REMARKS BY THE PRESIDENT AND PRIME MINISTER CHATCHAI OF THAILAND
UPON DEPARTURE

The South Portico

1:23 P.M. EDT

THE PRESIDENT: To our visitors, Prime Minister Chatchai, Minister Sitthi -- Foreign Minister, and all the honorable members of the delegation. It has been a pleasure to host this delegation from Thailand, one of America's oldest friends and closest allies.

Prime Minister Chatchai is a distinguished emissary from a noble land. From the temples and palaces of Bangkok to the teak forests and fertile rice paddies of the provinces, the Kingdom of Thailand is a land proud in its independent history, rich in its resources, and steadfast in its culture and faith.

But in this era of breathtaking change -- in Asia and around the world -- what is most remarkable about Thailand is that it has combined a double-digit economic growth with the emergence of parliamentary democracy. As His Royal Majesty King Bhumiphol reminded a joint session of Congress 30 years ago this month, the word "Thai" actually means "free." Thailand is the only country in Southeast Asia that maintained its independence throughout the colonial era. So even though our peoples live on opposite sides of the globe, our countries are joined by a common vision. And we have made freedom our common cause. And in freedom, our nations have found an abiding friendship.

In our discussions, the Prime Minister and I agreed on the importance of maintaining a U.S.-Thai security relationship. I told him that while regional circumstances and world conditions have changed, America's commitment under the Manila Pact to Thailand's security and integrity remain firm.

America is proud of her role in the Pacific -- a commitment that has fostered peace and freedom and economic development among democratic friends like Thailand. But the Prime Minister and I agreed that much work remains, and I expressed our profound appreciation for Thailand's long cooperation in providing asylum to Indochinese refugees and assured him that we will continue to welcome to America our share of Vietnamese refugees presently residing in Thailand.

And we also talked about resolving the tragic conflict in Cambodia. And we agreed that both our countries should continue our diplomatic efforts to end the violence, to achieve a comprehensive solution that meets the aspirations of the Cambodian people by assuring genuine self-determination through free and fair elections under U.N. auspices and in the presence of an international peacekeeping force.

The Prime Minister's visit comes shortly before a meeting in Singapore on greater economic cooperation among the Pacific Basin countries. And Thailand and the five other ASEAN nations are key to the success of this promising initiative.

I assured the Prime Minister of America's commitment to closer cooperation, to a successful conclusion to the Uruguay round of trade negotiations this year, and to mutually beneficial economic growth.

MORE

In the spirit of collective effort that extends back to our first economic treaty back in 1833, the Prime Minister and I agreed to establish a joint U.S.-Thai Committee for Commercial Cooperation, chaired by the Secretary of Commerce for the United States and by Thailand's Minister of Commerce. This committee will develop opportunities for bilateral cooperation in trade and investment while promoting greater commercial activity between the United States and Thailand.

Thailand is now enjoying a diversified and rapidly expanding economy, a stable government and a business community attractive to foreign investors. We are working closely with the Thai people to assure that the mutual benefits of economic growth as well as -- that, as well as environmental protection in joint science and technology efforts.

But there's one kind of business we agree we will not tolerate, and that is narcotics. It's a challenge of global proportions. And we look forward to expanding cooperation with Thailand in suppressing the production and trafficking of these poisons. And I assured the Prime Minister we were going to continue our battle on the demand side of the narcotics equation.

Mr. Prime Minister, relations between our countries now span some 150 years, and we share many goals in common. But what unites us in our commitment to peace, prosperity, and to the freedom that makes peace and prosperity possible. So as you and your delegation depart after what we feel were very productive meetings and cordial discussions, we wish you the very best. Good luck and Godspeed, sir. (Applause.)

PRIME MINISTER CHATCHAI: Mr. President, it is a great honor for me to be here at the White House on this auspicious day when the Americans throughout the United States are celebrating Flag Day, a day of great pride for all Americans. It is also with a sense of pride that we Thai look upon our relationship with this great nation.

