PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: RNC CHAIRMAN'S ADVISORY BOARD
THE FOUR SEASONS HOTEL
NOVEMBER 21, 1991
6:30 p.m.

Thank you. I've got to tell you, this is an impressive turnout, especially for a second meeting. I'd just like to congratulate Clayton Yeutter for assembling one of the most diverse and promising groups of contributors I've ever seen. And remember, I've been in Clayton's shoes. I know how much work goes into an event like this. I think we all ought to congratulate Chairman Yeutter for this great start on 1992. \\\

It's also good to see members of our Cabinet here tonight: Secretary Manuel Lujan and his wife Jean; Secretary Ed Derwinski and Bonnie.

As you know, I'm always happy to see members of Congress. To our solid Republicans, welcome. And again, thanks to the people who made this event possible -- I was going to say made this "night" possible, but that honor goes to higher Authorities. For this event -- Clayton Yeutter, Larry Bathgate, the RNC Finance Chariman; RNC Treasurer Bill McManus, Dorothy Moley, the acting executive director of the Republican National Committee; and Peter Monroe, chairman of the oversight committee.

I was happy to see that Andy Card spoke with you earlier today. No President can go far without the help of a good and dedicated staff, and Andy -- along with John Sununu and all our other White House workers -- helps me do my job.

But then, so do you. I look around this room, and I see the potential of the Republican Party. I see old friends and new acquaintances. I see people of all backgrounds. [[I look at Don King and see just what years of Democrat domination in Congress can do to some people.]] \\\

You've probably heard me talk recently about my frustrations with Congress, and I'm sure many of you share it. But we also ought to stand proud of what we Republicans believe, and what we've achieved.

We have worked hard over the years to take care of problems that worry the American people: crime, poor schools, jobs, peace. I have tried for nearly three years to get a comprehensive crime package through Congress. Well, Congress spent more money. It remained exempt from a host of laws. But it hasn't come close to passing a bill to take criminals off our streets, and to protect law-abiding men and women.

You see this same pattern in education. Just about everyone in America agrees: We need to improve our schools. I have tried for most of my term to get an Excellence in Education Act through Congress. No luck. You know the rest. SAT scores have fallen again -- verbal SATs to the lowest level ever. Too many children drop out of school. Our students don't match those in other nations when it comes to math and science. Businesses must spend increasing amounts of money teaching workers the educational basics.

When you take inflation into account, we spend one-third more on education today than we did a decade ago. We shell out nearly $400 billion a year. Does anyone think we've gotten our money's worth? Does anyone believe that our children have gotten the educations they deserve?

Everyone likes to talk about educational reform. We've proposed real changes that can make a real difference. Republicans champion world class educational standards because we believe in families, in future, in hope. We also believe in our children. We know they can outwork, outproduce and out compete workers and innovators anywhere else in the world.

With your help, we will turn my Administration's America 2000 Education Strategy into a blueprint for the world's finest schools. Let me touch upon...

→ Let me close by touching upon a third fundamental issue, jobs. Republicans believe in hard work, fair pay, economic opportunity, and growth. When we see someone succeed, we feel a surge of pride, not a new source of taxes. When we see someone hurting, we care. When we see someone out of a job who wants to work, we want to help.

Americans always have enjoyed a zest for life. Our forefathers came here because they believed in themselves, and they were willing to risk hardship because they understood the value of freedom. Generation after generation, people come to our shores and give new meaning to the American dream and new vindication to our values: decency, hard work, creativity, productivity -- and to institutions: families, churches, schools.

Think of it this way. Suppose your neighbor has just won the lottery. If you're a Republican, you feel happy for them. If you're a Democrat, you bemoan the increasing disparity between rich and poor.

My administration has promoted comprehensive, sensible economic initiatives because we want to make the most of those old-fashioned American virtues. We have promoted a cut in the capital gains tax, permanent research and development tax credits, IRAs for first-time homebuyers, banking reform, tort reform, infrastructure improvements, educational reform, slashing away unnecessary regulations. When we propose changes like this, Democrats start playing the tired old game of class warfare. They just don't get it.

All we want to do is the right thing. We want to reward people who work hard, who have good ideas, who bring products to market and improve our lives. We want the best fairness program of all: Good jobs for people who want them.

But the Democrats who control Congress seem more eager to turn a bright spotlight on suffering workers than in trying to give the economy a jolt. They seem more eager to advocate protectionism -- the great economy killer -- than to give our people the resources they need to outpace the rest of the world.

And they seem determined to waste everybody's time by sending me outrageous legislation that they know I will have to veto. They pass bills that no responsible President could sign, and when I veto them they accuse me of standing in the way of progress. Well, they have stalled progress on economic growth, education, transportation, energy, crime. In short, they haven't done a thing to address the things that American families care about when they return home from a hard day's work.

