II. DISCUSSION

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: PARRIS FUNDRAISER
ALEXANDRIA, VIRGINIA
WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 31, 1990
7:55 A.M.

Congressman Parris, ladies and gentlemen. As always, it is a pleasure to be in the Old Dominion -- and to speak on behalf of one of this Nation's great representatives. He's not simply on our side -- he's on America's side. // My friend -- and your wonderful Congressman. Stan Parris. //

((As Stan tells it, this visit arose from a phone call from that kinder and gentler human being, John Sununu. // John told him, "We've got a surprise for you that will really excite people." // Stan replied, "You mean big-league baseball's finally coming to Northern Virginia?")) //

Northern Virginia may not yet have a major league baseball team, but it has a major league Congressman. And I'm here today to say: On Election Day, Stan is going to do to his opponent what the Reds did to the A's. //

I say that for many reasons. First, Stan is a friend -- not only of mine, but of Northern Virginia. ((Stan and I have a special bond. I'm the one who taught him everything he knows about charisma.)) //

I also like Stan's honesty and perspective. // For example, he's a big Virginia Cavaliers football fan. That's the honest part. // Stan's perspective is realizing the impossibility of his transportation dream: Moving the University of Virginia to Fairfax County. //

Finally, there is Stan Parris' record. Korean War hero. Returned to attend George Washington University -- then, practice law -- then, the Virginia House of Delegates. // He's served as Secretary of the Commonwealth. Been a superb seven-term U.S. Congressman. // He's on the side of every decent American who values growth, opportunity, and prosperity. // GOP. // Has a nice ring, don't you think? //

((You know, seeing the traffic below on the flight over here from D.C., I thought of how I'd vote for Stan Parris just on his transportation policies alone.)) // He co-sponsored legislation which will complete this area's Metro system. / He opposes statehood for the District of Columbia -- and I support his stand. // Stan Parris reflects the values of America's good, quiet, decent people. // He believes in government which serves the people -- not the other way around. //

We could use a little more of Stan's common sense about five miles northeast of here. I'm speaking about the sorry spectacle known as the United States Congress. // Yes, Virginia, America finally has a Federal budget. But even Ripley would not believe what we had to endure to get that budget passed. //

All of you know the history of these budget negotiations. For most of the past year, our Administration has worked to produce a serious response to a serious deficit -- grappling not only with the budget, but a self-serving Congress in which both houses are run by Democrats.

For eight months, this Democratic Congress acted like a 78 record played at 33. The only thing it did quickly was "Tax and spend." Otherwise, for eight months, it postured. Bellowed. Debated. Stalled. // If Congress were a play, it would have closed before New Haven. Congress hasn't been doing the people's business. It's been giving the business to the people. // Now, Stan's opponent proposes to give the business to the Eighth District of Virginia. //

Part of Congress' problem is institutional. Think of it -- twenty thousand staff members and a Rubik's Cube of committees. Too often, serving liberals like Stan's opponent who pander to pressure groups. // Then, there's a second problem: Congress' liberal philosophy perpetuated by nearly 40 years of one-party rule. // Because the Democratic Congress has become unaccountable, it has become irresponsible. Yes, the budget process is broken -- and we have to fix it. But we don't just have to change the process. We have to elect more Republicans so we can change the Congress, too. //

I know our agreement's imperfect. It's not nearly as good - - nor fair to the Middle Class -- as we would have had under a Republican Congress. // Here's an example of the difference Republicans have already made: The Democrat-passed bill in the House -- which Stan Parris voted against -- wanted to sock $40 billion in new income taxes on working Americans. At the same time, Democrats wanted a $4 billion surtax proposal. In both cases, we stopped them cold. // Elect more Republicans and next year they'll make an even greater difference. Together, let's break the liberals' tax and spend addiction once and for all. //

Now, I don't want to be unfair. Instead of telling you what the Democratic Congress hasn't done for working America, let me remind you what they have. // In the past two years, they've passed 182 "commemorative" bills asking me for one thing or another. They gave me "National Asparagus Month" -- but they stalled for almost a year before passing a farm bill. // They gave me "The Year of Clean Water" -- but delayed for months before finally passing a clean air bill. // [[If all this sounds unpalatable, don't worry -- Congress also declared National Digestive Disease Awareness Month.]]

