REMARKS BY THE PRESIDENT
TO PHILLIPS ACADEMY BICENTENNIAL CONVOCATION

Samuel Phillips Hall
Phillips Academy
Andover, Massachusetts

10:45 A.M. EST

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you, Don. Thank all of you very much on this beautiful fall day. My thanks to our headmaster, Don McNemar. I was accompanied here by two members of the United States Congress, fellow alumni of Phillips Academy -- Congressman Tony Beilenson and Congressman Andy Ireland, who are out here someplace. But I just want to introduce them.

And to the board of this great school, to our outstanding faculty, to the students, administrators, the entire Andover family and community, and friends, I am just delighted to be back here. I'm sorry Barbara isn't with me. I know that's why this crowd is so big. (Laughter.) But she didn't feel so hot. She's doing okay, but she just had a bad day yesterday and so she couldn't make it. But she sends her love and affection.

I want to thank you for this chance to visit -- and revisit -- the site of so many wonderful memories for me and to celebrate such an historic moment in the life of this academy. Because as Don said, it was 200 years ago to this very day that the founder of our country visited one of our country's oldest academies.

And George Washington would later write fondly of Andover, and in that vein legend says that he kissed a young girl at the Andover Inn. (Laughter.) It is reported that she never washed that cheek again. (Laughter.)

But now, I can't bear living testimony to his visit, but I can speak very briefly of my time here. I loved those years. They did, indeed, teach the great end and real business of living. And even now its lessons of honesty, selflessness, faith in God -- well, they enrich every day of our lives.

You remember, I'm the guy that said Pearl Harbor Day was on September 7. I want to clear that up. (Laughter.) Because it was right about here, where that guy in a red coat is standing, that I heard that our country was at war on December 7th, 1941. And it was over there in Cochran Chapel, that in June of 1942, a graduate of Phillips Academy gave our commencement address -- Henry Stimson. He was then Secretary of War and he observed how the American soldier should be brave without being brutal, self-reliant without boasting, becoming a part of irresistible might without losing faith in individual liberty. I never forgot those words.

For 211 years, Phillips Academy has embodied the qualities that Secretary Stimson alluded to. And it has shown how we are "one nation under God." It has inculcated into its sons and daughters a sense of service to country and a sense of service to others. Each day I'm reminded of this.

This is the message of our years here and the message with which I close. Without God's help we can do nothing. With

Thank you for inviting me. God bless you and God bless the United States of America. (Applause.)

REMARKS BY THE PRESIDENT
AT BOARD OF TRUSTEES RECEPTION

Borden Gymnasium
Phillips Academy
Andover, Massachusetts

12:01 P.M. EST

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you all. Excuse the slight delay. I was out there talking to the captain of Andover's victorious football team -- Tony Pittman. I don't know whether he came in with us. Is he there? I want to show him off to you guys that came here with me. Small but fast -- (laughter) -- tough. I don't know where he went. Is he coming? Tony, get up here now. I need them to see my excuse for my being late. (Applause.) I don't want to embarrass him. Stay there.

I single him out, not to embarrass the poor guy, which I probably have just done, but to make a point about this school. One of the things that I, at least, got an awful lot out of was the athletic program. And I saw my old mentor, Frank DiClemente, sitting in the front row there. And I thought, my gosh, I haven't even left the place -- he looks just the same as he did back in those highly competitive days.

But I want to thank Headmaster Don McNemar for arranging a wonderful visit -- a fine reunion, if you will. Again, I want to single out the two congressmen that were here with me. Back here, Andy Ireland and Tony Beilenson, standing way in the back there. (Applause.) As enthusiastic as I about the return to Andover Hill, and, of course, to the Board and to Tim Ireland, who really did a lot of the planning on this and working out the schedule -- old friend.

And of course, David Underwood, whom I've known for years -- fellow Houstonian, now serving so unselfishly as chairman of this board. And again, I don't want to miss by failing to emphasize the affection I have for members of the faculty, present and past. We did a little interview a minute ago with not only the editor of the Phillipian, but from the Lawrence paper. And I pointed out that those of us who studied here were privileged to be taught by outstanding faculty. And it's still, I'm sure, just exactly that way.

I'm very sorry Barbara's not here. She just didn't feel well. But she's doing well. And I'm very, very proud of her. And she had been looking forward to this very much.

I was going through the yearbook the other day. It said something about: Captain Bush was a powerful batter at the plate. It's marvelous how little time takes care of a lot of myths, you know. (Laughter.) But, freedom of the press -- we're all for that. (Laughter.) And those of you from Washington, I hope you'll note it.

I emphasized in that little interview we had the importance of friendships. Whether you're President of the United States, or a senior at Phillips Academy, or just beginning here or whatever. Friendships matter. And the friendships you make here last you for the rest of your life; and I'm grateful for that.

