PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: BHUTTO ARRIVAL
WASHINGTON, D.C.
JUNE 6, 1989

Prime Minister Bhutto, Mr. Zardari, distinguished guests.

Franklin Roosevelt once called this "The house owned by all the American People." Well, on behalf of all the American people, Barbara and I are honored to welcome you to the White House.

Your visit marks an occasion for both us to celebrate and renew the ties of friendship between democratic Pakistan and the United States. And to chart new ways to strengthen old bonds in the many years to come.

These bonds are formal but, they are also personal. For you are no stranger to America, nor to Americans themselves.

We remember you as a college student, eager to learn from us -- and eager to teach us about your homeland. We remember you, standing beside your father at the United Nations as he pleaded the cause of Pakistan.

We remember your visits as a courageous opposition leader, tireless in your zeal to foster democratic change. And now we are proud to greet you as Prime Minister and leader of a great nation.

Woodrow Wilson once said, "I believe in democracy because it releases the energies of every human being." Madame Prime Minister, the people of Pakistan have chosen you to help democracy flourish in Pakistan.

This return to democracy under your leadership deserves, and has won, America's profound admiration. It has strengthened America's already firm resolve to work closely with Pakistan.

I congratulate you and your people. And I salute those in your country -- civil and military -- whose adherence to the constitutional process was so important in bringing about democracy in Pakistan.

Madame Prime Minister, your visit is a time to reaffirm a historic relationship newly forged on the anvil of democracy. But it is also a time to look ahead -- and to reaffirm liberty and freedom.

Both our governments are in their first year. Let us use that fact to our advantage. By building on the fundamental strength of our friendship, let us craft new ideas and initiatives to meet the challenges of our changing world.

I have looked forward to this meeting. You will find us frank and open, as befits old friends. And attentive listeners who value your judgement.

To America, you are a woman of great personal courage and faith. To America, you are a wise leader who embodies the very spirit of her people. To all of us, you are a living symbol of those who risk all and sacrifice much so that others might know democracy and freedom.

Madame Prime Minister, welcome to America.

These bonds are national, and they are personal. For you are no stranger to America, nor to Americans themselves.

We remember you as a college student, eager to learn from us -- and eager to teach us about your homeland. We remember you, standing beside your father at the United Nations as he pleaded the cause of Pakistan.

We remember your visits as a ~~courageous~~ ^{tireless} opposition leader, untiring in your zeal to foster democratic change. And now we are proud to greet you on your return as Prime Minister.

Woodrow Wilson once said, "I believe in democracy because it releases the energies of every human being." Madame Prime Minister, the people of Pakistan have chosen you to help democracy achieve a better, fairer, more prosperous life.

This return to democracy under your leadership deserves, and has won, America's profound admiration. It has heightened the support Pakistan has among our people. It has strengthened America's already firm resolve to aid Pakistan's security and economy.

For that achievement, I congratulate you and the people of Pakistan. And I salute those in your country -- civil and military -- whose adherence to constitutional processes was so important in bringing it about.

Madame Prime Minister, your visit is a time to reaffirm an historic relationship newly welded on the anvil of democracy. But it is also a time to look ahead -- and to reaffirm the canons of liberty and freedom.

Our two new governments are both in their first year in office. Let us use that fact to our advantage. By building on the fundamental strength of our relations, let us craft new ideas and initiatives. And let us use those initiatives to meet the daunting challenges of our changing world.

~~Of this you can be sure.~~ I ^{have} look^d forward to ^{this meeting} ~~our talks~~. You will find us frank and open, as befits old friends. And attentive listeners who value your judgement.

Above all, you will find us eager to get on with the job: To build a democratic peace and secure a free future -- the kind of peace which lasts.

In closing, let me again welcome you to America. I know that the exchanges you have here and in Cambridge and New York this week will show why Americans so admire your leadership -- and the Nation that you so ably, and courageously, embody.

I only have one comment on the three drafts. The departure statement has some good tough language on Afghanistan at the bottom of page 2/top of page 3. From a domestic political point of view, I think it's vital that we preserve that language as is.

We remember your visits as a courageous opposition leader, untiring in your zeal to foster democratic change. And now we are proud to greet you on your return as Prime Minister.

This return to democracy under your leadership deserves, and has won, America's profound admiration. It has heightened the support Pakistan has among our people. It has strengthened America's already firm resolve to aid Pakistan's security and economy.

WOODROW WILSON ONCE SAID, "I BELIEVE IN DEMOCRACY BECAUSE IT RELEASES THE ENERGIES OF EVERY HUMAN BEING."

MADAM PRIME MINISTER, THE PEOPLE OF PAKISTAN HAVE CHOSEN YOU TO HELP DEMOCRACY FLOURISH IN PAKISTAN.

THIS RETURN TO DEMOCRACY UNDER YOUR LEADERSHIP DESERVES, AND HAS WON, AMERICA'S PROFOUND ADMIRATION. IT HAS STRENGTHENED AMERICA'S ALREADY FIRM RESOLVE TO WORK CLOSELY WITH PAKISTAN.

I CONGRATULATE YOU AND THE PEOPLE OF PAKISTAN. AND I SALUTE THOSE IN YOUR COUNTRY -- CIVIL AND MILITARY -- WHOSE ADHERENCE TO THE CONSTITUTIONAL PROCESS WAS SO IMPORTANT IN BRINGING ABOUT DEMOCRACY IN PAKISTAN.

