 percent in December, while factory utilization was slightly up to 79.3 percent.
 - The US trade deficit rose to $7.59 billion in November, up 5.1 percent.

IN THE WHITE HOUSE AND AROUND TOWN:

- o US ships and planes will encircle Haiti to help prevent a large exodus of refugees, announced Adm. J. William Kime, head of the US Coast Guard, today. Adm. Kime said the effort, dubbed Operation Able Manner, "is not a blockade," instead calling it a humanitarian move which has been coordinated with both the Bush and Clinton Administrations. The encirclement will include 17 Coast Guard vessels, five Navy ships and 12 planes, all of which will work together to patrol the area just outside Haiti's 12-mile territorial limit and intercept any refugee boats setting sail for the US. Kime said the force should be in place next week.
- o The US will likely launch a second air strike on Iraq if Baghdad continues its non-compliance with UN resolutions, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said today. Secretary Cheney also said he could not rule out a report claiming a stray bomb dropped during Wednesday's raid did heavy damage to an Iraqi apartment building.
- o Bruce Lindsey, considered one of the closest aides to President-Elect Clinton, has been charged with helping the new Administration's personnel process. Lindsey, who was named yesterday as

The White House Bulletin is a fax-delivered bulletin board covering policy, political and personnel developments in the federal government and Washington. The Bulletin welcomes information from those in Washington. (Tel.) 703-684-2020
Paul Roellig, Publisher and Editor William Armistead, Managing Editor Richard Reed, Political Editor

Assistant to the President, Senior Advisor, and Director of the Office of Personnel, will be playing a role in picking both additional White House staff, as well as assisting in the process of filling Clinton's sub-Cabinet, report Clinton officials. "He will be in charge of White House personnel matters, but is [also] going to play a role in the [sub-Cabinet] appointments," a Clinton transition official told the Bulletin this morning. The official reported that "right now, it is all going to fall under Bruce, and then they will decide" who will fill the traditional role of Director of Presidential Personnel, which has oversight on Administration-wide appointments.

Lindsey is expected to play a critical role in the early days of the Administration. There has been criticism in the national press over the perceived slowness with which the sub-Cabinet is taking shape. Exacerbating this problem is the fact that the Bush White House recently decided not to leave, as temporary caretakers, more than one senior Bush official in each department and agency, come January 21 (see below and 1/14/93 Bulletin).

- o The Clinton transition officially acted yesterday afternoon to clear up confusion over the future of Bush political appointees. While senior members of the Bush team in both the White House and Federal departments say they have had specific requests in recent days from senior members of the Clinton transition not to accept the resignations of a number of presidentially appointed and Senate confirmed Bush officials -- reportedly because their replacements were not ready to assume power -- a letter was faxed yesterday afternoon to Transportation Secretary Andy Card signaling a different intent. The letter to Card, who is serving as the Bush Administration's top transition liaison, was sent by Clinton transition deputy director Alexis Herman. The letter reads: "Per our discussion, you advised us that the Administration would not ask for resignations of non-career SES's and Schedule C appointees. This letter is to advise you that we will act on January 21 to remove Schedule C's, non-career SES's, and those Presidential appointees whose presence are not statutorily required. We are advising you of this action so that we do not leave any false expectations of continued service, and to allow appropriate time for those employees to be given sufficient notice. We would appreciate you communicating our intentions through appropriate channels."
- o Whether health care cost containment is used to reduce the deficit, expand coverage, or both, the Clinton strategy of first tackling the cost issue, and then moving on the other reforms will be "a tough sell" on Capitol Hill, according to Democratic and Republican health care policy experts who say that "incremental reforms" will be opposed by "omnibus reformers" who will fight against the same piecemeal reforms they would support as part of a larger package. As confirmation hearings for his Cabinet officials have gotten underway, Clinton and his team have been emphasizing the need to control health care costs as a necessary first step in getting the Federal budget deficit under control, with one Clinton official telling the Bulletin that "some sort of cost containment" measure is all the new President and Congress could realistically hope to accomplish this legislative year. Departing from the deficit-hawk arguments for health care reform, HHS Secretary-designate Donna Shalala said during her confirmation hearings yesterday that savings from reduced spending on Medicare and Medicaid should be used to expand coverage to the uninsured. All factions, however, are speaking of cost controls as the first object of reform.

Asked about separating cost containment from the other goals such as universal access, one Democratic source who has worked closely with congressional health care reform policy told the Bulletin that the practical politics of such a strategy would make the cost-containment effort "a tough sell. ... Health care was used successfully in the campaign. It's political presentation was powerful. But now you have to sit down and put together a bill, and the only successful effort we've seen in that regard was the Bentsen-Durenberger Better Access Bill, which passed the Senate twice last year." The source continued that critics of the Bentsen-Durenberger bill argued "that it was incremental and that it didn't go far enough," which is likely to be a criticism of any strategy that does not produce a large, omnibus health care reform bill. "Part of the dynamic of the debate," according to the source, "is that there are people who want to do this all in one fell swoop. And that has the effect of blocking action on smaller bits and pieces of reform that may be quite helpful." On the other hand, the source continued, "the people who want to do the smaller bits and pieces believe that you can't do it all in one fell swoop because you might make a terrible mistake. You might set up something that is incompatible with what we have in our country resulting in some sort of a meltdown."

