PRESIDENTIAL VIDEO: EID AL-FITRA MESSAGE
FRIDAY, APRIL 12, 1991

It is my pleasure -- on the day that American Muslims are celebrating the end of their Ramadan fast -- to offer each and every one of you my heartfelt best wishes.

This nation is proud of its diverse religious heritage -- and proud of the many peoples and cultures that, together, give this nation its strength.

American Muslims, as followers of one of the three great faiths of the children of Abraham, are part of America's unique example to the world: where people of different ethnic and national origins live in peace and harmony. However diverse their religious affiliations might be, in America the people's faith and freedom are affirmed.

Too many, in other parts of the world, are still persecuted and oppressed for their beliefs. On this day of great joy for the Muslim faith, it is all the harder to accept the plight of those who, because of their religion or ethnic background, are made to suffer any form of oppression.

In closing, then, I would offer a prayer to God -- to guide us to the day when freedom and harmony prevail, for peoples of all faiths, around the world.
