

FOIA Marker

This is not a textual record. This FOIA Marker indicates that material has been removed during FOIA processing by George W. Bush Presidential Library staff.

Staff Secretary, White House Office of the Miers, Harriet E. - Presidential Remarks

Stack:	Row:	Sect.:	Shelf:	Pos.:	FRC ID:	Location or Hollinger ID:	NARA Number:	OA Number:
W	17	15	6	1	6027	18962	6407	420

Folder Title:

Warsaw Conference on Combating Terrorism - 11/06/2001 [755920][3]

Warsaw Conference on Combating Terrorism
November 6, 2001
Draft #19

11/6/01

President Kwasniewski:

Good morning, Mr. President. We are delighted you have joined us. Allow me to briefly introduce the participants in this conference to combat terrorism. [He briefly introduces the heads of state]. Mr. President, the floor is yours.

President Bush:

Thank you, Mr. President. It is a pleasure to be back in Warsaw, this time by telecast. I had a wonderful visit to the region in June, and I feel I'm among friends.

I thank all the nations of Central and Eastern Europe at this conference. You are our partners in the fight against terrorism – and we share an important moment in history.

For more than 50 years, the peoples of your region suffered under repressive ideologies that tried to trample human dignity. Today, our freedom is threatened once again.

Like the fascists and totalitarians before them, these terrorists – al-Qaida, the Taliban regime that supports them, and other terror groups across our world – try to impose their radical views through threats and violence.

We see the same intolerance of dissent.

The same mad, global ambitions. The same brutal determination to control every life and all of life.

We have seen the true nature of these terrorists in the nature of their attacks – they kill thousands of innocent people and then rejoice about it. They kill fellow Muslims, many of whom died in the World Trade Center that terrible morning – and then they gloat.

They condone murder and claim to be doing so in the name of a peaceful religion.

We have also seen the true nature of these terrorists in the nature of the regime they support in Afghanistan – and it is terrifying.

Women are imprisoned in their homes, and are denied access to basic health care and education. Food sent to help starving people is stolen by their leaders. The religious monuments of other faiths are destroyed. Children are forbidden to fly kites, or sing songs, or build snowmen.

A girl of seven is beaten for wearing white shoes. Our enemies have brought only misery and terror to the people of Afghanistan – and now they are trying to export that terror throughout the world.

Al-Qaida operates in more than 60 nations, including some in Central and Eastern Europe. These terrorist groups seek to destabilize entire nations and regions. They are seeking chemical, biological, and nuclear weapons.

Given the means, our enemies would be a threat to every nation and, eventually, to civilization itself.

So we are determined to fight this evil, and fight until we are rid of it.

We will not wait for more innocent deaths.

We will not wait for the authors of mass murder to gain the weapons of mass destruction. We act now. We must lift this dark threat from our age and save generations to come.

The people of my Nation are now fighting this war at home. We face a second wave of terrorist attacks in the form of deadly anthrax that has been sent through the U.S. mail. Our people are responding to this new threat with alertness and calm.

Our government is responding to treat the sick, provide antibiotics to those who have been exposed, and track down the guilty, whether abroad or at home.

^{Our} And ~~we~~ fight^s abroad with the help of many nations, because the Taliban regime of Afghanistan refused to turn over the terrorists.

We are making good progress in a just cause. Our efforts are directed at terrorist and military targets because – unlike our enemies – we value human life. We do not target innocent people – and we grieve for the difficult times the Taliban have brought to the people of their own country.

Our military is systematically pursuing its mission. We have destroyed many terrorist training camps. We have severed communications links. We are taking out air defenses and now we are attacking the Taliban's front lines.

I have seen in news reports that many Afghan citizens wish the Taliban had never allowed the al-Qaida terrorists in their country. I hope those citizens will help us locate the terrorists – because the sooner we find them, the better the people's lives will be.

It may take a long time, but no matter how long it takes, those who killed thousands of Americans and citizens from over 80 other nations will be brought to justice, and the misuse of Afghanistan as a training ground for terror will end.