An Administration official who helped develop President Bush's health care reform effort told the Bulletin that "Congress has had before it reforms -- incremental reforms if you want to call them that -- which would change the health care picture in real people's lives tomorrow. But rather than risk giving George Bush a victory, they played politics with it and did nothing. Maybe things will be different [after the election], but they've demonstrated their willingness to play politics with the issue." The Democratic source agreed that there is much politics in the health care reform effort, but disagreed that the greatest difficulties were due to the presidential election, explaining that "the really tough politics are still there - the hospitals and doctors and patients and insurers are all affected by reform and they will all have something to say."

- o Bill Clinton's "favorability" rating with American voters is at an all time high of 71 percent, up significantly from 50 percent on election day, according to a bipartisan poll conducted last week. That's the good news for the President-Elect. Less encouraging is that, despite the fact he is still five days away from being sworn in as President, the same poll shows a majority of voters think he has already backed away from numerous campaign promises. The poll was conducted jointly by Republican pollster Ed Goeas and Democratic pollster Celinda Lake and results were based on 1,000 interviews conducted nationwide. But at least one prominent analyst suggests the apparent paradox can be explained by the fact that voters regard Clinton's promises as "typical" and not "dramatic," suggesting Clinton may be forgiven for backing off on some of them. "He made no promise like 'Read my lips. No new taxes,'" William Schneider told the Bulletin. "There's no promise like that. He said he expected his plan would cut the deficit in half, but I don't think anyone ever regarded that as a realistic promise. I don't think he made the kind of hard, clear promises that were dramatic; that seized your attention and captured your imagination," said Schneider. "He did not make the kind of promise that, if broken, would lead people to call him a liar. He made pledges and promises that are fairly typical and that he won't be able to keep," Schneider added. "I think people will understand that."
- o White House watchers were a bit surprised at the number of top aides named yesterday by President-Elect Bill Clinton. One former White House official was particularly surprised at the number of special assistants named along with those at a higher rank. According to the former official: "These slots are sometimes used to give someone with an ego a title which is not as high a level as the actual position." While such staffing has been common in the past, Clinton's promise of reducing the White House staff was read as a signal by some that the White House staff might become less top-heavy. One authority on the Presidency, Stephen Hess, expressed disappointment with yesterday's announcement. "For someone who wanted a reduced White House operation, this does not bode well," Hess told the Bulletin. "Creating so many special assistant positions...leaves the White House open to end runs around the process," said Hess, referring to a common practice where Federal agency officials find a White House official willing to push their pet proposals through cracks in the Administration's policy development process. According to a former member of the Bush White House's policy development shop: "When the ratio of White House 'officials' to White House 'aides' gets out of balance, and there are too many who see themselves as decision-makers, vis a vis decision-implementers, the process can run wild -- to say nothing of leaks to the press by these people who operate on the fringe but truly believe they should be in the middle."
- o It appears as though a wave of third-tier political appointees will be ready to move into the government, come January 20th, report Bush Administration officials. While Clinton has named his Cabinet, the process of filing the second tier, or sub-Cabinet, is proceeding along a slower track. Part of the third tier, the Schedule Cs, however, appear ready to assume their positions following the Inaugural. Bush officials in the departments and agencies report cordial meetings and phone conversations with Clinton aides who claim to be their replacements and are asking for advice on how to handle their duties.

- o Colorado's Amendment 2, a law not affording special legal protection to homosexuals, passed by voters November 3 and slated to take effect today, has been temporarily blocked by a state judge this morning. The delay may be short-lived, however, as District Judge Jeffrey Bayless will announce this afternoon whether he will extend the delaying order until courts can decide the constitutionality of the voter-approved law. Governor Roy Romer had been prepared to sign Amendment 2 late Thursday, but will wait until after the judge's decision, his office said.
- o Katie Whelan has succeeded Mark Gearen as executive director of the Democratic Governor's Association. Yesterday, Gearen was named Deputy Chief of Staff in the Clinton White House. In recent months, he has been serving as co-director of the Clinton transition team while on leave from DGA. Whelan moves up from her twin posts as DGA's Deputy Director and National Finance Director. Also expected to join DGA next week as Deputy Executive Director is Hubert Riley, son of Secretary of Education-designate and former South Carolina Governor Richard Riley.
- o Following the controversy over corporate-sponsored "thank you" parties for outgoing Democratic National Committee Chairman Ron Brown, which forced cancellation of the events, GOP sources tell the Bulletin they have their own problems. Friends of outgoing Republican National Committee Rich Bond joke about having to cancel a "thank-you" dinner for Bond as a result of low interest. "There's a big difference between winning and losing," joked one Bond friend. "We were going to have our event at the Hard Times Cafe."

