MEMORANDUM FOR ROBERT M. GATES

THROUGH: WILLIAM T. PRYCE DAP for

FROM: DAVID A. PACELLI DAP

SUBJECT: Resubmission of the Memorandum for the President on TV Marti

Attached at Tab I is the memorandum for the President on TV Marti that has been drafted as you requested. It recommends a new option of using multiple ways of getting information into Cuba. At Nancy Bearg Dyke's suggestion, it also clearly states that even this response is likely to draw complaints from the Cuban-American community. This makes an education strategy particularly important for Congress and the Cuban-American community.

Nevertheless, in checking with the Chairman of the TV Marti Task Force to ensure that my language is precise, I have come to the conclusion that Option 2 is unworkable. I therefore recommend that you stick with the version which I submitted earlier (with some minor changes) at Tab II. The following outlines problems with Option 2, as well as with some of the ideas advanced by Jorge Mas in his meeting with you last week:

A Multifrequency Transmitter Won't Work The antenna now being developed for the aerostat is unique; it is dedicated for channel 13. There is not enough room in the balloon for equipment for more than one frequency. Even if there were, theoretic tests would have to be run on scatter and to ensure that one does not interfere with the other. This solution is not viewed as practical.

I asked why could not several balloons be launched, each with a separate antenna. Apparently, there is no room at Cudjoe Key, having only this one pad available for launching. There is even some concern now that the cable for this balloon could foul the cable of the radar balloon at Cudjoe in high winds. There would be "environmental constraints" making it difficult to go elsewhere on the Keys. The places are limited by the need to have air traffic clearance as well (not a problem at Cudjoe because the radar balloon is already there).

Videotapes Idea Needs More Examination Although you have asked me to insert this into Option 2, the PCC paper does not address this possibility at all. Production of videotapes and programming content are relatively simple questions, but distribution is a complicated issue. If the Cubans do not permit the free flow of videotapes, then we are talking about a covert program to guarantee delivery. As an aside, our embargo policy currently does not make an exception for VCRs; it might be advantageous that these two aspects of policy be synchronized.

Changing the Direction of the Antenna You have noted that the antenna is described as being "highly directional" in one of the PCC papers. The paper also notes that the Cubans could easily counterbroadcast, just as they are doing with channel 13. The antenna cannot be repositioned with a flick of the switch. It would have to be done manually when it is hauled down every night.

Using an Antenna Within an Airplane As he was going out the door of your office, Jorge Mas said, "Tell USIA that we need that airplane, too." We are still investigating the feasibility of an airplane as a backup system when the weather or balloon repairs ground the aerostat. So far, each of the 4 or 5 RFPs have been found lacking, and we are looking into whether they can be corrected. Presently, none can meet our requirement of not interfering with domestic broadcasters. The plane would be limited to flying around over our territory, which imposes a constraint. Moreover, the cost would have to be considered.

Channel 1 Won't Work Channel 1 is not on your television set because the international broadcasting regime assigned it to the Eastern Hemisphere. That is why Soviet-made sets in Cuba have channel 1. The channel 1 option was evaluated and discarded early in the process. A channel 1 antenna will not fit in the aerostat; it would violate our masquerade that TV Marti is a domestic broadcaster; and it is believed that channel 1 would interfere with other communications.

Vertical Integration is Impractical Voice of America engineers believe that vertical integration may have some promise in the technical sense of delivering a signal with minimum interference with an adjacent channel. All television sets in Cuba are horizontal integration, as are ours, meaning that everyone would have to get out and turn their antennas just to get this one signal. It is uncertain whether a vertical integration antenna could fit in the windscreen of the aerostat now being built.

Concurrence by: Nancy Bearg Dyke (NBD) and Dan Levin (DAP for)

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: BRENT SCOWCROFT

SUBJECT: TV Marti

Purpose

To decide how to proceed on TV Marti in view of technical and legal impediments to continuing the project as originally conceived.

Background

The TV Marti Interagency Task Force set up by the NSC in 1988 has made substantial progress in developing a system for broadcasts to Cuba. Rights were obtained to broadcast on Channel 13, the only frequency originally available to us that would not interfere with U.S. or Cuban stations. A special antenna is nearing completion and operational tests are scheduled to begin early next year from a tethered balloon VHF transmitter located at Cudjoe Key Air Force Station in Florida. Pending legislation requires a presidential determination of feasiblity at the conclusion of the tests.