As I have said from the start, this is a difficult struggle, of uncertain duration. We hunt an enemy that hides in shadows and caves. We are at the beginning of our efforts in Afghanistan. And Afghanistan is the beginning of our efforts in the world.

No group or nation should mistake

America's intentions: We will not rest until every terrorist group of global reach has been found, has been stopped, and has been defeated. And this goal will not be achieved until all the world's nations stop harboring and supporting such terrorists within their borders.

The defeat of terror requires an international coalition of unprecedented scope and cooperation. It demands the sincere, sustained actions of many nations against the network of terrorist cells, bases, and funding.

Later this week, at the United Nations, I will set out my vision of our common responsibilities in the war on terror. And I will put every nation on notice that these duties involve more than sympathy or words. No nation can be neutral in this conflict, because no civilized nation can be secure in a world threatened by terror.

I thank the many nations of Europe, including our NATO allies, who have offered military help. I also thank the nations who are sharing intelligence and working to cut off terrorist financing. I thank all of you for the important, practical work you are doing at this conference. The war against terrorism will be won only when we combine our strength.

We have a vast coalition that is uniting the world and increasingly isolating the terrorists – a coalition that includes many Arab and Muslim countries. I am encouraged by what their leaders are saying.

The head of the 22 nation Arab League rejected the claims of the terrorists' leader and said he – Usama bin Laden – “doesn't speak in the name of Arabs and Muslims.”

Increasingly, it is clear that this is not just a matter between the United States and the terror network – as the Egyptian Foreign Minister said, “there is a war between bin Laden and the whole world.”

All of us here today understand: We do not fight against Islam, we fight against evil.

I thank all of our coalition partners – and all of you – for your steadfast support. The last time I was in Warsaw, I talked of our shared vision of a Europe that is whole, free, and at peace.

I said we are building a House of Freedom, whose doors are open to all of Europe's people, and whose windows look out to global opportunities beyond. Now, that vision has been challenged, but it will not change.

With your help our vision of peace and freedom will be realized. And with your help we will defend the values we hold in common.

Thank you, and God bless you all.

President Kwasniewski:

Thank you for your important words. Mr. President, we have two documents we will issue: a joint statement and an action plan. They will stand us in good stead in the war on terrorism. Thank you once again, and goodbye.

President Bush:

Goodbye.

Warsaw Conference on Combating Terrorism
November 6, 2001
Draft #19

President Kwasniewski:

*Good morning, Mr. President. We are delighted you have joined us. Allow me to briefly introduce the participants in this conference to combat terrorism. [He briefly introduces the heads of state]. Mr.
President, the floor is yours.*

President Bush:

Thank you, Mr. President. It is a pleasure to be back in Warsaw, this time by telecast. I had a wonderful visit to the region in June, and I feel I'm among friends.

I thank all the nations of Central and Eastern Europe at this conference. You are our partners in the fight against terrorism – and we share an important moment in history.

For more than 50 years, the peoples of your region suffered under repressive ideologies that tried to trample human dignity. Today, our freedom is threatened once again.

Like the fascists and totalitarians before them, these terrorists – al-Qaida, the Taliban regime that supports them, and other terror groups across our world – try to impose their radical views through threats and violence.

We see the same intolerance of dissent.

The same mad, global ambitions. The same brutal determination to control every life and all of life.

We have seen the true nature of these terrorists in the nature of their attacks – they kill thousands of innocent people and then rejoice about it. They kill fellow Muslims, many of whom died in the World Trade Center that terrible morning – and then they gloat.

They condone murder and claim to be doing so in the name of a peaceful religion.

We have also seen the true nature of these terrorists in the nature of the regime they support in Afghanistan – and it is terrifying.

Women are imprisoned in their homes, and are denied access to basic health care and education. Food sent to help starving people is stolen by their leaders. The religious monuments of other faiths are destroyed. Children are forbidden to fly kites, or sing songs, or build snowmen.

A girl of seven is beaten for wearing white shoes. Our enemies have brought only misery and terror to the people of Afghanistan – and now they are trying to export that terror throughout the world.