WHERE THEY'RE HEADED:

- o Robert Oaken, Education Assistant Secretary for Legislation and Congressional Affairs, is returning to Capitol Hill to be floor assistant for House Republican Leader Bob Michel. In this new position, Oaken will be coordinating Michel's activities with Senate Republicans and other outside groups. Diane Ravitch, Education Assistant Secretary for Educational Research and Improvement, will join the Brookings Institution, where she plans to write a new book about American education. Constantine Sidamon-Eristoff, Regional Administrator of EPA for Region 2, will join the law firm of Patterson, Belknap, Webb & Tyler. Howard Shafferman, Chief of Staff and Counselor to the FERC Chairman, will become a partner in the Washington office of the law firm Ballard, Spahr, Andrews & Ingersoll.

POLL WATCH:

- o A CNN/USA TODAY/Gallup poll of 1,000 adults, taken January 8-11, shows:
 - 55 percent expect the economy to improve during Bill Clinton's presidency, while 17 percent expect it to get worse.
 - 54 percent expect health care to become more available and affordable during Clinton's term.
 - 53 percent expect environmental quality to improve during Clinton's term.
 - 52 percent expect education to improve during Clinton's term.
 - 70 percent are "somewhat" or "very confident" in Clinton's ability to handle international crises; and 61 percent are confident he can keep the US out of war.
 - 27 percent expect Clinton to score his greatest successes as President in the area of health care; 21 percent expect him to score his greatest success by creating a strong economic recovery; and 12 percent expect Clinton's greatest success to be keeping the US out of war.
 - 25 percent think Clinton is most likely to fail in his ability to avoid a middle class tax hike; 18 percent think he is most likely to fail in significantly reducing the budget deficit; and 8 percent think he is most likely to fail in reforming the political system.

THE CLINTON BUDGET:

This morning, the Bulletin invites James McIntyre, who served as OMB Director in the Carter Administration, to discuss the progress President-Elect Clinton and his team are making on economic and budget issues.

BULLETIN: What do you think of the economic signals Clinton's team is sending so far?

McINTYRE: I'm not surprised at some of the signals, given some of the figures that have come out on the performance of the economy. Nor am I surprised that, with Leon Panetta's interest in deficit reduction, that he is focusing on that and that it's going to be an important part of whatever their plan is once they get it put together.

BULLETIN: Is criticism over the pace of the transition and economic plan fair? Is Clinton losing momentum?

McINTYRE: I think it is to the President-Elect's credit that he is taking into account all the factors and not just moving forward blindly simply because he campaigned based on the numbers as he understood them to be at the time of the campaign. Things have changed since the election. More information is available to his economic team. I think it's a very positive sign that he has taken that into consideration as he puts his economic proposals together. I don't think that, from a timing point of view, one could say they are way behind in terms of their economic proposals. They haven't taken office yet. They need to put a budget together, and a budget is going to reflect the economic decisions that the Administration makes. I don't think it is reasonable to expect the budget ready to go on the day of Clinton's swearing in. I think the plan Congressman Panetta outlined during his confirmation hearing represents a very reasonable time frame for getting the budget and the economic package up to the Congress.

BULLETIN: What about OMB Director-designate Panetta and Deputy OMB Director-designate Rivlin?

McINTYRE: I think they are a very strong team. I am very pleased that we have two people with their background and their experience heading up the Office of Management and Budget. I think they compliment each other. Both understand the need to take action immediately if they are going to do anything about the budget deficit because it takes several years for the changes to be reflected in the numbers. They will do a fine job in dealing with the budget issues for President Clinton.

BULLETIN: How tough will the OMB director's job be, and what are the types of things he must scrupulously avoid?

McINTYRE: It's going to be a very tough job because the Democrats have been out of office for 12 years. There's a lot of pent up demand. And even though, from a general point of view, people will agree that we need to get the budget deficit under control, if you look at individual proposals that Members of Congress have or even some of the appointees to the Administration are going to have, some of those are going to conflict with the objective of trying to get the deficit under control. One of the worst things from the OMB's point of view would be for the first budget proposal not to reflect the objective of trying to control the deficit. That would be a difficult thing to overcome because the decisions that you make the first year are really the critical decisions for the next three years. Secondly, OMB's role in the management of the government needs to be enhanced. I hope the leadership at OMB gives particular emphasis to the management capabilities OMB can offer to help the President as he improves the management and efficiency of the Federal Government. And particularly with the regulatory side, it's awfully important that the progress made in establishing OIRA be continued and strengthened in order to make sure the Administration is going in a singular direction with respect to its regulatory activity.

BULLETIN: What do you think about the new budgetary and economic figures?

McINTYRE: I was not terribly surprised by any of them. They were perhaps $15 billion different than what I expected, but it's been clear for some time that the deficit problem is not going to improve and that we are going to have to deal with some of the basic causes of the problem. And that leads one to have to look at the entire budget, particularly some of the entitlement programs. The Administration's feeling that health care is an integral part of dealing with the budget problems is very realistic. They will have to deal with health care. The real difficulty in dealing with health care is to balance the need for additional coverage or the uninsured or underinsured -- with the need to keep the cost of health care from rising as fast as it has been. That's going to be the real challenge. To cover the underinsured or uninsured is going to cost additional money. If you are going to offset that you've got to somehow try to control the increase in the rate of growth in health care spending. That's going to be the real challenge.

