CABINET; GOVERNORS AND THEIR SPOUSES; FRIENDS.

WE MEET THIS EVENING, NOT AS REPUBLICANS OR DEMOCRATS, BUT AS AMERICANS WHO WANT TO WORK TOGETHER FOR THE GOOD OF OUR COUNTRY. THE HARD TIMES WE'RE

ASIDE PARTISANSHIP FOR NOW AND MEET OUR MISSION

WE KNOW HOW TO DO IT. WE'VE DONE IT BEFORE. FOR ALMOST FIFTY YEARS, AMERICANS STOOD TOGETHER TO LEAD THE WORLD IN STEADFAST RESISTANCE TO TOTALITARIANISM.
WHEN WE LAST MET, AMERICA WAS AGAIN "WALKING POINT" FOR THE WORLD -- IN OPERATION DESERT STORM. THOSE WERE PERILOUS TIMES, BUT AS AMERICANS WE SET OURSELVES A MISSION AND WE SAW IT THROUGH. SINCE OUR LAST EVENING
TOGETHER, WE LIBERATED KUWAIT. AND THE COLD WAR ENTERED THE DUSTBIN OF HISTORY.

TONIGHT WE FACE ANOTHER MISSION: TO RESTORE STRENGTH TO OUR ECONOMY; TO HELP PEOPLE LOOKING FOR WORK; TO ENSURE AMERICA'S LEADERSHIP IN THE WORLD.

I'VE MADE SOUND PROPOSALS -- NOTHING GLITZY OR GIMMICKY, JUST GOOD AMERICAN COMMON SENSE -- THAT WILL REINVIGORATE OUR ECONOMY. IT WILL TAKE TIME AND EFFORT BY US ALL. BUT IT WILL WORK -- AND THAT'S WHAT COUNTS.

I UNDERSTAND THE PARTICULAR BURDENS THAT YOU AS GOVERNORS BEAR, AND HOW HARD TIMES MAKE THOSE BURDENS ALL THE MORE SEVERE.

THE LEADERSHIP SHOWN BY GOVERNOR ASHCROFT, GOVERNOR CAMPBELL AND GOVERNOR ROMER IN EDUCATION IS A GOOD EXAMPLE OF THE COOPERATION TOUGH TIMES DEMAND. PLATO SAID THAT "THE BEGINNING IS THE MOST IMPORTANT PART OF THE WORK." THESE GOVERNORS, ALONG WITH ALL OF YOU, HAVE BEEN A TREMENDOUS HELP IN GETTING TODAY'S STUDENTS READY TO EXCEL IN TOMORROW'S WORKPLACE.

WE BEGAN THIS WORK MORE THAN TWO YEARS AGO, IN CHARLOTTESVILLE.

WE CAME TOGETHER, AS WE HAVE COME TOGETHER THIS EVENING, AS FELLOW CHIEF EXECUTIVES UNITED IN A SINGLE PURPOSE -- TO MAKE AMERICAN EDUCATION THE VERY BEST THAT IT CAN BE. WE SET GOALS, AND THESE LAUNCHED US ON A DECADE-LONG PATH TOWARD EDUCATIONAL EXCELLENCE. BUT WE SET SOMETHING ELSE IN CHARLOTTESVILLE: A TONE FOR PURSUING THE GOALS WE SHARE -- A TONE OF CIVILITY IN THE MIDST OF HONEST DISAGREEMENT, A TONE OF GOOD FAITH AND DETERMINATION. WE'VE MADE PROGRESS.

I'M NOT SATISFIED YET, AND NEITHER ARE YOU. BUT TOGETHER, WE HAVE BEGUN A MUCH-NEEDED REVOLUTION -- A NECESSARY REVOLUTION -- IN AMERICAN EDUCATION.

TONIGHT, AMERICANS SENSE THE NEED FOR COOPERATION MORE THAN EVER BEFORE -- THE KIND OF COOPERATION EXEMPLIFIED BY YOUR PRESENCE HERE. THEY EXPECT NOTHING LESS FROM US. I AM CONFIDENT WE WON'T LET THEM DOWN.

SO LET US RAISE OUR GLASSES: -- TO THE PARTNERSHIP BETWEEN THIS WHITE HOUSE AND EVERY STATE HOUSE IN THE NATION; -- AND TO WHAT WE CAN DO, TOGETHER, TO GUARANTEE A UNITED AMERICA, PROUD TO CLAIM HER LEADERSHIP IN THE WORLD.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: GOVERNORS STATE DINNER TOAST
FEBRUARY 2, 1992
8 P.M.

Vice President and Mrs. Quayle; Members of the Cabinet; Governors and their spouses; friends. ((I hope none of you feel you were brought here tonight under false pretenses. I heard that they told you you'd have dinner with the man everyone in Washington looks to for leadership. Unfortunately, Joe Gibbs couldn't make it.))

We meet this evening, not as Republicans or Democrats, but as Americans who want to work together for the good of our country. The hard times we're facing will end, but they will end sooner if we put aside partisanship for now and meet our mission squarely.