X I have nothing against ~~home health care~~, or asparagus. // clean water, obviously Broccoli's another matter. // But I think it's time the Congress started doing the job it was sent to Washington to do. //

So let me close with an issue close to Republican hearts -- fighting crime. And tell you what the liberal Democratic Congress has done to make the streets of America safer -- safer for muggers, safer for killers, safer for the most barbaric elements of society. //

Almost a year and a half ago, I stood before the Capitol with policemen and women to demand Congress pass a crime bill and pass it soon. We hoped that this Democratic Congress -- liberal though it is -- would finally pass a workable Federal death penalty -- to protect America. / Would end the legal loopholes and technicalities that free criminals and handcuff police. / And would give our prosecutors the tools they need to keep criminals off the streets and behind bars.

After 17 months, Congress finally passed a crime bill -- a tough bill -- and then proceeded to weaken it later, out of sight, in a backroom. The mutilation was itself a mugging -- a legislative crime that could only take place behind closed doors. / Only when the doors were shut, safe from public view, was it cut up and left to die. When it comes to crime -- to spending -- to the Congress as a whole: What a difference more Republicans would have made. //

Ask Stan Parris. America needs a Republican Congress that will balance the budget by cutting spending -- not a Democratic Congress that tries to raise the income-tax rates of the middle class. //

Ask Stan Parris. America needs a Republican Congress that will pass a tougher crime bill -- not a Democratic Congress intent on weakening the law and gutting the death penalty. //

Ask Stan Parris. America needs a Republican Congress that will end the influence of special interests -- not a Democratic Congress that wants taxpayers to join lobbyists in re-electing the Tax and Spenders. // In short, the only way to send a message to Washington is to elect a Republican majority. The only way to send a message to Washington is not to elect Democrats. //

I've known Stan Parris for many years. I like him -- respect him. So let's keep him on the side of those who want a Congress which will work with the President for the good of all.

Let's go to the polls. And roll up our sleeves to re-elect a magnificent U.S. Congressman. Thank you for what you've done, and will do, for Stan. / God bless the United States. And let's re-elect Stan Parris as Congressman from the Eighth District of the great State of Virginia.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: PARRIS FUNDRAISER

I also like Stan's honesty and perspective. // For example. Stan's a big Virginia Cavaliers football fan. That's the honest part. // Stan's perspective is realizing the impossibility of his transportation dream: Moving the University of Virginia to Alexandria. //

Finally, there is Stan Parris' record. Korean War hero. Returned to attend George Washington University -- then, practice law -- then, enter the Virginia House of Delegates. // He's served as Secretary of the Commonwealth. Been a superb seven-term U.S. Congressmen. // He's on the side of every decent American who values Growth, opportunity, and prosperity. // GOP. // Has a nice ring, don't you think? //

((You know, enduring the drive over here from D.C., I thought of how I'd vote for Stan Parris just on his transportation policies alone.)) // He co-sponsored legislation which will complete this area's Metro system. / He opposes Statehood for the District of Columbia -- and I support his stand. // Stan Parris reflects the values of America's good, quiet, decent people. // He believes in government which serves the people -- not the other way around.

We could use a little more of Stan's common sense about five miles northeast of here. I'm speaking about the ludicrous spectacle known as the United States Congress. // Yes, Virginia, America finally has a Federal budget. But even Ripley would not believe what it had to endure to get that budget passed. //

All of you know the history of these budget negotiations. For most of the past year, our Administration -- aided by Congressmen like Stan -- has worked to produce a serious response to a serious deficit -- grappling not only with the budget, but a self-serving Congress in which both houses are run by Democrats.

