

FOIA Marker

This is not a textual record. This FOIA Marker indicates that material has been removed during FOIA processing by George W. Bush Presidential Library staff.

Communications, White House Office of

Sforza, Scott

Stack:	Row:	Sect.:	Shelf:	Pos.:	FRC ID:	Location or Hollinger ID:	NARA Number:	OA Number:
W	25	28	10	2	8682	21545	3061	3196

Folder Title:

Treaty Room - Address to the Nation - 10/07/2001 [06/06/2002]

Address to the Nation
June 6, 2002
Draft #18

Good evening. During the next few minutes, I want to update you on the progress we are making in our war against terror, and to propose sweeping changes that will strengthen our homeland against the ongoing threat of terrorist attacks.

Nearly nine months have passed since the day that forever changed our country. Debris, from what was once the World Trade Center, has been cleared away in a hundred thousand truckloads. The west side of the Pentagon looks almost as it did on September 10th. And as children finish school and families prepare for summer vacations, for many, life seems almost normal.

Yet we are a different Nation today: sadder and stronger, less innocent and more courageous, more appreciative of life – and for many who serve our country, more willing to risk life in a great cause. For those who have lost family and friends, the pain will never go away – and neither will the responsibilities that day thrust upon all of us.

America is leading the civilized world in a titanic struggle against terror. Freedom and fear are at war – and freedom is winning.

Tonight, over 60,000 American troops are deployed around the world in the war against terror – more than 7,000 in Afghanistan, others in the Philippines, Yemen, and the Republic of Georgia, to train local forces. Next week Afghanistan will begin selecting a representative government, even as American troops, along with our allies, still continuously raid remote al-Qaida hiding places. Among those we have captured is a man named Abu zoo-BAY-duh, al-Qaida's chief of operations. From him, and from hundreds of others, we are learning more about how the terrorists plan and operate – information crucial in anticipating and preventing future attacks.

Our coalition is strong. More than 90 nations have arrested or detained over 2,400 terrorists and their supporters. More than 180 countries have offered or are providing assistance in the war on terrorism. And our military is strong and prepared to oppose any emerging threat to the American people.

Every day in this war will not bring the drama of liberating a country. Yet every day brings new information, a tip or arrest, another step or two or three in a relentless march to bring security to our Nation and justice to our enemies.

And every day I review a document called the Threat Assessment. It summarizes what our intelligence services and key law enforcement agencies have picked up about terrorist activity. Sometimes the information is very general – vague talk, bragging about future attacks. Sometimes the information is more specific, as in a recent case when an al-Qaida detainee said attacks were planned against financial institutions.

When credible intelligence warrants, appropriate law enforcement and local officials are alerted. These warnings are unfortunately a new reality in American life – and we have recently seen an increase in the volume of general threats. Americans should continue to do what you are doing – go about your lives, but pay attention to your surroundings – add your eyes and ears to the protection of our homeland.

In protecting our country, we depend on the skill of our people: the troops we send to battle ... intelligence operatives who risk their lives for bits of information ... law enforcement officers who sift for clues and search for suspects. We are now learning that before September 11th, the suspicions and insights of some of our frontline agents did not get enough attention.

My Administration supports the important work of the intelligence committees in Congress to review the activities of law enforcement and intelligence agencies. We need to know when warnings were missed or signs unheeded – not to point the finger of blame, but to make sure we correct any problems, and prevent them from happening again. Based on everything I have seen, I do not believe anyone could have prevented the horror of September 11th – yet we now know that thousands of trained killers are plotting to attack us – and this terrible knowledge requires us to act differently.

If you are a frontline worker for the FBI, the CIA, some other law enforcement or intelligence agency, and you see something that raises suspicions: I want you to report it immediately. I expect your supervisors to treat it with the seriousness it deserves. Information must be fully shared, so we can follow every lead to find the one that may prevent tragedy. I applaud the leaders and employees at the FBI and CIA for beginning essential reforms. They must continue to think and act differently to defeat the enemy.

