Presidential Talking Points: COLUMBUS, OHIO STUMP
OCTOBER 9, 1992
TIME -- T.B.D.

o Governor Voinovich -- thanks for that introduction. I want to recognize your wife, Jane. / ~~Mike Dewine -- we need this man in the United States Senate.~~ / It's great to be back in Ohio -- the home of seven Presidents. Some day you can tell your kids you helped elect another President. You're looking at him now.

o I always love coming back to Columbus. My grand-dad lived here. His company, Buckeye Steel, made couplings for the railroads. My dad was born and raised here. Two weeks ago I picked Columbus to kick off our train trip.

o Columbus has been kind to the Bushes -- and I think we've kept the faith. We believe in the same things -- hard work. Community. Respect for law. "Duty, honor, country."

o Compare this to Governor Clinton, the man loves to take both sides of an issue. He's the reason we're having three debates. One is for Governor Clinton to state his position. The other two are for him to change his mind.

o This Election is about the kind of America we want for the young people here today. It's about remaining the world's number one economic power -- and we can do that with my Agenda for American Renewal, a comprehensive, integrated plan to create the world's first $10 trillion dollar economy by the early years of the next century.

o My agenda prepares our young people to excel in science and math and English. We've got to literally reinvent American education and give every parent a fundamental right to choose their kids' schools, whether they be public, private, or religious. / Parents who favor school choice can start by choosing a President who agrees with them. / o My agenda addresses the need to reform our legal system -- we've got to control these crazy lawsuits. As a nation, we must sue each other less, and care for each other more.

o This Agenda for American Renewal spells out what I'm fighting for: reducing the deficit and reducing your taxes by cutting federal spending. // I'm seeking a mandate for the Balanced Budget Amendment, the line-item veto, and term limits for Congress. / And I want you to be able to check a box on your tax forms targeting up to 10 percent of your income tax to reduce the deficit. If Congress won't do it, you and I might as well.//

o Now that you know what I'm for, let me tell you what we're up against this election year. It's the difference between talk and action -- a history of empty promises. The Governor of Arkansas says he's for civil rights, but Arkansas is one of two

~~Z~~ ^{Spr., Mo} states with no basic civil rights law. // He says he's for a clean environment, but the Institute for Southern Studies ranked

~~S~~ Arkansas 50th -- dead last -- in environmental policy. //

o To listen to the Governor speak, you'd think he could walk on water. Well, he can over there in the Arkansas River. // There's so much "fecal coliform bacteria" in the river that the fish glow in the dark for night fishermen. //

o Governor Clinton says he's tough on crime, but crime in Arkansas has increased twice as fast as the rest of the nation.

~~4~~ And the cops who know him best -- the Fraternal Order of Police in Little Rock, Arkansas -- have endorsed me for President of the United States. // And later today, right here in Ohio, I will proudly accept the endorsement of the national Fraternal Order of Police. //

o One promise of his that is not empty -- he definitely wants to raise your taxes. Governor Clinton has already proposed $150 billion in new taxes, $220 billion in new spending -- he announced this using that same tone doctors use -- 'This shot won't hurt one bit.' // I thought that would satisfy the Governor's appetite -- but it was just an hors d'oeuvre.

o We added up some of his promises -- and since that day in June -- Governor Clinton has promised at least another $200 billion in -- quote -- investments -- without saying how he'll pay for them. And those are just the first few we've been able to put a price tag on. A billion dollars in new promises --

every single day. Governor Clinton has earned a new nickname -- "Billion Dollar Bill."

o He says -- don't worry, I'm taking from the top two percent -- those making over $200,000. But the truth is, to get the money for his plan, to get all $150 billion, he would have to hit Americans with taxable income over $36,600. //

o Naturally, he doesn't say that. Says he's only going to tax the rich -- but you know his definition of rich: Anyone who works for a living. //

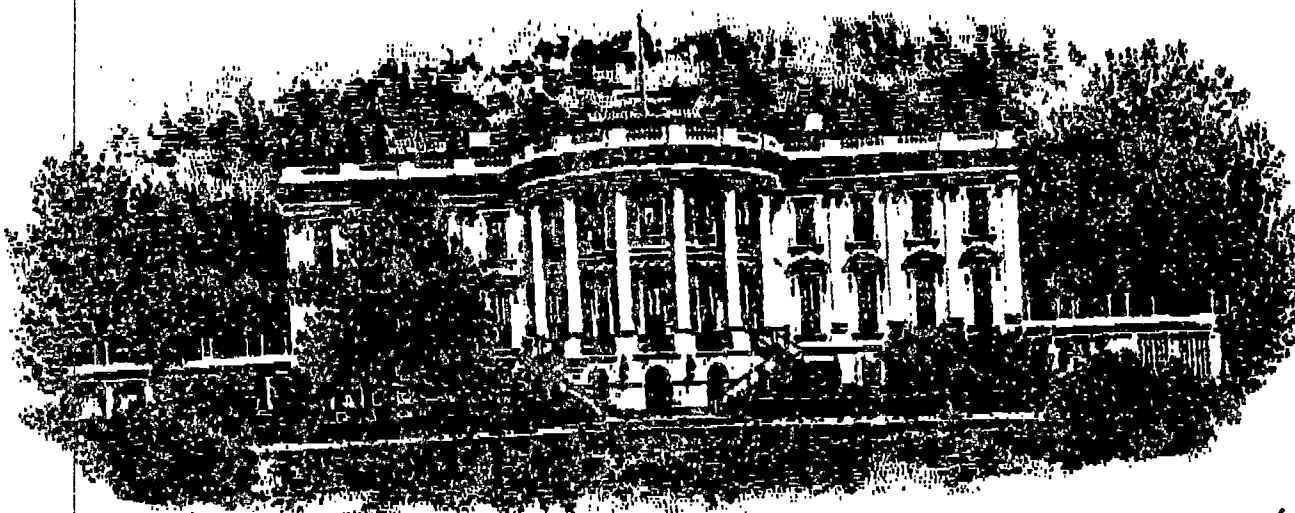

o Let me tell you what the Governor's plans could mean for you in plain terms. Say you're a third grade teacher making $22,000 a year in taxable income -- Governor Clinton could slap you with another $430 a year in taxes. I say keep that money for your kids' education, or for your home mortgage. Don't send it to Washington -- keep it here in Columbus. //

o Think of that Sunday night as you listen to the debate. Judge us not as politicians -- but as leaders, and human beings. / Ask who best reflects your values. Vote for who you trust to lead America at home and abroad. /

o It's great to be back in a city that to us means "family." Thank you for this welcome. On Sunday, "Meet me in St. Louis." God bless the United States of America.

Attached find five sheets labeled as "George Bush's Record of Helping Ohio."

These are the main issues which Governor Voinovich wants to highlight as evidence of the Bush Administration's commitment to Ohio.

Five large poster boards are being blown up to be used as visual aids at the President's airport arrival. Governor Voinovich's desire is to speak for several minutes pointing to these items.

It would appear that easels on a platform would one way to display the information best.

The Governor's Communications Office would like to copy "George Bush's Record" and distribute to the media and supporters.

Incidentally, the information was developed in conjunction with Ohio's Washington office. Tom Needles is the Director.

Thanks.

George Bush's Record of Helping Ohio.