For eight months, this Democratic Congress acted like a 78 record played at 33. The only thing it did quickly was "Tax and spend." Otherwise, for eight months, it postured. Bellowed. Debated. Stalled. // If Congress were a play, it would have closed before New Haven. Congress hasn't been doing the people's business. It's been giving the business to the people. // Now, Stan's opponent proposes to give the business to the Eighth District. //

Part of Congress's problem is institutional. Think of it - - twenty thousand staff members and a Rubik's Cube of committees. Too often, serving liberals like Stan's opponent who pander to pressure groups. // Then, there's a second problem: Congress' left-wing philosophy perpetuated by nearly 40 years of one-party rule. // Because the Democratic Congress has become unaccountable, it has become irresponsible. Yes, the budget process is broke -- and we have to fix it. But we don't just have to change the process. Ask Stan Parris -- he could use some company: We have to elect more Republicans so we can change the Congress, too. //

Six days from now, let's remember who gave us the sorry charade we call a budget process. The Democrats. // And who fought so hard for budget reform -- for built-in enforcement rules to break liberals' tax and spend addiction once and for all. Yes, Republicans like Stan Parris. // Republicans helped us achieve the first five-year curb on spending ever. And ensured over $350 billion in spending cuts -- the largest cut in history. // Republicans helped me reduce the deficit by $500 billion. Hold the line against the ultra-liberals who would cripple our national defense. Finally, thank God for Republicans like Stan Parris who helped me keep Congress from raising income tax rates on working America. //

Here's the good news. Our budget agreement will help bring interest rates down in Northern Virginia -- helping you buy that new home or car. It will help build more new businesses -- and that means more new jobs. // But I won't deceive you -- we've had enough deception from the other party. So here's the bad news. This budget's not nearly as good -- nor fair to the Middle Class -- as we would have had under a Republican Congress. // For too long we've endured a Democratic Congress that -- by bowing to special interests -- measures progress made by dollars spent. // Next Tuesday, let's elect Republicans like Stan Parris who measure progress made by people helped -- and who will build a government which stands for America's interests. //

Ask Stan Parris. America needs a Republican Congress that will balance the budget by cutting spending -- not a Democratic Congress that tries to raise the income-tax rates of the middle-class. //

Ask Stan Parris. America needs a Republican Congress that will pass our tough crime bill -- not a Democratic Congress that tries to weaken the law and gut the death penalty. //

Ask Stan Parris. America needs a Republican Congress that will end the influence of special interests -- not a Democratic Congress that wants taxpayers to join lobbyists in re-electing the Tax and Spenders. // In short, the only way to send a message to Washington is to elect a Republican majority. The only way to send a message to Washington is not to elect Democrats. //

I've known Stan Parris for many years. I like him -- respect him. So let's keep him on the side of those who want a Congress which will work with the President for the good of all.

Let's go to the polls. And roll up our sleeves to re-elect a magnificent U.S. Congressman. Thank you for what you've done, and will do, for Stan. / God bless the United States. And let's re-elect Stan Parris as Congressman from the Eighth District of the great State of Virginia.

They gave me "National Asparagus Month" -- but they stalled for almost a year before passing a farm bill. // They gave me "The Year of Clean Water" -- but delayed for months before finally passing a clean air bill. // [[If all this sounds unpalatable, don't worry -- Congress also declared National Digestive Disease Awareness Month.]]

I have nothing against home health care, or asparagus. // Broccoli's another matter. // But I think it's time the Congress started doing the job it was sent to Washington to do. //

So let me close with an issue close to Republican hearts -- fighting crime. And tell you what the liberal Democratic Congress has done to make the streets of America safer -- safer for muggers, safer for killers, safer for the most barbaric elements of society. //

Almost a year and a half ago, I stood before the Capitol with policemen and women to demand Congress pass a crime bill and pass it soon. We hoped that this Democratic Congress -- liberal though it is -- would finally pass a workable Federal death penalty -- to protect America. / Would end the legal loopholes and technicalities that free criminals and handcuff police. / And would give our prosecutors the tools they need to keep criminals off the streets and behind bars.

After 17 months, Congress finally passed a crime bill -- a tough bill -- and then proceeded to weaken it later, out of sight, in a backroom. The mutilation was itself a mugging -- a legislative crime that could only take place behind closed doors. / Only when the doors were shut, safe from public view, was it cut up and left to die. When it comes to crime -- to spending - - to the Congress as a whole: What a difference more Republicans would have made. //

Ask Stan Parris. America needs a Republican Congress that will balance the budget by cutting spending -- not a Democratic Congress that tries to raise the income-tax rates of the middle class. //

Ask Stan Parris. America needs a Republican Congress that will pass a tougher crime bill -- not a Democratic Congress intent on weakening the law and gutting the death penalty. //

Ask Stan Parris. America needs a Republican Congress that will end the influence of special interests -- not a Democratic Congress that wants taxpayers to join lobbyists in re-electing the Tax and Spenders. // In short, the only way to send a message to Washington is to elect a Republican majority. The only way to send a message to Washington is not to elect Democrats. //

I've known Stan Parris for many years. I like him -- respect him. So let's keep him on the side of those who want a Congress which will work with the President for the good of all.