I need your help. Political progress requires two willing players -- a President with an agenda and a Congress with a determination to get the job done. So far, we've only got the first half. If we want to push this nation ahead, we will need to push Democrats out of Congress. [[Right now, many fundamental items of business remain undone. Here's just a snapshot. Our Administration unveiled the America 2000 education strategy six months ago. More than half the states have announced plans to begin their own reforms. But what have we gotten out of Congress? No bill.

[[I sent banking reform legislation to the Hill on March 20 -- 246 days ago. Today, no bill. I sent crime legislation to the Hill 255 days ago. No bill. I sent energy legislation to Congress 261 days ago. No bill. I sent transportation legislation to the Hill 280 days ago. Guess what? Right: No bill.

Congress gets the No Bill Prize, and America gets the headaches.]] Let's get a Congress that works -- a Republican Congress. Let's join together to build the kinder, gentler society I have talked about over the years. Let's peel away programs that incite racial strife and build a new era of brotherhood and harmony. Let's get our schools in shape, our streets safe and our economy running at full speed. Let's show Americans that we can make government work for them -- and not the other way around.

We have an incredible opportunity before us. You can help lead this party and this nation into the Next American Century. Stick by your ideals, work hard, and support your Republican candidates. Together, we will win.

Thank you again. Congratulations on this meeting. May God bless you and the United States of America.

EXCERPTS OF REMARKS BY THE PRESIDENT
AT NRCC PRESIDENTIAL FORUM LUNCHEON

Capital Hilton Hotel
Washington, DC

November 19, 1991

This is the third straight year I have participated in this event sponsored by the NRCC. The first honored that great son of Illinois, House Republican Leader Bob Michel. Last year, we honored the Ranking Republican members of the House. Today, we honor men and women who are all first among equals -- every single GOP member of the House of Representatives.

I am here to say: Today New Jersey, tomorrow the Congress. Of course, the Democrats won't just roll over. We will have to take our fight and our issues to the people. But the times are right and our policies are right. Americans want to free themselves from the tired old ideas of the liberal elite, and get a chance to make the American dream a reality in the workplace, at home, in the schools, and on the streets.

Let's talk about a few of the issues that separate Republicans from the other party. First, the economy. For more than a decade, we Republicans have created growth, opportunity, and prosperity. We presided over the longest peacetime expansion in American history -- since 1981, 17 million new jobs. Yet a record is not something to rest upon. It's something to build upon. We have to take common-sense steps to get our economy moving again. People are hurting and our approach, if Congress would have acted, would alleviate that hurt.

As you might know, our long-term growth strategy is founded on several elements: First, we know we've got to get that deficit down. We've got a budget agreement that puts the squeeze on federal spending. Let's abide by it. We've got to keep inflation under control, as it is right now. We've got to sustain the policies that helped bring interest rates to these historic low levels.

We've also got to keep American business competitive: slash red tape and regulations wherever possible -- draw the line against government mandates that handcuff the American entrepreneur. Competitiveness means real tort reform -- capping obscene liability awards. As a nation, we've got to make good on our commitment to quality education and job training, to ensure a workforce ready for the challenges a new century will bring.

Finally, we've got to make certain American businesses compete on an equal footing and that means a government committed to the principles of free and fair trade. We have taken the free trade message to Japan and to the European Community. Closer to home, we've won fast track authority for a North American Free Trade Agreement linking the U.S., Canada, and Mexico. I reject -- unequivocally -- the quicksand of protectionism. Instead, our forward-looking initiatives create new markets for American products and new jobs for American markets.

I'm confident our long-term strategy is on target. But there are steps we've got to take right now. We begin with the overhaul of our antiquated bank system. Every one of you knows how the problems in our banking system plague this economy. So in March, I sent to Congress the first comprehensive bank reform since the 1930's. It's time the Congress enacts real reform.

The same goes for other key proposals. For three years now, I've proposed a package of growth initiatives -- not just capital gains but incentives to encourage saving, like our family savings accounts; increased incentives for R&D to help keep American business competitive; measures to help first-time buyers tap their IRA's to buy that new home; and enterprise zones to unleash the urban entrepreneur. Each one of these initiatives help the economy.

No one knows better than I the state of that economy. I've seen it in people's eyes -- felt it in their hurt. I know what the loss of jobs can mean to dreams, and lives. So I was pleased to reach agreement with Congress on extending unemployment benefits to people in need. We got this done by vetoing the Democrats' budget busting approach -- finally getting legislation that helps people and still honors the spending caps in the budget agreement. Though successful on this, too many of the initiatives we were elected to achieve disappear into the Beltway's version of the Bermuda Triangle -- Capitol Hill.