The first and best way to secure America's homeland is to attack the enemy where he hides and plans – and we are doing just that. We are also taking significant steps to strengthen our homeland protections – securing cockpits, tightening our borders, stockpiling vaccines, increasing security at water-treatment and nuclear power plants. After September 11th, we needed to move quickly, and so I appointed Tom Ridge as my Homeland Security Advisor. As Governor Ridge has worked with all levels of government – to prepare a national strategy – and as we have learned more about the plans and capabilities of the terrorist network – we have concluded that our government must be reorganized to deal most more effectively with the new threats of the 21st century. So tonight, I ask the Congress to join me in creating a single permanent department with an overriding and urgent mission: securing the American homeland and protecting the American people.

Right now, as many as a hundred different government agencies have some responsibilities for homeland security. And no one has final accountability. The Coast Guard has several missions, from search and rescue to maritime treaty enforcement. It reports to the Transportation Department, whose primary responsibilities are roads, rails, bridges, and the airways. The Customs Service, among other duties, collects tariffs and prevents smuggling – and it is part of the Treasury Department, whose primary responsibility is fiscal policy, not security.

Tonight, I propose a permanent Cabinet-level Department of Homeland Security to unite essential agencies that must work more closely together: among them the Coast Guard, the Border Patrol, the Customs Service, Immigration officials, the Transportation Security Administration, and the Federal Emergency Management Agency. Employees of this new agency will come to work every morning knowing their most important job is to protect their fellow citizens.

The Department of Homeland Security will be charged with four primary tasks. This new agency will control our borders and prevent terrorists and explosives from entering our country. It will work with state and local authorities to respond quickly and effectively to emergencies. It will bring together our best scientists to develop technologies that detect biological, chemical, and nuclear weapons – and to discover the drugs and treatments to best protect our citizens. And this new department will review intelligence and law enforcement information from all agencies of government, and produce a single daily picture of threats against our homeland. Analysts will be responsible for imagining the worst – and planning to counter it.

The reason to create this department is not to increase the size of government, but to increase its focus and effectiveness. The staff of this new department will be largely drawn from the agencies we are combining. By ending duplication and overlap, we will spend less on overhead, and more on protecting America. This reorganization will give the good people of our government their best opportunity to succeed, by organizing our resources in a way that is thorough and unified.

What I am proposing tonight is the most extensive reorganization of the federal government since the 1940s. During his presidency, Harry Truman recognized that our Nation's fragmented defenses had to be reorganized to win the Cold War. He proposed uniting our military forces under a single Department of Defense; and creating the National Security Council, to bring together defense, intelligence, and diplomacy. Truman's reforms are still helping us to fight terror abroad – and now we need similar dramatic reforms to secure our people at home.

Only the United States Congress can create a new department of government. So tonight I ask for your help in encouraging your representatives to support my plan. We face an urgent need, and we must move quickly, this year, before the end of the congressional session. All in our government have learned a great deal since September 11th, and we must act on every lesson. We are stronger and better prepared tonight than we were on that terrible morning – and with your help, and the support of Congress, we will be stronger still.

History has called our Nation into action. History has placed a great challenge before us: Will America – with our unique position and power – blink in the face of terror, or will we lead to a freer, more civilized world?

There is only one answer: this great country will lead the world to safety, security, peace, and freedom.

Thank you for listening, good night, and may God bless America.

Address to the Nation
June 6, 2002
Draft #16

- Pull Stairs In
- Chalk
- Sound Blankets
- Flags over Houses - For Kids
- Pull Curtains
- Flowers

Good evening. During the next few minutes, I want to update you on the progress we are making in our war against terror, and to propose sweeping changes that will strengthen our homeland against the ongoing threat of terrorist attacks. :10

Nearly nine months have passed since the day that forever changed our country. Debris, from what was once the World Trade Center, has been cleared away in a hundred thousand truckloads. The west side of the Pentagon looks almost as it did on September 10th. And as children finish school and families prepare for summer vacations, for many, life seems almost normal. : 40

Yet we are a different Nation today: sadder and stronger, less innocent and more courageous, more appreciative of life – and for many who serve our country, more willing to risk life in a great cause. For those who have lost family and friends, the pain will never go away – and neither will the responsibilities that day thrust upon all of us. 1:08 | 1:02

America is leading the civilized world in a titanic struggle against terror. Freedom and fear are at war – and freedom is winning. 1:19 | 1:12

