PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: HOWARD JARVIS TAXPAYERS ASSN.
UNIVERSAL CITY HILTON
UNIVERSAL CITY, CALIFORNIA
SATURDAY, JUNE 20, 1992
[TIME]

[Acknowledgments, humor] Estelle Jarvis, it is a special privilege to be with you and with members of the Howard Jarvis Taxpayers Association. Estelle, your late husband was a true pioneer. In the little Utah mining town where he grew up, he learned from his parents to love freedom, to take on responsibility, to dream dreams as big as the desert horizon. His political credo was simple and profound. He said, "Our freedom depends on four words: Government must be limited." \\

Here in California 14 years ago, Howard Jarvis won a famous victory -- the tax limitation plan called Proposition 13. History will mark this as the first shot in the Reagan Revolution. \\ And we're still feeling the reverberations today as we keep fighting to expand our freedom and hold back unnecessary burdens of government. \\

Our revolution isn't the work of a single presidency -- it's the mission for a whole generation of reform. Since 1980, we've lowered taxes, made them flatter and fairer. We've made landmark reforms to get big government regulation off the backs of our families and businesses. \\

But we've got much more to do. With tax-and-spend liberals still in charge of Congress, government keeps growing. Congress now spends more than 25 percent of what people in this country work to produce: That's right, 25 percent of the Gross Domestic Product. The habit of deficit spending has brought us to the point that this year, every family of four in the United States on average will have to pay $3,300 just in interest payments on the national debt. Those facts alone tell us we're not really as free a society as we can and should be. You and I know that government is too big -- and it spends too much. \\\ become Americans are clamoring for stricter limits on the power and cost of government. From coast to coast, people are mobilizing for change. The air is crackling with the feeling that Howard Jarvis made his battle cry: "I'm mad as hell." \\\

What it comes down to is this: Ordinary Americans are plain fed up with pressure to be "politically correct." Aren't you tired of hearing the liberal know-it-alls drone on, demanding that you believe things that defy common sense? Aren't you sick of moralistic demands that you surrender to some bureaucracy freedoms that enabled our ancestors to make this country great?

Maybe you're like millions of other Americans. You shop at Wal-Mart, you eat at Big Boy. You've worked all your life to get your kids through school and pay off a mortgage. You know it's not only your right -- it's your duty to your family -- to fight high taxes and government waste. And when the liberal elitists ridicule you and say we have social problems because of you -- because you're "greedy" -- well, naturally, you stand up and fight back. \\\

Our fighting spirit has brought us to a turning point.

We're on the threshold of something big. We'll have to put up with a few more months of frustration from the lame-duck liberal Congress, but after that I see a clear road and powerful acceleration for the changes we want.

We're rolling back needless restrictions on innovation and job creation through my moratorium on new federal regulations. \\

I'm pushing hard to reform our civil justice system.

Americans want to stop nuisance lawsuits. \\ ((Someone asked me the other day, if an apple a day keeps the doctor away, what works for lawyers?)) \\ \\

I'm committed as strongly as ever to win more tax relief and reform. \\ We need to lift the dead weight that punishes homeowners and prevents more investment and job creation -- those sky-high taxes on capital gains. \\ We need to enact my other proposals to ease tax burdens on families and homeowners. \\

I'm fighting for fundamental change in our education and welfare systems. Parents deserve to exercise all their rights in their children's education. Now it's time for parents to have real financial freedom to choose their kids' schools -- public, private or religious. \\ More involvement by parents, restored respect for traditional values, and more competition in the marketplace will renew our whole system of education. \\

Right now, we have a welfare system designed by liberal politicians and social theorists. It's a burden on taxpayers, but that's not the worst of it. Much of the time, this system hurts the very people it claims to help. The system punishes single mothers who want to work their way out of dependency. The system takes benefits away from single mothers who get married. Because of our current system, countless young women and children are denied the stability of a two-parent home.