Summary of Ohio

1. ETHANOL PROMOTION - The Bush Administration granted a one-pound waiver of Reid Vapor Pressure (RVP) requirements for gasoline blended with ethanol, making it more attractive for northern states to count ethanol-blend sales toward Clean Air Act compliance requirements. The Administration also announced other steps that the U.S. EPA will take to encourage ethanol-blend use in states required to reduce smog-causing auto emissions under the Clean Air Act. Increased use of ethanol is expected to heighten market price of Ohio-grown corn.
2. BROUGHT ASSISTANCE - U.S. Department of Agriculture Secretary Madigan was a key figure in negotiating passage of disaster legislation providing payments to farmers hard hit by the 1991 drought that affected Ohio and other Midwestern states.
3. CHILD SUPPORT ENFORCEMENT - The Department of Health and Human Services authorized $1.9 million to assist Ohio's child support program. In addition, the Department's Office of Child Support has been extremely helpful in assisting Ohio improve its child support system. For instance, Ohio won approval and an increase in funding from the Department to implement an enforcement tracking computer system on a statewide basis.
4. MEDICAID - Governor Vetovech has received a great deal of assistance from the Bush Administration on various Medicaid issues. Most notable is Administration approval of Ohio's Hospital Care Assurance Program, which resulted in more than $250 million in new federal funds in 1992 alone. Also, the Administration played a vital role in the Governor's successful effort to keep the Dayton Area Health Plan up and running. When Ohio wanted to expand coverage to medically fragile children, the Bush Administration put its fast-track waiver on fast track approval. Currently, the Administration is helping Ohio reform the Medicaid system and control costs; this includes technical assistance and expedited approval of federal waivers included in the Governor's Medicaid/welfare reform proposal.
5. REHABILITATION SERVICES - The U.S. Department of Education granted Ohio a special two-year waiver of a regulation issued in December 1991 that would have cost Ohio $3 million over the biennial budget. The regulation would have restricted Ohio's use of Social Security reimbursements to fund various programs that help disabled Ohioans remain in the workforce.

6. MAJOR TRANSPORTATION GRANT - The U.S. Department of Transportation has awarded Ohio a $454,500 federal grant to assist in the preparation of one of the nation's most innovative, comprehensive statewide transportation plans.
7. FEDERAL GRANTS - In addition to other larger initiatives, Ohio has received several important grants from the Bush Administration over the past two years. In fact, since January 1991, Ohio's state agencies have received over 150 grants totaling over $100 million.
8. DRUG PREVENTION AND TREATMENT - $13.4 million has been set aside for Ohio drug abuse treatment and prevention programs in various counties.
9. HELPING OHIOANS OWN HOMES - Over $6.5 million has been directed toward promoting home ownership statewide through HUD's HOPE initiative.
10. COMBATING DRUNK DRIVING - More than $1.2 million U.S. Department of Transportation funds will fight drunk and impaired driving over the next two years.

Northwestern Ohio

1. BUCKEYE BASIN/GREENBELT PARKWAY - As a result of meetings between President Bush and Governor Voinovich and Lt. Governor DeWine, this long delayed highway and economic development project in Toledo was granted approval by the Army Corps of Engineers.
2. TOLEDO HARBOR - The Corps of Engineers' Washington headquarters intervened to settle a long-running dispute between the Corps' Buffalo District and the Port of Toledo on the disposal of contaminated sediment taken from the Maumee River. The agreement will permit the harbor to remain open for commercial shipping while a long-term sediment management strategy is studied.
3. BURLINGTON EXPRESS FACILITY - Under the Bush Administration, and in cooperation with state and local efforts, the Federal Aviation Administration has directed more than $5.2 million in facility improvements toward the Toledo Express Airport to help accommodate a major Burlington Express cargo handling facility. Federal funding covered the cost of all necessary preliminary environmental studies, along with subsequent runway, taxiway, navigational and lighting improvements for a cargo facility presently employing 1,500 persons, and perhaps as many as 4,000 persons in the future. In all, the FAA has approved more than $20 million in improvements to the airport over the past year.
4. AREA FEDERAL GRANTS - The region has received several major grants including: A.) $700,000 for reconstruction of a dike in the Ottawa National Wildlife Refuge; and B.) a total of $1.7 million in drug abuse prevention funding for Celina and Norwalk.

3. NATIONAL CENTER FOR TOOLING AND PRECISION COMPONENTS - The Department of Defense provided $8 million for the construction and the first two years of operation for the Center. Construction began in September 1992. The Center, which will employ 80, will be operational this spring. It will provide technical assistance to more than 400 area tool, die, and machine shops and make grants to graduate students for research and development projects.

Northeastern Ohio

1. COLUMBIANA COUNTY FEDERAL PRISON - Columbiana County was selected as a tentative site for a federal prison that will employ 1,000 people, operate on a $30 million annual budget, and cost $150 - 200 million to build.
2. DELTA CLEVELAND AIR ROUTE - The U.S. Department of Transportation granted approval for Delta Air Lines to operate air service between Cleveland and London on a permanent basis. This air service is critically important to the region's economic and foreign trade opportunities.
3. HEALTHY START FOR CLEVELAND - The Cleveland area was one of 15 localities winning grant awards for the President's Healthy Start Initiative. Cleveland will receive $13 million over 5 years to combat infant mortality.
4. KOBE STEEL - The White House and the U.S. EPA Administrator interceded with EPA Region V to permit Kobe Steel in Lorain to proceed with plant modernization without submission to costly and time-consuming "major modification" permitting requirements under the Clean Air Act. The agreement subsequently reached with the U.S. EPA allowed the modernization to proceed, saving thousands of jobs.
5. BLOCK GRANTS FOR CLEVELAND AND YOUNGETOWN - The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development was very helpful with two UDAG projects: the City of Cleveland received an UDAG extension on the Midtown Plaza Project; and a $400,000 UDAG was awarded to the City of Youngstown.
6. CLEVELAND'S PIER 34 - Negotiations with the Bush Administration produced an agreement wherein the federal government will split (with the state of Ohio) the $2.8 million cost of restoring the crumbling Pier 34. The project is a key component of development plans which include construction of the Rock & Roll Hall of Fame and Museum. The agreement satisfies U.S. Army Corps of Engineers' permit requirements, clearing important financial and regulatory hurdles for this high priority development project.
7. TRANSIT GRANTS - Over $1.6 million for Urban Mass Transit grants for Lake County and Youngstown, and over $1.3 million in Federal Transit Administration grants for the Canton Regional Transit Authority have been made.

8. ENHANCED OPERATIONS AT NASA LEWIS - NASA proposes to spend more than a quarter-billion dollars at the Lewis Research Center in connection with the Space Station over the next several years. Over 210 Ohio businesses have contracts related to this program. NASA established a new Regional Technology Center near Lewis, to make technologies developed through the space program available to businesses in Ohio and elsewhere.
9. WHEELCHAIR LIFT BUSES FOR CANTON - $1.5 million has allowed Canton to purchase wheelchair lift-equipped buses.
10. JUVENILE BOOT CAMP - The Department of Justice has granted nearly $300,000 to Cuyahoga County to establish a Boot Camp for juvenile drug offenders.

Central Ohio

1. OSU SCIENCE AND MATHEMATICS CENTER - The U.S. Department of Education awarded Ohio State $23 million over 5 years to establish and operate the National Clearinghouse for Mathematics, Science, and Technology. The Clearinghouse will become a repository for educational materials, coordinate various data bases, and disseminate instructional materials that will help the nation's teachers foster creative ways to teach science and mathematics.
2. I-270 INTERCHANGE - In September, following high-level discussions between the Bush and Volinovich Administrations, agreement was reached between federal, state, and private parties on a planned highway interchange expansion east of Columbus. One of the nation's largest public-private infrastructure investment undertakings ever, the proposed Limited Industrial park could create as many as 20,000 jobs in the next ten years.
3. BATTELLE TECHNOLOGY TRANSFER - $5 million over five years has been granted for Battelle Laboratory's Regional Technology Transfer Center.
4. OSU HEAD INJURY CENTER - The U.S. Department of Education has awarded $2.8 million to the Ohio State University and the Ohio Valley Center for Head Injury.

Southern Ohio

1. IMPROVEMENTS TO DAYTON'S AIRPORT - Nearly $6 million in Federal Aviation Administration funds were directed toward facility improvements at the Dayton International Airport.

