ACTION

MEMORANDUM FOR BRENT SCOWCROFT

FROM:

WILLIAM T. PRYCE WTP

SUBJECT:

Andean Ambassadors Ask for G-7 Financial Commitments at Houston Summit

At the request of the Peruvian, Colombian, and Bolivian Ambassadors, who originally wanted to see you or Bob, I met with them on July 5 to receive an aide-memoire on the Houston Summit. The Department of State and the NSC Economic Directorate were represented. The Aide-Memoire, which is at Tab A, asks the United States to propose that the industrialized countries create a $5 billion dollar fund ($1 billion a year for five years) to assist the Andean countries to mitigate the social and economic impact of drugs and to promote alternative development.

As politely as I could, I told them that the President is vitally concerned about drugs, and the need to help the Cartagena countries in our common battle. He plans to raise this issue at Houston. However, I cautioned, and the Economic Directorate reaffirmed, that specific dollar commitments would probably not be coming out of Houston. We will continue to dedicate substantial resources to the area, and are asking our allies to do the same. I also stressed yet again that drug program agreed at Cartagena is a three-part whole, involving demand reduction, interdiction, and alternative development. We have to bear this in mind when we look at resources being devoted to the fight against drugs.

In advance of the Houston meetings, I wanted to make certain that you are aware that our Cartagena Summit partners are hoping for big things, and are looking to the President to be their champion. You might want to mention this to the President prior to Houston.

W.
Concurrence by: Eric Melby

RECOMMENDATION

That you mention this to the President in advance of the Houston Summit.

MEMORANDUM FOR ROBERT M. GATES

FROM: WILLIAM T. PRYCE

SUBJECT: State of Play on Brady Plan for Uruguay for Your Meeting with Larry Eagleburger

1. The Uruguayans think the U.S. banks are going slow -- they may be right.
2. City Bank and Bank of America, the lead bankers, are meeting with the Uruguayans in New York on Wednesday. They tell Treasury that they may be close to a deal. Treasury is in close touch.
3. Treasury has not weighed in hard so far and appears somewhat reluctant to do so.
4. President Lacalle has written the President asking his help. The letter (copy attached at Tab A -- looks like it was done on his home computer) has been staffed to State and Treasury for a recommended reply.
5. Treasury recommends we wait till we hear what happened at the Wednesday meeting before moving further.
6. Meg Lundsager has done a short memorandum on the substance of the problem (attached at Tab B). The bottom line appears to be:
  - a) Uruguay wants to do a direct buy back with new money. This would enable them to buy back at about 45% of face value. Spending $400 million would get them an $800 million reduction.
  - b) The principal commercial banks (City Bank and Bank of America) are not particularly eager to participate because they think the debt they have is pretty credit-worthy. They also feel that Uruguay has plenty of gold reserves and cash to effect a buy back without them providing new money to finance it.

- c) The commercial banks have already agreed to a waiver so that Uruguay is free to purchase its own debt.
- d) If a deal is concluded the banks will probably want to get a greater percentage of face value than the 45% Uruguay could get if it used its own money to buy back its debt quietly.

7. I suggest that we wait to hear the results of the Wednesday meeting, and then consider whether and how to push Treasury.

Mr. Eagleburger's correspondence is returned at Tab C.

MEMORANDUM FOR:

William T. Pryce

( PRYCE )

FROM:

Margrethe Lundsager
(LUNDSAGER)

SUBJECT:

uruguay

DECLASSIFIED
PER NSC WAIVER, 1500 2021-02
By SS NARA, Date 3/1/24

Bill - call if you need more. Meg

Uruguay - as of July 9

Uruguay is pursuing a Brady plan debt reduction deal with the commercial banks holding its external debt. About $1.1 billion would be covered by the deal. The banks and the GOU are still far apart for several reasons:

1. The GOU wants to do a direct cash buy-back plus new money. The reason for this is that Uruguay's debt trades on the secondary market at about 45-46 percent of face value, so spending $400 million in buying back debt would retire about $800 million in debt (the GOU is saying privately it would be satisfied with about $800 million in debt reduction).
2. Uruguay does not wish to pursue some of the other aspects of the Brady plan - collateralized debt reduction and interest reduction - because the government is trying to promote the country as a regional financial center and does not wish to affect its future credit rating with low interest/reduced principal debt.
3. The commercial banks have agreed to the needed waiver which means that Uruguay is now free to purchase its debt. However, the two largest banks holding its debt, Citibank and Bank of America together holding about $400-500 million, do not wish to participate in a debt buyback or lend much new money because they basically believe Uruguay is a relatively decent credit risk and they wish to hold onto the debt.
4. Citi and BofA also feel that Uruguay has plenty of gold reserves and cash on hand to effect a buyback without their providing new money to finance it. These two banks would prefer a traditional rescheduling which would temporarily reduce Uruguay's debt servicing costs by postponing payment of principal.

5. Uruguay and the banks are meeting this Wednesday in New York to try to advance the negotiations. Treasury has been keeping in touch with the parties, but it does not appear that Treasury has yet weighed in heavily to encourage a deal. In fact, Treasury may end up recommending to the GOU that it just quietly begin buying back its debt on the secondary market. Recall that the GOU will soon be getting its IMF loan, which will provide additional cash. The one advantage of buying back debt quietly is that you can do so at the prevailing market price without necessarily driving up the price (Mexico, in its deal last year, ended up with a negotiated 'price' of its debt much higher than the prevailing secondary market price).

6. Treasury will get a read out of the Wednesday meeting promptly and will keep us informed of next steps.

His Excellency, Robert Gates:

Bob: I'd like to talk to you about this.
You have a moment.

Bill Pryor -

I'm meeting with Eagleburger tomorrow - midday. What can
I tell him about this?

<TEXT>

~~CONFIDENTIAL~~ SECTION 01 OF 02 MONTEVIDEO 03049
TREASURY FOR UNDER SECRETARY MULFORD AND DEPUTY ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOLSOM
E.O. 12356: DECL:OADR
TAGS: EFIN, OVIP, UY
SUBJECT: GOU CONCERNED AT DELAY IN NEGOTIATING BRADY
- PLAN DEBT REDUCTION

REF: (A) MONTEVIDEO 2913, (B) MONTEVIDEO 2747

1. ~~CONFIDENTIAL~~ - ENTIRE TEXT.

~BEGIN SUMMARY~

2. SUMMARY: THE GOU IS EXTREMELY CONCERNED THAT NEGOTIATIONS WITH ITS COMMERCIAL BANK CREDITORS FOR A BRADY PLAN DEBT REDUCTION ARE DRAGGING ON INTERMINABLY. FOR MAXIMUM POSITIVE IMPACT ON THE GOVERNMENT'S FISCAL ADJUSTMENT PROGRAM, THE GOU NEEDS TO CAPTURE THE INTEREST SAVINGS FROM DEBT REDUCTION BY THE
BEGINNING OF THE FOURTH QUARTER OF THIS YEAR. THEY HAVE ASKED FOR OUR ASSISTANCE IN URGING THE BANKS TO PROMPTLY CONCLUDE THE AGREEMENT. END SUMMARY.
~END SUMMARY~

3. MINISTER OF ECONOMY AND FINANCE ENRIQUE BRAGA
CALLED THE CHARGE AND ASKED THAT WE URGE EITHER
SECRETARY BRADY OR UNDER SECRETARY MULFORD TO INTERCEDE
ON URUGUAY'S BEHALF WITH CITIBANK'S REED OR RHODES
IN ORDER TO EXPEDITE THE DEBT REDUCTION NEGOTIATIONS.
HE FEARED THAT AT THE PRESENT SLOW RATE THERE WILL BE NO AGREEMENT BY THE TIME PRESIDENT BUSH ARRIVES IN SEPTEMBER WHICH TO SAY THE LEAST, WOULD NOT BE A POSITIVE CONTRIBUTION TO THE ATMOSPHERE SURROUNDING THE VISIT, THE SUBSTANTIVE THEME OF WHICH WILL LIKELY BE ECONOMIC. BRAGA MADE THIS REQUEST AFTER HAVING CONVERSATIONS LAST WEEK WITH RHODES AND BACO CHAIRMAN
DE LA OSSA. THESE CONVERSATIONS LED HIM TO BE SOMEWHAT PESSIMISTIC ABOUT THE OUTLOOK. HE SPECIFICALLY
MENTIONED THAT CITIBANK SHOULD DEFINITELY "FORGET" ABOUT ITS IDEA OF THE COMMERCIAL BANKS BEING GIVEN
GOU TREASURY BONDS IN EXCHANGE FOR NEW MONEY; THIS OPTION WAS TOTALLY UNACCEPTABLE. IT WOULD BE THE
FIRST TIME THAT SUCH A CONDITION HAD BEEN IMPOSED UPON A BRADY PLAN COUNTRY, AND HE RHETORICALLY ASKED WHY
SINGLE OUT URUGUAY FOR THIS AND OTHER UNATTRACTIVE OPTIONS NOT REQUIRED OF, E.G., THE PHILIPPINES AND COSTA RICA, IF NOT TO STALL AND MAKE THE DEAL UNACCEPTABLE TO URUGUAY.