Let's go to the polls. And roll up our sleeves to re-elect a magnificent U.S. Congressman. Thank you for what you've done, and will do, for Stan. / God bless the United States. And let's re-elect Stan Parris as Congressman from the Eighth District of the great State of Virginia.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: PARRIS FUNDRAISER
ALEXANDRIA, VIRGINIA
WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 31, 1990
8:00 A.M.

Congressman Parris, ladies and gentlemen. As always, it is a pleasure to be in the Old Dominion -- and to speak on behalf of one of this Nation's great representatives. He's not simply on our side -- he's on America's side. // My friend -- and your wonderful Congressman. Stan Parris. //

((As Stan tells it, this visit arose from a phone call from that kinder and gentler human being, John Sununu. // John told him, "We've got a surprise for you that will really excite people." // Stan replied, "You mean big-league baseball's finally coming to Northern Virginia?")) //

Northern Virginia may not yet have a major league baseball team, but it has a major league congressman. And I'm here today to say: On Election Day, Stan is going to do to his opponent what the Reds did to the A's. //

I say that for many reasons. First, Stan is a friend -- not merely of Northern Virginia, but also of me. ((Stan and I have a special bond. I'm the one who taught him everything he knows about charisma.)) //

I also like Stan's honesty and perspective. // For example. Stan's a big Virginia Cavaliers football fan. That's the honest part. // Stan's perspective is realizing the impossibility of his transportation dream: Moving the University of Virginia to Alexandria. //

Finally, there is Stan Parris' record. Korean War hero. Returned to attend George Washington University -- then, practice law -- then, enter the Virginia House of Delegates. // He's served as Secretary of the Commonwealth. Been a superb seven-term U.S. Congressmen. // He's on the side of every decent American who values Growth, opportunity, and prosperity. // GOP. // Has a nice ring, don't you think? //

((You know, enduring the drive over here from D.C., I thought of how I'd vote for Stan Parris just on his transportation policies alone.)) // He co-sponsored legislation which will complete this area's Metro system. / He opposes Statehood for the District of Columbia -- and I support his stand. // Stan Parris reflects the values of America's good, quiet, decent people. // He believes in government which serves the people -- not the other way around.

We could use a little more of Stan's common sense about five miles northeast of here. I'm speaking about the ludicrous spectacle known as the United States Congress. // Yes, Virginia, America finally has a Federal budget. But even Ripley would not believe what it had to endure to get that budget passed. //

All of you know the history of these budget negotiations. For most of the past year, our Administration -- aided by Congressmen like Stan -- has worked to produce a serious response to a serious deficit -- grappling not only with the budget, but a self-serving Congress in which both houses are run by Democrats.

For eight months, this Democratic Congress acted like a 78 record played at 33. The only thing it did quickly was "Tax and spend." Otherwise, for eight months, it postured. Bellowed. Debated. Stalled. // If Congress were a play, it would have closed before New Haven. Congress hasn't been doing the people's business. It's been giving the business to the people. // Now, Stan's opponent proposes to give the business to the Eighth District. //

Part of Congress's problem is institutional. Think of it - - twenty thousand staff members and a Rubik's Cube of committees. Too often, serving liberals like Stan's opponent who pander to pressure groups. // Then, there's a second problem: Congress' left-wing philosophy perpetuated by nearly 40 years of one-party rule. // Because the Democratic Congress has become unaccountable, it has become irresponsible. Yes, the budget process is broke -- and we have to fix it. But we don't just have to change the process. Ask Stan Parris -- he could use some company: We have to elect more Republicans so we can change the Congress, too. //

Six days from now, let's remember who gave us the sorry charade we call a budget process. The Democrats. // And who fought so hard for budget reform -- for built-in enforcement rules to break liberals' tax and spend addiction once and for all. Yes, Republicans like Stan Parris. // Republicans helped us achieve the first five-year curb on spending ever. And ensured over $350 billion in spending cuts -- the largest cut in history. // Republicans helped me reduce the deficit by $500 billion. Hold the line against the ultra-liberals who would cripple our national defense. Finally, thank God for Republicans like Stan Parris who helped me keep Congress from raising income tax rates on working America. //