DECLASSIFIED
PER E.O. 13526
2010-2013-MR
MM 6/8/2016

Cuba, however, has preempted us by beginning broadcasts last June on Channel 13 in Havana and informing us that it will utilize all other VHF frequencies. Castro's action will block reception of TV Marti in Havana. Moreover, TV Marti broadcasts would cause interference of Cuban transmissions on that channel, violating our commitments to avoid radio interference under international conventions. We could aim our antenna at other Cuban cities within 120 miles of Havana, but presumably Castro would simply start broadcasts on whatever frequency we chose. Even Cuban broadcasts of a test pattern are enough to defeat our signal.

Moreover, the TV Marti proposal has prompted threats of Cuban retaliation. Cuba has threatened to jam Radio Marti and it probably could do so jeopardizing a fairly successful program. Castro also could retaliate in other ways, such as increasing AM band counterbroadcasting to the United States. We cannot tell whether Castro would follow through on his threats. You will recall that there were many similar threats prior to the startup of Radio Marti, none of which came to pass. By the same token, interfering with TV Marti is technically a much simplier and less costly undertaking than trying to jam Radio Marti. In short, there is a real risk of retaliation but no certainty of that fact.

The NSC Deputies Committee has concluded that there is no fully satisfactory course of action to ensure the success of the TV Marti project as originally conceived (i.e., uninterrupted broadcasts of government-produced programming on Cuba and world affairs to a mass audience).

Under these circumstances, there are two options:

Option 1: Bowing Out Now. We have an out simply by declaring that the Cuban decision to broadcast on all available VHF frequencies makes the project technically and legally infeasible. We could emphasize Castro's fear of the free flow of information and our respect for international agreements on noninterference. If we take this approach, we are better off doing this before testing proceeds to minimize expenditure of funds and the appearance of backing down.

Option 2: Broadening the Possiblities. Under this option, we would acknowledge that Castro has already taken steps to block our primary course of action but we would remain committed to the principle of providing television and programs to Cuba, taking advantage of presently limited opportunities which over time could potentially develop a considerable following. In essence, this approach stays broadly within the legal limits placed upon us by Congress and international conventions but also signals our determination not to be intimidated by Castro's threat; our continuing commitment to the Cuban-American Community to pursue such programming; and our determination to broaden the range of information reaching Cuba. This option would involve a number of different techniques which might be used at various times and in various ways to get our message across. This would involve spending money on options which may or may not work and which almost certainly will not have much of an audience, at least for a while. In all honesty, the agencies are not enthusiastic about this course of action and find reasons why virtually none of them have any real potential. Nevertheless, the techniques are:

-- A Multifrequency Transmitter: This could switch from channel to channel depending on which one the Cubans are not broadcasting on and therefore might be available for our use. The antenna now being developed rides in a balloon sent aloft at Cudjoe Bay. The balloon is not large enough for equipment for more than one frequency. It is also possible that one frequency might interfere with another. We could, however, explore the possibility of several balloons being launched, each with a separate antenna, although we are told that there is insufficient room at Cudjoe Key as well as some concern that cable for the balloons could foul the radar balloon there.

-- Preparation of videotapes: The production of videotapes and programming content would be relatively simple although distribution could be complicated. Unless the Cubans permit the free flow of videotapes, we would need to explore the possibility of a covert program. Moreover, if we go this route, we would need to make an exception for VCRs in our embargo policy.

-- Changing the Direction of the Antenna: We could change the direction of the antenna each day to try and hit a different part of Cuba. Just because Castro is using Channel 13 in the Havana area does not rule out its availability elsewhere on the island. Because the antenna has to be repositioned by hand, it would have to be done each day when it is brought down.

-- Using an Antenna Within an Airplane: We are investigating the feasibility of an airplane as a backup when the weather or balloon repairs ground the other antenna. We've looked into this and so far none of the options meet our requirement of not interferring with US domestic broadcasters. Moreover, because the plane is limited to flying over our territory, this imposes a constraint -- not to mention the cost.