4. THIS REQUEST FOLLOWS ON A SIMILAR ONE MADE TO THE CHARGE BY PRESIDENT LACALLE AND TRANSMITTED IN MONTEVIDEO'S 2747 OF JUNE 6. WE WOULD APPRECIATE RECEIVING SOME FEEDBACK FROM TREASURY ON THESE REQUESTS INASMUCH AS THE CHARGE WILL PROBABLY HAVE CONTACT WITH LACALLE (AND UNDOUBTEDLY WITH BRAGA) IN THE NEAR FUTURE AND WOULD LIKE TO BE ABLE TO SAY SOMETHING ON THIS SUBJECT AS IT IS IN THE FOREFRONT OF THEIR CONCERNS.

DECLASSIFIED
PER DOS WAIVER, November 6, 2015
By SS NARA, Date 3/1/84

5. BY WAY OF BACKGROUND, SOME OF OUR OBSERVATIONS
RELATIVE TO THE URUGUAYAN DEBT REDUCTION ARE AS FOLLOWS:

- A. THE GOU WOULD PREFER A SIMPLE AGREEMENT WHICH WOULD INCLUDE ONLY CASH BUY-BACK AND NEW MONEY. THEY PREFER THIS TYPE OF AGREEMENT MOSTLY BECAUSE THEY BELIEVE IT COULD BE CONCLUDED MUCH QUICKER THAN AN AGREEMENT WITH MULTIPLE OPTIONS. NONETHELESS,
ACCORDING TO THEM, BANK OF AMERICA AND MANUFACTURER'S
HANOVER ARE PRESSING FOR THE INCLUSION OF A THIRD
OPTION, PRESUMABLY INTEREST CAPPING. WHILE THE GOU
WOULD PREFER DEBT BUY-BACK TO INTEREST CAPPING SINCE THE INTEREST SAVINGS WOULD BE MORE SIGNIFICANT FOR DEBT BUY-BACK, THEY OPPOSE THE ADDITIONAL OPTION MAINLY BECAUSE THEY BELIEVE THAT IT WILL RESULT IN DELAYING AGREEMENT.

- B. THE GOU EXPECTS TO RECEIVE A TELEX FROM THE
MANAGING DIRECTOR OF THE IMF WITHIN THE NEXT FEW DAYS
GRANTING STAFF APPROVAL FOR THE STANDBY ARRANGEMENT.
THE IMF BOARD WOULD VOTE ON THE ARRANGEMENT SOME TIME
IN JULY. WITH THE STANDBY ARRANGEMENT AND THE WAIVERS (WHICH HAVE BEEN RECEIVED FROM OVER 90 PERCENT OF THE CREDITOR BANKS) IN HAND, THE GOU SEES NO REASON FOR FURTHER DELAYS IN NEGOTIATIONS. GOU NEGOTIATORS WILL BE TRAVELING TO NEW YORK ON JULY 8 FOR INDIVIDUAL
CONSULTATIONS WITH THE BANKS AND HOPE TO HAVE A NEGOTIATING SESSION LATER IN THE WEEK.

- C. EMBASSY STRONGLY URGES THAT WASHINGTON

POINTS TO BE MADE FOR MEETING WITH COLOMBIAN PRESIDENT-ELECT GAVIRIA

Courtesy Points

- Congratulations again on your May 27 victory. I look forward to working closely with you. You have already demonstrated your courage in the face of drug mafia threats.
- Please convey my regards and respect to President Barco when you return home.
- I intend to send a high-level delegation to your August 7 inauguration. How do you see the security situation there?