Since 1955, Democrats have controlled the House. For 30 of the last 36 years, the Senate as well. They've all too often forgotten something very fundamental: that federal money isn't their money. It's your money -- the taxpayer's money. And they don't seem to know -- as I said in my Inaugural Address, Americans "didn't send us here to bicker" -- they sent us here to act. So, today, again, I challenge the Congress to pass our growth incentives. Democrats think prosperity stems from the growth of government. Republicans believe it comes from the growth of opportunity.

You don't have to look far to understand that the American people want a change. The problem is that on crucial business, Congress isn't leading or following, it's just sitting. Here's a solution: Get Congress moving again by electing Republican majorities to the House and Senate. Nowhere is this more true than when it comes to our domestic agenda. Liberals say that we don't have one. What they mean is we don't have their agenda. I'll tell you a secret: We never will have their agenda as long as I am President.

This stall strategy has gone on long enough. Listen to these facts. I mentioned banking reform. On March 20, I sent legislation to Congress. That was 246 days ago. No bill. On March 11, I sent Congress crime legislation to take hoods off the streets. That was 255 days ago. No bill. On March 4, I sent up energy legislation -- 268 days, no bill. On February 13, up went our transportation legislation -- 281 days later, no bill. For two years I've prodded Congress to pass our Educational Excellence Act and for the last six months our America 2000 program. We all know America's schools aren't making the grade. Let's elect more Republicans so that Congress won't continue to flunk the test.

But the problem with Democrats in Congress isn't just our "domestic agenda", it's their determination to live in the last century instead of focussing on the next. Their shortsightedness about our foreign policy achievements proves the point.

Most Liberals never met a defense cut they didn't like. Republicans, on the other hand, know that a strong defense can help keep the peace. Think of Liberal Democrats over the last 20 years. They were wrong about peace through strength. We didn't win the Cold War by following the liberal defense agenda. No, we won it because we stood foursquare behind a simple idea: freedom. And backed it up with muscle. Now we're in a new era -- a more hopeful era -- but not one without challenges. This could not have been more clearly demonstrated than in the Persian Gulf. I can assure you, had we followed the Democrats' advice, Saddam Hussein would be in Saudi Arabia as I speak.

But the Democrats tune hasn't changed. They act as if Americans had no stake in the rest of the world. The history of this century has shown time and again how wrong isolationism is. In today's inter-dependent world, it leads to folly if not worse.

When I work to beat back economic isolationism -- protectionism -- to create more American jobs and economic growth, that's not just foreign policy. It's good for Americans right here at home.

When drugs threatened our neighborhoods and our families, I went to Colombia to protect the lives of our children. Stemming the tide of drugs doesn't just benefit the globe. It helps the United States of America. And, incidentally, our drug strategy is working -- drug use is down.

When a brutal tyrant invaded Kuwait, we helped liberate a land. I am proud of our troops. They made ours a better world. They also made America an even better place.

There's a Texas saying, "Dance with the one who brung you." Our policies have helped bring America peace and democracy undreamt of in human history. Let us take this message to America: We don't demagogue, we deliver. We don't posture, we produce. With your support, we can produce a great victory for Republicans, and for America.

Thank you for your prayers and your help. Together, let's do even more in the months ahead. Let's set off our own revolution in 1992, and usher in an era of new ideas and real solutions. Let's make 1992 the Year of the Republican, so that we can kick-off an age of opportunity.

MEMORANDUM FOR TONY SNOW

FROM:

J. BUNTON

SUBJECT:

EDUCATION SPENDING FOR RNC AD. BOARD SPEECH

WE MIX A CURRENT DOLLAR AND A CONSTANT DOLLAR FIGURE IN THE SAME GRAPH -- SPENDING ONE-THIRD MORE ON EDUCATION TODAY THAN A DECADE AGO IS ADJUSTED FOR INFLATION -- SHELLING OUT MORE THAN $400 BILLION A YEAR IS A CURRENT DOLLAR FIGURE.

ACCORDING TO DAN MCG -- POTUS IS INCLINED TO ADD LIB THE 198-414 BILLION NUMBERS IF WE DON'T PUT THEM IN. THOSE FIGURES WERE INSERTED IN THE SEYMOUR SPEECH (SEE ATTACHED) IN SEPTEMBER.

WE NEED TO BE SPECIFIC AND CONSISTENT. DAN SAID WE REALLY NEED TO USE CONSTANT DOLLARS. ON TWO OCCASIONS POTUS HAS USED CURRENT DOLLARS.

EXPENDITURES FACT SHEETS ATTACHED —

REMARKS BY THE PRESIDENT
DURING FUNDRAISING DINNER FOR SENATOR JOHN SEYMOUR

Century Plaza Hotel
Los Angeles, California

8:02 P.M. PDT

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you all very, very much. And thank you, Senator Seymour. Thank you, John, for those kind words. And thanks all of you for this very warm welcome back -- my 10th trip to California as President. And let me thank Andy Williams, for starters, for blessing us with that beautiful Anthem of ours and the way in which he did it. I salute his wife, Debbie. My respects to Reverend Robert Schuller for tonight's invocation. And, Reverend, I know I speak for everyone when I wish your father the speediest of recoveries.

