THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

October 16, 2002

Dear Mr. Fumagalli:

This is a follow up to your letter in which you request the opportunity to photograph the President for your book on the ten most important Heads of State.

We had hoped that we might be able to accommodate this request. However, a further review of the President's calendar for this timeframe makes it impossible for us to schedule his attendance. I know you will understand that, with the tremendous demands on his time, he must often miss special opportunities, as is the case this time.

It is a deep disappointment to the President that the constraints on his time preclude him from participating in more events such as this. I know he would want me to thank you for your interest in including him in your plans and to send his best wishes.

Sincerely,

Bradley A. Blakeman
Deputy Assistant to the President
and Director of Appointments and Scheduling

Dear Mr. Blakeman:

I am the Italian freelance photographer who asked to photograph the President for his book on the ten most Important Heads of State of our days.
I received your kind reply at the beginning of September, and was very pleased to see that you took some of your precious time to get back to me.

However, Mr. Blakeman, I strongly feel that I cannot renounce my dream, and I also hope that you will forgive my persistence. Please don't consider it as a lack of respect.

I do understand, as you wrote in your letter, that you receive an enormous amount of similar requests and the demands on his time are just overwhelming; but I know you will agree with me that a project like mine would be ill-conceived from its very beginning if it didn't include the President of The United States of America.
I would like to emphasize that I wouldn't take even a minute of his time to accomplish my job, especially in these weeks of extremely intense and demanding work. My only request is to be allowed for just a few hours to stay close enough to him to take personal, intimate, and original portraits that cannot be obtained otherwise, among hundreds of other photographers and journalists during a press conference. I can assure you that my presence would hardly be noticed.

Mr. Blakeman, the energy and enthusiasm I am devoting to this project have already taken me to photograph Fidel Castro and to get an appointment in December with Carlo Azeglio Ciampi, the President of Italy. I don't want to believe that you will let me down and deny my respectful request.

Thank you very much for your attention, and remain.

Sincerely,

Roberto Fumagalli

Dear Mr. Fumagalli:

Thank you for your letter in which you request to photograph the President for your book on the ten most important Heads of State.

While the President would appreciate an opportunity like this, we regret that it will not be possible to arrange such an occasion. I know you will understand that with the tremendous demands on his time and the large volume of similar requests, private appointments are extremely difficult to schedule even though each one is important.

I know that the President would want me to thank you for your wish to include him in your plans and to send his very best regards.

Sincerely,

Re.: My personal project.

Dear Mr. President:

My name is Roberto Fumagalli. I am a 31 year old Italian freelance photographer living in the Los Angeles Area.

I am currently working on a very ambitious personal project: a photographic book on the ten most important Heads of State of our days. It is a job that will require many years of research, traveling, persistence, and patience, but I am ready to go through all this hard work to fulfill my dream.

My wish would be to follow you for a certain period of time (some hours, maybe split in different days, according to your availability and schedule), but I would also like to ask you not to be put among hundreds of other photographers and journalists during a press conference or a public speech. I respectfully ask to be given a "special" treatment, allowing me to follow you where not many people have the privilege to be.
I can only imagine how difficult it is to find a place for me in your schedule, but I can assure you that my presence would be hardly noticed.

Thank you very much for your kind attention to this matter, and remain.

Sincerely,

Roberto Fumagalli

Oct. 22, 2002.

Dear Mr. Blakeman:

I am the Italian freelance photographer who asked to photograph the President for his book on the ten most important Heads of State of our days. I received your kind reply to my second fax a few days ago. Although pleased to see that you consider my request worthy of attention but at the same time saddened to learn that it has been turned down for the second time, I would like to explain very clearly what my intentions are. I also hope that you will forgive my persistence and won't consider it as a lack of respect.

I do realize that you receive an enormous amount of similar requests and that the demands on his time are extremely numerous; but I know you will agree that such a project would be ill-conceived from its very beginning if it didn't include the President of The United States of America. Moreover, I would like to emphasize that I wouldn't take even a minute of his time to accomplish my job. My only request is to be allowed for just a few hours to stay close enough to him to get some portraits that cannot be obtained otherwise, among hundreds of other photographers and journalists during a press conference. I can assure you that my presence would hardly be noticed and would be at the same time very respectful and discreet.

Mr. Blakeman, as I wrote you in my previous fax, the energy and enthusiasm I am devoting to this project have already taken me to photograph Fidel Castro and to get an appointment in December with Carlo Azeglio Ciampi, the President of Italy. I hope that you will not let me down, declining my respectful request.

Thank you very much for your attention, and remain.

Sincerely,

Roberto Fumagalli

Dear Mr. Blakeman:

I am the Italian freelance photographer who asked to photograph the President for his book on the ten most important Heads of State of our days.

I know that by now I have probably become a nuisance to you, but I hope that you will forgive my persistence and won't consider it as a lack of respect.

I do realize that you receive an enormous amount of similar requests, that the demands on his time are extremely numerous, and obviously you can't satisfy everybody. But I would like to emphasize that I wouldn't take even a minute of his time to accomplish my job. My only request is to be permitted for just a very short time to stay close enough to him to get some portraits or situations that cannot be obtained otherwise, among hundreds of other photographers and journalists during a press conference. I can assure you that my presence would hardly be noticed and would be at the same time very respectful and discreet.

Mr. Blakeman, as I wrote you in my previous faxes, the energy and enthusiasm I am devoting to this project have already taken me to photograph Fidel Castro a few months ago and to get an appointment in December with Carlo Azeglio Ciampi, the President of Italy.

Dear Miss Fordyce:

Thank you for your letter in which you invite the President to have dinner with you and your family.

While the President would appreciate an opportunity to visit with you, we regret that it will not be possible to arrange such an occasion. I know you will understand that with the tremendous demands on his time and the large volume of similar requests, private appointments are extremely difficult to schedule even though each one is important.

I know that the President would want me to thank you for your wish to include him in your plans and to send his very best regards.

Dear President Bush,

I am writing to invite you to my house for dinner. Since your schedule is so busy you can pick the day and time. My mom can fix Mexican or Italian. What do you like best?

My parents and my little brother and I were visiting Abraham Lincoln's birthplace when I decided to invite you to my house. Abraham Lincoln was the sixteenth president and he had many hard choices to make, too. He is another, besides you. I hope you can come. My phone number is [REDACTED] (b)(6)

Dear Mr. Bradley,

Thank you for your letter of September 20, 2002.
I am again appealing to you to gain me an appointment with President Bush.

Please note the today's Washington Post front

Dear Mr. President:

We are wanting to schedule with you a meeting for Sunday, December 1, 2002 at 9:00 a.m. or 1:00 p.m., regarding the issues concerning the welfare of our children and of other children here in the United States of America.

Please read the following letter which I had faxed to the Scheduling Office on November 1, 2002.

If this date does not work for you, we could meet with you the following Sunday, December 8, 2002 at 9:00 a.m. or 1:00 p.m.

Thank you again for your attention to our critical and serious matter.

Dear Mr. Flammer:

Thank you for your recent letter inviting the President to speak to the students of STARS Academy.

We very much appreciate this thoughtful invitation. It is always a pleasure for the President to meet with students, teachers, and school staff. However, I know you will understand that the President's many official duties prevent him from accepting your kind offer.

The President sends his very best wishes and encourages students to take full advantage of the educational opportunities that are available to them. America needs her students to be their best so she can continue to be her best.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. President:

I am a Teach for America Social Studies teacher in one of this nation's most impoverished areas, Helena, Arkansas. I am writing you to request your presence as a guest speaker at our school, STARS Academy. As a writing diagnostic, I asked my students to write a letter to anyone in the world, inviting him or her to be a guest speaker at STARS. Enclosed is a letter from Toinie Davis, a student who chose you.

Our county, Phillips County, is one of the poorest in the country. Drugs and violence have become the pastime and hope has evaporated like the dew that accumulates on the cotton in the morning. Phillips ranks among the bottom ten counties in America for both male and female life expectancy. Teen pregnancies, infant death, and poverty plague this primarily African-american community like they have since the cycle began hundreds of years ago when Africans were first enslaved to pick cotton. Unlike the struggles of urban youth that has received a great deal of media attention, the youth from rural areas in the Mississippi Delta are forgotten and ignored.

STARS Academy is an alternative school, primarily for students who were kicked out of the regular schools for discipline problems. Academically, many of the students are more than two or three years behind their peers. Our attendance rate on some days is lower than our dropout rate, fluctuating from 35% to 60% daily. One hundred percent of our students qualify for the Federal Free lunch Program. Many of our students have already seen the inside of correctional facilities and unless something changes, realistically, many will return.

Mr. President, role models here are hard to find. I think the students would benefit greatly from hearing your story and I believe your advice could truly resonate with this group of at-risk youth. If you believe you may be able and willing to visit, please feel free to contact me at school or at home (870) 338-4400 or (b)(6) respectfully.

ENCL.

I know you are a busy man and I understand if you choose to decline our invitation; it would mean a lot to Toinie, though, if you or someone in the office could respond to her letter with an autograph or something of that nature. She is very interested in American History and contemporary American Politics. She has a genuine thirst for knowledge.

Thank you for your consideration of my request.

Yours truly,

Dear President Bush,

Hi, my name is Toinie D. Davis. I live in Helena, Arkansas. We are inviting you to our School, Star's Academy, located on Highway 20 in Helena, Arkansas. We are asking you to come out to be our Guest Speaker and to speak to all of the children here at Star's Academy.

The children here would like to ask you questions that they think you have the answers to. They would like to ask questions about political issues, pertaining to how you thought and acted when the attack occurred on Sept. 11, and what you did in order to solve all these problems? What kinds of things are you doing to avoid another attack? The children would really like to know.

We would enjoy knowing what your life is like as the President? What types of challenges, and sacrifices did you make in order to become the President? We would like to know what types of things go on in the President's office? What are some more things the President faces in the office?