Drugs

- I hope you are not taking that silly Newsweek article seriously. You have my commitment, as did President Barco, that all of our drug interdiction activities involving Colombia will be coordinated fully with you.
- In that regard, we have drawn up some plans for enhanced interdiction efforts using our military assets in the Caribbean and Mexico. We would like to brief you personally. We could even do this today, if you have time.
- Our counter-narcotics assistance request for FY 91 for Colombia is $80.5 million. We will work hard to get this approved by Congress.

- We are also planning to notify Congress of our intention to make available an additional $20 million for Colombia in the remainder of this fiscal year.
- We are concerned that we are taking a great deal of criticism over the alleged "militarization" of our drug policy. We both know this is not true. We need leaders of the Andean countries to stand up and say publicly that military assistance is something that they need and have requested. This assistance has to be seen as part of a broad effort to eliminate the scourge of drugs, which undermines all our societies.
- If leaders are unwilling to speak out, we risk losing this major component of our assistance effort to Colombia. We realize that if we cannot interdict broadly, our economic programs don't stand a chance of being effective. This phony issue of "militarizing" the anti-drug effort is a big problem for us, and we need your help.

Economic Issues

- I know that Colombia has important economic concerns which we are trying to address. We hope Congress will appropriate $50 million for Colombia as part of a regional counter-narcotics Economic Support Fund, in addition to the other funds sought for the drug fight.
- I also anticipate that the decisions on additional GSP for the Andean countries will be announced soon.

- We are still looking at other options for enhancing trade with the Andean region, separate from those I already announced in my "Enterprise for the Americas" speech on June 27.
- Colombia was the first country to ask us to conclude a framework agreement. I understand our negotiators are working hard on this.
- We are also still working on solving the GATT Subsidies Code issue. As I explained to President Barco on June 5, our position is a worldwide policy position. Let's keep working until we reach a mutually acceptable solution.
- President Barco also raised with me the problems you have had with the World Bank. I told him that we would seek clarification of the situation with the World Bank to ensure you got fair treatment, and we have done so. I now understand that you are resolving this problem. We are glad we were able to help.

COLOMBIA

*Ambassador to the United States
(since July 1987)*

Veteran Liberal Party member Víctor Mosquera is a widely respected politician who is frequently mentioned as a possible 1990 Liberal Party presidential candidate. Although he is not in President Virgilio Barco's inner circle, he is an influential member of the Liberal Party's conservative faction led by former President—and current party president—Julio César Turbay.
1.4(c); 1.4(d); 3.5(c)

He is a hardliner on internal subversion issues. Twice Governor of Cauca Department, the site of widespread activity by guerrillas and drug traffickers, he advocates sterner government measures against both groups. (His brother was kidnapped by guerrillas and held for ransom in 1984.) Mosquera is supportive of US assistance for his country's narcotics control efforts.
1.4(c); 1.4(d); 3.5(c)

He frequently points to the international nature of the drug problem and has called for increased assistance from the consumer countries in dealing with the issue of narcotics.
1.4(c); 1.4(d); 3.5(c)

Mosquera was born on 1 October 1919. He is a graduate of the law school of the University of Cauca. Early in his career he was editor of a provincial newspaper. He held several elective positions in Cauca before serving as Governor in the 1950s. He was elected to the national Senate in 1958 and served as its President in the early 1960s. He has also been Ambassador to the United Kingdom. Mosquera was a member of the Liberal Party's National Executive Committee in the early 1960s and has served on the party's National Directorate since 1962. He was president of the party during 1979-80. Largely because of his acceptability to both major parties and his reputation for being above the political fray, Mosquera has served two terms (1980-82 and 1986-88) as Presidential-Designate, a prestigious but largely ceremonial position whose holder acts as president during the absence or incapacitation of the incumbent.
1.4(c); 1.4(d); 3.5(c)

1.4(c); 1.4(d); 3.5(c) According to press reports, he underwent heart surgery early in 1988. He has traveled widely in Latin America and Europe, and in the early 1970s he visited the United States as a Governmental Affairs Institute grantee to study the US electoral process. He speaks limited English. Mosquera owns a large cattle ranch in his home region. Married to the former Cecilia Paz, he has five children.