-- LAST JUNE, ON THE WAY TO THE EARTH SUMMIT IN RIO, I ANNOUNCED OUR "FORESTS FOR THE FUTURE" INITIATIVE. I SAID THEN THAT IT WAS ABOUT ACHIEVING RESULTS THROUGH COOPERATIVE PARTNERSHIPS. IF WE WORK TOGETHER IN MUTUAL COOPERATION, INSTEAD OF TRYING TO FORCE PAINFUL CONCESSIONS, WE CAN MAKE PROGRESS. THAT IS WHAT FFI IS ABOUT.

-- TODAY WE ARE CELEBRATING THE BEGINNING OF EIGHT INITIAL PARTNERSHIP ACTIVITIES THAT WILL MAKE THIS EFFORT A REALITY. THESE NEW PARTNERSHIPS WILL MEAN: ECONOMIC INCENTIVES FOR FOREST CONSERVATION; BETTER INFORMATION FOR COMMUNITIES TO PRACTICE SUSTAINABLE MANAGEMENT; BETTER COOPERATION AMONG GOVERNMENTS, RESEARCHERS, AND CONSERVATION GROUPS.

-- I ALSO PROMISED LAST JUNE TO ASK THE CONGRESS FOR $150 MILLION IN ADDITIONAL FOREST CONSERVATION ASSISTANCE NEXT YEAR. AND THAT IS EXACTLY WHAT I RECOMMENDED IN MY BUDGET STATEMENT OF JANUARY 6. I HOPE CONGRESS WILL COME THROUGH.

CONGRESSIONAL MONITOR

Volume 29, Number 9

News From the Hill

IRAQ POLICY will not be softened, Christopher tells lawmakers.

Secretary of State-designate Warren M. Christopher yesterday told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that the incoming administration would maintain a tough line with Iraq despite comments from President-elect Bill Clinton that a normal relationship could be forged between the United States and an Iraq led by Saddam Hussein.

"I see no substantial change in the position and the continuing total support for what the [Bush] administration has done," Christopher told lawmakers during his second and last day of confirmation hearings.

Christopher has received the toughest questioning so far of Clinton's Cabinet choices, but his confirmation seemed assured after Republicans decided not to press him further on whether he held back information during a 1977 confirmation hearing on what he knew about Army spying on civilians during the 1960s.

Instead, Christopher was asked to explain whether the new administration planned to change U.S. policy toward Iraq. Clinton told the New York Times that he was not "obsessed" with Saddam and that a normal relationship was possible if Iraq abided by international standards.

Christopher said that Clinton's position could be tied to his Baptist belief in redemption. "I'm not very optimistic about redemption for Saddam Hussein," said Christopher.

U.S.-Cuba relations are also unlikely to improve as long as Fidel Castro remains in power, he said.

Jesse Helms, S.C., the panel's ranking Republican, asked Christopher about a 1977 speech he gave that suggested that the two countries were moving toward normal relations. Christopher called the speech "overly hopeful, perhaps even naive," adding, "It is very hard to envisage normal relations with Cuba with Castro still in place."

HHS NOMINEE says health-care overhaul under development.

Donna E. Shalala, who has been tapped to head the Health and Human Services Department (HHS), said yesterday that she would make women's health issues a priority at the department.

She told the Senate Finance Committee that she intended to make Bill Clinton's first term the "Year of the Woman" in health care with a stepped-up search for improved treatments and cures for ovarian, cervical and breast cancers and osteoporosis.

Shalala said that Clinton was still developing his promised health-care overhaul and reworking of the welfare system and warned that there would be no overnight cures.

She also tried to put to rest concerns that Clinton will now move away from some of his campaign promises.

"None of us are changing our minds," Shalala said in response to questions from acting committee Chairman Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y.

Moynihan remarked that Shalala had hardly mentioned welfare reform in her five-page statement and said he wondered if that would be a broken campaign promise. But Shalala said that from her first day in office, if confirmed, "we will have a task force to fill out the president's welfare pledges."

On other topics, Shalala called it a "scandal" that the United States trails other nations in immunizing children against preventable diseases such as polio, rubella, mumps and measles, and noted that one in five children live in poverty.

A former chancellor of the University of Wisconsin, Shalala said that the nation has failed to fully face its responsibilities in combatting AIDS and that "silence and bigotry" had slowed the nation's response.

Shalala will testify before the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee today.

ESPY RECEIVED favorably by Senate Agriculture Committee.

Mississippi Democrat Mike Espy, President-elect Bill Clinton's pick to head up the Agriculture Department, got a warm reception at the Senate Agriculture Committee yesterday and promised panel members that he would thoroughly examine recent proposals to streamline the bulky agency.

"Many people feel that the Department of Agriculture is too large," Espy told the lawmakers. "It is a top priority of mine... to streamline it from top to bottom."

Unlike the plan offered last week by current Agriculture Secretary Edward Madigan, Espy's approach to reform would put special emphasis on reducing the bureaucracy in the District of Columbia first, and then working on changes to the field offices.

Sens. Tom Daschle, D-S.D., Max Baucus, D-Mont., and Kent Conrad, D-N.D., also said that there was some fear among farmers in their states that Espy would bias agricultural policy toward Southern concerns, rather than taking into account the issues that matter to the wheat and feed grain farmers of the upper Midwestern states.

