PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: KAIFU DEPARTURE
DIPLOMATIC ENTRANCE
FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1989

Mr. Prime Minister, Ladies and gentlemen.

An old proverb says, "The foundations for a better tomorrow must be laid today." Mr. Prime Minister, ~~three weeks into your office,~~ ^{and I} you are here today to shape tomorrow -- and on America's behalf, let me welcome you to this country.

When I was in Japan earlier this year, I observed how ties -- national and personal -- bind our two peoples. Your visit reaffirms those ties ~~x~~ / And underscores the commitment -- by you, and your government -- to the continued health of our historic friendship.

That friendship lives, and grows ~~x~~ / As today's meeting evidenced. For while we met as new friends, our talks were conducted like old friends. They were characterized by ~~civility,~~ ^{cordiality,} and understanding. And by broad agreement on the major items of our bilateral and international agenda.

For that, Mr. Prime Minister, I credit the goodwill and perspective you brought to these discussions ~~x~~ / And the enduring partnership between our two governments. That partnership is based on shared interests and mutual respect. And rests on our belief that -- together -- we can be a global force for peace and prosperity.

This "global partnership" works in several ways.

First, as in past meetings between our Nations' leaders, the Prime Minister and I affirmed that the Treaty of Mutual Security and Cooperation is vital ^{not only to our} to joint security ^{but to} and the stability of the ^{entire} Asia-Pacific area. In that context, we agreed that this alliance will ^{continue to} be crucial to the region's future. And we vowed to ~~expedite the ongoing review of arrangements pertinent to shared responsibility, including support for U.S. forces stationed in Japan.~~ ^{continue to consult closely on all aspects and arrangements of our security partnership and shared responsibility for peace and stability.}

Second, the Prime Minister and I discussed how we can promote peace and prosperity through greater freedom -- economic and political ^{-- around the world.} Already, we have joined to support the Multilateral Assistance Initiative for the Philippines launched in Tokyo in July. Today, we restated our intent to encourage still more ^{economic and political systems} open boundaries, markets, and elections. And specifically, to support recent political and economic reform in Eastern Europe, notably in Poland and Hungary.

We also discussed the situation in China. For as I have said before, we must seek to preserve our relations there -- while endorsing the legitimate aspirations of the Chinese people for political expression.

A third area of agreement concerns how diplomacy can help resolve regional conflicts. America and Japan, with others, will continue to urge a comprehensive settlement that gives the people of Cambodia both security and ^{the ability to choose their own government.} democracy. We agreed, too, to ^{efforts to protect our citizens} accelerate our fight against international terrorism. In particular, we repeated the mutual commitment to aviation security we made at the Summit in Paris, and pledged to pool our technical and economic resources to combat all forms of terrorism affecting civil aviation.

Finally, the Prime Minister and I ~~had the opportunity to discuss -- in detail, and at length -- U.S.-Japanese economic matters.~~ ^{of our economic relationship) equal} Mindful that our economies are ~~among~~ ^{We are} the world's ~~most~~ ^{largest} robust. ^{we} And ~~knowing~~ that the health of our relationship partly depends on bringing ^{our economic relationship into better balance.} ~~better balance to our Nations' ledger boards.~~

~~Both the Prime Minister and I endorse that goal. And I wish to thank him for supporting the agreement I reached with his predecessor at the Paris Summit to launch talks on structural impediments -- discussions~~ ^{and these} ~~which~~ ^{will} begin in a few days.

I ^{stressed} ~~explained~~ to the Prime Minister the importance that we attach to ^{the success of} ~~those~~ ^{to} talks, and ^{to} the Trade Committee talks which also occur next week. And I expressed my belief that while Japan is justly noted as an exporting superpower, the time has also come for Japan to be an import superpower.

Each of us desires that these discussions produce ~~not cosmetics -- but~~ results. ~~Results~~ which further strengthen our economic relationship and the open world trading system. To advance that goal, we restated our commitment to the success of the Uruguay Round. We also vowed to continue our frequent consultations at all levels on other international economic and ~~trade~~ ⁽ trade issues. ⁾

In sum, Mr. Prime Minister, ours has been a highly productive meeting. ~~One which recognizes the values which link our peoples -- values like discipline, love of freedom, and the dignity of work.~~ And one which will enhance the broad U.S.-Japanese agenda.

