MEMORANDUM TO THE PRESIDENT

THROUGH:           CHRISS WINSTON BH for CW
FROM:                BETH HINCHLIFFE BH
SUBJECT:             REMARKS AT THE 50TH ANNIVERSARY OF PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S "FOUR FREEDOMS" SPEECH

On Wednesday, January 30, you will be the keynote speaker at the commemoration of the 50th Anniversary of President Roosevelt's "Four Freedoms" Speech.

The event will be at 11 a.m. in the Statuary Hall of the Capitol. Also on the platform with you will be: Speaker Foley; Senators Dole and Mitchell; Rep. Michel; FDR's granddaughter Anne Roosevelt; William vanden Heuvel (President of the Roosevelt Institute); and Arthur Schlesinger (Co-Chair, Roosevelt Institute).

Your remarks (6 minutes) begin by recalling that Roosevelt's speech was part of a tradition of freedom-defining documents. They then reflect on how the Four Freedoms have inspired Americans to want peace, and have prepared us to stand against threats to the New World Order -- specifically, in the Gulf. And they conclude with a call to remember the freedoms as we enter the 21st century.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: 50th ANNIVERSARY OF THE FOUR FREEDOMS
U.S. CAPITOL
January 30, 1991

The Declaration of Independence. The Constitution. The Emancipation Proclamation. Franklin Roosevelt called these documents "milestones of human progress." And he added one more to the list -- the charge he named his "Four Freedoms of common humanity." \\ All of these landmark charters are optimistic -- after all, that's what inspiration is all about. But Roosevelt knew that these monumental charters are more than just idealistic goals. Together, they are the moral North Star that guides us.\\

200 years ago, our greatest American political philosopher, Thomas Jefferson, defined our nation's identity when he wrote: "all men are created equal...endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights...among them are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." \\

50 years ago, our greatest American political pragmatist, Roosevelt, refined that thought in his "Four Freedoms," when he brilliantly enunciated the 20th century vision of our founding fathers' commitment to individual liberty. Freedom of expression, \\ freedom of worship, \\ freedom from want \\ and freedom from fear.

For these 200 years, this vision of human dignity has been a beacon drawing to these shores people from across the globe. People like a boy named Quang Trinh. A Vietnamese teenager who almost died escaping from the country where he'd seen his mother killed, his father jailed, his brother's spirit broken. Quang fled the only life he'd known -- for freedom. He jumped into shark-filled waters -- for freedom. Starved in delirium -- for freedom. When he was rescued and told he could enter the U.S., he wept for joy. Quang calls America "freedom country." \\

Imagine if every person across this world could call their homeland -- "freedom country." \\ \\

We do. We do because the Four Freedoms have shaped the American character. They've molded who we are -- as individuals and as a nation. And they've made us realize that along with the freedoms that are our birthright come solemn responsibilities. \\

As we look around the world, at the events of the past year, we see how these very same beliefs are bringing about the emergence of a New World Order. One based on respect for the individual and for the rule of law. A New World Order that can lead to the lasting peace we all seek, where children will never have to repeat Quang's ordeal. \\

That's what's at stake. A new chapter of human history. \\

And that's why an international coalition of 28 nations backed by the U.N. is standing up to the evil that challenges this ideal in the Middle East. We cannot -- we must not -- and we will not let that hope for a better world be threatened. \\ \\

It is our commitment to this New World Order that takes us to the sands and seas of the Gulf. We're there because we realize that each of Roosevelt's four freedoms leads us to the greatest of all human aspirations -- THE FREEDOM TO LIVE IN PEACE. \\ \\

And the ones who know that best are the men and women who are, as General Schwarzkopf put it: the "lightning and thunder" of Operation Desert Storm. They have put their lives on hold because they understand that Saddam Hussein's aggression is a threat to everything we know -- everything we believe in -- everything we stand for. They know that his is a world that crushes the human spirit. And diminishes the human soul. \\

We stand now at a defining moment in history, much as the man we came to honor today did a half-century ago. Last night I spoke to the nation from this building. I spoke of sacrifice, of vision, and above all, of the hard work of freedom. No one knew better than President Roosevelt what hard work freedom really is.