But Espy said that he intended to be an Agriculture secretary for the whole nation and vowed to be a "bridge builder" between the interests of all the agriculture regions.

The Senate Agriculture Committee has scheduled a vote on the Espy nomination for next Tuesday.

CONGRESSIONAL PAY raise appeal filed in federal court.

A group of House and Senate Republicans yesterday asked the U.S. Court of Appeals to revoke a $4,100 pay raise that went into effect two weeks ago on the grounds that it is unconstitutional. Lawmakers' salaries jumped from $129,500 to $133,644 per year.

Another Governor Comes to D.C.

Bill Clinton was not the only governor elected to a job in Washington last November. But he snared a much bigger prize than Delaware's Republican governor, Michael N. Castle, who won a seat in the House.

"We were fellow governors," said Castle. "Now he is going in as president and I'll be here as a freshman member in the minority party. What a change in stature."

It is not unusual for a governor to make the transition to Congress, but the vast majority run for the Senate, not the House. In the 103rd Congress, there are 16 former governors in the Senate, but Castle is the only one in the House.

The last former governor to serve in the House was Democrat Joseph E. Brennan of Maine, who served two terms (1987-91) after an eight-year stint as governor. Before that, you have to go back to 1960 to find a former governor in the House.

Castle, 53, disputes the notion that the House is a step down. "I look at it this way," he said. "This is the legislature of the most important government of the world."

There are some adjustments, however. "I have to get used to dealing with someone else's agenda, not just my own," Castle said. The fact that he served in the Delaware legislature for 10 years makes the transition easier, he added.

It also helped that he was, in essence, swapping jobs with Democrat Thomas R. Carper. Castle was barred by state law from seeking a third term as governor, prompting Carper, a 10-year House member, to run.

The two men cooperated to make the transition as smooth as possible. "We literally worked together in these things," said Castle, noting that Carper retained some members of Castle's Cabinet.

Castle said he has an advantage over other House freshmen because during his gubernatorial stint he dealt with almost every issue likely to come before the 103rd Congress.

He hopes to give his new colleagues a clearer understanding of how congressional actions affect the states. He said federal mandates to fund certain programs, such as Medicaid, place an undue burden on the states, many of which, unlike the federal government, must balance their budgets every year.

Castle will have no problem convincing Clinton on that score. And unlike most House freshmen, he can probably gain a hearing from the new president. The two worked together closely in the National Governors' Association, and in 1987-88 jointly lobbied Congress to approve an overhaul of the nation's welfare system. Castle says that he has already talked with Clinton about how the relationship between the federal government and states can be improved.

But as a freshman member of the opposing party, Castle is realistic about how much clout he will have with the new president. "I have no illusions of where I stand. I'm a very low person on this totem pole," he said.

NEWS from p. 1

Over two dozen lawmakers, led by John A. Boehner, R-Ohio, and the American Constitutional Law Foundation asked the appeals court to overturn a lower court's ruling that the cost-of-living adjustment (COLA) was in line with the 27th Amendment, which was ratified last year.

The amendment bars pay raises for members from going into effect "until an election of representatives shall have intervened."

John C. Armor of the American Constitutional Law Foundation filed a lawsuit in October to block the pay raise arguing that an automatic COLA allowed members to get around voting on increasing their salary. The annual COLA was included in a 1989 law.

But U.S. District Judge Stanley Sporkin ruled in December that the increase did not violate the 27th Amendment because the sole requirement was that an intervening election be held in between the time Congress approved the raise and the time it took effect.

In filing the appeal, Armor said that he would once again argue that the 27th Amendment bars pay raises that have not been specifically and individually approved by Congress.

CLINTON NAMES Wilhelm for DNC, choices for White House staff.

President-elect Bill Clinton said yesterday that David Wilhelm was his choice as the next chairman of the Democratic National Committee (DNC) and also announced a slew of appointments for his White House staff.

Wilhelm, Clinton's campaign manager, will replace Ronald H. Brown, who was chosen to lead the Commerce Department. Clinton also named long-time aide Craig Smith as DNC political director.

Unlike Cabinet nominees, those named to the White House staff are not subject to Senate confirmation. Carol Rasco was appointed assistant to the president for domestic policy and campaign Chief of Staff Eli Segal was given the job of assistant to the president for national service.

Incoming White House Chief of Staff Thomas McLarty said that George Stephanopoulos would become director of communications and Dee Dee Myers would become press secretary, the first woman to hold that White House job.

Mark Gearan was tapped as deputy chief of staff, and Gene Sperling was named deputy assistant to the president for economic policy.

Bruce Lindsey, a Clinton associate, was named assistant to the president and director of the White House Office of Personnel.

Dear Mr. President,

With this letter I'm returning your fishing rod back to you.

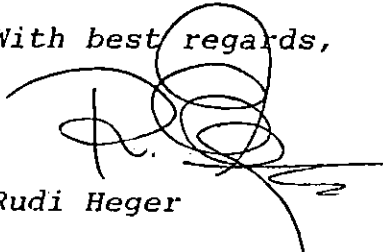

I had a new tip made, because the old one was not reusable.

I wish you many more enjoyable fishing days with this rod.