A writer once observed, "Friendship is a sheltering tree." Because of ties which prosper -- and a partnership which endures -- both Japan and the United States have been, I believe, and will remain, better for its shade.

Mr. Prime Minister, I look forward to seeing you again. Thank you very much.

We have a mature, effective working partnership -- and with you at the helm, I know the partnership between Japan and the United States will produce positive results.

REMARKS: KAIFU DEPARTURE
DIPLOMATIC ENTRANCE
FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1989
1:10 P.M.

MR. PRIME MINISTER, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN.

AN OLD PROVERB SAYS, "THE FOUNDATIONS FOR A BETTER TOMORROW MUST BE LAID TODAY." MR. PRIME MINISTER, YOU AND I ARE HERE TODAY TO SHAPE TOMORROW -- AND ON AMERICA'S BEHALF, LET ME WELCOME YOU TO THIS COUNTRY.

WHEN I WAS IN JAPAN EARLIER THIS YEAR, I OBSERVED HOW TIES -- NATIONAL AND PERSONAL -- BIND OUR TWO PEOPLES. YOUR VISIT REAFFIRMS THOSE TIES AND UNDERSCORES THE COMMITMENT -- BY YOU, AND YOUR GOVERNMENT -- TO THE CONTINUED HEALTH OF OUR HISTORIC FRIENDSHIP.

THAT FRIENDSHIP LIVES, AND GROWS, AS TODAY'S MEETING EVIDENCED. FOR WHILE WE MET AS NEW FRIENDS, OUR TALKS WERE CONDUCTED LIKE OLD FRIENDS.

THEY WERE CHARACTERIZED BY CORDIALITY, A POSITIVE ATMOSPHERE, AND UNDERSTANDING. AND BY BROAD AGREEMENT ON THE MAJOR ITEMS OF OUR BILATERAL AND INTERNATIONAL AGENDA.

FOR THAT, MR. PRIME MINISTER, I CREDIT THE GOODWILL AND PERSPECTIVE YOU BROUGHT TO THESE DISCUSSIONS AND THE ENDURING PARTNERSHIP BETWEEN OUR TWO GOVERNMENTS.

THAT PARTNERSHIP IS BASED ON SHARED INTERESTS AND MUTUAL RESPECT AND RESTS ON OUR BELIEF THAT -- TOGETHER -- WE CAN BE A GLOBAL FORCE FOR PEACE AND PROSPERITY.

THIS "GLOBAL PARTNERSHIP" WORKS IN SEVERAL WAYS.

FIRST, AS IN PAST MEETINGS BETWEEN OUR NATIONS' LEADERS, THE PRIME MINISTER AND I AFFIRMED THAT THE TREATY OF COOPERATION AND MUTUAL SECURITY IS VITAL NOT ONLY TO OUR JOINT SECURITY BUT TO THE STABILITY OF THE ENTIRE ASIA-PACIFIC AREA. IN THAT CONTEXT, WE AGREED THAT THIS ALLIANCE WILL CONTINUE TO BE CRUCIAL TO THE REGION'S FUTURE.

AND WE VOWED TO CONTINUE TO CONSULT CLOSELY ON ALL ASPECTS AND ARRANGEMENTS OF OUR SECURITY PARTNERSHIP AND SHARED RESPONSIBILITY FOR PEACE AND STABILITY.

SECOND, THE PRIME MINISTER AND I DISCUSSED HOW WE CAN PROMOTE PEACE AND PROSPERITY THROUGH GREATER FREEDOM -- ECONOMIC AND POLITICAL -- AROUND THE WORLD. ALREADY, WE HAVE JOINED TO SUPPORT THE MULTILATERAL ASSISTANCE INITIATIVE FOR THE PHILIPPINES LAUNCHED IN TOKYO IN JULY.

TODAY, WE RESTATED OUR INTENT TO ENCOURAGE STILL MORE OPEN ECONOMIC AND POLITICAL SYSTEMS. AND SPECIFICALLY, TO SUPPORT RECENT POLITICAL AND ECONOMIC REFORM IN EASTERN EUROPE, NOTABLY IN POLAND AND HUNGARY.

WE ALSO DISCUSSED THE SITUATION IN CHINA. FOR AS I HAVE SAID BEFORE, WE MUST SEEK TO PRESERVE OUR RELATIONS THERE -- WHILE ENDORSING THE LEGITIMATE ASPIRATIONS OF THE CHINESE PEOPLE FOR POLITICAL EXPRESSION.

