October 29, 1990

Dear Pioneer Press Reader:

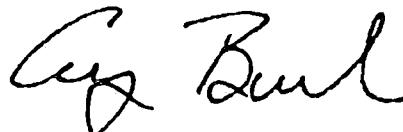

Americans traditionally come together in times of adversity and challenge. The present conflict in the Middle East is no exception. In the face of tyranny, America and the world are standing up to aggression, condemning the violence and plunder of Kuwait by the forces of Saddam Hussein. I am proud to see so many Americans from Evanston, to Bloomington, to Springfield, -- all across Illinois -- doing their part to show our servicemen and women in the Persian Gulf how much we care. I want to congratulate the Pioneer Press and its readers for the vital role you are playing in this critical time.

This crisis has shown us once again that naked aggression cannot be allowed to stand, and it also demonstrates the need to reduce our dependency on foreign oil. We must responsibly develop our domestic energy resources including our diverse and abundant alternative energy sources. Increasing dependence on foreign oil is simply not a viable solution to America's energy challenges.

As you know, increased domestic energy production and conservation are integral parts of our strategy to reduce dependence on foreign oil. And the efficient use of existing resources, coupled with innovative research in the areas of coal, natural gas, hydroelectric power, nuclear and other sources of power, will go a long way toward protecting our environment, as well as making America a more energy-secure nation.

If more newspapers and readers like yours would take action -- become involved in efforts to promote energy efficiency, this country would be better off. You are making a difference in your community and your nation. You have shown that the determined and creative spirit of the American people is as strong as ever. Congratulations on your commitment to a better America and a better world. Thank you and God bless you.

Sincerely,

Dear Pioneer Press Reader:

Americans traditionally come together in times of adversity and challenge. The present conflict in the Middle East is no exception. In the face of tyranny, America and the world are standing up to aggression, condemning the violence and plunder of Kuwait by the forces of Saddam Hussein. I am proud to see so many Americans from Evanston, to Bloomington, to Springfield, -- all across Illinois -- doing their part to show our servicemen and women in the Persian Gulf how much we care. I want to congratulate the Pioneer Press and its readers for the vital role you are playing in this critical time.

This crisis has shown us once again that naked aggression cannot be allowed to stand, and it also demonstrates the need to reduce our dependency on foreign oil. We must responsibly develop our domestic energy resources including our diverse and abundant alternative energy sources. Increasing dependence on foreign oil is simply not a viable solution to America's energy challenges.

As you know, increased domestic energy production and conservation are integral parts of our strategy to reduce dependence on foreign oil. And the efficient use of existing resources, coupled with innovative research in the areas of coal, natural gas, hydroelectric power, nuclear and other sources of power, will go a long way toward protecting our environment, as well as making America a more energy^{secure} independent nation.

If more newspapers and readers like yours would take action -- become involved in efforts [like fuel "Independence Days"], this country would be better off. You are making a difference in your community and your nation. You have shown that the determined and creative spirit of the American people is as strong as ever. Congratulations on your commitment to a better America and a better world. Thank you and God bless you.

to promote energy efficiency,