We know how to do it. We've done it before. For almost fifty years, Americans stood together to lead the world in steadfast resistance to totalitarianism. When we last met, America was again "walking point" for the world -- in Operation Desert Storm. Those were perilous times, but as Americans we set ourselves a mission and we saw it through. Since our last evening together, we liberated Kuwait. And the Cold War entered the dustbin of history.

Tonight we face another mission: to restore strength to our economy; to help people looking for work; to ensure America's leadership in the world.

I've made sound proposals -- nothing glitzy or gimmicky, just good American common sense -- that will reinvigorate our economy. It will take time and effort by us all. But it will work -- and that's what counts.

I understand the particular burdens that you as governors bear, and how hard times make those burdens all the more severe. The leadership shown by Governor Ashcroft, ^{Governor Campbell} and Governor Romer in education is a good example of the cooperation tough times demand. Plato said that "the beginning is the most important part of the work." These ^{governors} ~~two~~, along with all of you, have been a tremendous help in getting today's students ready to excel in tomorrow's workplace.

We began this work ^{more than two} ~~three~~ years ago, in Charlottesville. We came together, as we have come together this evening, as fellow chief executives united in a single purpose -- to make American education the very best that it can be. We set goals, and these launched us on a decade-long path toward educational excellence. But we set something else in Charlottesville: a tone for pursuing the goals we share -- a tone of civility in the midst of honest disagreement, a tone of good faith and determination. We've made progress. I'm not satisfied yet, and neither are you. But together, we have begun a much-needed revolution -- a necessary revolution -- in American education.

Tonight, Americans sense the need for cooperation more than ever before -- the kind of cooperation exemplified by your presence here. They expect nothing less from us. I am confident we won't let them down. So let us raise our glasses:

Vice President and Mrs. Quayle; Members of the Cabinet;

We meet this evening, not as Republicans or Democrats, but as Americans who want to work together for the good of our country. The hard times we're facing will end, but they will end sooner if we put aside partisanship for now and meet our mission squarely.

We know how to do it. We've done it before. For ^{over}~~almost~~ fifty years, Americans stood together to lead the world in steadfast resistance to totalitarianism. When we last met,
America was again walking point for the world -- in Operation Desert Storm. Those were perilous times, but as Americans we set ourselves a mission and we saw it through. Since our last evening together, we won the cold war. We liberated Kuwait.

Tonight we face another mission: to restore strength to our economy; to help people looking for work; to ensure America's leadership in the world.

I've made sound proposals -- nothing glitzy or gimmicky, just good American common sense -- that will reinvigorate our economy. It will take time, and effort by us all. But it will work -- and that's all that counts.

I understand the particular burdens that you as governors bear, and how hard times make those burdens all the more severe. That's why, in my State of the Union address, I asked Congress to put an end to unfinanced federal mandates. No more passing the buck: If Congress imposes a mandate, it must pay for it. Washington should worry about its own deficit, rather than imposing new burdens on the states -- or our already beleaguered taxpayers.

The leadership shown by Governor Ashcroft and Governor Romer in education is a good example of the cooperation tough times demand. These two, along with all of you, have been a tremendous help in getting today's students ready to excel in tomorrow's workplace.

Plato said that "the beginning is the most important part of the work." We began this work three years ago, in Charlottesville. PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: GOVERNORS STATE DINNER TOAST
FEBRUARY 2, 1992
8 P.M.

Vice President and Mrs. Quayle; Members of the Cabinet; Governors and their spouses; friends. ((Further acknowledgments, humor.))

We meet this evening, not as Republicans or Democrats, but as Americans who want to work together for the good of our country. The hard times we're facing will end, but they will end sooner if we put aside partisanship for now and meet our mission squarely.

We know how to do it. We've done it before. For almost fifty years, Americans stood together to lead the world in steadfast resistance to totalitarianism. When we last met,
America was again walking point for the world -- in Operation Desert Storm. Those were perilous times, but as Americans we set ourselves a mission and we saw it through. Since our last evening together, we won the cold war. We liberated Kuwait.

Tonight we face another mission: to restore strength to our economy; to help people looking for work; to ensure America's leadership in the world.

I've made sound proposals -- nothing glitzy or gimmicky,
just good American common sense -- that will reinvigorate our economy. It will take time, and effort by us all. But it will work -- and that's all that counts.

I understand the particular burdens that you as governors bear, and how hard times make those burdens all the more severe. That's why, in my State of the Union address, I asked Congress to put an end to unfinanced federal mandates. No more passing the buck: If Congress imposes a mandate, it must pay for it. Washington should worry about its own deficit, rather than imposing new burdens on the states -- or our already beleaguered taxpayers.

The leadership shown by Governor Ashcroft and Governor Romer in education is a good example of the cooperation tough times demand. These two, along with all of you, have been a tremendous help in getting today's students ready to excel in tomorrow's workplace.