A THIRD AREA OF AGREEMENT CONCERNS HOW DIPLOMACY CAN HELP RESOLVE REGIONAL CONFLICTS. AMERICA AND JAPAN, WITH OTHERS, WILL CONTINUE TO URGE A COMPREHENSIVE SETTLEMENT THAT GIVES THE PEOPLE OF CAMBODIA BOTH SECURITY AND THE ABILITY TO CHOOSE THEIR OWN GOVERNMENT. WE AGREED, TOO, TO ACCELERATE OUR EFFORTS TO PROTECT OUR CITIZENS AGAINST INTERNATIONAL TERRORISM.

IN PARTICULAR, WE REPEATED THE MUTUAL COMMITMENT TO AVIATION SECURITY WE MADE AT THE SUMMIT IN PARIS, AND PLEDGED TO POOL OUR TECHNICAL AND ECONOMIC RESOURCES TO COMBAT ALL FORMS OF TERRORISM AFFECTING CIVIL AVIATION.

FINALLY, THE PRIME MINISTER AND I DISCUSSED OUR ECONOMIC RELATIONSHIP AT GREAT LENGTH. WE ARE MINDFUL THAT OUR ECONOMIES ARE THE WORLD'S LARGEST.

AND WE KNOW THAT THE HEALTH OF OUR RELATIONSHIP PARTLY DEPENDS ON BRINGING OUR ECONOMIC RELATIONSHIP INTO BETTER BALANCE.

- 11 -

I STRESSED TO THE PRIME MINISTER THE IMPORTANCE THAT WE ATTACH TO THE SUCCESS OF THOSE TALKS, AND TO THE TRADE COMMITTEE TALKS WHICH ALSO OCCUR NEXT WEEK. AND I SHARE THE PRIME MINISTER'S BELIEF THAT WHILE JAPAN IS JUSTLY NOTED AS AN EXPORTING SUPERPOWER, THE TIME HAS ALSO COME FOR JAPAN TO BE AN IMPORT SUPERPOWER.

- 12 -

EACH OF US DESIRES THAT THESE DISCUSSIONS PRODUCE RESULTS WHICH FURTHER STRENGTHEN OUR ECONOMIC RELATIONSHIP AND THE OPEN WORLD TRADING SYSTEM. TO ADVANCE THAT GOAL, WE RESTATED OUR COMMITMENT TO THE SUCCESS OF THE URUGUAY ROUND. WE ALSO VOWED TO CONTINUE OUR FREQUENT CONSULTATIONS AT ALL LEVELS ON OTHER INTERNATIONAL ECONOMIC AND TRADE ISSUES.

- 13 -

IN SUM, MR. PRIME MINISTER, OURS HAS BEEN A HIGHLY PRODUCTIVE MEETING. ONE WHICH WILL ENHANCE THE BROAD U.S.-JAPANESE AGENDA.

A WRITER ONCE OBSERVED, "FRIENDSHIP IS A SHELTERING TREE." BECAUSE OF TIES WHICH PROSPER -- AND A PARTNERSHIP WHICH ENDURES -- BOTH JAPAN AND THE UNITED STATES HAVE BEEN, I BELIEVE, AND WILL REMAIN, BETTER FOR ITS SHADE.

- 14 -

MR. PRIME MINISTER, WE HAVE A MATURE, EFFECTIVE WORKING PARTNERSHIP -- AND WITH YOU AT THE HELM, I KNOW THE PARTNERSHIP BETWEEN JAPAN AND THE UNITED STATES WILL PRODUCE POSITIVE RESULTS. I LOOK FORWARD TO SEEING YOU AGAIN. THANK YOU VERY MUCH.

Mr. Prime Minister, Ladies and gentlemen.

An old proverb says, "The foundations for a better tomorrow must be laid today." Mr. Prime Minister, you and I are here today to shape tomorrow -- and on America's behalf, let me welcome you to this country.

When I was in Japan earlier this year, I observed how ties -- national and personal -- bind our two peoples. Your visit reaffirms those ties and underscores the commitment -- by you, and your government -- to the continued health of our historic friendship.