When he first introduced the Four Freedoms, Roosevelt's America was entering a war against the oldest enemy of the human spirit -- evil that threatened the world's peace. But listen to the confidence of purpose he expressed in that same speech. "Our national policy in foreign affairs has been based on a decent respect for the rights and dignity of all nations, large and small. And the justice of morality must and will win in the end." \\

That charge is as true today in the Gulf as it was 50 years ago in Europe. And the triumph of the moral order must still be the vision that compels us. So we ask God to bless us. To guide us. And to help us through whatever dark nights we still may face. We hope that, in the sublime resolve of those who strive so that all may live in freedom and peace -- we will show how this nation has forged its soul. And that the liberty bell of THE FOUR FREEDOMS will ring for all people in every nation of this world.

They know that his is a world that crushes the human spirit. And diminishes the human soul. \\

We stand now at a defining moment in history, much as the man we came to honor today did a half-century ago. Last night I spoke to the nation from this building. I spoke of sacrifice, of vision, and above all, of the hard work of freedom. No one knew better than President Roosevelt what hard work freedom really is.

When he first introduced the Four Freedoms, Roosevelt's America was entering a war against the oldest enemy of the human spirit -- evil that threatened the world's peace. But listen to the confidence of purpose he expressed in that same speech. "Our national policy in foreign affairs has been based on a decent respect for the rights and dignity of all nations, large and small. And the justice of morality must and will win in the end." \\

That charge is as true today in the Gulf as it was 50 years ago in Europe. And the triumph of the moral order must still be the vision that compels us. So we ask God to bless us. To guide us. And to help us through whatever dark nights we still may face. We hope that, in the sublime resolve of those who strive so that all may live in freedom and peace -- we will show how this nation has forged its soul. And that the liberty bell of THE FOUR FREEDOMS will ring for all people in every nation of this world.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: 50th ANNIVERSARY OF THE FOUR FREEDOMS
U.S. CAPITOL
January 30, 1991

There's a classic American painting I'm thinking of today. A very simple one. In it, parents -- a little weary, but faces creased with love -- gently tuck their children into bed. A warm light shines from downstairs. The scene says: security, safety, peace. It was how Norman Rockwell, that great translator of the American spirit, captured on canvas the most powerful of President Roosevelt's Four Freedoms: the Freedom from Fear. \\

It's a powerfully moving picture. And sentiment. For as parents, we want desperately to keep our children safe -- they are the soul of our country, the hope of our future. But, as Roosevelt knew only too painfully well, the freedoms that are our birthright carry obligations. Sometimes they weigh heavy on our heart, and we wish we could let the burden pass us by. \\
\\ But it is precisely in those moments that we find our true courage. It is in those moments that the Four Freedoms become no longer just idealistic goals -- but the moral North Star that guides us. \\

President Roosevelt brilliantly enunciated the 20th century vision of our founding fathers' commitment to individual liberty. His was a nation entering a war against the oldest enemy of the human spirit: evil that threatened the world's peace. For the sake of freedom of expression, \ freedom of worship, \ freedom from want \ and freedom from fear, his America sent its young to foreign battlefields, bearing high and proud the torch of liberty. \\

Fifty years later another group of brave Americans has reached out their hands to carry that torch again: the men and women who are the "lightning and thunder" of Operation Desert Storm. They have put their lives and dreams on hold because they understand that Saddam Hussein <sup>aggression can not be left unchecked. They know that such aggression</sup> is a threat to everything we know -- everything we believe in -- everything we stand for. ~~They~~ <sup>know</sup> ~~that his is a world of the subjugation of the human spirit.~~ ~~And the diminution of the human soul.~~

As we look around the world, at the events of the past year, we see how those very beliefs are at last bringing about a triumphant New World Order. That's why our coalition is standing up to the evil that challenges this ideal in the Middle East. For this New World Order is our last, best hope for a peaceful planet. We cannot let that hope be threatened. |||

We have to defend it -- because it's all that stands between us and chaos. Because it promises a future <sup>free of</sup> ~~without~~ war. || And that's the finest freedom of all. |||

When I think about freedom, I remember hearing about a boy

named Quang Trinh. A Vietnamese teenager who almost died escaping from the country where he'd seen his mother killed, his father jailed, his brother's spirit broken. Quang fled the only life he'd known -- for freedom. He jumped into shark-filled waters -- for freedom. Starved in delirium -- for freedom. When he was rescued and told he could enter the US, he wept for joy. Quang calls America "freedom country." \\

Imagine if every person across this world could call their homeland -- "freedom country." \\\

Like the parents in Rockwell's painting, we don't want our children to repeat Quang's anguish. We don't want them to know war. We don't want them to ever have to learn about grieving. \\