Tonight, over 60,000 American troops are deployed around the world in the war against terror – more than 7,000 in Afghanistan, others in the Philippines, Yemen, and the Republic of Georgia, to train local forces. Next week Afghanistan will begin selecting a representative government, even as American troops, along with our allies, still continuously raid remote al-Qaida hiding places. Among those we have captured is a man named Abu zoo-BAY-duh, al-Qaida's chief of operations. From him, and from hundreds of others, we are learning more about how the terrorists plan and operate – information crucial in anticipating and preventing future attacks. 2:08/

Our coalition is strong. More than 90 nations have arrested or detained over 2,400 terrorists and their supporters. More than 180 countries have offered or are providing assistance in the war on terrorism. And our military is strong and prepared to oppose any emerging threat to the American people. 2:33 | 2:23 2:59

Every day in this ongoing war will not bring the drama of liberating a country. Yet every day brings new information, a tip or arrest, another step or two or three in a relentless march to bring security to our Nation and justice to our enemies. 3:00 | 2:45

And every day I review a document called the Threat Assessment. It summarizes what our intelligence services and key law enforcement agencies have picked up about terrorist activity. Sometimes the information is very general – vague talk, bragging about future attacks. Sometimes the information is more specific, as in a recent case when an al-Qaida detainee said attacks were planned against financial institutions. 3:32 | 3:12

When credible intelligence warrants, appropriate law enforcement and local officials are alerted. These warnings are unfortunately a new reality in American life – and we have recently seen an increase in the volume of general threats. Americans should continue to do what you are doing – go about your lives, but pay attention to your surroundings – add your eyes and ears to the protection of our homeland. 4:01 / 3:35

In protecting our country, we depend on the skill of our people: the troops we send to battle ... intelligence operatives who risk their lives for bits of information ... law enforcement officers who sift for clues and search for suspects. We are now learning that before September 11th, the suspicions and insights of some of our frontline agents did not get enough attention. 4:05

My Administration supports the important work of the intelligence committees in Congress to review the activities of law enforcement and intelligence agencies. We need to know when warnings were missed or signs unheeded – not to point the finger of blame, but to make sure we correct any problems, and prevent them from happening again. Based on everything I have seen, I do not believe anyone could have prevented the horror of September 11th – yet we now know that thousands of trained killers are plotting to attack us – and this terrible knowledge requires us to act differently. 5:16 | 4:48

If you are a frontline worker for the FBI, the CIA, some other law enforcement or intelligence agency, and you see something that raises suspicions: I want you to report it immediately. I expect your supervisors to treat it with the seriousness it deserves. Information must be fully shared, so we can follow every lead to find the one that may prevent tragedy. I applaud the leaders and employees at the FBI and CIA for beginning essential reforms. They must continue to think differently to face this new enemy. 5:48 / 5:26

The first and best way to secure America's homeland is to attack the enemy where he hides and plans – and we are doing just that. We are also taking significant steps to strengthen our homeland protections – securing cockpits, tightening our borders, stockpiling vaccines, increasing security at water-treatment and nuclear power plants. After September 11th, we needed to move quickly, and so I appointed Tom Ridge as my Homeland Security Advisor. As Governor Ridge has worked with all levels of government – to prepare a national strategy – and as we have learned more about the plans and capabilities of the terrorist network – we have concluded that our government must be reorganized to deal most effectively with the new threats of the 21st century. So tonight, I ask the Congress to join me in creating a single permanent department with an overriding and urgent mission: to secure the American homeland.

6:56 / 6:27
Right now, as many as a hundred different government agencies have some responsibilities for Homeland security. And no one has final accountability. The Coast Guard has several missions, from search and rescue to maritime treaty enforcement. It reports to the Transportation Department, whose primary responsibilities are roads, rails, bridges, and the airways. The Customs Service, among other duties, collects tariffs and prevents smuggling – and it is part of the Treasury Department, whose primary responsibility is fiscal policy, not security. 7:34 / 7:05

Tonight, I propose a permanent Cabinet-level Department of Homeland Security to unite essential agencies that must work more closely together: among them the Coast Guard, the Border Patrol, the Customs Service, Immigration officials, the Transportation Security Administration, and the Federal Emergency Management Agency. Employees of this new agency will come to work every morning knowing their most important job is to protect their fellow citizens. | 7:36