2. GREENFIELD ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT - The Inspector General of the U.S. Department of Commerce ruled that the City of Greenfield should repay $1 million of an Economic Development Administration (EDA) grant. EDA and the Department of Commerce were very helpful in overturning the ruling. Ultimately, Greenfield was not required to return the money.
3. CLEANING UP FERNALD - The Department of Energy has devoted a rapidly increasing amount of money toward cleaning up radioactive and other contamination at its Ohio facilities, especially the Fernald site. The 1993 request of over $4.6 billion nationally is up from $3.1 billion just 2 years ago; over $300 million of this increase will be spent at Fernald.
4. DAYTON AREA HEALTH PLAN - The Bush Administration played a vital role in the Governor's successful effort to exempt the Dayton Area Health Plan (DAHP) from certain federal requirements allowing the Plan to continue to serve more than 40,000 Montgomery County Medicaid recipients. Without the exemption, DAHP would have been forced to discontinue operations due to a federal requirement that HMO's limit their Medicaid enrollment to no more than 75% of their total clientele. DAHP is Ohio's only mandatory, managed care program.
5. HELPING THE MACHINE TOOL INDUSTRY - Voluntary Restraint Agreements for machine tools were extended by the Bush Administration for two years. Their continuation is critically important for the nation's 70,000 workers in this industry, so vital to national security. This will assist machine tool makers while they strive to compete more efficiently with foreign manufacturers.
6. HELPING THE HOMELESS - Almost $3 million in HUD monies have benefited housing assistance for the homeless in Cincinnati and Franklin County.
7. UPWARD BOUND AT SHAWNEE STATE - Nearly $600,000 from the U.S. Department of Education will allow Shawnee State University to establish an Upward Bound program.
8. MONTGOMERY COUNTY CHILDREN'S SERVICES - Model children's services programs in Montgomery County will benefit from a $275,000 grant.
9. HELPING ATHENS PARENTS - A $200,000 grant to Athens County will expand its Crisis Nursery Network focusing on the needs of low-income parents.

o Governor Voinovich -- thank you for that introduction. I want to recognize your wife, Jane. / Mike DeWine -- we need this man in the United States Senate. / It's great to be back in Ohio -- the home of seven Presidents. Next month, it's going to elect another President. You're looking at him now.

o I always love coming back to Columbus. Was here two weeks ago, in fact. My grand-dead lived here. His company, Buckeye Steel, made couplings for the railroads. My dad was born and raised here.

o Columbus has been kind to the Bushes -- and I think we've kept the faith. We believe in the same things. Hard work. Respect for law. Faith in God. "Duty, honor, country."

o Sunday night I'm going to talk about these things. Tune in -- 7 o'clock. I'm not the most eloquent guy -- and you may not agree with all I say. But you'll know where I stand. You see, I think a President must trust the people -- and the people must trust him. /

o Compare that to Governor Clinton. Glib, facile. Loves to take both sides of an issue. He races back and forth from one side to the other so quickly -- he's probably the only person in America who can teeter-totter with himself.

o There you have it. On one side a candidate who says: Here I stand -- judge me as I am. On the other side a candidate who must think this Election is the draft -- the way he keeps trying to dodge the questions. //

o So listen on Sunday. Listen to our views. I measure success by how much of your money to get to keep. Bill Clinton measures it by how much of your money he can take. / I believe government should be acting in your best interests. Bill Clinton thinks government should be in your face.

o Judge us not as politicians -- but as people, and leaders. Ask who best reflects your values. Vote for who you trust to lead America at home and abroad. / Thank you, and God bless the United States of America.

TIME -- T.B.D.

o Governor Voinovich -- thanks for that introduction. I want to recognize your wife, Jane. / Mike Dewine -- we need this man in the United States Senate. / It's great to be back in Ohio -- the home of seven Presidents. Some day you can tell your kids you helped elect another President. You're looking at him now.

o Columbus has been kind to the Bushes -- and I think we've kept the faith. Well, all of us believe in weapons that never misfire. We believe in the same things -- hard work. Community. Respect for law. "Duty, honor, country."

o Sunday night -- 7 o'clock -- I'm going to talk about these things. I'm not the most eloquent guy -- and you may not always agree with me. But you will know where I stand. I think a President must trust the people -- and the people must trust him.

o Compare this to Governor Clinton. Glib, facile -- loves to take both sides of an issue. He's the reason we're having three debates. One is for Governor Clinton to state his position. The other two are for him to change his mind.

o This Election is about the kind of America we want for the young people here today. It's about remaining the world's number one economic power -- and we can do that with my Agenda for American Renewal, a comprehensive, integrated plan to create the world's first $10 trillion dollar economy by the early years of the next century.

If Congress won't do it, you and I might as well. //

o Now that you know what I'm for, let me tell you what we're up against this election year. It's the difference between talk and action -- a history of empty promises. The Governor of Arkansas says he's for civil rights, but Arkansas is one of two states with no basic civil rights law. // He says he's for a

I say keep that money for your kids' education, or for your home mortgage. Don't send it to Washington -- keep it here in Columbus. //

o Governor Clinton should stop loathing the military -- and start loathing taxes. His message to working Americans would be a paraphrase of a famous TV commercial: For all you do, this tax increase is for you.

o Naturally, he doesn't say that. Says he's only going to tax the rich -- but you know his definition of rich: Anyone who works for a living. /

o Think of that Sunday night as you listen to the debate. Judge us not as politicians -- but as leaders, and human beings. / Ask who best reflects your values. Vote for who you trust to lead America at home and abroad. /

Incentive for choosing innovative approach

EPA STAFF PLAN 'GREEN' AIR PERMITS FOR COMPANIES EMBRACING POLLUTION PREVENTION

EPA staff are developing a plan to offer permits that carry a "seal of approval" to companies which embrace pollution prevention in their Clean Air Act compliance plans, agency sources say. The novel approach is aimed at encouraging the use of innovative strategies in Clean Air Act permits, by allowing companies to use their "green" permit as a marketing tool.

EPA sources say green air permits, coupled with state efforts to educate the public about the benefits of pollution prevention, could serve as a model for boosting pollution prevention in other media through voluntary efforts. The concept is in a very early stage of development, and likely will have to overcome many obstacles, these sources say, adding the plan has not yet been reviewed by top EPA staff.

EPA Administrator William Reilly has touted pollution prevention as a tool industry can use to meet its obligations under various federal environmental statutes while reducing costs. The concept is seen by many as an advance from the traditional "command and control" approach, which requires industry to install "end-of-pipe" pollution control technology.

The new approach would reward companies that embrace pollution prevention by granting them a green permit which would indicate they are achieving compliance through the most innovative means available. The primary motivation would be economic, one EPA source says, adding that industry could use its special "status" to "create marketing opportunities." EPA should try and encourage innovative pollution control approaches by tapping into what many economists predict will be a "green consumer" movement, by offering a "Good Housekeeping seal of approval" for innovative permits, this source says. The green permit could also be coupled with a revised fee schedule, most likely a lower rate, if a company could meet the green permit requirements, according to this source.

States would also play a key role in educating the public about the advantages of pollution prevention under the plan, outlining advantages of the approach as part of the public review of an individual company's permit. One EPA source suggests the agency could use some of its pollution prevention "seed" money to help states develop programs to "sensitize" people and companies to the pollution prevention concept.

The plan faces many obstacles, EPA sources admit, pointing out that compliance requirements in the law make it impossible for sources to risk non-compliance by adopting a pollution prevention approach. An industry source points out that command-and-control approaches, while not reducing the source of pollution, may be so much less expensive than a process change, that an end-of-pipe technology can divert funds to reduce environmental risk in other parts of a product's life cycle. The net result could be an overall environmentally "cleaner" production process, without adopting what many consider pollution prevention techniques. Some companies may also complain that the net environmental result of command-and-control techniques is the same as pollution prevention efforts and thus attainment of excellent performance rather than the technique of achieving that performance should be rewarded, an EPA source says.

One EPA source says while the concept is far from being ready for testing in a pilot project, some states have expressed an interest in the idea.

CITIES FIND HUGE COSTS FROM EPA REGS OVER NEXT DECADE, URGE LOCAL FLEXIBILITY

Nine cities have found that EPA regulations will impose huge costs over the next decade and are calling for uniform national mandates to be set aside in favor of greater local flexibility to decide what are priority issues. The findings come at a time when the agency's drinking water, Superfund, and other programs are coming under intense fire for forcing state and local governments to spend limited funds on problems they deem low priorities.

