Dear Mark:

I have just returned from Maine to find your thoughtful note regarding the recent events in the Middle East. These types of decisions are always difficult. Thank you for your encouraging words and prayers.

As always, I am most appreciative of your support.

With warm regards,

Sincerely,

The Honorable Mark O. Hatfield

Dear Mr. President:

If news reports are any indication, you must feel under siege from those who would have the United States respond with lethal force to events in the Middle East and elsewhere. I write only to offer my full support and admiration for your restraint.

Any nation can swagger around our global neighborhood like a bully, but it is a wise and strong nation which resists mindless violence and pursues diplomacy instead. Your response to recent events and your refusal to practice "an eye for an eye" foreign policy have made me proud to know you and proud of this country.

I know that this is not an easy time for you, but I offer my prayers for you and the peace we all desire.

Warm personal regards,

Sincerely,

The President
The White House
