BACKGROUND INFORMATION ON MEETING PARTICIPANTS

Dan Glier, President, Glier's Meats (Covington, Kentucky)

Dan Glier is the President of Glier's Meats, Inc., an 18-employee, USDA-inspected meat processing plant located in Covington, Kentucky. Established in 1946 by Glier's father, Glier's Meats is a manufacturer of many types of gourmet meats but is most renowned for their specialty product, Goetta. Goetta has been successfully promoted by Glier's into a revered local product. Holding in excess of 90 percent of the Goetta market, Glier's annual production of Goetta now exceeds over 1,000,000 pounds. Earlier this year, Glier installed a new replacement refrigeration compressor for approximately $15,000. When the stimulus package passed, he additionally began planning to install a deer processing facility, an investment he would not have made without the incentives in the stimulus legislation.

Tony Jimenez, President and CEO, MicroTechnologies, LLC (Fairfax Station, Virginia)

Tony Jimenez is the President and CEO of MicroTechnologies, LLC, a small Northern Virginia business focused on information technology and systems engineering. Since founding MicroTechnologies in 2004, Jimenez has led the company through a period of uninterrupted growth. MicroTechnologies' professional staff, now numbering more than 100, supports more than 30 prime contracts with civilian and defense agencies. Jimenez is a retired Army Officer, and in November 2007, Jimenez was selected as the "Entrepreneur of the Year" by Hispanic Business Magazine. In December 2006, Jimenez was selected as the Veteran Entrepreneur "Vetrepreneur" of the year by the National Veteran-Owned Business Association. Jimenez says that the savings from the stimulus package will allow him to move his company into a new rented space. He will also be spending $500,000 to $600,000 on new servers, technology upgrades, a phone system, copiers, furniture, and lease-hold improvements to the new space. He estimates the tax provisions will save him around $60,000 on his new investments, and he would not have been able to make this move without those savings.

Bob McCutcheon, President, McCutcheon's Apple Products, Inc. (Frederick, Maryland)

Bob McCutcheon is the President of McCutcheon's Apple Products, Inc., which has been a family-owned business since its founding in 1938. Originally, the company began as a simple apple press shop and later grew to produce apple cider, apple butter, and other apple recipe products. McCutcheon's is now in the care of the fourth generation of McCutcheons. McCutcheon's continues to add new products and is committed to "maintaining the highest quality for the best homes recipe products." McCutcheon is in the middle of a major retail expansion and is planning to purchase at least $150,000 in ovens, demonstration products, furniture, and cash registers. This expansion has been in planning for a number of years, but McCutcheon indicates that the company is proceeding this year as a result of the incentives provided in the stimulus package.

Darlene Miller, President, and CEO, Permac Industries (Burnsville, Minnesota)

Darlene Miller is the President and CEO of Permac Industries, a manufacturing "job shop" that produces custom-made manufacturers' parts according to its client's blueprints and specifications. The quantities produced range from a few pieces to several thousand and include a variety of metals and plastics. Permac Industries was founded in 1965 as a screw machine shop located in Bloomington, Minnesota, with a 5,000-square-foot operating facility. Miller acquired ownership of the company in 1994, and she relocated the company to its current headquarters in Burnsville, Minnesota, in 1998, with 17,000-square feet of air-conditioned space and enough land to nearly double in size. As a result of the stimulus package, Miller has invested in a Computerized Numeric Control grinder that will allow Permac to complete its grinding processes in-house. The company has also purchased a robot that will load and unload parts, and it invested in a computerized quality control vision system, which performs and documents quality control measurements electronically.

Ray Pinard, President and CEO, 48HourPrint.com (Boston, Massachusetts)

Ray Pinard is the President and CEO of 48HourPrint.com, a leading online supplier of high-quality customized printed products to businesses. The company offers a broad spectrum of products ranging from business cards and brochures to tickets and pocket folders. Through its use of proprietary Internet-based order receiving and processing technologies and advanced computer integrated printing facilities, 48HourPrint.com offers a meaningful economic advantage relative to traditional printing methods. 48HourPrint.com will be celebrating its fifth anniversary in July 2008. Pinard responded to the bonus depreciation in the stimulus package by purchasing a $2 million off-set press. The purchase could have waited until next year, but the investment incentives provided by the stimulus package made this purchase possible in 2008.

Ryan Robinson, CEO, Signal Metal Industries, Inc. (Irving, Texas)

Ryan Robinson is the CEO of Signal Metal Industries, Inc., a second-generation family-owned business founded in 1973 by Robertson's father. Signal Metal is a highly diversified heavy steel fabrication, machining, assembly, and engineering company dedicated to providing high quality U.S.-made products to steelmaking, mining, and heavy construction equipment industries. Signal has more than 200 employees, mostly welders and machinists, at its corporate headquarters located in Irving, Texas, and it also operates plate-burning and sandblasting facilities in southern Dallas. In response to the stimulus package, Robinson purchased a large computer-controlled machine tool called a "Horizontal Boring Mill," a John Deere Tractor, a coating facility, ten overhead 5-to-20-ton capacity cranes, and a $125,000 forklift.

Dr. Tom Sawner, CEO, Educational Options, Inc. (Arlington, Virginia)

Tom Sawner is the CEO of Educational Options, Inc. (EdOptions), an accredited, web-based provider of high school and adult education curriculum and the parent company of Blue Ridge International Academy, the Nation's first triple-accredited "virtual school." In 2006, EdOptions was selected by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce as the National Small Business of the Year. In 2003, Dr. Sawner and his wife, Bettina Callaway, established a not-for-profit foundation, The Educational Opportunity and Research Foundation, which has provided schools more than $700,000 in matching scholarships, training, and support services. In response to the stimulus package, Sawner has already spent $70,000 on new phones, furniture, and office equipment for new buildings in Virginia and Arizona, and he plans to spend another $100,000 on computers and servers and office equipment. Due to the increase in the amount of first-year depreciation deductions for automobiles, Tom plans on purchasing two new Priuses this year for his most active salespeople.

Charles "Shorty" Whittington, President, Grammer Industries, Inc. (Grammer, Indiana)

Shorty Whittington is the President of Grammer Industries, Inc., which he founded in 1977. Grammer Industries, Inc., includes his equipment sales and leasing, specialized tanker fleets, and terminal trucking operations throughout the Midwest. In 2006, Whittington partnered with his son John to create Integrity Biofuels when he recognized the need for renewable fuels in the future of the transportation industry. Integrity Biofuels, Central Indiana's first Soy Biodiesel Plant, is located in Morristown, Indiana, just east of Indianapolis. This production facility uses soybean oil as its primary feed stock to be converted to methyl-esters (B100 Biodiesel). The process will incorporate the latest technology and automation to produce some of the finest quality biodiesel fuel in the United States. Whittington is planning on buying several new trucks and trailers for Grammer Industries, Inc. in response to the stimulus package.

Ray York, CEO, Ewing, Inc. (Phoenix, Arizona)

Ray York is the CEO of Ewing, Inc., a source for water conservation solutions and a leading authority on the latest water management products, trends, and practices. Ewing provides water management solutions, commercial and residential irrigation supplies, landscape and agronomic products, landscape lighting, erosion control, water features, and industrial plastics primarily to professionals serving the landscaping, turf, golf, and industrial industries. Ewing has more than 185 locations throughout the United States. York plans to purchase new trucks and other distribution equipment as a result of the stimulus package incentives.