Between 1992 and 2001, nine Ohio cities, ranging from small to very large, will face $2.9 billion in compliance costs, or up to $3.7 billion if 7% annual inflation is added into the calculations, according to data released by the cities Sept. 15. The nine-city calculations were prompted by a May 13, 1991 Columbus, OH study that found EPA's rules will impose costs of $1.8 billion on that city alone over the next decade (Inside EPA, July 26, 1991, p12). In the wake of that report, which has spawned similar studies in numerous other states, Ohio city officials decided to assess more broadly the costs of federal mandates on cities in the state. The estimate of $2.9 billion is likely to be "extremely conservative," according to the cities' report.

"We want to spend the money on the right things because we can't afford to spend it inefficiently," says a municipal source, stressing that the cities are not requesting that all regulations be weakened. Rather, the cities are suggesting adoption of a set of principles to achieve "more effective, efficient and cost-effective environmental legislation," arguing that it is "imperative that we utilize sound science to help us separate 'real' risks from 'perceived' risks." That recommendation was urged by EPA's Science Advisory Board and is receiving congressional scrutiny, note EPA sources.

The agency is intensely aware of city and state concerns about rising mandates and diminishing funds, according to agency and other sources who attended an EPA meeting last week involving cities, states, environmentalists, and industry. At that meeting, EPA Deputy Administrator Henry Habicht stressed that the issue of funding shortages for implementing environmental rules will be one of the biggest issues in future rulemaking, according to an agency source and other participants. "I hope people realize this issue has to be dealt with because the public is really upset" about rising costs, says one municipal official who attended EPA's meeting.

Ohio's nine cities found that costs to households over the 10-year period range from a low of $807 (for Cincinnati residents to pay for Safe Drinking Water Act rules alone) to a high of $3,375 (for Columbus residents to comply with all environmental mandates covered by the report).

Besides calling for science to focus spending on real risks, the cities argue that local governments should be able to set their own most pressing priorities rather than having to meet uniform national mandates. Flexibility to consider local environmental conditions should be incorporated into federal and state environmental regulatory processes, the cities also say. Without such flexibility, localities will be forced to spend resources wastefully because what is a high priority nationally often is a low priority locally, according to the cities. Moreover, local governments should be given the opportunity for fuller participation in federal and state legislative and regulatory processes, the cities add.

WHITE HOUSE DISMISSING CALL FOR ETHANOL CLEAN FUEL CERTIFICATION WAIVER

An administration group charged with developing a plan to boost ethanol use under EPA's clean fuels rule is apparently dismissing ethanol supporters' leading proposal for carving out a larger role for the fuel additive under the regulation, according to administration sources. The administration's move is a direct challenge to industry supporters who have insisted that a waiver of certain certification requirements is the only way to utilize ethanol as mandated under the Clean Air Act.

The group is now said to be considering an alternative plan which would give ethanol credit for reducing other smog-causing compounds in reformulated gasoline by making adjustments in an EPA model used to certify fuels as "clean." Congressional sources say the move could provide a breakthrough in what has been a contentious debate over ethanol's role in the Clean Air Act.

EPA, the White House and other federal agencies have been engaged in a battle over how to address concerns raised by supporters of ethanol that EPA's clean fuel rule shuts the corn-based additive out of the program by relying on a narrow certification model in the early years of the program. The White House has been under intense political pressure from congressional Republicans and farm groups to provide a "fix" for ethanol. President Bush has responded by forming a high-level White House team to address the issue and has vowed to present a quick solution to the problem.

EPA's proposed rule was developed in a regulatory negotiation involving states, environmentalists and representatives of the ethanol, oil and auto industries and others. At that time, all parties agreed to certify fuels based heavily on a fuels evaporative qualities -- or Reid vapor pressure (RVP) -- a method ethanol supporters now say discriminates against ethanol as that additive increases RVP. Ethanol supporters in Congress -- led by Senate Minority Leader Robert Dole (R-KS) -- have demanded a waiver of the RVP requirements, a proposal backed by most ethanol industry groups.

But now the White House group appears to be dismissing the waiver concept -- in part because of EPA claims that such a move would be illegal -- and are apparently shifting efforts to refinement of a new certification model which would seek to highlight the air quality advantages to burning ethanol blends. EPA has been asked to speed development of the so-called complex model for certifying fuels, and the latest White House interest in emphasizing ethanol's benefits suggests some adjustment in the complex model is in the works. EPA sources involved in the discussions could not be reached for comment. One source close to the discussions says the White House group appears to be considering a model which compares ethanol blend emission with a base convention gasoline, pointing out that ethanol emits lower levels of carbon monoxide, and other smog causing compounds at levels which offset any problems associated with increased evaporative emissions. While CO is not a highly reactive ozone forming substance, the model would consider the relative contribution those reductions would make, according to this source. Other details of the plan were not available at presstime.

But the White House would likely face strong opposition to the approach, environmentalists and congressional sources say, noting that environmentalists strongly oppose any "tinkering" with the complex model, and oil industry sources are likely to reject any "cooking" of the numbers. It is also unclear whether the ethanol industry will find the proposal adequate for addressing their concerns, although all groups have yet to see any proposal from the White House.

ADDRESSING PUBLIC OPINION ON THE ENVIRONMENT AND ECONOMY THROUGH THE REGULATORY MORATORIUM

I. RECOMMENDED ACTIONS FOR PRO-GROWTH ENVIRONMENTAL POLICY

- Two actions need to be taken by the President to ensure the implementation of sound environmental policies which do not hinder economic growth:
 - ▶ Short-term Action. A deferral on the finalization of EPA risk assessments should be implemented as part of the 1-year moratorium extension.
 - ▶ Long-term Action. The Executive Order on risk assessment and risk management policy should be issued following the election.
- Attached is a list of organizations which support these actions.

II. THE PUBLIC WANTS POLICIES BASED ON SOUND SCIENCE

- According to a recent survey, the public demands that environmental policy be based on science so as not to destroy jobs or otherwise harm the economy. Specifically, sound science should be used to ensure that costly environmental regulations which produce no benefits to the public or the environment are avoided.
- Market Strategies, Inc., a professional market research group, conducted a survey between July 6 - 8, 1992 to develop a comprehensive base of public opinion concerning environmental policy, science and cost-benefit tradeoffs.
- 813 respondents representative of all households in the continental U.S. were contacted. Survey questions addressed numerous issues including the national mood and agenda, public attitudes toward the environment, how environmental policy should be established, the importance of scientific research on the environment, and cost-benefit and the environment.
- Key survey results include:
 - ▶ 88% believe that environmental policy should be based on sound scientific analysis.
 - ▶ 85% believe that if we have a sound scientific basis for environmental policy, we can have confidence in environmental regulations.

- ▶ 83% believe that if the scientific process is driven by political or media concerns rather than by science, American taxpayers can actually be harmed by environmental regulations.
 - ▶ 82% believe that when the science and data used to evaluate environmental policy is bad governmental regulations based on this science can impose a heavy burden on the economy.
 - ▶ 81% would be upset to learn that the government agency which writes environmental regulations has admitted that it does not have a process to ensure a minimum level of quality science. An actual example of this is the Environmental Protection Agency's March 1992 report entitled Safeguarding the Future: Credible Science, Credible Decisions.
 - ▶ 76% would be upset to learn that a major financial journal such as Forbes reports that U.S. environmental policies are costing jobs and hurting the economy without improving the environment/public health.
 - ▶ 63% would be upset to learn that the average family of four pays an estimated $1,800 per year in higher taxes and prices as a result of environmental regulation.
- In summary, 4 out of 5 Americans:
 - ▶ Understand the environmental policy-economy link; and
 - ▶ Demand that such policy be based on sound science so as not to harm the economy.

III. STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENTS RECOGNIZE THE LINK BETWEEN ENVIRONMENTAL POLICY AND THE ECONOMY

- Congress has enacted a multitude of laws concerning the environment. Often these laws and related regulations require states and local governments to make heavy expenditures which produce no environmental or public health benefits. For example:
 - ▶ According to a report issued by the City of Columbus, Ohio, a municipality with an annual budget of $600 million:
 - It will cost Columbus approximately $1.6 billion over the next ten years to comply with federal environmental regulations which produce no or insignificant health benefits.

