PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: DE CUELLAR LUNCHEON
UNITED NATIONS
MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, 1991
2:00 P.M.

Mr. Secretary General, members of the United Nations community, ladies and gentlemen, dear friends. / For many years, Barbara and I have regarded this as our second home. / Thank you for making today's homecoming a wonderful reunion. //

A writer once observed, "The character of a people is embodied in its leaders." / Mr. Secretary General, as I mentioned to the General Assembly, the character of the United Nations is embodied in you. //

You and other leaders have witnessed great changes in the past several years -- changes that brought an end to the superpower rivalry which poisoned the international arena. / The passing of this rivalry, in turn, has enabled the U.N. to assume its proper role on the world stage -- the role envisioned by its founders 45 years ago. //

History will record that at the onset of this decade, the United Nations regained the faith of its founders by responding with courage and vision to the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait. You helped the nations of the world restore peace and stability to the Gulf by reversing the tide of aggression against a member state. //

The founders of the U.N. were also determined, in the words of the prologue of the Charter, "to reaffirm faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person, in the equal rights of men and women and of nations large and small." //

Sadly, that faith is today diminished by the continued existence of General Assembly Resolution 3379, the offensive resolution which equates Zionism with racism. // This resolution has undercut the moral authority of the U.N. / We strongly believe that it is time to repeal Resolution 3379 -- and bring the deeds of the General Assembly into closer harmony with the noble words of its Charter. //

A new wave of freedom now sweeps the globe. In virtually every corner of the world, repressive governments have been swept aside. In their place have sprung up democracies -- fragile, admittedly -- but democracies which can and must be nurtured to withstand the daunting difficulties they confront. //

Our task is to strengthen these democracies -- affirming the rights of the individual while truly responding to the collective will of the people. / Only then, Mr. Secretary General, can we truly live your words: "Resolution of conflicts, observance of human rights and the promotion of development together weave the fabric of peace. If one of these strands is removed, the tissue will unravel." //

My friend, you have played a central role in binding the fabric of peace. // You have helped lessen tensions around the world in a time of tremendous change. // Thirty years ago, one of your predecessors, Dag Hammarskjold, was killed in a tragic plane crash. Today, we remember how he said: "Only he who keeps his eye fixed on the far horizon will find his right road." //

By keeping your eye fixed on the horizon, you have helped the United Nations find the road to peace. I thank you on behalf of freedom-loving peoples. I congratulate you for a job well done. In that spirit, let us raise our glasses:

-- To the cause of peace;

-- To the health of my dear friend;

-- And to the liberty we can, and must, achieve for the children of the world.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: DE CUELLAR LUNCHEON
UNITED NATIONS
MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, 1991
2:00 P.M.

Mr. Secretary General, members of the United Nations community, ladies and gentlemen, dear friends. / For many years, Barbara and I have regarded this as our second home. / Thank you for making today's homecoming a wonderful reunion. //

A writer once observed, "The character of a people is embodied in its leaders." / Mr. Secretary General, as I mentioned to the General Assembly, the character of the United Nations is embodied in you. //

You and other leaders have witnessed great changes in the past several years -- changes that brought an end to the superpower rivalry which poisoned the international arena. / The passing of this rivalry, in turn, has enabled the U.N. to assume its proper role on the world stage -- the role envisioned by its founders over 45 years ago. //

History will record that at the onset of this decade, the United Nations regained the faith of its founders by responding with courage and vision to the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait. You helped the nations of the world restore peace and stability to the Gulf by reversing the tide of aggression against a member state. //

The founders of the U.N. were also determined, in the words of the prologue of the Charter, "to reaffirm faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person, in the equal rights of men and women and of nations large and small." //

Sadly, that faith is today diminished by the continued existence of General Assembly Resolution 3379, the offensive resolution which equates Zionism with racism. // This resolution has undercut the moral authority of the U.N. / We strongly believe that it is time to repeal Resolution 3379 -- and bring the deeds of the General Assembly into closer harmony with the noble words of its Charter. //

This action will further spur the new wave of freedom sweeping the globe. In virtually every corner of the world, repressive governments have been swept aside. In their place have sprung up democracies -- fragile, admittedly -- but democracies which can and must be nurtured to withstand the daunting difficulties they confront. //

Our task is to strengthen these democracies -- affirming the rights of the individual while truly responding to the collective will of the people. / Only then, Mr. President, can we truly live your words: "Resolution of conflicts, observance of human rights and the promotion of development together weave the fabric of peace. If one of these strands is removed, the tissue will unravel." //

Mr. Secretary General, my friend, you have played a central role in binding the fabric of peace. // You have helped lessen tensions around the world in a time of tremendous change. // Thirty years ago, one of your predecessors, Dag Hammarskjold, was killed in a tragic plane crash. Today, we remember how he said: "Only he who keeps his eye fixed on the far horizon will find his right road." //

By keeping your eye fixed on the horizon, you have helped the United Nations find the road to peace. I thank you on behalf of freedom-loving peoples. I congratulate you for a job well done. In that spirit, let us raise our glasses:

- To the cause of peace;
- To the health of my dear friend;
- And to the liberty we can, and must, achieve for the children of the world.
