PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: INAUGURAL ANNIVERSARY GALA
Monday, February 3, 1992
Kennedy Center
9:15 p.m.

Thank you, Larry [Bathgate]. And thanks to everyone for joining Barbara and me on this great night.

I'd like to acknowledge Boone Pickens, that shy and retiring oilman, for his friendship and help through the years. Clayton Yeutter and Jeannie Austin -- what can I say? Your hard work has paid off -- and it will pay even larger dividends this year, when we keep the White House in Republican hands and build a Republican majority in Congress.

You know, Barbara tells me I'm getting a little paranoid about New Hampshire. She said not to take it personally when the Union-Leader ran a headline that said: "The sap is running again." \\ But, enough syrupy rhetoric. \\

Hey, I could have been a big hit here tonight, too. But I couldn't find a pair of yellow shoes. \\

Barbara and I are glad to be here with so many good friends -- not just friends of ours, but of the Republican party. We're sorry we couldn't join you last year; but I wouldn't have missed this year's celebration for anything. Friends like you make my life and my work a whole lot easier.

Of course, there's always at least one party pooper. I hear that when one of the guests was told that the last speaker was going to be the most important man in Washington, she said, "But

I thought Joe Gibbs went to Disneyworld!" \\

One of the things we celebrate tonight is your support. You know, when the Eagles were first formed back in 1975, less than a third of all Americans identified themselves as Republicans. For all but four of the following 17 years, Republicans have occupied the White House. Today, for the first time since modern polling began, more Americans call themselves Republican than Democrat - - and that's great news for our great party.

People side with the G.O.P. because the G.O.P. supports their values -- responsibility, opportunity, growth, decency, and strength. They've joined our party because you have worked hard -- contributed your time, your effort, your money. That's why this November, at the only poll that really matters, Republicans will lead our nation into the 21st century.

This is where you will play the critical role. I want to get America on the move, but I don't always get the help I need from Capitol Hill. For three years now, I have proposed growth packages, but Congress hasn't acted. I have proposed comprehensive crime legislation -- Congress hasn't acted. I've proposed the most sweeping educational reform ever -- but Congress hasn't acted. Comprehensive Financial Services reform, Tort reform, Civil Justice reform, a National Energy Strategy -- Congress hasn't acted.

"Hasn't acted" won't put America back to work. "Hasn't acted" won't get our economy back on track. "Hasn't acted" is just plain bad news for this nation.

I've called on the Congress to put aside partisanship just long enough to pass my economic growth plan. I gave them until March 20. America wants to move into the 21st Century. America wants action.

[Thinking about our competition: I must admit I did watch the first debate among the Democratic candidates on NBC -- and I was impressed by the clear-thinking, common sense, decisiveness, and communications skills. But unfortunately for the Democrats, Tom Brokaw hasn't declared his candidacy. \ \]

Tonight, let me assure you: I have never been more confident. Let's remember who we are. We are Americans. We won the Cold War. We initiated a new age of freedom. We will not settle for second best. Ask people on every continent, in every country, and they will tell you: the United States is the undisputed leader of the world.

Barbara and I thank you again for all you do for us, for this party, and for this nation. May God bless you all.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: INAUGURAL ANNIVERSARY GALA
Monday, February 3, 1992 9:15 p.m.

Thank you, Larry [Bathgate]. And thanks to everyone for joining Barbara and me on this great night.

~~Before I start~~, I'd like to acknowledge Boone Pickens, that shy and retiring oilman, for his friendship and help through the years. Clayton Yeutter and Jeannie Austin -- what can I say? Your hard work has paid off -- and it will pay even larger dividends this year, when we keep the White House in Republican hands and build a Republican majority in Congress.

You know, Barbara tells me I'm getting a little paranoid about New Hampshire. She said not to take it personally when the Union-Leader ran a headline that said: "The sap is running again." But enough syrupy rhetoric. ~~But I can't help it -- I'm tired of people picking on Jerry Brown.~~ \ \

Barbara and I are glad to be here with so many good friends -- not just friends of ours, but of the Republican party. We're sorry we couldn't join you last year; but I wouldn't have missed this year's celebration for anything. Friends like you make my life and my work a whole lot easier.