Please allow me that I once again extend my very hearty invitation to fish our famous Bavarian River 'Deutsche Traun' whenever you want.

Last but not least I would thank you for all the things that you have done that you made the reunification of Germany possible.

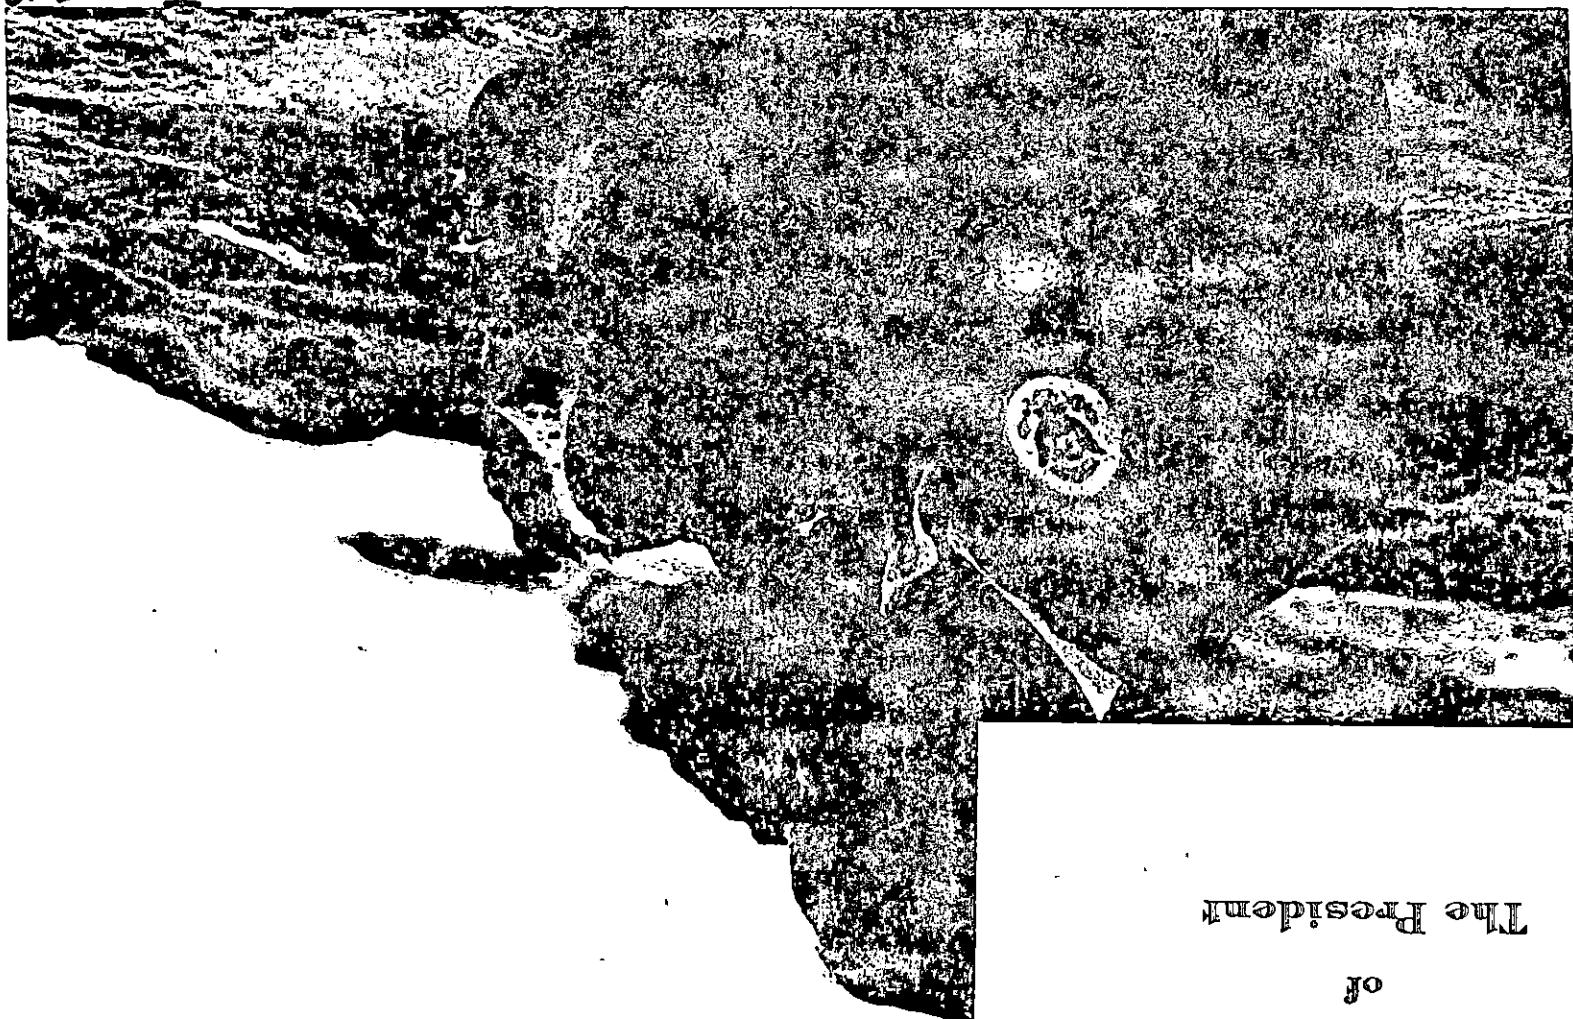

With best regards,

Rudi Heger

P.S. I'm only running a very small company here, but we all take pride in the fact that we do all of our repair work 'free of charge', so don't worry if you don't find an invoice with this shipment.
It has been our pleasure serving you.