As its involvement in the drug war grows, the Pentagon outlines a plan to crush the cartels

Call it D-Day in the Andes, Apocalypse of the Drug Lords, the ultimate bust. Hundreds of troops from three nations swoop down on scores of targets—hidden airfields, jungle factories, heavily guarded haciendas—to cripple, in one swift blow, the cocaine cartels of South America. This is not a scene from a Tom Clancy novel but a plan now being worked up at United States Southern Command, home of Gen. Maxwell Thurman, the hero of the Panama invasion. In a "secure room" called the Counternarcotics Operation Center at the Quarry Heights headquarters of Southcom in Panama City, 30 officers are preparing "target folders" aimed at severing the links that tie Latin America's narco-traffickers. Thurman's plan, according to briefing documents obtained by NEWSWEEK, calls for a "simultaneous (regional) attack to impact the cartel's entire support structure." Translated from Pentagonese, that means a hemispheric drug raid. According to a senior Southcom officer, the intelligence necessary to pick the targets will be ready as early as "next month."

The model is Thurman's invasion of Panama last December—an all-out assault to "take down" the forces of Gen. Manuel Noriega. This time the actual troops would not be American but the forces of Colombia, Bolivia and Peru, which would attack cartel targets in their countries at the same time. But all the logistics, planning, training and support would be provided by the Americans. Says a Defense Department analyst familiar with Southcom's activities, "We wouldn't pull the trigger, but we'd point the gun." And if need be, Thurman is prepared to go in with U.S. commandos. A well-placed intelligence source has told NEWSWEEK the Pentagon has plans to send American special forces to "snatch" Colombian drug lords if President Bush gives the order.

To be sure, a joint South American drug raid is unlikely to happen anytime soon—or possibly ever. Lawmakers in Congress would be loath to see the United States repeat the mistake of Vietnam and be drawn into direct combat in the Andean highlands. Diplomats at the State Department are reluctant to offend the sensibilities of America's southern neighbors. And South American nations have a hard time working with each other, much less with gringos from up north. Thurman's scheme is "the kind of high-profile operation that will revive memories of U.S. imperialism," warns Ted Galen Carpenter, director of foreign-policy studies at the Cato Institute, a libertarian think tank in Washington.

Yet Thurman is no loose cannon. The

The Challenge

The armed forces' assessment of the drug problem is daunting. A look at what they have to deal with:

■ In the Andean rain forests, some 750,000 campesinos (peasant farmers) grow 220,000 tons of coca leaves annually.

■ Near growing sites, usually in Peru and Bolivia, the leaves are rendered down to 3,000 tons of coca paste. Transported to labs in Colombia, the paste is further refined to 1,300 tons of cocaine powder.

■ The cocaine is smuggled out of South America in small portions, on between 3,000 and 5,000 ship voyages and on 1,300 to 3,500 airplane flights a year.

■ The bulk of the cocaine goes to the 2 million to 3 million cocaine users in the United States, where it is quickly dispersed from wholesalers to street-corner dealers.

The Response

The military is spending more to control drug traffic, and high technology is playing an increasing role in the battle:

■ Department of Defense will spend $450 million fighting smugglers this fiscal year and $1.2 billion in 1991. U.S. Southern Command wants to spend $191 million next year.

■ Air Force radar planes now spend 40 percent of their time on drug surveillance. Soon, the radars that monitor Soviet missiles will also track high-altitude drug planes.

■ By 1992, radar balloons will be deployed along the southern U.S. border and coast to catch low-flying drug planes. A $143 million radar system that will cover the Caribbean is under construction in South America.

■ Next year some 100 U.S. military advisers will be in the Andes nations training local troops to fight drug traffickers.

LES STONE—SYGMA

Concerns: Colombian soldier burns a cocaine cache

Pentagon has been invited to join the drug war by the White House and Congress alike. In 1988 Congress officially designated the Defense Department as the lead agency in stopping drug smuggling. Drug czar William Bennett has acknowledged that trying to block drugs at the border is a hopeless exercise. Coast Guard and DEA busts have barely dented the flow. The supply of cocaine can be stopped or significantly slowed only by "going to the source"—hitting the drug traffickers in their lairs. At first, the Pentagon refused to be drafted. But at Bush's insistence Defense Secretary Dick Cheney last year ordered the Pentagon brass to play along.