Of course, there's always at least one party pooper. I hear that when one of the guests was told that the last speaker was going to be the most important man in Washington, she said, "But

I thought Joe Gibbs went to Disneyworld!" \ \

One of the things we celebrate tonight is your support. You know, when the Eagles were first formed back in 1975, less than a third of all Americans identified themselves as Republicans. For all but four of the following 17 years, Republicans have occupied the White House. Today, for the first time since modern polling began, more Americans call themselves Republican than Democrat.

And that's great news for our great Party.

People side with the G.O.P. because the G.O.P. supports their values -- responsibility, opportunity, growth, decency, and strength. They have joined the ~~Republican~~ ^{our} party because you have worked hard -- contributed your time, your effort, your money. That's why this November, at the only poll that really matters, Republicans will lead our ~~change~~ ^{nation} into the 21st century.

This is where you will play the critical role. I want to get America on the move, but I don't always get the help I need from Capitol Hill. For three years now, I have proposed growth packages, but Congress hasn't acted. I have proposed comprehensive crime legislation -- ~~but we still don't have the laws we want and need.~~ ^{Congress hasn't acted.} I've proposed the most sweeping educational reform ever -- but Congress ~~hasn't acted~~ ^{hasn't acted}. I have ~~proposed~~ ^{proposed} financial services reform, Tort reform, Civil Justice reform, ~~and~~ ^{and} a National Energy Strategy -- ~~you guessed it, nothing.~~ ^{Congress hasn't acted.}

Comprehensive

~~I've called on the Congress to put aside partisanship. The roll call of shame contains many more items, but you get just long enough to pass my ^{econ} growth plan. Gave them until March 23. America ~~the idea.~~ ^{wants} America wants to move into the 21st Century. ~~Now, we~~ ^{action} just need a Congress that cares as much about this country as you do -- a Republican Congress for America's new century.~~

[Thinking about our competition: I must admit I did watch

"Hasn't acted" about put America back to work.
"Hasn't acted" get our economy back on track.
"Hasn't acted" is just..."

the first debate among the Democratic candidates on NBC -- and I was impressed by the clear-thinking, common sense, decisiveness, and communications skills. Unfortunately for the Democrats Nixon's declared his candidacy. But enough about Tom Brokaw. \ \]

Americans from coast to coast have told me they care about one thing: getting our economy moving at full speed. Last week I stood in the Capitol to speak to the nation. I laid out a simple challenge: pass an urgent, common sense set of growth proposals by March 20 -- and get to work on measures that will ensure our long-term success. We can't succeed overnight, but if we stay focused on our goal, and if we work day by day to encourage enterprise, we will succeed.

Now, I need your help. Contact your Senators and Representatives. Tell them to adopt my growth initiatives -- now. And let them know that if they don't act by March 20 -- you will act on November 3. I find it ironic that some members now complain that I'm trying to rush them. They've had three years. I think that's more than long enough.

But let me assure you. I am never more confident about our success. ~~We will win. This paralysis will not stand.~~ Let's remember who we are. We are Americans. We won the Cold War. We initiated a new age of freedom. Ask people on every continent and country, and they will tell you: Americans ^{is} ~~are~~ the undisputed leaders of the world. We will not settle for second best. ~~And Republicans won't settle for empty promises and hollow excuses. Let's get moving.~~

Barbara and I thank you again for all you do for us, for this party, and for this nation. May God Bless you all.

Circle the date.

I want Congress to pass this package by March 20. But you know Washington.

~~A mere request from a President won't get politicians in gear.~~ Things have got to get a little noisier. They need to hear from you, loud and clear.

Decision day is six weeks from Friday. Between now and then, get in touch with your Congressional delegation. Tell your Representatives and Senators: No more delays. No more games.