-- Broadcast via Satellite: Broadcasting by satellite would not confront the technical or legal impediments of VHF transmissions, and Cuba would have no legal grounds for retaliation since Cuba publicizes its own satellite transmissions to the US. The TV Marti signal can be delivered via satellite to the entire island of Cuba from Cudjoe Key. We could thus demonstrate to TV Marti supporters that we have complied with our commitment to break Castro's monopoly on television. The Cuban audience would be extremely limited because there are few satellite dishes. Nevertheless, a limited market for homemade receivers might develop, as it has in Eastern Europe. And, advances in technology may soon make it possible to pick up the signal using antennas that would not be so visible to Cuban authorities as a dish.

-- UHF Broadcasts: The feasibility of UHF broadcasts should be further investigated, since the Cubans do not broadcast on those frequencies. Presently, very few television sets can receive UHF and there are only a small number of video recorders.

As you can see, there are problems involved in virtually all of the options, and even if we were able to implement all of the above options, the number of viewers would still be very limited, at least at the outset. Nevertheless, I believe we should proceed with ~~the~~ satellite telecasting and that you should direct the involved agencies vigoriously to explore implementation of each of the other options. The Administration has made a firm commitment to the Cuban-American community to proceed with TV Marti. Moreover, I believe it would be a mistake to allow Castro to intimidate us into inaction in an effort such as this. Even if he blocks us entirely, we can use Radio Marti to highlight the lengths to which he has gone as a means of avoiding having free information reach the Cuban people. In addition, using the example of samizdat (or self-generated literature) in the Soviet Union, people with satellite dishes or VCRs could easily end up having a large number of people into their homes to watch telecasts or videotapes.

Bob Gates has met twice with Jorge Mas on TV Marti, and the Cuban-American Community remains determined to see this implemented. At the same time, they understand what Castro has done and the technical inhibitions to the kind of programming and effort we had originally conceived. As long as we are proceeding with the program and do not back down, I believe they will be content that we are fulfilling the Administration's commitment.

Recommendation

That you approve immediate implementation of an effort for broadcasting via satellite and vigorous pursuit of the above mentioned other opportunities for bringing free television to Cuba.

Cuba, however, has preempted us by beginning broadcasts in June on channel 13 in Havana and informing us that it will utilize all other VHF frequencies. Castro's action will block reception of TV Marti in Havana. Moreover, TV Marti broadcasts would cause interference of Cuban transmissions on that channel, violating our commitments to avoid radio interference under international conventions. We could aim our antenna at other Cuban cities within 120 miles of Havana, but presumably Castro would simply start broadcasts on whatever frequency we chose. Even Cuban broadcasts of a test pattern are enough to defeat our signal.

Forging ahead with TV Marti, despite the technical impediments and legal problems, would likely produce Cuban retaliation. Cuba has threatened to jam Radio Marti and we believe it would do so, jeopardizing a fairly successful program. Castro could also retaliate in other ways, such as increasing AM band counterbroadcasting to the United States. We have examined using our own coercive measures, short of the use of force, to induce Castro to accept TV Marti, but have concluded that our existing pressures on Cuba are such that any tightening is likely to have only a marginal effect.

The NSC Deputies Committee has concluded that there is no fully satisfactory course of action to ensure the success of the TV Marti project as originally conceived (i.e., uninterrupted broadcasts of government-produced programming on Cuba and world affairs to a mass audience). Faced with this conclusion, there are three options:

Option 1: Broadcast to a smaller audience via satellite. Broadcasting by satellite would not confront the technical or legal impediments of VHF transmissions, and Cuba would have no legal grounds for retaliation since Cuba publicizes its own satellite transmission to the United States. The TV Marti signal can be delivered via satellite to the entire island of Cuba from Cudjoe Key. We could thus demonstrate to TV Marti supporters that we have complied with our commitment to break Castro's monopoly on television. The Cuban audience would be extremely limited because there are few satellite dishes. Nevertheless, a limited market for homemade receivers might develop, as in Eastern Europe, and advances in technology may soon make it possible to pick up the signal using antennas that would not be so visible to Cuban authorities as a dish.

