PROPOSED PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS:

PRESIDENT'S DRUG ADVISORY
COUNCIL LEADERSHIP FORUM
FRIDAY, DEC. 11, 1992
WASHINGTON HILTON HOTEL
9:15 AM

Thank you, Jim [Burke, Chairman of the President's Drug Advisory Council, as well as Chairman of Partnership for a Drug Free America], for your kind words. Alvah [Chapman, Chairman of PDAC's National Coalition Committee, who is hard at work helping re-build devastated southern Florida.] Reverend Malloy, chairman of the forum for the past three years. And Bill [Moss, founding Chairman of PDAC.]

I want to give my heartfelt thanks to the members of the President's Drug Advisory Council for the outstanding work you have done to rid the Nation of illegal drugs. Your tireless service to others is deeply appreciated.

And to all the drug coalition leaders and members with us today -- here from all across the country -- over 200 cities and 40 states -- let me add a few words.

Charles De Gaulle once said that France was not her true self unless she was engaged in a great enterprise. Well, you have led America in a great enterprise -- truly becoming involved in a cause larger than yourselves.

You are part of a growing movement that is sweeping the Nation. Today there are more anti-drug coalitions than ever -- over 1,000 across the country -- because of your efforts. That means 1,000 communities, aided by federal, state and local governments, have accepted the responsibility to work side by side with their neighbors to get drugs out and keep drugs out of their neighborhoods.

Block by block, street by street, home by home, ordinary people are doing extraordinary things. You are showing that every citizen has a role to play in eliminating drugs from our neighborhoods. You are enriching our Nation's future through community-based programs -- the very backbone of America's drug policy.

That noted philosopher, Barbara Bush, once said, "What happens in your house is more important than what happens in the White House."

This won't surprise you. She's right. //

The people with the most influence aren't here in Washington -- rather, it's the people back home -- the friend -- the pastor or the parent, the teacher or the team mate, the doctor or the daughter who can stir the soul of the one needing help.

Our ability to solve the drug problem in America depends on the extent to which we can convince individuals not to try drugs or use them -- and to help those individuals addicted, to get into treatment.

This understanding is the very basis for the enormous progress that's been made in reducing illegal drug use, and simply must be the foundation for any future drug strategy.

In the span of this administration we've seen drug use go down -- overall drug use decreased by more than 12 percent between 1988 and '91; occasional cocaine use went down 25 percent -- twice the goal we set. Adolescent cocaine use? We'd hoped to reduce that by 30 percent and it has fallen more than 60 percent.

When a neighbor's front yard became the front line of a drug war, rather than looking to government for solutions -- you looked to each other to meet the drug problem in your community head-on. Because you did -- today a little girl isn't afraid to ride her bike over to the park ... a senior citizen once again sits on his front porch in the afternoon without fear.

So, what you are doing in the workplace, the school yard, and the corner grocery store is working. You are restoring hope, saving lives, and healing our country -- one person at a time.

And for that, you have the gratitude of your community, your country and your President. May God bless you all and the United States of America.

PROPOSED PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS:

PRESIDENT'S DRUG ADVISORY
COUNCIL LEADERSHIP FORUM
FRIDAY, DEC. 11, 1992
WASHINGTON HILTON HOTEL
9:15 AM

Thank you, Jim [Burke, Chairman of Partnership for a Drug-Free America], for your kind words. Alvah [Chapman, Chairman of PDAC's National Coalition Committee, and CADCA Chairman of the Board.] Rev. Malloy. Jim Copple, CADCA National Director. Bill [Moss, founding Chairman PDAC.]

I want to give my heartfelt thanks to the members of the President's Drug Advisory Council for the outstanding work you have done to rid the Nation of illegal drugs. Your tireless service to others is deeply appreciated.

And to all the drug coalition leaders and members with us today -- here from all across the country -- over 170 cities and 40 states -- let me add a few words.

Charles De Gaulle once said that France could not truly be herself unless she was engaged in a great enterprise. Well, you have led America in a great enterprise -- truly becoming involved in a cause larger than yourselves.

You are part of a growing movement that is sweeping the Nation. Today there are more anti-drug coalitions than ever -- over 1,000 across the country -- because of your efforts. That means 1,000 communities, aided by federal, state and local governments, have accepted the responsibility to work side by side with their neighbors to get drugs out and keep drugs out of their neighborhoods.

Block by block, street by street, home by home, ~~you name it.~~ ✓
Ordinary people are doing extraordinary things. You are showing that every citizen has a role to play in eliminating drugs from our neighborhoods. You are enriching our nation's future through community-based programs -- the very backbone of America's drug control policy. ✓

That noted philosopher Barbara Bush once said, "What happens in your house is more important than what happens in the White House."

This won't surprise you. She's right. //

The people with the most influence aren't here in Washington -- rather, it's the people back home -- the friend -- the pastor or the parent, the teacher or the team mate, the doctor or the daughter who can stir the soul of the one needing help.

Our ability to solve the drug problem in America depends on the extent to which we can convince individuals not to try drugs or use them -- and to help those individuals addicted get into treatment. This understanding is the very basis for the enormous progress that's been made in prevention, and simply must be the foundation for any future drug strategy. ✓

In the span of this administration we've seen drug use go down -- overall drug use decreased by more than 10 percent between 1988 and '90; occasional cocaine use went down 29 percent -- twice the goal we set. Adolescent cocaine use? We'd hoped to reduce that by 30 percent and it has fallen more than 60 percent.

When a neighbor's front yard became the front line of a drug war, rather than looking to government for solutions -- you looked to each other to meet the drug problem in your community head-on. Because you did -- today a little girl isn't afraid to ride her bike over to the park a senior citizen once again sits on his front porch in the afternoon without fear.

So, what you are doing in the workplace, the school yard and the corner grocery store is working. You are restoring hope, saving lives, and healing our country -- one person at a time.

And for that, you have the gratitude of your community, your country and your President. May God bless you all and the United States of America.
