PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: ARRIVAL CEREMONY, CHILE
SANTIAGO, CHILE
DECEMBER 6, 1990
11:30 A.M.

[Introductory acknowledgements.] President Aylwin. Members of the Chilean Government: Barbara and I are deeply honored to bring to all Chileans the greetings of the American people. //

These past few days, from Brasilia to Montevideo to Buenos Aires, I have witnessed firsthand the irresistible power of the democratic ideal. // Around the world -- and across the Americas -- a democratic renaissance is underway. // Along with the return to free government is a parallel movement toward free markets. // Here in our hemisphere, democracy has made great gains. At long last, we are moving closer to the common destiny that once moved Chile's great champion of freedom, Bernardo O'Higgins, to write: "the Americas are giving great hope to philosophers and patriots alike." //

Chile's peaceful return to the ranks of the world's democracies is cause for pride and celebration. Chile's record of economic accomplishment is a lesson for Latin America in the fruits of the free market. Nowhere among the nations of this continent has the pace of free market reform gone faster than here -- in Chile. //

Our challenge today is to build on the interests and ideals we share. That is the spirit that guides my Enterprise for the Americas initiative -- to promote freer trade, open investment and an easing of the crushing burden of debt. Here in Chile, enthusiasm for Enterprise for the Americas has been strong -- and President Aylwin's support has been especially gratifying. // It is my hope that this visit, with a nation at the vanguard of South America's free market movement, will be a step towards progress and prosperity for both our nations. //

Just a few moments from now, President Aylwin and I will proceed to the Presidential Palace, to hold private discussions - - to continue the open and honest dialogue we began two months ago at the White House. // Just a few hours from now, I will address the Chilean National Congress, gathering in special session at the Port of Valparaiso -- and tomorrow, I meet with leading members of the Chilean business community. //

As you say here, "brick by brick, houses are built." So, too, are the foundations of lasting friendship built by each additional contact between the people of our two nations. //

As friends and fellow democrats, the people of America and of Chile share a bright destiny based on common ideals. Let me say to President Aylwin and to the people of Chile: it is in the spirit of those shared ideals that I come to Chile today. //

Thank you for this warm welcome -- and may God bless the people of Chile.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: ARRIVAL CEREMONY, CHILE
SANTIAGO, CHILE
DECEMBER 6, 1990
11:30 A.M.

[Introductory acknowledgements.] President Aylwin. Members of the Chilean Government: Barbara and I are deeply honored to bring to all Chileans the greetings of the American people. //

These past few days, from Brasilia to Montevideo to Buenos Aires, I have witnessed firsthand the irresistible power of the democratic ideal. // Around the world -- and across the Americas -- a democratic renaissance is underway. // Along with the return to free government is a parallel movement toward free markets. // Here in our hemisphere, democracy has made great gains. At long last, we are moving closer to the common destiny that once moved Chile's great champion of freedom, Bernardo O'Higgins, to write: "the Americas are giving great hope to philosophers and patriots alike." //

Chile's peaceful return to the ranks of the world's democracies is cause for pride and celebration. Chile's record of economic accomplishment is a lesson for Latin America in the fruits of the free market. Nowhere among the nations of this continent has the pace of free market reform gone faster, faster than here -- in Chile. //

Our challenge today is to build on the interests and ideals we share. That is the spirit that guides my Enterprise for the Americas initiative -- to promote freer trade, open investment and an easing of the crushing burden of debt. Here in Chile, enthusiasm for Enterprise for the Americas has been strong -- and President Aylwin's support has been especially gratifying. // It is my hope that this visit, with a nation at the vanguard of South America's free market movement, will be a step towards progress and prosperity for both our nations. //

Just a few moments from now, President Aylwin and I will proceed to the Presidential Palace, to hold private discussions - - to continue the open and honest dialogue we began two months ago at the White House. // Just a few hours from now, I will address the Chilean National Congress, gathering in special session at the Port of Valparaiso -- and tomorrow, I meet with leading members of the Chilean business community. //

As you say here, "brick by brick, houses are built." So, too, are the foundations of lasting friendship built by each additional contact between the people of our two nations. //

As friends and fellow democrats, the people of America and of Chile share a bright destiny based on common ideals. Let me say to President Aylwin and to the people of Chile: it is in the spirit of those shared ideals that I come to Chile today. //

Thank you for this warm welcome -- and may God bless the people of Chile.