Finally, the Prime Minister and I discussed our economic relationship at great length. We are mindful that our economies are the world's largest. And we know that the health of our relationship partly depends on bringing our economic relationship into better balance.

The Prime Minister confirmed the agreement I reached with his predecessor at the Paris Summit to launch talks on structural impediments -- and these discussions will begin in a few days.

I stressed to the Prime Minister the importance that we attach to the success of those talks, and to the Trade Committee talks which also occur next week. PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: KAIFU DEPARTURE
DIPLOMATIC ENTRANCE
FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1989

Mr. Prime Minister, Ladies and gentlemen.

An old proverb says, "The foundations for a better tomorrow must be laid today." Mr. Prime Minister, three weeks into your office, you are here today to shape tomorrow -- and on America's behalf, let me welcome you to this country.

When I was in Japan earlier this year, I observed how ties -- national and personal -- bind our two peoples. Your visit reaffirms those ties. And underscores the commitment -- by you, and your government -- to the continued health of our historic friendship.

That friendship lives, and grows. As today's meeting evidenced. For while we met as new friends, our talks were conducted like old friends. They were characterized by civility, and understanding. And by broad agreement on the major items of our bilateral and international agenda.

For that, Mr. Prime Minister, I credit the goodwill and perspective you brought to these discussions. And the enduring partnership between our two governments. That partnership is based on shared interests and mutual respect. And rests on our belief that -- together -- we can be a global force for peace and prosperity.

This "global partnership" works in several ways.

First, as in past meetings between our Nations' leaders, the Prime Minister and I affirmed that the Treaty of Mutual Security and Cooperation is vital to joint security and the stability of the Asia-Pacific area. In that context, we agreed that this alliance will be crucial to the region's future. And we vowed to expedite the ongoing review of arrangements pertinent to shared responsibility, including support for U.S. forces stationed in Japan.

Second, the Prime Minister and I discussed how we can promote peace and prosperity through greater freedom -- economic and political. Already, we have joined to support the Multilateral Assistance Initiative for the Philippines launched in Tokyo in July. Today, we restated our intent to encourage still more open boundaries, markets, and elections. And specifically, to support recent political and economic reform in Eastern Europe, notably in Poland and Hungary.

We also discussed the situation in China. For as I have said before, we must seek to preserve our relations there -- while endorsing the legitimate aspirations of the Chinese people for political expression.

A third area of agreement concerns how diplomacy can help resolve regional conflicts. America and Japan, with others, will continue to urge a comprehensive settlement that gives the people of Cambodia both security and democracy. We agreed, too, to accelerate our fight against international terrorism. In particular, we repeated the mutual commitment to aviation security we made at the Summit in Paris, and pledged to pool our technical and economic resources to combat all forms of terrorism affecting civil aviation.

Finally, the Prime Minister and I had the opportunity to discuss -- in detail, and at length -- U.S.-Japanese ^{Trade and} economic matters. Mindful that our economies are among the world's most robust. And knowing that the health of our relationship partly depends on ^{concrete actions to bring a} ~~bringing~~ better balance to our Nations' ledger boards.

Both the Prime Minister and I endorse that goal. And I wish to thank him for supporting the agreement I reached with his predecessor at the Paris Summit to launch talks on structural impediments -- discussions which begin in a few days.

I explained to the Prime Minister the importance that we attach to those talks, and the Trade Committee talks which also occur next week. And I expressed my ^{support for Japan's Minister's} belief that while Japan is ^{efforts to make} ~~justly noted as an exporting superpower, the time has also come~~ ^{itself into} ~~for Japan to be an~~ import superpower.

Each of us desires that these discussions produce not cosmetics -- but ^{actions} results. ^{actions} Results which further strengthen our economic relationship and the open world trading system. To advance that goal, we restated our commitment to the success of the Uruguay Round. We also vowed to continue our frequent consultations at all levels on other international economic and trade issues.

In sum, Mr. Prime Minister, ours has been a highly productive meeting. One which recognizes the values which link our peoples -- values like discipline, love of freedom, and the dignity of work. And one which will enhance the broad U.S.-Japanese agenda. and economic partnership.

A writer once observed, "Friendship is a sheltering tree." Because of ties which prosper -- and a partnership which endures -- both Japan and the United States have been, I believe, and will remain, better for its shade.

Mr. Prime Minister, I look forward to seeing you again. Thank you very much.
