Dear Mr President,

THANK
You, for inviting

us to the IFTAR DINNER,

Sitting at your table
made it even more SPECIAL.

I was amazed to hear your story about the man from Palestine at YALE.

THE PRESIDENT HAS SEEN

Dear Mr. President,

It is always such an inspiration to see you and Laura and the extraordinary energy, passion, warmth and vision you bring to all that you do. I have such admiration for the moral clarity and principled approach that you have brought to our country's foreign policy. Perhaps when more world leaders demonstrate a similar commitment to what is so clearly right and necessary, we will be viewed as less "unilateralist."

In case you missed Tom Friedman's article in today's New York Times (you may have since we interrupted some of your morning reading time), I thought it would be of interest. The article suggests the route to get, in Friedman's words, from "Saddam to Jefferson without going through Khomeini." It is encouraging and exactly what you were talking about this morning at breakfast.

Warm regards,

Love
Sincerely,

Tom

God and Man in Baghdad

By THOMAS L. FRIEDMAN

Are you sitting down?

We've encountered many surprises since we invaded Iraq, but now that the political process is under way the biggest surprise may be just around the corner, and it's this: The first post-Saddam democratic government that the U.S. gives birth to in Iraq may be called the Islamic Republic of Iraq — and that's not necessarily a bad thing. I told you to sit down.

The challenge of reforming any of the 22 nondemocratic Arab states comes down to a very simple question: How do you get from here to there — how do you go from an authoritarian monarchy or a military regime to a more representative government — without ending up with a Khomeini-like theocracy à la Iran or a civil war à la Algeria?

Virtually all of these Arab states suffer from the same problem: because of decades of political repression, one-man rule and economic stagnation, there is no viable middle class and no legitimate, independent political parties and institutions to fill the void once the authoritarian leadership is removed. Iraq exhibits this problem in spades.

As a result, in the Sunni and Shiite areas of Iraq, the primary sources of legitimacy, and political expression, are tribal and religious. This dependence upon, and respect for, religious authority will be reflected in the first post-Saddam government — whether it comes about by indirect or direct elections. Because Shiites make up 60 percent of Iraq, and because the only current legitimate Shiite leaders are religious figures, their views and aspirations will have to be taken into account.

There is, however, good reason to believe that Grand Ayatollah Ali al-Sistani, the most revered Shiite cleric in Iraq and the only one who can claim to speak for Iraqi Shiites as a whole, does not aspire to be a Khomeini. Many Iraqi Shiite clerics have lived in Iran and avowedly do not want to follow its authoritarian path. Moreover, because Shiites are a majority in Iraq, they are the ones with the greatest stake in keeping Iraq a unified state. Given their numbers, any democratic Iraq is one where Shiites, be they liberals or conservatives, will have great influence. But to keep Iraq unified the Shiites will have to respect the rights and aspirations of Iraq's Kurds and Sunnis, as well as other minorities.

What is unfolding in Iraq today — a tug of war between Ayatollah Sistani and the Governing Council over how an interim government should be elected — is something inevitable, essential and inescapably messy.

"What we are witnessing," explains Yitzhak Nakash, the Brandeis University professor who is the author of "The Shi'is of Iraq," "is a very healthy bargaining session over what will be the relationship between religion and politics in Iraq and over the process of choosing legitimate national and communal leaders. It is very important that the Americans show respect for the views of Sistani — whose tacit support for the U.S. presence in Iraq has been enormously important — and let Sistani and the other Iraqi political forces thrash this out on their own."

Ayatollah Sistani is "not a Khomeini," adds Mr. Nakash, and he does not envisage an Iraq ruled directly by clerics. The ayatollah comes from the quietist school of Shiite clerics, who have traditionally attempted to shield themselves from politics. In demanding elections, he's obviously looking out for Shiite interests, but he's also insisting that the new Iraqi government be as legitimate and stable as possible.

"If there is going to be a stable government in Iraq, it has to come about after some genuine public debate and after some consensus is reached regarding the relationship between religion and state, and between the clerics and the politicians," Mr. Nakash said. "Otherwise, no Iraqi government will last once the Americans leave. It will not have a legitimate base."