I have expressed to President Bush my hope that we would be able to build upon our 157 years of friendship and cooperation, and together forge a closer and active partnership into the future.

With the more favorable trends of international relations, our two countries are committed more than ever to work together in bringing peace to Cambodia and to end the suffering of the Cambodian people. We will do all we can to accelerate the ongoing peace process. In this regard we are prepared to work with the United States and the other permanent members of the United Nations Security Council to obtain our common objective of comprehensive peace in Cambodia through a free and fair election.

We look upon the United States' active participation in the Cambodian peace process and a United States presence as a stabilizing role in the region as being vital to peace and stability of South East Asia.

In our economic relations we have agreed to set up consultative mechanism on all aspects of our economic relation, which I hope could lead to a new framework for economic cooperation and partnership between our two countries. Such a mechanism would allow us to regularly discuss any potential trade issues before they become trade disputes. It would also serve as a vehicle to promote the constructive areas of economic cooperation especially in Thai investment, which is bound to assume greater significance in our economic relation in the future. United States technology is second to none, and so United States investment should be second to none.

Mr. President, I share with you your concern on the need to rid our societies of the menace of drugs. It is tearing apart the very fabrics of our societies. Our efforts must be directed at both the supply and demand side of this problem. On our part, His Majesty the King is particularly concerned about the problem and has urged the government to take serious steps to tackle it. I pledge to you the full support of the Thai government in the war against drug trafficking.

These are the important issues which President Bush and I discussed. These are the issues that our two governments will be working on in the days and months ahead. Lastly, I would like to thank President Bush and the United States government for the warm and cordial reception accorded to us.

Thank you, sir. Mr. President, thank you.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Prime Minister, thank you. Glad you were here. (Applause.)

DEPARTURE, PRIME MINISTER CHATICHAI \ SOUTH PORTICO
THURSDAY, JUNE 14, 1990 \ 1:15 P.M.

THANK YOU ALL. PRIME MINISTER CHATICHAI
[CHAHT-CH-EYE], FOREIGN MINISTER SITTHI [SIT], HONORABLE MEMBERS OF YOUR DELEGATION. IT HAS BEEN MY PLEASURE TO HOST THIS DELEGATION FROM THAILAND: ONE OF AMERICA'S OLDEST FRIENDS AND CLOSEST ALLIES IN ASIA.

PRIME MINISTER CHATICHAI [CHAT-CH-EYE] IS A DISTINGUISHED EMISSARY FROM A NOBLE LAND.

FROM THE TEMPLES AND PALACES OF BANGKOK TO THE TEAK FORESTS AND FERTILE RICE PADDIES OF THE PROVINCES, THE KINGDOM OF THAILAND IS A LAND PROUD IN ITS INDEPENDENT HISTORY, RICH IN RESOURCES, AND STEADFAST IN ITS CULTURE AND FAITH.

BUT IN THIS ERA OF BREATHTAKING CHANGE -- IN ASIA AND AROUND THE WORLD -- WHAT IS MOST REMARKABLE ABOUT THAILAND IS THAT IT HAS COMBINED DOUBLE DIGIT ECONOMIC GROWTH WITH THE EMERGENCE OF PARLIAMENTARY DEMOCRACY.

AS HIS ROYAL MAJESTY KING BHUMIBOL [BOOM-EE-PON] REMINDED A JOINT SESSION OF CONGRESS THIRTY YEARS AGO THIS MONTH -- THE WORD "THAI" ACTUALLY MEANS "FREE." THAILAND IS THE ONLY COUNTRY IN SOUTHEAST ASIA THAT MAINTAINED ITS INDEPENDENCE THROUGHOUT THE COLONIAL ERA.

SO EVEN THOUGH OUR PEOPLES LIVE ON OPPOSITE SIDES OF THE GLOBE, OUR COUNTRIES ARE JOINED BY A COMMON VISION. WE HAVE MADE FREEDOM OUR COMMON CAUSE.

