Jews living in Lviv welcome Hillary Clinton

Shoshana Tyonikina, 13, walked onto the stage of Gilad Synagogue in Lviv to deliver a speech to Hillary Rodham Clinton Monday. "Today, our parents and we are not afraid to say we are Jews," Shoshana told Mrs. Clinton. Under the Soviet government, Jews were not allowed to worship freely. The Nazis used the synagogue for a stable, the Soviets a warehouse. But the building was returned to the Jewish community of Lviv in 1989 with the fall of the Soviet Union. Mrs. Clinton's visit to Ukraine is the last stop on her Soviet tour, and she is to return to Washington tonight.

HEADLINE: Hillary Clinton: Happy, humbler at 50

BYLINE: Trude B. Feldman, Special Contributor to The Dallas Morning News

BODY:

First lady Hillary Rodham Clinton, who celebrated her 50th birthday Sunday, says she lives each day to its fullest, and as if it could be her last.

In a recent interview for her milestone birthday, Mrs. Clinton also says she feels young, happy, content and optimistic about her life.

"Over time, I have become more patient, humbler and ...

... exception. But when you strip it all away, Dr. Ramey's slogan has been a powerful influence on me."

So how does Mrs. Clinton feel about turning 50?

"I have to confess to you . . . being a half-century old is a little daunting. . . . But I hope to live to be a century old. . .

During the 50-minute interview in the Map Room of the White House, Mrs. Clinton reflects on her childhood, her parents, her husband and her legacy. And on what she might have done differently. She also reveals her birthday wishes, as well as how she ...

... saying, This is hopeless.

Stick to English.' "

In her book, It Takes a Village, the narration of which won her a Grammy Award, Mrs. Clinton writes that her parents dedicated their time, energy and money to their children.

Her mother and father had different approaches to character-building, but both ...

... wanted to be the "lead actor" in her life or a "minor player who simply reacts to what other think" she should say or do.

That question, Mrs. Clinton says, has enabled her to get through many

In good stead

"Keeping that in mind has been very helpful to me over the ...

... shovel as a constant reminder that she is well equipped to deal with
"what life has sent my way and, when necessary, to shovel myself out."

Mrs. Clinton also remembers her mother saying, "Your father and I will always love you even when we do not approve of what you do.

We just hope you will ...

... I living up to my own expectations? Am I treating others the way I would want to be treated?"

How does Mrs. Clinton cope today with the problems swirling around her?

"I've been fortunate," she says. "I feel very loved and have a strong faith that has helped ...

... for me . . . looking at the brighter side of things and looking at the absurd parts of human nature have to keep you balanced and going."

Mrs. Clinton has this advice for women on coping with stress:

"Take stock of your life and value what you have.

"Where you can change something to make you ...

... most significant accomplishment in his 50 years.

"Convincing Hillary to marry me," he said. "That changed everything."

Reminded of her husband's answer, Mrs. Clinton says: "That's good, because the most significant decision in my 50 years was being convinced to marry Bill Clinton."

Mrs. Clinton says she hasn't taken stock of how living in the White House has changed her.

"But I'm sure I have changed," she ...

... towards others for their own personal, political, ideological or commercial reasons."

If she were granted three wishes for her 50th birthday, what would Mrs. Clinton wish for?

"The first would be world peace," she told me. "Seriously, I wish that between my birthday and say, the end of the year, we could ...

In true Washington fashion, Mrs. Clinton's special day was fodder for the Sunday talk shows. ABC-TV's This Week offered a video birthday card in which average Americans politely swore that Mrs. Clinton looked much too young to be 50.

"Oh, to be 50 again! Just a kid!" said host Sam Donaldson, 63, as he wished Mrs. Clinton a happy birthday with a quote from poet Robert Browning: "The best is yet to be, the last of life for which the first was made."

BYLINE: John M. Broder, New York Times News Service

DATELINE: WASHINGTON

BODY:

WASHINGTON - Sitting Thursday in the White House Map Room, Hillary Rodham Clinton opened a thick black briefing book and dived into what she called "a frontier issue:" child-care policy.

This is the "reborn" Hillary Clinton, famously turning 50 on Sunday, a policy diva in a baby-blue tailored suit and a frosted-blond pageboy. She is very much the same Hillary Clinton who has been the object of public affection, fascination and fury over the past five years: enigmatic, clever, frustrating and remarkably composed.

It is no coincidence that the child-care symposium came the same week as Mrs. Clinton's birthday, which is being treated as an unofficial coming-out party for the second-term first lady.

And it is no accident that the birthday is being celebrated with a policy-making forum. This was how Mrs. Clinton wanted it, despite her friends' efforts to mark the occasion with a nostalgic trip down Hillary Lane. Friends and staff ...

... stations of the cross." And Tuesday, she does Oprah.

Although reaching the half-century mark is a traumatic passage for many people, Mrs. Clinton is little given to introspection or self-doubt, her friends say. She is obsessed not with her identity, but with her calling. Her mission, as she sees it, is to ...

... known her, that has this strong sense of responsibility, a very moral sense that you should do whatever you can do," said Ann Lewis, a longtime friend of Mrs. Clinton's and now the White House director of communications. "She has always felt that way and she thinks of that as her role in the White House, too."

Global stage

Mrs. Clinton is struck by how little time she has remaining on the global stage as first lady and has begun to think about how she ...

... time when both of them have literally the world open to them at a relatively young age.

It's exciting to them, and scary, too."

For now, however, Mrs. Clinton seems energized by her husband's re-election, freed for now of the crippling scrutiny that preoccupied her during much of the first term and liberated by her daughter's departure for college. Mrs. Clinton has assumed again an ambitious and visible role in promoting her husband's agenda and her own.

She is enjoying record approval ratings and ...

... nation's child care to fostering women-run business ventures around the world.

In just the past 10 days, Mrs. Clinton has given a major speech on domestic violence and family planning in Argentina, appeared in a public ...

... Siberia, Ukraine, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan and Uzbekistan.

Triumphant return

Her busy schedule and narrowed agenda represent a public reanimation of Mrs. Clinton. They come after 18 months of near-invisibility that began at one of the lowest points of the first Clinton term - her appearance ...

... a military-style greatcoat to answer questions about the mysterious loss and rediscovery of her law firm billing records.

Since then, Mrs. Clinton's tight-knit circle of aides has painstakingly plotted her return to the spotlight.

"This has been a disciplined and focused comeback, the result of a series of very ...

... spots carefully. And it's worked. They have done a really good job of repositioning her."

This official said the public persona of the second-term Mrs. Clinton is very different from that of the first. "No longer is she the co-president and the co-vice president of 1993," this official said. "But she's not Barbara Bush, tea and cookies, either."

Mrs. Clinton has traveled widely in her years in the post-health care wilderness, visiting Africa, China, the Indian subcontinent and Latin ...

... foreign travel. She can really make a difference when she goes into a country; she puts those issues higher on the agenda."

Although Mrs. Clinton has been subjected to some ridicule over her advocacy of a "politics of meaning" and her consultation with personal-growth gurus, she continues to believe that public ...

... shared faith and mutual respect.

The Czech poet and president, Vaclav Havel, has been an inspiration and an adviser for that concept, Mrs. Clinton's associates say, and his influence can begin to be seen in her speeches. Mrs. Clinton and a small circle of aides are beginning to plan a yearlong global celebration of the arrival of the millennium, one that will center ...

... closely knitting together the human family.

"We cannot leave the raising of our children, the inculcating of values to the mass media and the consumer culture," Mrs. Clinton said in a recent speech in Buenos Aires. "We have to do a better job through our churches, our families, our civic ...