If things go reasonably well, the result will be an initial Iraqi government that is more religious than Turkey but more democratic than Iran. Not bad.

We must not try to abort this unfolding discussion among Iraqis. In fact, we should be proud of it. We are fostering a much-needed free political dialogue in the heart of the Arab world. Our job is to make sure there is enough security for this critical discussion, so I would bring every U.S. soldier from Europe and Japan to Iraq to make this work.

There is no more important political project for the U.S. in the world today than seeing whether Iraq can get from Saddam to Jefferson without going through Khomeini.

MASTER AND COMMANDER: THE FAR SIDE OF THE WORLD

*1/2

Starring Russell Crowe, Paul Bettany, James D'Arcy, Edward Woodall, Chris Larkin, Max Pirkis, Jack Randall, Max Benitz, Lee Ingleby and Robert Pugh. Directed by Peter Weir. Written by Peter Weir & John Collee. Produced by Samuel Goldwyn Jr., Peter Weir and Duncan Henderson. A Fox release. Adventure. Rated PG-13 for intense battle sequences, related images and brief language. Running time: 138 min.

An old-fashioned seafaring spectacle of the Errol Flynn and Douglas Fairbanks variety, "Master and Commander"--which required the combined resources of 20th Century Fox, Universal and Miramax--hearkens back to an era when such films were expected to be thoughtful, even artistic. Indeed, it's the kind of picture that should be greeted with open arms by long-frustrated holiday filmgoers, worn and wearied of taking their blockbuster thrills and art-house intelligence in separate doses.

Directed with breathtaking virtuosity by Peter Weir and brilliantly acted by Russell Crowe and Paul Bettany, "Master and Commander" is adapted from two of the late Patrick O'Brian's 20 novels on the Napoleonic-era adventures of Royal Navy Captain James Aubrey (Crowe) and his trusted friend and voice of reason Dr. Stephen Maturin (Bettany). Though reportedly made at a whopping cost of $150 million (virtually all of which is on the screen), it's a more intimate picture than one might imagine, immersing audiences in the lives of early 19th-century seamen in much the same way that "Das Boot" pickled them into a World War II-era U-boat. The story is simple but time-honored--in 1805, off the coast of Brazil, Aubrey and the crew of the HMS Surprise engage in a game of nautical cat-and-mouse with Napoleon's larger, faster Acheron, which threatens to expand the broader war to the Pacific. With the exception of several eye-popping naval engagements, however, "Master and Commander" focuses less on its heroes' battles with the French than their battles against the elements and between one another. For Weir--no stranger to logistically difficult films set against exotic backdrops--it's simply another chance to do what he does best, finding profundity in a narrative that would appear to suggest little of the sort. While much of this is subtextual, a midstream trip to the Galapagos isles brings the conflict between Aubrey's warrior pragmatism and Maturin's naturalist humanism front and center, underscoring the principal dilemma of the modern world.

Audiences still warmed-up from the summer's pulpier swashbuckler, "Pirates of the Caribbean: The Curse of the Black Pearl," will respond most warmly, as will fans of the Horatio Hornblower books and their many film and television descendents, including "Star Trek." In fact, it's not entirely far-fetched to describe Aubrey and Maturin's adventures in "Master and Commander" as being akin to those of Captain Kirk and Doctor McCoy without a Mr. Spock. It may also be no coincidence that the relationship appears to echo that of Weir and his writing partner, Scottish physician-turned-writer John Collee. But it is Weir's fearsome perfectionism as a director that ultimately brings the script to life with a level of authenticity and attention to detail that is all but unprecedented, evident even in such minutiae as the emulated look of hand-ground 19th century optics in spyglass point-of-view shots. The only letdown comes as the end titles roll and filmgoers discover that they are still on dry land.-Wade Major

ELF

Starring Will Ferrell, James Caan, Zooey Deschanel, Bob Newhart, Edward Asner and Mary Steenburgen. Directed by Jon Favreau. Written by David Berenbaum. Produced by Jon Berg, Todd Komarnicki and Shauna Weinberg. A New Line release. Comedy. Rated PG for some mild rude humor and language. Running time: 96 min.