No excuses. We won the land war in the Gulf in four days. The House took exactly one day to close down its bank after the rest of the nation learned about congressional check bouncing. The day after my State of the Union address, the House discussed the Home Shopping Network for four hours. So don't ~~let~~ raise your voice tell me Congress ~~can't~~ can't pass a simple, urgent growth package in 44 days.

Now, let me warn you: I suspect some in Congress care more about November 3 than March 20. They will try to delay my programs, or they will send up an assortment of dusty old bills that I can't sign. They'll accuse me of holding back the march of time if I don't raise taxes. But I won't budge. My plan will work. It won't raise taxes. It won't let rates ~~add to our deficit.~~ get defense. It won't let

But it will help every business in this room.

Let's make March 20, 1992 as important a deadline as January 15, 1991. Now, it's time to act again. It's time to liberate the people who give life to the American Dream. — and you're right there in

I've also proposed an ambitious long-term agenda, to ensure that our economy will lead the world in decades to come. Let me touch upon one critical issue in that plan, health care.

Then we get our sights and snapped into action. We achieved our objectives.

We need Congress to act — and we need it now.

now and lift this country up.

I'm counting on you. America is counting on you. Don't let Congress off the hook. Tell them March 20 — America for what it is

I know health care has become a problem for many of you: It just costs too much. Tomorrow, I will announce my comprehensive health-care package, and I know you will like it -- a lot.

When you get right down to it, we have two choices as a nation. We can adopt a system that has been a proven failure all over the world: nationalized health care. Or we can reform our present system, which has plenty of faults, but which also provides the highest quality care on earth.

Nationalized health care is like nationalized ~~weather~~ ^{ing the weather.} care: You can promise sunny skies -- you just can't deliver them. Nationalized health care ~~can~~ ^{everything for everybody,} promise ~~anything,~~ but it ~~can~~ ^{only} can guarantee ~~only~~ long lines, ~~lack of~~ ^{indifferent} service and huge new tax bills. If you want health care modeled after the local motor vehicles office -- support nationalized health care.

If, on the other hand, you want the freedom to choose your own doctor; if you want to hold the line on prices by encouraging price competition; if you want everyone in America to have access to health insurance coverage -- push for my plan.

Finally, I'd like your help on one other item. I want Congress to ~~stop~~ ^{end the binge} spending ~~so much~~. My new budget holds the line on new spending, and it pulls the trap door on a host of federal programs -- 246, to be exact -- that ~~belong on Saturday Night~~ ^{regardless of a noble sounding title,} ~~are~~ ^{you are simply not indispensable.} ~~not on your tax bill.~~ ^{from time to time,}

Encourage Congressional spendaholics to seek help. Tell them to give me a line-item veto, so I can say no to silly expenditures -- before Congress feels the urge to spend again.

And tell Congress to stop imposing mandates on others without paying for those mandates. For far too many state and local governments, and far too many businesses, mandated benefits mean mandated deficits. And that just isn't right.

I've been all over the country in recent months. People can't wait to get this economy moving. Sure, they see bad news; they know some who have lost their jobs; they may worry that the bad times might claim their own jobs. But Americans also have seen the miracles of our age: the Berlin Wall becoming a museum attraction, and the Russian hammer and sickle becoming a relic. They've seen a Cold War end, and a new era begin. They know the world would enjoy none of these things if Americans hadn't decided long ago that we wouldn't accept anything less.

Together, we can help start a new industrial revolution in America -- one that builds on our natural optimism, ambition, determination and pride.

That revolution will start a lot sooner if we persuade 535 people in Washington to meet my March 20 deadline. make it a red letter day. Circle that date on your calendars. I see it as a day of bipartisan triumph -- people doing the right thing at the right time. But I ask you to make it clear that if Congress doesn't act on March 20, you will act on November 3.

Thanks for your help. Thanks for your support. And thanks for keeping America on the move.

May God bless you and the United States of America.

Thank you, Larry [Bathgate]. What a wonderful evening!