We would like to know more things about how you balance and carry out with your personal life? How do you handle being all these things the President, a father, a husband, and a friend to many people? We would like to know how you feel. Does anything bother you as to being all of these things, having all of the pressure put onto you?

We know that you are a very busy man but if you can find the time to come and be our guest speaker on any day that you can it will be very appreciated. And if you can't we would appreciate it a lot if you would just give us a response or feel free to call our Principal, Joyce Cottoms at the School, Star's Academy (870) 338-4400. We are hoping that you will come and make our children very happy by you coming to speak to them on any day that you can.

Sincerely,

Toinie Davis

Dear Ms. Friend:

Thank you for your recent letter inviting the President to read to the second grade students at Mariners Elementary School.

We very much appreciate this thoughtful invitation. It is always a pleasure for the President to meet with students, teachers, and school staff. However, I know you will understand that the President's many official duties prevent him from accepting your kind offer.

The President sends his very best wishes and encourages students to take full advantage of the educational opportunities that are available to them. America needs her students to be their best so she can continue to be her best.

Mariners Elementary School Foundation is coming upon its fifth year anniversary. The Foundation, a non-profit corporation committed to supporting Mariners Elementary, was founded to bridge the gap between the shortage of funds at the state and district level and a quality education for our children. All funds raised are directed towards enhancing the academic curriculum at Mariners Elementary. In this time, we have hired a full-time science teacher, paid for teacher aides in all upper grade classrooms, expanded the Project Real program, purchased computers for every classroom, and spruced up the playground and front office to name a few of our accomplishments.

For the 2002-2003 school year it is our goal to further expand the Reading program at our school. In this regard, we are seeking to model a "Celebrity Read" program created by a second grade teacher in Santa Clarita and reported upon in the Los Angeles Times.

The program itself is simple. Send invitations to Southland officials, business leaders, and celebrities like you, and ask them to give an hour of their time and share their favorite childhood book with our second graders and, in doing this, explain why reading has been important in their lives.

The ramifications of the program are far reaching; namely, to spark a positive response from the children, to give them a chance to hear about the value of literature, and to appreciate how important reading can be for their futures.

Kids get tired of hearing how important reading is from their teachers and parents ... so we are writing to ask if you could give us an hour of your time to read and share with our second graders. The giving of your time is the most important aspect, for, if necessary, the teacher can lend you a book to read aloud.

We are excited about this Reading Program. In the past we have been privileged to have as readers Congressman Chris Cox, Anaheim Angel baseball players, the Superintendent of NMUSD, the Police Chief of Costa Mesa and the Mayor to name a few. We are completely flexible as to the date and time of your visit. So please check your calendar and join us in seeking to enhance the education of our children.

Sincerely,

Susan Friend

Dear Mr. Garrett:

Thank you for your letter in which you request an appointment with the President.

The President would appreciate an opportunity to converse with you. Regrettably, it will not be possible for us to arrange such a meeting. I know you will understand that, with the tremendous demands on his time and the large volume of similar requests, personal appointments are extremely difficult to schedule, even though each one is important.

I know that the President would want me to thank you for your request to include him in your plans and to send his very best wishes.

To whom it may concern:

August 29, 2002

I'm not sure if this is even possible, but here goes. I would like to extend an invitation to President Bush and the first lady to have a very informal dinner at my home. I know this may be a very foolish request to make, but I admire him so much, more than words could possibly say. I admire him more for his Godly and Christian stance as a man of the presidency, rather than for his position as the President of the United States. He is an extremely impressive man. I pray for him daily. As I am a member of the Presidential Prayer Team, I also pray for matters sent to me via e-mail, through the website. Most of my prayers are for understanding and conviction, that he will use God's discretion and judgment, when making serious and vital decisions for our country, not his own. I believe him to be a man of intense integrity, which of course should be expected of any President. Of course, we didn't see much of that in the last presidency.

I can't tell you how much of an honor it would be to have him in our home. I don't live in a mansion and we, my husband, my son and I, are not rich. But nevertheless, we love our country, and our president, but most of all we love Jesus. I am on disability, but a hair stylist by trade, my husband is a construction worker and, not to your surprise I'm sure, my two and half year old little boy doesn't work.

I think that the President should have dinner with at least one person a year who is not any form of government. He should remain well rooted with his countrymen. I would be lying if I said that I wouldn't ask him about some things that are going on in the country. Personally, I would like to hear the words out of the "horse's mouth" about some things. I'm not really political (or politically correct for that matter) so it's not like I want him to explain himself to death. I'm just a citizen who would like to meet the president and have a civil, unrushed, untelevised, uninterrupted, honest to goodness, soul to soul conversation with a little bit of food to boot!! You know, even Jesus ate with the commoners and "sinners", and if Jesus Christ himself could sit with HIS people, then so can G.W.. I would love to see him be able to kick back, cut up and have an elbow in the ribs good time (and believe me this would be the household to do that). What an awesome privilege that would be!!

Now, I am not naive to think that this is an easy task. However, anything is possible when you're the President of the United States. It is my hope that this letter makes it to the president. I know what I am asking is a tremendous ordeal, but I would, sincerely, love to have this opportunity.

Thank you and I eagerly await your response!!

President George W. Bush
President of the United States of America

Washington, DC 20502-0184

Dear President Bush;

On behalf of LifeCare Alliance, I wish to extend an invitation to visit our Agency when you next visit Columbus, Ohio. LifeCare Alliance is an excellent example of how volunteerism works to reduce government costs and provide a higher level of service. I am aware of how important this issue is to you as you call upon citizens to participate in a September of Service and your support of the USA Freedom Corps, Principles and Reforms for a Citizen Service Act.

Since 1898, LifeCare Alliance has been a leader in identifying and delivering health and nutrition services to meet the changing needs of our community. The Agency provides home health and nutrition services to the residents of Central Ohio, maximizing their ability to live independently and promote personal and family well-being.

The best example of volunteerism is demonstrated in our Meals-on-Wheels Program. LifeCare Alliance is one of the largest Meals-on-Wheels program in the country. Hot meals are delivered to homebound individuals every day of the year. Frozen meals are provided for those who are safely able to heat them. In 2001, 1,153,373 meals were delivered in cooperation with individual and corporate volunteers such as Honda of America. Forty-eight percent of the meals delivered is accomplished by our volunteer force. It is our goal that within five years our volunteers deliver all weekend meals which will increase our corporate volunteers substantially. Your visit will provide dramatic assistance with reaching these goals.

The availability of a nutritious, home delivered meal can be the only thing preventing institutionalization. The Agency's cost-effectiveness and compassionate care can prevent thousands from becoming dependent on federal/state welfare programs to pay for their care thus, saving millions in taxpayer dollars. Each senior or chronically ill person that LifeCare Alliance keeps independent in their own home, saves Ohio tax payers $40,000 per year according to AARP.

I look forward to introducing you to our volunteers and showing you first hand what an integral part our volunteers are to our Agency. Please contact me with any questions at (614) 437-2801.

Sincerely,

Charles W. Gehring

Mission

To be the leader in identifying and delivering health and nutrition services to meet the changing needs of our community. LifeCare Alliance was the second Meals-on-Wheels program established in the United States and we formed the first Visiting Nurse Association in Ohio. This VNA has been providing services to the elderly, chronically ill and disabled adults since 1898.

Programs

Meals-on-Wheels Hot, nutritious meals are delivered to homebound individuals 365 days a year. Additionally, frozen meals are provided for those who are safely able to heat them, allowing for flexibility for doctor appointments and personal mealtime preferences.

Senior Dining Centers For more independent older adults, Senior Dining Centers located in central Ohio provide a nutritious lunch as well as a meeting place. Transportation is to each of our nineteen Dining Centers.

After School/Supper Meals and Daycare Meal Program 1,500 meals are delivered to over forty after school care sites throughout Columbus for school age children.

Visiting Nurse Association LifeCare Alliance registered nurses, physical, occupational and speech therapists and community nutrition coordinator work with the patient, family and doctor by providing in-home care to the recently discharged from the hospital or have a chronic condition such as diabetes, etc. Following a care plan tailored for patients, care is administered to allow the patient to recover in their own home.

Home Care Homemaker and home health aides assist homebound individuals with basic activities such as cleaning, bathing, grocery shopping, banking and other errands to remain in their homes by providing biweekly and weekly visits.

Senior Wellness Centers Ten Senior Wellness Centers are located around central Ohio neighborhoods in areas where the population is under-served, has limited access to health care and/or has limited financial resources. Each center offers regular health assessments to identify early signs of chronic illness; health management for chronic conditions and to promote a healthy life style, skilled nursing to assist with such procedures as ear irrigation, prescribed injections, dressing changes, and toenail trimming; and screening tests such as blood sugar and urine analyses. A registered nurse and a licensed dietitian staff are available at each center. A flu and pneumococcal vaccine immunization program is offered every fall.

Nurse Practitioner A certified adult nurse practitioner provides primary care to adults over the age of 18, financially disadvantaged, under-served minorities and individuals who have no primary care physician. Importance of lifestyle changes for individuals with chronic illnesses, such as, diabetes, congestive heart disease, hypertension and pulmonary diseases.

2001 Statistics and Community Impact CHECK #s

- ◆ 1,153,373 million meals were delivered to 1,180 frail, older adults in their homes. 219,369 meals were provided to 5,369 older adults in congregate or in-home settings.
- ◆ 11,065 visits were made to 419 frail, elderly patients.
- ◆ 25,463 homemaker visits were made to 500 individuals and 9,969 home health aide visits were made to 100 individuals.
- ◆ 9,631 appointments were completed at the Senior Wellness Centers.