MADAM PRIME MINISTER, YOUR VISIT IS A TIME TO REAFFIRM A HISTORIC RELATIONSHIP NEWLY FORGED ON THE ANVIL OF DEMOCRACY. BUT IT IS ALSO A TIME TO LOOK AHEAD -- AND TO REAFFIRM LIBERTY AND FREEDOM.

BOTH OUR GOVERNMENTS ARE IN THEIR FIRST YEAR. LET US USE THAT FACT TO OUR ADVANTAGE. BY BUILDING ON THE FUNDAMENTAL STRENGTH OF OUR FRIENDSHIP, LET US CRAFT NEW IDEAS AND INITIATIVES TO MEET THE CHALLENGES OF OUR CHANGING WORLD.

I HAVE LOOKED FORWARD TO THIS MEETING. YOU WILL FIND US FRANK AND OPEN, AS BEFITS OLD FRIENDS. AND ATTENTIVE LISTENERS WHO VALUE YOUR JUDGEMENT.

TO AMERICA, YOU ARE A WOMAN OF GREAT PERSONAL
COURAGE AND FAITH. TO AMERICA, YOU ARE A WISE LEADER WHO EMBODIES THE VERY SPIRIT OF HER PEOPLE. TO ALL OF US, YOU ARE A LIVING SYMBOL OF THOSE WHO RISK ALL AND SACRIFICE MUCH SO THAT OTHERS MIGHT KNOW DEMOCRACY AND FREEDOM.

MADAM PRIME MINISTER, WELCOME TO AMERICA.

THE WHITE HOUSE

Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release

REMARKS BY THE PRESIDENT AND PRIME MINISTER BHUTTO
DURING ARRIVAL CEREMONY

The South Lawn

10:11 A.M. EDT

THE PRESIDENT: Prime Minister Bhutto, Mr. Zardari and distinguished guests, Franklin Roosevelt once called this "the house owned by all the American people." Well, on behalf of all the American people, Barbara and I are honored to welcome you to the White House. (Applause.)

Your visit marks an occasion for both of us to celebrate and renew the ties of friendship between democratic Pakistan and the United States -- (applause) -- and to chart new ways to strengthen old bonds in the many years to come. These bonds are formal, but they are also personal, for you are no stranger to America nor to Americans themselves.

We remember you as a college student eager to learn, eager to teach us about your homeland, and I remember first meeting you at your father's side at the United Nations as he pleaded the cause of Pakistan with such eloquence. (Applause.) And we remember your visits as a courageous opposition leader, tireless in your zeal to foster democratic change. And now we are proud to greet you as Prime Minister and leader of a great nation. (Applause.)

Woodrow Wilson once said, "I believe in democracy because it releases the energies of every human being." And Madam Prime Minister, the people of Pakistan have chosen you to help democracy flourish in Pakistan. (Applause.) This return to democracy under your leadership deserves and has won America's profound admiration. It has strengthened America's already firm resolve to work closely with Pakistan. (Applause.) And I congratulate you and the people of Pakistan, and I salute those in your country, civil and military, whose adherence to the constitutional process was so important in bringing about democracy in Pakistan. (Applause.)

Madam Prime Minister, your visit is a time to reaffirm an historic relationship newly forged on the anvil of democracy. But it is also a time to look ahead, to reaffirm liberty and freedom. And both our governments are in their first year, and let us use that to our advantage by building on the fundamental strength of our friendship. Let us craft new ideas, new initiatives to meet the challenges of our changing world.

I have looked forward to this meeting very much. And you distinguished guests, I'm delighted to be in Washington, the capital of freedom, as the guest of a President who knows Pakistan well and has been its friend. I recall our first meeting in 1971 at the United Nations at a crucial turn in Pakistan's history. The U.S.-Pakistan friendship has grown in strength; we are friends and partners.

Standing here on this beautiful lawn one sees the monuments which recall America's odyssey of freedom. As I look at these monuments, I think of Pakistan, which too has traveled a long and difficult way along the path of freedom. (Applause.)

It was not so long ago that Pakistan was a dictatorship and I was in prison. But, as you said, Mr. President, giving heart to all those living under tyranny, the day of the dictator is over. (Applause.)

Today I am privileged to stand here as the elected Prime Minister of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan; a woman Prime Minister of a Muslim country, whose people have given a verdict against tyranny and for freedom, progress, and human dignity, for justice and for the rule of law. Our two nations are united in a partnership inspired by common goals and shared interests, a partnership now bound by democracy.

The United States and the people of Pakistan have also stood together as partners over the last difficult decade, helping restore freedom and independence to Afghanistan. Our countries have developed a vital security relationship and a major program of economic cooperation. This has enabled Pakistan to work with confidence for peace in our region. And today, Mr. President, we begin our discussions of a new partnership. We are here today with new priorities to talk to the world's greatest democracy. New challenges confront us in the closing but complex phase of the Afghan war. And as we focus on the economic, social, and educational needs of our people.

We come to talk about how we, together, as partners may take our relationship and our people into the 21st century. And as we begin on this auspicious day in this magnificent country of freedom, achievement, and opportunity, I offer a simple prayer. May God bless all countries of the world with the enduring values of freedom, achievement, and opportunity that we see in this great country of yours.

I thank you, Mr. President.

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you very much. (Applause.)