As part of this approach, the feasibility of UHF broadcasts should be further investigated, since the Cubans do not broadcast on those frequencies. On the down side, very few Cuban television sets can receive UHF and there are only a small number of video recorders. Ultimately, Havana would be able to broadcast on UHF, presenting the same problems as on VHF.

Option 2: Broadening Our Capabilities. This option would include satellite broadcasting and UHF feasibility studies, but in addition include developing a multifrequency VHF transmitter and dissemination of videotapes for videocassette players. The capability to transmit on different VHF frequencies would still be limited by the need to avoid interfering with U.S. and Cuban stations. Nevertheless, it would get us away from reliance on a VHF channel that we now know cannot work. It would enable us to transmit on a random basis, giving Cuban audiences short notice in advance on Radio Marti.

Option 3: Bowing out now. We have an out simply by declaring that the Cuban decision to broadcast on all available VHF frequencies makes the project technically and legally infeasible. We could emphasize Castro's fear of the free flow of information and our respect for international agreements on noninterference. If we take this approach, we are better off doing this before testing proceeds to minimize expenditure of funds and the appearance of backing down.

On balance, the policy community favors the second option as the best approach on the grounds that it maximizes our ability to get information to Cuba. The Cuban-American community may not be completely happy with this choice. Whichever choice is made, we will have to take steps to educate the Congress and the Cuban-American community to make those who support TV Marti aware of the nature and extent of the technical and legal problems which forced us to abandon the original goal of the program. A plan will be developed following your decision.

RECOMMENDATION

That you approve a change from exclusive development of a VHF capability to the broader array of broadcasting means outlined in Option 2.

Ultimately, Havana would be able to broadcast on UHF, presenting the same problems as on VHF.

Bowing out now. We have an out simply by declaring that the Cuban decision to broadcast on all available VHF frequencies makes the project technically and legally infeasible. We could emphasize Castro's fear of the free flow of information and our respect for international agreements on noninterference. If we take this approach, we are better off doing this before testing proceeds to minimize expenditure of funds and the appearance of backing down.

On balance, the policy community favors the first option as the best approach on the grounds that a quarter of a loaf is better than none. The Cuban-American community will not be happy with this decision. Whichever choice is made, we will have to take steps to educate the Congress and the Cuban-American community to make those who support TV Marti aware of the nature and extent of the technical and legal problems which forced us to abandon the original goal of the program. A plan will be developed following your decision.

RECOMMENDATION

That you approve a suspension of VHF development and a switch to satellite transmission of TV Marti and investigation of UHF feasibility.

MEMORANDUM FOR ROBERT M. GATES

THROUGH: EVERETT ELLIS BRIGGS DAP for

FROM: DAVID A. PACELLI DAP

SUBJECT: Memorandum for the President on TV Marti

Attached at Tab I is the memorandum which you requested that we prepare for the President outlining the options on TV Marti. The options have been narrowed from the paper that was presented to the Deputies Committee meeting on September 11 (system log 21065), and reflect your instructions that we recommend a diversified approach of continuing with TV Marti on a smaller scale than originally envisioned.

It was announced at the Deputies Meeting that the revised paper would be submitted to meeting participants. Two agencies have already inquired about the paper and we recommend that they have the opportunity to comment.

That you approve the background and discussion portion of the draft memorandum at Tab I for distribution as a new options paper to Deputies Committee participants.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: BRENT SCOWCROFT

SUBJECT: TV Marti

DECLASSIFIED
PER E.O. 13526
2010-2013-MR
MM 6/8/2016

Purpose

To decide how to proceed with TV Marti in view of technical and legal impediments to continuing the project as originally conceived.

Background

The TV Marti Interagency Task Force set up by the NSC in 1988 has made substantial progress in developing a system for broadcasts to Cuba. Rights were obtained to broadcast on channel 13, the only frequency originally available to us that would not interfere with U.S. or Cuban stations. A special antenna is nearing completion and operational tests are scheduled to begin early next year from a tethered balloon VHF transmitter located at Cudjoe Key Air Force Station in Florida. Pending legislation requires a presidential determination of feasibility at the conclusion of the tests.