AND IN FREEDOM, OUR NATIONS HAVE FOUND AN ABIDING FRIENDSHIP.

IN OUR DISCUSSIONS, THE PRIME MINISTER AND I AGREED ON THE IMPORTANCE OF MAINTAINING THE U.S.-THAI SECURITY RELATIONSHIP. I TOLD HIM THAT WHILE REGIONAL CIRCUMSTANCES AND WORLD CONDITIONS HAVE CHANGED, AMERICA'S COMMITMENT UNDER THE MANILA PACT TO THAILAND'S SECURITY AND INTEGRITY REMAIN FIRM.

AMERICA IS PROUD OF HER ROLE IN THE PACIFIC -- A COMMITMENT THAT HAS FOSTERED PEACE, FREEDOM, AND ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT AMONG DEMOCRATIC FRIENDS LIKE THAILAND.

BUT THE PRIME MINISTER AND I AGREED THAT MUCH WORK REMAINS. I EXPRESSED OUR APPRECIATION FOR THAILAND'S LONG COOPERATION IN PROVIDING ASYLUM TO INDOCHINESE REFUGEES -- AND ASSURED HIM WE WILL CONTINUE TO WELCOME TO AMERICA OUR SHARE OF VIETNAMESE REFUGEES PRESENTLY RESIDING IN THAILAND.

WE ALSO TALKED ABOUT RESOLVING THE TRAGIC CONFLICT IN CAMBODIA. WE AGREED THAT BOTH OUR COUNTRIES SHOULD CONTINUE OUR DIPLOMATIC EFFORTS TO END THE VIOLENCE -- TO ACHIEVE A COMPREHENSIVE SOLUTION THAT MEETS THE ASPIRATIONS OF THE CAMBODIAN PEOPLE -- BY ASSURING GENUINE SELF-DETERMINATION THROUGH FREE AND FAIR ELECTIONS UNDER U.N. AUSPICES, AND IN THE PRESENCE OF AN INTERNATIONAL PEACE-KEEPING FORCE.

THE PRIME MINISTER'S VISIT COMES SHORTLY BEFORE A MEETING IN SINGAPORE ON GREATER ECONOMIC COOPERATION AMONG THE PACIFIC BASIN COUNTRIES. THAILAND AND THE FIVE OTHER ASEAN [AH-SAY-AHN] NATIONS ARE KEY TO THE SUCCESS OF THIS PROMISING INITIATIVE. I ASSURED THE PRIME MINISTER OF AMERICA'S COMMITMENT TO CLOSER COOPERATION; TO A SUCCESSFUL CONCLUSION TO THE URUGUAY ROUND OF TRADE NEGOTIATIONS THIS YEAR; AND TO MUTUALLY BENEFICIAL ECONOMIC GROWTH.

IN THE SPIRIT OF COLLECTIVE EFFORT THAT EXTENDS BACK TO OUR FIRST ECONOMIC TREATY BACK IN 1833, THE PRIME MINISTER AND I AGREED TO ESTABLISH A JOINT U.S. - THAI COMMITTEE FOR COMMERCIAL COOPERATION CHAIRED BY THE SECRETARY OF COMMERCE FOR THE UNITED STATES AND BY THAILAND'S MINISTER OF COMMERCE. THIS COMMITTEE WILL DEVELOP OPPORTUNITIES FOR BILATERAL COOPERATION IN TRADE AND INVESTMENT WHILE PROMOTING GREATER COMMERCIAL ACTIVITY BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND THAILAND.

THAILAND IS NOW ENJOYING A DIVERSIFIED AND RAPIDLY EXPANDING ECONOMY, A STABLE GOVERNMENT, AND A BUSINESS COMMUNITY ATTRACTIVE TO FOREIGN INVESTORS. WE ARE WORKING CLOSELY WITH THE THAI PEOPLE TO ASSURE THE MUTUAL BENEFITS OF ECONOMIC GROWTH, AS WELL AS ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION AND JOINT SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY EFFORTS.

