Discussion

The watershed of the Bull Run, Oregon, is a primary domestic water supply for metropolitan Portland, Oregon. In 1977, Congress established the Bull Run Watershed Management Unit—a 95,382-acre special resources management unit within the Mount Hood National Forest, Oregon—to protect the water quality within the watershed. In 1996, Congress prohibited public access to the unit and, with exceptions, prohibited timber cutting within the unit.

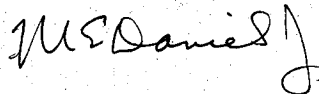

H.R. 427 expands the unit to encompass an additional 2,890 acres of Federal forest lands within the watershed of the Little Sandy River, Oregon, which is adjacent to the Bull Run watershed and has been considered as a potential additional domestic water supply for metropolitan Portland. The practical effect of the enrolled bill is to prohibit public access to and, with exceptions, timber cutting on the 2,890 acres.

In addition, H.R. 427 provides for the reclassification of certain Federal forest lands within the expanded unit that are currently classified as "Oregon and California Railroad" or "O&C" lands as public domain lands. In exchange, the enrolled bill provides for the reclassification of certain public domain lands in Oregon, which are approximately equal in acreage and condition to the reclassified O&C lands, as O&C lands. (The Federal Government returns 50 percent of Federal timber receipts generated from O&C lands to counties where O&C lands are located to compensate the counties for diminished local property tax revenues.)

Finally, H.R. 427 authorizes appropriations of $10 million for watershed restoration or endangered species or threatened species recovery in the county where the 2,890-acre addition is located.

Conclusion and Recommendations

We join USDA and the Department of Energy in recommending the approval of H.R. 427, which passed the House by voice vote and the Senate by unanimous consent.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY
WASHINGTON, D.C. 20250

AUG 9 2001

The Honorable Mitchell Daniels, Jr.
Director
Office of Management and Budget
Washington, D.C. 20503

Dear Director Daniels:

This letter is in response to the August 6, 2001, request from your office concerning the views of the Department of Agriculture on the enrolled bill H.R. 427, a bill "To provide further protections for the watershed of the Little Sandy River as part of the Bull Run Watershed Management Unit, Oregon, and for other purposes." The Department recommends that the President sign the bill.

H.R. 427 would add approximately 2,900 acres of Federal land in the Little Sandy River watershed to the Bull Run Watershed Management Unit. Currently, the Bull Run Watershed Management Unit is composed of approximately 95,000 acres of National Forest System land near Portland, Oregon. H.R. 427 would amend Public Law 95-200 to prohibit timber harvest activities and general public access to the entire Bull Run Watershed Management Unit including the 2,900 acres added to the unit by this bill. In addition, this bill would require the Secretary of Agriculture and the Secretary of the Interior to identify and reclassify, after public notice and comment, public domain land within the State that is of equivalent acreage as the Oregon and California Railroad lands included in this bill. The reclassification would change the status of these lands from public domain lands not subject to provisions of the Act of August 28, 1937, to public domain lands that would be subject to the provisions of the Act of August 28, 1937.

Under Public Law 95-200, the cutting of trees is allowed within the Bull Run Watershed Management Unit in order to protect or enhance water quality and water quantity. It is our understanding that this could include cutting of trees in order to reduce the risk of catastrophic fire in the future within the Management Unit. H.R. 427 would not amend these exceptions to the prohibition of timber harvest activities contained in Public Law 95-200.

Thank you for the opportunity to present the views of the Department of Agriculture.

Sincerely,

Ann M. Veneman
Secretary

Discussion

The watershed of the Bull Run, Oregon, is a primary domestic water supply for metropolitan Portland, Oregon. In 1977, Congress established the Bull Run Watershed Management Unit—a 95,382-acre special resources management unit within the Mount Hood National Forest, Oregon—to protect the water quality within the watershed. In 1996, Congress prohibited public access to the unit and, with exceptions, prohibited timber cutting within the unit.

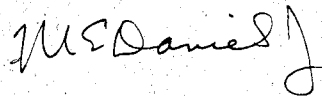

H.R. 427 expands the unit to encompass an additional 2,890 acres of Federal forest lands within the watershed of the Little Sandy River, Oregon, which is adjacent to the Bull Run watershed and has been considered as a potential additional domestic water supply for metropolitan Portland. The practical effect of the enrolled bill is to prohibit public access to and, with exceptions, timber cutting on the 2,890 acres.

In addition, H.R. 427 provides for the reclassification of certain Federal forest lands within the expanded unit that are currently classified as "Oregon and California Railroad" or "O&C" lands as public domain lands. In exchange, the enrolled bill provides for the reclassification of certain public domain lands in Oregon, which are approximately equal in acreage and condition to the reclassified O&C lands, as O&C lands. (The Federal Government returns 50 percent of Federal timber receipts generated from O&C lands to counties where O&C lands are located to compensate the counties for diminished local property tax revenues.)

Finally, H.R. 427 authorizes appropriations of $10 million for watershed restoration or endangered species or threatened species recovery in the county where the 2,890-acre addition is located.

Conclusion and Recommendations

We join USDA and the Department of Energy in recommending the approval of H.R. 427, which passed the House by voice vote and the Senate by unanimous consent.

Discussion

The watershed of the Bull Run, Oregon, is a primary domestic water supply for metropolitan Portland, Oregon. In 1977, Congress established the Bull Run Watershed Management Unit—a 95,382-acre special resources management unit within the Mount Hood National Forest, Oregon—to protect the water quality within the watershed. In 1996, Congress prohibited public access to the unit and, with exceptions, prohibited timber cutting within the unit.

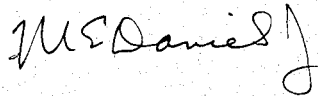

H.R. 427 expands the unit to encompass an additional 2,890 acres of Federal forest lands within the watershed of the Little Sandy River, Oregon, which is adjacent to the Bull Run watershed and has been considered as a potential additional domestic water supply for metropolitan Portland. The practical effect of the enrolled bill is to prohibit public access to and, with exceptions, timber cutting on the 2,890 acres.

In addition, H.R. 427 provides for the reclassification of certain Federal forest lands within the expanded unit that are currently classified as "Oregon and California Railroad" or "O&C" lands as public domain lands. In exchange, the enrolled bill provides for the reclassification of certain public domain lands in Oregon, which are approximately equal in acreage and condition to the reclassified O&C lands, as O&C lands. (The Federal Government returns 50 percent of Federal timber receipts generated from O&C lands to counties where O&C lands are located to compensate the counties for diminished local property tax revenues.)

Finally, H.R. 427 authorizes appropriations of $10 million for watershed restoration or endangered species or threatened species recovery in the county where the 2,890-acre addition is located.

Conclusion and Recommendations

We join USDA and the Department of Energy in recommending the approval of H.R. 427, which passed the House by voice vote and the Senate by unanimous consent.