I'm working to transform this failed welfare system into something that makes sense -- into something all Americans can be proud of. \\ Right now, I'm working with tough-minded, creative governors like Pete Wilson here, and Tommy Thompson in Wisconsin, to give them flexibility under federal laws to turn their state welfare programs around. With governors in all 50 states like Pete and Tommy, we'd soon be making major progress fostering the dignity and the rewards of work. \\ And we'd help a lot more families come together and stay together. \\

My proposal for health insurance reform is a model of the new way of thinking about welfare. The big news media haven't told you much about my plan -- they're too busy beating the drum for that stale old idea of a Ted Kennedy-style national system of socialized medicine. \\ Like my education plan, my health care proposal would help working people and needy people with vouchers and tax credits -- employing free markets and choice. \\

Reforming education and welfare alone would go a long way toward solving our fiscal crisis. When we get these reforms in place, we will realistically be able to balance the federal budget without raising taxes -- and without piling new burdens onto state and local taxpayers. \\ fiscal discipline with the power of the United States Constitution. \\ Now more than ever, it's clear that Americans want a Balanced Budget Amendment. \\ Forty-four states follow some form of balanced budget requirement. Most state legislatures are on record supporting a federal Balanced Budget Amendment.

Standing in our way is the liberal hard core of the Democratic Congress -- barely more than one-third of the membership. And our kids and grandkids won't live in the shadow of nuclear war that haunted us for forty years. \\ Today, ordinary Russians thank God that ordinary Americans stood fast against the Communist dictatorship that threatened us and oppressed them. \\

If you have the will, if you have perseverance, it's never too soon or too late to make a difference. Howard Jarvis spent 16 years fighting for the concept of Proposition 13. He was 76 years old when at last he won -- when he shook the political establishment of this entire country.

I've highlighted for you my agenda for a new term, working with a new Congress: Revolutionize our schools -- put parents and kids and traditional excellence ahead of bureaucrats. Overhaul the welfare system -- give needy people opportunity instead of dependency. Adopt a balanced budget amendment. And hold the line against new spending and taxes. \\

With a new Congress that shares our values, we can use the next four years to set our country on the right track for the next forty years. \\ With your help, I know we can. \\ Thank you. God bless you and the United States of America. \\

Can I count on each one of you to get to work on this? \\ Can I count on you to deliver the liberals some bad news this November? \\ \\ Thanks! \\ I knew I could! \\

Before I finish, I want say a word about that historic summit meeting Boris Yeltsin and I just completed in Washington. There were thousands of visitors on the White House lawn to welcome him, the first democratically elected president of Russia. I wish each and every one of you could have been there to join us. That's because it's patriotic people like you who helped make this moment possible. Now the Russian people can worship freely, compete in free markets, and choose their own government. And our kids and grandkids won't live in the shadow of nuclear war that haunted us for forty years. \\ Today, ordinary Russians thank God that ordinary Americans stood fast

against the Communist dictatorship that threatened us and oppressed them. \\

If you have the will, if you have perseverance, it's never too soon or too late to make a difference. Howard Jarvis spent 16 years fighting for the concept of Proposition 13. He was 76 years old when at last he won -- when he shook the political establishment of this entire country.

I've highlighted for you my agenda for a new term, working with a new Congress: Revolutionize our schools -- put parents and kids and traditonal excellence ahead of bureaucrats. Overhaul the welfare system -- give needy people opportunity instead of dependency. Adopt a balanced budget amendment. And hold the line against new spending, and taxes.

Also refer to proposal for health care reform (ACA) and unnecessary regulation.
(Gray)

With a new Congress that shares our values, we can use the next four years to set our country on the right track for the next forty years. \\ With your help, I know we can. \\ Thank you. God bless you and the United States of America. \\

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS:

HOWARD JARVIS TAXPAYERS ASSN.
 UNIVERSAL CITY HILTON
 UNIVERSAL CITY, CALIFORNIA
 SATURDAY, JUNE 20, 1992
 [TIME]

[Acknowledgments, humor] Estelle Jarvis, it is a special privilege to be with you and with members of the Howard Jarvis Taxpayers Association. Estelle, your late husband was a true pioneer. In the ^{SMALL} ~~little~~ Utah mining town where he grew up, he learned from his parents to love freedom, to take on responsibility, to dream dreams as big as the desert horizon. His political credo was simple and profound. He said, "Our freedom depends on four words: Government must be limited." \ \

Here in California 14 years ago, Howard Jarvis won a famous victory -- the tax limitation plan called Proposition 13.

