PRESIDENTIAL ADDRESS: NEW YORK STATE PARTY, HILTON HOTEL
THURS., JUNE 22, 7:15 p.m.

Thank you. Pat Barrett, Jonathan, Anthony Colavita.

((It's always great to get back to New York. Where else can you find newspapers with headlines like: "Picked Pot Packed in Pickled Peppers" . . . better get Bill Bennett on that one . . .

((Or my personal favorite from The New York Daily News, a headline that accompanied before and after pictures of a famous actor, that read -- "Brando Expando.)) ((PAUSE))

((Of course, The Wall Street Journal maintains a more dignified air with its "no photos" policy. If they were to ever run a swimsuit issue, it would still be nothing more than Lee Iaccoca in thongs.)) ((PAUSE))

I am here today to celebrate a new fact in American politics -- the emergence of a strong New York State Republican Party. This is due, in no small measure, to the leadership of Tony Colavita, and to the promise of success from your new Chairman, Pat Barrett . . . He has been a good friend for many years and has the proven ability to reach out and attract new voters to the Republican Party. Pat, you've worked wonders upstate in Onondaga County. We look forward to you working your magic all across New York State. ((PAUSE))

It is no surprise to me that New Yorkers, in particular minority and ethnic voters, are shifting from automatic loyalty to the other party and voting Republican more and more often. It was, after all, the Republican Party that was the original party of civil rights. And it was the Republican Party that first attracted immigrants, and the sons and daughters of immigrants, into politics; including Fiorello LaGuardia, the Little Flower of Italy.

Now we are proud to have a new generation of Republican leaders, with Alfonse D'Amato heading our New York Republican delegation for a second term in the United States Senate.

((PAUSE))

Republicans take great pride in our New York Members of Congress, now 13 strong. I hope we keep the number at 13 -- Guy Molinari has decided to leave Congress to run for borough president -- so the nation's loss is Staten Island's gain. And with Susan Molinari already on the New York Council -- the Molinaris will be even more of a powerhouse in the state.

We are also justly proud of how far we've come as a Party -- so far that we now have a good chance of winning the Mayor's Office in New York City -- the most powerful local office in America. It is a tremendous opportunity for the Republican Party to show that our commitment to executive leadership extends far beyond the White House, to the city streets and sidewalks of New York.

And as we win the top executive job in America's top city, we will also make big legislative gains in Albany, keeping the State Senate, and making big strides in the Assembly. The State Senate has been our Republican watchdog in Albany. And it must be our first line of defense in the fight for fair representation in the 1990s.

With a strong, united New York Republican Party under Pat's leadership -- with unity, and with courage -- you will go the distance, and the era of Democratic dominance will be a story from the past.

Thank you for inviting me to New York, God bless you and God bless America.

PRESIDENTIAL ADDRESS: NEW YORK STATE PARTY, HILTON HOTEL
THURS., JUNE 22, 7:15 p.m.

Thank you. Pat Barrett, Jonathan, Anthony Colavita.

((It's always great to get back to New York. Where else can you find newspapers with headlines like: "Picked Pot Packed in Pickled Peppers" . . . better get Bill Bennett on that one . . .

((Or my personal favorite from The New York Daily News, a headline that accompanied before and after pictures of a famous actor, that read -- "Brando Expando.")) ((PAUSE))

((Of course, The Wall Street Journal maintains a more dignified air with its "no photos" policy. If they were to ever run a swimsuit issue, it would still be nothing more than Lee Iaccoca in thongs.)) ((PAUSE))

I am here today to celebrate a new fact in American politics -- the emergence of a strong New York State Republican Party. This is due, in no small measure, to the leadership of Tony Colavita, and to the promise of success from your new Chairman, Pat Barrett . . . He has been a good friend for many years and

[[SUBSTITUTE JOKES -- POSSIBLE INSERTS]]

But -- as Don knows -- competition today is intense. I hear you're giving up the "no photo" policy and coming out with the first Wall Street Journal swimsuit issue. [[PAUSE]] I just don't know if their public is ready for Lee Iaccoca in thongs.

But Jim Perry made it up to me after the election. In the series on the paper's "Second Century," he had one 1996 scenario that had the deficit gone, inflation at three percent, and President-Elect Dan Quayle winning back states and control of the Senate. [[PAUSE]] Now that's what I call journalism.

Actually, for a while we put old copies of the Journal under the puppies. Now Millie's the only dog I know that has her own broker. [[PAUSE]] I guess she confused puppies with Yuppies.

And to paraphrase another President,
I think this is the most extraordinary collection
Of business talent, and of media acumen,
That has ever been gathered together in New York --
With the possible exception of when Donald Trump dines alone.

Don told me that one himself.

The Mayoralty of New York is more than the most powerful local position in America. It is a tremendous opportunity for the Republican Party, for us to show that our flair for executive leadership extends far beyond the White House, to the city streets and sidewalks of New York.

And as we win the top executive job in America's top city, we will also make big legislative gains in Albany, keeping the State Senate, and making big strides in the Assembly. The State Senate has been our Republican watchdog in Albany. And it must be our first line of defense in the fight for fair representation in the 1990s.

With a strong, united New York Republican Party under Pat's leadership -- with unity, and with courage -- you will go the distance, and the era of Democratic dominance will be a story from the past.