Some other things don't change. Kindness doesn't change. The education and service that is embodied in the Phillips Constitution -- talk about -- it says, both goodness and kindness form the noblest character and lay the surest foundation of usefulness to mankind. And many young people have passed through these halls since those words were written. And yet, Andover's mission -- excellence in education -- remains as true in 1989 as it was when President Washington visited Phillips Academy 200 years ago to this very day.

The Andover Mission states that education has always been the great equalizer and uplifter. And that, public or private, large or small, the schools of America are precious centers of intellectual challenge and creativity. And yet, they're more than that. For it is in school, as it was for me here at Phillips Academy, that we come to understand real values. The need to help the less fortunate, make ours a more decent, civil world.

As a student, for example, I remember we had in those days the "Society of Inquiry," it was called. Community service. We did drives, sponsored by what was then known as the Society of Inquiry. And today, you have the Blue Key and the Community Service Program. All three reflect service to nation and service to neighbor. And as a student, too, I learned, as I said, about education through some absolutely outstanding teachers.

I don't like to single them out, but I was talking to Don about it. And I think my favorite was Dr. A.B. Darling. He lived right around the corner. We always tried to avoid his house, because you were summoned over there if you did real bad. (Laughter.) But I learned from the discipline of his classes, and it's gone on for years and years in this great institution.

Today, as Don observed a few minutes ago, a new generation of teachers are helping to challenge and inspire. Excellence in education -- a belief that we were put on Earth to help others.

And back in the early '40s, this formed the essence and character of Phillips Academy. And you can still feel its power today. For Phillips has much to be proud of as it enters a brand-new decade. Its curricula has never been more extensive. Its exchange program is broadening its horizons. Its minority recruitment and scholarship programs have brought a new vital diversity to the student body. And keeping Phillips such a special, even wondrous place. A place where we forge friendships for life with faculty, house masters and ministers, administrators and, yes, our classmates.

Even the father of our country was impressed by Phillips Academy. As he wrote his nephew, and Don referred to some of this in a letter after visiting the community: "Schooling, board, washing and lodging will not much, if any, I am told, exceed $2 a week for each boy." Now, costs have changed a little since then -- (Laughter) -- quality has not. And in the capable hands of this Headmaster, of this faculty, of the board, it will not.

And so thank you for ensuring Andover's excellence, making one of America's oldest academies one of America's finest academies. And thank you very much from the bottom of my heart for what has been a joyous occasion -- one I shall not forget. And I'll go back to work tomorrow feeling uplifted in knowing that I have the friendships that really make a difference.

Thank you very, very much.

REMARKS BY THE PRESIDENT
TO THE WORLD SERIES CHAMPION OAKLAND ATHLETICS

The Rose Garden

2:02 P.M. EST

THE PRESIDENT: Mayor Wilson, officially, and to Mr. Walter Haas over here, an old friend of mine, and Wally and Dr. Bobby Brown, the President of the American League. Tony La Russa and the players and staff of the Oakland A's. And also the distinguished members of the enormous, effective Congressional delegation from California. Also the members of the Babe Ruth League Championship teams from Forest Grove, Oregon; Cherry Hill, New Jersey; and Oakland, California. And anybody left over, welcome to you. (Laughter.)

It's a great day. And I feel this is a special and historic occasion. After all, I'll bet it's not often that the Oakland A's are honored by an unofficial scout for the Texas Rangers. (Laughter.)

Today we're talking baseball. And a team that is clearly and truly Number One -- the world champion Oakland A's.

And the A's, of course, have this wonderful baseball heritage. Nine world titles going back, what, 88 years -- including four since coming to Oakland. A tradition of character and triumph. A tradition embodied, perhaps, by the elephant gracing your uniform sleeve. (Laughter.) You read that any way you want, but I'm impressed. (Laughter.)

And this year's champions were true to that heritage. Ninety-nine games won, and the American League West -- as Casey Stengel would say, "You could look it up." And then downing Toronto in the playoffs and sweeping the cross-town Giants in the Battle of the Bay. I only wish Tony La Russa could help pilot my budget through Congress the way he piloted the A's to this World Series victory.

And what remarkable moments really for those of us that love sports you have given us -- that saver, No. 43, charging from the bullpen. You know how the A's spell relief? E-C-K. And of the Series' outstanding player, well, I'm just glad I'm not running for office against Dave Stewart. Perhaps a newsweekly said it best of Dave's brilliance and community service: "In the eyes of his Oakland neighbors, Dave's MVP meant Most Valuable Person."

And then there's perhaps baseball's all-time leading leadoff hitter, Rickey Henderson. Stealing a ton of bases -- stealing the hearts of Oakland. And Mark McGwire of the Bash Brothers. And, of course, Jose Canseco and Walt Weiss and Carney Lansford and Terry Steinbach. And, yes, Dave Henderson.