The availability of a nutritious home delivered meal or a visit from a registered nurse is often the only thing preventing institutionalization and ultimately a large increased savings for government programs. The agency's cost-effective and compassionate care can prevent thousands from becoming dependent on federal/state welfare programs to pay for their care and saving millions in taxpayer dollars. Each senior or chronically ill person that LifeCare Alliance keeps independent in their own homes saves Ohio tax payers $40,000 per year according to AARP.

- 1898 Organized the Instructive District Nursing Association (IDNA) with a group of 18 women headed by Carrie Nelson Black, wife of Mayor Samuel Black. They were concerned about the sick poor and the high infant and maternal mortality rates of the day. The Black family parlor at 1000 Bryden Road served as the agency's first home. The IDNA was the first Visiting Nurse agency in Ohio.
- 1904 Typhoid epidemic struck down 1,837 people in Columbus. IDNA nurses were the front line of defense.
- 1905 The IDNA Committee on Tuberculosis became the Columbus Tuberculosis Society, now known as the Central Ohio Breathing Association.
- 1908 Established the first Baby Camp with funding for two tents donated by the Columbus Evening Dispatch newspaper. One tent was erected on the grounds of the Godman Guild Settlement House, the other at Mercy Hospital.
- 1913 Flooding killed 93 people and destroyed more than 4,000 homes. Director Jane Tuttle was placed in charge of all relief work. Police and rescue crews reported to and took direction from her.
- 1915 Accepted its first public health students, from Grant Hospital School of Nursing.
- 1920 Established infant welfare stations throughout the city. District Nurses weighed the children and instructed the mothers about infant and child care. No physicians were in attendance.
- 1924 IDNA became a charter member of the Community Chest, forerunner of the United Way.
- 1932 Established emergency consultation service in Nursing Office, the first crisis center in Columbus, to tend to the needs brought about by the Depression.
- 1935 Employed the agency's first dietitian.
- 1948 Admitted men as Board members for the first time, after operating for half a century with an all-woman board.
- 1952 Hired first mental health professional.
- 1959 Staffed January flood relief effort with 35 nurses.
- 1962 Initiated mass Sabin polio vaccine program in Columbus. IDNA nurses were in the forefront of providing immunizations to the community.

Historical Milestones

- 1969 Established senior citizen nursing clinics, now known as Wellness Centers, in senior housing areas.
 - 1972 Changed name to Community Health and Nursing Service (CHNS).
 - 1973 Initiated kitchen at Ohio State University. CHNS's first nutrition program, Food for Elderly People (FFEP), initiated to provide hot, nutritionally balanced noon meals for older people.
 - 1975 Established homemaker program.
 - 1976 Changed name from FFEP Program to NICE (Nutrition Involving Community Elderly). Funded through Title III of the Older Americans Act, NICE served 287,901 meals its first year.
 - 1987 Adopted the name LifeCare Alliance to demonstrate the agency's expertise in caring for people from birth through old age by an alliance of health care professionals, volunteers and programs designed to promote independent living.
 - 1989 Expanded community nursing clinics to 17 Columbus-area locations.
 - 1990 Moved into new program building on West Mound Street. First time all the administrative programs were united in one central location.
 - 1991 Increased meals production to 4,000 per day. Kitchen opens at Mound Street complex.
 - 1993 Produced for the first time more than a million annual meals.
 - 1994 Introduced dining centers for Asian elders, seeing participation grow from 30 to almost 200 in less than a year.
 - 1997 Introduced frozen meals, delivered weekly, to people who can safely forego a daily visitor.
 - 1998 LifeCare Alliance's Centennial Year. A year of celebration.
 - 1999 Introduced Kosher Meals-on-Wheels in partnership with Wexner Heritage Village for delivery across Franklin County.
 - 2001 Opened the first Soul Food and Hispanic Senior Dining Centers in Central Ohio. Began delivery of after-school meals.
 - 2002 LifeCare nurse practitioner opened primary health care clinic for adults in Columbus who prefer to go to a nurse instead of a physician for their primary health care.
- Introduced new look for the agency to strengthen brand identity, including logos, colors, and an icon named "Spirit".
- Opened a Somali Senior Dining Center with menus and activities geared to meet the dietary and social needs of older Somali immigrants.

Welcome to the LifeCare Alliance Home Care Program! We are delighted to serve you, and hope that you will find your experience with the "LifeCare Givers" to be helpful and satisfying.

Here's how it works: First, a nurse will visit you in your home to discuss the care you need. You will then sign an agreement stating what services will be performed for you. Services available are:

Homemakers

- Change or make the bed
- Clean bathroom
- Clean kitchen, defrost refrigerator
- Dust, sweep, mop or vacuum floors
- Take out trash
- Laundry clothes and linens
- Clean stove & oven
- Prepare a light meal
- Shop for groceries, prescriptions
- Bank and pay bills

Home Health Aides

- Help with bathing, shaving
- Mouth care
- Shampoo hair
- Trim finger and toe nails
- Skin Care
- Conduct range of motion exercises
- Monitor pulse and blood pressure
- Observe health status
- Teach and encourage independence

If you need help with an activity not on the list above, call the LifeCare Alliance Customer Service Representative at 278-3130.

Your caregiver will call you to arrange a time for your service. Most visits are made between 7:45 am and 5:00 pm Monday through Friday. We make great effort to provide the same person each time. However, someone else will be assigned if your regular caregiver is sick or on vacation. When you do see someone different you will still receive the cheerful, high quality care you have come to expect from the home care professionals of LifeCare Alliance.

At the end of each visit your caregiver will leave a signed copy of your service record with you. A service coordinator will also visit you periodically to make sure you are receiving the appropriate service and that you are satisfied with the care you receive. Please report any problems with your care to the supervisor at 278-3149.

Please call the Home Care Program at 278-3149 immediately if you cannot keep your appointment. If we go to your home and you are not there we will notify the person you designate as your emergency contact. And please, put your pet away before your caregiver arrives!

During its 104th year of service LifeCare Alliance served nearly 20,000 people on an operating budget of $12,174,776. Whether that care was based in the home or in the community, it was provided to enable the aged and chronically ill to remain independently and safely at home. Most, but by no means all, of those served are elderly. Nutrition for more than a thousand youngsters participating in after-school programs was also instituted in the year 2001, through a partnership with the Children's Hunger Alliance.

Do you wonder about some of your medicine?

LifeCare Alliance, The Ohio State University School of Pharmacy and Cardinal Health have formed a partnership to give seniors information that will help them take their medicine in the most effective way.

The Visiting Pharmacist can:

- Review all your medications and make a list of them for you.
- Review when each is to be taken.
- Help you develop a plan to make taking your medicine easier.
- Tell you if something conflicts with other medicine you are taking.
- Discuss any problems you may have getting your medicine.
- Answer questions about your medicines.
- Talk about problems or side effects you notice with your medicine.

Share your time, talent, and heart

Each year, LifeCare volunteers contribute more than 100,000 hours to help their Central Ohio neighbors remain independent and in their own homes.

About LifeCare Alliance

LifeCare Alliance pioneered the delivery of home and community-based health and nutrition services in Ohio, forming the first Visiting Nurse Association in 1898 and one of the first Meals-on-Wheels programs in the century half a century later. LifeCare Alliance today provides a comprehensive array of services designed to support the efforts of the aged and chronically ill to remain independent and in their own homes.

LifeCare Alliance is a not-for-profit organization that provides care regardless of a person's ability to pay. Charitable contributions, planned gifts and estates supplement client contributions and other public and private support. Among the programs provided are:

In the Home:

Meals-on-Wheels
Visiting Nurses and Therapists
Homemakers & Home Health Aides

In the Community:

Senior Dining Centers
Senior Wellness Centers
Adult Nurse Practitioner

Your volunteer efforts enable LifeCare Alliance to extend services to those who are unable to pay for their care.

Deliver lunch and a smile

Help the homebound by delivering Meals-on-Wheels. It's quick and convenient. Form a delivery team with your co-workers, have your civic club adopt a route, or deliver with your family. Volunteers are needed 365 days a year.

Shop to your heart's content

Put your shopping skills to work! Run errands or pick up groceries for those who can't get out.

Share your talents

Make a difference in your community by sharing your talents at a neighborhood LifeCare Center. Lead exercise classes, entertain seniors, or develop new activities.

Have a great day at the office

Make new friends while helping LifeCare with the nuts and bolts of operations. Help out with mailing, filing, making appointments, or answering phones at LifeCare's Mound Street headquarters or at Wellness Centers across the county.

open regrets

Dear Mr. Bush:

Enclosed is a copy of something you may have an interest in. I appreciate the work you are doing on behalf of our country. The purpose of this letter is to seek your assistance in a matter that has brought great concern to my family and me. I believe that you are well aware that I have done everything humanly possible to protect you, your family and the welfare of this nation. I believe that God rises up men and women in times of crisis. I am certain that God has a perfect plan for all of us. I was led to read Psalm 34 as I asked the Lord to lead me in writing this letter. I know God will take care of me and in the course of prayer I have felt a burden to write you this letter.

From the beginning of my ordeal I have taken the position to do my very best to protect what I care very much about. I have allowed myself to carry burdens that God has enabled me to carry. This ordeal has been incredibly difficult at times and it has brought me much closer to the Lord. I have become aware of many things that I need your assistance to with. I hesitate to write details of this matter because of my intention to fax this letter as well as send you a hard copy.

It has been my intention since the beginning to do what I believe is right. The basis of my decisions has been on my own moral principals and what I believe the Lord was leading me to do. The Bible has taught me that there is safety in a multitude of council. I am willing to assist you and our nation in ways that I am uniquely qualified. I am certain that some of things that I have experienced are not consistent with the Constitution of the United States. I choose to live in this nation and raise my children here. I have purposefully tried to not do anything that would hurt this country or its ability to defend itself. I realize that the system to defend the interests of this country is very vast and it would be impossible for you to know everything that is going on all times.