Now that the cold war is over, the armed services have become eager participants in the drug war. "It's their new meal ticket now that the commies are not their big threat," says a congressional staffer. The Pentagon plans to spend $450 million fighting drugs this year. Next year the counternarcotics budget will more than double to $1.2 billion. The military mind-set, says one Southcom briefing, will have to change from nuclear megatons to cocaine kilos. Thurman already has his goal in mind: he wants 500 tons seized within a year.

Turf battles: Generals are paid to plan future wars. Their civilian masters are supposed to decide whether and when to fight them. Will the military men take over the war on drugs from the civilians they are supposed to serve? The G-men at the FBI and the DEA will resist the Pentagon's effort to usurp their turf in the war on drugs. "The CIA and the military have spent 10 years trying to find one goddam hostage in Lebanon," grumbles a senior DEA official. "What makes them think they can come down here and solve the dope problem?" But it would be a mistake to underestimate Thurman, who is as skilled at bureaucratic infighting as he is at waging war on the battlefield. "There is no doubt in [Thurman's] mind," says a well-connected Pentagon source. "He's in charge. It's his command that's drawing up the plans. Thurman is a 24-hour-a-day guy and no one is going to step in his way. If you throw up political obstacles, he'll steamroll you."

Already, Air Force AWACS planes spend 40 percent of their time trying to spot drug runners. Southcom wants to spend $191 million fighting drugs next year, sending as many as 100 military trainers into Latin America to teach tactics to local armies. A seven-man Special Operations Command team already helps the DEA plan drug raids in the region. The United States will spend $143 million for new radars across the northern rim of the continent to provide blanket coverage of the Caribbean Basin by 1991. The military has always loved high tech, and Thurman has Southcom researching new gadgetry, including radars that can look through a wall—or a jungle canopy—like X-rays. The Pentagon is also tinkering with an aerial vapor-sniffing detector to pick up the smell of chemicals used in clandestine drug labs.

In the military view, the war on drugs has been fought up to now by amateurs. "[DEA agents] are cops," said an officer on Thurman's staff. "Very brave. But cops." To Thurman, cops are for collaring criminals on the street, not masterminding the overthrow of international cartels. Southcom officers deride DEA record keeping as a shoe-box operation. (DEA is still trying to computerize its files.) The Pentagon scoffs that drug intelligence in Latin America moves with all the speed of the pony express: DEA agents working in forward areas have to wait days for sensitive reports to be flown in by helicopter. Too often, drug traffickers have fled by the time the police raid their hideouts. In Bolivia, Thurman is installing a prototype Command and Management System that will allow agents in the field to hook up, via satellite, with computerized intelligence records in Washington. Using a sophisticated computer program code-named Hawkeye, field agents will be able to photograph a drug runner's plane with a digitalized camera, send the image through the computer system to Washington and learn the likely route and destination of the plane "within two minutes," according to a Defense Department document.

It remains to be seen whether this computer wizardry will work any better than the high-tech clunkers sometimes produced by the Pentagon. Organizing, not inventing, is the military's real skill, and Thurman is a skillful and determined organizer. Already the Southcom commander has dispatched a team of officers from Panama to expand a command-and-control outpost in an office building in Rosslyn, Va., close to the Pentagon.

Thurman's thinking about how to battle the drug lords is deeply influenced by his success in Operation Just Cause, the invasion of Panama. The key to victory was to attack the Panama Defense Force everywhere and at once, Thurman believes. In his private Washington briefings, he likes to use the analogy of the Pillsbury Doughboy: poke him in the stomach and he just expands someplace else. So too with the cartels, says Thurman: attack them in one spot, and they just move on to another.

To illustrate the problem, Thurman points to the raid on La Petrolera, a major drug transshipment center in the remote jungle southeast of Bogotá. On the night of May 3, Colombian special forces backed by helicopters and fighter planes raided the center. The raid was portrayed as a great success: three cocaine labs seized, 24 airstrips cratered, six aircraft and 18.5 tons of narcotics worth $860 million seized, two traffickers killed, 23 arrested. The United

Max Thurman: The 'RoboCop' General

On June 13, 1989, Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney issued a two-paragraph press release announcing the pending retirement of Gen. Maxwell R. Thurman, 58. Five weeks later, on July 20, Cheney quietly reversed himself, announcing that Thurman had just been appointed commander in chief of the U.S. Southern Command at Quarry Heights, Panama. The full story of what happened between June 13 and July 20 is still a matter of conjecture, but this much at least is known: at some point, Thurman had a meeting with George Bush that led him to the hottest command slot in the post-cold-warrior Army.