Thank you for inviting me to New York, God bless you and God bless America.

MEMORANDUM FOR CHRISS WINSTON

FROM: JIM PINKERTON
SUBJECT: New York State Party

This speech is rather short. I am somewhat surprised that there is no mention of great Empire State Republicans like Dewey, Rockefeller and Javits.

Page 1, grafs 2 and 3 It may not be wise for the President to be poking fun at the New York media.

Page 3, graf 1 In referring to the New York delegation, omit the reference to the size of the delegation. The delegation is at an all time low -- as recently as the 1960's it numbered 22.

Instead, praise the delegation in general. In particular, mention Guy Molinari, an early supporter.

Page 2, graf 2 Omit the final comment "a message for the man ... Ed, you're history." This comment is an inappropriate remark for the President -- it is not his style.

PRESIDENTIAL ADDRESS: NEW YORK STATE PARTY, HILTON HOTEL
THURS., JUNE 22, 7:15 p.m.

Thank you. Jonathan, Anthony Colavita, Pat Barrett, Rudi
Giuliani, Ron Lauder, Herb London.

((It's always great to get back to New York. Where else can you find newspapers with headlines like: "Picked Pot Packed in Pickled Peppers" . . . better get Bill Bennett on that one . . .

((Or my personal favorite from The New York Daily News, a headline that accompanied before and after pictures of a famous actor, that read -- "Brando Expando.")) ((PAUSE))

((I couldn't help but also notice recent news articles on the pow-wow between the nine candidates for mayor. Gives a whole new meaning to the political phrase: "to run for somebody's seat.")) ((PAUSE))

((But I have to admit, the reaction to presidential visits is a little different in the Big Apple, perhaps a little more jaded. When I was just arriving, I heard one guy say to another:
"I hear the most powerful man in America is here tonight for a fund-raiser." And the other guy said: "You mean they got Donald Trump.") ((PAUSE))

I am here today to celebrate a new fact in American politics -- the emergence of a strong New York State Republican Party. This is due, in no small measure, to the leadership of Anthony Colavita, and to the promise of success from your new Chairman, Pat Barrett . . . Pat, you've worked wonders upstate in Onondaga County. We look forward to you working your magic all across New York State. ((PAUSE))

It is no surprise to me that New Yorkers, in particular minority and ethnic voters, are shifting from automatic loyalty to the other party and voting Republican more and more often. It was, after all, the Republican Party that was the original party of civil rights. And it was the Republican Party that first attracted immigrants, and the sons and daughters of immigrants, into politics; including Fiorello LaGuardia, the Little Flower of Italy.

Now we are proud to have a new generation of Republican leaders, with Alfonse D'Amato heading our New York Republican delegation for a second term in the United States Senate.

((PAUSE))

Republicans take great pride in our New York Members of Congress, now 13 strong.

And we are also justly proud of our Republican candidates for mayor of New York City. ((PAUSE)) Come November, we will have a strong and united candidacy and something more -- a message for the man who lives in Gracie Mansion: Ed, you're history! ((PAUSE))

The Mayoralty of New York is more than the most powerful local position in America. It is a tremendous opportunity for the Republican Party, for us to show that our flair for executive leadership extends far beyond the White House, to the city streets and sidewalks of New York.

PRESIDENTIAL ADDRESS: NEW YORK STATE PARTY, HILTON HOTEL
THURS., JUNE 22, 7:15 p.m.

Thank you. Pat Barrett, Jonathan, Anthony Colavita.

((It's always great to get back to New York. Where else can you find newspapers with headlines like: "Picked Pot Packed in Pickled Peppers" . . . better get Bill Bennett on that one . . .

((Or my personal favorite from The New York Daily News, a headline that accompanied before and after pictures of a famous actor, that read -- "Brando Expando.)) ((PAUSE))

((Of course, The Wall Street Journal maintains a more dignified air with its "no photos" policy. If they were to ever run a swimsuit issue, it would still be nothing more than Lee Iaccoca in thongs.)) ((PAUSE))

((I couldn't help but also notice recent news articles on the pow-wow between the nine candidates for mayor . . . Seems that a squabble broke out over who would sit where. Gives a whole new meaning to the political phrase: "to run for somebody's seat.)) ((PAUSE))

I am here today to celebrate a new fact in American politics -- the emergence of a strong New York State Republican Party. This is due, in no small measure, to the leadership of Tony Colavita, and to the promise of success from your new Chairman, Pat Barrett . . . Now we are proud to have a new generation of Republican leaders, with Alfonse D'Amato heading our New York Republican delegation for a second term in the United States Senate.

((PAUSE))

Republicans take great pride in our New York Members of Congress, now 13 strong. I hope we keep the number at 13 -- Guy Molinari has decided to leave Congress to run for borough president -- so the nation's loss is Staten Island's gain. And with Susan Molinari already on the New York Council -- the Molinaris will be even more of a powerhouse in the state.

We are also justly proud of how far we've come as a Party -- so far that we now have a good chance of winning the Mayor's Office in New York City -- the most powerful local office in America. It is a tremendous opportunity for the Republican Party to show that our commitment to executive leadership extends far beyond the White House, to the city streets and sidewalks of New York.