Cuba, however, has preempted us by beginning broadcasts in June on channel 13 in Havana and informing us that it will utilize all other VHF frequencies. Castro's action will block reception of TV Marti in Havana. Moreover, TV Marti broadcasts would cause interference with Cuban transmissions on that channel, violating our commitments to avoid radio interference under international conventions. We could aim our antenna at other Cuban cities within 120 miles of Havana, but we believe Castro would simply start broadcasts on whatever frequency we chose. Even Cuban broadcasts of a test pattern are enough to defeat our signal.

Forging ahead with TV Marti, despite the technical impediments and legal problems, would likely produce Cuban retaliation. Cuba has threatened to jam Radio Marti and we believe it would do so, jeopardizing a fairly successful program. Castro could also retaliate in other ways, such as increasing AM band counterbroadcasting to the United States. We have examined using our own coercive measures, short of the use of force, to induce Castro to accept TV Marti, but have concluded that our existing pressures on Cuba are such that any tightening is likely to have only a marginal effect.

The NSC Deputies Committee has concluded that there is no fully satisfactory course of action to ensure the success of the TV Marti project as originally conceived (i.e., uninterrupted broadcasts of government-produced programming on Cuba and world affairs to a mass audience). Faced with this conclusion, there are two options:

Broadcast to a smaller audience via satellite Broadcasting by satellite would not confront the technical or legal impediments of VHF transmissions, and Cuba would have no legal grounds for retaliation since Cuba publicizes its own satellite transmission to the United States. The TV Marti signal can be delivered via satellite to the entire island of Cuba from Cudjoe Key. We could thus demonstrate to TV Marti supporters that we have complied with our commitment to break Castro's monopoly on television. The Cuban audience would be extremely limited because there are few satellite dishes. Nevertheless, a limited market for homemade receivers might develop, as in Eastern Europe, and advances in technology may soon make it possible to pick up the signal using antennas that would not be so visible to Cuban authorities as a dish.

As part of this approach, the feasibility of UHF broadcasts should be further investigated, since the Cubans do not broadcast on those frequencies. On the down side, very few Cuban television sets can receive UHF and there are only a small number of video recorders in Cuba. Ultimately, Havana would be able to broadcast on UHF, presenting the same problems as on VHF.

Bowing out now We have an out simply by declaring that the Cuban decision to broadcast on all available VHF frequencies makes the project technically and legally infeasible. We could emphasize Fidel's fear of the free flow of information and our respect for international agreements on noninterference. If we take this approach, we are better off doing this now, rather than after testing proceeds.

On balance, the policy community favors the first option as the best approach on the grounds that a quarter of a loaf is better than none. Whichever choice is made, we will have to take steps to educate Congress and the Cuban-American community to make those who support TV Marti aware of the nature and extent of the technical and legal problems which forced us to abandon the original goal of the program.

RECOMMENDATION

That you approve development of a capability for satellite transmission of TV Marti and suspension of VHF development.

MEMORANDUM FOR ROBERT M. GATES

THROUGH: DAVID MILLER

FROM: JEREMY CURTIN

SUBJECT: TV Marti Decision Point

The TV Marti project for television broadcasting to Cuba has reached a point where an overall policy review is appropriate.

BACKGROUND: In FY-89, Congress earmarked $7.5 million in VOA modernization funds to initiate USG TV broadcasting to Cuba. President Bush has supported TV Marti. Under NSC direction, VOA has led interagency technical feasibility studies. The first major contract will be let in 2-3 weeks for an antenna/ transmitter system using an aerostat (balloon) platform based in the Florida Keys. This contract will take the project through the operational testing phase at a cost of about $1.5 million running from October, 1989, to January, 1990.

TV Marti has strong support in the Cuban-American community and Congress, especially the Florida delegation. Senator Hollings is introducing authorizing legislation to provide $16 million in FY-90. Because of unresolved technical problems and expected carryover from FY-89 to FY-90, the Reagan budget contains no funding for TV Marti. Total cost for TV Marti is unclear; start-up could cost $25 million or much more. Annual operating costs could be $15 million or more.

Senator Pell, the National Association of Broadcasters and the U.S. Advisory Commission on Public Diplomacy have expressed concerns about TV Marti funding and the possible impact on U.S. broadcasters from a Cuban response.