The Department of Homeland Security will be charged with four primary tasks. This new agency will control our borders and prevent terrorists or explosives from entering our country. It will work with state and local authorities to respond quickly and effectively to emergencies. It will bring together our best scientists to develop technologies that detect biological, chemical, or nuclear weapons – and to discover the drugs and treatments to best protect our citizens. And this new department will review intelligence and law enforcement information from all agencies of government, and produce a single daily picture of threats against our homeland. Analysts will be responsible for imagining the worst – and planning to counter it. 8:51 |

8:18 / 7:51

The reason to create this department is not to increase the size of government, but to increase its focus and effectiveness. The staff of this new department will be largely drawn from the agencies we are combining. By ending duplication and overlap, we will spend less on overhead, and more on protecting America. This reorganization will give the good people of our government their best opportunity to succeed, by organizing our resources in a way that is thorough and unified. 9:23 | 8:58

What I am proposing tonight is the most extensive reorganization of the federal government since the 1940s. During his presidency, Harry Truman recognized that our Nation's fragmented defenses had to be reorganized to win the Cold War. He united our military forces under a single Department of Defense; and created the National Security Council, to bring together defense, intelligence, and diplomacy. Truman's reforms are still helping us to fight terror abroad – and now we need similar dramatic reforms to secure our people at home. 10:02

Only the United States Congress can create a new department of government. So tonight I ask for your help in encouraging your representatives to support my plan. We face an urgent need, and we must move quickly, this year, before the end of the congressional session. All in our government have learned a great deal since September 11th, and we must act on every lesson. We are stronger and better prepared tonight than we were on that terrible morning – and with your help, and the support of Congress, we will be stronger still. / 10:11

History has called our Nation into action. History has placed a great challenge before us: Will America – with our unique position and power – blink in the face of terror, or will we lead to a freer, more civilized world? There is only one answer: this great country will lead the world to safety, security, peace, and freedom. 10:35

Thank you for listening, good night, and may God bless America.

10:40

---

Go to Black @ End.

200
2/1/02

Run #1
10:20

Run #2

Blue Room
walk

Address to the Nation
June 6, 2002
Draft #15

to Herb

Good evening. During the next few minutes, I want to update you on progress we are making in our war against terror, and to propose sweeping changes that will strengthen our homeland against the ongoing threat of terrorist attacks.

3:13 |

Nearly nine months have passed since the day that forever changed our country. Debris, from what was once the World Trade Center, has been cleared away in a hundred thousand truckloads. The west side of the Pentagon looks almost as it did on September 10th. And as children finish school and families prepare for summer vacations, for many, life seems almost normal.

3:42 | 3:38 | 3:40

Yet we are a different Nation today: sadder and stronger, less innocent and more courageous, more appreciative of life – and for many who serve our country, more willing to risk life in a great cause. For those who have lost family and friends, the pain will never go away – and neither will the responsibilities that day thrust upon all of us.

1:08 / 1:10

America is leading the civilized world in a titanic struggle against terror. Freedom and fear are at war – and freedom is winning.

1:19 / 1:20

Tonight, over 60,000 American troops are deployed around the world in the war against terror – more than 7,000 in Afghanistan, others in the Philippines, Yemen, and the Republic of Georgia, training local forces. Next week Afghanistan will begin selecting a representative government, even as American troops, along with our allies, still continuously raid remote al-Qaida hiding places. Among those we have captured is a man named Abu Zubaida [zoo-BY-duh], al-Qaida's chief of operations. From him, and from hundreds of others, we are learning more about how the terrorists plan and operate – information crucial in anticipating and preventing future attacks.

2:12 | 2:10 | 2:09

Our coalition is strong. More than 90 nations have arrested or detained over 2,400 terrorists and their supporters. More than 180 countries have offered or are providing assistance on the war on terrorism.

