Title: AGDAY

PROPOSED RADIO MESSAGE
FOR USDA'S NATIONAL AGRICULTURE DAY
(60 seconds)

We Americans are blessed with abundance. We enjoy vast resources. And we have people who can turn those resources into fabulous bounties. On the first day of Spring we celebrate National Agriculture Day and we honor the farmers who turn hard soil into splendid harvests.

America's farmers have astounded the world with their productivity. Today, the average American farm family produces enough food to feed 94 people in this country and 34 people abroad.

This is not an easy task. Today's farmer must be an expert in international markets, computers, machinery, biology and chemistry.

But technology hasn't changed everything. Farmers still must rise before the sun to tend their crops and livestock. They still must protect the soil, lakes and rivers upon which all life depends. And they still must thrive in the most competitive industry on earth.

So please join me on this National Agriculture Day and thank our farmers for the miracles they work each and every day.

Thank you, and may God bless this great country.