First, let me thank Boone Pickens for his friendship and help through the years. \\ To Clayton Yeutter, our outgoing Chairman; to Rick Bond, our new Chairman; and to Jeannie Austin - - what can I say? These are not easy times for our country; but this is no time for gloom and doom. I have proposed a comprehensive action plan for growth. It avoids the popular budget busting approach of many on the other side. It stimulates home building and other industries. It strengthens family and it will not raise the interest rates nor raise inflation.

I will continue to challenge Congress to do what is right and best for this country. Pass our growth package by March 20th. Then we can go back to the political wars, but let's get something positive done for our country. America wants to move into the 21st century. America wants action -- and it wants it now. \\

These are fascinating times. Saturday's meeting with Russia's President Boris Yeltsin once again brought home the dramatic changes in the world.

We no longer have Imperial Communism, expansive communism, as an enemy. Instead, we are dealing with a new and democratic Russia and we have a stake in seeing President Yeltsin and his democratic allies in the other Republics succeed.

I've proposed the most sweeping educational reform ever -- but Congress hasn't acted. Comprehensive Financial Services reform, Tort reform, Civil Justice reform, a National Energy Strategy -- Congress hasn't acted.

"Hasn't acted" won't put America back to work. "Hasn't acted" won't get our economy back on track. "Hasn't acted" is just plain bad news for this nation.

I've called on the Congress to put aside partisanship just long enough to pass my economic growth plan. I gave them until March 20. America wants to move into the 21st Century. America wants action.

[Thinking about our competition: I must admit I did watch the first debate among the Democratic candidates on NBC -- and I was impressed by the clear-thinking, common sense, decisiveness, and communications skills. But unfortunately for the Democrats, Tom Brokaw hasn't declared his candidacy. \\]

Tonight, let me assure you: I have never been more confident. Let's remember who we are. We are Americans. We won the Cold War. We initiated a new age of freedom. We will not settle for second best. Ask people on every continent, in every country, and they will tell you: the United States is the undisputed leader of the world.

Barbara and I thank you again for all you do for us, for this party, and for this nation. May God bless you all.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: INAUGURAL ANNIVERSARY GALA
Monday, February 3, 1992 9:15 p.m.
Kennedy Center Opera House

Thank you, Larry [Bathgate]. And thanks to everyone for joining Barbara and me on this great night.

Before I start, I'd like to acknowledge Boone Pickens, that shy and retiring oilman, for his friendship and help through the years. Clayton Yeutter and Jeannie Austin -- what can I say? Your hard work has paid off -- and it will pay even larger dividends this year, when we keep the White House in Republican hands and build a Republican majority in Congress.

You know, Barbara tells me I'm getting a little paranoid about New Hampshire. She said not to take it personally when the Union-Leader ran a headline that said: "The sap is running again." \\ But I can't help it -- I'm tired of people picking on Jerry Brown. \\

Barbara and I are glad to be here with so many good friends -- not just friends of ours, but of the Republican party. We're sorry we couldn't join you last year; but I wouldn't have missed this year's celebration for anything. Friends like you make my life and my work a whole lot easier.

Of course, there's always at least one party pooper. I hear that when one of the guests was told that the last speaker was going to be the most important man in Washington, she said, "But

I thought Joe Gibbs went to Disneyworld!" \\

One of the things we celebrate tonight is your support. You know, when the Eagles were first formed back in 1975, less than a third of all Americans identified themselves as Republicans. For all but four of the following 17 years, Republicans have occupied the White House. Today, for the first time since modern polling began, more Americans call themselves Republican than Democrat.

People side with the G.O.P. because the G.O.P. supports their values -- responsibility, opportunity, growth, decency, and strength. They have joined the Republican party because you have worked hard -- contributed your time, your effort, your money. That's why this November, at the only poll that really matters, Republicans will lead our charge into the 21st century.

This is where you will play the critical role. I want to get America on the move, but I don't always get the help I need from Capitol Hill. For three years now, I have proposed growth packages, but Congress hasn't acted. I have proposed comprehensive crime legislation -- but we still don't have the laws we want and need. I've proposed the most sweeping educational reform ever -- but Congress won't act. I have outlined a National Energy Strategy -- you guessed it, nothing.