2:27

| 2:26

And our military is strong and prepared to oppose any emerging threat to the American people. 2:33 | 2:34 / 2:35

Every day in this ongoing war will not bring the drama of liberating a country. Yet every day brings new information, a tip or arrest, another step or two or three in a relentless march to bring security to our Nation and justice to our enemies. 2:56 / 2:55 / 2:56

And every day I review a document called the Threat Assessment. It summarizes what our intelligence services and key law enforcement agencies have picked up about terrorist activity in every part of the world. Sometimes the information is very general – vague talk, bragging about future attacks. Sometimes the information is more specific, as in a recent case when an al-Qaida prisoner said attacks were planned against financial institutions. 3:29 / 3:27 <sup>at 3:27</sup> / 3:28

When credible intelligence warrants, appropriate law enforcement and local officials are alerted. These warnings are unfortunately a new reality in American life – and we have recently seen an increase in the volume of general threats. Americans should continue to do what you are doing – go about your lives, but pay attention to your surroundings – add your eyes and ears to the protection of our homeland. 3:56 / 3:55 / 3:52
(?home)

In protecting our country, we depend on the skill of our people: the troops we send to battle ... intelligence operatives who risk their lives for bits of information ... law enforcement officers who sift for clues and search for suspects. We are now learning that before September 11th, the suspicions and insights of some of our frontline agents did not get enough attention. 4:24 / 4:22 / 4:

My Administration supports the important work of the intelligence committees in Congress to review the activities of law enforcement and intelligence agencies. We need to know when warnings were missed or signs unheeded – not to point the finger of blame, but to make sure we correct any problems, and prevent them from happening again. Based on everything I have seen, I do not believe anyone could have prevented the horror of September 11th – yet we now know that trained killers are plotting to attack us – and this terrible knowledge requires us to act differently.

5:01 | 5:05 / 5:02

If you are a frontline worker for the FBI, the CIA, some other law enforcement or intelligence agency, and you see something that raises suspicions: I want you to report it immediately. I expect your supervisors to treat it with the seriousness it deserves. Information must be fully shared, so we can follow every lead to find the one that may prevent tragedy. I applaud the leaders and employees at the FBI and CIA for beginning essential reforms and urge them to continue to think differently to face this new enemy. 5:39 / 5:41 / 5:39

The first and best way to secure America's homeland is to attack the enemy where he hides and plans – and we are doing just that. But we are also taking significant steps to strengthen our homeland protections – securing cockpits, tightening our borders, stockpiling vaccines, increasing security at water-treatment and nuclear power plants. After September 11th, we needed to move quickly, and so I appointed Tom Ridge as my Homeland Security Advisor. As Governor Ridge has worked with all levels of government – federal, state, and local – to prepared a national strategy – and as we have learned more about the plans and capabilities of the terrorist network – we have concluded that our government must be reorganized to deal most effectively with the new threats of the 21st century. So tonight, I ask the Congress to join me in creating a single permanent department with an overriding and urgent mission: protecting the American people from terrorist attack. 6:39 / 6:47 / 6:44

One department <sup>will must</sup> ~~must~~ be in charge of <sup>to</sup> ~~securing~~ the American homeland – and held accountable for results. <sup>to</sup> ~~One~~ department must coordinate homeland security functions now fragmented across the government. One department must be charged with anticipating attacks, and acting to address our vulnerabilities. (Funding)

Right now, as many as a hundred different government agencies have some responsibilities for homeland security. Yet no one has final accountability. The Coast Guard has several missions, from search and rescue to maritime treaty enforcement. It reports to the Transportation Department, whose primary responsibilities are roads, rails, bridges, and the airways. The Customs Service, among other duties, collects tariffs and prevents smuggling – and it is part of the Treasury Department, whose primary responsibility is fiscal policy, not security. 7:27 / 7:20

Tonight, I propose a permanent Cabinet-level Department of Homeland Security to unite essential agencies that should be working more closely together: among them the Coast Guard, the Border Patrol, the Customs Service, Immigration officials, the Transportation Security Administration, and the Federal Emergency Management Agency. Employees of this new agency will come to work every morning with an overriding mission – to defend their fellow citizens from attack, and respond effectively if they come. 7:58 |

The Department of Homeland Security will be charged with four primary tasks. This new agency will control our borders and prevent terrorists or explosives from entering our country. It will work with state and local authorities to respond quickly and effectively to emergencies. It will bring together our best scientists to develop technologies that detect biological, chemical, or nuclear weapons – and to discover the drugs and treatments to best protect our citizens. And this new department will review the best intelligence and law enforcement information from all agencies of government, and produce a single daily picture of the threats against our homeland. These analysts will be responsible for imagining the worst – and defending against it. 8:41 | 8:41