[History will mark this as the first shot in the Reagan Revolution.] \ \ ^{WORKING} ~~And~~ we're still feeling the reverberations today as we keep ~~fighting~~ to expand our freedom and hold back ~~THE~~ unnecessary burdens of government. \ \

[Our revolution isn't the work of a single presidency -- it's the mission for a whole generation of reform.] Since 1980, we've lowered taxes, made them flatter and fairer. We've made landmark reforms to get big government regulation off the backs of our families and businesses. \ \

But we've got much more to do. With tax-and-spend liberals ^{CONTROL} still in ~~charge~~ of Congress, government keeps growing. Congress now spends more than 25 percent of what people in this country

IS THIS CONGRESS OR ALL GOVERNMENT SPENDING (STATE, LOCAL)?

work to produce: That's right, 25 percent of the Gross Domestic Product. The habit of deficit spending has brought us to the point that this year, every family of four in the United States on average will have to pay $3,300 ~~last~~ in interest payments on the national debt. Those facts alone tell us we're not really as free a society as we can and should be. You and I know that government is too big -- and it spends too much. \\\

Americans are clamoring for stricter limits on the power and cost of government. From coast to coast, people are mobilizing for change. [The air is crackling with the feeling that Howard Jarvis made his battle cry: "I'm mad as hell." \\\]

~~What it comes down to is this:~~ Ordinary Americans are ~~plain~~ fed up with pressure to be "politically correct." Aren't you tired of hearing the liberal know-it-alls drone on, demanding that you believe things that defy common sense? Aren't you sick of moralistic demands that you surrender to some bureaucracy freedoms that enabled our ancestors to make this country great?

Maybe you're like millions of other Americans. You shop at Wal-Mart, you eat at Big Boy. You've worked all your life to get your kids through school and pay off a mortgage. You know it's not only your right -- it's your duty to your family -- to fight high taxes and government waste. And when the liberal elitists ridicule you and say we have social problems because of you -- because you're "greedy" -- well, naturally, you stand up and fight back. \\\

Our fighting spirit has brought us to a turning point.

We're on the threshold of something big. We'll have to put up with a few more months of frustration from the lame-duck liberal Congress, but after that I see a clear road and powerful acceleration for the changes we want.

We're rolling back needless restrictions on innovation and job creation through my moratorium on new federal regulations. \\

I'm pushing hard to reform our civil justice system. Americans want to stop nuisance lawsuits. \\
 ((Someone asked me the other day, if an apple a day keeps the doctor away, what works for lawyers?)) \\

I'm committed as strongly as ever to win more tax relief and reform. \\
 We need to lift the dead weight that punishes homeowners and prevents more investment and job creation -- those sky-high taxes on capital gains. \\
 We need to enact my other proposals to ease tax burdens on families and homeowners. \\

I'm fighting for fundamental change in our education and welfare systems. Parents deserve to exercise all their rights in their children's education. Now it's time for parents to have real financial freedom to choose their kids' schools -- public, private or religious. \\
 More involvement by parents, restored respect for traditional values, and more competition in the marketplace will renew our whole system of education. \\

Right now, we have a welfare system designed by liberal politicians and social theorists. It's a burden on taxpayers, but that's not the worst of it. Much of the time, this system hurts the very people it claims to help. WE HAVE A SAFETY NET
~~The system punishes~~

~~TO SELF-SUFFICIENCY AND INDEPENDENCE.~~
~~system takes benefits away from single mothers who get married.~~
~~Because of our current system, countless young women and children~~
~~are denied the stability of a two-parent home.~~

I'm working to transform this failed welfare system into something that makes sense -- into something ^{THAT EFFICIENTLY PRODUCES} ~~all Americans can be~~ ^{POSITIVE RESULTS} ~~proud of.~~ \\ Right now, I'm working with tough-minded, creative governors like Pete Wilson here, and Tommy Thompson in Wisconsin, to give them flexibility under federal laws to ^{TRY OUT NEW IDEAS} ~~turn their state~~ ~~welfare programs around.~~ With governors in all 50 states like Pete and Tommy, we'd soon be making major progress fostering the dignity and the rewards of work. \\ And we'd help a lot more families come together and stay together. \\

WISCONSIN'S

My proposal for health insurance reform is a model of the new way of thinking about welfare. The big news media haven't told you much about my plan -- they're too busy beating the drum for that stale old idea of a Ted Kennedy-style ~~national~~ ^{NATIONAL} system of ~~centralized~~ ^{national} medicine. \\ Like my education plan, my health care proposal would help working people and needy people with vouchers and tax credits -- employing free markets and choice. \\

~~Reforming education and welfare alone would go a long way~~ ~~toward solving our fiscal crisis. When we get these reforms in~~ ~~place, we will realistically be able to balance the federal~~ ~~budget without raising taxes -- and without piling new burdens~~ ~~onto state and local taxpayers. \\~~

fiscal discipline with the power of the United States Constitution. \\ Now more than ever, it's clear that Americans want a Balanced Budget Amendment. \\ Forty-four states follow some form of balanced budget requirement. Most state legislatures are on record supporting a federal Balanced Budget Amendment.