Let me say, with your homers against the Giants, when I go to talk to Mr. Gorbachev about reducing offensive weapons, I'm going to tell him that Hindu's bat is not negotiable. (Laughter.)

Big-leaguers all. Each contributing, big-time, to the cause -- a cause led by Tony La Russa -- a lawyer and an even greater manager. And one of baseball's pioneering front-office staffs as well. A club which hit superbly and fielded brilliantly, and which

-- spurred by Mike Moore and Bob Welch, Storm Davis, an outstanding bullpen -- echoed your franchise's founder, Connie Mack, who said, "Pitching is 90 percent of baseball."

And this year, the A's built on 1988, delighting some of baseball's greatest fans. Think of it. Regular-season attendance of almost 2.7 million -- no wonder the Haas's are smiling here -- (laughter) -- with some of the greatest baseball played since Abner Doubleday got his tape measure out and started laying out the diamond.

And, yes, champions on the field, and champions off it. For you helped the Bay Area through some hard and tragic times -- as did those equally magnificent Giants.

And the earthquake which shook Northern California delayed the Series and for a moment paralyzed the entire region. But like the citizens of Oakland, San Francisco, San Jose, you, too, bounced back, overcoming adversity, uniting a populace, showing how true pros perform when the odds are longest and the evening darkest, and the game is on the line -- the game of baseball or the larger game of life.

And for that I congratulate you, and each American salutes you. The great pitcher, Dizzy Dean, used to say, "It ain't bragging if you can back it up." Well, first in the regular-season, first in the post-season, here stand the championship Oakland A's. And in 1989, you sure backed it up. And to you we all say, well done.

Thank you so very much for coming to the White House. Thank you for the example you set for the young people in this country, and God bless you all. Thank you very much. (Applause.)

From Psalms 24 and 33

The earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof,
the world and those who dwell therein;

For the Lord has founded it upon the seas,
and established it upon the floods.

Who shall ascend the mountain of the Lord?
And who shall stand in God's holy place?

One who has clean hands and a pure heart,
whose mind is not set on falsehood
and who does not swear deceitfully.

Such a one will receive blessing from the Lord,
and justice from God the savior.

Such is the generation of those who seek the Lord,
who seek the face of the God of Jacob.

Rejoice in the Lord, O you righteous.
Praise befits the upright.

Praise the Lord with the lyre, make melody to God with the harp of ten strings.

God loves righteousness and justice;
the earth is full of the steadfast love of the Lord.

Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord,
the people which is God's heritage,

God who fashions the hearts of all people
and observes all their deeds.

A king is not saved by his great army;
a warrior is not delivered by his great strength.

Yea, our heart is glad in God,
because we trust in the Lord's holy name.

Let thy steadfast love, O Lord,
be upon us, even as we hope in Thee.

But I can speak briefly to my time here. For you see: I loved those years. They did indeed teach "the great end and real business of living." And even now, its lessons of honesty, selflessness, and faith in God -- well, they enrich every day of our lives.

You know, it was in this very place that in June 1942, a graduate of Phillips Academy gave our Commencement address. His name was Henry Stimson. He was the Secretary of War. And he observed how the American soldier should be "brave without being brutal, self-reliant without boasting, [becoming] part of an irresistible might without losing faith in individual liberty."

I never forgot those words. Which, believe me, is saying a lot. // Back in those days, Chapel was compulsory. So when a good sermon came along, it was more welcome -- and often rarer -- than a victory over Exeter. //

For __ years, Phillips Academy has embodied the qualities Secretary Stimson alluded to. And it has shown how we are one Nation under God.

Each day, I'm reminded of that message. Which, after all, is the message of our years here -- and the message with which I close. Without God's help, we can do nothing. With God's help, there is nothing we cannot do -- for our children, and for the world.

Thank you for inviting me, God bless you, and God bless the United States of America.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: PHILLIPS CONVOCATION
ANDOVER, MASSACHUSETTS
SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 5, 1989
10:00 A.M.

Headmaster McNemar, Members of the Board of Trustees, Faculty, Students, and Administrators, above all, Friends.

Barbara and I want to thank you for the chance to revisit the site of so many wonderful memories. And to celebrate such a historic moment in the life of this academy.

Two hundred years ago, the Father of our Country visited one of this country's oldest academies. Of Andover, George Washington would later write, "It is beautiful." And in that vein, legend says that he kissed a young girl at the Andover Inn.
// It is purported that she never washed that cheek again. //

Now, I can't bear testimony to President Washington's visit.
But I can speak briefly to my time here. For you see: I loved those years. They did indeed teach "the great end and real business of living." And even now, its lessons of honesty,
