STATEMENT OF PURPOSE

The Century III Leaders Program is designed to:

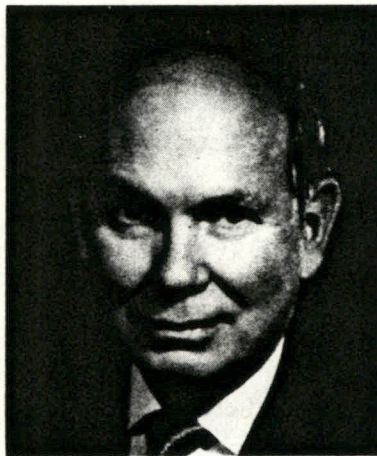

- Inspire America's youth to become involved in community and social issues, to assume leadership roles, and to explore their responsibilities as adults
- Explore America's past, the issues confronted today, and the direction America is to take in the future
- Apply responsible leadership techniques and methods for community action.

The Shell Oil Company, Shell Companies Foundation, Inc., and the National Association of Secondary School Principals extend to all state winners in the Century III Leaders Program a warm welcome to Colonial Williamsburg, Virginia. Your selection for this program indicates that you possess exceptional promise and an excellent ability to analyze the complex problems that face our country today.

The seminar sessions planned for this national meeting are designed as forums for exchanging ideas with other outstanding students. Led by thoughtful teachers, these seminars will broaden your insight about America's problems and their possible solutions. Each delegate who participates fully in the seminars and related activities of the Williamsburg Experience will grow substantially in knowledge and understanding. In addition, you will make some lasting friendships.

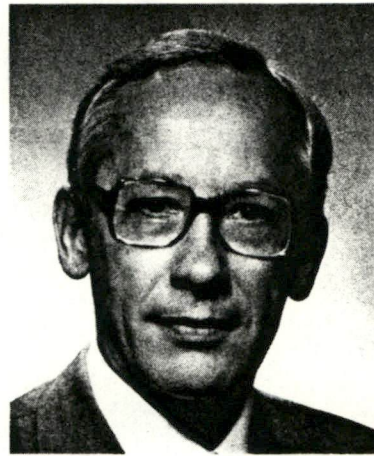

Colonial Williamsburg possesses a special significance for this national conference. The democratic principles that form the foundation of the United States were proposed here about 220 years ago. The House of Burgesses is, in many ways, the cradle of our democracy. Many tenets of American government were hammered out here, debate by debate. Consider this heritage as you begin building for the Third Century in your discussion groups.

We offer our encouragement to you as young scholars and future leaders. We also urge you to continue to develop the leadership capabilities which allowed you to come here today. The nation can use this kind of leadership tomorrow.

FRIDAY MORNING SPEAKER

Frank Pace, Jr., is chairman, president, chief executive officer, and chairman of the board of the International Executive Service Corps—a non-profit management consulting organization dedicated to helping improve the effectiveness of other organizations in the voluntary sector.

Frank Pace has held an advisory position in NATO for 10 years. He has been chairman of the advisory board of the U.S. Air Force Systems Command and was vice chairman of the President's Commission on National Goals.

Pace has served as U.S. Secretary of the Army under President Truman, and has served under every president since then.