ISSUES: It will probably prove technically feasible to send a quality TV signal to Havana. Important issues, however, should be reviewed at the policy level before VOA commits to significant costs.

- Jamming: Castro could jam or block TV Marti for minimum cost. The Advisory Board for Radio Broadcasting to Cuba (Jorge Mas, chairman) argues Castro would not jam. Other reports say he will, easily negating a multimillion dollar U.S. investment.

- Other Cuban countermeasures: Castro has threatened to retaliate with medium wave radio transmissions which interfere with U.S. broadcasting. He has the capability and has used it in response to Radio Marti.

- Diplomatic concerns: Implications of TV Marti for overall U.S. relations with Cuba should be reviewed at the policy level.

Other issues involving program content, system dependability/ downtime and U.S. telecommunications regulations exist but cannot be adequately addressed until after further testing.

We have worked closely with VOA, other agencies and the Advisory Board to move TV Marti ahead expeditiously. All concerned agree that a policy review by the new Administration is appropriate at this point. With your approval, I will schedule a Deputies Committee meeting to address the agenda attached at Tab A.

Bob Pastorino, Virginia Lampley and Nick Rostow concur.

RECOMMENDATION

That you authorize a Deputies Committee meeting to address TV Marti.

-- The NSC will circulate the memorandum in draft form to the other members of the committee. (S)

-- The memorandum will address whether it would be possible to beam TV Marti to parts of Cuba not currently reached by Cuban channel 13, or to take advantage of hours when channel 13 is not broadcasting; and the alternatives offered by UHF and satellites. (S)

-- A campaign will be undertaken on the Hill and with the Cuban-American community to make those who support TV Marti aware of the nature and extent of the technical problems. (S)

Minutes

Mr. Gates opened the meeting by asking Mr. Kimmitt to review the PCC options paper. (U)

Mr. Kimmitt said the PCC was to be congratulated for its handling of a difficult subject. There seemed to be no satisfactory solution to the question of how to get an alternate source of information into Cuba, given the technical problem posed by Cuba's having started television broadcasting on channel 13 last June. He then reviewed the options: go ahead with a VOA test of TV Marti next January; defer testing while exploring alternatives; suspend/abandon the project. He asked if the results of a January test are foreordained? State's position, he said, was to support the project "in concept," bearing in mind the fact that the TV Marti bill is on the Hill, has bipartisan support, and keen presidential interest. (S)

Mr. Gates asked if someone at the outset had not anticipated that Castro could block any TV transmission? He commented that we seem to be "a long way down the track - out on a limb" to be told now that the project was technically impossible. (S)

There ensued a lengthy discussion of the technical problems involved. VOA representatives maintained that there had never been any doubt that TV Marti would be easy to jam. The only solution was to find an open channel, and so channel 13 had been selected. But then Castro took it - something clearly within Cuba's right. Even if we had started broadcasting on channel 13, Cuba could legally have claimed it for its own internal broadcasts. The antenna for TV Marti was recognized as being "highly directional." This means that the U.S. could target parts of Cuba other than Habana for channel 13 transmissions; and/or broadcast on channel 13 when the Cuban signal was not operating. But from a practical standpoint, this would get us access only to around 300,000 viewers in Pinal del Rio (Cuba's westernmost province), providing Castro did not decide to extend the Cuban channel 13 broadcasts to that region - which he could easily do. Further, by simply putting a test signal on channel 13 on the off hours, Castro could also keep out any TV Marti broadcasts. (S)

Mr. Gates recalled that we were told, before Radio Marti went on the air, that Castro would ruin us through his retaliation: WHO would be blotted out; all the automatic garage doors in Florida would be activated, etc. How confident were we, he asked, that Castro would/could counterattack now? (S)

It was explained that it need not be a matter of counterattacking, just that without much effort, the Cubans could simply prevent TV Marti from reaching any Cuban audience. There was an extended discussion of Cuba's intentions, and the political implications of a U.S. attempt, and anticipated failure. Some felt we should try to reach Cuba, and when blocked, could cite Castro's fear of free information flows. Others felt we should not put the U.S. into the position of looking foolish for having pursued a "mission impossible." (S)