Standing in our way is the liberal ~~hand~~ core of the Democratic Congress -- barely more than one-third of the membership. Read the roll call from last week's vote in the House -- you'll see who I'm talking about. Better yet, make them read some startling vote tallies this November -- then they'll finally understand what we're talking about. \\

Can I count on each one of you to get to work on this? \\ Can I count on you to deliver the liberals some bad news this November? \\ \\ Thanks! \\ I knew I could! \\

Before I finish, I want say a word about that historic summit meeting Boris Yeltsin and I just completed in Washington. Reforming education and welfare alone would go a long way toward solving our fiscal crisis. When we get these reforms in place, we will realistically be able to balance the federal budget without raising taxes -- and without piling new burdens onto state and local taxpayers. \\

Hand in hand with these reforms goes our crusade to enforce fiscal discipline with the power of the United States Constitution. \\ Now more than ever, it's clear that Americans want a Balanced Budget Amendment. \\ Forty-four states follow some form of balanced budget requirement. Most state legislatures are on record supporting a federal Balanced Budget Amendment.

Standing in our way is the liberal hard core of the Democratic Congress -- barely more than one-third of the membership. Read the roll call from last week's vote in the House -- you'll see who I'm talking about. Better yet, make them read some startling vote tallies this November -- then they'll finally understand what we're talking about. \\

Can I count on each one of you to get to work on this? \\ Can I count on you to deliver the liberals some bad news this November? \\ \\ Thanks! \\ I knew I could! \\

Before I finish, I want say a word about that historic summit meeting Boris Yeltsin and I just completed in Washington. There were thousands of visitors on the White House lawn to welcome him, the first democratically elected president of Russia. I wish each and every one of you could have been there to join us. That's because it's patriotic people like you who helped make this moment possible. Now the Russian people can worship freely, compete in free markets, and choose their own government. And our kids and grandkids won't live in the shadow of nuclear war that haunted us for forty years. \\ Today, ordinary Russians thank God that ordinary Americans stood fast

against the Communist dictatorship that threatened us and oppressed them. \\

If you have the will, if you have perseverance, it's never too soon or too late to make a difference. Howard Jarvis spent 16 years fighting for the concept of Proposition 13. He was 76 years old when at last he won -- when he shook the political establishment of this entire country.

I've highlighted for you my agenda for a new term, working with a new Congress: Revolutionize our schools -- put parents and kids and traditional excellence ahead of bureaucrats. Overhaul the welfare system -- give needy people opportunity instead of dependency. Adopt a balanced budget amendment. And hold the line against new spending and taxes. \\

With a new Congress that shares our values, we can use the next four years to set our country on the right track for the next forty years. \\ With your help, I know we can. \\ Thank you. God bless you and the United States of America. \\

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: HOWARD JARVIS TAXPAYERS ASSN.
UNIVERSAL CITY HILTON
UNIVERSAL CITY, CALIFORNIA
SATURDAY, JUNE 20, 1992
[TIME]

[Acknowledgments, humor] Estelle Jarvis, it is a special privilege to be with you and with members of the Howard Jarvis Taxpayers Association. Estelle, your late husband was a true pioneer. In the little Utah mining town where he grew up, he learned from his parents to love freedom, to take on responsibility, to dream dreams as big as the desert horizon. His political credo was simple and profound. He said, "Our freedom depends on four words: Government must be limited." \\ Here in California 14 years ago, Howard Jarvis won a famous victory -- the tax limitation plan called Proposition 13. History will mark this as the first shot in the Reagan Revolution. \\ And we're still feeling the reverberations today as we keep fighting to expand our freedom and hold back unnecessary burdens of government. \\

Our revolution isn't the work of a single presidency -- it's the mission for a whole generation of reform. Since 1980, we've lowered taxes, made them flatter and fairer. We've made landmark reforms to get big government regulation off the backs of our families and businesses. \\