- This cost will be borne by residents whose average per household water bills will quadruple, from $200 to $850, by the year 2000.
- ▶ EPA has proposed drinking water regulations for radon which will cost states over $20 billion to implement and produce no measurable health benefits. In the case of California, it will cost $3.7 billion to implement these regulations and $750 million in annual costs.
- According to resolutions passed by the Conference of Mayors and National Governors Association, such costly and ineffective environmental policies divert scarce funds from other public needs.

IV. IMPLEMENTING AN AGGRESSIVE PRO-ENVIRONMENT, PRO-ECONOMY STRATEGY WITH THE REGULATORY MORATORIUM

- The 90-day regulatory moratorium which was announced by the President in his State of the Union speech has been so well received by the public that it was extended another 120 days in April, and then for another year in August.
- The purpose of the moratorium are two-fold:
 - ▶ To promote pro-growth regulatory action; and
 - ▶ To stop unduly burdensome and expensive regulation which hinders economic growth.
- A major issue with unduly burdensome and expensive environmental regulation is risk assessments which frequently lack a sound scientific basis. This problem was highlighted by EPA's own report entitled Safeguarding the Future: Credible Science, Credible Decisions in which EPA's own Expert Panel on the Role of Science at EPA concluded that:
 - ▶ EPA often fails to base regulations on sound science; and
 - ▶ EPA has no process in place to ensure the use of sound science.
- The President has the opportunity to address the need for sound science and its role in EPA risk assessments through the:
 - ▶ Regulatory moratorium; and
 - ▶ Executive Order on risk assessment and risk management policy which is currently under consideration by the White House.

- For the short-term, the President should announce as part of the moratorium extension that the finalization of all EPA risk assessments will be deferred until EPA takes steps to ensure that it uses sound science in developing its risk assessment-based regulations.
 - ▶ Caveat: Importantly, this action will not stop EPA from conducting risk assessments. The action merely prevents EPA from issuing any risk assessment in final form until the Executive Office of the President is satisfied that EPA is actively improving its internal processes.
- For the long-term, the President should issue the Executive Order on risk assessment and risk management policy which will serve as a permanent check on all federal actions based on risk assessment. Under the Executive Order, environmental/public health policy would be:
 - ▶ Developed only on the basis of state-of-the-art science with the goal of identifying and prioritizing public health/environmental risks; and
 - ▶ Implemented so as to produce significant public health/environmental benefits in an effective and efficient manner.

V. CONCLUSION

- Due to economic realities, the public, industry and state and local governments all demand that environmental policies, including risk assessments, be based on sound science.
- Accordingly the Administration should:
 - ▶ Extend its moratorium to include all EPA risk assessments; this portion of the moratorium would be terminated when EPA demonstrates to the satisfaction of the Executive Office of the President that it has taken steps to implement the recommendations contained in Safeguarding the Future.
 - The announcement of this action should clarify that risk assessments underway are to continue and new risk assessments can be initiated, but no risk assessments can be issued as final until the above-stated condition has been satisfied.
 - ▶ Initiate those actions that would result in the adoption of the Executive Order on risk assessment and risk management policy no later than January 1, 1993.

AVOIDING UNJUSTIFIED COSTS FOR OHIO CITIZENS THROUGH PRESIDENTIAL ACTION ON ENVIRONMENTAL POLICY

- ▶ Overview. As discussed below, federal environmental regulations can be costly to Ohio citizens and municipalities but not produce commensurate public health benefits . Either one of two possible Presidential actions could rectify this situation.
- ▶ Columbus Study. A recent study on the costs and benefits of federal regulation on the City of Columbus, Ohio conducted by the Columbus Department of Health concluded that:
 - The costs to Columbus and its citizens over the next 10 years of compliance with federal environmental mandates will be $1.6 billion -- however, Columbus' annual budget is only $500 million.
 - These costs will in large part be borne by Columbus residents whose average per household water bill will increase 425% from $200 to $850 annually by 2000.
 - In contrast to the certainty of these costs, the Department of Health is uncertain that these regulations will produce any measurable public health benefits.
- ▶ Ohio Cities Study. Based on the results of the Columbus Study, nine other Ohio cities conducted similar studies and found that:
 - Between 1992 and 2001, the nine cities will face environmental compliance costs ranging from $2.9 billion to $3.7 billion, depending on inflation.
 - Costs to households over this ten-year period will range from $807 per Cincinnati household to $3,375 per Columbus household.
 - As with the Columbus study, local public health officials are not confident that these costly regulations are properly targeted to reduce priority risks.
- ▶ Great Lakes Water Quality Standards. As part of the Great Lakes Water Quality Initiative, EPA intends to propose water quality standards on the Great Lakes. These standards:
 - Are estimated to cost all seven Great Lakes States almost $3 billion -- Ohio's share will be $500 million; and
 - May not be based on sound scientific analysis -- as indicated by EPA's own Science Advisory Board.
- ▶ Possible Presidential Actions to Prevent Unjustified and Costly Regulation. The White House has two possible vehicles to control such undesirable environmental regulation:
 - A Presidential Executive Order on risk reduction policy which would force regulations to be based on sound science and be cost-effective; and
 - Extending the ongoing regulatory moratorium to include risk assessments and regulatory actions based on risk assessments until steps are taken to ensure risk assessments are based on sound science.

THE WHITE HOUSE

Office of the Press Secretary
(Orlando, Florida)

For Immediate Release

October 3, 1992

REMARKS BY THE PRESIDENT
AT CHURCH STREET MARKET RALLY

Church Street Station
Orlando, Florida

6:05 P.M. EDT

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you very much. All right, you guys, thank you. Thank you very much.

AUDIENCE: Four more years! Four more years!

THE PRESIDENT: What a fantastic rally. And let me say, I've got great respect for Pat Williams. Wasn't he great up there, I'll tell you, giving us that warm introduction. (Applause.) And as for Gerald McRaney, "Major Dad," he's been a great campaigner, and I'm proud to have him at our side. (Applause.)

I want to salute Congressman Bill McCullem. I'm not sure he made it. But he's a good man, and he obviously -- if we had more like him, they wouldn't be yelling, "clean House" all the time. (Applause.) But we've got the answer to cleaning House. And, John Mica and Bill Tolley with us here today. And we've got Bill Grant running for the Senate; and more like that and we are going to get real advantage here in the Congress and change America. Help me clean House. (Applause.)

And thank you, everybody, for this great welcome. And it's wonderful to be back in this City of Light, this city beautiful.

And before I begin, let me just make a serious comment on what happened in Tampa this morning. We were followed out of town by a tornado which devastated some residential areas -- tragically killed four people. And on behalf of Barbara and me, our hearts and prayers go out to the family and the victims and all others whose homes were in that tornado's path. We've seen -- and I saw it again today in Homestead -- that Floridians are strong and good people. And you've had your fair share of natural disasters, and I want to just express my concerns and say, Florida's fighting back; never make a mistake about that. (Applause.)

And I might say, on a brighter note, I am very pleased that we have reached agreement with the Clinton campaign to hold three presidential debates beginning next Sunday. (Applause.) And I look forward going head-on-head with Governor Clinton and Ross Perot. And I'm especially pleased that Americans will be able to compare our ideas side by side without any media filter, and get the facts and the truth to the American people. (Applause.)

I didn't go to Oxford, so I'm not the world's greatest debater. But I know how to tell the truth, and that may make a difference. (Applause.)

AUDIENCE: Four more years! Four more years! Four more years! Four more years!

MORE

THE PRESIDENT: Let me say this -- this election and what we'll be putting in perspective and the debates out there, is asking the rhetorical question: What kind of an America do you want for the young people here today? And my opponent rips our country down and says that we're a nation in decline -- somewhere between Germany and Sri Lanka. And he ought to open his eyes. We are the most respected nation on the face of the Earth. (Applause.)