It was pointed out that TV Marti is driven by domestic political considerations - namely, the strong support of the Cuban-American community. (S)

Mr. Kopp suggested we call in the leaders of the community and explain the problem. He also suggested that we continue getting ready for a possible test run, and then review the bidding in a couple of months, after political soundings have been taken. (C)

Mr. Kimmitt noted that so far $2.5 million had been spent, with an anticipated $5 million to be spent on testing. He asked if there were additional funds appropriated for next year. (C)

Mr. Coonrod said an additional $16 million would be available, adding that there was strong support for the project in both houses of Congress. (C)

Mr. Kopp said VOA is proceeding to put together its staff, organize its studio, etc. (C)

There was a full discussion of the legal problems associated with TV Marti, should it be possible to broadcast into Cuba at all. VOA representatives pointed out that the U.S. has led the world in establishing rules of the game on broadcasts, and that for us to violate them would put us in an untenable situation. (S)

Further discussion of the technical aspects disclosed that broadcasting from Cuba itself (Guantanamo) would not overcome the problems; and that it would be inordinately expensive, and probably futile, to set up facilities that would make it possible to engage in frequency hopping. Each channel would require its own separate broadcasting apparatus, meaning multiplying the cost of targeting channel 13 by a factor equal to the number of channels we might try to get into, during off hours - provided the Cubans did not simply keep them open 24 hours. (S)

There was discussion of the relative advantages of VHF vs. UHF broadcasts, and whether one system could be fed into the other to expand coverage capability. Again VOA's representatives noted that all the Cubans need do is to turn on their test pattern, to block access by any of our transmissions. (S)

There was a discussion of whether there might be some way to give Castro incentives to allow program exchanges. Mr. Gates said that this would not prosper. Castro would accept the muppets, and goodness knows what he would send us. The political objective of the exercise would be lost. (S)

Mr. Aronson pointed out that there would be no way to control a negotiation for such an exchange anyway. Castro would turn it to his own advantage. (S)

Mr. Gates concluded the meeting by saying that a "very candid" memorandum should be prepared for the President outlining the problems and the choices available. He said that the NSC would be back in touch with the other members shortly. (S)

PRELIMINARY FEASIBILITY ASSESSMENT OF UHF

TV MARTI TRANSMITTER FACILITY

27 JUNE 1989

IIT Research Institute
Under Contract to Department of Defense

ENCLOSURE 2

PRELIMINARY FEASIBILITY ASSESSMENT OF UHF TV MARTI TRANSMITTER FACILITY

The TV Marti Task Force requested that the Electromagnetic Compatibility Analysis Center (ECAC) prepare a summary of the feasibility of broadcasting a UHF television signal to the Havana, Cuba area from both a tethered Aerostat and a fixed-wing aircraft located in the Florida Keys. The results of the assessment indicate that operation of a TV Marti on UHF channels is technically feasible from both types of platforms. An effective radiated power of approximately 55 kilowatts will provide a Grade A quality signal to most of the Havana area from a transmitter located at approximately 10,000 feet at Cudjoe Key, Florida.

Operation of an Aerostat mounted UHF TV Marti transmitter with an effective radiated power of 55 kilowatts can best be achieved with a moderate power transmitter and a directive antenna. This would conserve weight and direct most of the signal towards the desired audience while mitigating the potential for interference to domestic operations.

Operation of a UHF version of TV Marti from a fixed-wing aircraft might best be accomplished with an omnidirectional antenna in order to avoid having to continually "steer" the antenna as the aircraft travels along its flight path. This would require selection of a UHF channel that would not result in interference with the reception of UHF television stations in Florida even with the use of an omnidirectional antenna.

Operation of a UHF television transmitter from an airborne platform will likely be more susceptible to multipath fading than a VHF television transmitter. Thus, reception of a UHF TV Marti broadcasting from an aircraft may be subject to a periodic loss of signal or variations in signal quality.

Examination of UHF channels currently operating or assigned for operation in Southern or Central Florida identified channels 14, 37, 48, 54, and 58 as the only channels not currently operating or assigned. A detailed analysis would have to be performed to determine which channels could be used for a UHF TV Marti without causing interference to the reception of UHF stations in Florida.