I have enclosed a copy of some notes I took while was in deep prayer at the Immaculate Conception Adoration chapel a few weeks ago. I have intentionally tried to be open with my experiences through conversations with Ms. Anne Mahoney. I have come to the conclusion that there are certain aspects of my experiences that have misunderstood from the beginning. I am aware of alot of what has happened to me and I personally asked God to give me the capacity to forgive. The Bible teaches t the children will be held accountable for the sins of their father. I thank God for the grace he has given all of us.

I know God will continue to deliver me from all my trials. I am not concerned with just the personal safety of my family. I am certain that the world has changed and there will be many challenges that must faced in the future. We as a nation have reached a very important cross roads and I am grateful that we have good leadership in this country. I am not specifically aware of how much you know about my situation and what has transpired in my life. I know that God has placed a call on my life and I am certain he never gives more that we can handle. I know bad things sometimes happen to good people. God has taught me that his words are true and to whom much is given, much will be expected.

I would like the opportunity to speak to you and your father at some point. I have tried to contact various branches of the defense community from the beginning. I understand now that there was alot of confusion about my intentions and what was happening. I am also aware that it was probrobly in the best interest of several people that I would not be taken seriously. I would be inclined to just go on with my life if it was not for the fact that the actions of so few could jeopardize the welfare of so many.

I have faith that you will receive this letter and the notes. I appreciate all you have done for my family and me. I look forward to meeting with you in the future. God bless you and remain steadfast in your faith.

Dear Dr. Glass:

Thank you for your letter in which you invite the President to go deep sea fishing off the Alabama coast.

While the President would appreciate an opportunity to visit with you, we regret that it will not be possible to arrange such an occasion. I know you will understand that with the tremendous demands on his time and the large volume of similar requests, private appointments are extremely difficult to schedule even though each one is important.

I know that the President would want me to thank you for your wish to include him in your plans and to send his very best regards.

Sincerely,

Bradley A. Blakeman

Dear Mr. President,

I am writing this letter to invite you deep sea fishing off the beautiful Alabama coast. Not only would it involve the great outdoors, but it could help draw awareness to an issue that we are facing now and will be combating for generations to come.

I know your time is valuable, so I will be brief. As the U.S. continues fighting the war on terrorism, Middle East tension is rising. America's dependency on Saudi oil is of concern. In the future, America's need to become self-sufficient is inevitable. As an avid outdoorsman, I know the consequences. Clear understanding and long-range planning are key.

I have just moved to the Gulf Coast but my love for deep sea fishing dates back many years. Coastal waters (FL, AL, MS, LA, TX) are facing a major dilemma in the form of rising mercury levels as a direct result of offshore drilling. Recent reports in a local paper reveal that the oil and gas operations dump more than one billion pounds of mercury-contaminated drilling fluids into the Gulf each year. The drilling fluids cool and lubricate drill bits as crews bore new wells. The mercury levels are so high, the FDA has already banned the commercial selling of specific fish.

California is facing a similar problem. A bill is currently in their legislation that will regulate off-shore drilling. This bill is likely to pass with less than three dozen rigs offshore. The Gulf of Mexico has over 5,500 rigs that have drilled more than 50,000 natural gas and oil wells.

As I stare at my pregnant wife, who has consumed fish and shellfish from the Gulf, I wonder about my unborn child. Will the mercury affect him? Will he be mentally retarded or have a learning disability? How will this situation affect him later in life? Will he get to enjoy a great day fishing followed by a wonderful meal?

This is not a state issue! This involves the residents of all the coastal states and the millions who flock there every year to vacation.

Enclosed are pictures of good times enjoying the waters that are, and will be threatened by becoming a self-sufficient country. Also enclosed are two recent articles concerning the issue!

Come go fishing and draw awareness to an issue that needs immediate attention. Your efforts will be appreciated for generations to come.

Mercury concerns hit West

04/07/02

By BEN RAINES
Staff Reporter

In response to reports of mercury contamination at oil and gas rigs in the Gulf of Mexico, California's legislature is considering a bill that would require mercury testing around that state's offshore rigs in the Pacific Ocean.

The California bill, which is being pushed by the California commercial fishing association, also calls for an investigation into possible harm to humans who consume fish or shellfish caught near oil rigs.

Sponsors say they believe the bill has an excellent chance of passage once it leaves the Legislature's Fisheries and Aquaculture Committee.

There are no reports of similar bills proposed by state legislatures on the Gulf Coast, where mercury contamination of sediment beneath some rigs is well documented.

About the time the California bill was being crafted, the Gulf States Marine Fisheries Commission failed to endorse recommendations for new mercury testing in the Gulf. Those recommendations were made by a panel of scientists from the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, the National Marine Fisheries Service, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and several state wildlife agencies.

The bill's author, assembly member Virginia Strom-Martin, a Democrat from a district on California's northern coast, became aware of the potential problem in her state while reading about mercury contamination in the Gulf of Mexico, according to her spokesman.

Recent stories in the Mobile Register revealed that oil and gas operations dump more than 1 billion pounds of mercury-contaminated drilling fluids into the Gulf each year. The drilling fluids cool and lubricate drill bits as crews bore new wells.

Studies by the U.S. Minerals Management Service, which regulates the nation's offshore oil fields, indicate that mercury levels in the sand around some Gulf rigs are three times higher than levels found at EPA Superfund sites that are closed to all fishing. Mercury levels in some creatures living around those rigs are at least 25 times higher than levels found elsewhere in the Gulf.

"We see this as a right-to-know issue," said Mary Morgan, who handles fishery issues for Strom-Martin. "We don't know if the mercury is ending up in our fish, and we need to know. This is a primary food source.

"If this mercury is a problem, we've got to do something. And it doesn't really matter if the rigs are off of California or in the Gulf. We still need to know if the mercury is getting into the fish. Fish are caught in one place, like the Gulf, and then shipped all over the country. This affects everyone."

California's commercial fishermen, who actively fought oil drilling on the Pacific Coast, are also pushing for the testing around the rigs.

In an open letter endorsing the bill, Zeke Grader, head of the commercial Pacific Coast Fishermen's Associations, described the pollution in the Gulf and wrote, "the Minerals Management Service knew about this but refused to take action except to ban the dumping of the drill muds in state waters in the Gulf and kept promoting sport fishing around the rigs and the use of abandoned rigs as artificial sport fishing reefs."

Mercury contamination around the 5,500 Gulf oil rigs may be particularly dangerous because Gulf fish and fishermen both swarm to the rigs, which appear to be the most mercury-contaminated spots in the Gulf.

When Louisiana's recreational fishermen head offshore, 70 percent of them fish at the rigs, according to a study posted on the MMS Web site. Federal records indicate that the bulk of commercial fishing activity in the Gulf takes place off Louisiana, where the lion's share of the Gulf's oil rigs are located.

The MMS Web site trumpets each rig as a fish-rich "oasis" in the vast desert of the Gulf. Federal studies state that a rig supports resident colonies of up to 30,000 fish, with important commercial and recreational species, red snapper and amberjack listed as two of the most abundant species.

"I think a federal panel needs to investigate why you have a federal agency promoting fishing around the rigs if it were reasonable to expect the contamination was spreading to the fish," said Grader, the commercial fishing lobbyist.

MMS officials insist that GOOMEX, a federal study of the environmental

But state regulators say they don't have the money or the time to test all these fish on a regular basis.

Some saltwater fish are also high in mercury. The U.S. Food and Drug Administration has issued consumption advisories for king mackerel, swordfish, shark and tilefish. But in a series of stories last year, Register reporters found that FDA was working from poor and often incomplete data when it issued those advisories, and thus many other species could also be high in mercury.

The Register's own tests of popular restaurant and recreational fish such as grouper, redfish, cobia, amberjack and tripletail found mercury concentrations well in excess of the FDA's safe levels.

The Register also conducted hair tests of 70 Gulf Coast residents who said that they ate large marine fish regularly. Fifty-six of those exceeded the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's safe level for mercury in the human body. A surprising number of those tested had mercury concentrations five to 10 times higher than the safe level.

impact of the rigs, proved the mercury at the rigs wasn't ending up in fish. But the independent scientists who actually worked on the MMS study disagree.

Several told the Register that the data suggested the mercury dumped around the rigs might indeed be ending up in Gulf fish. MMS data show that the rigs with the highest mercury levels in the sediments also supported the most mercury contaminated fish.

Scientists at the National Marine Fisheries Service said they are becoming increasingly concerned about the mercury around the rigs and how it may have spread into the Gulf's food chain.

Recently, the fisheries service announced a substantial testing effort that will compare mercury levels in fish found near oil rigs with mercury levels in fish caught off the Florida coast, where there are no oil or gas rigs.

State officials say there are less than three dozen rigs off the California shore. Any potential contamination there would be much more limited than contamination in the Gulf, where 5,500 rigs have drilled more than 50,000 natural gas and oil wells.

A massive oil spill in the early days of drilling off California went a long way toward locking the oil industry out of widespread drilling along the California coastline. Environmental groups and the fishing industry teamed up to successfully battle the industry.

"I tend to think California is going to be cleaner than the Gulf because of the issues we raised in the 1980s, but we need to find out," Grader said. "I mean, what the heck is the Minerals Management Service doing promoting fishing around these rigs if they are aware and have knowledge that there is potential or actual contamination of fish around these rigs. It seems the agency has knowledge and is part and parcel of poisoning the public."

The California bill "finds and declares" that high concentrations of mercury resulting from drilling operations have been found around Gulf rigs, that mercury levels in fish and shellfish around the rigs exceed safe levels for human consumption and that people eating fish from around the rigs have high levels of methylmercury in their bodies.

In the last year, the Register tested a number of important commercial and recreational fish, such as redfish, grouper, amberjack and cobia, for mercury and found that most were so contaminated with the heavy metal that FDA regulations would prohibit them from being sold to the public.