FRIDAY EVENING SPEAKER

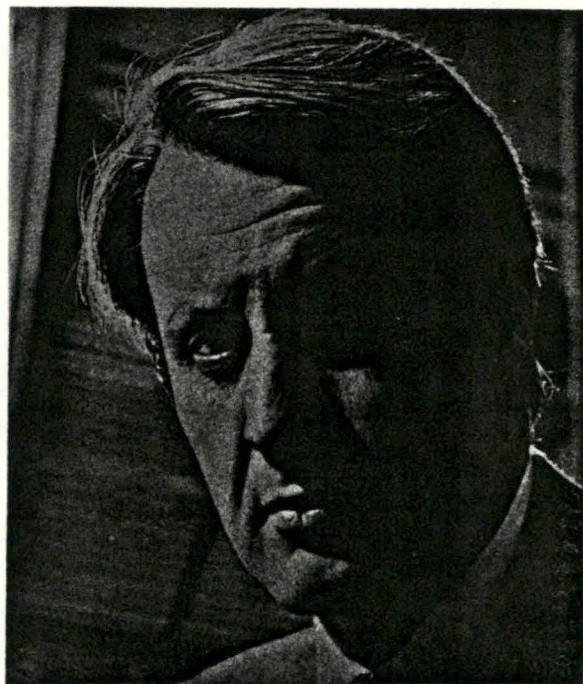

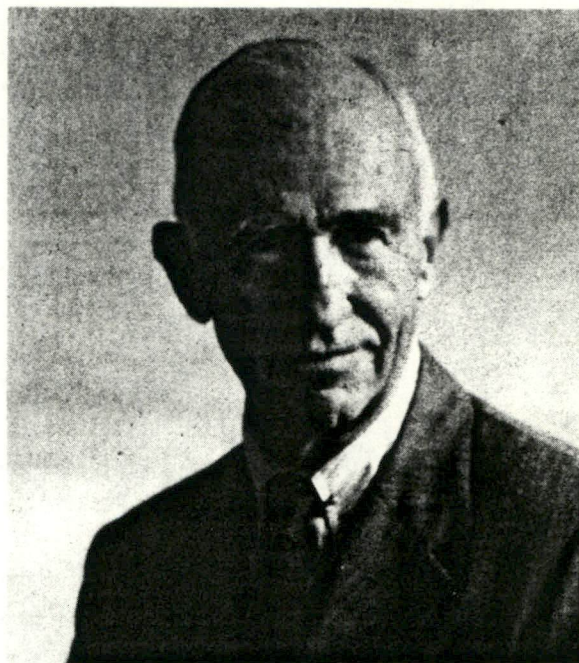

Hedrick Smith, veteran foreign correspondent, author, Pulitzer Prize winner, and chief correspondent of The New York Times in Washington, is currently on leave at the American Enterprise Institute—a Washington, D.C., think tank—writing a book on the American presidency.

In 1971, Smith was a member of the Pulitzer Prize-winning team that produced the Pentagon papers series in The New York Times. He co-authored the book by that title.

His most recent foreign assignment was a three and one-half year stint in Moscow where he won the Pulitzer Prize for international reporting in 1974 for coverage of the USSR and Eastern Europe. His book The Russians was a best-seller in 1976. In 1980, he co-authored another book, Reagan, the Man, the President.

Hedrick Smith has been a journalist all his professional life. Born in Switzerland, he was educated at Choate School and Williams College. He did post-graduate work as a Fulbright scholar at Balliol College in Oxford, England, and as a Nieman Fellow at Harvard University.

He began his career with UPI in 1959, then moved to The New York Times in 1962. He became deputy national editor in 1975, Washington bureau chief in 1976, and chief correspondent in 1979, a post he has held ever since.

SATURDAY EVENING PRESENTATIONS

When you take your seat in the Hall of the House of Burgesses Saturday night, you'll be swept back in time more than 200 years—back into the turmoil of events that led to the War of Independence.

You, as the elected representative of one of Virginia's more than 50 counties, will have the chance to debate pre-Revolutionary points of view.

In addition, Century III Leaders will meet informally in the Cascades with Ambassador Bruce Laingen.

TOWN MEETING

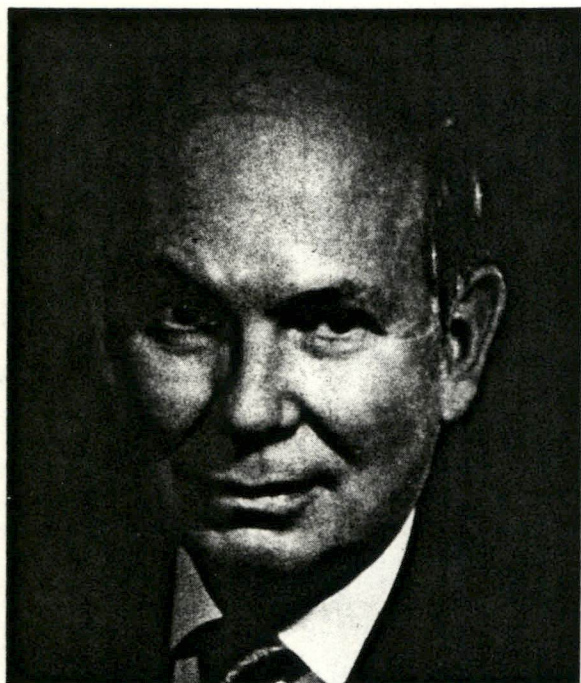

The town meeting was a phenomenon that grew up in Colonial America, shortly after the settlers arrived from Europe. The assembly started as a forum to settle local quarrels and later grew to become an administrative body that gave qualified voters the authority to govern their towns. These meetings, then, became the seed of democracy in the United States.