And let me salute the stars of the GOP galaxy with me here tonight. With me is our Secretary of Transportation Sam Skinner; Governor Pete Wilson, of course, and Gayle, making the tough decisions up there in Sacramento; the honorable George Deukmejian, a long-time friend of all of ours. Jim Dignan, our State GOP Chairman and his Vice Chairman Tirso Del Junco. And I'm just pleased to be with all of them.

And it's a pleasure to be here back here at the Century on the Avenue of Stars with so many of LA's brightest lights. Let me just start with tonight's MC, the honorary Mayor of Hollywood. He's a national figure these days -- Johnny Grant. Always a pleasure to be with him. I want to thank A.C. Lyles, who worked to pull together this star-studded cast. And I, of course, would genuflect before and salute Bob Hope and Delores. It's a great pleasure to see them up this late. (Laughter.) And to Gene Autry and his wife, Jackie; and to John and Connie Gavin; and to Sly Stalone and Chuck Norris and Loretta Young and Delta Burke and Gerald McRaney.

And, of course, Kevin Costner is here. He was my partner in golf. I'm surprised he showed up after my poor showing there in Washington, DC. But he and his wife Cindy are here. Kevin's working on the sequel to Robin Hood: Prince of Thieves. It's called Robin Hood: Chairman of the Election and Reapportionment Committee. (Laughter.) He'll steal your seat right out from under you. (Laughter.)

And last but not least, the reason we're here tonight -- the rising star of the Senate, a man whom I respect and in whom I believe totally, and that is John Seymour. (Applause.) I think we all know John's story -- his transition from successful businessman, active in his community, to Mayor of Anaheim -- and later, member of the California State Senate. Then, Governor Pete Wilson came back to California, tapped John to take his seat in Washington. And tonight, we're here, unified in our desire, in our dedication to make sure that John Seymour stays in the Senate. (Applause.)

He mentioned, really, that he wasted no time in making a mark for himself on Capitol Hill. It was 48 hours after his arrival that he took part in that solemn debate that he referred to. And that debate was conducted in the highest traditions of the Senate.

MORE

And he did cast a momentous vote to authorize the use of force to free Kuwait. And it wasn't an easy vote. You've got to think back now; given the superb performance of the force, it looks like it might have been easy, but it wasn't at the time. And to John and to all of you who stood with me with our fighting men and women during the days of Desert Storm, my heartfelt thanks for your prayers and your support.

It was a fine moment for our country. It turned things around. And let me just say I am confident that what happened then will be the guarantor that we don't have to do all that again. (Applause.) I believe, no matter how bad he is, Saddam Hussein is not going to miscalculate once more. He's not going to do that. And we are going to stay firm as we can be the way I spelled out the policy yesterday. It isn't going to change one single bit. And he is going to comply with every single resolution of the United Nations. (Applause.)

We live at a time of just extraordinary change -- at a moment in history when old gives way to the new. In August 1990, the world's attention was riveted on Iraq. And this August, the epicenter of change shifted over to Moscow and to the rest of the Soviet Union. And what began as the Old Guard's attempt to turn back the clock ended up as the last gasp of a dying ideology. And the coup failed, and communism stood exposed and empty at its core. I was very pleased when both Yeltsin and Gorbachev gave the United States credit for standing firmly with the them thus helping to guarantee the coup's failure. (Applause.)

And it is true that the collapse of communism stands as a triumph for freedom-loving men everywhere; a victory for the principles all of us here hold dear -- principles we've pledged to defend: freedom, democracy and the dignity of man.

The aftershocks of that ideological earthquake have made themselves felt around the world -- even right here in California. Just last night the citizens of Santa Monica stormed City Hall and knocked down their statue of Tom Hayden. (Laughter.)

Speaking of democratic change, your governor, Pete Wilson, tells me that this very day, this very afternoon, every Republican member of the State Assembly voted against the Democrats' gerrymander. And I applaud them and the Governor. (Applause.) And I fully expect them to support their Governor, their party and their President by also voting no on the Democrats' effort to override Governor Wilson's veto. The Governor is right to insist on fairness. The people of California are entitled to fair play on redistricting. So enough of outrageous gerrymanders.

But even in times of tremendous change, some things still stay the same. And next time you're in Washington, visit Capitol Hill and note the differences between the political parties. The party in charge of Congress may not see that Americans want action -- but I really believe our party does. Yes, we're outnumbered; yes, we cannot take the offensive because of the numbers on both Houses of Congress. But we want action. And we're waging a battle to take back the Senate in 1992 and get Capitol Hill moving on our domestic agenda. We can start right here. Help California keep its edge by electing this fine man, sending him back to the Senate.