BUT THERE'S ONE KIND OF BUSINESS WE AGREE WE WILL NOT TOLERATE: NARCOTICS.

IT'S A CHALLENGE OF GLOBAL PROPORTIONS -- AND WE LOOK FORWARD TO EXPANDING COOPERATION WITH THAILAND IN SUPPRESSING THE PRODUCTION AND TRAFFICKING OF THESE POISONS.

MR. PRIME MINISTER, RELATIONS BETWEEN OUR TWO COUNTRIES NOW SPAN 150 YEARS. WE SHARE MANY GOALS IN COMMON -- BUT WHAT UNITES US IS OUR COMMITMENT TO PEACE, TO PROSPERITY -- AND TO THE FREEDOM THAT MAKES PEACE AND PROSPERITY POSSIBLE.

AS YOU AND YOUR DELEGATION DEPART AFTER VERY PRODUCTIVE AND CORDIAL DISCUSSIONS, MR. PRIME MINISTER, THE BEST WISHES OF THE AMERICAN PEOPLE GO WITH YOU.

In the spirit of collective effort that extends back to our first economic treaty back in 1833, the Prime Minister and I agreed to ~~remove any obstacles to expanded economic ties~~ and I ~~know we share similar outlooks on the value of enterprise~~ ~~As~~ because it was the Prime Minister who first initiated reforms which expanded Thailand's business sector. Soon after his election, he declared his ambition to turn Indo-China "from a battlefield into a trading market."

~~That ambition is leading to results in Thailand~~ ^{is} ~~which~~ now enjoys ^{ins} a diversified and ^{rapidly expanding} ~~growing~~ economy, a stable government, and a business community attractive ^{to foreign} ~~for~~ ^{our} investment. ~~We~~ ^{we} are working closely with the Thai people to assure the mutual benefits of economic growth, as well as environmental protection and joint science and technology efforts.

But there's one kind of business we agree we will not tolerate: narcotics. It's a challenge of global proportions -- ~~and we appreciate their~~ ^{we look forward to expanding) with Thailand} cooperation in suppressing the production and trafficking of these poisons.

Mr. Prime Minister, relations between our two countries now span 150 years. We share many goals in common -- but what unites us is our commitment to peace, to prosperity -- and to the freedom that makes peace and prosperity possible. As you and your delegation depart after very productive and cordial discussions, Mr. Prime Minister, the best wishes of the American people go with you.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: DEPARTURE, PRIME MINISTER CHATICHAJ
SOUTH PORTICO
THURSDAY, JUNE 14, 1990
1:15 P.M.

Thank you all. Prime Minister Chunhawan Chatichai [choonhwan CHAHT-ch-eye], Foreign Minister Sitthi [SIT], honorable members of your delegation. It has been my pleasure -- and America's honor -- to host ~~to~~ this delegation from Thailand: one of America's oldest friends and closest allies in Asia.

Scully

Prime Minister Chatichai [CHAT-ch-eye] is a distinguished emissary from a noble land. From the temples and palaces of Bangkok to the lush forests and breathtaking cascades of the provinces, yours is a land proud in its history, rich in resources, and steadfast in its culture and faith.

But in this era of breathtaking change -- in Asia and around the world -- what is most remarkable about Thailand is its enduring devotion to an ideal we Americans hold dear: the ideal of freedom.

In fact -- as the King of Thailand reminded a joint session of Congress thirty years ago this month -- the word "Thai" actually means "free." And Thailand is the only country in Southeast Asia that has never fallen to colonization.

So even though our peoples live on opposite sides of the globe, our countries are joined by a common vision. We have made freedom our common cause. And in freedom, our nations have found an abiding friendship.