But we've got much more to do. With tax-and-spend liberals still in charge of Congress, government keeps growing. Congress now spends more than 25 percent of what people in this country work to produce: That's right, 25 percent of the Gross Domestic Product. The habit of deficit spending has brought us to the point that this year, every family of four in the United States on average will have to pay $3,300 just in interest payments on the national debt. Those facts alone tell us we're not really as free a society as we can and should be. You and I know that government is too big -- and it spends too much. \\\

Americans are clamoring for stricter limits on the power and cost of government. From coast to coast, people are mobilizing for change. The air is crackling with the feeling that Howard Jarvis made his battle cry: "I'm mad as hell." \\\

What it comes down to is this: Ordinary Americans are plain fed up with pressure to be "politically correct." Aren't you tired of hearing the liberal know-it-alls drone on, demanding that you believe things that defy common sense? Aren't you sick of moralistic demands that you surrender to some bureaucracy freedoms that enabled our ancestors to make this country great?

Maybe you're like millions of other Americans. ~~You shop at Wal-Mart, you eat at Big Boy.~~ You've worked all your life to get your kids through school and pay off a mortgage. You know it's not only your right -- it's your duty to your family -- to fight high taxes and government waste. And when the liberal elitists ridicule you and say we have social problems because of you -- because you're "greedy" -- well, naturally, you stand up and fight back. \\\

Our fighting spirit has brought us to a turning point.

*Delet
etc.
Condemning*

We're on the threshold of something big. We'll have to put up with a few more months of frustration from the lame-duck liberal Congress, but after that I see a clear road and powerful acceleration for the changes we want.

We're rolling back needless restrictions on innovation and job creation through my moratorium on new federal regulations. \\

I'm pushing hard to reform our civil justice system. Americans want to stop nuisance lawsuits. \\
\\ ((Someone asked me the other day, if an apple a day keeps the doctor away, what works for lawyers?)) \\

I'm committed as strongly as ever to win more tax relief and reform. \\
\\ We need to lift the dead weight that punishes homeowners and prevents more investment and job creation -- those sky-high taxes on capital gains. \\

I'm fighting for fundamental change in our education and welfare systems. Parents deserve to exercise all their rights in their children's education. Now it's time for parents to have real financial freedom to choose their kids' schools -- public, private or religious. \\
\\ More involvement by parents, restored respect for traditional values, and more competition in the marketplace will renew our whole system of education. \\

Right now, we have a welfare system designed by liberal politicians and social theorists. It's a burden on taxpayers, but that's not the worst of it. Much of the time, this system hurts the very people it claims to help. The system punishes single mothers who want to work their way out of dependency. The system takes benefits away from single mothers who get married. Because of our current system, countless young women and children are denied the stability of a two-parent home.

I'm working to transform this failed welfare system into something that makes sense -- into something all Americans can be proud of. \\ Right now, I'm working with tough-minded, creative governors like Pete Wilson here, and Tommy Thompson in Wisconsin, to give them flexibility under federal laws to turn their state welfare programs around. With governors in all 50 states like Pete and Tommy, we'd soon be making major progress fostering the dignity and the rewards of work. \\ And we'd help a lot more families come together and stay together. \\

My proposal for health insurance reform is a model of the new way of thinking about welfare. The big news media haven't told you much about my plan -- they're too busy beating the drum for that stale old idea of a Ted Kennedy-style national system of socialized medicine. \\ Like my education plan, my health care proposal would help working people and needy people with vouchers and tax credits -- employing free markets and choice. \\

Reforming education and welfare alone would go a long way toward solving our fiscal crisis. When we get these reforms in place, we will realistically be able to balance the federal budget without raising taxes -- and without piling new burdens onto state and local taxpayers. \\

fiscal discipline with the power of the United States Constitution. \\ Now more than ever, it's clear that Americans want a Balanced Budget Amendment. \\ Forty-four states follow some form of balanced budget requirement. What it comes down to is this: Ordinary Americans are plain fed up with pressure to be "politically correct." Aren't you tired of hearing the liberal know-it-alls drone on, demanding that you believe things that defy common sense? Aren't you sick of moralistic demands that you surrender to some bureaucracy freedoms that enabled our ancestors to make this country great?

Maybe you're like millions of other Americans. You shop at Wal-Mart, you eat at Big Boy. You've worked all your life to get your kids through school and pay off a mortgage. You know it's not only your right -- it's your duty to your family -- to fight high taxes and government waste. And when the liberal elitists ridicule you and say we have social problems because of you -- because you're "greedy" -- well, naturally, you stand up and fight back. \\\

Our fighting spirit has brought us to a turning point.