The reason to create this department is not to increase the size of government, but to increase its focus and effectiveness. The staff of this new department will be largely drawn from the agencies we are combining. By ending duplication and overlap, we will spend less on overhead, and more on protecting America. This reorganization will give the good people of our government their best opportunity to succeed, by organizing our resources in a way that is thorough and unified. 9:11 | 9:18

What I am proposing tonight is the most extensive reorganization of the federal government since the 1940s. During his presidency, Harry Truman recognized that our Nation's fragmented defenses had to be reorganized to win the Cold War. He brought our military forces together under a unified Department of Defense; and created the National Security Council, to bring together defense, intelligence, and diplomacy. Truman's reforms are still helping us to fight terror abroad – and now we need similar dramatic reforms to secure our people at home. 9:55

Only the United States Congress can create a new department of government. So tonight I ask for your help in encouraging your representatives to support it. We face an urgent need, and we must move quickly, before the end of the congressional session. All in our government have learned a great deal since September 11th, and we must act on every lesson. We are stronger and better prepared tonight than we were on that terrible morning – and with your help, and the support of Congress, we will be stronger still.

10:15 | 10:31

10:20

History has called our Nation into action. History has placed a great challenge before us: Will America – with our unique position and power – blink in the face of terror, or lead to a freer, more civilized world? There is only one answer: this great country will lead the world to safety, security, peace, and freedom.

Thank you, good night, and God bless America.

11:02

• 4 AMERICAN FLAGS

• 2 - POTUS FLAGS.

Address to the Nation
June 6, 2002
Draft #14

Good evening. During the next few minutes, I want to update you on progress we are making in our war against terror, and to propose sweeping changes that will strengthen our homeland against the ongoing threat of terrorist attacks.

Nearly nine months have passed since the day that forever changed our country. Debris, from what was once the World Trade Center, has been cleared away in a hundred thousand truckloads. The west side of the Pentagon looks almost as it did on September 10th. And as children finish school and families prepare for summer vacations, for many, life seems almost normal.

Yet we are a different Nation today: sadder and stronger, less innocent and more courageous, more appreciative of life – and for many who serve our country, more willing to risk life in a great cause. For those who have lost family and friends, the pain will never go away – and neither will the responsibilities that day thrust upon all of us.

America is leading the civilized world in a titanic struggle against terror. Freedom and fear are at war – and freedom is winning.

Tonight, over 60,000 American troops are deployed around the world in the war against terror – more than 7,000 in Afghanistan, others in the Philippines, Yemen, and the Republic of Georgia, training local forces. Next week Afghanistan will begin selecting a representative government, even as American troops, along with our allies, still continuously raid remote al-Qaida hiding places. We have captured a man named Abu Zubaida [zoo-BY-duh], al-Qaida's chief of operations. From him, and from hundreds of others, we are learning more about how the terrorists plan and operate – information crucial in anticipating and preventing future attacks.

Our coalition is strong. More than 90 nations have arrested or detained over 2,400 terrorists and their supporters. More than 180 countries have offered or are providing assistance on the war on terrorism. And our military is strong and prepared to oppose any emerging threat to the American people.

Every day in this ongoing war will not bring the drama of liberating a country. Yet every day brings new information, a tip or arrest, another step or two or three in a relentless march to bring security to our Nation and justice to our enemies.

And every day I review a document called the Threat Assessment. It summarizes what our intelligence services and key law enforcement agencies have picked up about terrorist activity in every part of the world. Sometimes the information is very general – vague talk, bragging about future attacks. Sometimes the information is more specific, as in a recent case when an al-Qaida prisoner said attacks were planned against financial institutions.

When credible intelligence warrants, appropriate law enforcement and local officials are alerted. These warnings are unfortunately a new reality in American life – and we have recently seen an increase in the volume of general threats. Americans should continue to do what you are doing – go about your lives, but pay attention to your surroundings – add your eyes and ears to the protection of our homeland.

In protecting our country, we depend on the skill of our people: the troops we send to battle ... intelligence operatives who risk their lives for bits of information ... law enforcement officers who sift for clues and search for suspects. We are now learning that before September 11th, the suspicions and insights of some of our frontline agents did not get enough attention.