In our discussions, the Prime Minister and I agreed on the importance of maintaining the U.S.-Thai security relationship. I told him that while regional circumstances and world conditions have changed, America's commitment under the Manila Pact to Thailand's security and integrity remain firm. America is proud of her role in the Pacific -- a commitment that has fostered peace, freedom, and economic development among democratic friends like Thailand.

But the Prime Minister and I agreed that much work remains. I expressed our appreciation for Thailand's long cooperation in providing asylum to Indochinese refugees -- and assured him we will maintain our resettlement of refugees from Thailand.

We also talked about resolving the tragic conflict in Cambodia. We agreed that both our countries should continue our diplomatic efforts to end the violence -- to achieve a comprehensive solution that meets the aspirations of the Cambodian people -- by assuring genuine self-determination through free and fair elections under U.N. auspices, and in the presence of an international peace-keeping force.

The Prime Minister's visit comes shortly before a ministerial in Singapore, on greater economic cooperation among the Pacific Basin countries. Thailand and its allies in ASEAN [ah-SAY-ahn] are key to the success of this promising initiative. I assured the Prime Minister of America's commitment to closer cooperation; to a successful conclusion to the Uruguay Round of trade negotiations this year; and to mutually beneficial economic

In the spirit of collective effort that extends back to our first economic treaty back in 1833, the Prime Minister and I agreed to remove any obstacles to expanded economic ties. And I know we share similar outlooks on the value of enterprise -- because it was the Prime Minister who first initiated reforms which expanded Thailand's business sector. Soon after his election, he declared his ambition to turn Indo-China "from a battlefield into a trading market."

That ambition is leading to results in Thailand -- which now enjoys a diversified and growing economy, a stable government, and a business community attractive for investment. So we're working closely with the Thai people to assure the mutual benefits of economic growth, as well as environmental protection and joint science and technology efforts.

But there's one kind of business we agree we will not tolerate: narcotics. It's a challenge of global proportions -- and we appreciate Thai cooperation in suppressing the production and trafficking of these poisons.

We also talked about resolving the tragic conflict in Cambodia. We agreed that both our countries should continue our diplomatic efforts to end the violence -- to achieve a comprehensive solution that meets the aspirations of the Cambodian people -- by assuring genuine self-determination through free and fair elections under U.N. auspices, and in the presence of an international peace-keeping force.

The Prime Minister's visit comes shortly before a ministerial in Singapore, on greater economic cooperation among the Pacific Basin countries. Thailand and its allies in ASEAN [ah-SAY-ahn] are key to the success of this promising initiative. I assured the Prime Minister of America's commitment to closer cooperation; to a successful conclusion to the Uruguay Round of trade negotiations this year; and to mutually beneficial economic growth.

In the spirit of collective effort that extends back to our first economic treaty back in 1833, the Prime Minister and I agreed to ^{the importance of removing obstacles to expand economic ties.} ~~remove any obstacles to expanded economic ties.~~ And I know we share similar outlooks on the value of enterprise -- because it was the Prime Minister who first initiated reforms which expanded Thailand's business sector. Soon after his election, he declared his ambition to turn Indo-China "from a battlefield into a trading market."

That ambition is leading to results in Thailand -- which now enjoys a diversified and growing economy, a stable government, and a business community attractive for investment. So we're working closely with the Thai people to assure the mutual benefits of economic growth, as well as environmental protection and joint science and technology efforts.

But there's one kind of business we agree we will not tolerate: narcotics. It's a challenge of global proportions -- and we appreciate Thai cooperation in suppressing the production and trafficking of these poisons.

Mr. Prime Minister, relations between our two countries now span 150 years. We share many goals in common -- but what unites us is our commitment to peace, to prosperity -- and to the freedom that makes peace and prosperity possible. As you and your delegation depart after very productive and cordial discussions, Mr. Prime Minister, the best wishes of the American people go with you.