One year later Thurman is widely known as the man who brought down Manuel Noriega. What is also clear, in the wake of NEWSWEEK's reporting on U.S. plans for a military offensive against the Colombian drug cartels, is that Thurman is the Pentagon's point man in the hemispheric war against cocaine. How those plans turn out, and whether Thurman will be hero or goat, very much remain to be seen. But for the moment, at least, the brusque, hard-driving North Carolinian is being touted as one of the best generals around—the kind of soldier who throws himself into his mission relentlessly and totally. Thurman, to cite one pertinent biographic detail, has never married, and a Pentagon official says he has just "never had time" for a personal life. "That wasn't his purpose for being," this official says. "His cause has been furthering Army objectives... He's sort of like a RoboCop."

RoboCop or not, Thurman is a formidable leader—a man who drives his staff with a combination of brute energy and force of intellect. He is something of a rarity among Army generals in that he is not a West Point graduate, and he has long been known by fellow officers as "the Maxatollah" for his by-the-book zeal. He has now turned Southern Command upside down by purging officers loyal to his predecessor. The purge has led to grumbling at Quarry Heights and Thurman, some joke, is now in a dead heat with Noriega for the title of Most Hated General in Panama.

But Thurman is adept at staring down his critics. After the Panama invasion, he dazzled a roomful of senators by delivering a masterful briefing entirely without notes.

And when visiting members of Congress peppered his staff with acrid questions about the Army's rock-music barrage of the papal nunciature, Thurman himself stood up. "I am the music man," he said defiantly, and the question was dropped.

Delicate mission: Like the invasion of Panama itself, Thurman's appointment to Southern Command sends an unmistakable message to Latin America—and to his critics that is precisely the problem. In their view, Thurman lacks both the knowledge and the diplomatic skill required for so delicate a mission, and some predict that his hard-charging style will touch off an anti-American backlash. "Thurman had barely set foot in Latin America and suddenly he's Napoleon," says one unhappy Southcom veteran. "And now he has the answer to any problem, in Panama or wherever: send in the troops." His defenders say Thurman knows exactly where the political line is. "He'll move right up to the line," a former aide says, "but he won't step over it." If so, Thurman may yet become the mailed fist behind the velvet glove of U.S. policy toward the region—and if he fails, Bush's drug-war strategy will almost certainly falter too.

States played an important secret role, providing intelligence, mapping and planning for the operation. But to Thurman and his men, La Petrolera only proved the Doughboy theory. After the raid, drug runners simply moved to other shipment hubs. In his briefings, Thurman reveals that La Petrolera gave him the same valuable intelligence as the failed Oct. 3, 1989, coup attempt against Noriega. By observing how the enemy reacted to a single blow, he can now plan for knockout punches at several sites.

The United States is determined "not to Americanize" the Andean drug war, says the assistant secretary of State for international narcotics matters, Melvyn Levitsky. But Thurman wants to make sure that the United States controls the battle from behind the scenes. A model for what the Southcom commander has in mind was the ambush of Colombian drug kingpin José Gonzalo Rodríguez Gacha last December. The air assault, which killed Gacha and his 17-year-old son, was conducted by Colombian troops. The United States denied any involvement. However, intelligence sources have told NEWSWEEK that the raid was coordinated by American commandos working for the CIA.

As details of Thurman's plan leak out, there are sure to be grumbles on Capitol Hill, where lawmakers complain that they are being kept in the dark. "We want to examine this policy before body bags come back to this country," says Democratic Sen. John Kerry of Massachusetts, a Vietnam veteran. The outcry will be louder in Latin America. Although Thurman's briefings stress the need to respect local sovereignty, critics say he is somewhat insensitive to political considerations. "If you're a political person you're not listened to in his command," says a Pentagon aide. Military officers who are Latin specialists in U.S.

embassies in the region have been purged for less diplomatically inclined officers with an aggressive "operational" approach. Some Pentagon and State Department analysts worry that American meddling will enable opposition parties to accuse the fragile Latin American governments of selling out to Uncle Sam. "Latin Americans are going to be sophisticated enough to know who is pulling the strings," says Carpenter of the Cato Institute.