In his nine short months of office, John has adapted well to the strange new world of the Senate. John won passage of five amendments -- I think Pete referred to this, to the crime bill -- five key tough-on-crime provisions, more amendments than any senator not on the Judiciary Committee.

And thanks to John Seymour, California's -- and this country's -- streets may just be -- get to be -- a little bit safer. (Applause.)

MORE

And I might also say that John has been a key supporter of America 2000 -- our revolutionary National Education Strategy. You take any number of problems we cope with today -- from crime and drugs to economic competitiveness, education really is part of their solution.

And right now, our schools can't pass the test. Take a look at this state's graduation rate. Just 65 percent of California's students graduate with their classes. One in every three kids falls through the cracks -- and that's a crime.

America 2000 offers answers, not excuses. America 2000 demands revolutionary change. And the very idea of change strikes fear in the hearts of the education establishment in this country. Our critics in the establishment and their friends up on Capitol Hill, sing the same old refrain: We aren't spending enough on our schools. Well, it's time for them to check their math.

In the last 10 years in current dollars, total education spending went from about $200 billion to over $400 billion, and we're still 12th in the world in math and 9th in science achievement.

The American people are not stingy, but they know that a fistful of dollars will not fix the problems plaguing our schools. And real reform begins with raising expectations, setting our sights on our national education goals, and freeing our schools to meet them. And it means making today's schools better and building "break the mold" schools to serve the students of tomorrow. It is important that these communities decide what is best for them, start from scratch, redesign the schools, the school curriculum, the length of the term, whatever it is; but each community should start from scratch and try. (Applause.) Real reform recognizes that teachers and schools can't do the job alone. And we've got to call on parents and communities and private sectors companies.

In California and all across this country, we want to see every city and town become what we call America 2000 communities. Earlier this month, I generated some controversy with my remarks about television and its effect on kids. But the fact is, TV shouldn't be an electronic babysitter. Even the best educational TV, and there's some tremendous programs, cannot substitute for parents who care. Kids who sit in front of the tube all day, may be great for the ratings, but they won't help our SAT scores. And they certainly won't be able to compete in the 21st century, when brains, no brawn, will determine the destiny of nations. (Applause.)

So real reform means taking responsibility -- challenging our communities to get involved -- giving parents the power to choose which school is best for their kids. (Applause.) And that is what we call America 2000: common sense -- but then again, as Tom Paine understood, sometimes, in the right circumstances, common sense can be revolutionary.

In California, across this country, really, a Republican revolution has begun. We've known for a long time our party is the party of American ideals -- that our faith in freedom reflects the special magic of America. And just as important, right here at home, the Republican Party stands as the party of ideas. From reinventing our schools to turning tenants into homeowners, from enlisting the marketplace to clean our air, to promoting ways of finding new energy sources, to waging a drug war that is making dramatic headway -- on one issue after another: when Americans ask for solutions, Republicans deliver.

And that's the secret behind our success in this great state. The secret that makes John Seymour effective in the Senate.

MORE

And tonight we reaffirm those powerful ideals that give this party its sense of direction and its strength of purpose. I am very sorry that Barbara Bush isn't out here with me tonight. I know she would have loved the glitter and the wonder of it all. And she just plain likes coming out to California. But she and I talk about the problems that our country face. And we often come back to the fundamental values that we all learned when we were kids: the importance of family, the importance of faith, the importance of community values. And so it starts from square one, but I like to feel that our party now is in the forefront of all of this.
(Applause.)

So my plea tonight is let us wage a Republican revolution here in California and across this country and let's start by guaranteeing that John Seymour remains in the United States Senate. (Applause.)

Once again, thanks to you for this warm welcome. And may God bless the United States of America. Thank you very much.
(Applause.)

Whither Education Reform?

From one source after another, for the past decade we've been receiving evidence that American education is doing a mediocre job, one that ill-serves this country and our children. What is most alarming is that after a sustained period of valiant reform effort--and no small investment of resources--we've got so little to show for our labors and our money.

For the U.S. as a whole, per student expenditures for public education increased an average of 33 percent in real dollars (i.e. after allowing for inflation) during the 1980's. Besides spending more on it, we've been trying conscientiously to make the enterprise more effective. Yet test scores remain flat, or declining. International comparisons continue to show us near the back of the pack. Remedial education is the fastest-growing activity on many college campuses. Employers say they still can't find competent workers. The quality of our civic and political life keeps eroding.