On Sunday morning all Century III delegates will convene for their own town meeting. Following a presentation of each seminar recommendation, the floor will be open for discussions, debates, and questions. Each seminar topic will be covered in 30-minute sessions—at the end of which delegates will vote for their favorite recommendations.

The six recommendations that come from the town meeting will be presented to Shell Oil President John Bookout and NASSP Executive Director Scott Thomson on Sunday afternoon. In addition, the 1986 Century III recommendations will be forwarded to the Reagan administration.

SUNDAY EVENING SPEAKER

John F. Bookout became president and chief executive officer of Shell Oil Company on May 1, 1976. He joined Shell in 1950 as a geologist in the Tulsa area and served in positions of increasing responsibility throughout his career with Shell.

Born in Shreveport, La., in 1922, Mr. Bookout graduated from the University of Texas with B.S. and M.A. degrees in geology. He also holds honorary degrees of Doctor of Science from Tulane University and Doctor of Laws from Centenary College.

Mr. Bookout is a member of the boards of directors of the American Petroleum Institute, Safeway Stores Inc., Irving Bank Corporation, and Methodist Hospital of Houston. He is a member of the board of trustees for the United States Council for International Business. He is a member of The Council on Foreign Relations, Inc., the Houston Economic Development Council, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Foundation, the policy committee of the Business Roundtable, the Conference Board, and the Louisiana Governor's Economic Development Commission.

The Wall Street Transcript selected Mr. Bookout as their 1982, 1983, and 1984 Gold Medal award recipient for outstanding chief executive officer of a domestic integrated oil company. He received the Texas Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association 1982 Distinguished Service Award.

Mr. Bookout received the 1979 Distinguished Service Award from the National Association of Secondary School Principals for his significant contributions and outstanding service to American Education. He is a member of the Southern Regional Advisory Board for the Institute of International Education, Inc., the Chancellor's Council, and the Engineering Advisory Council of the University of Texas at Austin. He is a member of the Council of Overseers for the Jesse H. Jones Graduate School of Administration of Rice University. He received the 1982 Distinguished Alumnus Award from the University of Texas and the 1985 Distinguished Graduate Award from the University of Texas Geology Foundation.

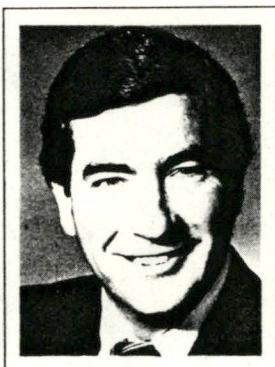

Mr. Bookout received various medals of honor for his Service in the Army Air Force during World War II.

She serves with the National Art Education Association's Women's Caucus and Committee on Minority Concerns.

1986 SEMINAR TOPICS

Education

Seminar Leader: Lee Hay

In recent years there has been a growing concern among Americans about the quality of education being offered in our public schools. This concern seemed to crest with the dire warning issued by President Reagan's Commission on Excellence in Education to the effect that the foundations of our society are being "eroded by a rising tide of mediocrity." The examples reported in the media of high school graduates who are functionally illiterate are legion.

Assume that you are members of a presidential commission authorized to improve the quality of public education, what policies would you recommend to the national and state governments? In your handling of this problem, consider the following points:

1. Federal funding for public education has dropped in real terms in each successive year since 1980 (according to Phi Delta Kappan, January, 1984, p. 311).
2. The current administration has just proposed a $15 billion budget for the Department of Education for fiscal 1987, a $3.7 billion reduction from current spending.
3. Many states are either unable or unwilling to raise financial outlays for education.
4. State and local governments will not be able to bridge the gap in federal funding for existing programs with the 20% budget cuts that the Gramm Rudman Act will mandate for F87.

Technology and Values

Seminar Leader: Mike Fox

Continuing technological progress has been a central theme in the American experience. Such developments have driven our economy steadily forward and now provide the nation with an unparalleled degree of material affluence. Yet, in this rush to meet every need, technology has provided us another range of effects. Pollution, urban blight, climatic changes, and the possibility of nuclear war are now part of everyday life.

Technology is an ever-improving tool, one which has certainly demonstrated how complex our world really is. Each problem we solve seems to breed a new set of problems, even more difficult to solve. At times, we find ourselves overwhelmed, seeking answers not from science and technology, but from a set of human values with roots that stretch beyond technology. The increasing pace of technological advances is causing us to remember those intangibles that make us human.