MEMORANDUM FOR CHRISS WINSTON

FROM: JIM PINKERTON
SUBJECT: Prime Minister Chatichai

pg. 1, para. 2, line 2 "From the temples and palaces of Bangkok to the lush forests and breathtaking cascades of the provinces, yours is a land proud in its history, rich in resources, and steadfast in its culture and faith."

This sentence yields to the constant temptation to use a travelogue-type tone in praising a foreign country. Here it is revealed by the fact that, if you substituted the name of just about any Third World city for the word "Bangkok," the sentence would apply equally well to the relevant country. We suggest just omitting this sentence and proceeding directly to the excellent characterization of Thailand in the succeeding sentence: "In this era of breathtaking change...what is most remarkable about Thailand is its enduring devotion to an ideal ... the ideal of freedom."

1,4,1 "...the word 'Thai' actually means 'free.' And Thailand is the only country in Southeast Asia that has never fallen to colonization."

This is interesting detail but we wonder if such detail is ever really necessary. In this case in particular, the mention of colonization is probably unnecessary -- even awkward, given that the United States had itself once "fallen to colonization." In the spirit of helpful advice, not criticism, we repeat here some applicable comments on the use of local color in a speech draft of some weeks ago:

30:94 11 JUN 86

As a general rule, it seems to us that we should avoid using details of local color that are not likely to be used by the locals. This rule avoids yielding to the temptation of hyper-detail frequently seen in speeches for the arrival of foreign dignitaries ("Watusiland, with it's 213.4 miles of pristine coral beaches -- fourth in the world in production of unprocessed copra"). [see 1,2,2 above] The delegation from Watusiland feels patronized by travelogue-type facts about their homeland. Thus, paradoxically, the effect of too much color is just opposite of that intended.

2,4,1 "The Prime Minister's visit comes shortly before a ministerial in Singapore...."

The word "ministerial" just by itself is jargon. We suggest adding "meeting" afterwards.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: DEPARTURE, PRIME MINISTER CHATICHAI
SOUTH PORTICO
THURSDAY, JUNE 14, 1990
1:15 P.M.

Thank you all. Prime Minister Chunhawan Chatichai [choon-hwan CHAHT-ch-eye], Foreign Minister Sitthi [SIT], honorable members of your delegation. It has been my pleasure -- and America's honor -- to host to this delegation from Thailand: one of America's oldest friends and closest allies in Asia.

Prime Minister Chatichai [CHAT-ch-eye] is a distinguished emissary from a noble land. From the temples and palaces of Bangkok to the lush forests and breathtaking cascades of the provinces, yours is a land proud in its history, rich in resources, and steadfast in its culture and faith.

But in this era of breathtaking change -- in Asia and around the world -- what is most remarkable about Thailand is its enduring devotion to an ideal we Americans hold dear: the ideal of freedom.

In fact -- as the King of Thailand reminded a joint session of Congress thirty years ago this month -- the word "Thai" actually means "free." And Thailand is the only country in Southeast Asia that has never fallen to colonization.

So even though our peoples live on opposite sides of the globe, our countries are joined by a common vision. We have made freedom our common cause. And in freedom, our nations have found an abiding friendship.

In our discussions, the Prime Minister and I agreed on the importance of maintaining the U.S.-Thai security relationship. I told him that while regional circumstances and world conditions have changed, America's commitment under the Manila Pact to Thailand's security and integrity remain firm. America is proud of her role in the Pacific -- a commitment that has fostered peace, freedom, and economic development among democratic friends like Thailand.

But the Prime Minister and I agreed that much work remains. I expressed our appreciation for Thailand's long cooperation in providing asylum to Indochinese refugees -- and assured him we will maintain our resettlement of refugees from Thailand.

We also talked about resolving the tragic conflict in Cambodia. We agreed that both our countries should continue our diplomatic efforts to end the violence -- to achieve a comprehensive solution that meets the aspirations of the Cambodian people -- by assuring genuine self-determination through free and fair elections under U.N. auspices, and in the presence of an international peace-keeping force.