SUBJECT: Consumer Price Indexes for December, Labor
Department Release, Tomorrow, 8:30 a.m.

*Very best wishes, Mr President,

Consumer prices rose 0.1 percent in December. Private analysts had expected a 0.2 percent increase. During 1992, consumer prices rose 2.9 percent, the smallest yearly increase since 1986; inflation in 1986 was unusually low as a result of a large decline in the price of oil.

Core inflation--consumer price inflation excluding food and energy items--was 0.1 percent in December. Core inflation was 3.3 percent during 1992, the lowest rate since 1972.

Angry Judge Says Defiant Bush Plans to Purge Iran-Contra Data

Court Battle Over Computer Records Intensifying

By STEPHEN LABATON

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14 — A Federal judge said today that the Bush Administration has indicated that it will begin destroying White House and National Security Council computer tapes on Friday, in defiance of his orders.

The judge, Charles R. Richey, today issued his second order in seven days demanding that the Administration preserve the records, which investigators consider important in the Iran-contra affair. But he said in an interview this afternoon that court papers filed by the Administration, which leaves office Wednesday, led him to believe that it will begin erasing the material on Friday morning despite his rulings.

'Really Egregious'

In the order issued earlier in the day, the judge cited court papers filed by the Administration, which assert that the Government had planned on Friday to "write over user data at each work station on all personal computer systems in order to create clean user space for the incoming Administration S.C. staff."

"This is just outrageous."

his concerns that the material would be destroyed.

White House officials declined to comment.

Justice Department lawyers argued that without the ability to purge their computer systems they would overload and shut down. The lawyers have also maintained that they want to purge the system to make it easier for the new Administration to begin its work.

Invokes Public Interest

But Judge Richey angrily rejected those arguments in court. He said that the Administration could not substantiate the claim that the system would overload and that he wants the Administration to simply save electronic messages and backup computer tapes of other records.

"The public interest favors preservation of historical materials," the judge said.

MEETING TO ANNOUNCE "FORESTS FOR THE FUTURE" ACTIVITIES

DATE: January 15, 1993
LOCATION: Roosevelt Room
TIME: 10:30 a.m.
From: C. Boyden Gray

I. PURPOSE

This event is designed (1) to announce the first activities that have been developed as part of your "Forests for the Future" Initiative, and (2) to ensure continuing public and international support for your initiatives on forest conservation.

II. BACKGROUND

Your support for forest conservation efforts is well known. In 1990, you proposed the "America the Beautiful Initiative" and set the goal of planting a billion new trees a year in the U.S. At the 1990 G-7 summit in Houston, you were the first world leader to call for an international convention on forests.

Just before going to the Rio Summit in June, 1992, you announced your Forests for the Future Initiative, which is designed to halt the loss of the earth's forests by early in the next decade. Since the announcement, Bill Reilly and Boyden Gray have headed a task force to implement the Initiative, and have developed innovative projects in eight foreign countries (including Russia, Brazil, and Mexico). These projects will be announced today.

III. PARTICIPANTS

Boyden Gray, Mike Boskin, Bob Grady, Bill Reilly, Lawrence Eagleburger, Mike Deland, Tom Lovejoy (and other senior Administration officials)

Representatives (primarily ambassadors) from Russia, Brazil, Mexico, Indonesia, Guatemala, Belize, Papua New Guinea, and Ghana

Kathryn Fuller, President, World Wildlife Fund
Daniel J. Dudek, Senior Economist, Environmental Defense Fund

IV. PRESS PLAN

Open Press

V. SEQUENCE OF EVENTS

- o The conference table will be removed from the Roosevelt Room and there will be a group of about 30 people seated in rows (with additional press people in the back of the room). The ambassadors (or their representatives) will be seated on the front row.
- o You will be the first speaker. You will enter and make brief remarks.
- o After you leave, Boyden Gray will give a brief overview of the Forests for the Future Initiative and then turn the time over to Bill Reilly, who will talk in more detail about our record on protecting forests and about the specific activities that are being announced today.

VI. REMARKS

Talking points attached.

The speech cards will be forwarded in the morning.