So far, Colombia and Bolivia have been amenable to increasing U.S. involvement in their drug wars. Peru has not. Newly elected President Alberto Fujimori has made clear that he wants no U.S. military involvement beyond training or equipping his troops. For the moment the Lima government has balked at accepting $35 million in U.S. military aid. "We're on hold," says a State Department official. "Southcom can do all the planning it wants and it may not go anywhere in Peru."

Even if Thurman could persuade the Andean nations to go along with his plan, would it work? Thurman's Panama analogy only goes so far, warn some defense analysts. In Panama the war zone was largely limited to the 20 square miles of Panama City. Bolivia, Colombia and Peru, by contrast, are roughly one third the size of the United States. Operation Just Cause was fought with 22,500 elite U.S. troops. Thurman will have to depend on unevenly trained and sometimes corrupt local forces to carry out his plans. U.S. intelligence had thoroughly penetrated the PDF, while information about the cartels remains spotty. While the drug lords have no actual armies, they have been buying some powerful weapons. Last May FBI agents in Florida arrested two Colombians allegedly attempting to buy 120 stolen Stinger anti-aircraft missiles on behalf of the Medellín cartel. What is intended to be a lightning raid could turn into a long counterinsurgency struggle against armed guerrillas like Peru's Sendero Luminoso, who already control the coca-growing region in the Upper Huallaga Valley.

Cocaine flow: There are small signs at the moment that drug flow into the United States is abating and that demand is slackening. Coca prices in the Andes are dropping, which, if it continues, may persuade farmers to shift to other crops, while in some U.S. cities the wholesale price is rising. If things are going so well, asks Sen. Chris Dodd, Democrat of Connecticut, why embark on a risky new military adventure? Answer:

the good news could be short-lived. The CIA estimates a 35 percent increase in the coca crop in the last two years and even higher production in the future. In that case, Thurman will be well positioned to move. He has a plan, while others have none. His proposal has not made it to George Bush's desk yet, but Thurman is a personal favorite of the president. Though cautious in many respects, Bush showed a taste for military action when he ordered the invasion of Panama. The military man who gave Bush his greatest victory stands ready to offer a second gambit using Latin troops. Thurman's plan may seem at once improbable and potentially disastrous. But in history's long march, so are most wars.

PRES NOTED SUMMARY

Dear George,

The summit meeting of NATO Heads of State and Government in London, the results of my recent visit to the Soviet Union, which I informed you about on the telephone, and the latest round of two-plus-four talks at Foreign Minister level, have formed the external framework for the completion of German unification before the end of this year.

At this crucial stage in the history not only of the German people but of Europe as a whole I wish to convey to you once again my warmest thanks for the tremendous support which you and the American people have given us Germans from the very moment we embarked on the path to unity.

I recall with particular gratitude our telephone conversation after the opening of the Berlin wall last November, and also your letter of February 9, which can already be regarded as a document of historical significance in the development of German-American friendship and partnership. I would also make special mention of our good fireside talks at Camp David and of the continuous close coordination of views between ourselves and our staff in the weeks since.

His Excellency
Mr George Bush,
President of the United States of America,
Washington, D.C.

This cooperation proved particularly valuable in the run-up to the London NATO summit and the drafting of the London declaration. Through your personal initiative in bringing it about you have rendered a historic service to the Alliance, for with that declaration we have thrown open the door to unified Germany's incorporation in a changing NATO, to the further consolidation of transatlantic partnership, to a new relationship of friendship and cooperation with the Warsaw Pact countries, and not least to the strengthening of the Alliance itself as an organization embracing the free democracies of Western Europe and North America which is committed to common values and policies based on mutual solidarity.

I would be most grateful, George, if you would also convey my thanks to your staff, and especially to Secretary of State James Baker and National Security Advisor General Brent Scowcroft.

Hannelore joins me in extending warm greetings to you and Barbara.

Sincerely,

(sgd) Helmut Kohl