And now let's use that leadership to change the world, and brought democracy and peace to all the countries moving around the world and bring that same progress and prosperity to every working man and woman in this country. That's why I want four more years. (Applause.)

You might say, how do we stay number one economically; and we are when you look around the world. And we do it this way: Here's the Agenda for America's Renewal. It is a comprehensive, factual plan, integrated plan to create the world's first $10-trillion economy in the next few years. And we can do it because we are the United States of America. (Applause.)

And one way you do it is to turn away from protection and open up new markets abroad for American products. We must become an export superpower. And we can do it if we don't listen to the siren's call of protection emanating from the other camp. (Applause.)

This agenda prepares our young people to excel in science and math and English; and because this is the way we're going to outcompete the Germans and outcompete the Japanese. And this agenda helps strengthen the American family, because family is still the foundation of our nation. (Applause.) And I worry when it's weak, and I want to see us help strengthen. (Applause.)

We've got to literally reinvent American education and give every parent a fundamental right to choose the public schools, private schools or religious schools. (Applause.) Parental choice will make all the schools better. (Applause.)

One thing that Governor Clinton doesn't want to touch, and I want to see done and done quickly is to reform our crazy legal system so that we sue each other less and care for each other more. (Applause.) He has already advocated spending -- and he hasn't even started yet -- already advocated $220 billion in more spending. And I want to get the spending down and the taxes down.

And here's the way we'll do it: Give me that balanced budget amendment; give me that check-off; and give me that line-item veto; and let me do what the Congress can't do. (Applause.)

And another thing, give us these three good men for the United States Congress. And then let's say, let's limit the terms for the members of Congress. A President's terms are limited, limit the Congress and give it back to the people. (Applause.)

Now these are just some of my ideas -- and I hate to ruin this program -- but I think we ought to take a little look at Arkansas, because this man's trying to get elected by doing one thing: Tear down the country -- say we're down -- and criticize the President. If that's fair game, let's take a look at Arkansas. (Applause.)

Now, first, the people of Arkansas are good and decent. We live right next door to them in Texas. They are good and decent people, but there's a lot they don't know about their Governor and a lot you don't know, and the more you think about it, and the more you find out, the more you know he is wrong for America.

AUDIENCE: Tell him!

THE PRESIDENT: I am. (Applause.)

✓ He says he's for civil rights -- he says he's for civil rights. Arkansas doesn't even have a basic civil rights law. And I have passed a sound bill -- sound civil rights bill, a sound ADA bill -- the best creative piece of civil rights legislation in the last two decades. And he hasn't even done one single thing for fair play in the state of Arkansas. (Applause.)

✓ He says he's for a clean environment, but the Institute for Southern Studies ranked Arkansas 50th in environmental policy -- 50th.

AUDIENCE: Booo --

✓ THE PRESIDENT: The Governor sounds like he can walk on water. Well, you can do it over there in that Arkansas River. (Laughter and applause.) No, really. There's so much fecal coliform bacteria in the river that the fish teach their kids to jog rather than swim. (Laughter.)

✓ Governor Clinton says he's tough on crime, but crime in Arkansas has increased twice as fast as the rest of the nation. And the cops who know him best -- the Fraternal Order of Police in Little Rock, Arkansas -- have endorsed me for President of the United States. (Applause.)

This guy says he wants to do for the country what he's done for Arkansas. And I say why in the world would we let him?

AUDIENCE. Booo --

THE PRESIDENT: That is a real threat. We can't let him do that. Now, look at the economy, a major issue in the campaign -- and, look, I know we've had tough times. Families are worried, people are out of work. But I'll tell you something: We need to understand that it's bigger than America. We're feeling a global economic slowdown. Everybody knows that. It's worse overseas. Not one single country over there wouldn't trade in a minute for our economy.

✓ And so, yet, Governor Clinton offers to America that same kind of tired European social welfare approach to life that has failed them. We don't need that in this country. [He has already proposed $150 billion in new taxes, $220 billion in new spending. And don't worry -- don't worry, he says, he'll take it all out of the top two percent -- everybody making over $200,000. But the truth is, to get the money for his plan, that $150 billion, Governor Clinton would have to get his money from every American with taxable income over $36,600.] It's not just the top -- and these people are not Shaquille O'Neal. They're not rolling in millions. (Applause.) These are your neighbors. (Applause.)

✓ So I've got an idea, though. We ought to do what Shaquille would do and stuff the Governor's tax increase right into the front row. (Applause.) But on top of this -- I hate to ruin this marvelous rally -- but on top of this, [Governor Clinton will literally need hundreds of billions of dollars more to pay for all the programs he's promised. And you say, who's going to pay? The same people who always pay -- those who work hard, pay their bills, sweat it out at tax time. And he wants you to sweat harder for the tax man.] And I say his ideas deserve a cold shower. We cannot do that for this country. (Applause.)

✓ You're a third grade teacher making $22,000 a year in taxable income -- he could slap you with another $430 a year in taxes. And I say you ought to be able to use that money to pay for your kids' education, take a shot at the mortgage. And you don't need to send it up to the IRS in Washington, D.C. And therein lies the biggest single difference on this election -- tax-and-spend versus holding down taxes, holding down spending, and return the power to the people of the United States. (Applause.)

I've got another -- you know, for 11 months this guy -- and bunch of these other Democrats have been around tearing me up, and I'm having a good time now getting this thing in focus. I enjoy it. And here's -- one day Bill Clinton says, this guy is on every side of every issue. You talk about slippery when wet -- (laughter) -- listen to this: One day, Bill Clinton tells Arkansas he'll never run for president -- I've seen the tape of it; and eight months later, he's out there running for president, announcing his campaign. One day he says, I'm for the North American Free Trade Agreement, and then he backs away.

And now today the Washington paper reports -- Washington Post reports that, tomorrow, the Governor is poised to switch again and support the trade agreement. Watching him go back and forth on the issues is mind-boggling. It's like watching a Chinese ping-pong match. (Laughter.)

One day he says the middle class deserves a tax break, and the next day he's plotting new ways to give the middle class the greatest honor of paying for all his programs. And if he ever became President -- and he won't -- we'd have to replace the eagle with a chameleon. (Applause.)

Now, I'll give you another example. I'll give you another example. Look at the question of whether to follow my lead and stand up against Saddam. Just two weeks ago in Washington Bill Clinton read a speech on foreign policy -- it sounded like a college term paper -- and he said -- and I quote -- (laughter) -- he said this: "I supported the President when it became necessary to evict Saddam Hussein from Kuwait" -- end quote. But two years ago, when I was trying to mobilize the whole country behind it, fighting not only the demonstrators out there in front of the White House that Saddam misunderstood -- and a lot in the media, and plenty in the United States Congress -- here is what Governor Clinton said: "I guess I would have voted with the majority if it was a close vote, but I agree with the arguments the minority made." Now, tell me what kind of leadership that would be for a Commander-in-Chief of the United States Armed Forces. (Applause.)

AUDIENCE: Boo --

THE PRESIDENT: No, we've got too much on one side and then another side. And I've found one thing about the Oval Office: You can't make everybody happy. You're bound to make mistakes, but you've got to do like the umpire. You've got to call them as you see them and stay with it, and tell the truth as you go along. (Applause.)

I'll tell you why I'm going to win the election. (Applause.) The first place, we've got a better plan -- an Agenda for American Renewal. Secondly, the young people in America go to bed at night without that same fear of nuclear war -- (applause) -- the generations ahead of them had. (Applause.) And thirdly, when people go into that voting booth, they're going to ask themselves this question: Who do I trust to be empowered with the dignity, prestige and the enormous power of President of the United States?

And I have worked hard to uphold that trust. Yes, I've made mistakes. But I have not betrayed the public trust. I have been a strong leader. And now I ask for your support for four more years to finish the job -- (applause) -- and get this job done. (Applause.)