The paper also organized hair tests of 70 coastal residents who said they ate fish at least once a week. A surprising number were found to have five to 10 times the EPA's safe level for mercury in the human body. The numbers were especially high in sportfishermen who fish the rigs.

"In the Gulf, they need to begin testing around the rigs right away," Grader said. "Then they can begin to decide if it is appropriate to have anyone fishing around these things. I would venture to say you may have a massive Superfund site in the middle of the Gulf of Mexico."

Mercury turns up in two more area rivers

Fish from Escatawpa, Tensaw show high levels of toxic substance, state testing finds

04/09/02

By BEN RAINES and BILL FINCH
Staff Reporters

New fish testing by state regulators has turned up high mercury levels in two more streams in the Mobile area, the Escatawpa River in western Mobile County and the Tensaw River in the Mobile-Tensaw Delta.

High levels of mercury in previous fish sampling efforts had prompted the state health department to issue "no consumption" advisories on largemouth bass for Fowl River, the Chickasabogue and Mobile River in Mobile County; Fish River and Bay Minette Creek in Baldwin County; and the Tombigbee River in Washington County. Those advisories remain in place.

The latest testing found that the high mercury levels in bass were persistent in Fowl and Fish rivers and in Chickasabogue Creek, though the fish tested most recently in Bay Minette Creek did not reveal mercury levels in excess of federal standards, according to a news release from the Alabama Department of Environmental Management.

The Mobile River, where in 1999 fish were found to have mercury levels three times higher than the federal standard, was not sampled this year.

The Alabama Department of Public Health has not yet issued any new consumption advisories for bass in the Escatawpa and Tensaw rivers, according to the agency's Web site. Neil Sass -- who issues consumption advisories for the state health department -- could not be reached Monday for comment.

The Register was unable to obtain actual test results Monday. A spokesman for ADEM, the agency that conducts the annual tests, was unsure how many fish were tested in each stream, the mercury levels in the fish, or which sections of the streams might be affected by mercury contamination.

ADEM tests also revealed PCB contamination in striped bass, blue catfish and channel catfish in the Coosa River reservoirs and adjacent streams north of Montgomery. PCBs --the acronym for polychlorinated biphenyls, an oily synthetic chemical once popular for such uses as cooling electrical systems -- are persistent toxic industrial pollutants.

Mercury has long been recognized as a problem in the Mobile River, where mercury-laden effluent from several chemical plants created dangerously contaminated "Superfund" sites along the river's banks.

But many Mobile residents expressed surprise a few years ago when the health department advised all consumers to avoid eating any bass caught from Fish and Fowl rivers and Bay Minette Creek. These streams, like the remote Escatawpa and Tensaw rivers, which tested high in the most recent sampling, were far from any known industrial sites and considered to be among the area's most pristine.

But federal regulators say that airborne pollution, primarily from coal-fired power plants such as Alabama Power Co.'s Barry Steam Plant north of Mobile, is distributing mercury particles over broad areas of the United States. Oddly, healthy streams that have an abundance of organic matter are among the most vulnerable to this airborne mercury pollution, scientists say.

That's because these streams support large colonies of the bacteria that readily convert mercury particles into an unusually dangerous compound, called methylmercury. The effects of methylmercury are magnified as the compound moves up the food chain into larger and larger fish.

Humans who eat those contaminated fish regularly can easily accumulate levels of methylmercury far in excess of federal safety standards. Women of child-bearing age and children are at greatest risk. Research has shown that young children exposed to high mercury levels in the womb or afterward often have learning disabilities or other mental deficits.

While there's little debate about the levels of mercury contamination in largemouth bass, health officials and state regulators have long acknowledged that they can't be sure how high the mercury levels are in other fish in the contaminated streams.

Because largemouth bass are voracious, top-end predators that consume lots of other fish, they tend to accumulate more mercury in their bodies. All the larger members of the bass family, as well as gar, bowfin, pickerel, sauger and some types of catfish, are also top-end freshwater predators that are just as likely to have high levels of mercury, according to fish scientists.

May 15, 2002

Dear Mr. Glasser:

The President asked me to thank you for your letter requesting to present him with your wife's piece entitled 'Ground Zero, a Presidential Tribute to Valor.'

We appreciate your interest in arranging such a presentation. Although the President would very much enjoy having the opportunity to receive this gift, I regret to write that due to the many requests of this nature, in fairness to all, we are unable to schedule individual appointments.

If you wish, you may forward your gift to the White House Gift Unit. The address is: White House Gift Unit, The White House, Washington, D.C. 20500.

Dear President Bush,

As you will note from the attached letter of Marc Racicot, Chairman of the Republican National Committee, this letter is being written to you directly based upon his recommendation.

encl
I am a WW II veteran, having served as a bombardier on a B-24 Liberator flying bombing missions over Germany. I was awarded 12 combat decorations, including the Distinguished Flying Cross.

With your election as president, we saw the re-birth of traditional American morality and principles.

Your speech at 'Ground Zero' in New York City was a momentous occasion, one to be cherished and remembered by all Americans.

My wife, Marny Glasser, working in stone, is well recognized for the artistic merit of her pieces of sculpture.

Emotionally moved by the event, visually as well as by your words, she has created a remarkable work out of a native black stone from Virginia, which she has entitled 'Ground Zero, a Presidential Tribute to Valor', epitomizing that magical and inspiring moment when you wrapped your arm around the fireman's shoulders.

HAROLD L. GLASSER

She wishes to present this piece to you, Mr. President, as a tribute to you on behalf of all Americans for your exemplary and magnificent performance as President of our wonderful country and as a human being working for all mankind.

We look forward to your favorable response and apologize for any inconvenience our request may occasion.

While this letter is addressed to President Bush and is intended for him, it has been directed to the attention of Mr. Brad Blake because of instructions received from the Scheduling Office. I trust that we are following the proper required procedure.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Glasser:

Thank you for your letter of March 14, 2002, and for your generous contribution. Your support of the Republican National Committee is most appreciated and will be invested wisely.

I also enjoyed the photographs of your wife's work in stone. Her work is both powerful and thought provoking. As much as I wish I could assist you in presenting "Ground Zero, A Presidential Tribute to Valor" to President Bush, I regret that I cannot. There is, as you can imagine, layer upon layer of protocol in any request to the President - protocol that cannot be circumvented. I do strongly urge you, however, to make contact with the White House directly to request an opportunity to present this fine artwork. The White House telephone number is (202) 456-1414.

Thank you again.

"MOTHER AND CHILD"

A native New Yorker, Marny Glasser at an early age evidenced the artistic talents that later led her to seek a Bachelor's Degree in Fine Arts from Boston University.

For five years following graduation from Boston University, she taught art to children in an assortment of grade levels in the public schools of Massachusetts and New Jersey. At the lowest grade levels, the reaction of unsophisticated children to art forms and their attempts to visualize and create the images formed in their minds, provided a bridge to art forms in primitive societies.

She has led a multifaceted life with interests ranging from teaching art to grade school children, as aforesaid, to world travel in the search for beauty on behalf of the Miss Universe Pageant. This journey has involved her in concert management and production with some of the music world's great names and talents, on to her own record producing company and then further on into stage design for live TV production.

With this varied background, the observer is tempted to ask, why now stone sculpture?

Her answer to this question involves her own psyche. Each stone slab for her contains a riddle, a quest to find the image residing within its graining and crystalline structure. She calls it "Visions in Stone". Just as you look at people to find out who they really are, what do they stand for, so she looks at a slab to sense the image within which it is to be portrayed. She approaches it with no preconception. The stone itself determines its final shape and message.

At the same time, and within the parameters discussed above, in addition to her abstract expressions, she has created outstanding works portraying items as diverse as a sailfish leaping from a frothy ocean, an eagle at rest with outstretched wings, a greenish stone head reminiscent of an Easter Island monolith and a white Carrara marble head of a World War II aviator titled "Where Eagles Dare", amongst others.

She is comfortable working in a range from small to as large as a recent slab weighing some 2000 pounds, always striving for higher levels of artistic expression with her "Visions in Stone".

To her vision residing in a block of stone, she has now added a further refinement of the passion she brings to her artistic work.

Recalling the famous philosopher who found that we are all the end result of all our experiences throughout life, her artistic work is a reflection and embodiment of her lifelong experiences abroad and throughout the United States, her work with artists in the entertainment and design fields, as well as contacts with cultural leaders around the globe, all of which has had a sustained significant visible impact on her work.

A participant in numerous exhibitions and juried shows, the holder of significant awards, her work can be found in private collections in the United States, Europe and South America and has been exhibited in galleries such as Artcetra (Delray Beach), Masterpiece (Boca Raton), Mihalís (Boca Raton), Alexandre Galleries, Mizner Park in Boca Raton, and currently in Bal Harbour Gallery, City Place (West Palm Beach).

Dear Mr. Giles:

This is a follow up to your letter in which you invited the President to accept Clayton Giles' petition for childrens' rights.

We had hoped that we might be able to accommodate this request. However, a further review of the President's calendar for this timeframe makes it impossible for us to schedule his attendance. I know you will understand that, with the tremendous demands on his time, he must often miss special opportunities, as is the case this time.

It is a deep disappointment to the President that the constraints on his time preclude him from participating in more events such as this. I know he would want me to thank you for your interest in including him in your plans and to send his best wishes.

Dear Sir:

While many Canadian soldiers are fighting, and dying, side-by-side with American soldiers in Afghanistan, you may not be aware that a fourteen-year-old Canadian boy has been fighting to save American children here at home.

On May 28, 2001, Clayton Giles began a 2600-mile bicycle ride from Calgary, Alberta to Washington, DC, by way of Ottawa, Boston and New York City. The goal of his "Journey for Kids" was to raise public awareness that suicide is the second leading cause of death in American and Canadian children and that ninety per cent of these children come from broken homes. Clayton stopped in various cities along his route and encouraged people to sign his petition, which promoted shared parenting and children having a voice in divorce proceedings. Clayton believes that these changes will contribute significantly to lowering the child suicide rate in both countries. Together with the general populace, many US mayors, assemblymen and senators signed Clayton's petition.