Using the following statements as starting points, build a set of recommendations that serve to give emphasis to human values. Draw from the cultural, educational, philosophical, religious, economic, and political resources of the country.

1. American technology has, as a basic premise, material progress. Explore the relationship between material progress and human values.
2. As our world becomes more and more technical, each of us specializes. Currently, there are more than 20,000 separate jobs in the American Dictionary of Occupational Titles. We seem to know more and more about less and less, individually and as a society. This minimizes our sense of shared community and values. How might this trend be slowed?
3. Technology has implicitly promised new jobs, with material wealth and social advancement to follow. However, our technological expertise has reached a point where automation and energy costs are changing the employment market. Particularly hard hit is the auto industry, which directly or indirectly accounts for one of every six jobs in America. Some futurists predict an expanding class of permanently unemployable workers concentrated in urban centers. However, these futurists project expanding job opportunities in service-related industries.

Government and Human Services

Seminar Leader: Barbara Nicholson

When the current administration announced its plan to curtail federal spending, it was noted that, proportionally, the social/human services were affected the most. Presidential spokesmen stated that the private sector and state and local governments should assume/resume responsibility for providing the human services to those who would otherwise be denied access to financial and technical assistance. They assert that the federal government is not an appropriate source for programs and initiatives which have a direct effect on the personal lives of American citizens.

Opponents of the budgetary measures adopted by the current administration have repeatedly insisted that only the federal government is able to ensure that stable human services programs are made available. They cite numerous instances where the private sector and state and local governments were unable or unwilling to supply the assistance needed. In addition, these individuals speak of the need to increase the scope and amount of human service programs to include initiatives that address the increase in substance abuse; the need to provide health care programs for stress; the need to effectively provide for the elderly; and, the social repercussions produced by the increasing lack of stability in the family unit.

Assuming that these human services are vital to the nation, suppose that your seminar group has been commissioned to resolve the divergent philosophies of the current administration and its opponents. What should be the respective roles undertaken by the private sector, and federal, state, and local governments vis à vis the continued provision/augmentation of human services? The following considerations should be examined and discussed as your "Commission on Human Services" addresses that issue at hand:

1. The Declaration of Independence states that: "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty, and the pursuit of Happiness. That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just Powers from the consent of the governed."
2. Currently, numerous citizens oppose the use of federal resources to underwrite those human services that are established or directed to have an effect on the personal life of the recipient. Opponents feel that it is morally wrong and politically dangerous for governments to take action on matters which should be left to the individual. An example would be the abortion issue.

3. The dramatic increase in teenage pregnancies and the abuse of alcohol and chemical substances by persons of all ages have necessitated a comprehensive examination of existing legislation and social programs that address these problems.
4. Before the establishment of a strong labor voice in this country (an event that required federal intervention), business leaders displayed very little willingness to adopt initiatives to improve the working conditions of those who were directly responsible for the financial well-being of their employers.

Your "Commission" should develop guidelines that will clearly define the roles adopted by the private sector, and federal, state and local governments in the provision of human services. Justification of your decision(s) will be necessary.

Social Problems of Youth

Seminar Leader: David Cordts

Assume that you are members of your community's task force on the problems of youth, including substance abuse, drunk driving, and teenage pregnancies. What recommendations would you offer your city council and other interested groups concerning the handling of these problems? The following facts may help guide you:

1. Alcohol-related traffic accidents are the leading cause of death among America's teenagers.
2. A number of both national and local studies over the past five years have shown that drug usage (including alcohol) is widespread among our youth from sixth grade on up.
3. According to a 1983 study, The Mood of American Youth, over half of the young people surveyed indicated that drugs and alcohol constituted the "worst influences" on their age group today.
4. More than one million adolescent females become pregnant each year. Eight out of 10 teenage mothers drop out of school. By 1999 the nation will have paid $8 billion in health and welfare payments to babies born to teenagers in 1979 alone. The above teenage pregnancy statistics were compiled by the Alan Guttmacher Institute in California, which is the research arm of the State of California Office of Family Planning.

Environment

Seminar Leader: Ron Joekel

The United Nations Conference on the Human Environment, whose theme was "Only One Earth," was held in Stockholm, June 5-16, 1972. It was attended by 114 delegations, including one from the United States. A Declaration of Principles drafted by the delegates included, among other things, the following statements:

The discharge of toxic substances or of other substances and release of heat, in such quantities or concentrations as to exceed the capacity of the environment to render them harmless, must be halted in order to ensure that serious or irreversible damage is not inflicted upon ecosystems. The just struggle of the peoples of all countries against pollution should be supported.