TALKING POINTS FOR THE "FORESTS FOR THE FUTURE" EVENT
15 January, 1993
Roosevelt Room

- Thank you all for coming. I am delighted to see so many here who care so deeply, as I do, about our forests.
- Greetings and welcome to the representatives from Belize, Brazil, Ghana, Guatemala, Indonesia, Mexico, Papua New Guinea, and Russia. I congratulate you on the progress your countries are making in forest management. We are delighted to be able to work with you in this important effort.
- It's good to see Secretary Eagleburger, EPA Administrator Bill Reilly, my counsel Boyden Gray. And the officials from all the U.S. agencies who have worked so hard to make "Forests for the Future" a reality.
- Welcome also to the representatives of non-governmental groups working alongside -- especially Kathryn Fuller of World Wildlife, Dan Dudek of the Environmental Defense Fund.
- Today I am announcing a significant step forward in the effort to conserve and sustainably manage the Earth's forests.
- Last June, on the way to the Earth Summit in Rio, I announced our "Forests for the Future" initiative. I said then that it was about achieving results through cooperative partnerships. If we work together in mutual cooperation, instead of trying to force painful concessions, we can make progress. That is what FFI is about.
- Today we are celebrating the beginning of eight Initial Partnership Activities that will make this effort a reality. These new Partnerships will mean: economic incentives for forest conservation; better information for communities to practice sustainable management; better cooperation among governments, researchers and conservation groups.
- I also promised last June to ask the Congress for $150 million in additional forest conservation assistance next year. And that is exactly what I recommended in my budget statement of January 6. I hope Congress will come through.
- These Partnership approaches show that, with effort and insight, we can truly conserve healthy, productive and successful forests for our future.

THE PRESIDENT

Dear Dick,

Thanks so much for the historic photo of Churchill outside the Nazi bunker. I am delighted to have it and it will have a special place in my library at A&M.

In five days, Barbara and I leave this special place and return to private life in Houston. We will always be grateful for the privilege we have had to serve the American people.

With warmest best wishes,

Thanks so very much - GJ BJL

The Honorable George Bush
President of the United States
The White House
Washington, D.C. 20500

Dear Mr. President:

The November election events produced a stunning parallel with this photograph: Churchill in 1945, when this picture was taken, having led to the defeat of the Nazis, awaits a less than kind ballot from the English people. The very defeat of the Nazis permitted the luxury of other priorities for the English people.

I couldn't help but make the comparison: President George Bush leading America to a stunning victory over Communism, easily equal in importance to the Nazis' defeat, finds voters with the luxury of other priorities.

As a strong George Bush supporter and long a collector of Churchill photographs, I pass this one on to you with all its rich symbolism:

As with Churchill, victorious;
As with Churchill, an electorate reversal;
As with Churchill, history's reward.

With respect,

Dieth

Dear Buddy,

Thanks for your letter asking me to consider serving as the National Chairperson for the LSUMC-Stanley S. Scott Cancer Center. I appreciate your endorsement. However, I wrote Bette Scott earlier this month and, unfortunately, had to decline an active role. My primary focus will be on my Presidential Library at Texas A&M, and I cannot make any other commitments at this time. I hope you understand.

Our address in Houston will be 10000 Memorial Drive, Houston, Texas 77024. Drop me a line and we'll see about that fishing lesson. Best wishes to you and Caroline for great 1993.

Sincerely,

*Good luck to you,
my friend!*

Dear Mr. President:

How's "near retirement"? I'm thoroughly enjoying mine. I do want to get you and James "catfish" Baker on a good trout stream in Wyoming and teach you guys a lesson. More about that later.

Today, I'm writing to remind you of my enthusiastic support for building the LSUMC-Stanley S. Scott Cancer Center in New Orleans, Louisiana.

Stan was a great guy and contributed so much to our State and Nation. Bettye Scott is leading the effort to make the dream of the center become a reality - a reality that will help find a cure for cancer.

Bettye's group is bipartisan and prominent and would like you to serve as their National Chairperson.

I know that you deserve some time off - I promise we'll go fishing whenever you want -, but we would be honored if you accepted this invitation to serve.

I remember what Stan meant to you and me.

Hope to see you soon! With warmest personal regards,

Sincerely,

Buddy Roemer

Dear Mr. President:

As you bring your distinguished presidency to a dramatic conclusion, with grace and authority, I am moved to write to you a letter of congratulations and good wishes for the future.

I hope that Marjorie and I will have the opportunity to visit with you and Barbara at some future time in Texas.

For a short time anyway, I will continue to struggle on for good causes, such as better American-Taiwan relations. You know that I have done this for a long time for the Republic of China. Our bureaucracy sadly continues to throw up road blocks even on critically important matters regarding Taiwan.

The Europeans (French and German) ought to have a right to international competitive bidding, not just American corporations. You probably do not know much about the nuclear power program, but if you can tell me anything about it, I would be interested.

In any case, you will be sorely missed by all of us.

Cordially,

Dear Gary:

The disgrace and opprobrium that your widely heralded conspiracy theories deserve have now been visited upon you in final form by the October Surprise Task Force report of the House of Representatives.

You publicly and specifically promised apologies if your squalid conspiracy theories were disproved. They have been disproved. Your time has come.

Are you now man enough to issue those apologies to President Bush, to Bill Casey's heirs, to me? You owe it to all of us.

By issuing the promised apologies to the people for whom you have caused so much trouble, you might be able to maintain your own sense of decency. Your reputation as a "scholar" will properly be in tatters, but that should not deter you from doing the right thing.

Along with many others who are watching, I'll be eager to see if you have the personal courage to do what an honorable man would do in these circumstances.