As a baby, Buddy crawls into Santa's toy bag and is whisked off to the North Pole, where he is raised as an elf. A misfit who grows to be three times the size of his elf family, Buddy ultimately heads to his birthplace of New York City to seek out his roots. Unfortunately, they turn out to be a "Scrooge"-like father and a cynical ten-year-old stepbrother who doesn't believe in Santa. Worst of all, everyone seems to have forgotten the true meaning of Christmas. But using his simple elf ways, Buddy sets out to single-handedly win over his family and save Christmas in New York, hoping to at last find his true place in the world.

Dear Mr President,

(b)(6)

In addition to your obvious high regard for John Howard and for the warmth of the relationship between our two countries, I was heartened by your observations to me about the Middle East and, in particular, your strong support for the State of Israel in defending itself against Palestinian terrorism.

It was a very special event which we will remember for many years to come.

Wishing you every success.

With best wishes,

Dear Mr. President and Mrs. Bush:

My wife, Debra, and I have just received the wonderful memento from the dinner we attended at The White House honoring The President of the Republic of Kenya and Mrs. Kibaki. It was a superb dinner in every way. The hospitality and warmth we felt that evening was reminiscent of that found only in Texas.

Thank you for the photograph and for allowing us to be part of such a memorable evening.

Sincerely,

Each and every Longhorn ever to suit up for an NFL team.

All-time Longhorns draft picks

Complete list of every Longhorn ever drafted in the NFL.

Longhorns in the Pro Bowl

Complete list of Longhorns selected to play in the Pro Bowl.

Longhorns in the Super Bowl

Complete list of Longhorns to play in the Super Bowl.

When it comes to Texas and the NFL, the numbers speak for themselves

- 271 Texas has had 271 players drafted by the NFL.
- 66 Texas has had a player selected in an NFL-record 66 consecutive drafts.
- 33 Thirty-three different former Longhorns have been members of 22 different Super Bowl squads. Fourteen of those players have claimed Super Bowl Championship rings.
- 32 Numbers of Longhorns chosen in the first round of the NFL Draft.
- 27 The Longhorns have had 27 different Pro Bowlers representing 19 teams who have made a total of 67 appearances.
- 25 There are currently 25 former Longhorns active in the NFL.
- 6 Six different former Texas stars have played in four of the last five Super Bowls.
- 4 Former Longhorns have been members of four of the last six Super Bowl Champion squads.
- 3 Texas has had three players selected with the first overall pick in the draft.

"The competition you face at a school like Texas and in the Big 12 prepares you for the NFL.

Also, at a place like UT, you really have a chance to grow up.

There are so many different people and things going on that you have a chance to learn how to take care of yourself. That's really important if you hope to play in the NFL or in preparing you for life in the workforce."

Dear Mr President,

A note to say how grateful I was to you for giving me a lift to Sedgefield on Airforce One. It was very good of you to take a passenger. I also greatly enjoyed my conversation with you.

I was delighted by the success of the State Visit. Your excellent speech set the course for a remarkable three days that reaffirmed the exceptional relationship between the US and the UK.

Catherine joins me in sending best wishes to you and the First Lady.

Yours truly,

David Manning

Sir -

12/8/03
THE PRESIDENT HAS SEEN

- 1) Reminder: you mentioned yesterday that you might want to call Ted Strauss at some point.
- 2) Lighting on your Medicare remarks this morning. I have re-raised this issue (you had the same problem at the Leon Sullivan event in Nigeria on July 12) with the lighting folks. They will re-double efforts, Advance will add it to their checklists, etc.
- 3) "Eagle Lectern" in East Room last night. In the future, Social Office will inform Brett when that podium will be used, so that his office can prepare appropriate options for your remarks.
- 4) KC Honors Camera Angle / Taping: Bartlett / Sforza team will exercise tighter control over the taped-for-tv events, and we will give you a heads-up on camera positions. (The White House portion should, of course, have same high production quality as the rest of the program. If necessary, someone like Gary Hood - guy w/ the headset last night who does all the major events - can start directing the WH portion as well).