In August, 2001, Clayton wrote a letter to President George W. Bush requesting an audience at the White House in September. Clayton wished to personally present the signed petition pages to President Bush. That letter was forwarded to the White House by the Canadian Embassy. Attached are Clayton's letter and his petition.

Clayton arrived in Washington on September 7, 2001 and remained there until that fateful day of September 11. Nothing could have prepared him for the shock of seeing the World Trade Centre collapse a short time after he had visited there. He had met many wonderful people in New York and their well-being was unknown to Clayton for many days after that horrendous attack. Clayton left Washington with a heavy heart but with an even stronger determination to fight for American and Canadian children who have been subjected to needless pain and suffering.

Thankfully, America is recovering from September 11. Canadians are proud to help because Canada and the USA have always been good neighbours. Clayton answered a question to this effect on his web site,

Q. Why are you including the US in your journey when you are Canadian?

A. Because Canada and the US are closely allied socially, politically and economically. I like the American people and I enjoy visiting the US. But most of all, I know that America has the same problems with access and custody as we have in Canada. I want to help American children as well as Canadian children. I'd actually like to take "Journey for Kids" to every country in the western world, because this problem is in every one of them.

I am very proud to be the father of such a courageous, dedicated, socially-conscious and committed young man. There are very few adults, let alone a fourteen-year-old boys, who would have taken on such a daunting task as "Journey for Kids," or done so for children of another country. Clayton has met and presented his petition to Prime Minister Jean Chretien. Now he is hoping that President Bush will find time in his busy schedule to personally accept Clayton's petition in Washington.

I believe that, given the current tragedies that have impacted upon Canada/US relations, meeting with a Canadian boy who has put forth such a tremendous effort to save the children of both our countries would be a healing and heart-warming occasion for Canadians and Americans alike.

Please be assured that whatever your reply Clayton will, through his web site, writing, and personal appearances, continue to attempt to improve the lives of children everywhere.

Yours sincerely,

Eric Giles

Journey for KidsOn the road in America*tel. 403-870-KIDS*email: claytongiles@legalkids.com*website: www.legalkids.com*President George W. and First Lady Laura Bush*The White House1600 Pennsylvania Avenue,
Washington D.C.

Dear Mr. President and First Lady:

My name is Clayton Giles and I'm a fourteen-year-old Canadian boy. By the time I get to Washington, D.C., on September 6th, 2001, I will have travelled 3600 miles on my bicycle to see you. Along my way, I will have spoken with thousands of children who have asked me to deliver a message to you: "Please help us."

Thousands of American children are dying every year - not from a disease or a disaster - but by their own hand. The second leading cause of death in children my age is suicide and over three thousand American children took their own lives last year. What could possibly drive a fourteen, a twelve and even an eight-year-old child to commit suicide? How can children so young find life so hopeless? For ninety-one per cent of these children, it's the loss of a two-parent home and the confusion, frustration, anger and depression that results from being thrust into a situation which they never wanted, in which they have no say, and over which they have no control.

A court took my father from me when I was eight years old. They said he did not "merit" access to me or my sister, Lindsay. In other words, we were a good-conduct prize. Like so many children, I was victimized by a legal system that sees children as sub-humans, as weapons in a battle, and as prizes to be awarded to the victor. Luckily, I was reunited with my father when I was eleven but those three years without him were the most horrible of my life. At school I spent more time in the hall than in the classroom. I was finally kicked out of school. I was constantly in fist fights. At home I spent most of my time in my room where I often cried myself to sleep at night. Suicide was always on my mind. My father never abandoned his struggle to be with me, because if he had, I would not be riding my bicycle to Washington. Like all those other poor children, I would be dead.

Mr. President, I and millions of American and Canadian children are asking that we be treated with basic human dignity. We want the right to love both our parents, without fear or guilt. We don't want to be used as pawns and prizes in a battle that polarizes our parents and destroys their financial ability to care for us. For this to happen, we need your help.

I have prepared a petition (attached) that calls for equal shared parenting and children having a voice in divorce proceedings. I believe - and many legislators, professionals and residents of your country who have signed my petition also believe - that a presumption of equal shared parenting would remove children as a prize and result in a significant reduction in the animosity, duration and cost of divorce proceedings. When our parents are encouraged to share us, rather than to win us, our emotional and physical well-being will improve and the disgraceful legacy of child suicide will be reduced significantly.

I plan to end my ride at the Zero Mile marker on The Ellipse on September 6th, 2001. I will remain in Washington until September 12th, 2001. May I please personally present my petition to you during that time period?

Yours sincerely,

Clayton Giles

PETITIONTO THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AND TO THE SENATE AND THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

We, the undersigned residents of the United States of America, acting in good faith and impelled by our devotion to our Constitutional Republic, present this Petition to our elected representatives in the federal government in order to draw attention to the following:

THAT a child should have, as far as possible, the right to know and be cared for by his or her parents and that government and parents must respect the right of the child who is separated from one or both parents to maintain personal relations and direct contact with both parents on a regular basis, except if it is contrary to the child's best interests;

THAT the government should assure to the child who is capable of forming his or her own views the right to express those views freely in all matters affecting the child, the views of the child being given due weight in accordance with the age and maturity of the child, and the child should in particular be provided the opportunity to be heard in any judicial and administrative proceedings affecting the child;

THAT the government should use their best efforts to ensure recognition of the principle that both parents have common responsibilities for the upbringing and development of the child;

THAT children thrive better with two loving parents: lower rates of delinquency, lower rates of suicide, greater self-esteem, greater self-actualization, greater performance at school, and better future families;

THAT fair and equitable family law legislation will encourage more parental commitment and involvement in a child's life after the parents separate or divorce;

THAT a presumption of equal shared parenting and children having a voice in divorce proceedings that affect them is in the best interests of the child, and promotes overall improvements in family issues surrounding separation and divorce;

THAT issues with family law legislation have been known for some time and that American children have suffered emotional harm during this period of inaction;

THEREFORE, your petitioners call upon George W. Bush, President of the United States, and the honorable members of the United States Senate and House of Representatives, to immediately pass legislation mandating that states enact fair family law legislation which incorporates a presumption of equal shared parenting and children having a voice in divorce proceedings that affect them, and which is in the best and complete interests of the children.

CLAYTON GILES with PRIME MINISTER CHRETIEN

Welcome to Legalkids

While you were reading this sentence, somewhere a child committed suicide.

While you were reading this sentence, three children OD'd on drugs.

And while you were reading this sentence, seven young offenders were incarcerated, four babies were born to teen mothers, eleven children started smoking, three children dropped out of school, and six children were violently attacked.

Most of these kids have one thing in common. They are children of divorce and of divorce court. Legal kids.

Divorce harms most children, most of the time. That's a fact that no one disputes. But when the children are used as pawns by warring parents and adversarial divorce lawyers, children are destroyed that much faster.

Daniel was eleven when his parents divorced. A bitter custody battle followed with both sides seek Daniel as the prize. Two years later, and $120,000 poorer, one parent emerged victorious and Daniel was relegated to a one weekend a month visit with the other parent. One week later, Daniel left school, wal home, started an old truck in the garage, and closed all the doors and windows. Neither lawyer attended funeral.

"There is some evidence that in our well-meaning efforts to save children in the immediate post-separation pe from anxiety, confusion, and the normative divorce-engendered conflict, we have set the stage in the longer ru the more ominous symptoms of anger, depression, and a deep sense of loss by depriving the child of the opport opportunity to maintain a full relationship with each parent."

[Examining Resistance to Joint Custody, Monograph by Joan Kelly, Ph.D. (associate of Judith Wallerstein, Ph.D) From the 1991 Book Joint Custod Shared Parenting, second edition, Guilford Press, 1991]

Suicide is the second leading cause of death in children.

Half of all marriages end in divorce. One sixth of all children will live with only one parent at some time in their li. Although children of divorce make up only one sixth of the child population, they account for 91% of child suici 78% of young offenders, 65% of teen pregnancies, 90% of runaways, and 71% of school dropouts. They make 85% of children with behavioural problems, 75% of the occupants of chemical abuse centers, and 80% of adolescents in psychiatric facilities.

Amy was two when her parents divorced. Despite repeated court applications by her father, their vi became fewer and fewer. Finally, the court declared that seeing her father was not in Amy's best intere and cut off her access altogether. Meanwhile Amy's grades had steadily declined, she was a problem school - when she attended - drug use was a daily occurrence, and she had a steady stream of boyfrien Amy became pregnant at fourteen and hid the pregnancy. A Campaign for Kids' Rights

By Clayton Giles

We are the children of divorce and separation. Decisions about custody and access affect our lives forever. We want to respect and love our parents equally, without fear or guilt. Unobstructed access to both parents is the Human Right of every child. Custody should always be shared jointly by both parents. New divorce and separation laws have to assure these Kids' Rights by making these principles a reality for all children.

had lovingly prepared a place weeks earlier. Amy wrapped her baby in a blanket and left her at emergency ward of the hospital. Three days later, when the police arrived, Amy's first words were, "Please call my dad." Amy hadn't seen her father in almost two years.

"Among teenage and adult populations of females, parental divorce has been associated with lower self-esteem, precocious sexual activity, greater delinquent-like behavior, and more difficulty establishing gratifying, lasting heterosexual relationships. It is especially intriguing to note that, in these studies, the parental divorce typically occurred years before any difficulties were observed."

[Long-Term Effects of Divorce on Children: A Developmental Vulnerability Model, Neil Kalter, Ph.D., University of Michigan, American Journal of Orthopsychiatry, 57(4), October, 1987]

What is our government doing about the horrendous abuse of children within the divorce industry? Very little.