To be sure, American education can boast some remarkable accomplishments over the decades. We have done well at constructing a universal and flexible system in which just about everybody can have just about as much education as they want, pretty much whenever they want it. We've also done well in recent years at opening access to minorities, immigrants and the handicapped. We are pretty good at recognizing student differences and trying through the schools to respond to them. Ours is an adaptive and fairly forgiving system in which it's never too late to try again.

We've hugely opened access to higher education, too, such that we're the only country in the history of world where more than half the secondary school completers at least commence further studies. (How many of them wind up with a college degree is another, and far gloomier, story.)

All true and all good. But these accomplishments cannot mask the bad news, above all the weak intellectual skills and knowledge possessed by our average high school graduate, and the widening gap between those skills and knowledge and the levels required for the kinds of jobs we're creating in America today, the kinds of jobs we have to be able to fill with qualified individuals if we are to be economically strong, not to mention culturally vibrant, civically alert and internationally secure.

The problem is not with basic skills any longer. According to National Assessment data, just about everyone who sticks with formal education through high school graduation now acquires rudimentary literacy and numeracy. At these modest levels, we're doing satisfactorily. We have successfully made it "back to the basics". It is when we look at the levels we really think people should reach that attainments plummet. Here is a single example from a recent math assessment:

"Christine borrows $850 for one year from the Friendly Finance Company. If she pays 12% simple interest on the loan, what will be

Clayton Yeutter
Chairman

William J. McManus
Treasurer

Lawrence E. Bathgate, II
Finance Chairman

In one of his first actions as Chairman of the Republican National Committee, Clayton Yeutter instructed the RNC's Chief Counsel to draft a charter setting up a new core group of Republican advisors in the spring of 1991.

This distinguished council, the Chairman's Advisory Board, will assist Republican Party leaders in developing campaign and legislative policy and will provide the core foundation of support for Republican officials who will govern our nation in the critical decade ahead.

As mandated by the Official Charter of the Chairman's Advisory Board (enclosed), national meetings will be held in Washington twice a year. All Board meetings will feature a unique discussion format and will include a private reception with President Bush or Vice President Quayle.

Each discussion will concentrate on one specific policy issue, and will be led by a senior Executive Branch official or Member of Congress with knowledge and expertise in the area under discussion. Members will have the opportunity to participate directly in the discussion of issues in which they also have a special interest or expertise. Or, may simply listen to and learn from a lively debate on cutting-edge questions our Party and Republican lawmakers must address soon.

Another unique feature of the Board is that 100% of the financial commitment made by each Board member will be placed in a special account reserved solely for providing direct candidate assistance and campaign support services.

Today, Democrat incumbents are receiving more money than ever before from special interest PACs. To give our candidates a level playing field, the Republican National Committee must have the resources to provide our candidates with the support they need to win.

This means the financial support of Charter Members of the Board will have a direct and decisive impact on the campaign success of key, targeted Republican candidates in every election cycle.

The format and purpose of the Board are explained in more detail in the enclosed Official Charter. The Charter calls for a contribution of $5,000 per year from each Charter Member — the minimum needed to fully fund the special account for direct candidate and campaign assistance for the 1991-92 election cycle.

For further information regarding membership, please contact
Karen Kessenich, Director of Major Donor Programs,

Paid for by the Republican National Committee and the Republican National State Elections Committee. Only those contributions which do not fall under the limitations and prohibitions of the Federal Campaign Act will be used by the Republican National State Elections Committee.

Official Charter
establishing
THE CHAIRMAN'S ADVISORY BOARD of the Republican National Committee

This Charter is made at Washington, District of Columbia, between the Republican National Committee as GRANTOR, and Chairman Clayton Yeutter, Treasurer William J. McManus, and Finance Chairman Lawrence E. Bathgate, II as OFFICERS.

WHEREAS, the Republican National Committee has the responsibility of providing direct candidate support and campaign assistance to Republican candidates for national, state and local elections; and

WHEREAS, upcoming changes to federal regulations governing contributions and expenditures of funds for political elections may increase the financial responsibility of the Republican National Committee; and

WHEREAS, the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971, as amended and various state laws permit individual contributions to the Republican National Committee for the purpose of funding candidates and campaigns; and

WHEREAS, it is the responsibility of the Republican National Committee to determine how such contributions may best be used to further the campaign and policy goals of the Republican Party.

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the foregoing premises and the mutual covenants hereinafter set forth, the GRANTOR does hereby establish the CHAIRMAN'S ADVISORY BOARD, to be governed by the OFFICERS stated herein, and to be open for membership by invitation only of the OFFICERS.

ARTICLE I: PURPOSE

The purpose of the Chairman's Advisory Board is to assist the Republican Party in developing campaign strategy and policy, and in raising the funds necessary to provide the maximum support allowed by the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971, as amended, to officially-sanctioned Republican candidates running for office at the federal, state and local level.