The roll call of shame contains many more items, but you get the idea. America wants to move into the 21st Century. Now, we just need a Congress that cares as much about this country as you do -- a Republican Congress for America's new century.

[Thinking about our competition: I must admit I did watch

the first debate among the Democratic candidates on NBC -- and I was impressed by the clear-thinking, common sense, decisiveness, and communications skills. But enough about Tom Brokaw. \\]

Americans from coast to coast have told me they care about one thing: getting our economy moving at full speed. Last week I stood in the Capitol to speak to the nation. I laid out a simple challenge: pass an urgent, common sense set of growth proposals by March 20 -- and get to work on measures that will ensure our long-term success. We can't succeed overnight, but if we stay focused on our goal, and if we work day by day to encourage enterprise, we will succeed.

Now, I need your help. Contact your Senators and Representatives. Tell them to adopt my growth initiatives -- now. And let them know that if they don't act by March 20 -- you will act on November 3. I find it ironic that some members now complain that I'm trying to rush them. They've had three years. I think that's more than long enough.

But let me assure you. We will win. This paralysis will not stand. Let's remember who we are. We are Americans. We won the Cold War. We initiated a new age of freedom. Ask people on every continent and country, and they will tell you: Americans are the undisputed leaders of the world. We will not settle for second best. And Republicans won't settle for empty promises and hollow excuses. Let's get moving.

Barbara and I thank you again for all you do for us, for this party, and for this nation. May God Bless you all.

I'd like to acknowledge Boone Pickens, that shy and retiring oilman, for his friendship and help through the years. Clayton Yeutter and Jeannie Austin -- what can I say? Your hard work has paid off -- and it will pay even larger dividends this year, when we keep the White House in Republican hands and build a Republican majority in Congress.

You know, Barbara tells me I'm getting a little paranoid about New Hampshire. She said not to take it personally when the Union-Leader ran a headline that said: "The sap is running again." \\ But..enough syrupy rhetoric. \\

Barbara and I are glad to be here with so many good friends -- not just friends of ours, but of the Republican party. We're sorry we couldn't join you last year; but I wouldn't have missed this year's celebration for anything. Friends like you make my life and my work a whole lot easier.

Of course, there's always at least one party pooper. I hear that when one of the guests was told that the last speaker was going to be the most important man in Washington, she said, "But

I thought Joe Gibbs went to Disneyworld!" \\

One of the things we celebrate tonight is your support. You know, when the Eagles were first formed back in 1975, less than a third of all Americans identified themselves as Republicans. For all but four of the following 17 years, Republicans have occupied the White House. Today, for the first time since modern polling began, more Americans call themselves Republican than Democrat - - and that's great news for our great party.

People side with the G.O.P. because the G.O.P. supports their values -- responsibility, opportunity, growth, decency, and strength. They've joined our party because you have worked hard -- contributed your time, your effort, your money. That's why this November, at the only poll that really matters, Republicans will lead our nation into the 21st century.

This is where you will play the critical role. I want to get America on the move, but I don't always get the help I need from Capitol Hill. For three years now, I have proposed growth packages, but Congress hasn't acted. I have proposed " comprehensive crime legislation -- Congress hasn't acted. I've proposed the most sweeping educational reform ever -- but " Congress hasn't acted. Comprehensive Financial Services reform, Tort reform, Civil Justice reform, a National Energy Strategy -- Congress hasn't acted.

"Hasn't acted" won't put America back to work. "Hasn't acted" won't get our economy back on track. "Hasn't acted" is just plain bad news for this nation.

I've called on the Congress to put aside partisanship just long enough to pass my economic growth plan. I gave them until March 20. America wants to move into the 21st Century. America wants action.