Here's the good news. Our budget agreement will help bring interest rates down in Northern Virginia -- helping you buy that new home or car. It will help build more new businesses -- and that means more new jobs. // But I won't deceive you -- we've had enough deception from the other party. So here's the bad news. This budget's not nearly as good -- nor fair to the Middle Class -- as we would have had under a Republican Congress. // For too long we've endured a Democratic Congress that -- by bowing to special interests -- measures progress made by dollars spent. // Next Tuesday, let's elect Republicans like Stan Parris who measure progress made by people helped -- and who will build a government which stands for America's interests. //

Ask Stan Parris. America needs a Republican Congress that will balance the budget by cutting spending -- not a Democratic Congress that tries to raise the income-tax rates of the middle-class. //

Ask Stan Parris. America needs a Republican Congress that will pass our tough crime bill -- not a Democratic Congress that tries to weaken the law and gut the death penalty. //

Ask Stan Parris. America needs a Republican Congress that will end the influence of special interests -- not a Democratic Congress that wants taxpayers to join lobbyists in re-electing the Tax and Spenders. // In short, the only way to send a message to Washington is to elect a Republican majority. The only way to send a message to Washington is not to elect Democrats. //

I've known Stan Parris for many years. I like him -- respect him. So let's keep him on the side of those who want a Congress which will work with the President for the good of all.

Let's go to the polls. And roll up our sleeves to re-elect a magnificent U.S. Congressman. Thank you for what you've done, and will do, for Stan. / God bless the United States. And let's re-elect Stan Parris as Congressman from the Eighth District of the great State of Virginia.

Returned to attend George Washington University -- then, practice law -- then, enter the Virginia House of Delegates. // He's served as Secretary of the Commonwealth. Been a superb seven-term U.S. Congressmen. // He's on the side of every decent American who values Growth, opportunity, and prosperity. // GOP.

// Has a nice ring, don't you think? //

Coopering over ((You know, enduring the drive over here from D.C., I thought of how I'd vote for Stan Parris just on his transportation policies alone.)) // He co-sponsored legislation which will complete this area's Metro system. / He opposes Statehood for the District of Columbia -- and I support his stand. // Stan Parris reflects the values of America's good, quiet, decent people. // He believes in government which serves the people -- not the other way around. TAKE OUT

We could use a little more of Stan's common sense about five miles northeast of here. I'm speaking about the ludicrous spectacle known as the United States Congress. // Yes, Virginia, America finally has a Federal budget. But even Ripley would not believe what it had to endure to get that budget passed. //

All of you know the history of these budget negotiations. For most of the past year, our Administration -- aided by Congressmen like Stan -- has worked to produce a serious response to a serious deficit -- grappling not only with the budget, but a self-serving Congress in which both houses are run by Democrats.

For eight months, this Democratic Congress acted like a 78 record played at 33. The only thing it did quickly was "Tax and spend." Otherwise, for eight months, it postured. Bellowed. Debated. Stalled. // If Congress were a play, it would have closed before New Haven. Congress hasn't been doing the people's business. It's been giving the business to the people. // Now, Stan's opponent proposes to give the business to the Eighth District. //

Part of Congress's problem is institutional. Think of it - - twenty thousand staff members and a Rubik's Cube of committees. Too often, serving liberals like Stan's opponent who pander to pressure groups. // Then, there's a second problem: Congress' left-wing philosophy perpetuated by nearly 40 years of one-party rule. // Because the Democratic Congress has become unaccountable, it has become irresponsible. Yes, the budget process is broke -- and we have to fix it. But we don't just have to change the process. Ask Stan Parris -- he could use some company: We have to elect more Republicans so we can change the Congress, too. //

Six days from now, let's remember who gave us the sorry charade we call a budget process. The Democrats. // And who fought so hard for budget reform -- for built-in enforcement rules to break liberals' tax and spend addiction once and for all. Yes, Republicans like Stan Parris. // Republicans helped us achieve the first five-year curb on spending ever. And ensured over $350 billion in spending cuts -- the largest cut in history. // Republicans helped me reduce the deficit by $500 billion. Hold the line against the ultra-liberals who would cripple our national defense. Finally, thank God for Republicans like Stan Parris who helped me keep Congress from raising income tax rates on working America. //