The Prime Minister's visit comes shortly before a ministerial in Singapore, on greater economic cooperation among the Pacific Basin countries. Thailand and its allies in ASEAN [ah-SAY-ahn] are key to the success of this promising initiative. PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: DEPARTURE, PRIME MINISTER CHATICHAI
THURSDAY, JUNE 14, 1990
1:15 P.M.

Thank you all. Prime Minister Chunnawan Chatichai [choon-hwan CHAHT-ch-eye], Foreign Minister Sitthi [SIT], honorable members of your delegation. It has been my pleasure to host this delegation from Thailand: one of America's oldest friends and closest allies in Asia.

Prime Minister Chatichai [CHAT-ch-eye] is a distinguished emissary from a noble land. From the temples and palaces of Bangkok to the teak forests and fertile rice paddies of the provinces, the Kingdom of Thailand is a land proud in its independent history, rich in resources, and steadfast in its culture and faith.

But in this era of breathtaking change -- in Asia and around the world -- what is most remarkable about Thailand is that it has combined double digit economic growth with the emergence of parliamentary democracy.

As His Royal Majesty King Bhumiphol [Boom-ee-ball] reminded a joint session of Congress thirty years ago this month -- the word "Thai" actually means "free." Thailand is the only country in Southeast Asia that maintained its independence throughout the colonial era.

So even though our peoples live on opposite sides of the globe, our countries are joined by a common vision. We have made freedom our common cause. And in freedom, our nations have found an abiding friendship.

In our discussions, the Prime Minister and I agreed on the importance of maintaining the U.S.-Thai security relationship. I told him that while regional circumstances and world conditions have changed, America's commitment under the Manila Pact to Thailand's security and integrity remain firm. America is proud of her role in the Pacific -- a commitment that has fostered peace, freedom, and economic development among democratic friends like Thailand.

But the Prime Minister and I agreed that much work remains. I expressed our appreciation for Thailand's long cooperation in providing asylum to Indochinese refugees -- and assured him we will continue to welcome to America our share of Vietnamese refugees presently residing in Thailand.

We also talked about resolving the tragic conflict in Cambodia. We agreed that both our countries should continue our diplomatic efforts to end the violence -- to achieve a comprehensive solution that meets the aspirations of the Cambodian people -- by assuring genuine self-determination through free and fair elections under U.N. auspices, and in the presence of an international peace-keeping force.

The Prime Minister's visit comes shortly before a meeting in Singapore on greater economic cooperation among the Pacific Basin countries. Thailand and the five other ASEAN [ah-SAY-ahn] nations are key to the success of this promising initiative. I assured the Prime Minister of America's commitment to closer cooperation; to a successful conclusion to the Uruguay Round of trade negotiations this year; and to mutually beneficial economic growth.

In the spirit of collective effort that extends back to our first economic treaty back in 1833, the Prime Minister and I agreed to establish a joint U.S. - Thai Committee for Commercial Cooperation chaired by the Secretary of Commerce for the United States and by Thailand's Minister of Commerce. This committee will develop opportunities for bilateral cooperation in trade and investment while promoting greater commercial activity between the United States and Thailand.

Thailand is now enjoying a diversified and rapidly expanding economy, a stable government, and a business community attractive to foreign investors. We are working closely with the Thai people to assure the mutual benefits of economic growth, as well as environmental protection and joint science and technology efforts.

But there's one kind of business we agree we will not tolerate: narcotics. It's a challenge of global proportions -- and we look forward to expanding cooperation with Thailand in suppressing the production and trafficking of these poisons.

Mr. Prime Minister, relations between our two countries now span 150 years. We share many goals in common -- but what unites us is our commitment to peace, to prosperity -- and to the freedom that makes peace and prosperity possible. As you and your delegation depart after very productive and cordial discussions, Mr. Prime Minister, the best wishes of the American people go with you.