So as we stand at this defining moment in history, only a decade away from a new century, let us pause. And let's call for a unifying new vision to guide us through what lies ahead. Let it be a call for moral responsibility as well as unlimited daring. \\

And let's add a fifth freedom to the principles that inspire us -- and call it "FREEDOM <sup>FROM WAR</sup> TO LIVE IN PEACE". It will be our legacy to the children of the world. \\\

There is much we must do in the name of freedom. And so we ask God to bless us. To guide us. To help us through whatever dark nights we still may face. We hope that in the sublime resolve of those who strive so that all may live in freedom and peace -- that this nation may renew its soul. \\\

And that the liberty bell of THE FIVE FREEDOMS will ring for all people in every nation of this world.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: 50th ANNIVERSARY OF THE FOUR FREEDOMS
U.S. CAPITOL
January 30, 1991

There's a classic American painting I'm thinking of today. A very simple one. In it, parents -- a little weary, but faces creased with love -- gently tuck their children into bed. A warm light shines from downstairs. The scene says: security, safety, peace. It was how Norman Rockwell, that great translator of the American spirit, captured on canvas the most powerful of President Roosevelt's Four Freedoms: the Freedom from Fear. \\

It's a powerfully moving picture. And sentiment. For as parents, we want desperately to keep our children safe -- they are the soul of our country, the hope of our future. But, as Roosevelt knew only too painfully well, the freedoms that are our birthright carry obligations. Sometimes they weigh heavy on our heart, and we wish we could let the burden pass us by. \\ But it is precisely in those moments that we find our true courage. It is in those moments that the Four Freedoms become no longer just idealistic goals -- but the moral North Star that guides us. \\

President Roosevelt brilliantly enunciated the 20th century vision of our founding fathers' commitment to individual liberty. His was a nation entering a war against the oldest enemy of the human spirit: evil that threatened the world's peace. For the sake of freedom of expression, \ freedom of worship, \ freedom from want \ and freedom from fear, his America sent its young to foreign battlefields, bearing high and proud the torch of liberty. \\

Fifty years later another group of brave Americans has reached out their hands to carry that torch again: the men and women who are the "lightning and thunder" of Operation Desert Storm. They have put their lives and dreams on hold because they understand that Saddam Hussein is a threat to everything we know -- everything we believe in -- everything we stand for. They know that his is a world of the subjugation of the human spirit. And the diminution of the human soul. \\

These men and women know that the flame of democracy can't keep burning unattended. Each of us who is born into freedom and believes in freedom, has a solemn responsibility -- to protect the flame from the wind of hatred that would extinguish it. \\

Above all, these fine Americans have the unshakable belief that when even one person in this world is oppressed -- no-one else can ever be truly free. \\ And that if even one person lives in terror -- none of us can ever truly have Freedom from Fear. \\ \\

As we look around the world, at the events of the past year, we see how those very beliefs are at last bringing about a triumphant New World Order. That's why our coalition is standing up to the evil that challenges this ideal in the Middle East. For this New World Order is our last, best hope for a peaceful planet. We cannot let that hope be threatened. \\ \\

We have to defend it -- because it's all that stands between us and chaos. Because it promises a future without war. \\ And that's the finest freedom of all. \\ \\

When I think about freedom, I remember hearing about a boy

named Quang Trinh. A Vietnamese teenager who almost died escaping from the country where he'd seen his mother killed, his father jailed, his brother's spirit broken. Quang fled the only life he'd known -- for freedom. He jumped into shark-filled waters -- for freedom. Starved in delirium -- for freedom. When he was rescued and told he could enter the US, he wept for joy. Quang calls America "freedom country." \\

Imagine if every person across this world could call their homeland -- "freedom country." \\ \\

Like the parents in Rockwell's painting, we don't want our children to repeat Quang's anguish. We don't want them to know war. We don't want them to ever have to learn about grieving. \\

So as we stand at this defining moment in history, only a decade away from a new century, let us pause. And let's call for a unifying new vision to guide us through what lies ahead. Let it be a call for moral responsibility as well as unlimited daring. \\

And let's add a fifth freedom to the principles that inspire us -- and call it "FREEDOM TO LIVE IN PEACE". It will be our legacy to the children of the world. \\ \\

There is much we must do in the name of freedom. And so we ask God to bless us. To guide us. To help us through whatever dark nights we still may face. We hope that in the sublime resolve of those who strive so that all may live in freedom and peace -- that this nation may renew its soul. \\ \\

And that the liberty bell of THE FIVE FREEDOMS will ring for all people in every nation of this world.