Here's the good news. Our budget agreement will help bring interest rates down in Northern Virginia -- helping you buy that new home or car. It will help build more new businesses -- and that means more new jobs. // But I won't deceive you -- we've had enough deception from the other party. So here's the bad news. This budget's not nearly as good -- nor fair to the Middle Class -- as we would have had under a Republican Congress. // For too long we've endured a Democratic Congress that -- by bowing to special interests -- measures progress made by dollars spent. // Next Tuesday, let's elect Republicans like Stan Parris who measure progress made by people helped -- and who will build a government which stands for America's interests. //

Ask Stan Parris. America needs a Republican Congress that will balance the budget by cutting spending -- not a Democratic Congress that tries to raise the income-tax rates of the middle-class. //

Ask Stan Parris. America needs a Republican Congress that will pass our tough crime bill -- not a Democratic Congress that tries to weaken the law and gut the death penalty. //

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

90 OCT 30 P12: 03

October 30, 1990

MEMORANDUM FOR CHRISS WINSTON

FROM: JIM PINKERTON

SUBJECT: Stan Parris Rally

pg. 2, para. 3, line 1 "...enduring the drive over here from D.C...."

This is not entirely credible given the mode of travel everyone associates with the President of the United States, i.e., limousine motorcade. Incidentally, isn't the President travelling to this event by helicopter?

3,2,4 "If Congress were a play, it would have closed before New Haven."

The New Haven reference is probably out of date by now.

3,3,2 "...a Rubik's cube of committees."

A clever image.

3,3,4 "Congress's left-wing philosophy."

"Left-wing" may be a little too strong. "Liberal," "tax-and-spend," etc., are better.

3,4,1 "...the sorry charade we call a budget process."

Another great line.

4,3,1 "..the ultra-liberals..."

4,3,1 "Ask Stan Parris..."

This device is very effective.

5,2,2 "So let's keep him on the side of those who want a Congress which will work with the President for the good of all."

The phrase "let's keep him on the side" is not as precise as a phrase such as "let's keep him on our team."

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: PARRIS FUNDRAISER
ALEXANDRIA, VIRGINIA
WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 31, 1990
8:00 A.M.

Congressman Paris, ladies and gentlemen. As always, it is a pleasure to be in the Old Dominion -- and to speak on behalf of one of this Nation's great representatives. He's not simply on our side -- he's on America's side. // My friend -- and your wonderful Congressman. Stan Parris. //

((As Stan tells it, this visit arose from a phone call from that kinder and gentler human being, John Sununu. // John told him, "We've got a surprise for you that will really excite people." // Stan replied, "You mean big-league baseball's finally coming to Northern Virginia?")) //

Northern Virginia may not yet have a major league baseball team, but it has a major league congressman. And I'm here today to say: On Election Day, Stan is going to do to his opponent what the Reds did to the A's. //

I say that for many reasons. First, Stan is a friend -- not merely of Northern Virginia, but also of me. ((Stan and I have a special bond. I'm the one who taught him everything he knows about charisma.)) //

I also like Stan's honesty and perspective. // For example. Stan's a big Virginia Cavaliers football fan. That's the honest part. // Stan's perspective is realizing the impossibility of his transportation dream: Moving the University of Virginia to Alexandria. //

Finally, there is Stan Parris' record. Korean War hero. Returned to attend George Washington University -- then, practice law -- then, enter the Virginia House of Delegates. // He's served as Secretary of the Commonwealth. Been a superb seven-term U.S. Congressmen. // He's on the side of every decent American who values Growth, opportunity, and prosperity. // GOP. // Has a nice ring, don't you think? //

((You know, enduring the drive over here from D.C., I thought of how I'd vote for Stan Parris just on his transportation policies alone.)) // He co-sponsored legislation which will complete this area's Metro system. / He opposes Statehood for the District of Columbia -- and I support his stand. // ~~Unlike his opponent~~, Stan Parris reflects the values of America's good, quiet, decent people. // He believes in government which serves the people -- not the other way around.