Thank you all, and God bless you. God bless you all.
(Applause.) Thank you very much.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: STEVE PROVOST

SUBJECT: NATIONAL VICTORY '92 REMARKS

Tonight, at approximately 9:30 p.m., you will speak to 500 supporters at the Houston Marriott, and another 2,500 at six other sites around the country. Your remarks (teleprompted/10 minutes) thank your supporters and offer three reasons why we will win this election: achievements, ideas and trust.

Conrad
D.S.

Presidential Remarks: Victory '92 National Fundraiser
Houston Texas
8 October 1992

Thank you Mr. President -- and thanks to all our friends in every city.

My special thanks to Bob Mosbacher -- who did a great job, and broke the news to me with such diplomacy -- that far more people wanted to be with "the Silver Fox" up in New York -- than down here with me in Houston.//

As you can imagine, I'm not much in the habit of quoting polls these days. But I couldn't help but notice a new poll that came out just last night.

It wasn't CNN, or ABC, or Gallup or The Wall Street Journal. It was that little kid's magazine -- Weekly Reader. They polled 600,000 kids across America. 39 percent wanted Bill Clinton for President. 55 percent wanted George Bush.//

Before you think that the pressure of the past few months has gone to my head, and that I'm seeking solace in 4th graders - - let me point out something.

Weekly Reader isn't a bad barometer of what happens in elections. That particular poll hasn't been wrong -- since 1956.//

But this is admittedly a weird year, and I don't want to leave anything to chance. So when the Democrats leave town next week, I'm asking Bob Dole, Bob Michel and all the other

Republicans --to sneak up to Capitol Hill and pass the (37th) amendment -- lowering the voting age to five-years-old.//

Governor Clinton can go after the MTV vote. We'll tear him apart on Sesame Street.//

But seriously -- forget the polls. Forget the pundits. We're going to win this thing. We're going to lead this nation for four more years.//

Let me tell you three reasons why I'm so confident.

First, our record.

We've heard alot of talk this year about what's wrong with America --but lets not lose sight -- of the grand victory we have helped win for all humanity.

I've been preparing for my debate this Sunday. And my thoughts went back to another debate -- 12 years ago -- between Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan.

Remember how President Carter made such a big deal -- of how his young daughter worried -- had nightmares, he said -- about the specter of nuclear war?

Well, we fought ^{for} a policy of peace through strength. And 12 years later, (800 million) people -- in every corner of the globe -- have enjoyed their first breath of freedom.

And tonight -- as American kids pull back the covers and shut off their talking Barbie Dolls -- they think not of nuclear weapons -- but of the sweet dreams of peace.

Does that matter? You bet it does.

The second reason we will win? Our ideas make sense to middle-class Americans.

Governor Clinton has done a good job of pummeling me -- quoting statistic after statistic -- tearing down America's economy.

Grady: But our problems are never put in context of the global slowdown -- and only now -- are people starting to compare our solutions.

Governor Clinton likes to say he is -- quote -- "a different kind of Democrat."

Well, to me there's nothing "different" about $150 billion in new taxes -- more than Michael Dukakis and Walter Mondale combined.

And there's nothing "different" about making pie in the sky promises with one hand -- while pulling dollars out of working people's wallets with the other.

In June, Governor Clinton proposed $220 billion in new government spending -- he called it "investment" -- and he used the same tone that doctors use when they say -- "this shot won't hurt one bit."

I thought that would satisfy Governor Clinton's appetite -- but it turned out to just an horsd'oeuvre.

We did a little calculating -- and since that day in June -- Governor Clinton has promised at least another $200 billion in -- quote -- investments, A billion dollars in new promises -- without saying how he'll pay for them, every single day. Governor Clinton has earned a new nickname --

"Billion Dollar Bill."

But whose going to pay Bill's -- bill? The middle-class.

This week, The National Association of Business Economists compared Governor Clinton's "Billion Dollar A Day" spending plan -- to my pro-growth policies of smaller government and lower taxes.

Grady → Delete
The vast majority said that economic growth would be higher under the Bush plan. Under my plan, Inflation would be lower, interest rates would be lower -- and the budget deficit would be smaller.

Governor Clinton said this week that history is on "his side" --but I fear his inexperience is showing.

From Managua to Moscow -- history is moving away from taxes and regulation and central control.

History is casting aside the government planner who spends the wealth of nations -- and lifting up the men and women who create it.

No, Governor Clinton, history is on our side -- and that's why we will make history in 25 days.//

One final reason we will win -- in a word -- "trust."

I have had the privilege of leading this nation through challenging times -- both around the world, and here at home.

I have made some mistakes -- and I have admitted them. But I believe I have been a good leader.//

I have made the tough decisions -- and I have tried to fulfill my obligation -- with the dignity, intelligence and respect that is worthy of this office you have entrusted me.

The world is still a dangerous place and there are still difficult decisions to be made. I think the American people understand this in their hearts -- they respect my experience and my ability to make a tough decision -- and they will reward that on November 3rd.//

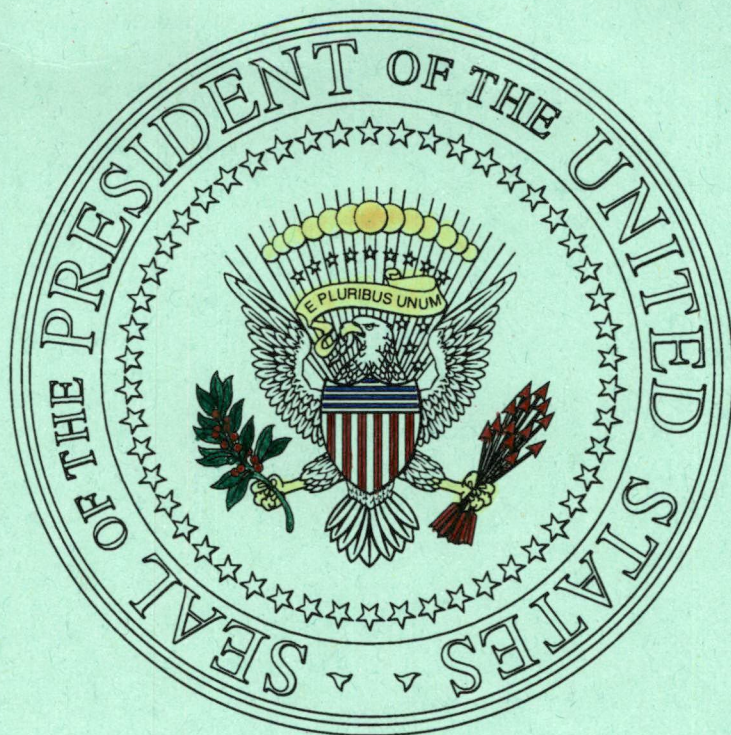

It has been said that a friend is someone who knows everything there is to know about you -- and likes you anyway.

Tonight I would add that the definition of a friend is someone who stands by your side while you're behind, so that you can pull ahead. Barbara and I are blessed with thousands of friends -- and you have touched our souls tonight.

As we say thanks, I remind you that our struggle is to more than win an election.

Our struggle is to renew America -- so that we can match the peace we have achieved in the world, with peace of mind here at home. Tonight, you have given me the strength, the passion, the inner confidence -- to take our ideas to the American people for 25 more days. You are sending me into St. Louis -- with a full head of steam.