ARTICLE II: MEMBERSHIP REQUIREMENTS

Membership in the Chairman's Advisory Board shall be restricted to individuals officially invited by the OFFICERS, and shall require a contribution of not less than $5,000 (five thousand dollars) per annum.

ARTICLE III: DISTRIBUTION OF FUNDS

Funds contributed by the Members of the Chairman's Advisory Board shall be deposited in a special account to be available for direct candidate assistance and campaign support services.

ARTICLE IV: MEETINGS

The Chairman's Advisory Board shall meet twice each year in Washington, D.C., for the purpose of discussing policy, strategy, and other questions of concern to the Republican Party as deemed appropriate by the OFFICERS or as requested by the MEMBERS. Attendance is restricted to, but not required of, members in good standing of the Board and special guests as approved by the OFFICERS.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the GRANTOR, by its authorized signatory has caused this Charter to be executed, and the MEMBERS by their signatures have acknowledged receipt of the Charter and acceptance of the invitation to membership, pursuant to the provisions of this Charter registered this _____ day of _____, 19____.

CHM. Yeutter into POTUS

Thank you. I've got to tell you, this is an impressive turnout, especially for a second meeting. I'd just like to congratulate Clayton Yeutter for assembling one of the most diverse and promising groups of contributors I've ever seen. And remember, I've been in Clayton's shoes. I know how tough it is to get people out to support the party. I think we all ought to congratulate Chairman Yeutter for this great start on 1992. \\\

Now, Clayton and Bobby: Go out and recruit more.

You look around this room, and you can see the potential of the Republican Party. [I see old friends and colleagues -- Dick Schweiker, Hastings Keith, [others]. I see some new acquaintances -- [].] And I look at Don King and see just what years of Democrat domination in Congress can do to some people.

You've probably heard me talk about my frustrations with Congress, and I'm sure many of you share my frustration.

We have worked hard over the years to take on the problems that worry the American people: crime, poor schools, jobs, peace. I have tried for nearly three years to get a comprehensive^v bill through Congress. Well, Congress spent more money. It exempted itself from new laws. It tried to humiliate some good public servants. But it hasn't come close to passing a bill to take criminals off our streets, and to protect law-abiding men and women.

You see this same pattern in education. Just about everyone in America agrees: We need to improve our schools. I have tried for most of my term to get an Excellence in Education Act through Congress. No luck. And you know the rest. [Test scores have not risen in four years.] Too many children drop out of school. Our students don't match those in other nations when it comes to math and science. Businesses must spend increasing amounts of money teaching workers the educational basics.

When you take inflation into account, we spend ^{one-third} ~~35 percent~~ more on education today than we did a decade ago. We shell out more than $400 billion a year. Does anyone think we've gotten our money's worth. Does anyone believe that our children have gotten the educations they deserve?

Republicans champion educational reform because we believe in families, in future, in hope. With your help, we will turn my Administration's America 2000 Education Strategy into a blueprint for the world's finest schools.

Let me close by touching upon a third fundamental issue, jobs. Republicans believe in hard work, fair pay, economic opportunity, and growth. When we see someone succeed, we feel a surge of pride, not a new source of taxes. We see a new example for our kids and ourselves, not a Fat Cat to criticize.

Think of it this way. Suppose your neighbor has just won the lottery. If you're a Republican, you feel happy for them. If you're a Democrat, you bemoan the increasing disparity between rich and poor.

America doesn't have too many rich people. It has too few. And if Republicans got their way, many of today's poor would be rich, and we'd all be better off for it.

With that in mind, our administration has promoted a comprehensive, sensible economic growth package. It includes a cut in the capital gains tax, tax credits for research and development, IRAs for use by first-time homebuyers, banking reform, tort reform, infrastructure improvements, educational reform, regulatory reform. We want to reward people who work hard, who have good ideas, who bring products to market and improve our lives. We want the best fairness program of all: Good jobs for people who want them.

But liberal Democrats in Congress seem more eager to turn a bright spotlight on suffering workers than in trying to give the economy a jolt. They seem more eager in advocating protectionism -- the great economy killer -- than in giving our people the resources they need to outpace the rest of the world.

And they seem determined to waste everybody's time with their veto strategy. They pass bills that no responsible President could sign, and when I veto them they accuse me of standing in the way of progress. Well, they have stalled 11 different domestic initiatives of mine this year, and they haven't done a thing to address the things that American families really care about -- schools, crime and jobs.

I need your help. If we want to push this nation ahead, we will need to push Democrats out of Congress and put Republicans in. The American people have become sick of do-nothing government. They have become sick of intrusive government. They want Washington to heed their concerns.

Political progress requires two willing players -- a President with an agenda and a Congress with a determination to get the job done. So far, we're only half way there. Next year, let's elect Republicans, and get America moving again.