[Thinking about our competition: I must admit I did watch the first debate among the Democratic candidates on NBC -- and I was impressed by the clear-thinking, common sense, decisiveness, and communications skills. But unfortunately for the Democrats, Tom Brokaw hasn't declared his candidacy. \ \]

Tonight, let me assure you: I have never been more confident. Let's remember who we are. We are Americans. We won the Cold War. We initiated a new age of freedom. We will not settle for second best. Ask people on every continent, in every country, and they will tell you: the United States is the undisputed leader of the world.

Barbara and I thank you again for all you do for us, for this party, and for this nation. May God bless you all..

That's why this November, at the only poll that really matters, Republicans will lead our charge into the 21st century.

This is where you will play the critical role. I want to get America on the move, but I don't always get the help I need from Capitol Hill. For three years now, I have proposed growth packages, but Congress hasn't acted. I have proposed comprehensive crime legislation -- but we still don't have the laws we want and need. I've proposed the most sweeping educational reform ever -- but Congress won't act. I have outlined a National Energy Strategy -- you guessed it, nothing.

The roll call of shame contains many more items, but you get the idea. America wants to move into the 21st Century. Now, we just need a Congress that cares as much about this country as you do -- a Republican Congress for America's new century.

[Thinking about our competition: I must admit I did watch

the first debate among the Democratic candidates on NBC -- and I was impressed by the clear-thinking, common sense, decisiveness, and communications skills. But enough about Tom Brokaw. \\]

Americans from coast to coast have told me they care about one thing: getting our economy moving at full speed. Last week I stood in the Capitol to speak to the nation. I laid out a simple challenge: pass an urgent, common sense set of growth proposals by March 20 -- and get to work on measures that will ensure our long-term success. We can't succeed overnight, but if we stay focused on our goal, and if we work day by day to encourage enterprise, we will succeed.

Now, I need your help. Contact your Senators and Representatives. Tell them to adopt my growth initiatives -- now. And let them know that if they don't act by March 20 -- you will act on November 3. I find it ironic that some members now complain that I'm trying to rush them. They've had three years. I think that's more than long enough.

But let me assure you. We will win. This paralysis will not stand. Let's remember who we are. We are Americans. We won the Cold War. We initiated a new age of freedom. Ask people on every continent and country, and they will tell you: Americans are the undisputed leaders of the world. We will not settle for second best. And Republicans won't settle for empty promises and hollow excuses. Let's get moving.

Barbara and I thank you again for all you do for us, for this party, and for this nation. May God Bless you all.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: INAUGURAL ANNIVERSARY GALA
Monday, February 3, 1992 9:15 p.m.
Kennedy Center Opera House

Thank you, Larry [Bathgate]. And thanks to everyone for joining Barbara and me on this great night.

Before I start, I'd like to acknowledge Boone Pickens, that shy and retiring oilman, for his friendship and help through the years. Clayton Yeutter and Jeannie Austin -- what can I say? Your hard work has paid off -- and it will pay even larger dividends this year, when we keep the White House in Republican hands and build a Republican majority in Congress.

You know, Barbara tells me I'm getting a little paranoid about New Hampshire. She said not to take it personally when the Union-Leader ran a headline that said: "The sap is running again." \\ But I can't help it -- I'm tired of people picking on Jerry Brown. \\

Barbara and I are glad to be here with so many good friends -- not just friends of ours, but of the Republican party. We're sorry we couldn't join you last year; but I wouldn't have missed this year's celebration for anything. Friends like you make my life and my work a whole lot easier.

Of course, there's always at least one party pooper. I hear that when one of the guests was told that the last speaker was going to be the most important man in Washington, she said, "But

I thought Joe Gibbs went to Disneyworld!" \\

One of the things we celebrate tonight is your support. You know, when the Eagles were first formed back in 1975, less than a third of all Americans identified themselves as Republicans. For all but four of the following 17 years, Republicans have occupied the White House. Today, for the first time since modern polling began, more Americans call themselves Republican than Democrat.

People side with the G.O.P. because the G.O.P. supports their values -- responsibility, opportunity, growth, decency, and strength. They have joined the Republican party because you have worked hard -- contributed your time, your effort, your money. That's why this November, at the only poll that really matters, Republicans will lead our charge into the 21st century.