My name is Clayton Giles and I live in Calgary, Alberta, Canada. I am fourteen years old. On March 3, 1995, Court of Queen's Bench of Alberta took my father away from me and my younger sister. My father was not accused of abusing me or neglecting me in any way. It was claimed that my father, "did not merit access to children" because he did not treat my mother in a politically correct fashion. In other words, my sister and I were good conduct prize.

When I lost my father, I also lost my grandmother, the most wonderful, loving person you will ever meet. Grandparents are special people and no child should ever be deprived of their love and attention.

Life without my father was depressing and bleak. At school I was constantly punished for my bad behaviour. School yard was a battleground where the slightest insult resulted in my fists flying. At home I spent my life in my room. Suicide was always in my thoughts. There were many, many nights when I cried myself to sleep and hoped that I would not wake up.

Unlike Daniel, I survived - just barely. After more than three years of court proceedings, my father was returned to me. However there were still many issues which the court was in no hurry to resolve. Adjournment followed adjournment. Frustrated with the court's apparent lack of concern for children's emotional well-being, on January 2001, I went on a hunger strike.

I picketed the court house. My sign read, "Q.B. JUDGES VICTIMIZE CHILDREN". To this day, the court still insists on acting in "my best interests". That will always be a scary phrase for me.

There was a lot of media coverage of my strike which I did not anticipate. More than 25,000 people visited my site in a ten day period and more than 1,000 signed my guest book. I received emails and telephone calls from all over the world. Every day I picketed in front of the courthouse. On the 12th day, Social Services got involved. There was the possibility that they would take me away at any time and force feed me. Meanwhile I existed on water, grape juice, and Gatorade.

I ended my strike on the 19th day, Jan. 19, 2001. I had accomplished as much as I was going to accomplish. It was quite clear that even though the court stated it had my "best interests" at heart, the judges were quite willing to let me starve to death on the street. But, I did not stop fighting.

On May 27th, 2001 I started a "Journey for Kids". I bicycled to our nation's capital, Ottawa, and to Washington, DC. total distance I traveled was 4281 kilometers/2657 miles. Along the way I collected petition signatures from kids and parents who support shared parenting (the right of child of divorce to have equal input from, and equal access to both parents) and who also support children having a voice in any proceedings that affect their access to either parent. I presented the Canadian petition signatures to Prime Minister Jean Chretien on September 18, 2001.

Unfortunately, I was not able to present my US petition signatures to President George W. Bush. I was in Washington on September 11, the day of the terrorist attacks. For me, and for many, many people, that was the most terrible day of my life. I left Washington that afternoon, knowing that President Bush had many difficult days ahead before he could find the time to greet me and accept my petition. I hope to return to Washington sometime in the future.

Kids seldom have any control over their lives when their parents divorce. We become property to be awarded to parent whom the court favours. The parents get the courts to favour them by spending large sums of money on lawyers and psychologists just at the time when this money is needed to support a family which now has two households and double the expenses. In the end, the money that our parents could have spent on our family goes elsewhere.

My goal is to make everyone aware that kids are humans, not property, and that we deserve to be heard the same time as our parents. This means that what is good for our parents is not automatically good for us. It means that we want a say in what happens to us when our family breaks up. Just because kids can explain exactly why we want something, doesn't mean that we don't know what we want. We want to be happy. What makes us happy is maximum contact with both parents regardless of what those parents think about each other. Is that so complicated?

You may view the Canadian and American petitions by clicking on the Legalkids logo above. You may download, sign and return the US petition until it is presented to President Bush. The Canadian petition has been presented but is still there for your information.

While I was bicycling, I posted daily events containing text and pictures about Journey for Kids. I also kept a journal. I hope you will take the time to read my journey diary and look at the daily events text and pictures. You can also find my story and my hunger strike journal on this web site.

Please sign the guest books and make a comment. I hope everyone will give their opinion or make a suggestion.

Journey for Kids was not a fund-raising event. However, it was impossible for one person - or one child - to pay for the transportation, accommodation, fuel, equipment and food that was needed to complete a 4281-kilometer/2657-mile journey. Many companies and individuals made contributions to "Journey for Kids" which made it possible for me to complete my goal. Many individuals offered their time and effort to help with the planning and execution of my journey. These are the people whose foresight, generosity and effort will help to change a terrible system that causes children to hopelessly cry themselves to sleep at night and creates lives as tragic as Daniel's and Amy's.

What's ahead? I am building the Legalkids Foundation. This charitable foundation will develop an alternative family court system and remove custody and access decisions from the hands of lawyers and judges. There is no question that the family court system does not work - other than as a vehicle for victimizing children, and for separating parents from the money they need to care for their children. The Legalkids Foundation will also offer free counsel to parents to help them avoid the animosity and confrontation that can often surface in separation and divorce situations.

The Foundation will be particularly involved in assisting children of divorce. Children will receive free counseling to help them deal with the pain, loss, anger and frustration that divorce can bring to them. Help from other children equally affected, will be a fundamental part of this counseling. They will also be taught coping skills and dispute resolution. These programs will also be developed for implementation in schools and other institutions.

The UN Convention on the Rights of the Child states that a child "should grow up in a family environment in an atmosphere of happiness, love, and understanding" and that "parties shall respect the right of child who is separated from one or both parents to maintain personal relations and direct contact with b parents on a regular basis..." Too often this as not a reality for children of separation and divorce. It m become a reality.

Dear Mr. Goble:

Thank you for your letter inviting the President to participate in a videotaped message thanking House Calls International participants for their efforts.

Unfortunately, we are unable to accommodate your request. While each invitation we receive is special, tight schedules and limited time allow us to approve only a very small number of requests for videotaped messages.

I know this is a disappointing response to your letter. However, the President asked me to convey his sincere appreciation for your invitation. He sends his very best wishes for a successful event.

Sincerely,

Bradley A. Blakeman

President George Bush
Attn Scheduling office
Washington DC 20502-0184

Dear President Bush,

This summer a new 501 3 c faith based organization will be doing as you encouraged--bringing the best of our faith to meet the community and social services needs across our nation.

The following information you have highlighted as some of those needs:

- As many as 15 million young people are at risk of not reaching productive adulthood -- falling prey to crime, drugs and other problems that make it difficult to obtain an education, successfully enter the workforce, or otherwise contribute to society;
- More than 2 million children have a father or mother in prison or jail;
- More than half a million children are in foster care, and more than one fifth of those children are awaiting adoption;
- In 1997, more than one million babies were born to unwed mothers, many of whom are children themselves; and
- More than one out of six American families with children live on an annual income of $17,000 or less.

This summer, 7,500 students and adults, from across the nation will give a week of their time, travel to another city and pay $245.00 each to share in your faith based initiative dream. They will renovate over 500 homes of the people you mention above.

We ask you to help us in two ways

1. Is it possible for you to send a video tape expressing thanks for these students sharing in your dream?
2. Would you consider attending a project this summer?

We believe that one day over 100,000 students will commit a week of time to assist those living in low income housing. We think we can be a great example for you to encourage all faith groups to participate in meeting the human services needs of our nation. We are certainly willing to assist you as we can.

Thanks you for your time and attention to this letter,

Sincerely,

Elmer Goble

HOW... HouseCalls Can Work for You

QUALITY

As stated above HouseCalls is committed to quality in every way it serves people. Standards will be set and every effort will be made to provide for all people quality they can expect.

COST EFFECTIVE

Providing the quality discussed above is expensive. HouseCalls can save money through handling large numbers of volunteers.

SERVICE ORIENTED

You set the parameters. You can determine where, when, the focus of the project, and the number of projects to meet your strategy needs. If you have a desire to involve more students or adults, this is an opportunity for you.

EXPERIENCE

No need to hire/manage staff-HCI can provide the staff needed to manage each project. We will employ qualified staff to coordinate all aspects of the project.

WHY... We Created HouseCalls

HouseCalls International is our dream to build a partnership of volunteers, homeowners, and contributors that together, will improve the substandard living conditions in our country and around the world.

All of us have Christian backgrounds; we initiated home renovation projects from our commitment to live in a manner that reflects Jesus' teachings of justice, equity and concern for "the least of these."

Many groups build homes for the poor. We believe in and support their efforts.

We wanted to be among the few who offer homeowners an opportunity to remain in their homes, in their communities, in familiar and comfortable surroundings — but in living conditions that reflected dignity and worth and pride.

Home renovation became our goal.

The three of us who started House Calls have had extensive experience in home renovation in large scale projects across the United States and overseas. Each of these projects proved successful — often far beyond the expectations of leaders and the community officials who sponsored the event. Thousands of homeowners' lives have been changed, and hundreds of communities have been renewed.

We learned to manage large-scale renovations — often dozens of homes — using volunteers. We learned to train volunteers. We learned to build partnerships ... among city agencies, volunteer organizations, faith groups, businesses, homeowners and others.

But each previous project was limited ... socially, organizationally, politically, or structurally. Sometimes the project was limited by age — only the young could participate. Sometimes it was limited by denominational constraints — only one religious group could be included.

We wanted to broaden the opportunities for a much greater, much more inclusive participation by creating an organization that had no age limits, no religious restrictions, no structural obligations. We wanted to join with others — businesses, religious groups, social organizations — who felt committed to service and believed, as we did, that no one should live in substandard housing.

The result of our dream is HouseCalls International.