We're on the threshold of something big. We'll have to put up with a few more months of frustration from the lame-duck liberal Congress, but after that I see a clear road and powerful acceleration for the changes we want.

We're rolling back needless restrictions on innovation and job creation through my moratorium on new federal regulations. \\

I'm pushing hard to reform our civil justice system. Americans want to stop nuisance lawsuits. \\
 \ (Someone asked me the other day, if an apple a day keeps the doctor away, what works for lawyers?) \\

I'm committed as strongly as ever to win more tax relief and reform. \\
 \ We need to lift the dead weight that punishes homeowners and prevents more investment and job creation -- those sky-high taxes on capital gains. \\

I'm fighting for fundamental change in our education and welfare systems. Parents deserve to exercise all their rights in their children's education. Now it's time for parents to have real financial freedom to choose their kids' schools -- public, private or religious. \\
 \ More involvement by parents, restored respect for traditional values, and more competition in the marketplace will renew our whole system of education. \\

Right now, we have a welfare system designed by liberal politicians and social theorists. It's a burden on taxpayers, but that's not the worst of it. Much of the time, this system hurts the very people it claims to help. The system punishes single mothers who want to work their way out of dependency. The system takes benefits away from single mothers who get married. Because of our current system, countless young women and children are denied the stability of a two-parent home.

I'm working to transform this failed welfare system into something that makes sense -- into something all Americans can be proud of. \\ Right now, I'm working with tough-minded, creative governors like Pete Wilson here, and Tommy Thompson in Wisconsin, to give them flexibility under federal laws to turn their state welfare programs around. With governors in all 50 states like Pete and Tommy, we'd soon be making major progress fostering the dignity and the rewards of work. \\ And we'd help a lot more families come together and stay together. \\

My proposal for health insurance reform is a model of the new way of thinking about welfare. The big news media haven't told you much about my plan -- they're too busy beating the drum for that stale old idea of a Ted Kennedy-style national system of socialized medicine. \\ Like my education plan, my health care proposal would help working people and needy people with vouchers and tax credits -- employing free markets and choice. \\

Reforming education and welfare alone would go a long way toward solving our fiscal crisis. When we get these reforms in place, we will realistically be able to balance the federal budget without raising taxes -- and without piling new burdens onto state and local taxpayers. \\

fiscal discipline with the power of the United States Constitution. \\ Now more than ever, it's clear that Americans want a Balanced Budget Amendment. \\ Forty-four states follow some form of balanced budget requirement. Most state legislatures are on record supporting a federal Balanced Budget Amendment.

Standing in our way is the liberal hard core of the Democratic Congress -- barely more than one-third of the membership. Read the roll call from last week's vote in the House -- you'll see who I'm talking about. Better yet, make them read some startling vote tallies this November -- then they'll finally understand what we're talking about. \\

Can I count on each one of you to get to work on this? \\ Can I count on you to deliver the liberals some bad news this November? \\ \\ Thanks! \\ I knew I could! \\

Before I finish, I want say a word about that historic summit meeting Boris Yeltsin and I just completed in Washington. There were thousands of visitors on the White House lawn to welcome him, the first democratically elected president of Russia. I wish each and every one of you could have been there to join us. That's because it's patriotic people like you who helped make this moment possible. Now the Russian people can worship freely, compete in free markets, and choose their own government. And our kids and grandkids won't live in the shadow of nuclear war that haunted us for forty years. \\ Today, ordinary Russians thank God that ordinary Americans stood fast

against the Communist dictatorship that threatened us and oppressed them. \\

If you have the will, if you have perseverance, it's never too soon or too late to make a difference. Howard Jarvis spent 16 years fighting for the concept of Proposition 13. He was 76 years old when at last he won -- when he shook the political establishment of this entire country.

I've highlighted for you my agenda for a new term, working with a new Congress: Revolutionize our schools -- put parents and kids and traditional excellence ahead of bureaucrats. Overhaul the welfare system -- give needy people opportunity instead of dependency. Adopt a balanced budget amendment. And hold the line against new spending and taxes. \\

With a new Congress that shares our values, we can use the next four years to set our country on the right track for the next forty years. \\ With your help, I know we can. \\ Thank you. God bless you and the United States of America. \\