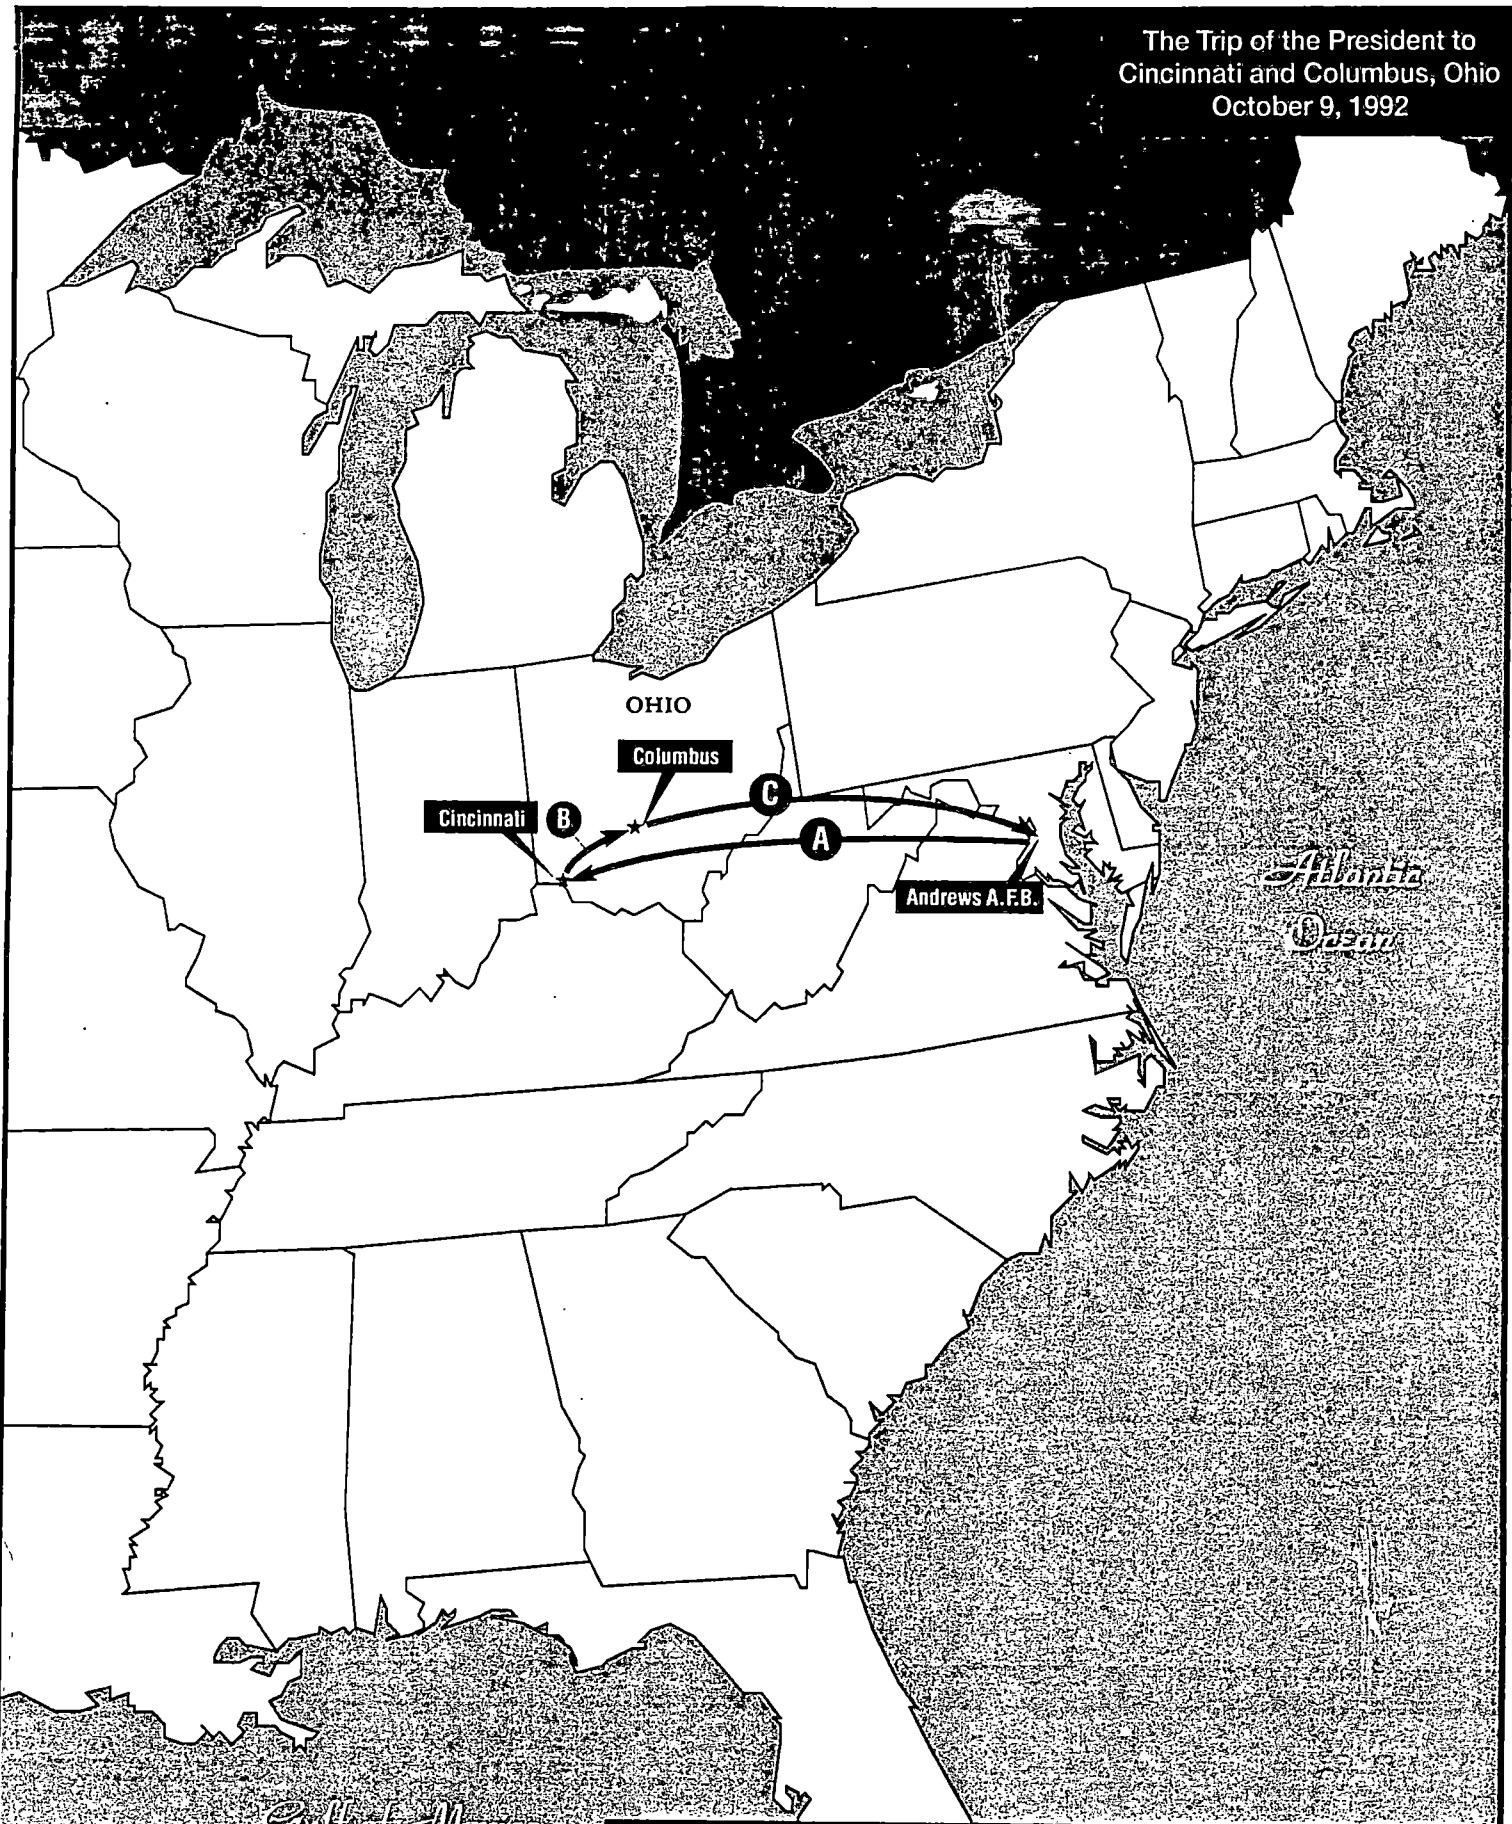

Thank you all for your support. God bless the United States of America.