Al-Qaida operates in more than 60 nations, including some in Central and Eastern Europe. These terrorist groups seek to destabilize entire nations and regions. They are seeking chemical, biological, and nuclear weapons.

Given the means, our enemies would be a threat to every nation and, eventually, to civilization itself.

— So we are determined to fight this evil, and fight until we are rid of it.

We will not wait for more innocent deaths.

We will not wait for the authors of mass murder to gain the weapons of mass destruction. We act now. We must lift this dark threat from our age and save generations to come.

The people of my Nation are now fighting this war at home. We face a second wave of terrorist attacks in the form of deadly anthrax that has been sent through the U.S. mail. Our people are responding to this new threat with alertness and calm.

Our government is responding to treat the sick, provide antibiotics to those who have been exposed, and track down the guilty, whether abroad or at home.

And we fight abroad with the help of many nations, because the Taliban regime of Afghanistan refused to turn over the terrorists.

We are making good progress in a just cause. Our efforts are directed at terrorist and military targets because – unlike our enemies – we value human life. We do not target innocent people – and we grieve for the difficult times the Taliban have brought to the people of their own country.

Our military is systematically pursuing its mission. We have destroyed many terrorist training camps. We have severed communications links. We are taking out air defenses and now we are attacking the Taliban's front lines.

I have seen in news reports that many Afghan citizens wish the Taliban had never allowed the al-Qaida terrorists in their country. I hope those citizens will help us locate the terrorists – because the sooner we find them, the better the people's lives will be.

It may take a long time, but no matter how long it takes, those who killed thousands of Americans and citizens from over 80 other nations will be brought to justice, and the misuse of Afghanistan as a training ground for terror will end.

As I have said from the start, this is a difficult struggle, of uncertain duration. We hunt an enemy that hides in shadows and caves. We are at the beginning of our efforts in Afghanistan. And Afghanistan is the beginning of our efforts in the world.

No group or nation should mistake

America's intentions: We will not rest until every terrorist group of global reach has been found, has been stopped, and has been defeated. And this goal will not be achieved until all the world's nations stop harboring and supporting such terrorists within their borders.

The defeat of terror requires an international coalition of unprecedented scope and cooperation. It demands the sincere, sustained actions of many nations against the network of terrorist cells, bases, and funding.

Later this week, at the United Nations, I will set out my vision of our common responsibilities in the war on terror. And I will put every nation on notice that these duties involve more than sympathy or words. No nation can be neutral in this conflict, because no civilized nation can be secure in a world threatened by terror.

I thank the many nations of Europe, including our NATO allies, who have offered military help. I also thank the nations who are sharing intelligence and working to cut off terrorist financing. I thank all of you for the important, practical work you are doing at this conference. The war against terrorism will be won only when we combine our strength.

We have a vast coalition that is uniting the world and increasingly isolating the terrorists – a coalition that includes many Arab and Muslim countries. I am encouraged by what their leaders are saying.

The head of the 22 nation Arab League rejected the claims of the terrorists' leader and said he – Usama bin Laden – “doesn't speak in the name of Arabs and Muslims.”

Increasingly, it is clear that this is not just a matter between the United States and the terror network – as the Egyptian Foreign Minister said, “there is a war between bin Laden and the whole world.”

All of us here today understand: We do not fight against Islam, we fight against evil.

I thank all of our coalition partners – and all of you – for your steadfast support. The last time I was in Warsaw, I talked of our shared vision of a Europe that is whole, free, and at peace.

I said we are building a House of Freedom, whose doors are open to all of Europe's people, and whose windows look out to global opportunities beyond. Now, that vision has been challenged, but it will not change.

With your help our vision of peace and freedom will be realized. And with your help we will defend the values we hold in common.

Thank you, and God bless you all.

President Kwasniewski:

Thank you for your important words. Mr. President, we have two documents we will issue: a joint statement and an action plan. They will stand us in good stead in the war on terrorism. Thank you once again, and goodbye.

President Bush:

Goodbye.