My Administration supports the important work of the intelligence committees in Congress to review the activities of law enforcement and intelligence agencies. We need to know when warnings were missed or signs unheeded – not to point the finger of blame, but to make sure we correct any problems, and prevent them from happening again. Based on everything I have seen, I do not believe anyone could have prevented the horror of September 11th – yet we now know that trained killers are plotting to attack us – and this terrible knowledge requires us to act differently.

If you are a frontline worker for the FBI, the CIA, some other law enforcement or intelligence agency, and you see something that raises suspicions: I want you to report it immediately. I expect your supervisors to treat it with the seriousness it deserves. Information must be fully shared, so we can follow every lead to find the one that may prevent tragedy.

The first and best way to secure America's homeland is to attack the enemy where he hides and plans – and we are doing just that. But we are also taking significant steps to strengthen our homeland protections – securing cockpits, tightening our borders, stockpiling vaccines, increasing security at water-treatment and nuclear power plants. After September 11th, we needed to move quickly, and so I appointed Tom Ridge as my Homeland Security Advisor. As Governor Ridge has worked with all levels of government – federal, state, and local – to prepared a national strategy – and as we have learned more about the plans and capabilities of the terrorist network – we have concluded that our government must be reorganized to deal most effectively with the new threats of the 21st century. So tonight, I ask the Congress to join me in creating a single permanent department with an overriding and urgent mission: protecting the American people from terrorist attack.

One department must be in charge of securing the American homeland – and held accountable for results. One department must coordinate homeland security functions now fragmented across the government. One department must be charged with anticipating attacks, and acting to address our vulnerabilities.

Right now, as many as a hundred different government agencies have some responsibilities for homeland security. Yet no one has final accountability. The Coast Guard has several missions, from search and rescue to maritime treaty enforcement. It reports to the Transportation Department, whose primary responsibilities are roads, rails, bridges, and the airways. The Customs Service, among other duties, collects tariffs and prevents smuggling – and it is part of the Treasury Department, whose primary responsibility is fiscal policy, not security.

Tonight, I propose a permanent Cabinet-level Department of Homeland Security to unite essential agencies that should be working more closely together: among them the Coast Guard, the Border Patrol, the Customs Service, Immigration officials, the Transportation Security Administration, and the Federal Emergency Management Agency. Employees of this new agency will come to work every morning with an overriding mission – to defend their fellow citizens from attack, and respond effectively if they come.

The Department of Homeland Security will be charged with four primary tasks. This new agency will control our borders and prevent terrorists or explosives from entering our country. It will work with state and local authorities to respond quickly and effectively to emergencies. It will bring together our best scientists to develop technologies that detect biological, chemical, or nuclear weapons – and to discover the drugs and treatments to best protect our citizens. And this new department will review the best intelligence and law enforcement information from all agencies of government, and produce a single daily picture of the threats against our homeland. These analysts will be responsible for imagining the worst – and defending against it.

My intention is not to increase the size of government, but to increase its focus and effectiveness. The staff of this new department will be largely drawn from the agencies we are combining. By ending duplication and overlap, we will spend less on overhead, and more on protecting America. This reorganization will give the good people of our government their best opportunity to succeed, by organizing our resources in a way that is thorough and unified.

What I am proposing tonight is the most extensive reorganization of the federal government since the 1940s. During his presidency, Harry Truman recognized that our Nation's fragmented defenses had to be reorganized to win the Cold War. He brought our military forces together under a unified Department of Defense; and created the National Security Council, to bring together defense, intelligence, and diplomacy. Truman's reforms are still helping us to fight terror abroad – and now we need similar dramatic reforms to secure our people at home.

Only the United States Congress can create a new department of government. So tonight I ask for your help in encouraging your representatives to support it. We face an urgent need, and we must move quickly, before the end of the congressional session. All in our government have learned a great deal since September 11th, and we must act on every lesson. We are stronger and better prepared tonight than we were on that terrible morning – and with your help, and the support of Congress, we will be stronger still.

History has called our Nation into action. History has placed a great challenge before us: Will America – with our unique position and power – blink in the face of terror, or lead to a freer, more civilized world? There is only one answer: this great country will lead the world to safety, security, peace, and freedom.

Thank you, good night, and God bless America.