Plato said that "the beginning is the most important part of the work." We began this work three years ago, in Charlottesville. We set goals, and these launched us on a decade-long path toward educational excellence. But we set something else in Charlottesville: a tone for pursuing the goals we share -- a tone of civility in the midst of honest disagreement, a tone of good faith and determination. We've made progress in American education. I'm not satisfied yet, and neither are you. But together, we can set off a much-needed revolution in American education -- a necessary revolution in American education.

Tonight, our countrymen sense the need for cooperation more than ever before -- the kind of cooperation exemplified by your presence here. They expect nothing less from us. I am confident we won't let them down. So let us raise our glasses:

-- to the partnership between this White House and every State House in the nation;

-- and to what we can do, together, to guarantee a united America, proud to claim her leadership in the world.

Vice President and Mrs. Quayle; Members of the Cabinet;

We meet this evening, not as Republicans or Democrats, but as Americans who want to work together for the good of our country. The hard times we're facing will end, but they will end sooner if we put aside partisanship for now and meet our mission squarely.

We know how to do it. We've done it before. For almost fifty years, Americans stood together to lead the world in steadfast resistance to totalitarianism. When we last met,
America was again walking point for the world -- in Operation Desert Storm. Those were perilous times, but as Americans we set ourselves a mission and we saw it through. Since our last evening together, ~~we won the cold war~~ entered the dust bin of history (D²) We liberated Kuwait.

Tonight we face another mission: to restore strength to our

I've made sound proposals -- nothing glitzy or gimmicky,
just good American common sense -- that will reinvigorate our economy. It will take time, and effort by us all. But it will work -- and that's all that counts.

I understand the particular burdens that you as governors bear, and how hard times make those burdens all the more severe. That's why, in my State of the Union address, I asked Congress to put an end to unfinanced federal mandates. No more passing the buck: If Congress imposes a mandate, it must pay for it.

Washington should worry about its own deficit, rather than imposing new burdens on the states -- or our already beleaguered taxpayers. (OMB Haskell x 6190) That's also why we've expanded a number of programs that help the states -- in education and highways, for example -- and proposed a revised Block Grant.

The leadership shown by ~~Governor Ashcroft and Governor Romer~~ a member of you in the room in education is a good example of the cooperation tough times demand. These two, along with all of you, have been a tremendous help in getting today's students ready to excel in tomorrow's workplace. "by the nation's Governor - more"

Plato said that "the beginning is the most important part of the work." We began this work three years ago, in Charlottesville. We set goals, and these launched us on a decade-long path toward educational excellence. But we set something else in Charlottesville: a tone for pursuing the goals we share -- a tone of civility in the midst of honest disagreement, a tone of good faith and determination. PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: GOVERNORS STATE DINNER TOAST
FEBRUARY 2, 1992
8 P.M.

Vice President and Mrs. Quayle; Members of the Cabinet; Governors and their spouses; friends. ((Further acknowledgments, humor.))

We meet this evening, not as Republicans or Democrats, but as Americans who want to work together for the good of our country. The hard times we're facing will end, but they will end sooner if we put aside partisanship for now and meet our mission squarely.

We know how to do it. We've done it before. For almost fifty years, Americans stood together to lead the world in steadfast resistance to totalitarianism. When we last met,
America was again walking point for the world -- in Operation Desert Storm. Those were perilous times, but as Americans we set ourselves a mission and we saw it through. Since our last evening together, we won the cold war. We liberated Kuwait.

Tonight we face another mission: to restore strength to our economy; to help people looking for work; to ensure America's leadership in the world.

I've made sound proposals -- nothing glitzy or gimmicky,
just good American common sense -- that will reinvigorate our economy. It will take time, and effort by us all. But it will work -- and that's all that counts.

I understand the particular burdens that you as governors bear, and how hard times make those burdens all the more severe. That's why, in my State of the Union address, I asked Congress to put an end to unfinanced federal mandates. No more passing the buck: If Congress imposes a mandate, it must pay for it.

Washington should worry about its own deficit, rather than imposing new burdens on the states -- or our already beleaguered taxpayers. That's also why we've expanded a number of programs that help the states -- in ~~transportation~~ education, highways, for example -- and proposed

a revised Block Grant.

Plato said that "the beginning is the most important part of the work." We began this work three years ago, in Charlottesville. We set goals, and these launched us on a decade-long path toward educational excellence. But we set something else in Charlottesville: a tone for pursuing the goals we share -- a tone of civility in the midst of honest disagreement, a tone of good faith and determination. We've made progress in American education. I'm not satisfied yet, and neither are you. But together, we can set off a much-needed revolution in American education -- a necessary revolution in American education.

Tonight, our countrymen sense the need for cooperation more than ever before -- the kind of cooperation exemplified by your presence here. They expect nothing less from us. I am confident we won't let them down. So let us raise our glasses:

-- to the partnership between this White House and every State House in the nation;

-- and to what we can do, together, to guarantee a united America, proud to claim her leadership in the world.