Let's join together to build the kinder, gentler society I talked about so long ago. Let's peel away programs that incite racial strife and build a new era of brotherhood and harmony. Let's get our schools in shape, our streets safe and our economy running at full speed. Let's make Americans proud that they're Americans.

We have an incredible opportunity before us. You can help lead this party and this nation into the Next American Century. Stick by your ideals, work hard, and support your Republican candidates. Together, we will win.

Thank you again. Congratulations on this meeting. May God bless you and the United States of America.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: RNC CHAIRMAN'S ADVISORY BOARD
THE FOUR SEASONS HOTEL
NOVEMBER 21, 1991
6:30 p.m.

[INTRODUCTORY ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS]

Thank you. I've got to tell you, this is an impressive turnout, especially for a second meeting. I'd just like to congratulate Clayton Yeutter for assembling one of the most diverse and promising groups of contributors I've ever seen. And remember, I've been in Clayton's shoes. I know how much work goes into an event like this. I think we all ought to congratulate Chairman Yeutter for this great start on 1992. \\\

Now, Clayton and Bobby: Go out and recruit more.

You look around this room, and you can see the potential of the Republican Party. I see old friends and new acquaintances. And I look at Don King and see just what years of Democrat domination in Congress can do to some people.

You've probably heard me talk about my frustrations with Congress, and I'm sure many of you share my frustration.

We have worked hard over the years to take on the problems that worry the American people: crime, poor schools, jobs, peace. I have tried for nearly three years to get a comprehensive crime package through Congress. Well, Congress spent more money. It remained exempt from a host of laws. But it hasn't come close to passing a bill to take criminals off our streets, and to protect law-abiding men and women.

You see this same pattern in education. Just about everyone in America agrees: We need to improve our schools. I have tried for most of my term to get an Excellence in Education Act through Congress. No luck. And you know the rest. SAT scores have fallen again -- verbal SATs to the lowest level ever. Too many children drop out of school. Our students don't match those in other nations when it comes to math and science. Businesses must spend increasing amounts of money teaching workers the educational basics.

When you take inflation into account, we spend one-third more on education today than we did a decade ago. We shell out more than $400 billion a year. Does anyone think we've gotten our money's worth. Does anyone believe that our children have gotten the educations they deserve?

Republicans champion educational reform because we believe in families, in future, in hope. With your help, we will turn my Administration's America 2000 Education Strategy into a blueprint for the world's finest schools.

Let me close by touching upon a third fundamental issue, jobs. Republicans believe in hard work, fair pay, economic opportunity, and growth. When we see someone succeed, we feel a surge of pride, not a new source of taxes. We see a new example for our kids and ourselves, not a Fat Cat to criticize.

*total
expenditures
392,619,090
(billion)*

Think of it this way. Suppose your neighbor has just won the lottery. If you're a Republican, you feel happy for them. If you're a Democrat, you bemoan the increasing disparity between rich and poor.

America doesn't have too many rich people. It has too few. And if Republicans got their way, many of today's poor would be rich, and we'd all be better off for it.

With that in mind, our administration has promoted a comprehensive, sensible economic growth package. It includes a cut in the capital gains tax, tax credits for research and development, IRAs for use by first-time homebuyers, banking reform, tort reform, infrastructure improvements, educational reform, regulatory reform. We want to reward people who work hard, who have good ideas, who bring products to market and improve our lives. We want the best fairness program of all: Good jobs for people who want them.

But liberal Democrats in Congress seem more eager to turn a bright spotlight on suffering workers than in trying to give the economy a jolt. They seem more eager in advocating protectionism -- the great economy killer -- than in giving our people the resources they need to outpace the rest of the world.

And they seem determined to waste everybody's time with their veto strategy. They pass bills that no responsible President could sign, and when I veto them they accuse me of standing in the way of progress. Well, they have stalled 11 different domestic initiatives of mine this year, and they haven't done a thing to address the things that American families really care about -- schools, crime and jobs.

I need your help. If we want to push this nation ahead, we will need to push Democrats out of Congress and put Republicans in. The American people have become sick of do-nothing government. They have become sick of intrusive government. They want Washington to heed their concerns.

Political progress requires two willing players -- a President with an agenda and a Congress with a determination to get the job done. So far, we've only got the first half. Next year, let's elect Republicans, and get America moving again.

Let's join together to build the kinder, gentler society I talked about so long ago. Let's peel away programs that incite racial strife and build a new era of brotherhood and harmony. Let's get our schools in shape, our streets safe and our economy running at full speed. Let's make Americans proud that they're Americans.

We have an incredible opportunity before us. You can help lead this party and this nation into the Next American Century. Stick by your ideals, work hard, and support your Republican candidates. Together, we will win.

Thank you again. Congratulations on this meeting. May God bless you and the United States of America.
