Opening Statement – News Conference
October 11, 2001
Draft #6

Good evening. I would like to briefly report to the American people on the state of our war against terror and then I'll be happy to take questions from members of the White House press corps.

Our staunch friends, Great Britain, our neighbors, Canada and Mexico, our NATO allies, our allies in Asia, Russia and nations from every continent on this earth have offered help of one kind or another, from military assistance to intelligence information to crackdowns on terrorists financial transactions.

One in three Afghan children is an orphan; almost half suffer chronic malnutrition – and we can help.

We have created a special relief effort that will be supervised by the Red Cross. We are asking every child in America to earn or give a dollar that will be used to provide food and medical help for the children of Afghanistan.

Americans are united in the fight against terrorism. We are also united in our concern for the innocent people of Afghanistan. Winter is coming – and by acting today, we can help children survive.

Thank you.