WAYS... To Uniquely Tailor Your Project

HouseCalls creates an experience unique to your needs. Working in concert with your leaders, HouseCalls develops the logistics and responsibilities for each project. While not every organization, church group or public agency will have the same needs, the following checklist of opportunities is a basis for HouseCalls, the sponsoring agency and the volunteer participants to jointly determine:

- ☐ Dates for the project
- ☐ Locations for the projects
- ☐ Maximum number of participants per project
- ☐ Age and circumstance of the participants
- ☐ Signage at the project and place of residence
- ☐ Pre-project training
- ☐ Manuals
- ☐ Pre-project logistic set-up
- ☐ Housing for participants
- ☐ Shower trailers/bathrooms/portable toilets
- ☐ Coordinate transportation
- ☐ Construction Materials
- ☐ Publicity for project/public relations
- ☐ Qualified construction coordinators
- ☐ Qualified construction crew chiefs

Possible "Give-Aways" to Participants

- ☐ T-shirts
- ☐ Nail aprons
- ☐ Luggage tags
- ☐ Gift to construction coordinators
- ☐ Gift to crew chiefs
- ☐ Gift to residents of the homes
- ☐ Gift to the group leaders

Program Issues

- ☐ Number and length of evening programs
- ☐ Logistics and topics of evening program
- ☐ Theme for the project

Lodging and Meals

- ☐ Breakfast/morning snacks on site
- ☐ Lunch on site
- ☐ Evening meal
- ☐ Snacks/drinks
- ☐ Special treats (ice cream sundae party, etc.)

Participants' Welfare Concerns

- ☐ Health/safety issues
- ☐ First-aid kits
- ☐ Nurses
- ☐ Insurance (and secondary insurance)
- ☐ Liability
- ☐ Security check on individuals

While this list is not exhaustive, it does represent the most important aspects of a successful project. With this list as the basis for discussion, you can see the tremendous number of details that are critical to making the project meaningful and successful for all who participate.

FACTS ... about Substandard Housing

Adequate housing is universally viewed as one of the most basic human needs. The significance of a secure place to live for human dignity, physical and mental health and overall quality of life, begins to reveal some of the human rights implications of housing. Yet as important as adequate housing is to everyone, the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements estimates that throughout the world over 1 billion people live in inadequate housing.

Source: United States High Commissioner For Human Rights

For approximately 10 million American families, housing is too expensive, substandard, or both.

- The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development considers housing to be affordable if it consumes less than 30 percent of a family's income.
- Housing is considered severely physically inadequate if it "lacks complete plumbing or a complete kitchen, has inadequate heating, has structural or maintenance problems and/or lacks adequate electricity.
- More than 1.2 million U.S. households live in housing with severe or moderate physical problems.
- Families with children have some of the most acute housing needs. In 1989, nearly 2 million families with children suffered "worst case housing needs."

Source: US Department of Health and Urban Development

Many nonprofits are operating in neighborhoods where no one with other choices would wish to live. It is important to stabilize the housing situations of the current, low-income residents, however, before embarking on extensive neighborhood revitalization efforts.

Whether it's called subsidized housing or low income housing, housing for poor people has a bad name. For many, these terms conjure up images of high-rise projects being demolished, or problem projects — neighborhoods with a high impact of crime and/or poverty.

The American traditions of innovation and technological advancement have done little to improve housing affordability for the poor. The threshold cost of operating and maintaining housing is greater than they can afford.

As of 1995, 2.2 million poor households lived in housing with moderate to severe physical problems, many of which was located in inner city areas. High levels of unemployment and a concentration of poverty also characterize these areas. Many, though not all, of the households living in such neighborhoods were African American and Hispanic.

For the poor, achieving and retaining home ownership has always been difficult.

SERVICES... HouseCalls Provides

HouseCalls uniquely packages your mission/work project to meet your organization's goals. The only area in which HouseCalls will not compromise is quality. HouseCalls' services include:

1. STAFF AND TRAINING

Project leaders hold the following roles:

- ✓ Project coordinator. On-site leader of the project. Work includes communication before and during project, logistic planning, and solving problems that arise.
- ✓ Construction coordinator. Identifies homes, orders materials, supervises, is responsible for all safety and work at the project.
- ✓ Association/local coordinator. Handles local arrangements, i.e. special activities, special meals, midweek afternoon activities, relationships with city/local churches, organizations or officials.
- ✓ Office leader. Handles registration, program set-up and maintenance, give-away distribution, insurance registration, daily update, etc.
- ✓ Program leader. Prepares special music and group music and other events.
- ✓ Speaker. Offers challenging, relevant message(s). Content is geared to the needs of the group.
- ✓ Crew chiefs. Coordinates the work and supervises the volunteers; ensures quality, safe work. This is a critical role. The ratio of crew chiefs is about 1 for every 12 volunteers.

HouseCalls will train each staff person to provide quality and consistent leadership for the project. HouseCalls' enlists and supervises leaders. For staff to be most effective, training must be specific and tailored to the needs of the project and the sponsoring organization's goals.

Staff will be determined in the agreement process with the sponsor of the project. HCI will secure, train, supervise and employ qualified staff for your projects.

2. COORDINATION

Coordinate the relationships and identify meaningful and productive work. The following are critical for a successful project:

- ✓ Relationship with the city officials/sponsoring agency.
- ✓ To identify appropriate homes for meaningful work. Careful consideration must be given to the amount and complexity of the work performed.
- ✓ To provide access to media and city/agency positions
- ✓ To access city agency information and services (first aid, police, hospitals)
- ✓ To provide materials for the work site which are on time and appropriate.

Over please...

- ✓ Relationship with the rules of volunteer construction including the following:
- ✓ HUD guidelines such as the most relevant information about lead based paint, including what is the law and what is safe for volunteers
- ✓ Developing guidelines about what is the best and most appropriate work for specific age groups.
- ✓ Determining the ratio of supervision and crew chiefs to the volunteers
- ✓ Relationships to other human services programs in the city, which might be of interest to the homeowners.

3. FINANCIAL RESPONSIBILITY

HouseCalls provides services at the least possible cost to the sponsoring organization. Our budgets are available for your study.

While each aspect of the program can be tailored to the needs of sponsoring agencies, institutions or organizations, a quality experience for the volunteer, and quality work on site is not possible on a shoe-string budget. HouseCalls will limit the scope of the project before cutting the quality of work performed or the quality of experience given the participants.

4. VOLUNTEERS

HouseCalls assists the sponsoring organization's efforts to promote and recruit volunteers for the project. HCI staff are available to answer your questions while actively pursuing potential groups and individuals.

VALUES... Make HouseCalls Unique

HouseCalls exists for two reasons: (1) We want to eliminate substandard housing in the United States and overseas — simply put, everyone deserves a decent place to live. (2) We want to provide volunteers with a fulfilling avenue of service and, at the same time, make the volunteer experience a rewarding investment of time, money, talent and energy. Our values are:

SERVICE

HouseCalls exists to serve others. Every attempt will be made to meet the needs of the homeowners, volunteers, and contributors. We want everyone involved — especially the homeowners — to give the homeowner a sense of worth and dignity.

QUALITY

HouseCalls is committed to providing the best possible service to all homeowners, volunteers and contributors. All decisions will be made with quality in mind.

INTEGRITY

HouseCalls will disclose all financial records and other information. That's one way we work to build the trust so necessary for successful relationships.

PARTNERSHIP

HouseCalls' success depends on networks and partnerships. The relationships created by these must exist with the same values of service, quality, integrity and respect.

BIOS... of HouseCalls Staff Members

HouseCalls works through partnerships and networks. Its partnerships are among the civic and governmental organizations, faith groups, nonprofit agencies, businesses and corporations, homeowners and hundreds of volunteers who are committed to making a difference in the lives of those living in substandard housing. Its networks exist among hundreds of experts in construction, building and related trades; these individuals donate their time — often at their own expense — to make sure HouseCalls' projects deliver the quality experience for participants and the quality final product that is promised. The existence of partnerships and networks makes it possible for HouseCalls to maintain only a small staff. Its members are:

MIKE BAILEY

Mike has more than 30 years experience as a contractor/business owner. For the past 18 years, he has served as a national construction coordinator for a Southern Baptist Convention agency. During that time, he has worked with more than 4,000 church building/renovation projects, most of which have involved large numbers of volunteer laborers. He has served as an environmental compliance officer.

Mike's HouseCalls responsibilities include:

- Management of all construction procedures and policies
- Risk management issues
- Special construction projects

ELMER GOBLE

Elmer managed a 10-office consulting firm in Southern California — helping more than 4,000 businesses develop successful business plans — before moving into volunteer mobilization. He has 14 years of experience working with volunteers, both in training and in recruitment, for local projects and large-scale national endeavors.

Elmer's HouseCalls responsibilities include:

- Business plan and management
- Fund raising
- Financial management
- Coordination and planning with partners of HouseCalls projects

ANDY MORRIS

Andy managed World Changers, the highly successful and well respected rebuilding program for young people, for the decade of its existence. During those 10 years, Andy has worked with more than 70,000 volunteers who have refurbished 5,000-plus homes. He also has worked to mobilize student volunteers in both local and national settings.

Andy's HouseCalls responsibilities include:

- Project planning and logistics
- Project staff management
- City/state/government/church relationships

Dear Mr. Goldin:

Thank you for your letter in which you request an appointment with the President.

The President would appreciate an opportunity to converse with you. Regrettably, it will not be possible for us to arrange such a meeting. I know you will understand that, with the tremendous demands on his time and the large volume of similar requests, personal appointments are extremely difficult to schedule, even though each one is important.

I know that the President would want me to thank you for your request to include him in your plans and to send his very best wishes.

Sincerely,

Bradley A. Blakeman

Dear Ms. Goldman:

Thank you for your letter of invitation for the President and Mrs. Bush to attend a celebration in memory of Alan Michael Kranowitz.

The President and First Lady appreciate your extending them this opportunity. Unfortunately, due to the heavy commitments of their schedules, they must unfortunately regret. I know you will understand that with the tremendous demands on their time, they must often miss events such as this.

The President and Mrs. Bush have asked me to thank you for thinking of them and to convey their best wishes.

Sincerely,

Bradley A. Blakeman
Deputy Assistant to the President
and Director of Appointments and Scheduling
