Joint Resolution

Recognizing the contributions of Patsy Takemoto Mink.

Whereas Patsy Takemoto Mink was one of the country's leading voices for women's rights, civil rights, and working families and was devoted to raising living standards and providing economic and educational opportunity to all Americans;

Whereas Patsy Takemoto Mink was a passionate and persistent fighter against economic and social injustices in Hawaii and across America;

Whereas Patsy Takemoto Mink was one of the first women of color to win national office in 1964 and opened doors of opportunity to millions of women and people of color across America;

Whereas Patsy Takemoto Mink won unprecedented legislative accomplishments on issues affecting women's health, children, students, and working families; and

Whereas Patsy Takemoto Mink's heroic, visionary, and tireless leadership to win the landmark passage of title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 opened doors to women's academic and athletic achievements and redefined what is possible for a generation of women and for future generations our Nation's daughters: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (20 U.S.C. 1681 et seq.; Public Law 92-318) may be cited as the "Patsy Takemoto Mink Equal Opportunity in Education Act".

Discussion

H.J.Res. 113 designates title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 as the "Patsy Takemoto Mink Equal Opportunity in Education Act". The resolution's preamble notes that Representative Mink played a key role in the passage of Title IX, which prohibits discrimination on the basis of sex in education programs that receive federal funding.

Representative Mink, a Democrat, served in the House of Representatives from 1965 to 1977 and from 1990 to 2002. She died on September 28, 2002, at the age of 74.

H.J.Res. 113 passed the House by a vote of 410-0 and the Senate by unanimous consent.

Joint Resolution

Recognizing the contributions of Patsy Takemoto Mink.

Whereas Patsy Takemoto Mink was one of the country's leading voices for women's rights, civil rights, and working families and was devoted to raising living standards and providing economic and educational opportunity to all Americans;

Whereas Patsy Takemoto Mink was a passionate and persistent fighter against economic and social injustices in Hawaii and across America;

Whereas Patsy Takemoto Mink was one of the first women of color to win national office in 1964 and opened doors of opportunity to millions of women and people of color across America;

Whereas Patsy Takemoto Mink won unprecedented legislative accomplishments on issues affecting women's health, children, students, and working families; and

Whereas Patsy Takemoto Mink's heroic, visionary, and tireless leadership to win the landmark passage of title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 opened doors to women's academic and athletic achievements and redefined what is possible for a generation of women and for future generations our Nation's daughters: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (20 U.S.C. 1681 et seq.; Public Law 92-318) may be cited as the "Patsy Takemoto Mink Equal Opportunity in Education Act".

Discussion

H.J.Res. 113 designates title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 as the "Patsy Takemoto Mink Equal Opportunity in Education Act". The resolution's preamble notes that Representative Mink played a key role in the passage of Title IX, which prohibits discrimination on the basis of sex in education programs that receive federal funding.

Representative Mink, a Democrat, served in the House of Representatives from 1965 to 1977 and from 1990 to 2002. She died on September 28, 2002, at the age of 74.

H.J.Res. 113 passed the House by a vote of 410-0 and the Senate by unanimous consent.