States shall take all possible steps to prevent pollution of the seas by substances that are liable to create hazards to human health, to harm living resources and marine life, to damage amenities, or to interfere with other legitimate uses of the sea.

Supposing that your seminar group has been commissioned by the President and the Environmental Protection Agency to devise a program, based on the foregoing principles, for safeguarding the American environment as well as the surrounding oceans, and countries from toxic waste pollutants, what kind of a program for the 1980s would you devise? Please observe the following guidelines:

1. All of the countries from Panama to Canada are to be taken into consideration.
2. Third World, "have-not," countries and certain elements in the U.S. and Canada are likely to be more concerned about promoting economic development than dealing effectively with environmental pollution.
3. America has considerable energy needs that must be balanced against any approach taken to clean up and prevent pollution.
4. As a result of the many recent newspaper articles on toxic chemical spills and contamination areas, there is a growing public concern about this issue, especially in the U.S. and Canada. In February 1985, for example, Canada's federal environment minister announced that an agreement has been reached with the nation's seven easterly provinces to reduce acid rain by limiting sulfur dioxide emissions east of the province of Saskatchewan. In addition, Washington has learned from two governmental studies completed recently that pollution poses a "significant" threat to underground streams that supply half the nation's drinking water. (Los Angeles Times, October 26, 1984, p. 5)

5. You are formulating a practical program to be implemented by Congress and state legislatures, not preparing a statement of principles such as the Stockholm Declaration quoted above.

International Security

Seminar Leader: Tom Osborne

On March 4, 1985, the Center for Strategic and International Studies, Georgetown University, issued a report entitled "Reducing the Risks of Nuclear War." Eugene V. Rostow, co-chairman of the report and former undersecretary of state as well as co-founder of the Committee on the Present Danger, gave the following summary of the document: "The Report stresses . . . that the major risk of nuclear war is through escalation from conventional war. Policy cannot and must not assume that the fallible human beings who control both nuclear and conventional weapons could indefinitely refrain from using nuclear weapons under the stress of battle. It follows, therefore, that it will be impossible to eliminate the serious risk of nuclear war without eliminating war itself. . . . To me, that is the principal moral of our report, and it is a thesis of the utmost importance."

What initiatives might America take in both the public and private sector, in conjunction with other nations, toward "eliminating war itself?"

CENTURY III LEADERS SCHOLARSHIP REGULATIONS

1. This scholarship may be used to pursue a course of study leading to a degree in any accredited university, college, or junior college in the United States. The normal program is based on four years of study. Scholarships will be paid directly to the college for deposit in the student's account.

2. Scholarship funds may be used only for tuition, fees, room and board, and books and supplies. Cash will NOT be paid to the student.

3. The scholarship stipend will be sent to the college in the freshman year but need not be totally used in that year. Distribution of scholarship monies must be decided by the student and the school.

4. Other awards may be accepted by recipients of this scholarship.

5. A scholarship recipient who fails to enroll in college in the academic year of his or her award will normally forfeit the scholarship. A student who withdraws from college and does not transfer to another accredited institution will normally forfeit the unused portion of the award. All Century III Leaders must attend the Century III Williamsburg Program in March 1986.

6. The unexpended balance of an award may be transferred from one college to another, provided such transfer is made between academic years and there is no loss in class standing. The decision to transfer must be reported as far in advance as possible and arrangements must be made for transfer of funds through the executive director of the National Association of Secondary School Principals.

7. Any change in status or address must be reported to the NASSP Division of Student Activities. An annual report of progress and grades earned is required on a form that will be provided.

GUIDELINES FOR CONDUCT AND ATTENDANCE

1. Delegates should be aware that attendance at all classes, group meetings, and other portions of the program is mandatory.
2. The possession and/or use of any alcoholic beverages, drugs, or narcotics is strictly prohibited. Any delegate in violation of this rule will be sent home immediately at his/her expense.
3. There will be an established time for "lights out" at which time delegates should be in their own rooms for the evening.
4. Any damages to room facilities or the loss of room keys will be the responsibility of the delegates.
5. The use of private automobiles by delegates is prohibited.
6. Questions concerning disciplinary procedures should be brought to the attention of the director or representative of the NASSP Division of Student Activities.