We could use a little more of Stan's common sense about five miles northeast of here. I'm speaking about the ludicrous spectacle known as the United States Congress. // Yes, Virginia, America finally has a Federal budget. But even Ripley would not believe what it had to endure to get that budget passed. //

All of you know the history of these budget negotiations. For most of the past year, our Administration -- aided by Congressmen like Stan -- has worked to produce a serious response to a serious deficit -- grappling not only with the budget, but a self-serving Congress in which both houses are run by Democrats.

And believe me, "tax and spend" solution aren't any better slower.

For eight months, this Democratic Congress acted like a 78 record played at 33. // For eight months, it postured.

Bellowed. Debated. Stalled. // If Congress were a play, it would have closed before New Haven. Congress hasn't been doing the people's business. It's been giving the business to the people. // Now, Stan's opponent proposes to give the business to the Eighth District. //

Part of Congress's problem is institutional. Think of it - - twenty thousand staff members and a Rubik's Cube of committees. Too often, serving liberals like Stan's opponent who pander to pressure groups. // Then, there's a second problem: Congress' left-wing philosophy perpetuated by nearly 40 years of one-party rule. // Because the Democratic Congress has become unaccountable, it has become irresponsible. ~~If spending were a painting, Congress would be the Michaelangelo of its age.~~ //

Yes, the budget process is broke -- and we have to fix it. But we don't just have to change the process. Ask Stan Parris: <sup>He could use some company.</sup> We have to elect more Republicans so we can change the Congress, too. //

Six days from now, let's remember who gave us the sorry charade we call a budget process. The Democrats. // And who fought so hard for budget reform -- for built-in enforcement rules to break liberals' tax and spend addiction once and for all. Yes, Republicans like Stan Parris. // Republicans helped us achieve the first five-year curb on spending ever. And ensured <sup>over $500</sup> $300 billion in spending cuts -- the largest cut in history. // Republicans helped me reduce the deficit by $500 billion. Hold the line against the ~~Liberal Left~~ which would cripple our national defense. Finally, thank God for Republicans like Stan Parris who helped me keep Congress from raising income tax rates on working America. //

Here's the good news. Our budget agreement will help bring interest rates down in Northern Virginia -- helping you buy that new home or car. It will help build more new businesses -- and that means more new jobs. // But I won't deceive you -- we've had enough deception from the other party. So here's the bad news. This budget's not nearly as good -- nor fair to the Middle Class -- as we would have had under a Republican Congress. // For too long we've endured a Democratic Congress that -- by bowing to special interests -- measures progress made by dollars spent. // Next Tuesday, let's elect Republicans like Stan Parris who measure progress made by people helped -- and who will build a government which stands for America's interests. //

((You know, tonight is Halloween, and when you get to the age that Barbara and I are, Halloween parties aren't quite the same. The highlight of the one we're going to tonight is bobbing for applesauce. )) // For years now, the Democrats living in that haunted house on Capitol Hill have tried to trick America. // On Election Day -- by electing Republicans -- we can give America a treat. //

Ask Stan Parris. America needs a Republican Congress that will balance the budget by cutting spending -- not a Democratic Congress that tries to raise the income-taxes<sup>rates</sup> of the middle-class. //

Ask Stan Parris. America needs a Republican Congress that will pass our tough crime bill -- not a Democratic Congress that tries to weaken the law and gut the death penalty. //

Ask Stan Parris. America needs a Republican Congress that will end the influence of special interests -- not a Democratic Congress that wants taxpayers to join lobbyists in re-electing the Tax and Spenders. // In short, the only way to send a message to Washington is to elect a Republican majority. The only way to send a message to Washington is not to elect Democrats. //

I've known Stan Parris for many years. I like him -- respect him. ~~So has the Eighth District of perhaps America's most historic State. // Next Tuesday, let's prove that we love Parris in the spring-time -- at any time -- more than we love Congress in the fall.~~ // Let's keep Stan Parris on the side of those who want a Congress which will work with the President for the good of all. //

Let's go to the polls. And roll up our sleeves to re-elect a magnificent U.S. Congressman. Thank you for what you've done, and will do, for Stan. / God bless the United States. And let's re-elect Stan Parris as Congressman from the Eighth District of the great State of Virginia.
